| Socialization of the means of production! (1)
D. - They certainly have some nerve!
- R. - Isn't that right? Don't you think that in
In terms of socialization, they would do well to begin by "socializing" the ten billion of the Rothschilds “Stolen from French savings in less than a century? Because The Rothschilds were nothing in France before 1816, and I even demonstrated in Napoleon the Anti-Semite that the father of today's bankers on Rue Laffitte, Baron James, had been hunted down by the police of Napoleon [for smuggling and espionage]. This did not prevent the Rothschilds from succeeding. You can see it! Let the socialists show us the big one | industrialist, the big boss whose fortune could rival - read with that of these cosmopolitan scavengers of: scholarships! Let them choose whichever one they want, the richest of all; they will find some who possess 10 million, 20 million, maybe 50 million. In will they discover a single one of which we can say:

(1) To be enlightened on the relations of the socialist press and the main socialists with the financial Jewry, read

'the brochure entitled: Ministerial Socialism, which has for author v a militant socialist, the toysnue Sorgue.

— Legrand, an industrialist with a fortune of one hundred million! That's highly doubtful. Even assuming that... may find this "big boss" a hundred times a million -

In short, what is one hundred million compared to ten thousand? Rothschild liards?

Ten billion, just think, double the rankon _. imposed by Bismarck on France after 70!

And note that the major industrialist, for his part, worked and that he produced something. He is most of the at the time the representative of an entire dynasty of men those who worked like him, who gave penthroughout their lives a considerable amount of intelligence . ligence and effort, which have created new wealth- . vels whose regional trade is often even The entire national trade has more or less took advantage. OX If these parents are unfair and harsh towards their children Let us denounce and condemn these men, we we see no problem with it and we have no objection to it never failed on our part, when the demands-

The workers' demands seemed legitimate to us.

But, compare, once again, the situation of the > industrial boss with that of Rothschild or any other top banker.

What useful work has the financier ever done?

What does it produce?

He only produces stock market orders; his works are the rise and fall, as this game is called of the stock market's reversal, which allows a gentleman, comfortably settled in his office, from ruining to

t.

i

|

— 51 — |
"never, by a few cabalistic phrases sputter- ^
'tagged on his phone's plate, thousands of
'poor people who understand nothing about what is happening to them “arrives and who don’t even have the consolation of knowing how and by whom they are ruined.
© Products of Jewish High Finance, read contemporary history, and you will find the inan endless and gloomy list. They are called crashes: Crash of the General Union, crash of the
. nama, Southern Railway crash, crash of the Discount Counter. Metal crash, crash of.
Deposits and Current Accounts, Gold Mine Crash...
D.— I know that; I myself have been thrashed in Panama!
R.— - Bt you are not the only one, unfortunately 1
"D. — It doesn't matter, I don't understand that the social-
TR does not primarily address these Stock market swindlers, as you call them, is just-
ment? | | |
KR. — They demanded explanations; they did not
They won't answer you, or they'll call you...

1. shareholder, clerical or Jesuit, because it is a | penu near all they possess in terms of arguments.
D. — And they'll say that in the Jewish newspapers?
R. — Perfectly. Your astonishment will lessen
- maybe when you will know that Lassalle and Karl | Marx, the two great forerunners of collectivism, were Jewish; that Frederick Engels, another pontiff, was probably also of Jewish origin; that Singer, <` whose influence on German social democracy

-. is predominant, especially since Liebk-'s death
. necht, is a Jew and, moreover, a wealthy merchant famous in Berlin for its ferocity towards its employees and employees. Moreover, in France as in Germany Magne and in all countries, Jews are proliferating in the socialist party, and they exert influence on its orientation and its destinies a considerable action.

In France, in particular, the Jews did for the socialism, what they had done before for Opportunism and radicalism.

With Gambetta flanked by Reinach, they had Opportunism confiscated; by Clemenceau, their liege man, close friend of Cornelius Herz and of Baron de Reinach, they had had a firm grip on the radicalism. The Jews told themselves that the leadership of the socialism, which was a new party and which could becoming dangerous for them, should also their
. belong. And we have just seen that they have com-
-started by acquiring the main social newspapers- .
lists.. |

D. — Didn't we say that Millerand was Jewish?

R. — Millerand is not entirely Jewish, he is not:
He is only half; he is "the Half-Jew," as I
I called him, and the word caught on. Mil-'s mother Lerand was Jewish.

D. — Useless to SS Je UE now
The evolution of the socialists...

p ET Fes ds EP oM oe at a E
| 2d Puedes*; US to re = g. i MS: N g pe od 2s =
and to: RN: NC " M | :

ma VEA ns ae uut X 4x El (tes —— 53 CES i - P Ed (m SES PES N a 3 E , = xai ^ MOTA a = o5 bM rOn Fa A Wo Hueso TS "E ; A i * SP C SA
FRE z TE
P SAO ii zi
: f BEL IV dom 2
neither pod to i, \ ;
par P # |
= nr Su
D pnis. 3 Doa,: ii | md to EL Ed ED to E: unc
Conclusion. TIE
M 9A - | 2 D eo are: ss '; No. 3: ;

~

"Di — = I see that Pus Anlsdn stes. "UT du- ` “Everything I imagined, they had been described to me — like sectarians, fanatics, and zealots; fias

“ee: are on the contrary men of bpn Seat of order "d

- has

...and logic..." DIA E ' E SR: —That's it exactly, you: have found the TM exact, | | 2 | E of

You weren't the only one, by the way, to have false... of “his ideas on Anti-Semites. _ JL LITT
When I wrote my pamphlet: Napoleon. Anti-ps

MuR. I sent a copy to Prince Victor

Napoleon, which was quite natural since my -

- The study aimed to highlight an aspect E

. strong, interesting and very little known about politics

'son. grafid uncle. |

Do you know what the prince made me reply?

“ay, — I have no idea. . | 7

| ORS —Ib sent one of his familiars who held me.

roughly this, language: | ere

"The anti-Semitic Napoleon was very well received"

“good to the prince, and I can assure you that your bro-

- chure greatly interested him, as did she.

He was a little surprised!

s

E mn bi ur
— And where did this astonishment come from, P. inte
I broke off...
— “Peace was forming a whole new idea about the Air Force.”

Antisemitism. Whatever may have been said about it, it is not in no way beholden to the Jews, and I assure you even that he knows none of them. The prince is first and foremost a

A man of order. If he were to return to France — I want to say whether he returned as Emperor — that would be to restore order. However, violent attitudes Some anti-Semites had frightened him. The prince had horror above all of men of disorder.

I then took the floor: |

— “What you just told me proves that The prince judges us unfairly, and he judges us unfairly because that he doesn't know us. The prince, who is... forso much. An enlightened mind took it for granted. the slanders of the Jewish press. He took them at their word.
the scribes and rhetoricians in the pay of Israel who us represent as troublemakers, as reverse anarchists, like savages whose
The fixed idea is to one day exterminate all the Jews to drink their blood and feast on their flesh.

"Our ideal is quite different."

“We are first and foremost French, and we We love France above all else. However, we see and everyone can see with us that France is, at present, the slave of a tiny minority of Jews and cosmopolitans. We want this this absurd and dangerous situation must end; we will-let's hope that France will once again become the property, the 1

born.
heritage of the French, that is to say of the indigenous people born, of the race which originated in the soil of France, of . these thirty-eight million beings who proclaim themselves brothers today, because their ancestors for a while centuries worked to forge the common homeland.
"We are, above all, men of order," we too, since our sole purpose is to give back to Caesar's property belongs to Caesar, that is to say, to res-to set at thirty-eight million, from the rich French and
- beloved land of France, one hundred and fifty thousand Jews stole from them... » | | 2"

D. — With this program, you will soon
- Are all French people with you?

R. — We already have plenty. The Anti-Semiteism, poorly understood and slandered in the early
Time makes new conquests every day.
Our idea resonates in all circles, in all the parties. | E ua

All sincere and independent republicans, who do not depend on the ruling oligarchy, are ve-naked to us. Ask the members of the League of Patriots and of the French Fatherland what they Po Jews. You will soon be enlightened.

The Bonapartist conspiracy, which has been discussed so much,

for some time now, would find for first and the irreconcilable adversaries, the Bonapartist militants themselves, who, Re, are all fundamentally an-Tisemites.

As for the royalists, whose leaders, at the time of the Count of Paris, quite willingly flirted with the princes of Israel, they clearly broke with the Jews. The Duke of Orléans has made some remarks in this regard.

very formal statements and, I would even add, very courageous; which it would be unfair not to acknowledge account.:
— In his San Remo speech, he recognized Peis
the tenor of a Jewish question; he demonstrated its im-Capital tact.

"...I will only seek appeasement," declared the "Prince. But would it be persecution to oppose"
"to pose to the oppression of money, rather than to protect the "Acquired wealth? Could this be persecution that,
"to prevent the monopolization by a few of the
"The financial power of a country?"

I don't insist...

That's enough to show you that Anti-Semitism ism is today the core idea, the central idea at-
A tower around which all opinions gravitate. None
No serious party can flatter itself that it can solve the crisis.
political and social issues in which France is struggling and is consumed, without first addressing the Jewish question...

D. — That is what I observe, indeed; but com-.
How will you go about achieving your program? | :

R. — May the good pacers help us, and all
It will be fine.

Our national rebuilding program —

will comprise two distinct divisions: the liquid-Dating the past and organizing the future,

"t - On the | first point, you already know what we

'Let's do it. [1 The great buccaneers will have to they throat.

Rest assured, we will not use it for that.
that of a High Court composed of deranged senators.
-or senile. It will be up to the Nation itself to...
The task of recovering his property from the immense loot amassed by the Jews. The Nation will choose the most di-gnes, she will delegate the most honest ones, The jurors na-nationals, having no other mandate than to judge the thieves and having to separate, once the work was accomplished fold, will have no other ambition than to to render an impartial and fair verdict. And besides, the -

The entire country will be both witness and judge at the same time;
All French people will watch, attentively, this vast AUCH of centuries-old banditry... "o

= D. — I understand; mats when you aureq restttea to the nation the billions stolen by the Jews, com-

How will you reorganize France?

R. — This will obviously not be the work of a:
| day. To build a simple house, you need months; to rebuild and reorganize a large country ©

Like France, it will probably take years.

We are neither utopians nor dreamers;
We are, I repeat, men of good -sense and goodwill. We do not believe in the possibility of curing France in a single day; we let's not be like the socialists who want to de-destroy the old world from top to bottom under pre-

...text that they have the key to the golden age in their pockets.

*

D -
More modest and more serious, we are content;

tones of saying: |
– France is being devoured by a terrible ulcer,

No; then we will treat her among ourselves, French.

We will do our best to ensure that his recovery is not...

too long, we will join forces to restore to _ the Fatherland, its fine health and robust vigor, unlike any other-. times.

D – It's a beautiful dream; but, tell me, you have

So, have you already decided on a few ideas? By ind tou-

Do you cherish the current form of ownership?

R. – Not at all; individual property is the legitimate remuneration for work and effort, to provided, however, that one has a human conception of it.
Maine and broad, that it be the jus utendi -- the right to use – and not the jus abutendi, – the right to abuse.

|

Let us first brand her with a red-hot iron so that she does not die.

In the France of yesteryear, property had this the character of gentleness and fraternity that the invasion Jewish mercantilism caused him to lose; 'we tra-

We will make sure to return it to him.

While preserving and enforcing the pro-individual privacy in its principle and in its fair applications, we will not hesitate to strike

false ownership, ownership flawed in its origin gin and in its purpose, property, which is only the fruit of b dn, of theft, of all the qu economic ages...

D — Qw hd - are you over there?

R. — I want to talk about the great raids of the

| — 59 — eet |
'Stock markets that have ruined hundreds of thousands of French families for fifty years. I want | also talk about certain industries which, through the formed from an agreement, a consortium between capitalists, have become veritable monopolies between the

In the hands of a few feudal money lords.

It is certain that we would not allow it to be established these trusts that now exist in France as "in America, and which allow unions. speculators to set the price of goods as they see fit
the most indispensable: or the most useful for existence, such as wheat, coal, sugar, the penis: the.
- cate.. : |

D. — nor to say that you would be willing to |. transforming these industries into state monopolies naked, in fact, veritable monopolies in the hands of a few big speculators?

R. — That deserves consideration; for, until now-state monopolies have not brought any brilliance.
slow results. It is true that the State itself would have | . the most pressing need to be reformed, both in.

its staff as well as in its administrative processes

tion. l

I am AND that by the mere fact of existence of an honest and Fe government. many P would disappear.

The Jews who for twenty years and more have been appointing ministers and officials, at their own discretion, the _ Jews who have become masters in the art of influencing a parliamentarian with a few well-placed checks, have, naturally-

i

| lement, abused the Hate to make people vote to remove all of them! the laws that could best favor their operations rations. These laws should be carefully reviewed, and | to completely eliminate speculation, which is nothing but a a game to only tolerate operations on the Stock Exchange clear and fair.

It would be simpler and probably more efficient. what the famous "socializations" that we are talking about constantly the socialists without being able to explain clearly the method of implementation nor the function- practical advice.

However, there are certain "socializations", OR — to use a word I prefer — certain "Nationalizations" which would undoubtedly be necessary to the reconstituted French state. One wonders, by For example, why wouldn't the State exploit it itself? the riches of France's subsoil instead of attributing to burn the mines as a gift, or almost, to concessionaires, under this law of 1810 which is undoubtedly one of the most unjust and the most absurd things that can be found in our codes.

Similarly, it seems essential to us, to the point From a national security perspective, France has to in the short term ownership of all its road networks. iron. That's what exists in most countries from Europe, and especially from Germany.

We must not judge by state monopolies! jourd'ht i, of what state monopolies would be — under 'ur' transformed and renewed government, The ex- - plotat^ { honest by the State must logically be superior to all others. If it is not in The current situation is that the state is riddled with corruption and urri. down to the marrow, and that the men who the" present are only the clerks, the servants- First among the high-level speculators. These are, moreover, only indications. draft not a program of economic reforms- "Ms. a newspaper article. In such a serious matter."

Naked

If it is so delicate, one must proceed only slowly.
not, as experience you idea and allows you to move forward. ut
The socialists, who claimed to have found the mule of the universal panacea that was supposed to regenerate to the world, are realizing today that their These dubious theories are crumbling on all sides. They
They said that big industry and the big.
America by centralizing manufacturing and trading
They were going for them and they wouldn't have the Great Night u, than to install the victorious proletariat in the nenses gsines and in the vast stores built us M e |

See what happens. Electricity enters iE: and its new applications are perhaps to destined to shake the world once again lomic.
n announces today that Von will be able to dis-
to bring motive power to the home at a low cost.
Therefore, the factory towns will no longer have reason for being, because the boss will like it very much x distribute the work into separate workshops

e DE res a gan |
rather than bearing enormous overhead costs to be exposed at every moment to mutinies and strikes that come to eat away at the bulk of it its benefit.

The worker, for his part, would prefer work a hundred times over.
freely at home, with his wife and children q will be able to help him in their free time, that to lock oneself away for ten or twelve hours in i foul-smelling, unhealthy workshops where he comes and goes The foreman's quiet silhouette. Without comp that the worker, if he is industrious and if he is second by his own people, will have every chance of acquiring quickly the ownership of his craft and, by extension soon, to become in turn a little PRIOR modest capitalist.

Thus, instead of economic centralization absolute that the collectivists foresaw, that K Marx and Engels had even prophesied and announced fixed date, it's decentralization that's in place to happen. These astrologers had glimpsed a p nomene at the end of their spyglass, and when the arrives where this phenomenon should, according to them, be:

'visible to the naked eye, it's the opposite E appears on the social horizon.

We, the Anti-Semites, do not want 1 to expose oneself to a similar disappointment. We ask simply to work with everyone in Fameloratto.
common fate...

`

D. — I like your language, because I don't like

HAS

"62:

S who cannot open their mouths without promising s
one for everyone.
— Well then, shout with us: Down with the fs and long live France! Then, when you talk
If you're friends, tell them what they are and what they want Anti-Semites, and don't miss an opportunity to to refute the slander and lies of the press
e |

— I gladly promise you, and I holdword because I realize, decidedly, that I was 4s, a long time, unknowingly antisemitic.

-

v

4. "
*
! E . È
Paris. — Printed by MASSON, 14, boul. Montma
L 7 S 1
4 Ya
H EN

= :

^
t

ent la | Speculation ire lee same i ond eee enr ALFA DM À dv aifs are alastes in Algeria, this country is urpitudes.

ROUANET, "nobody.

t like an Asian colony established in France.
Z, we are like in a foreign land, triply so because they are neither French nor Christians, es Dion

4 > ALFRED RAMBAUD.

Racial prejudice is alive and well, we agree.
| point: : to hate the Jew. The motives part-
This hatred is not religious, but economic.
| Although money is scarce, the Jew has a certain-used up the power he has in the handling of it. Io ei and there, he dispossessed the farmer, "lon or indi-
Its harmful influence extended even to the tribes.

Huaves LE Roux.

breed

to this Bend who no longer has a homeland, no longer has a prince, eft parasite among the Nations, feigning to recognize SA mal s en pronos n ODE qu'à son Dieu de Vol, de

I have never seen a Jew doing his work
Work is dishonorable, their religion forbids it.
> 1 fold than the exploitation of the labor of others.

EMILE ZOLA.

The only house in France today is the mai-HART The French Republic has a king who has E pua.
JULES GUESDE.

Digitized by Goo le
&

pn to VIEW

&
af

They

#
—

eU Icy

GE MUI.

—
21m"

= ASIA n put

RTE AE FE

UeQM S. P ap pe SPA NA LI Pre T€

—

Su 72%:

e. uu en spe OS lle

D

"ESL

EX AT

DLL

————

re Qn - Seek

Oe ee et

A d

The Jews!... Let's not take their [weapons] with them, let's not agree with them.
of wicked, perverse, venomous beasts for fourteen hundred years and beyond have been ruins of governments, plagues 'back In short, for us, the Jews are:
They no longer have any human dignity for us.
They learn these things from their rabbis.
nests of foul spirits,

- AIC

We must consider the Jews not alone: om ney I distinct race, but like a foreign people; this B humiliation too great for the French Nation, ruled by the lowest race in the world."

NAPOLEON, at the Council of State, the 6th at di. li
4 A

...€ I point out again that we are not complaining neither Protestants nor Catholics, as we like to say Jews; that's the evil that the Jews do. (This appears to be a fragment of a larger text ar individuals, but of the very constitution of. ah XT caterpillars, grasshoppers that ravage the AD

NAPOLEON, Speech to the Council at

ar

The Jews! Yes, I hate their race, this race undeniably superior skills for CC agi Capital, and which, in this nineteenth century, has, in fact, 2
the factor of the Government, of the War, of everything.
"All-powerful"... At the end of the twentieth century will be the Marquises of Silver of France, above:

'population of impoverished Catholics, whom they hold

'slavery. uM

Ep. DE Goncourt.

Algerian Jews were naturalized en masse, E rs
while we fought against the disciplined hordes Evangelical people. They certainly hadn't deserved it.
that they were solely from Banking, Commerce, and tage, de pedportage et de Usure. Nul entie eus ES plow, do not water the gardens or prune the vines had not perished in our ranks, under the cannonballs: of the ort these Berbers, these Arabs, these Neyres who were - D hero of Reichshoffen.

ELISÉE RECLU:

Todd

Ump. E. MASSON, Boulevard Montmartre, P

Digitized by Google

—*.-

PATH

LU er g ERA rece TE ie
"IS ERE

CURE . ud s ONE CC - s
WA ra Pratt eren and others, ; kidney From aan, ant mu

LI fu

SMALL SOCIAL STUDIES

us

specialists

and Jews
NEW INTERNATIONAL

BY

A. de BOISANDRE

TE ee a jum od

20

CENTIMES

3RAIRIE ANTISEMITE. \

45, Rue Vivienne, 45

PARIS

Recommended curvatures for the pro

has

SMALL SOCIAL STUDIES
by A. de BOISANDRE

THE SOCIALIST MAJOR STATE

The copy..... O fr. 20 francs.
The 50 copies, frar (CO... 2 ES 9 fr.
The 100 = E -- 15 tr.
The 1000 - - . EL 125 fr.
SOCIALISTS AND JEWS
The * ML. Jranco Te 9 fr.
Lesa = + E. eee 15 fr.
The 1000 - xHEE- c

ANTI-MASONIC MANUAL

by J. TOURMENTIN

The 50 Sa France "Eius NS 9 fr.
The 100 - Á- 3 - ,,,...,..… 12 fr.
The 1000 - m NUT. 112 fr.

THE ANTI-JEWISH CATECHISM

by A. de BOISANDRÉ

A brochure, franeo...... Ofr. 159
The 50 copies, J/FGNCO....... EE 6 fr.
.The 100 LS MOS e. 10 fr.

The 1000 - = 70 fr.

e * 27222?" ee

SMALL SOCIAL STUDIES

o!

Socialists

and Jews
THE NEW INTERNATIONAL

BY

A. de BOISANDRE

—

PEIX: 20 CENTINES

Se

PARIS
ANTISEMITIC BOOKSTORE

45, Rue Vivienne, 45

1303

COMING SOON

The Holy Booklet

Socialism and Strikes

— I'm already going to see it, you were happy!
la Champre: fus fientrez temain puluyer la mienne.

FOREWORD

Pees LL LL LL

First and foremost, I must address my very much alive exes Sincere thanks to my well-known friends.
strangers who were kind enough to help me spread the word
the first booklet of these short social studies.
Thanks to them, nearly sixty thousand copies of the Socialist General Staff were sold or di: - tribus in the space of barely a month, and f'ese to hope that some good will result from it.

As for this new study, it is only the
a natural and logical complement to the first.
After having painted the leaders of the movement ad vivum socialist cemení and showed, through facts, what he
They should have thought about the true nature of their legend as apostles.
I prove that the Socialist Party, or, at the very least,
the largest and most powerful fraction of the Socialist Party, no longer has anything at the moment ac-the tunal of an independent and autonomous party; j établis that, for several years, the Jaurès, the Millerand and his associates have exerted their influence, their oratorical skills, their newspapers and, in a
In general, all forces and all res-party sources they lead in the service of the international tuicerie.

And I take this opportunity to state here that I Don't make any claims that I can't prove.

I have heard that some workers who have read in the socialist General Staff that Baron Millerand was a capitalist serious enough to possess
To build four apartment buildings in Paris,
They tried to doubt again and said: – “He
We need to be told where they are, ccs im-furniture ! "

My response to this objection will be the most simple.

A directory specifically dedicated to castles, rental properties, farms, tenant farms, hunting grounds and properties of all kinds belonging to the gentlemen of the state clalistes, would offer, I am convinced, a very vivid interest, and I'm not saying I won't undertake one day a publication of this nature will be published.

But, everything in its own time.

Regarding these brochures, we are well I tell the truth, or I lie. If I lie, I defamation. Now, defamation is punishable by the following laws:
bunauz.

Sij ai defamé MM. Millerand, Jaurès and Cte, that these gentlemen are pursuing me, decant a jurisdiction where the prefect is admitted.

I challenge them to do so.

Owe ee ee °

SOCIALISTS AND JEWS

The corrupting Jew. — The socialists are injevi-Birth certificates. — Lassalle and Karl Marx. — Singer and his female workers. — The socialist ghetto of New York. — Socialist newspapers printed in Jewish jargon. — The heads of industry and the speculators-Stock exchange traders. — Two types: Menier and Rothschild. — Providers of men and feeders-Pheasant gimmicks. — Socialist silence on The Jews. — A pamphlet by Citizen Sorgue.
— The “Three Wise Men” and “Child Socialism”.
— From whom is Mr. Jaurès asking for money? — Press Socialist and... submissive. — Liebknecht and the affair

Dreyfus. — Trick and trick. — The mysterious conductor. — What would have happened if The "Affair" had taken place in Germany. — The

Socialism held captive by the Jews.

When we have been thoroughly outraged by the palisocialist idioms, we seek to explain them to ourselves that, we strive to discover its causes.

These causes are not very complicated.

He arrived at the Socialist Party exactly which is what happened to all parties that evolved in France since the Republic is founded.

The "ancestors," those who were republicans under the Empire, seized power, con-led by Gambetta and Jules Ferry.
He called them opportunists.

The opportunists were no more dishonor-They are clearer than others. It is even likely that they were sincere, originally, when they ton-were born against the corruptions of the Empire, when they swore to found a regime based on probity, on honor, and on virtue.

The mistake the opportunists made was to allow a gang to infiltrate their ranks Jews who quickly began to corrupt them.
hideous Reinach tribe having managed to slipping into Gambetta's entourage, he re-sulta that a few years later the names of The tribune's best friends were found on the participation lists and on the heels of Panama check.

For radicalism, which was not moreover that a rather insignificant escalation of opportunism, the same causes produced the same effects. The only difference was that corruption, instead of being called Reinach, His name was Cornelius Herz.

And the socialists, in turn, passed by the same successive phases as the opportun-nists and radicals.

As long as they had only a few resources influence, as long as they did not count in the mumunicipalities and the Chamber than rare representatives

Sensitive, they were honest, without having great merit, it is true, and somewhat in the style girls who remain well-behaved because they don't have not enough attractions for q vron les couras

The day socialism took its place among the major political parties, the day when the sociallism was able to exert a considerable both in parliament and in the countries, socialism found in its path the tempting powers of money.

The Jews said to these men who were speaking to transform the property and make the Revolution :

– Transform the property, if you wish, but transform it to our advantage; make ia Revolution, if that amuses you, but go ahead and do it.

for us. If you accept this pact, My The competition is won, and you will soon be the masters of France...

The leaders of the socialist movement, who did not are not ascetics, as proclaimed Mr. Jaurès himself did not have enough virtue to resist; they were dazzled, they so-
They enact the pact.

*
* *

To be loyal to the Jews, to become subservient to the Jews Moreover, there was nothing that could displease them. They were already Jewish by virtue of their origins. gines, since the two great ancestors of which They call themselves Ferdinand Lassalle and Karl Marx and his wife were both German Jews. Furthermore, it is common knowledge that world that French socialism is full of Jews or half-Jews like Millerand.

The same is true in all countries, in Germany, for example, where one of the main

The Social Democrats' leader is the arch-Jew.
millionaire Singer, one of the fiercest ex-human flesh manipulators that exist in the world, the very same one who was answering someone who criticized for paying its female workers wages derisory:

– What are they complaining about? At a time when They're leaving my house, there are still some Men in the streets!...

In America, socialism is recruiting – from the very admission of the Little Republic – its
the largest group of members among the 500,000 Jews of New York (1). These Jewish socialists Americans make up such a considerable fraction of the party that we are obliged to publish to their imn-attention to special newspapers such as the Vo/rs-newspapers, written in Judische dialect, in jargon Jewish.

This shows that no party was better prepared that the Socialist Party would suffer the direction-Jewish tion.

This subservience dates back a very long time
Socialism for Jews exists, but there is no
It has been visible for a very long time.

*

We should, however, have suspected what-

---

(1) I am using the figure given by the Petite "République". But it in reality there are nearly 600,000 Jews in the city of New-York.

something, when we heard from leaders soclaustrophobes like Jaurès repeating on all the tones

— There is no Jewish question!

To demonstrate that there was no
Regarding the Jewish question, Mr. Jaurès and his friends explained-claimed that Anti-Semitism was merely a di-ingenious version found by Christian capital it's important to divert all the anger of the proletariat on Jewish capital.

"—We, the citizens," added Mr. Jaurès and his friends, we do not distinguish between the ca-Jewish hospital and Christian capital. The same day and by the same law of expropriation, the proletarians
The sovereign riat will socialize them both at
"For the benefit of the nation and the producers."

Thanks to this bluff, the socialists succeeded marvelously at deceiving naive workers, at the same time as they were attracting smiles and the good graces of the millionaire Jews. And one lives for years on end with this strange spectacle of a party called itself the party of the Revolution social, which was waging a relentless war on bosses, to the heads of industry, but who do not di-Never a word from the big thieves of the Stock exchange; of a party that dealt with exploiters, of starvers, of slave traders the Schneiders, the Motte or the Rességuier family, but who was hiding, who prostrated himself as before the saint of saints, as soon as the name of Rothschild!

However rich the Schneiders and others may be big bosses, what, however, does their fortune, the few tens of millions that they can possess, compared to wealth of the Rothschilds who are rising — it's the Szgza/, Protestant newspaper, which revealed it to us — to a formidable, monstrous, provocative figure Mee BILLIONS?

What do the 500 million in assets mean? according to Mr. Waldeck–Rousseau – by the 200,000 French religious that we spoils today, if we compare them to TEN BILLION, which allow a the only German Jewish family to be Maybraids from us, to buy not only ministers and parliamentary majorities, but entire parties?

And the Rothschild case is not isolated. Baron Hirsch, who died a few years ago, has left behind an estimated fortune – for France only and by Registration – to more than 800 million.

The Jews who arrived in our country rags and who today possess hundreds tens of millions taken from our savings They are legion: the Ephrussis, the Dreyfuses, etc. Stern, the Camondos, the Oberndoeffers, the Herz, the Reinach, the Cahen d’Anvers or Besides... Everyone knows those names sinister sounds that echoed mournfully throughout all stock market crashes, during times of panic, ruin and misery.

Behind these great feudal lords of money new generations of Jews are coming forward already millionaires.

The Jew Cattaui, to take one example, was completely unknown before the case Humbert, thanks to whom his name has been revealed. Now, this Cattaui – knight of the Lé-Legion of Honour and client of Mr. Vallé, minister of Justice – possesses more than fifty millions. And Mr. Deputy Prosecutor Legouvé, who... gave this detail, adding that these fifty millions had been stolen from our savings at means of establishing shady companies.

Among these merchants, these scumbags of Stock exchange, and the industrial boss, something tough, However selfish or greedy he may be, There is, admittedly, a considerable margin.

The socialists may well say that the Schneider, Reille, or Motte are exploysters who fatten themselves on the sweat of their workers. I] It is no less true that the Schneiders, the Reilles and the Mottes do To live these workers, he makes them live more or less well — the socialists say: more or less bad — that's possible, but anyway they make them eat bread.

And the proof is that if any of these large factories were disappearing overnight. the next day, devoured by a fire, by For example, thousands of unfortunate people find themselves would see themselves reduced with their wives and their children in the most atrocious misery.

On the other hand, these large factory owners, so bad-said by the socialists, are producers. Schneider produces cannons and ma- Using steel mills, the Reille family extracts coal. Motte manufactures fabrics. Both are a source of enrichment for the com- French merchandise.

What do the Jews produce, the major cosmopolitan bankers, the high-ranking vo- Their stock market holdings? Let them show us, then. samples of their manufacture!

Let's take an example, to make ourselves better to understand.

Everyone knows Ménier, the famous chocolatier. One of the Méniers is a member of parliament for the “Bloc”, i1 takes Waldeck-Rousseau for a walk in on his yacht, he invites Baron Millerand to his hunts where a small railway was specially created element to this intention comes to take the tireurs after each hunt to avoid them all fatigue. It is therefore an adverspolitical salaried in the fullest sense of the term.

Let's choose him as the type of the big boss, from the head of industry.

Let us oppose him, if you will, as specimen of the great financiers, of the powerful cosmopolitan speculators, Rothschild himself, The man with 10 billion.

Let's examine them one by one, each at home; it's easy, since Noisiel is located precisely in the vicinity of Ferrières.

In Noisiel, you will find, very close to the factories and not far from the boss's castle, all a working-class village formed from an urban area clean, bright, and cheerful houses. Each family has a corner of land converted into garden that she cultivates in her free time. You You will also see spacious and well-maintained schools airy. Very close to the road, from which it is not separated only by vast gardens, rises a retirement home for elderly workers.

The political attitude can be judged to be detestable. The Méniers, to have only contempt for these multimillionaires who, without being driven to it by the ne-
In this state of emptiness, flatterers and courtiers become the ones who flatter.
Waldecks and Millerands. We're not there yet.
less obliged to note that the Méniers are the representatives of a useful industry and that they do something for their workers.

I know what objections might be raised:

By founding schools, re- homes

–

treaties, etc., the Méniers, like all the great Bosses don't work for their workers. but for themselves. These foundations pseudo-philanthropists are in reality only Insurance against the strike. And these villages workers, these corners of gardens that your naivety attributed to employer generosity, do you know to What are they used for?

To secure the workforce, to ensure the pa-
The working generations.
Ménier, like the other great feudal lords of The industry has found a way, under color hypocritical generosity, to resurrect them profit from the medieval serf village...

Serfs as much as you like; but, at least, the serfs of Noisiel, as well as the serfs of Creusot and elsewhere are serfs who live, Serfs who eat. And if they live and if they eat, it is obviously only thanks to the wages they earn from working.

It must therefore be acknowledged that those who They give them work, they serve some purpose.
thing.

What is the purpose of the great financier, the high bank-.
Quier the Jew, the cosmopolitan speculator?

Oo

SOCIALISTS AND JEWS I

xe
*

Come with me to Ferrières, let's explore... it seems the domains of Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, but above all let's stay on the road and let us not presume to enter the fields or in the woods. Otherwise, we laugh-we would prefer not to be mistaken for poachers and to
to receive some buckshot in the body, as happened to a poor peasant named Mazille Cahon, who was killed, 11 years ago
years, in the Lys forest, by the guards

from another Rothschild, nephew of this one.

In Ferrières you will find neither factories, nor workshops, nor schools, nor retirement homes, nor workers' village. Guardhouses and Boxes for feeding pheasants, that's all.
which grows on the vast estates of baron!

This is precisely what the difference that the socialists do not want to see — because they are willfully blind
— the difference between the head of industry and the speculator.

j4 SMALL SOCIAL STUDIES

The industrial leader provides a livelihood for men;

The speculator keeps pheasants afloat;

The industrialist employs hundreds of people tens or thousands of workers, and he gives to these workers receive a wage in exchange for their labor vail;

The speculator only employs a few backstage staff, mostly Jewish or foreign, to the-
which ones he gives his stock market orders;

The industry leader produces objects of consumption that it delivers to commerce, and, by Consequently, it is a source of wealth for a country;

The speculator only produces blows of scholarship, and it cannot, therefore, be for a country, which is a cause of ruin and misery.

However, the socialists in the Jaurès style and in the Millerand only have it in for the head of industry, to the boss, to the employer of workers, who, by that which is the very fact that he is a job provider, They accomplish a useful work, they leave complete-setting aside the speculator, the stockbroker, who is an eminently sterile and ill-doing so, which gives no one work, which does no good to anyone, but who,

by a single telegram, by a single stroke of telephone, can cause a crash, that is to say-to say, to cause a sudden rise or fall and without reason, not only on values or securities, but on commercial commodities of all kinds (wheat, flour, coal, oil, coffee, metals, etc., etc.), and, consequently, cause irRepairable disasters.

However, when we talk about the harmful effects of these scoundrels and these bandits of the Upper Bank, the socialists declare that we do not we are nothing but disguised reactionaries, clerics trying to create a diversion.
Mr. Jaurès, pontiff:

"There is no Jewish question!"

xe

If the socialists, following this line of reasoning, were sincere, one would have to conclude that the Socialists are complete fools, irredubious idiots.

But that's not the case.

And if we want to know why the soSpecialists like Millerand and Jaurès deny With this obstinacy, the Jewish question, he...

It will suffice to listen to the statements of other sospecialists who know them well who have been their colleagues, who saw them in action.

Let's open a small brochure entitled Socia[ministerial sme, and signed by an activist of the Socialism, the citizen Sorgue. We read there On page 5:

By fighting the battles of Dreyfusism under the red flag, and we know with what courage! Jaurès and his friends brought about a rapprochement unique between the two most opposing camps and the most irreconcilable by nature, that of the Traproletarian vail in open war against Capital, and this Capital itself personified by the High-Bank, that is to say, by what is most paramore satiated, more rapacious and more absorbent.

What do we experience then?

We saw millions and billions of Jews coming, such that the three wise men, towards child socialism placed in his manger, offer him frankincense, myrrh and gold. How did it come about that Jaurès, nourished by literature, had not been warned by Virgil against certain formidable gifts? And, indeed, this are not only those brought by Greeks!

The gifts from the Kings of Capital were accepted. The first service rendered was to relieve the great avant-garde organs that were declining, of the to get back on its feet. Pereire secured the fortune of the Landull (1); Rothschild, that of the Fronde; Cohen, that of La Petite République and, later, Paquin, on the eve of being decorated, offered Mr. Maurice Dejean the Little Blue One.

One day the glassworks was 10,000 francs short. worker from Albi to build a third oven. Jaurès announces a conference to benefit the workers' creation. The great orator does, as Always a full house; but, this time, the seats are paid 60 francs.

The entire cream of the Jewish plutocracy arranged to meet there. After the speech, the quest. I was entrusted with this last and modest role. I will never forget the contemptuous and full look on his face with ulterior motives these strange catechumens of socialism threw into my lap which 10 francs, some 20 francs, some 100 francs. That's what the moment I began to open my eyes on the the mistake made and its enormity.

What! It's the arch-capitalist class, arch-parasite, ultra-exploiter who would become a a sincere ally of the social revolution, of which she is The main focus? And it's Jaurès who would have been naive enough to be lulled into such a false sense of security hope?

In any case, this speaks for itself: All the advanced, high-quality newspapers have passed. in the hands of the top financial barons; These are therefore their newspapers, they are no longer the days-workers' rights. Reverence speaking, these sheets now have the condition submitted by the courtsan: vis-à-vis its protectors. To affirm that they have remained independent, it's an impudent challenge Obviously...

---

(1) For details of Millerand's entry and a draft Socialist at the Lanterne des Percire, see in La Libre Parole of May 25, 1001, my article entitled: Socialists and Jews.

*
* o*

These revelations, to which we would be It's easy to add more, they explain. the fervor with which Jaurès fought for Dreyfus, whose punishment he once believed insufficient and for which he had demanded the Twelve bullets from the firing squad. They at the same time they explain to us the entrance of Millerand in the Waldeck-Gallifet cabinet, formed solely for the purpose of revising the Trial of the traitor.

No intelligent and well-intentioned person... No one can ignore these obvious facts. will only admit socialists like MilleRand and Jaurès formed themselves sincerely the defenders of a Jewish captain and millionaire sentenced to simple life imprisonment for a high crime betrayal, while these same socialists have allowed to be shot so many times without protest poor devils of soldiers, guilty only-ment of an act of indiscipline, of a gesture of revolt or threat against a superior, act or gesture often softened by the excitement of Intoxication.

This is what Jules Guesde and the socialists
Not Jewish — they are few in number!
have kept repeating.

And Liebknecht, one of the most self-confident conductors ridiculed, not only by German socialism, but of the whole of international socialism — Liebknecht did not hesitate to make clear to understand Millerand, Jaurès and Co.*, that they were not fooled by their charade righteous indignation.

Speaking of the campaign, so precisely qua-linked by Colonel Marchand, the "campaign
"infamous," Liebknecht wrote:

It was celebrated by the "initiated" in... enthusiastic hymns. From Barnum's point of view, Mosse and company, she certainly deserves these Praise. Trick and trick. Ad and trick. Never
We never saw any like them, nor any mounted on a
A foot that was also gigantic.

They had only one flaw. Never was anything more visible, more sensitive, more tangible, nor of a caliber heavier. It was sometimes a concerto in style severe, sometimes a well-repeated uproar, one and the other conducted by a conductor at the slightest sign duqucl tous les executeurs obesaisicent.

A flick of the wrist, and in Paris, in London,
In Berlin, in Vienna, in New York, everywhere, this same the motif was sung, blown, whistled, scraped, chirped, moogle. And we are surprised that the belief in a "Syndic-
"cat" was born!

When, in all countries, five hundred newspapers
Members of different parties sing once each day.
twice or more, the same melody, it's really not It's impossible to believe in "pure chance" or in... mysterious "sympathies" of nerves and souls.
The time of miracles and belief in Miracles are unfortunately over.

However, for once and as an exception, I
I want to believe in miracles. In any case, the mysterious
The conductor didn't add much variety. in the execution. There were only two tones and two scales: music of celestial spheres for the saints and angels of the "revision", booed and infernalsavage insults, fishwife insults against the big and small devils who did not cheer the "Revision" and they didn't want to believe the new
"Jesus of Nazareth" from Devil's Island.

After having given for a long time still free
In a twist of terrible irony, the social patriarch-
The list told us what had happened,
if the "Affair" had taken place in Germany.

SOCIALISTS AND JEWS on

If the "Affair" had taken place in Germany
It was possible to take place in "generic" France, I I've already said: Zola, Labori, etc..., se-aint aujour-whether today, on the run abroad, or in prison, as criminals; foreign journalists who, from Berlin, would have spread the "campaign" abroad,
would have been driven out after three days capital and territory of the Empire, and, e: case of resistance, led to the border with a good "push"; Picquart, for... — let's say for various things, — would have been sentenced to ten years of a fortress, without prospect of grace; the Drevfus
The German would have been buried alive!, and, in case of Attempted escape, shot without thanks.

That's how it's used in Germany with the prisoners, and I'm not just talking about with the guilty of high treason, but with iron-scented rowdy fellows, made facetious by beer, have offended the sense of military dignity of a sen-Tinelle and were, for this horrible misdeed, put in prison. Really, never the biblical sentence on The proud Pharisees were no more vigorous.
illustrated; never national hypocrisy and international voices have not been heard or elaborated on further.

Disgusting way.

Shortly after expressing in these such clearly contemptuous terms his opinion on the role played by the socialists in the affair Dreyfus, Leibknecht was dying.

Jules Guesde, who refused to enter the suite

Jaurès and Millerand in domesticity city of Israel, is today poor, without influence, abandoned by his friends.

Millerand was a minister.

Jaurès will be tomorrow...

This proves that the power of the Jews is large. But this also proves that the social-
The lists are no longer free...

lI

THE INTERNATIONAL

The Two Internationals. — What the International was like-National Workers' Union. — Preponderant role of the Jew Karl Marx. — The duped proletariat. — Alliance between Jewry and Freemasons.
The anti-militarist campaign on the eve of 1870.
Congresses in Geneva, Lausanne, Bern, etc. — THE Fribourg Jews and the general strike in case of war. — The Jew Hendlé, the Huguenots Clama-Geran and Buisson. — Buisson and the Germans at Lausanne. — Jules Ferry's opinion. — Jules Simon, Eugène Pelletan, Magnin and Co. against
The army. — Names that keep recurring. — The F,*, Chassin and F,^, Macé. — A Rothschild trewizard of the "League of Disarmament". — The arri-Prussian revolt. — Jews everywhere! — The recons-
The establishment of the International Workingmen's Association and the Dreyfus Affair.
The new ones, plagiarists of the old ones. — The citizen Virginie Barbet, member of the Interna-

National Workers' Union. — The work of Jaurès and associates. — The Militias. — A sham historical. — The opinion of the great Carnot on the “Volunteers of ’92.” — Disarmament and Germany. — Declaration of the German Socialists mands. — The revolutionaries of yesteryear: Barbès and Blanqui.

To explain what the International is, to explain even briefly the role that she has played in the past and that she continues to play in the world now, it is necessary- would be a volume.

It is commonly said that there are two International: International of the rich, representing felt by cosmopolitan speculators, by the top bankers for whom money has no more of smell rather than of homeland, and the Zzzergatzonale of poor people, embodied in a global union of workers from all countries.

This distinction is more apparent than real

Basically, the two /zzernatzonales, most of time, they merge, they obey the same secret leaders, they execute the same mysterious instructions, and this, thanks to the betrayal of the leaders of the proletariat, including Some, it is true, are sincere, sincere even to the point of being killed for their ideas — example: Varlin and a few others — but most of whom find it preferable to imitate the example of the Tolain and Millerand families, and of betraying their cause at the right moment, in exchange of a Senate seat or a portfolio of minister...

rare

The International Labour Association their who played in the last years of the Empire and under the Commune such an important roleso much so, was founded under the auspices of the Jewry. Its true creator was the Jew.
German Karl Marx, high priest of socialism Islam, who was elevated to the status of a demigod after his death, and of which Messrs. Jaurès and C* do not pronounce ja-but the name without experiencing a kind of chill-his religious man.

At that time (1864), Karl Marx, a refugee in London, at least in France, had not than a mediocre reputation. The pre- influence weighty which was then penetrating socialism was that of the great writer Proudhon, who was due to die the following year.

This is nonetheless Karl Marx, very small boy next to Proudhon, very little boy still alongside these revolutionaries and consfamous pirates named Blanqui and Mazzini, who was entrusted with the drafting of the manifesto-inaugural festival of |' International.

And, from this first document, the inspiration the secret of the Jewish community is revealed, without even the help of a "spyglass bridge".

The Jew Karl Marx, addressing the workers-
Their voices from all over the world are crying out to them:

“Workers of the world, unite!”

But he did not tell them, “Unite to to be stronger in defending your interests professionals; do you hear, form a coalition to be better able to resist to corporate selfishness" No, the Jew Karl Marx said to the workers: "Workers, unite!"
for the conquest of political power.

I quote verbatim from the manifesto written by Karl Marx and published in English on the 1st no.
November 1864, following the meeting of Saint-Martins' Hall (1)

To liberate the working masses, the cooperative- The ratio must achieve national development.

(1) This is not the document known as Manifesto of the Communist Party, by Karl Max and Friedrich Engels, but from a later manifesto. Also the work of Karl Marx.

but the lords of the land and the lords of the Capitalists will always use their privileges policies to defend and perpetuate their privileges economic laws.

Therefore, the conquest of political power is It has become the primary duty of the working class. seems to have understood this: because, in England, in In Germany, Italy, and France, efforts have been made. actions to politically reorganize the party of workers.

. is not a line of this manifesto written by a German Jew where the direct inspiration The cosmopolitan Jewish community does not betray itself. One touch of the finger in this passage, truly- a moving read to reread today, in the- what Karl Marx advises workers to to become aware of the mysteries of the poli- international tick, to monitor conduct of their respective governments, of the com- to beat them if necessary by all means in their power..."

Fighting for a foreign policy of this nature, added the German Jew with this irony truly diabolical, which is the prerogative of those of his race, is to take part in the general struggle for the emancipation of the workers. The conquest of political power has therefore become the first duty of the working class.

For having followed good advice too closely of Karl Marx, the workers saw shot 35,000 of their people in 1871. That's what they had obtained in fact of emancipation; but, in On the other hand, the Jewish High Bank is more powerfulhealth than ever, more than ever she reigns on the world, and, to demonstrate his satisfactiontion to those who serve it by continuing to to deceive the workers, she sometimes deigns to distribute buer to his Millerand and his Jaurès of the doorsheets or vice-presidencies...

Corame, we see more and more that Disraeh — this other Jew — was right, when he said knows in Coningsby, always with this iron-The Semite's evil and ferocious denial:

So you see, my dear Coningsby, that the the world is governed by very different characters rents... from what those who are not behind the scenes.

*

What kind of policy did the externalizationnational thus directed by Karl Marx — that is to say by the Jewish community?

BOCIALISTS AND KILLERS 20

This policy was initially reflected in a series of strikes that broke out in Le Creusot, in Fourchambault, and pretty much everywhere in France.

Then, the international players took care of preaching disarmament and the abolition of standing armies.

On this ground, the Jews, directors of l7zinternational, found collaborators eager to support their eternal allies, the Franks-Freemasons. We saw the so-called International Freemasonry. Workers and the Masonic bourgeoisie to fraternize at the Geneva Congresses, of Lausanne, Bern, etc., and preach in the same terms, in such a language as one might think dictated, "the war to war, the destruction of militarism infamous”, etc., etc.

This brotherhood was not simply a a brotherhood of words, she was indeed a brotherhood of deeds and actions.

The internationalists gathered in Lausanne, in In 1666, they decided to join the Congress of the Peace — essentially a bourgeois congress and Masonic — which was to meet the following year — promotes in Geneva for the specific and well-defined purpose offinished trying to obtain by all means the abolition-tion of standing armies.

It is the standing armies that perpetuate the national hatreds, declare the internationalists in Lausanne-nationalists; these are the cripples of conscience and of arms and legs, bearing crosses of honor on the chest, which incite the hatred of the people against each other. We must disarm the armies and arming the sovereign people by organizing the militias.

In Geneva, Bern, in 1868, and in Lausanne, again in 1869, on the eve of the war, these same outrages against the army, which the Germans Magne would have paid a lot, they go out with the same violence and the same profusion of socialist mouths and bourgeois lips. Here we find the Fribourg Jew, one of the founders-members of the Zuzerzatzonale, who, in the vote of an "en-pledge not to participate in any way in "War," adds a proposal advising, In case of war, a general strike, there finds the Jew Hendlé, future prefect of the Seine-Inferior, recently deceased; Cla- is found there Mageran, the Huguenot and Dreyfusard caiman He too died a few months ago; we'll see finds a quantity of individuals of the same acabit, some of which still exist and serve more than ever of agents at the Jewish Quarter and at the Masonry.

Among them, 11 should not be forgotten the Huguenot Buisson, now a member of parliament Paris, and who played a role in the Dreyfus affair role that we know.

At the Lausanne Congress (summer of 1869), this Buisson loudly demanded the suppression of the militarism.

He said it was necessary to go to the villages, to tell them there distributing small pieces of paper and small books in exchange for all liveries (sic), against the God of armies, against the conquerors, and his conclusion was that one should not fear prosecution or prison, and that one day we would have to refuse to submit (1).

This language was met with enthusiastic approval. especially among the German delegates. A Berlin congressman even wanted to recognize-to be born the reported service that Buisson had just to return to Prussia by requesting that its speech was printed, reprinted and distributed to profusion!

(1) The Idea of Fatherland and Humanitarianism, by Georges Goyau.

Jules Ferry, who was also attending the Consandstone, was less enthusiastic. |} found that Buisson and the others were going a little too fast at the task.

“You won’t get away with the big nations, said-1l, the United States of Europe: they live too much in military and uni- ambition "Silence."

This did not prevent Jules Ferry from finding Buisson some twenty years later and of him

entrust the reform of our primary education Mayor Ferry, who had heard Buisson at Lau-Sanne, no doubt thought that it would be impossible for him to... impossible to designate a man more capable of into instill sound values in young French people patriotism and the duties of a citizen towards the nation!

"m
The discussions at these Congresses, where the false workers of the Zzzerzgatzonale lived in si close communion of ideas with the bourgeoisie the Lodges, had their repercussions in the press and Parliament.

The National Opinion of Guéroult, the Avenzr

National, by Peyrat, Le Temps, by Nefftzer, were fulminating against the "militaristic] system".
Jules Simon invoked the example of the An-England to ask that the people be given-French tits a military education which remwould advantageously position the barracks.
Even J. Simon exclaimed, in the Legislative Body:

When I say that the army we want to make would be an army of citizens and that it would not have to no degree of military spirit, it's not a con-
The transfer I'm making is a declaration, and a a statement which I am happy about, because it is so that he that there is no military spirit in France that we we want to have an army of citizens who are invincible targeted at home and unable to wage war on Outside... If there is no army without a military spirit, I demand that we have an army that doesn't so not a...

The Huguenot Eugène Pelletan, father of Ca-mill, approved of these insanities and shouted of with all the strength of his lungs:

— No Praetorian Army!

In the Legislative Body, also, Mr. Magnin, later rewarded with a seat in the Senate and by the eminently honorary position and well-paid governor of the Bank of France, - Mr. Magnin declared, on December 21-December 1867:

Standing armies are judged and condemned born. There is only the general armament of the country, then that we would be threatened by foreigners, who would-would reject it from our borders.

And Gambetta himself, the future dictator of the "all-out war," when he posed his candidacy in Paris against Hippolyte Carnot had written in his electoral notebook "the the elimination of standing armies, the cause of ruin for the finances and affairs of the nation, source of hatred between peoples and of "Distrust within."

The Freemasonry joined in the chorus in mul-using a profusion of brochures and pamphlets in favor of disarmament, universal peace saddle and the brotherhood of peoples. The Democratie, weekly organ of the F',*, Chassin, circulated a petition in favor of the subscription lition of standing armies, and among the signatures were found, next to names of deceased, some more sadly known than others,

those of survivors who are no less so:
Senator Cazot, from "Alais au Rhône", Naquet, of Divorce and Panama, Antonin
Proust, from Panama, the old Professor Drey-Grimaux, the Yves Guyot of von Reinach,
And finally,... Mr. Anatole France!

That's the case, as in "I don't know"
What a melodrama!

- Already!

Brother Jean Macé, founder of the League of Teaching, was going on a pilgrimage in the Lodges of Italy and Germany, preaching the hatred of war, prophesying reconciliationtion of the peoples, the next constitution of United States of Europe, and the F.*, Prussians they mocked this old man as much as they could imbecile.

The International Workingmen's Association does not per- He also didn't take his time. His commission parisienne appealed to the solidarity of the comradesworkers' docks in Berlin, reminding them that "War between peoples cannot be considered desere that like a civil war, a setback of civilization."

The International League for Disarmament launched a manifesto whose signatories declaredralemt:

To strongly condemn the current weapons system the one who, making war a profession, makes the inevitable war;

To protest against standing armies and to demand, as a transitional measure, the organization national militias, the most effective means of destroy forever the preponderance of force brutal on the intellectual and moral power of peoples.

This manifesto of the International League of Disarmament was intended to provoke a vast subscription, the minimum of which was set at 10 cents.

Among the members of the Initi- Commission liative who had signed it, Germany comp- There were two representatives, both of them residing In Paris: Mr. Schilg, lawyer, 4, rue Saint-Quentintin, and Mr. Hugo Rothschild, merchant, 54, rue Lafayette.

After the signatures of the various members, included this short phrase, eminently suggestive gestural, as we would say today:

Subscriptions and membership lists

$2045, are provisionally received, 54, rue Lafayette, at Mr. HUGO ROT HSCHILD.

Thus, at the head of the so-called Jxzternatio-Workers' union included a Jew who...
Karl Marx, resident of London.

At the cash register of this same International, responsible for receiving memberships and subscriptions descriptions in favor of disarmament, are found-had another German Jew, Hugo Rothschild, residing in Paris.

It was full!

The Prussians only had to come to us. They arrived, indeed. Paris saw the che-It's worth the uhlans to trample its Champs-Elysées.

Behind these centaurs, all clad in iron and glittersteel steeds advanced, astride their horses They're as good as tweezers, bizarre characters dressed in long, brown, padded cloaks.
Long faces, gold-rimmed glasses, long hair, dirty red beards, worm-shaped pigs, wide-brimmed hats, these were all...
Israelite bankers, as many as [Saac Laquedem] follow-before the German army, like vultures.

With this outfit, it was not difficult to to recognize their professions. They were, obviously-Jewish accountants or financiers in charge of the collection of our billions. After the general staff Military, it was the headquarters of the Ghetto (1)...

A German Rothschild had been, on the eve of the war, the treasurer of the League of Disarmament moment.

He was another German Rothschild — thishe from rue Laffitte — who dealt, after the war, of our ransom with Bleichroeder, three-sixth German Jew, but who had had to, this one, to remain in Prussia, to serve as an agent and confidant to Bismarck.

France, which had believed the declarations "Disarmament activists" and peace leaguers, atoned for his credulity by the loss of two proVinces, not to mention the five billion to pay.

The workers, for their part, who had given in to the incitements of the Jews of the International League, left on the cobblestones of the streets of Paris, on the wall splashed from Père-Lachaise, in the plain bloody massacre at Satory, thirty-five thousand corpses of their own, not to mention all the poor dupes that were being taken to the New World.

Such was the outcome of the Zzzerzationale des Tra-

(1) Mr. René de Lagrange, article in Le Figaro of February 28, 1583, cited in Jewish France.

vagrants, founded by Jews, run by Jews with the help of Freemasonryperie...

*
o

And that's the operation we would like Let's start again today!

Because we want to start it again, and the new This work of treason, modeled on the old one, is already well on its way.

The International had hardly survived the war and the Commune. It was dormant and no longer made headlines.

Well, Internationale has been reconstituted officially, at the precise moment when the leaders Socialists, betraying their cause, signed the pact with cosmopolitan Jewry for the infamous campaign directed far less against the Jewish traitor and millionaire Dreyfus that against France and its army, The thing took place at the International Socialist Congress Final scene at the Salle Wagram, September 25, 1900, at the morning session. The motion to reconstitute-
The official tuition was filed by a delegate Dutchman named Van Koll and voted by acclamation mation to the cries of: Long live the International!

Workers! |

It was also decided at that same meeting, that the reconstituted International would have its secretariat at the People's House in Brussels.
Now, in a noteworthy coincidence, the entire Everyone knows that Brussels is the major center of German espionage.

What is certain is that, like the ancienne, the new /z/crnationale was born from Jewish inspiration, which is directed by the Jews, what is the agent of execution of these plans?
of universal Jewry.

These plans are the same today as in the final years of the Empire; they consist of discrediting the army which protects France against a new invasion it was a new dismemberment, to demand the suppression of this army and its replacement-ment by militias, to provoke innocuous-terrible strikes to finish ruining our industry and our commerce, to finally prepare by any means necessary a revolution for the fishermen in troubled waters.

The new Internationals have nothing invented; they plagiarized slavishly, not only-the processes, but the sentences, the words same as their predecessors.

"Vendéens", "Chouans", "Jesuits", "Ter-
"White anger," all these declamations whose sole purpose is to arouse suspicion
the army and to divide it, to cut it off Secondly, we find them in speeches, in manifestos, in proclamations pre-war internationals and from before the Commune.

Read instead:

The moment is decisive; the very survival of the France, and with it the salvation of liberty in the the whole world. For this freedom, Paris fights with the resurrected heroism of our brothers of '92; but if Paris is abandoned by you, it will perhaps succumb “under the bastard coalition of the Jesuits and the Venddens of all monarchical regimes that have Sorry, France, and they brought it to a permanent state of external and civil wars. (Revolutionary Committee) Provinces' leader.— Appeal to Republicans devoted. — 1871.)

The "Chouans" are denounced in d'imnumerous pieces of this style.

Listen to this appeal from the "central republican committee-

Socialist republican of southern France to the residents of Lyon:

Two parties are present today:

One group consists of successors and heirs.
of these vampires who for centuries have been sucking the blood and the treasures of France, royalists, imperialists realists, false republicans, Jesuits, monopolists, exploiters; these are the ones who, with the help of declarations hypocrites and schemes of all kinds are trying to deceive you.

It is the Versailles government that is fighting for them with an army of gendarmes, of ser-townspeople, Vendéens, and sacristans...
(May 16, 1871.)

You find there, thirty years earlier, the fa-
Meuse, a formula so often used by the press
Jewish socialist: Sword and holy water sprinkler!

I tell you, they are vulgar plagiarists.

Do you believe that the defrocked Charbonel who launches bands of Apaches against churches, a,
He, at least, invented something.

Not in the slightest. This defrocked priest is not
- like the others, just a pale imitator. Fn 1870 and 71, the speakers of the International De-declared at all the meetings that "in order to Getting rid of the priests, the most

The most effective way is to seize their stables.
(the churches), and to turn them into schools for our children (1).

You saw at the Rennes trial prancing around the "Intellectuals," these amazons of the betrayal, actresses who have fallen into gallantry, bluestockings in search of adventure, who, likewise, they raged as much as they could against the "Forgers of the General Staff" and the "Jesuits"
braided.

These so-called emancipators who have not
They have so far only succeeded in emancipating themselves.
memes, they too, invented nothing. Their older sisters went even further that they, as evidenced by the "Manifesto of women from Lyon who were members of the International-nale, to recruit young people from 1870 to refusing military service, adopted by a re-private meeting held in the Valentino room, at Croix-Rousse, January 16, 1870, and communicated to all sections and committees of the Zxfernatio-

"nal".

It was through a revolutionary act, that of the

(1) Meeting at Le Creusot, November 26, 1871.

refusal of conscription, which must be protested, and not through useless declamations, we read in this documentary
ment... |

Young citizens of the class of 1870, you are part of the new generation, therefore you are called upon to be among the first to benefit from reforms stemming from the social revolution; therefore It is your honor and duty to open the struggle. An opportunity presents itself to you to give an example of human dignity, do not let her pass. In a few days, the Empire will call you-lera to enlist you under the fringe flags (sic), don't answer him, or rather, answer him
This: "We are the soldiers of France, we we are not yours, because between France and others
"Today and you, there's nothing in common..."

Do this, citizens, the whole world will... will applaud and you will have well deserved the revolution tion. What are you afraid of? Prison? We, your Mothers, your sisters, your friends, we will watch over We will fight alongside you. As soon as we will have learned that one or more of you
They have been arrested, we will go in droves to demand your release.
to the competent authority, and we will have to be told to do justice.

This manifesto was signed

For the citizens present at the meeting and by order:

VIRGINIE BARBET,

Member of the International Association

Workers.

These inane, criminal statements excitements, which look like a call, an in-quickly to the invader, we find them today-from today in the Soldier's Manuals distributed in the barracks, thanks to tolerance, so as not to - not to mention the government's complicity; we We find them in leaves such as the Conscrit or the Pioupiou of the Yonne, where some profes-University professors, history professors like citizen Gustave Hervé, write that the flag of the France under the manure of the barracks.

xe
»

More cautious and more hypocritical, — for he feared that this violence would alienate from for him for a while longer the wallet of his dreams, — Mr. Jaurès is content to attacksurreptitiously undermine the Franco-Russian alliance in letters to his Italian socialist friends, or it is still good to affirm that the question Alsace-Lorraine has had its day, and that it not only should we never talk about it, but also

Gambetta said, but there's still no more of it think (1).

Ultimately, the Jaurès group accomplished the same thing.
task that the authors of the Soldier's Manual and the editors of the Pioupiou de l'Yonne, when she calls for the abolition of the army and its replacement by national militias nationals, as in Switzerland. The Jaurès gang tra-will lead to a new dismemberment of the France, when it tells the people that the Professional armies are useless and that he All it takes is a national guard, a mob of citizens, armed hastily and haphazardly, and not exercised, to defend the national soil and re-push back the invasion.

That is a lie.

The famous legend of the Volunteers of 1792 is the most infamous and the most criminal historical imposture perpetrated by forgers History has ever invented for the most great profit to the foreigner and his agents.

(1) Just recently, on October 26, during the meeting organized by the Pro Armenia Committee at the Sarah-Bernhardt Theatre, Mr. Jaurès attacked the Russian alliance and praised the new * “French-Italian-English” triplicate

Would you like me to give you some information on these "Vo-"Lentaires" supposedly heroic, the opinion of a a man whom no one would suspect of lukewarmness revolutionary?

This is Lazare Carnot — yes, the great one Carnot, from Père-la-Victoire himself!

On April 29, 1793, Lazare Carnot and Duquesnoy, representatives of the people, deputies to the The armies of the North wrote to the Convention:

The volunteers do not want to be subject to any discipline; they are the bane of their hosts and bring desolation our countryside. Scattered in barracks where all they do is drink and run, they expose themselves to to be scattered and cut into pieces, if only that The enemy was enterprising. Fortunately, we we are strict on the ban on communications, because the enemy could have already surprised our forward operating bases and our positions themselves...

We don't know what the office of the war; our volunteers are always naked. We must to admit that it's a chasm; hardly a soldier If he has shoes, he should go and sell them; he is who sell even their clothes, their rifles, burn their gunpowder, and insult their fellow citizens toys.

To put an end to these acts of banditry, Carnot and Duquesnoy, are demanding strict measures exceptional

Your new military penal code is not enough not: if every soldier who steals a pin is not Shot on the spot, you'll never do anything... As for us, citizens and our colleagues, it is up to us It is impossible to bear the sight of such a person. disorders, and we ask you to bring them back to us-to appeal within the Convention as soon as possible possible.

'

However, the two representatives remain at The army, on June 3rd, they addressed the Committee of public safety and they express their concerns to him. studies

We believe we should consult you on a A crucial point. We can, more than likely, how to take Ostend by force; we will do it-Us, yes or no?

With wise troops, there would be no Hesitate, but here is what we have to fear of ours: that is, they will go as soon as the assault will be given, spread through the houses, plunder and get so drunk that, two hours later, they will slaughter like calves in every corner of Street.

In this same letter, Lazare Carnot and Duquesnoy ask what they should do of the immense number of thieves and receivers those who were placed under arrest.

"JI would probably be very appropriate to do some examples, they say, but there are so many cou- "It's understandable that we're very embarrassed."

Here they are, not as a legend... She deceitfully and deceitfully portrays them, but such that they were in reality, these "heroic" "Volunteers." Brave at times, no doubt, when veteran troops surrounded and escorted them they lingered, but much more often cowardly, ready in disarray, quick to panic, and par- above all undisciplined, plunderers, debauched, drunkards to the point of selling their shoes and their guns to drink more.

And that's not just the opinion. Lazare Carnot. All the generals of the Revolution, Dumouriez, Kellermann, Biron, Custine, Wimpfen, Beurnonville, speak "Volunteers" in the same terms, and The same applies to the people's representatives on assignment with the armed forces: Billaud-Varennes, Carnot-le-Jeune, Camus, Treillhard, Gossuia, Merlin-de-Douai, Dubois-Crancé, etc., etc. The The entire convention eventually shared this opinion, — since February 21, 1793, She voted for Lamal Game — that is to say, the merger

"Volunteers" with the line troops, the old troops.

The men who cite the example of "Volunteers" of the Revolution to do accepting the idea of national militias is not So, as we can see, only ignorant or imposters.

X OSX

And why, when we talk about disarmament- ly, do we want France to be the one to- Sarme the first?

The men of the new Zzzerzationade are showing themselves, and for good reason, to be very sober in their ex- Explanations on this point.

They limit themselves to vague protests where
The issue is the solidarity of the proletariat. from all countries. It's very nice, in words, the solidarity. In 1870, the former Internationals already claimed that German workers did not would not wage war on France. However, they are Germans of all classes without except for those who bombed and set fire to Paris Bazeilles.

What would the socialists from across the border do tomorrow?

Rhine, if a new war were to break out between Germany and France?

Here is the answer, which Mr. Jaurès will keep to himself well, — I'll bet on it — to reproduce in the Little Republic:

The annexation of Alsace-Lorraine is an accomplished fact.
fold, and here, within this enclosure, we have, of
on our side, declared in the most categorical way-risk, which we recognize as a right the current state of affairs. (Auer. Reichstag Session)
(of February 9, 1891.)

No one, however enthusiastic they may be about internationalist ideas, will only say that we do not have no national duties... (Liesknecut, Congress)
(from Halle, October 15, 1890.)

If the Triple Alliance could be concluded... it summer, because the interests of three powers, in facing the Franco-Russian agreement, are necessarily solidarity (1), outside of the mutual relations of different peoples of these countries.

I am convinced that no statesman, nor in Austria, nor in Italy, nor in Germany,

---

(1) This is a complete lie, since the Triple Alliance is This predates the Trans-Russian alliance. This lie by Bebel, Mr. Jaurès recently adopted this view when he declared that the
The Triple Alliance was the necessary counterweight to the Franco-Russian alliance.

The opposite is true.

will want to detach themselves as long as this situation lasts. of this alliance, because by that very fact he would expose his country has a large dariger, in the event that the Two other allied powers would be defeated in a war. (Beper. Session of the Reichstag of June 25, 1890.)

We have already stated many times and, for I reiterate this statement, that we are ready to fulfill their obligations to the exact homelandthe same duties as everyone else citizens... I know there is no one among we who think differently on this subject. (AUER.) Session of the Reichstag of October 8, 1890.

It has been said... that the German Reichstag does not tradoes not deserve such fervor in the defense of the homeland than the French Parliament.

Well, I declare that when it comes to In defense of the homeland, all parties are united; that if it is a matter of defending oneself against an enemy No foreign party will be left behind. (LinkKNECHT. Reichstag session of May 16, 1801.)

The attack against official Russia was cruel. barbaric, even the annihilation of this enemy of civilization, is therefore our most important duty sacred, which we must fulfill until our last day to deny a sigh in the very interest of the Russian people, oppressed and groaning under the whip. And if then we fight in the ranks alongside those who Currently, they are our adversaries, we do not Let's not do this to save them and their institutions political and economic, but for Germany in general, that is to say, to save usmemes and to deliver from barbarians a country where we think one day we will realize our own ideal social. (Beret. Vorwaerts, September 27, 1891.)

If hope exists somewhere abroad, then it may still exist.
that in the event of an attack against Germany could count on our abstention, this hope would be completely disappointed. As soon as our country will be attacked, there will only be one party left, and we Others, democratic socialists, we would not be Certainly not the last islands to fulfill our duty.
(Vozzuar, in the Münchener Post.)

This is what the German socialists think of all shades of opinion on the issue of Alsace-Lorraine, on the Triple Alliance, on The Franco-Russian alliance, on patriotic duty General eri. [They are right to think so, then-that they are German; but, what is entirely to The inexplicable and incomprehensible fact is that Our French socialists think on these memes questions exactly like theirs, that is to say as if they were Prussians, and not French.

The German socialists warn us very loyally.

"Don't be under any illusions," they tell us; the
The day war is declared, we will be the first to run to the border, and us we will no longer hesitate to cross the Rhine and crossing the Vosges mountains was something we did not hesitate to do.

in 10/0, 2

On this point, it would seem that the socialists
French people should answer:

“— Since that’s the case, we too will fe-
We will fulfill our duty as Frenchmen and soldiers...

Not at all, the French socialists are beating they raise their hands and cry out:

"Bravo! Down with the army! Down with the fatherland!"
Long live disarmament! No more borders!

All peoples are brothers...

Admit it, that's still pretty weird!

*
+ *

Mr. Jaurès and his friends are not, however, unintelligent to the point of not understanding that it is impossible for us, in the current state of Europe and the world, to force the powers new laws, and in particular Germany, to disarm at the same time as us.

Mr. Jaurès himself said:

SOCIALISTS AND JEWS

It is certain that humanity is not progressing of a uniform movement; all peoples, all the races, do not manage to develop at the same time economic system which enables the socialist institution. And so, when a people realizes the idea at home As a socialist, he will inevitably be in contact with peoples who will not have achieved it... (1).

So what will happen if we commit the imprudence of carrying out the first ones, we Other French people, the idea of disarmament?

This very simple thing will happen: A disarmed France will find itself in contact with A Germany armed to the teeth. Germany Magne will then do with us what she wants; She will add whatever provinces she pleases. to take from those she has already stolen from us, and soon all of France, this land of joy and freedom, our land, will not be more than a German colony. He will arrive at French people, what happened to the Poles, including children, even today, more than a century After the annexation, they receive the whip when They dare to express themselves in their mother tongue. nelle.

(1) Speech by Mr. Jaurès to the Chamber of Deputies. Session of June 19, 25 and July 3, 1897.

Well, if that's the ideal of Internatiosocialist and Jewish, that's not ours. We, the anti-Semites, want to live free and happy on the land of our fathers, who is the most beautiful and sweetest there is to the world. We think on this point as thought the great socialists of yesteryear, at back when it was still permissible to call oneself in At the same time, socialist and French.

We think like Barbès, the "Bayardof Democracy," who wrote, towards the end of the Second Empire (January 24, 1867), to George Sand:

> I am a chauvinist. May we have peace unitedVerselle, so be it. No need for Achilles then. But so much that there will be English people trafficking in all kinds of hatreds against anything that is not their business, and Prussians dreaming of conquests, I don't understand. why egalitarian France would want to muto unleash his warrior energy.

We think like old Blanqui, who, in Paris, besieged by the Prussians, was growing this beautiful cry of patriotic hatred:

> The glory of Paris is its condemnation... Its They want to extinguish the light; they want to suppress his ideas.

> into nothingness. These are the hordes of the 5th century. overwhelmed a second time in Gaul, for engulf modern civilization. as they have devoured Greco-Roman civilization, its ancestor.
>
> Can't you hear their savage howling? "Perish the Latin race!" It is Berlin that must be the holy city of the future, the radiance that illuminates the world. Paris is usurping and corrupt Babylonbroken, the great prostitute whom the messenger of God, The angel of extermination, Bible in hand, will sweep away Sela face of the earth.

Are you unaware that the Lord has marked the race Jermaine, under the seal of predestination? She has a One meter more of guts than ours!

Let us defend ourselves. This is the ferocity of Odin, dowounded by the ferocity of Moloch, who marches against our cities, the barbarity of the Vandal and the barbarity of Semitic. Let us defend ourselves and not rely on perrings.

“—Old song,” Mr. Jaurès would say…

It's possible, but it's still ours.

Because his new song, his Internationale,
It is the Jews who are in charge of this, and We're the ones who pay for them.

We don't want that kind of music...

PRINTING OFFICE OF THE ANTISEMITIC BOOKSTORE

PARIS -- 45, Rue Vivienne, 45 =: PARIS

ANTISEMITIC BOOKSTORE

45, Rue Wivienne, AS == PARIS

WORKS

by Edouard Drumont

Jewish France, illustrated edition, a magnificent Large octavo volume, bound in an amateurish style, corners, spine — occupied by Wecllte coms soosseosoese 10.85 »

Jewish France, 2 vols. in-16, paperback, French... 7.0 Jewish France before public opinion, 1 volume in-16;

sonne oo soso 3.50

Of Yor, mud, and blood, 1 vol. in-16, illustrated by G ENSE CIranco... rh rre nt error 3.5
The Last Battle, 1 vol. in-16, French edition........ 3 59 Masonic Tyranny: Our Masters, a powerful pamphlet in-16, 152 pages, French....................... 0.78
Jews against France: A new Poland,
E hureun-6, franco...........- ern nnn 0.50
The Testament of an Anti-Semite, 4 volumes, 16mo
CO 84 868 OR aa CC 3.50

The End of a World, 1 vol. in-16, French edition........... 3.50
The Secret of Fourmies, 1 vol. in-16, French edition...... 3.50

Bronze Figures and Snow Statues, 1 illustrated volume Portraits and drawings by L. MÉTIVET, 3.50 francs

Heroes and Clowns, 1 vol. in-16, illustrated with port-

Lines and drawings by L. MÉTIVET, Franco 3.50
My Old Paris, 2 vols. in-16, illustrated with 100 drawings by Œ CoiNpre. Each volume, French style... 3.50

Old Portraits.- Old Frames, 1 vol. in-16, illustrated 110 drawings by G. COINDRE, Franco........... 3.50

READ EVERY DAY

Free Speech

MAJOR DAILY NEWSPAPER

LEARNED II IP PLC

Diver: Edouard DRUMONT

TE RDP SIS Dm o

THE NUMBER: 5 CENTIMES
AVAILABLE FOR SALE EVERYWHERE

Special printing press of the Anti-Semitic Bookstore.

Full text of " 1800s French Nationalism Pt 7 "

See other formats

JEWISH COUNTRY

GEORGE DE PASCAL

WITH A PREFACE LETTER BY ÉDOUARD DRUMONT

PARIS

BLERIOT BOOKSTORE
HENRI GAUTIER, SUCCESSOR
90, QUAI DES GRANDS-AUGUSTINS, 55

1887

AT THE SAME BOOKSTORE

has

Jewish France, by Edouard Drumont, numerous illustrations, franco...... location price -.. 42 fr. »»

The book consists of four parts.

Each part is sold separately. Price including shipping... 3 francs.

The conquest of the world by the Jews, by the major OSMAN-BRY, francophone price............. eree 0 fr. 50

'To receive each of these books free of charge by post, Simply send the price in stamps or by money order to Mr. Henri GAUTIER, publisher, 55, quai des Grands-Augustins, in Paris.

LETTER-PREFACE

BY EDUARD DRUMONT

My Reverend Father and Friend,

The very day that the Jewish France, at this hour of indecision and of anguish where the writer, doubting others, —
begins to doubt himself, La Croix published the first article about the book.

_ Your name was at the bottom of this article.

You had wanted to be the first at this ba-Size of ideas. Representative of an old breed, you had insisted on sitting next to a son former Frenchmen who were attempting a breakout against this cosmopolitan Jewish community whose hordes incessantly increasing, they besiege us and us paralyze.

Today we can pause to Let's talk a little before the final fight. We we know what we wanted to know: there are our dear country of France, in the fields as in the city, both in the north and the south, many French people to whom the Jewish suggestion has not removed all brain activity, — a lot of French people who are very awake.

Perhaps this awakening is still a little confusing.
Everyone rubbed their eyes in the place where they were when we tried to put him to sleep; everyone keeps a bit of the old-fashioned attitude. Everyone In any case, he agrees to settle down a little almost the same question:

— Ah, that! What is it that is this country laborious, this country, whose prosperity made once the envy of Europe, is reduced to begging city. We see what has never been seen before.
that the world is a world: the peasants do not find-wind more to live by cultivating the land; the ou-farmers no longer work enough to eat;
We keep piling on tax without being able to achieve to fill the gap. Some are squawking, others

THERE

some weep; some groan, others shout.

Above all this, one can see hovering in paper glories, in apotheoses à la Meyer, all sorts of babbling beings and exotic ones, Cahen d'Anvers, Camondo -from Constantinople, from Bichoffsheim de Bruxelles, from the Erlanger family of Frankfurt, who own Hundreds and hundreds of millions. What's happening?

The conclusion reached by all these Fran- That's what we'd really like to have some | Clarifications on the immense displacement monetary which has been accomplished in the last few years. The more moderate among us would be happy to consult some accounting documents to help to understand how those who had nothing Fifty years ago, they now find themselves having everything, while the others have nothing left.

This is still a very interesting movement Once and for all, for the sociologist. Everything that thinks, independent writers, artists, workers, know perfectly understands that the outcome is inevitable and that this starving country will not bleed itself dry always at the four veins to allow the Rothschilds to increase their billions.

Meanwhile, our one hundred and eighty de- right-wing whores who call themselves soldiers of Christ, who were chosen by France Christian and honest like the champions of Faith, they dare not say a word from the podium They don't address what is really at issue. The financial question was never addressed except from certain angles. subordinate and childish.

The fierce left-wing MPs, the bri- Chain men, whose motto is: "Neither God "Neither master nor master" are even more afraid than the others; They get colic at the mere thought that we can discuss in Parliament the fortune of Rothschild.

These newspapers, which have elevated disrespect to the the height of an institution, which talks about everything, They discuss everything, mock everything, lower their voices suddenly, as soon as the subject of Jews comes up: "Ah! you

`You know, my dear friend, it's very delicate for us. Deep down, we find that you are far from having told the whole truth, but

We are required to exercise a great deal of restraint.
This whole end of society is very curious.
Once again, very interesting to study, either of a cell, or of a study.
You're doing double work with your Jewish friend.
very. You are performing the work of an exorcist and work
As a social worker, you make full possession a session of themselves, with a little holy water, to the possessed and the suggested, to whom the
The Jews have taken away all freedom of thought. You analyze the Jewish system perfectly, and you Show that the act of seizing someone else's property by organizing financial companies that are outright scams, nothing in common with the principle of property.
You thus dismantle the ambiguity on which the Jewish. He begins by stealing the property of others in the name of the instincts of his race, and he places then the proceeds of his theft under the auspices of the sacred institution of property. Even among Our friends, there's no shortage of people who say:
“Erlanger took three hundred million from French savings with companies, such as the Bingham mines which never contained a vein of ore, that's undeniable, but demand that he return those three hundred million

"It shakes the very foundations of society."

The foundations of society are elsewhere, and you You're right to say that. If you want the bottom line
From my perspective, I am convinced that if we par-let's come and heal the leaders of the Conservative Party a respect as incomprehensible as it is profound that they feel for thieves, everything would end very cheerfully. All the French re-would bind in a burst of laughter where they would find themselves all the common sense of our race and also its ar-love of justice.

Satan is undoubtedly terrible, but he is also Very naughty and very cowardly. For a Robert...
Devil who defies divine power there is many Robert Macaire than the sight of a A tricorn hat would be enough to send them running.

For me, I see the ultimate explanation as very Joyful, with a bayonet glint in the distance, and, to preside over the matter, a brave, resolute officer, despite his very blue eyes gentle, like the one who came to congratulate me at his classmates' names.

— What did you have when you were
"Once in France," they will say to the German Jews.

— I had. I had a peddler's bale.
on the back.

— What do you have now?

— One hundred and fifty million at most.

— What work did you do to earn that ?

— My God... I've launched a few businesses whose shares are now worth zero, but who, by a singular chance, enriched me and ruined the shareholders.

— One hundred and fifty million... Keep some One... Return the rest... and have a good trip!

France is awake, my Reverend Father
And friend, that's the essential and the main thing. That God only allow this country, once so full of good cheer and today St. Morose and, however gloomy, may we start to laugh again a little and the curse will be broken, the nightmare will be over.
dissipated. The sinister caravan Jacques was talking about de Biez will resume its activities, "following the storks and walking through brambles to re-to conquer Palestine and Egypt.” God, as

As you say, he won't be wrong, and France will have

He was right again.

Epovarp DRUMONT,

Paris, to March 1887.

ee

E FOREWORD

Jewish France was a revelation.

Like lightning that, in a stormy night, shows the precipitate to the traveler, the book ran-Drumont's geux showed everyone, even the most stubbornly refusing to see the national peril that we was stirring up cosmopolitan Jewry, which has struck down upon our poor country.

To popularize, to make this serious lesson accessible to the general public, to point out the problem, to indicate the remedy, that is the goal of this modest writing. No thought of hatred has inspired these lines; we only want to do an act of truth, justice and legitimate self-defense.
It's the very least we could do.
not to expropriate our homeland without resistance without a fight, by a band of rapacious foreigners.

We do not say: Down with the Jew; we say:
Get the Jew out of here.

THE JEWISH COUNTRY

PART ONE

THE PERIL — THE JEWISH CONQUEST

rem ——

CHAPTER ONE

The Plan

First, let's make a necessary distinction: Let's not confuse Judaism and the Jewish woman. Judaism, whose religion is divine, whose The law revealed on Sinai proclaimed eternal morality. nelle, and endowed the chosen people with a constitution admirable social structure; Judaism, with its great kings, with their inspired prophets, with their history heroic tale, more marvelous, more worthy of to rekindle the enthusiasm that the history of Greece and From Rome, Judaism deserves all our respect. He is the living seed of Christianity, and one day, At the end of ages, this is the doctrine of Saint Paul, by the mass return of his children, he will rejoice the heart of the Church in the last days. The Jewish woman rie, is the opposite of Judaism; it is its perversion and 'the deformation, it contains in within her bosom, the blind sons of Israel, who after having The unrecognized and crucified Messiah, they kept against the Christian name and against everything that is inspired by An unquenchable hatred of Christianity. Jewish community, aided in its work by the indifferentrence and by the stupid complicity of its victims themselves, pushes their conquests with a tenacity that nothing discourages, with a audacity that does not back down from any obstacle. It is she whom we attack; it is she whom we Let us denounce it as a public danger. Let no one ignore it. Make no mistake: conquest, that's the goal of the Jewry, and therein lies the danger. It has been claimed that the Jewish people, as they crossed the nations and the centuries, has been continuously directed and governed by an uninterrupted succession of leaders supreme; which these leaders have always cherished the hope of returning to Palestine, their homeland, and to come to dominate the world. This assertion, supported by documents that do not are by no means to be despised, is perhaps too much absolute in some of its parts. But what, is indisputable, as attested by the witnesses-

the most authentic claims, and what is verified In reality, it is the thirst for domination that drives it. Israel, it is its desire to put to the soil the Christians and to expropriate them for his own benefit.

Throughout history, the Jewish people have held the thought that, one day, the triumphant and glorious Messiah, would make them the world's leading people. the idea comes from a distorted and entirely Earthly Messianic prophecies. After his ruin and its final dispersal, the Jewish people carried this hope throughout the world indomitable. She survived all the disappointmentstions, and even today the mass of the nation awaits this powerful triumphant figure, this liberator who will end Israel's exile and bring it the empire of the world.

Let's leave the past centuries behind, and bring back... only a few more modern accounts. The German scholar Reuchlin speaks of the Jews of fifteenth century in these terms:

"They eagerly await wars,"
"the ravages of the provinces and the ruin of the "kingdoms. Their hope is that of a triumph"
"similar to that of Moses over the Canaanites,
"and which would be the prelude to a glorious return to “Jerusalem restored to its ancient splendor.”
"These ideas are the soul of the rabbinic commentaries-

They have been traditionally associated with the prophets.
"naturally transmitted and instilled in the .
'“spirits of this nation; and thus they prepared themselves, Throughout history, Israelites have been involved in this event.
"The ultimate goal of the aspirations of the Jewish race."

In the first half of our nineteenth century, the learned rabbi Drach confirms Reuchlin's assertion is striking:

"The Messiah must be a great conqueror, who "will make all nations of the world slaves"
"Jews. These will return to the Land-
"Holy, triumphant, and laden with riches"
"taken from the infidels."

The purpose of his mission will be to deliver and gather together scattered Israel, and bring them back into the Holy Land, to establish and consolidate a reign temporal, the duration of which will be that of the world.
All nations will then be subject to Jews, and the Jews will dispose of the Indians as they see fit.
vidus who compose them and their possessions.

Among modernized Jews, steeped in culture “contemporary intellectual, and doing quite well market of old legends, the belief in a Personal Messiah, conqueror, king, liberator, fact giving rise to the idea of a messianic people, a primal race a villain destined to dominate humanity. In 1860, a German Jew, named Stamm, publishes in Amsterdam-

=

Dam, a book in which he announces to the world that the kingdom of universal freedom upon the
The land would be founded by the Jews. The same year another German Jew, who signs himself Stammter, addressed a long letter to a Berlin newspaper to demonstrate that "from now on the Jews must
"to take the place of the Christian nobility," and that "God scattered the Jews over the earth"
"whole, so that they may be like leaven"
"for all peoples and as the chosen ones destined-
"Born to one day rule over all men,"

What will this "reign of universal freedom" be like?
"saddle" another Jew from Frankfurt had announced it
in 1858:

“Rome, which eighteen hundred years ago trod
"At the feet of the Jewish people, must fall by the
"the combined forces of this same people who, by this means,
"will spread light across the entire world and ren-
"It will render humanity an eminent service."

In 1861, the president of the Israelite Association universal, the lawyer Crémieux who played a role so important in our revolutions, he exclaimed:

Israel will not end. This small people,
"This is the greatness of God... A messianism"
"New days must dawn and develop" “per..... A Jerusalem of a new order, holy-"situated between East and West, dott se

"to replace the dual city of the Caesars and the "Popes."

In 1864, a French Jew from Nancy, Mr. Lévy Bing wrote:

"...We would have to shut it down from the first juice-
"that in the last of our books, if it were necessary to hunt"
"Jerusalem of our thoughts! And these aspirations
"are not just an intimate, personal thing-
"It is a universal need for our race..."
"It is necessary to see a court soon"
"supreme, seized of major public disputes, of the "complaints between nation and nation, judging in der-
"To deny the spring and whose word is law: And this
"The word is the word of God, spoken by "his firstborn sons, the Hebrews, and before whom"
"all the younger sons bow respectfully, that is to say-
"To speak of the universality of men, our brothers, our:"
"Friends, our disciples."

Mr. Lévy Bing does not err precisely by Excessive modesty. Ultimately, according to him, the
The Jewish people, who have become the universal arbiter of the world, must be the People-Pope. He is not alone in expressing A sea of similar ideas!

“God,” said the Israelite Universe in 1866
“Paris has chosen Israel to be the torchbearer”
"The beauty of humanity."

In 1868, Mr. Isidore, Chief Rabbi of France, declared that the metropolis of the world regenerated by The Jew must be neither London, nor Paris, nor Rome.

but Jerusalem, rebuilt from its ruins, "a “New Jerusalem”, called to great destinies, and which will be "both the city of the past "and the future."

To these testimonies from Israel, let us add...
Christian testimonies.

The solemn manifesto of the Romanian deputies of 1868 will provide us with proof that the ideas and the hopes of nineteenth-century Jews are identical to those of the Jews of the Middle Ages.
"Habit proves," he said, "that Judaism is characterized by predominance and exclusion the most severe sivism... Driven by a force
"instinctive to isolate themselves in the midst of peoples who "surrounding them, the Jews feel they cannot
"not to make common cause with the people
"Christians, because they are diametrically opposed to them in every way"
"Opposite. On the contrary, it has been observed that "Wherever they are transported, whether in large quantities,
"either in small numbers, they introduce everywhere,
"by the very effect of their presence, germs" of destruction and dissolution; for their tendance is about rising everywhere on the ruins of "others. And as for the recognition-
"They believe themselves to be completely uninhibited."

"

"

towards the peoples who gave them hospitality tality, because they look at them as usurpers. That is why they make use of all means to reacquire the rights of supremacy and domination over the universe towards, rights which they believe to be assured by their ancient religious pact...

"Jews consider the time they spend among other peoples as a time of expiation, of trial, of exile, and the inhabitants of the country where they are scattered like enemies put, for they await the promised moment when they will again constitute a distinct nationality tint. Their religion nourishes them with this hope, by giving them a glimpse of the prospect of a bright future, where ultimately they alone dominate-will affect the entire human population.

"It is for us an established fact, which results of all these details, as well as of Persiaverance with which the Jews take root and are increasing in Romania, that is because they are trying to establish here this Jewish state which is the first realization of their ideas of predomnation over Christian peoples.

(1) Explanatory memorandum for the bill against the emaucipa-

“the tone of the Jews of Romania.

These consistent assertions, from sources and Such diverse dates demonstrate in the most undeniable, that passion for domination and conquest is also alive among contemporary Jews porains than among their elders.

Likewise, the religious, political, and social code, to which Judaism, the Talmud, is well made. to maintain within her, along with the hatred of Christianism, that bitter feeling of ambition.

It has been rightly said: "The key to Judaism,
"It's the Talmud, and who doesn't know what it is?"
"The Talmud is radically incapable or of
"to decipher history, or to penetrate the mysteries"
"of Judah. What then is this sphinx with the head of
"Janus, whose mouth smiles and tears?"

The Bible had never been considered by the Jews as - the unique rule of their faith: a priesthood, hereditary in the tribe of Levi, had responsible for interpreting the law and teachings of Moses. When the tribes had been united at following the last dispersal, it became difficult-civic that the priesthood was maintained, according to the exi-agencies of the law, in the Levitic tribe alone.

Religious authority, personified, no longer in the priests of the temple, but in the rabbis of the synagogues had been established since the ruin of Jerusalem. Salem, in the city of Jemniah, then in Tiberias,

And there, she continued to rule the race Israelite and to interpret the Bible. Around the year 220 (others say 189, and some 450), the school The rabbinical court deemed it appropriate to collect the teachings teachings of the ancient doctors and precepts of the tradition in a volume, which was named the Mishnah (second law). Two comments (Ghemara) later completed this compilation and gave to Jewish doctrine a new form; one was the product of the school of Palestine; the other, composed in Babylonia, was closed ...from the sixth century. From that time until... Nowadays, this collection has become for all the nation the sacred book par excellence, superior even to the books of Moses. He was considered by 'all like the supreme code of religious law– The Talmud: religious, moral, political, and social. 'This is, quite literally, the mold of the Jewish conscience' orthodox.

One of the most famous Jewish doctors, Moses Maimonides, a twelfth-century rabbi, "whose "The authority is so great," said Drach, "in the "Modern synagogue" speaks of the Talmud in these terms: |

"Everything contained in Baby-'s Ghemara "Ione is obligatory for all of Israel. And one "obliges each city, each region, to con-

to train in the customs established by the doctors from the Ghemara, to follow their orders, to to conduct according to their institutions. And again: Those who violate the precepts of the scribes must be punished more severely than those who Violates the Law of Moses. The lawbreaker Moses may be absolved, but the violator The precepts of the rabbis must be punished by death... » |

These words are echoed by these other words from a Nineteenth-century rabbi, Mr. Lagard:

Aa

HAS

The immense compilation (of the Talmud) has spread rapidly among the Jews almost miraculous. She was accepted as soon as she... appearance as the true and sincere expression of traditional law. Many schools where the Talmud was the object of the most rigorous study pecuniary, suddenly arose in the East and in the West. Casuistical decisions were accepted by all communities, and this triple barrier, erected by the rabbis of Palestine and Babylonia around the Thora did not encounter a single reckless person who wanted to cross it... » «The Talmud, says the Uni-towards Israelite culture, it is not only the civil code and ecclesiastical of Judaism, but he is a

a work of great importance to the scholar.
2

"cannot deny that the authors of the Talmud have
"Well deserved by the Jews... The Talmud, during "two thousand years, has been and still is an object
"of veneration for the Israelites, of whom he is the "religious code."

Mr. Achille Laurent, one of the members of the _ "Oriental Society" the most knowledgeable about the que-Jewish traditions of Asia, testifies in the same meaning on the supreme authority enjoyed by the Tal- " mud, in our time, in the eyes of all Jews
In general, and of oriental people in particular:

"The law given by Moses to the Hebrew people"
is only superficially the law of today Jews. She disappeared in the comments, and "The Talmud, that is to say, the book that has the most "Of authority among this people, consists of the "Mishna, which is its text, and of the Gemara
"Who is the commentator? Their meeting forms _
"the complete body of traditional doctrine"

"and religion... That's where E are confined"
"all beliefs; and when one has the courage
"by browsing through this immense collection, one finds
"the ever-present causes of hatred of "peoples against the scattered remnant of Israel."
"This is the book that they study and comment on"
"all those among the Jews who claim to "scholarly title. . It is from this commentary (the

HAS

HAS

(Ghemara of Babylon) from which the
"Chimeras of the cabal, dangerous errors"
"magic, the invocation of good and evil-
"Where are the minds, a long pile of moral errors"
"and a theogony borrowed from Chaldea and "to Persia. The Gemara is, according to the Jews
"modern, the achievement of perfection."
"And that is precisely what his name means in "Hebrew; but, in reality, this commentary
"destroys the law through its ridiculous interpretations"
"or absurd, and by the principles of hatred that he
"contains for all men who do not "part of what he calls the people of God."
Is that clear? Let's now give a few samples from this strange book which, despite certain self-serving modern denials, remains the inspiration for all of Judaism.

The doctrine of the Talmud was briefly expounded sated, about ten years ago, in a brush-German church, quite rare, because the names-numerous editions and French translations, English and Russian lands are being monopolized by the Jews.
zealous as they appear. The author, the

Dr. Rohling agrees to pay 1,000 thalers to anyone who proves the falsity of a quote any. His work is in its essential part- tielle a texture of passages extracted from Talmud and Israeli books, magazines or newspapers- lists, and arranged in order of subject matter.

I'm leaving aside the dogmatic part, the fabric of absurd and impious dreams. The moral doctrine is more important for the question that we busy.

MORAL DOCTRINE.

1° On the next one (pp. 32-34):

"An Israelite is more pleasing to God than "Angels. To slap him is just as much
"than to give one to God. A gohi, that is-"
"To say that a non-Jew who strikes an Israelite is worthy "of death. The race of Christians is a race
"Livestock... They're not next, no" "more than the animal, and it is not permitted to
"to show them mercy..."

2° On the property and on the wife of another (pp. 34-45): | i

“You shall not steal from your neighbor,” he said.
"The Decalogue of Moses; but the gohi is not "our neighbor, and Moses did not write: You shall not
"You will steal nothing from the wicked. The world belongs to them."
“Jews: stealing from others than from Jews is not
"No injustice."

"It is permissible to deceive a gohi... God"
"will not forgive the Jew who returns to a gohi
"the lost good; for it strengthens the power"
"the impious..."

“The life of the gohi belongs to us, to what extent |
"All the more reason, then, to use his money!" Abarbenel famous rabbi, who enjoys the favor of Al-Phogus V, King of Portugal, and Ferdinand, King of Castile, and who was Minister of Finance in Spain around 1500, had said that the Jews believed they had the right to exercise usury at the expense foreigners, but they did not mean by There the Christians said: “They are not foreigners,
"He added, with regard to the Heavenly Father;"
but he justifies this protest before his fellow believers, saying that he did not wash done only "for the sake of peace", so that the Jews could live among Christians without being worried.
“It is written: Shall I not hate the one who…
Hate, Lord? The best of idolaters,
"Take away his life. He who pulls a man out of the ditch..." “gohi, save an idolater;. it is forbidden to
"To take pity on an idolater. He who sheds the
The blood of the wicked, offer a victim to God.
The precept, "Thou shalt not kill," means: Thou shalt not
You shall not kill a son of Israel.

'The precept of Moses against adultery,' 2.

m

R

HAS

HAS

"must be understood to mean the one who commits himself to "The prejudice of a Jew, and not of a goki: There is no
"No real marriage among foreigners, no"
"More so than in animals..."

Let's draw a veil over the depravities that are being displayed - cynically in this abominable book. The reader Christians want to be respected.

3° On the oath (pp. 45-48):

The Jewish newspapers have often complained from the fact that one breaks the oath sworn by the Jews. There's good reason never to trust them. They don't take a similar oath as when they are there constrained by our laws, but it does not entail they have no obligation, nor if they prewere towards an animal; besides, it is enough for them, and they believe they have the right to use restrictions mentality to strip the oath of all value. There are days of remission in the synagogues Zion, where the rabbis absolve from all sin and any oath, without any question of .restituition... |

I° On Christians (pp. 49-52):

Hatred against Jesus Christ and against everyone those who bear the name of Christian breathe at every page of the Talmud. Whatever he acknowledges to varying degrees in idolatry, he considers us . however, like true gohim, pagans, idolatres. "The first day of the week, the day "of the Nazarene, must be counted among the feasts" "idolatrous." The carpenter's son is called a Nazarene, the fool, the clean one, the apostate... When the Jew has the power, he will put the hereticsticks to death; ordinarily, he will look for a pretext, but he will also employ violence orgreen... | =

Frightened by these revelations, the Jews have have long sought to mitigate its effect, The Polish synod ordered, in 1681, that one now left certain pages blank which 'those that might offend Christians, those that renfueling insults against Jesus Christ, of the Blessed Virgin, the apostles, and others who designate Christians to hatred and persecution cution. These could not be passed on in the future passages that are transmitted by oral tradition. All the edtions of the last two centuries include a a large number of these blank pages and supnumerous pressures. These precautions cannot-The wind erases the truth. The teachings of

The Talmud became law for the Jewish people. They originated from these Pharisaical traditions struck down by the the word of Jesus Christ, stifling the true law of Moses and the prophets, they form the San- code glant of hatred, in which, even to this day,

The Jews came to draw inspiration from them. sinister, often resulting in terrorist attacks appalling.

We believe in the sincerity of the Jews of France, Belgium, and the Netherlands when they declare that they are far from admitting in practice such and such theories of the Talmud; we do not render Messrs. Péreire and de Rothschild, for example, responsible for the attentions-monstrous acts committed in Syria and Hungary; we are convinced that civilized Jews hate, although their gold has powerfully con- dedicated to turning off the light and stopping the course of justice. But only acts of murder and human sacrifices have occurred and are occurring still drank (have we already forgotten the assassin- Father Thomas's seminary in Damascus in 1840, and the disappearance of a fourteen-year-old girl Tizla-Esslar, in Hungary, in 1882), among the lower classes of Orthodox Judaism, and that they - occur there under the influence of fanaticism inspired by the doctrines of the Talmud, it is for we have a conviction supported by the documents the most certain in history.

This hatred of the Jew against the Christian, legitimate daughter- the time of Talmudic teaching, has translated through a variety of acts, which made Israel a an enemy race of Christian society, who have called upon him the just severity of kings and popes, who throughout history have created what nowadays we call an anti-se- movement mythical, and which often aroused Ja on the part of nations oppressed, exploited by the Jewish community, of terrible reprisals.

I know very well what they are shouting at us: they are telling us- The history of the past. The Jew is on the march, His morals change, he enters the high road Through progress, it transforms and becomes civilized.

Drach himself acknowledges that "the program "Talmudic schools have been updated to "at the expense of the Talmud"...that "the science of "The Talmud has declined considerably." The Jew, therefore he becomes more human, he allows himself to be influenced by society modern. Wouldn't it be more accurate to say that The Jew of progress has begun modern society, that he was imbued with his own ideas and that she is her very humble servant, held and confined by him from all sides, as if in a network?

Moreover, Talmudic Jews train in ten-ninth century, as in the past, the most large part and the indestructible core of the nation.

As for modernized Jews, the portion of Israel the smallest in number and the most active, they hide, beneath sweet appearances and under often courteous forms the anti- ideas Christians and anti-Catholic hatred. June 29 In 1869, a large Jewish synod was convened in Leipzig, Representatives of the Jewish nation, people from all over Europe gathered there under the chairmanship of Professor Lazarus, of Berlin, |

The debates were very lively between the different-rents fractions of Judaism.

Finally, the following proposal, presented by the Dr. Philipson, of Bonn, and recommended by the chief rabbi of Belgium, Astruc, was adopted unanimously approved by all members:

"The synod recognizes that development "and the realization of modern principles are "the surest guarantees of the present and of the future" "The origin of Judaism and its members. They are the "the most energetically vital conditions for expansive existence and the highest development- the nature of Judaism.

HAS

=

We are not naive enough to ignore what big words mean: principles modernes. Basically, it's a revolution, it's anti-Social Christianity, master of all. May those who are aware of contemporary history comparent 4869 and 1886! Can they deny that the

"Implementation of modern principles" does not soil increasingly carried out? Will they doubt that by This increasingly perfect achievement "the "Judaism and its members" have not obtained "sure guarantees" for the "present," and not are about to reach a more magnificent a future? » The current “existence” of the “Judaic-Isn't "me" supremely "expansive"? degree, and does he not walk towards "the highest "Development," universal domination? Who brought about "this realization of the principles" "modern" voted by the Israelite synod of 1869? The Jew, this progressive, humanitarian Jew, philanthropist, whose tolerance is praised, whose celebrate charity, not the sordid, mangy Jew, in rags, from Poland and the Principalities-Danubian, but the civilized Jew, gloved, dressed of fine cloth, high-ranking baron of finance, character mysterious and influential in the political world, supported the powerful means of action at his disposal, Por, the press, Freemasonry, etc. | Let's not kid ourselves, all these Jews modernized or Talmudic, for whom the prin-modern cipes have become like a second sacred code, unite and will always unite in a destructive joint action against the idea and the Christian societies, they will walk hand in hand

the hand to carry out their plan of conquest and domination. We would be fools if we we trusted their outward veneer of civilization and philanthropy, and if we let ourselves to take into account the individual qualities of certain Jews. Kind and gentle in their relations private matters, they are and always will be, with regard to of the Catholic society, as the Prince Metternich, who knew them well,

"First-rate revolutionaries."

Two words from two very modern, betrayed Jews
He senses all the appetites of the race. Stern dared well to say one day, right in the middle of the Rue Royale circle, without that no one stood up to protest: "In "Ten years, I don't know how a Christian
"will do it to live." And Baron Hirsch, from his high vantage point from its famous staircase, watching the stairs rise dukes, princes and marquises, he told his son, with a smile of triumphant contempt: "You "Look at all these people, in twenty years they
"They will be our sons-in-law or our caretakers."

THE INSTRUMENTS OF THE GONQUETE

CHAPTER TWO

Gold

The Jews faithfully noted this meaning.
the point of Ecclesiastes, which is the observation practice of a sadly all-too-real fact:
“Pecuniæ obediunt omnia: Everything obeys Par-
"gent." |

They are undoubtedly the kings of finance.
and through finance, they are truly "the kings of "The era."

"Venest city!" cried Jugurtha, crossing the bridge.
the threshold of Rome, that proud republic, whose senators and consuls accustomed to plunder of the world had so often lowered their soul before Vor which he had provided them; city mercenary! Why can't a merchant be found who is more...

BY

Rich enough to buy you! Today this merchant exists. – |

Master of Yor, the Jew is the master of everything.
Gold possesses the world, for what is the thing,
What is the man spared from the strong and austere?
influences of religion, which does not have its tariff of sale? and the Jew owns gold (1).

Let us not go back to the dawn of time;
Let's leave aside this prince of usury from the old days
At the time, this Jew of whom Michelet wrote: "In the Middle Ages-
'Age, he who knows where Por is, the true alchemist-"Miste, the real sorcerer, is the Jew, or the half-
"Jew, the Lombard; the Jew, the filthy man;
"the man who can touch neither food nor
"Women should not be burned; men should not be insulted"
"The one everyone spits on is him"
"that we must address! Filthy and prolific nation!"
"But they solved the problem of making the "Wealth. Freed by the bill of exchange, they
"They are now free! They are masters!"
"With each blow, there they are on the throne of the world! "

The Revolution had barely emancipated them

---

(1) The Jew buys everything. Elisée Reclus reports, in his Universal Geography, which Cromwell raised the question of sell all of Ireland to the Jews, in exchange for an annual annuity annual income of fifty million francs.

that they rush to the feeding frenzy. They play the prince-main role in this looting of the storage unit, if Still obscure, surrounded by so many mysteries. The crown diamonds fueled for a long time the trade of German Jews.

All the Jews of Paris were involved in the affair.
We find the Dacosta family in the debates,
Lyon Rouef, traveling merchant and innkeeper, street |
Beaubourg, as well as his wife Leiden, Israel, Aaron Hombergue, the Anglès father and son, that sell to the Jew Benedict Salmon a large quantity of diamonds. This Salmon had already pro-took advantage of the opportunity to buy one hundred and fifty one thousand francs worth of fine pearls.

Corrupt France and meddling with the director
The oire offered the Jews a rich prize.

“The Jews,” wrote Capefigue in his History
"large financial operations, once
"Paris, open to their speculations, came there from
"on all sides and took from all hands; they "began, at first timidly, with the small com-
"merchandise, the supply of horses and the small
"Usury, limited speculation on assignats: they "did not yet have a firm enough foothold on the "ground to dare the bank they left to "Genevans: they were content to buy the "old furniture from castles, relics of "churches, confiscated jewelry, to lend what-

"that Louis to the emigrants in exchange for good "values.

"In some departments, they had established on the farmers' land, like
"crows on their prey; in the high and low
In Alsace and Lorraine, they were becoming more common.
"very land ownership, by pre-emptions on "Mortgages and repurchase agreements. In Paris, they "flooded the neighborhoods around the Temple,
"They've become, in a way, their own ghetto. Let's call them
"let him walk freely, and, in a period
"In time, they would be the masters of the market"
"an industrialist and money."

The junior artillery second lieutenant, who had become Suddenly the head of an empire, he was struck by the peril that caused the country to run the relentless infiltration into the social organization of the Jewish quarter, an element of Decomposition and turmoil. A cry of pain.
part of Alsace, devoured by the usury of the Jews, provoked the famous decree of March 17, 1808 which regulated the situation with justifiable severity and the more or less ambiguous operations of son of Israel. From then on, "the all-powerful emperor
"had against him this mysterious force of the "finance that one cannot resist, even
"when one is Napoleon I," as Léon Say said,

R

R

Rothschild's man, a journalist declared- "Only in the Chamber (1)."

"The future banker of the Holy Alliance, Rothschild showed, when the time for the denouement- The approach was made, an activity without equal; the The very magnitude of the events seems to have elevated above itself, this nature of Jews are generally not inclined towards acts of heRoism.

"When evening fell on Waterloo, when the emperor had tried in vain to enter the last square, Rothschild, who was watching in BruXelles was immediately informed of the defeat by the Jews who followed the army to buy to tend to the wounded and strip the corpses. If He arrived first, in England, he won twenty million; he ran to Ostend, but a A terrible storm seemed to make the crossing Impossible. Perplexed for a moment by these waves crashing in furiously, the banker He nevertheless gave the order to leave. "Don't "Not afraid," he could have said to the captain, "you're wearing More than the ancient boat, you carry misfortune. of Caesar, and the Rothschild fortune (2).»

---

(4) La Francejuive, vol. 1, p. 327.
(2) Ibid., p. 328.

R

R

R

R

R

HAS

"

“Bonaparte was dead,” wrote Michelet; The Iron Age was born, the Silver Age by the loans taken out for the war in full peace and for all things. An intelligent Jewligent, Olinde Rodrigues, on behalf of Saint-Simon wrote the Gospel of this new religion. gion.

"The Jews, who until then had been in reperepublic, constituted themselves as a dual monarchy. German Jews, and later those from the South of France, created two reservoirs into which the capital. While the former made the funds for the armies of the Holy Alliance, the latter gave themselves to the second Bonaleave.

"Michelet seems to indicate an antagonism" or at least a rivalry. In reality, the peace had been signed on the ruins of the France between the Jews of the two cities; always Okay, despite the apparent fluctuations of the Stock Exchange, they were going to monopolize the money of the universe. Peoples and kings were now nothing more than puppets whose owners were the Jews son. The nations had fought until then for the fatherland, glory, the flag; they do not will now fight more than to enrich Israel, with the permission of Israel, and for the Israel's only satisfaction (1).

With the rise of the Rothschilds, this dynasty-tie exit from Frankfurt's Judengasse where she was nibbling away ducats, and who now of his safe, like a citadel, was going to govern

To conquer the world, a new era began for Judaism.
of prosperity and glory. After the good opera-
The Waterloo settlement, the liquidation account, which resulted in the formidable movement of twenty years of battles, singularly inflated the Rothschild stock exchange. "Centralizing between its

R RA ARA

hands all the particular claims of Alle-From Magne and England, Rothschild was putting in at the same time funds are available to French government; it provided the money that he demanded, and demanded the money he provided nissait... Under the pressure of this Schylock helpful, France had to pay until the very end.
denier sou the most impromptu claims Babies, the most fantastic repairs, the most fanciful debts. All of this armies of one million five hundred thousand men could have caused real damage or imaginary in their walk through

(1) Jewish France, vol. 1, p. 329.

"Europe was returning to the Restoration, but
"swollen by the filth of the hands of the subal- Jews"
"dull, by which these claims had "passed before reaching the hands already more
"clean, but still just as greedy, of Roths“child (4).”

Thanks to these dealings, James de Rothschild, who had already settled on rue de Provence, was no longer the little companion of yesteryear. Now a baron Austrian by the grace of Mr. von Metternich, he it was beginning to be a kind of character.
The Jews from across the Rhine, who were beginning to gaining a foothold in Paris, they got used to looking at the Rothschild house as the parent company of French Judaism. "With the spirit of solidarity"

"which animates the race, the Rothschilds helped the "new arrivals, provided them with
"funds to engage in petty lending, at the same time"
"At that time they received valuable information from them—
"They organized this police force which is "unparalleled worldwide (2)."

With the government of Louis-Philippe
The reign of the Jew expands and strengthens. In reality, Rothschild was the prime minister of the monarchy.
July shit, and he kept this immutably

(1) Jewish France, vol. I, p. 334.
(2) Ibid, p. 337.

placed under changing board presidents.
"As Toussenel says, there was no longer any
"the monarchy in France and the Jews held it"
"Enslaved." A wave of patriotic outrage arose the heart of a man, who is neither a Jesuit nor even a Christian, from the Fourierist Toussenel, and inspired him to create an imperishable masterpiece: The Jewish kings of that era. Read this admirable page.
where the generous writer places before your eyes vivid and active Jewish exploitation. "The king can
"to appoint properly to the positions of officer and judge,
"to jobs whose holders enjoy a
"salary of twelve hundred to three thousand francs;
"but all high-level or lucrative jobs of “France, and even those in the judiciary, are at the
"The appointment of Jews. It is the Jew who distributes"
"the general recipes to his pious servants,
"He dismisses the receivers general who..."
"generous. The Jew, exclusive possessor of the administration" Administration of transport throughout the kingdom will soon have, on its own, more employees than the State.

"An enormous influence, a power already A formidable [result] emanates from the Jews and is felt in far away. The king himself, without their help, would not Don't make treaties. I defy the king and the "Chambers to make a treaty of alliance doua-

HAS

RR

R

34

AAA

"

Pe

And

THE JEWISH HOUSE.

nière, a treaty of cotton, hemp, iron, which the Jews don't want! Anzin doesn't have desired from the union of Belgium and France,
And that meeting did not take place...

"Who holds the monopoly in France and that Transport, the two arms of commerce?
The Jew. — Who has the monopoly on gold and Mercury? — The Jew. — Who has the monopoly on announcements? — The Saint-Simonian, valet of the Jew... If Pair could seize and sell himself, there would be a Jew to seize it and buy it Why, in the matter of sugars, having crushed our maritime trade and our colonies? Because in the question of sugars, all national interests are in direct opposition to the interests of: a side-the refiners' laughter, etc., etc., — which are attached to the high bank, and that the Chambers and the Power could only concern itself with one thing: to truly deserve the financial powers
cières (4). » |

In this vengeful book, one must read the story of strange market obtained for the construction of the operation of the Northern Railway by Rothschild. Out of one hundred and sixty million to spend

(

1) The Jews, kings of the time, passim.

ser, the State spent a hundred and took from its land purchase costs, terrace workment, etc. Mr. Rothschild only had to ask the rails and to acquire the necessary equipment; self- expenditure Tenty million. In return for these sixty million, he had the enjoyment for forty years of the Northern Railway, whose net profits, which have since risen to such high rates, | were then evaluated by the individuals concerned themselves. the same, at fifteen million per year. The indignation-public information made the conclusion impossible of the treaty as it stands. Meanwhile, we liknows in the Journal des Débats, this sentence worthy of passing into the most distant posterity: “Mr. de Rothschild requests permission to "To ruin."

Thus, stone by stone, the edifice of this financial feudalism, of which Toussenel's hand has such a terrible picture was drawn: |

"Industrial, or financial, or feudalism
"commercial, is based neither on honor nor on "honors, like the Republic and the "Montesquieu's Monarchy. It is based on the "trade monopoly, oppressor and anarchist-
"Greed. His defining characteristic is greed, greed."
"insatiable, mother of cunning, of evil" “Faith and conditions. All its institutions

"They bear the mark of hoarding, of men-
"Dream and iniquity."

"If monarchical despotism only overthrows the "superb and respectful of the humble, there is none of them"
"not so with the despotism of the safe.

"This one invaded the poor man's cottage"
"like the palace of princes; every food con-
"comes to its voraciousness. Like subtle mercury
"which insinuates itself through its weight and fluidity to
"through every pore of the matrix to embed itself"
"to adorn the smallest particles of the metal"
"precious that it contains; like the hideous
"tapeworm, whose parasitic segments follow in "their convolutions all the viscera of the body
"human, thus the mercantile vampire makes run its suckers to the extreme ramifications of the social organization to pump all of it
"substance and extract all its juices."
"The tone, under the regime of silver feudalism,
It is selfishness that truly seeks to dispel itself.
mule under the banner of hypo- philanthropy
"crite. i |
"His motto is: Every man for himself."
"The words 'homeland,' 'religion,' 'faith' have It makes no sense to these men who have a shield in the place of the heart.
"Merchants do not have a homeland."

=

R

R

R

HAS

“Ubi aurum, ibi patria. Industrial feudalism"trielle is personified in the cosmopo- Jew
"lite."
The lightning strike of 1848 frightened the first baron of the Jewish quarter. The Jew Goudchaux infiltrated surreptitiously as finance minister in:

the provisional government, and he saved the bank brothers and friends. Rothschild resumed the course of business; he crossed the empire honored, respected, despite his well-known sympathies being ted to the fallen house of Orléans, and under the Third Republic, this more than royal family ostensibly possesses three billion just For the French bank, three billion that do not do not remain idle and are skillfully thrown into the balances carry everything to the Stock Exchange, in the world, in the press, in politics. These three billion, how did they come to the Roths-children who, it is said, in 1812, were no more than one
A million? They haven't invented anything, they haven't They discovered no mines, they cleared no land land. They speculated. Ah! the beautiful word, that isto say they took those three billion from the substance of nations by means of a mechanism ingeniously and admirably organized for drainage and to siphon off the money. In truth, we had raihis way of saying it: "The Hebrew hands have I do not

"I know what mysterious virtue attracts Por,
"Like a magnet attracts iron." = Alongside this largely exquisite portrait, he
To complete the gallery, one would need to paint the Pereire, the Mirès, the Camondo, the Fould, the Bischoffsheim, the Dreyfus, the Hirsch and so many | others. We should mention the 'exploits of the
| a cosmopolitan Jewish and Judaized bank; it would be necessary to recount their epic ventures, imbued with Honduras, the Tunisian Land Credit, the tripo-financial arrangements attached to the Tonkin expedition, especially the Jewish orgy which is in full swing with ka Gambetta's dictatorship. But we must limit ourselves. He However, it is impossible for us not to say one word of this singular affair of the General Credit Frenchman who caused quite a stir. It is said that he There is a slight loss for naive subscribers fifty million in this boss-born and ruled by a high and mighty lord d'Erlanger, a Jew disguised as a Protestant. After much discounts, after multiple incidents of
In the proceedings, the case finally came before the Seine correctional police court.

Let us reproduce verbatim a few sentences from Substitute prosecutor Mr. Chérot's closing argument:
"In addition to violations of the law on "The companies, in addition to violations of —"

THE JEWISH COUNTY. 39

Article 419, is that really all we can do?
To blame Messrs. Erlanger and Berthier brothers?
Fines, if they exist, are sufficient-they explained the situation of Crédit Général-French politics and its complete ruin? We have, you It is said that fictitious dividends were distributed. So be it.
but the capital of the French General Credit should only be diminished by which-millions distributed in excess, and the Credit
The French general is ruined. There has been a great deal of agitation, specifically... focused on the shares and made them rise or supported fraudulently the courses. Fine, but these courses, which would have been fraudulently raised up to seven, eight, nine hundred francs, should,
Now that the speculation has ceased, to find the emission rate, and the actions of the French General Credit currently worth Sixty francs. Dividend distributions fictitious, stock speculations, if they exist, therefore they are not the cause or of.
less the sole cause of the Credit's ruin
French general. What is this cause?
The French General Credit Bank succumbed, because that, as a result of fraudulent competition, Messrs. d'Erlanger and Berthier brothers succeeded to seize it, they saturated it, following the energetic expert's expression, of inflated values

40 THE JEWISH COUNTY.

"on a formidable scale, they have thus
"completely discredited, and by discrediting him
"They ruined him in the process."
These are the accusations that are being leveled against them.
Lips of a substitute for the republic! Such These are the customs and practices that this indictment highlights! This is the source to which it forms, feeds, and grows disproportionately this capitalist wealth, which assures the Jewish spirit, to the financial rapacity of modern speculators domination over labor. The judges have con-damned the Berthier brothers at six months, one year of prison and a fine of three thousand francs; they have no doubt they were very happy that their conscience allowed them not to inflict a similar blow.

Sadness to Mr. d'Erlanger, although one of their considering that his conduct is guilty and harmful to the company's affairs. And many-
Are we not entitled to say with Toussenel: "Workers who exhaust themselves and
"three-quarters of them die in hardship"
"the surface area of the globe, working to enrich"
"a few million lazy nabobs from Buda,
"From Amsterdam and London?" And - again!
"The Jew has struck all states with a new "mortgage, and a mortgage that these States
"will never repay with their income."

HAS

THE JEWISH COUNTY. Ai

Europe is subservient to the domination of Is-Raël... Jerusalem imposed tribute on all the States; the clearest product of the work of all workers pass through the stock exchange

Jews under the name of national debt interest-nale (1).

(1) This truly epic affair has just reached its conclusion-lying before the Correctional Appeals Chamber of the Court from Paris. The following excerpt from the judgment deserves to be highlighted:

“u

"Regarding fraud:"

"Considering that if the thorough examination of the facts of the the cause reveals speculative habits among the defendants

"unscrupulous action, and particularly in one of them"

a profit-driven mind skilled at arranging all things in view of his own self-interest, by leaving the burden on others responsibility for the companies he actually designed and directed, it is constant that the offense of fraud cannot to exist only on the condition that funds have been transferred obtained through specific maneuvers; that it follows
From the foregoing, the facts invoked by the parties civil, or are not well established, or do not pre-do not perceive the nature of criminal maneuvers; that Therefore, the offense cannot be established.

This was followed by the outright acquittal of all the defendants, and the shareholders' liability for costs and expenses.

Humble mortals, be silent and understand if you can.

vez l...

Unhappy shareholders, pay up, and learn what it's all about.

It is costly to attack Lord Erlangen (also known as Erlanger).

CHAPTER THREE

The Press

The Bible says somewhere: Terribilis est in civilate sua homo linguosus: the talkative man is a plague on his country. Who has suffered more that France, the disastrous influences of this A plague spread by the tongue! The virus is still there.
perhaps more active, it produces disorganizing effects a more complete social organization when it is inoculated by the press, and by this periodical press-a discipline that we call journalism.

Certainly, journalism, this modern power which on the one hand shapes public opinion and on the other hand in is the resounding echo, repeated a thousand times overcut, account of valiant and honorable representatives sentient beings who struggle, I dare say, with heroism, amidst the widespread indifference of good, for justice and for truth. But this With that reservation, it must be admitted that the press, and journalism in particular, is the majority of time a venal power in the pay of gold.

And Por, as we have seen, is the Jew who possesses. One would have to be quite uninformed about things of the day to ignore that a very large many of these writers who play the brave ones against God, against the Church, against the priest, are mere pen-wielding lackeys, obeying the a sign of the Jew. Some would still have one debris of conscience, a remnant of Christian blood who would protest, but they are committed, they are regimented; they have the freedom to obey or to
To die of hunger. It is a great art, that of to manufacture public opinion, and the Jew has become a master at it.
in this art. Does he want to launch or denounce a case or a character, does he have any interest in turn-to ner the spirits here or there, like a chief of or-
This clever chester only has to make a gesture, and immediately the press officers give the rating desired.

"The owner, the master of this machine"
"to stir up public opinion, we will say with a writer-
"Vain and distinguished, latent speculator, who the most "often in most EU states"

rope is of Jewish descent or extends a hand to favors. of the Jew, never sometimes nor fa-
He didn't brick or write a single sentence. But one One of his merits is having a steady hand in the choice of his subordinates, of these entrepreneurs literary figures, themselves adept at providing themselves with these artists in style, whose number is immense already, it is growing every day, thanks to impolite-a cruel and barbaric kind of education that proa relentless bulwark against the needy classes.
These mercenaries are trained in the art of to turn a sentence, and inevitably foreigners or mostly hostile to any social doctrine,
You see them doing everything according to a principle of fixity.

of their talent a profession that could not admit of unemployment, and to fight ruthlessly over a hand that deigns to offer them a wage.

"Such are the cases in much of Europe,
high- and low-paid people who abound

They are on the places where a certain supply is obtained press; eager artisans that we see countless crowds flocked to offer their services vices, and, without batting an eye, submit to orders from the workshop foreman who hires them, the cheerful destroyers of the social order of Christian countries hold on. Now these pen-wielding lackeys, and we wish-let's avoid a stronger term than the one used

"

"

"

"

Lamartine, are mostly just the executors of the Jew's works, exact to pay what was promised, and endowed with rare skill to hide the hand that draws up the plans and settles the accounts the book.

“We all know that each periodic sheet-says, that each newspaper is a property;
that similar to any object, to any building capable
To attract a buyer, he changes owners.
whenever death or propriety demanding. We know that it then sells to auctions, and that the buyer is free to accept them.
to manage the tenant, that is to say the spirit which Pha-

bite; to house and install one's own: Grace Therefore, due to the abundance of his gold, the Jew is, sometimes openly and sometimes under a name borrowed, buyer of this mobile property who leans and pours constantly on his land:
"Ah, rain,"

One couldn't say it better. Except for the leaves clearly and boldly Catholic, how many there are has he, even in conservative opinion, who does not _ or not submitted, even if only in the bulletin financial, to a more or less manifested degree of influence

` (1) Gougenot des Mousseaux, The Jew, Judaism and the Judaization of Christian peoples, % edition, pp. 360-361.

of the Jewish community? And in the opposing camp, is it all or almost all newspapers, since the serious Journal of Debates, where Léon Say, the man-
the Rothschild family, up to the Nation of Israel-Dreyfus's bed; since the soporific Republic French, where Reinach the Jew delivers his oracles, even Le Figaro, that disgrace of the French press where, alongside Ph. de Grandlieu, a spiritual son From Israel, Millaud entertains the crowd; since the Gaulois, organ of Arthur Meyer of which we know fine manners and skillful fencing, up to the dreadful Lantern of another Mayer, up to the filthy pornographic sheets that insult and those that defile, do not exist for the greatest glory and for the greater benefit of Israel, pro:
pageant ses affaires et ses haines, exalting his great deeds and those of his friends, killing by the ridicule, through outrage, through silence, whoever has It's quite audacious to want to block the passage to the Jewish power? A few selected examples
A thousand will suffice. Everyone knows that the Eugène Mayer, a Jew, is the lord and master of the Lantern, but also what we don't know, What we don't know enough about is this thing shameful: Mayer and his Lantern, gou-government of the first order; it is terror
What this Jewish journalist inspires is vile obedience.

the wisdom of those who claim to govern the France, under this man's orders. It was enough to Mayer to treat the most honest magistrate of forger and thief so that the unfortunate man was immediately executed by Martin Feuillée, a Keeper of the Seals, who has nothing in common with Mathieu Molé. In December 1885,
Mr. Denormandie criticized this servility the Minister of Justice who had no answer to give.
"For the court of Angers," said Mr. Denorman-“The Lantern of August 21st reported a magistrate"trat of the name of Mary as having to be rev-
Yes. And it was a few days later.
“On August 29, the same newspaper contained the Words: "Come on, let's quickly sweep the floor." The “On October 6, the three magistrates in question were ` « swept away.
"For Mont-de-Marsan, it's lc
the Lantern which denounces the president of this tri"bunal, Mr. Tourné, as a forger and unworthy
"to preside for a longer period." “Naturally, his dismissal did not happen to wait for.
"But that's not enough for the newspaper which, in a new article, declared that all the judges of this court was full of forgers, and that it was necessary to get them down from seats they weren't

=

R

HAS

HAS

AR

R

HAS

"not worthy. He published their names with "comments of extreme violence, and, little
"Days later, they were dismissed."
The same events are occurring at the Pau court, for the court of Vannes and for that of Dax.

"Come now," insisted the newspaper I quoted,
"Come now, Mr. Keeper of the Seals, we must
"to come to Clermont and sweep things away"

a that you gave to Mont-de-Marsan and to `

"Pau."

Who pursued the case of The expulsion of the princes? The Jew Mayer of the Lantern. The Jew Dreyfus became its mouthpiece. to the Chamber, and the Jew Levaillant, with the Jew - Hendlé, prefect of Seine-Inférieure, for auxi-Liaire, carried the expulsion decree to Eu.

Cardinal Guibert died around the venerated by all. But the Lantern watches over, the Jewry, whose hatreds it serves, could not par-to give the holy old man indomitable energy with whom, until the very last hour; he has defended the rights of Christian conscience; Mayer forbids the government, still hesitant, - to return to the remains of the glorious pontiff public funeral honors, and the government, in defiance of all conventions and even most official regulations have been obeyed.

Do you want another example, less well-known, but which is certainly something that makes men think seriousness on the all-powerful influence of the press and of Jewish speech?

During the session of the Chamber of Deputies of Saturday, July 10, 1886, the protective right over the -cereals were going to be raised from three to five francs per This right, although well

insufficient, was demanded by the agricultural unions coles to alleviate the intolerable suffering of our countryside.

Mr. Develle, the Minister of Agriculture, came, at the last minute, request the project be postponed of the bill to the committee. The House adjourned
In two days, it's safe to say that the law wouldn't be...
Not examined.

If Pon refers to what happened before-Laughably, we will see that already on several occasions
The hopes of the protectionists were dashed.
at the moment when everything could have led them to believe that they were nearing their goal.

There is a fact here that seems inexplicable, namely of a people knowingly condemning themselves and willingly, into misery. In the presence of elections for the general councils, the government-the movement would have, it seems, been of the greatest interest to let the proposed surcharge pass. But it is necessary

THE JEWISH COUNTY. öl

that above all he submit to the watchword of the Jewish community, which commands through the voice of the mason-nonsense.

This watchword, with regard to the question agricultural, we find it clearly formulated in a speech delivered by a chief rabbi, and of which the Contemporain of July 1, 1881 gave An important excerpt: |

"Under the pretext of helping the classes
"Working women, we must make the big ones bear the burden"
"Landowners bear the full burden of taxes,"
"and when the property has passed into our
"hands, all the work of the day laborers and proletarians" “Christian silence will become for us the source
"huge profits."

“Poverty is slavery,” said a poet,
"The proletariat is the most humble servant of the "speculation, but oppression and influence"

"are the most humble servants of the spirit"
"that which inspires and stimulates cunning: and who could “to deny the children of Israel the spirit, the pr-

"...sensitivity and perspicacity?"

And now the poor, witty people who they take this for old wives' tales
If they are told stories about Judaism, they will understand.
They? Perhaps... when, stripped and ruined, they will have become the serfs of the Jew.

HAS

CHAPTER FOUR

Social influence

Here we are touching on a raw wound in society.
French.

The courageous and, alas, all too true chapter Drumont's work on Jewish Paris and French society caused even a crowd of honor-clever people who like to live in illusions and who
They are naive enough to believe that the scandal does not exist.
No, because he walks triumphantly, head held high, without anyone telling him to his face that he is the scandal. That there is in this chapter of France Jewish, an overly violent confrontation with a cer-a Judaizing and Judaized aristocracy, of the per-excessively loud sounds that led to the incidents regrettable events that we know of; that Drumont, carried away k.

because legitimate anger has sometimes struck too hard and with an overly generous hand, it may be, and I I do not intend to dispute it; but the facts – except a few inaccurate details – are of a truth poignant; they show with such obviousness brighter than midday, the gradual invasion of the Jewish community, no longer solely in finance, in business, in the press, but in the Parisian world, how unfair it would be, I can't wait to...
to say, to confuse with French society, which remained French and Christian still in such a great number of its representatives. We can.

to say without boasting, but with a legitimate _pride, our middle-class wealth, of the nobility and the bourgeoisie, especially in proVince, prevail in true honesty, in lofty sentiments, of moral delicacy, on the corresponding classes from other EU countries rope. There is a valuable reserve there, and what – one can derive patriotism and devotion from it religious, continuous and truly heroic sacrifices that, we saw it in the bad days, we would see again. This exception being made, and very largely, it must be admitted that too often laristocracy in the spotlight, real or fake, which shines at firsts, at the circus on rue Molier, at the dances of animals, on the boulevard and in the columns from certain newspapers, supporting with equal ardor for the throne, the altar, and free loves, and that the wealthy bourgeoisie who seek to copy his manners, have displayed the most detestable examples, and thus gave a new and more vivid element to revolutionary passions that rumble in the soul crowds. For whom, in this democratic century, still believes in hierarchy, and has retained a sense of Respect, it is sad, deeply sad, to see the descendants of the great families who made France cluttering the salons of Jewish nabobs, to make a trophy of an invitation to their balls or to their hunts, to gratefully receive the gifts from these sons or grandsons of merchants of opera glasses and coin clippers have the insolence to throw into the wedding basket of young nobles Christian girls, and sometimes mingling their blood, heroic blood that flowed across twenty fields of battle, in the blood of the cursed, usurious race, plunderer, hateful of the Christian name. Lespères have they reaped honor with open hands? So that the threads can use it as bedding? Did old knights bear their resplendent names?

THE JEWISH HOUSE. 55

proclaiming glory at the point of the sword so that degenerate nephews humiliate them in Pavi-Smoothing the Jew's company? If you want to do something in your country, start with

be someone, and don't pretend to be someone respected authorities if you do not want accept the high responsibilities that you impose history and inflexible duties passed down through tradition. It is, in truth, an irony.
too strong, to want to take a place in the class that we call ruling, when we no longer knows what to lead, in the society of sons from Israel, a ball petticoat or a mail coach to Racecourses. The aristocracy lost, I have not to say here why, his social situation, his civil service and the privileges that came with it the sign and outward recognition; but with intelligence, along with serious work, with sustained and well-directed efforts, guided by meaning of tradition combined with an intuition for the future, she can regain an important place in the gold Organization of the new times.

I would even add, even if I were to be called a reactionarytionary, that this is necessary for the honor social order. But what do you want the country to do?
facing a mixed and hybrid caste that only has A love of pleasure and money, and who for to have fun or to make some kind of profit tends the hand to the Jewish community, becomes its humble servant and puts what little influence he still has at his disposal And prestige? A race of useless parasites, who doesn't want to understand the signs of the times

the warnings from above, and that one day#well-Perhaps too soon, Providence, tired of waiting,
will deliver to the winds of popular anger!

Let the Jewish community make the rules behind the scenes.
the theaters, that she be queen in the world of ham actors and clowns, fine: but Please, let her not cross the threshold of the Crusades Hall; that it even be consigned at the door of the anteroom. I don't want to app-to dwell on this painful subject; but let us not get bogged down in it Don't be fooled, this invasion of the world and of society, through its Jewish community, constitutes for it a of his most real triumphs and one of his

the most powerful instruments of action.

ee Oe eee like me ©

CHAPTER FIVE

Politics and the Universal Israelite Alliance

A statesman who played an exceptional role-
Mr. Disarié, |
: Jewish by birth, later converted to Protestantism-Anglicanism, perhaps a Catholic death, writing said in 1844: "The Jews!
"The Jews! Will you ever see them?"
"to pronounce an intellectual movement in Europe-
"Of some importance without the Jews
"They feature prominently?... Gette diplo-
"Russian matter, so full of mysteries and before
"which pales all of Western Europe,
"Who organizes and directs it? Jews!... The power-
"health revolution that is being prepared and brewing in "Germany, where, in fact, it will soon be a "second Reform, more considerable than the first-

"Mière; this revolution of which a hint of daylight"
"barely allows, in the eyes of Great Britain"
"Tragedy to penetrate the mysteries, well! under
"Under what auspices does she take the fullness of her Developments? Under the auspices of the Jew...
"This world is governed by entirely different people"sonations that those who do not see
"Not what happens behind the scenes."

The Prime Minister of the Queen of England lived long enough to witness the full political flourishing of this Jewish community, of which He was one of the most brilliant offspring. He is not No century, no doubt, has passed that has not seen Jews, despite the instinctive repulsion they were the goal, to distinguish oneself in various careers where human intelligence shines. "But," he said with "Mr. Gougenot des Mousseaux, of our "days we would give up trying to count, in the different-

"Rent states of Europe and the world, those of "sons of Jacob who burden and roam with
"distinguishing between liberal and scientific careers"
"fiques; Those who do not sit on the "fleurs-de-lis, — they never had this honor-
"neur, — but on the high seats of our
"—magistracy; those who stand out and distinguish themselves"
"by their skill in administrative positions;

"those who, thanks to the voter's vote, fran-cross the threshold of our rooms and become "ent, — O marvel! — the legislators of "Christian nations; those that are remarkable" talents elevate to the rank of members of the great advice from statesmen, ministers, or,
"Let's call a spade a spade, the most powerful directors" kingdoms or the most powerful sovereigns of "The earth (4)."

But let's restrict ourselves to France. Since 1870
In particular, she is, politically as financially, in the hands of the Jewish community; Jews like Raynal, like Lockroy, have seated around the table of the Council of Ministers;
This had already happened. What is characteristic, This is the shining sign of the conquest of our country by the Jewry, it is the dictatorship of Leon Gambetta, the grandson of a Württemberg Jew,
A. Gamberlé; this is the hidden, more active reign, perhaps more effective, from the Jew Crémieux, by The Universal Israelite Alliance. With Gambetta,
"the new layer" composed of many Jews with Freemason support, escalation power. {Look at the dictator's entourage.
"It's by far the most heterogeneous assemblage we've ever seen."

has

R

HAS

(1) Gougenot des Mousseaux, op. cit., p. 383.
5

fR

R

HAS

HAS

=

=

HAS

has

~~

HAS

HAS

HAS

R

one could imagine, a bouquet of Jews, a veritable selam of jousters from all countries and of All colors. All the Jews of the world, old enough to travel, were there, they had clustered at the Palais Bourbon like the moeggs in the center of a coffee cup. A few- Some came from Spain and were born in Hamtown, others came from Austria and were born in France. There was Porges, Reinach, Lévy, Crémieux, Raynal, Strauss; there were Dreyfus, who was born in Germany Stephen, relative of the Stephens of Austria: Thomhis, whose family was English; Veil-Picard

'who was only arriving from Besançon. All of this he fiddled, speculated, speculated, denounced, flattered; all of this shared the common motto of the word of Narcissus and Pallas: Hoc agamus ne quis quidquam habeat (1). »

It is within this small, hateful group and eagerly awaiting the loan proposals, sectarian persecution and senseless war. Hence the watchword was going out which, circulating from mouth to mouth His mouth would go everywhere to excite enthusiasm. and give the signal for applause to gestures and words of the master: "This corner of em-

4, Jewish France, II, pp. 545-546.

has

LA SUIVERIE. 63

worst Jew, suddenly appearing in the middle France will be the wonder of the future that will not will see nothing so extraordinary again for a good while. for a long time (4). » |

Finally, the bon vivant tribune, this "madman," where he

There was Vhistrion and the gypsy, and who, oh shame! had seen at his feet the France of Charlemagne, of Saint Louis and Louis XIV, fell miserybly and mysteriously struck. "The orgy

He died in a final act of shame. This contempt- "Seur de tous," Drumont aptly put it, "ende mes-" prized by all. He had emerged in an end of an empire that already resembled a republic, with abjection, sacrileges and persecutions tions less; he disappeared in an end of republic” which looked a lot like a empire, with bankruptcy thrown in for good measure. He was he himself drew a caricature of an emperor, a Jewish emperor, we said in comthreatening; he would have planned, if indeed in outside the dream of a senseless war he had poutstivi some well-arranged design, of insto establish a Jewish empire within the framework of the old French society and to be crowned at Grand Orient of Cadet Street in some

(1) Jewish France, 1. 1, p. 547.

HAS

AR

R

R

R

HAS

R

HAS

R

burlesque ceremony. The apron of the freemason would have taken the place of the cloak strewn with abeilles, and the trowel would have replaced the scepter and the hand of justice (4).....

“Gambetta, with his inexhaustible eloquence and his Mangin's mannerisms, was hardly more than a personswimming, all demonstrative, tasked with putting on a parade at the door and showing off cotton biceps in beating the bass drum... Crémieux occupies a unique position... He is a true impresario of contemporary comedy... Sovereign Grand Master of the Scottish Rite, President of Universal Israelite Alliance, important leader Crémieux embodies French democracy the Masonic revolution in what it had of more comprehensive. He contributed more than anyone else. on the other hand, to confiscate the French Revolution at profit from the Jewish community, to give to a movement which had been mixed with a part of idealism, of aspirationgenerous tions, dreams of an organization better, a strictly Jewish character; it prepared and he announced loudly, in the lastThe last years of his life, the messianic reign, the long-awaited time when all the nations will be subject to Israel, where all

(1) Jewish France, vol. 1, p. 573.

"Men will work for the representatives" “So many of the race blessed by Jehovah (1).”

Crémieux has attached his name to two works policies of vital importance and which make of him the most eminent personification of the Jewish statesman working in the interest of the Jewish community; I want to talk about the naturalization of Jews in Algeria and the founding of the Alhance universal Israelite.

What a Jew is in Algeria, the contempt that this abject race, which lives only off shameful trafficking, inspires the Arab, son of a noble and proud race, Nothing we see here could possibly...

to give an idea. Usury practiced by Jews © established in Algeria has reached truly significant proportions incredibly. In a Republican newspaper, and certainly not very hostile to Jews, France,
Mr. Hugonnet wrote, on July 3, 1884, on the occasion of the Semitic disturbances in Algiers:
"The wear and tear is truly appalling." Here's why.
An example: "The Turcos and the Spahis, on the eve
"to receive their pay, they borrow one franc
"to return two of them the next day, that is to say
"3,650 francs per 100." A writer who is not very well-respect for clericalism, Mr. de Maupassant, in

(1) Jewish France, t. If, p. 3-5.

Au Soleil has traced some interesting protected areas.
Crémieux, the following portrait full of color and movement: "In Bou-Saada, we see them ac-"rotting in filthy dens, bloated with "fat, sordid, and lying in wait for the Arab like
"The spider is watching the fly. They call it,
"try to lend him a hundred sous against a note"
"that he will sign. The man senses the danger, hesitates,
"doesn't want to; but the desire to drink and other things
"Desires still torment him: a hundred sous repre-"
"They feel so much pleasure for him! He gives in"
"Finally, take the silver coin and sign the paper"
"greasy. After six months, he will have to "40 francs, 20 francs after one year, 400 francs"
"After three years. Then the Jew makes them sell"
"his land, if he has any, or, if not, his camel,
"his horse, his donkey, everything he owns"
"Finally. |

"The chiefs, caids, aghas, or bach'agas fall
"also in the claws of these birds of prey who "are the scourge, the bleeding wound of our colony,
"the great obstacle to civilization and well-being"
"From Arabic. When a French column goes
"to raid some rebellious tribe, a swarm of Jews"
she follows, buying the loot at rock-bottom prices and reselling it to Arabs as soon as the army corps moved away.
If Pon seizes, for example, six thousand sheep

R

R

R

AARR

AAAARA RAR A

fR

In a given region, what should be done with these animals? To lead to the cities? They would die on the way. because how to feed them, give them water during-within the two or three hundred kilometers of land naked that we will have to cross?

"And then, it would be necessary, to bring and keep such a convoy, twice as many troops as The column doesn't count. So, kill them? What? massacre and what a loss! And then the Jews are there are those asking to buy, at 2 francs each. Sheep worth 20. Finally, the Treasure will always earn 12,000 francs: we give them gives way. Eight days later, the first proceedings The landowners have resumed, at 3 francs per head, their Sheep. French revenge costs nothing. dear. a

"The Jew is master of all southern Algeria."

Indeed, there is hardly an Arab who waits for a debt, because the Arab does not like to repay, he prefers renewing one's ticket for one hundred or two hundred cents One hundred. He always thinks he's saved when he wins.

time. A special law would be needed for to change this deplorable situation. The Jew,

Moreover, throughout the South, it is hardly practiced that usury by all means, however unfair

as much as possible.

And here are the beautiful characters that Crémieux'

in the midst of the war against Prussia, while the
The Arabs heroically did their duty, and that the Jews applauded our defeats, did to rise to the rank and honor of French citizens cash. The timing was truly perfect, and It can be said without any exaggeration that there is This was a pure and simple betrayal of France.
profit of the Jewish community.

A man who certainly won't be accused of being A supporter of our ideas, Élisée Reclus, in the ouwork entitled: France, Algeria, Colonies, judged this measure harshly:

"Algerian Jews were naturalized..."
"block, by decree, -while we were fighting" against the disciplined hordes of the Evan people They certainly hadn't deserved it.
occupied as they were solely with banking,
of commerce, brokerage, peddling and of wear and tear; none of them holds the plow, He doesn't water the gardens or prune the vines. None had not perished in our ranks, under the bandits from the North, like these Berbers, these Arabs, these blacks who were among the heroes of Reichshoffen; and if they did not defend Algeria - against us, from 1830 to 1871, they did not defend it-
"They will not be against our enemies either."
As for the disastrous consequences of this decree...

AR ARRA RA RRR RA A

R

pable, everyone knows them, and I general Ducrot was able to write in all truth: "The decree of "Mr. Crémieux on the naturalization of Jews"
"He started the fire everywhere."

It also appears that Mr. Crémieux has not He took the secret of favors to his grave.
special privileges granted to Algerian Jews.
Not long ago, Mr. Boulanger came to to declare that the Israelites of Algeria would not not obliged to come to France to do the service military service prescribed by the law of 1875. They will do it in Algeria, and we will in fact have a military corps Jewish silence in Algeria.

But Crémieux's great work is PAIL-universal Israelite alliance, and he was right to to say, from her point of view, that she was "the insti-:
"the most beautiful and fruitful tution that has been
"Founded in modern times."

"One cannot dream of an instrument of domination-
"a more powerful nation, and it is understandable that it
"rules the world."

The Covenant constitutes for the Jews a kind of official power, an effective representation of their nation and who speaks on their behalf to Europe
Its organization is extremely simple. Everything
A Jew can be part of the Alliance provided a low annual contribution of ten francs.

The Alliance is governed by a central committee which consists of sixty members. The Camity central resides in Paris; he corresponds with the general or local committees. The members of the committee members are appointed for nine years by vote universal of Alliance members, to revive labeled by thirds every three years indefinitely and eligible for re-election; they elect each year, from among themselves, an office composed of a president, two vice-presidents, a treasurer and a secretary
general. |

A committee can be formed in any location.
a society where the company has ten members, and regional committees established in every country where it several somitea laqaux existed.

Local and regional committees act by themselves in matters of pure interest-

local ment, but gous leur propra responsabilb.

Jls transmit to the central committee at en receive communications on any object, of interest to society.

Jis solicits and collects subscriptions by pouring the product into the committee's Ja eaisse central,

The number of members is twenty-eight thousand approximately. The ostensible budget available to the as-
The association's capital is one million francs, but the Real resources are virtually unlimited,

Countless companies are affiliated with the Alliance.
tes spread throughout the world, and, besides the major European press which bribes by
With her money, she maintains hundreds of days special rates that are only for sons of Israel,

Crémieux perfectly characterized in a few words reflect the cosmopolitan spirit of the institution.

The Alliance is not a French alliance.
"German, or English, she is Jewish; she is "Universal. That's why it works, that's why."
"Why she succeeds."

The slanderous novel: by Eugène Sus on the in the company of Jesus, the Wandering Jew gives a little idea of what the Israeli Alliance actually is universal lite. Which is not true for the Jesuits, that is for her. The Jews themselves were struck by this rapprochement.

“I remember right now,” said one of "their speakers at the general assembly of “February 3, 1870, when Pon made such a warm gesture.”
"Praise of Germany, a conversation that "I once had a conversation with a fellow believer who "had attended a meeting of the Alliance the day before.
"I asked him his opinion on Alliance, and "Here is what he replied to me:

"While attending your session yesterday, I thought to the Wandering Jew, by Eugène Suë, to that scene where “Rodin, going through his correspondence, finds
"Letters from all corners of the world."
"The comparison between these two companies is "fair as to the extent and scope of our "relationships with the world, but it stops there.
"Ah! What a difference between these two works:"
"One of them, it is said, has the means to oppress,"
"the other to liberate; one extends to
"to stifle freedom, the other to give it;
"One wants to turn off the lights, the other..."
"relight; one spreads cold and death,
"The other is warmth and life." (Cheers).

“What’s amusing,” Drumont adds, “is "that these Jews who openly declare that they do not
"are neither French, nor English, nor German,"
"constantly reproach Catholics in "their newspapers to recognize the authority of the "Pope, to obey a foreign sovereign."

"A foreign sovereign!" exclaimed the innocent man.
"Proletarian. Is that possible? And this good Jew is—"
"It is patriotic of him to thunder against this enormity!"
We can understand how much weight it carries in the balance.
the participation of these men from all nations nilities, obeying a watchword. We have it well seen, to cite just one example, when the Alliance

HAS

HAS

tsraélite, dealing as an equal with the powers, sending notes, protests, ultimatum, actively intervened regarding the Romania's role in foreign policy.

In their masterly presentation of 1868, document that those who watch should read and reread like a chimera, the "Jewish peril," the deputies Romanians used to say:

"The invasion of the Jews into Romania took place,"
"in recent years, such proportions
"considerable that it terrified the popula-
"Romanian tions; because they see themselves flooded"
"a separate, hostile race, which formed alongside
"of the Romanian nation a foreign nationality-"manages and opposes the interests of that one... These "Invaders currently form a floating population of over five hundred thousand souls that are continually increasing.
Is it surprising that the Romanian government had vigorously opposed the invasion of these cosmopolitan predators, and refused them equality of civil and political rights with the natives. There was a simple measure of good there.
meaning and national salvation. Immediately the Jewish press |
and Judaized made a terrible noise about this Intolerance, in a century of progress. The Alliance Universal Israelite enters the battle line.

R

"HAS

A reason to intervene was quickly found: Jews da Moldavia would have been in huts at perse-popular cuts (in 1867). The government The Romanian government may well have demonstrated, through a serious investigation, which the Jews themselves had "acca-
"He had initiated, if not provoked, the movement," the pre-
The text I was looking for was found; that's all I wanted.
The Jewish quarter. Immediately the president of the Alliance, Crémieux launches his campaign, and he makes his voice heard the world of grievances and threats from Israel oppressed! He writes, in a more dictatorial "I" tone, letters to letters, to the European governments,
and these, more or less led by Freemasonry Jewish woman, instead of silencing the insolent woman lawyers, respond deferentially that they are taking care of-seriously address this matter.

However, the efforts of the Jews and their pro-detectors did not then have full responsiveness; they sq broke against the unanimous resistance and dis-Desperate for Romanian passion. Crémieux and

The Alliance did not give up, and they continuednurent to work on minds in Romania and in the rest of Europe.

- Ten years later, the Congress of Berlin (4878), Article 44 of it established the principle of the emane-complete abolition of the Jews of Romania. This success was mainly due to the tireless Crémieux, whose

French minister plenipotentiary, the Freemason Anglian Waddington, obediently carried out the orders. It was in vain that the government... main made vigorous protests heard.

The French Republic exerted its full influence in favor of the Jews. She made the execution of the eat Article 44, the essential condition of the regonofficial birth of Romania as a power-independent sanae, Since Jars Romania has was established as a kingdom (1881) and Prince Charles has taken the crown. Is it believed that political influence The influence of Jewry is unrelated to these results.
and that there was no kind of market there mysterious.

This story that we have just outlined will...
Quickly is most instructive. She learns to the fools who want to pass themselves off as intelligent people, mocking the alarmists who denounce the danger, that Jewry constitutes a force of first order; that basically it leads the poli-European tick; that it tends to establish on the on the banks of the Danube, a veritable Jewish state which, gradually annexing the provinces of the surrounding regions neighboring areas teeming with Jews will become, in less than a quarter of a century perhaps, extended and compact, will group and concentrate all efforts of the Israelites, and will end, thanks to the power of money, the press, Freemasonry and of its annexes, by dominating and directing all the European governments. In the remarkable

As we have already mentioned, the Rou- deputies hands, which are not dreamers, signal highly this dreadful possibility: "He is

"For us," they say, "it's an established fact, which re-
"results from all these details, as well as from the "perseverance with which the Jews take "take root and grow in Romania. It is "that they try to establish here this Jewish state which "is the first realization of their ideas of "Predominance over Christian peoples."

Let him who has ears open them, and let him understand.

CHAPTER SIX

Your Jewry and the Revolution

The Revolution is essentially nothing else that the social upside-down, through the organization
The formation of the revolt. Ignorance of duties.
the most sacred, contempt for the most fundamental rights tains; rights of God, rights of the Church, rights of power, family rights, Christian rights
The whole Revolution is about rights and human rights.
There. At certain times, terrible explosions.
reveal to the world, momentarily horrified, the next daystupidly reassured, the underground fire that works in the bowels of society. Habitypically the Revolution follows a regular march her, seemingly calm, and she accomplishes surely its ravages, rather like a worm rodent, like lightning. She has manufactured from scratch, for its intended use, a marvelous instrument of destruction: the franc-Freemasonry. Freemasonry is truly the demolition man's pick; it disjoins the foundations.

better linked to the social order, they tear them away from their base, overturns them and pulverizes them. Who doesn't doesn't want to take the schemes and the Freemasonry companies are condemning themselves to understand nothing about modern history; he
He can see the facts, but he doesn't know the underlying mechanisms.
hidden, the mysterious and powerful engines of events.

At present, there is abundant light on this point, but what is less known is that the masonry, especially in its highest part,
the most active, and therefore the most dangerous-reuse, is inspired and directed by the Jewish community, a opinion has spread nowadays, which claims
"that a command and management center"
"has always existed among the Jews since their dis-
"general perception up to the present day; that this
"The leadership is in the hands of princes"
"occult, whose succession is perpetuated regularly"
"little, and that thus the Jewish nation has always
"was conducted like a huge society se-
"Crest which in turn gives impetus to "other seo- companies." There are, I recognizewillingly, a clear exaggeration in this thesis, but what is undeniable is that from the eighteenth century onwards the Masonic lodges Conical doors open before the Jews, the most They boldly enter, and soon they are the masters.

the inspirers, the supreme directors, of such so that a serious French review, could there be At four years old, write these words: "Judaism and "Freemasonry today appears to be a "Identical formula... Judaism governs the "world, and it is necessary to conclude or
"that Freemasonry has become Jewish, or that the “Judaism has become Freemasonry (4).”

The Historical and Political Papers of Munich, publication, as we know, very serious and very well-informed, reproduced in 1862, on the occasion from Alban Stolz's brochure on Freemason-nerie, the grievances of a mason (2). These pages,
It is claimed that they passed before the king's eyes.
Guillaume, and the author, however attached he is to Protestant worship, there, points out the danger more imminent for the throne and for the altar "the "power that the Jews were able to acquire through the

(1) Review of Historical Questions, 67th issue, April 4 — 1882.

(2) See Le Monde of November 5, 1862.

"Means of Freemasonry, power which would have reached its zenith today... It exists "In Germany," he said, "a secret society in "Masonic forms, which are subject to "unknown leaders. The members of this association-
"tion are mostly Israelites; their "ranks and their systems have no rites and of "Christian symbols are only for form, and serve"
"Thus, all the better to cover up their actions."
"Jews only make use of Christianity there through
"Mockery or to further conceal the darkness"
"of their plans and their intrigues. In "Lately, the Jews have been excluded from a
"a certain number of lodges; now they are "universally received in all the lodges of the "world... In London, where is located, as one "knows, the heart of the revolution, under the great "Master Palmerston, there are two Jewish lodges" who never saw Christians pass their "Threshold. This is where all the threads of all the revolutionary elements that are brewing
"In Christian lodges."

That we link these revelations to this fact that in Italy the most important members of The supreme sellers were Jews, and that was the most famous, the one who worked the hardest to revolutionize the Peninsula's settlements, the formidable "Little-

AR

L

R

R

"Tigre" (Piccolo-Tigre) was a Jew, and one will understand that we are right when we affirm the current identity of these three Terms: Revolution, Freemasonry, Jewry.

Any sensible person will recognize, I think, that the religious persecution that is rampant in France, .

skillfully organized, slow and clever-a carefully conducted approach, which focuses particularly on poison the soul of the child and the people, who He too is a child, while on the other
On her side, she seeks to dishonor, to kill morality.
and finally to abolish the clergy, that is the work of Freemasonry. Who pushed the famous War cry: "Clericalism, that is the enemy!"
Gambetta, a Freemason, but at the same time,
As we have seen, an organ, an instrument of the Jewry? Which newspapers are the most fervent?
to lead the dechristianization campaign
France? The French Republic, of the Jew
Reinach, the Nation, of the Jew Dreyfus (4), the Lan-

(4) His proposal for income tax gives the citizen Camille Dreyfus, a Jewish stockbroker and Radical deputy, his little notoriety. The Paris correspondent for the Journal de Bruxelles He takes the opportunity to sketch the character:

"Mr. Dreyfus, before becoming a deputy, was a member of the Council municipal councilor of Paris. He is a Jewish man in his forties.
very involved in politics and business. In the "Business is perfectly natural: Jews have a genius for business."
Business is their element; they are currently in dull, from the Jew Mayer. Who is the tireless apostle?

—
◦

divorce, this fatal attack on sacred law of marriage and the formation of the family? The Naquet the Jew. Among those who are hunting our poor priests, and to our humble sisters, who break the crucifixes and throw them away haphazardly with garbage in dump trucks, shine at First row Jes Jews: Hendlé, now pre-Seine River: Lower: Isaiah Levaillant, seeré-
Chief of Staff of the Paris Police Prefecture; Hérold, Prefect of the Seine. And the double scandal of the solemn burial of Victor Hugo and the desecration of the Pantheon, what is the main reason?

almost all our major cases, I should say in all of them, but in politics it's different: they are one a tiny minority, their great wealth causes them a lot of trouble.
In old age, politics has frequent and sometimes recurring themes.
vidletits; I believe they are lacking in their traditional prudencehelle by throwing herself into it as if the career should never be their to present obstacles, but that's their business.

"M: Dreyfus is at the head of a little-known newspaper, which is called the Nation. On the first page of this issue Today I find the following article titles: Orlédneries, Lavigerié and Co. (Cardinal Lavigerie), Clerical Antics. These Headlines tell you the spirit and tone of the newspaper, which is A radical statement of poor taste. The Nation has no political significance.
nor literary merit: it's a poorly written journal and that you

~ You will rarely see it discussed or even cited in the Parisian press-

glenne., 1

“Although radical, Mr. Dreyfus did not lead an equal life-to keep quiet; he travels with a large entourage, leads a luxurious lifestyle, as Mr. Clemenceau and most of our radicals who have fortune or those who earn money, and that the radical plebeians organizer? Lockroy, in whose veins... mixes the blood of Jews, Jacobins, and show-offs.

Who assists the Jules in their nefarious work?
Ferry, the Paul Berts, prominent scoundrels between all, for they dishonor and defile the soul of ees little ones, whose foreheads still bear the mark of Caresses of Jesus Christ? Jews like Fer: Dinand Dreyfus.

To defend and support this, enter
It's a hell of a catch, you need servants.

The law on purging the judiciary is voted. Then incredible things happened in the Senate.
The Freemasons went to steal ballots

imagines living on dry bread and pure water, so that he can come 2 in aid to what she calls the workers and the wretched; Radicalism is simply a political path like | another, a main road that cuts across fields and which | leads more quickly to fortune and power; it is no longer a | Everything, and I don't know if it ever was, a moral rule!

"Mr. Dreyfus's political and financial background is common to Paris; this type, in fact, is neither a financier nor a politician; he is an active, bold, ambitious type, but one who rarely deviates from the plans inferior, which remains bastard, and that is why I call him politico-financial, because it nibbles away at politics and the finance, |

Mr. Dreyfus was secretary to Mr. Wilson, son-in-law of the president: President of the Republic, and he remained very close to him. Mr. Wilson likes business, not just for the money. that one can gain from it, but through a certain love of art: his mind delights in combinations, in difficulties; and he is interested, if he is not already interested, in all these matters that the brain of Paris produces.

the lie that acquits the Protestantized Jew Erlanger.

In the Drumont-Meyer case, the tenth Chamber- the court, presided over by Mr. Barthelon, delivers to the Jew Meyer, from Gaulois, a certificate of loyalty which It makes you dream. Certainly, as a priest and a Christian, we re- Let us grumble and blame our friend's duel. - Drumont, but, the duel being given, we do not We can only be amazed by this consideration:
"Indeed, the hand-to-hand combat where the limbs
"intertwine, breaths mingle, the "chests collide, where movements are
"disordered, as in the species it has been "described by everyone, is nothing other than the duel at
"knife, with the only difference being the length"
"Blades. (Oh, Mr. Prudhomme!) That there is cause
"However, it must be acknowledged that, on this point, the
"The accused bears only a small share of responsibility."
"bility, etc., etc."

This will teach Drumont to go on the terrain, in defiance of Church laws, and to fight | with a Jew. The court taught him a lesson fencing, and I congratulate him on getting off so lightly. walk.

And the army... Don't we know the power it possesses?
enjoys himself in the offices of the Ministry of War, Mayer and his Lantern? In truth, the Jew has everything Overwhelmed, completely captivated, he outlines the program and he directs the blows of the Revolution. When then, not only Catholics, but all men who have some concern for honor and the happiness of the homeland, they will say in return-quoting Gambetta's words: the Jewry, that's Fen-nemi!

PART TWO
~ THE REMEDY

In the foreword to this booklet I wrote:
We do not say: Down with the Jew; we say:
Get the Jew out of here.

Violence is both unjust and powerless;
but legitimate self-defense based on justice and which translates energetically into the moral order, in the political and economic spheres,
can erect ramparts that will put society
Christian sheltered from Jewish invasions.

That's what we're going to show in the second part.
part of this work.

CHAPTER ONE

The moral remedy

When the Jewish spirit rises, the Christian spirit - decline. At present, the Juiveverte begins, corrodes Christian society from all sides.
morally, practically, economically.
First and foremost, morals must be reformed; once this is done,
Not everything, no doubt, will be done; but without That, everything that could be attempted would be absolute-futile and sterile. Political reforms and social issues, which do not have a solid foundation for reform

Moral considerations are merely palliatives, expedients.
who live what the expedients live. The media-the most learned and best applied cation can only prolong existence by a few days of a terminally ill patient; it is necessary, in order for her to obtain a happy outcome, may she be helped by the vital forces of nature. Thus it is for human societies; the most beautiful systems Themes of government, the wisest theories political economy, are powerless to conjugate to rectify an illness that has reached the very core of health national, and against which each sick person in in particular, does not want to react forcefully.

Believing that there is a single recipe for healing
a society that stubbornly refuses to be cured,
This demonstrates a profound ignorance of the laws.
of history and a singular naiveté. The conver-Zion is essentially an individual moral act.
and any social recovery must take as its starting point from the start the free, generous and valiant energy of each one.

So, what is the current moral situation?
"Be rich and you will be respected." This word
This reflects a profound degradation of character.
The Jew possesses Vor; that is what makes it so great Part of his worldly power, in the absence of honor, Vor gives him outward consideration, Vinsocial influence places him in a separate sphere.
at the same time as he opens all doors for her,
even those that should remain closed in front
He attracts people to his hotels and castles.
at his parties, at his hunts, those who, at all costs and in any way they seek pleasure and want to have fun. Dromont said it with a truth that we found severe and which mast that just: "The dominant feeling in laris-

"French tocratic and in the upper bourgeoisie"
"whoever walks in his wake, it is the love of "pleasure... This compelling passion gives, we — "includes, all the great lords feet at
"With their hands tied to the Jews." The Jews are rich:

although they were careful with their money, having conquered, one knows by what means, on the naive Christians, they know how to sow Por who, under the magic fingers of the pleasure fairy, dazzling, enchants, bewitches. Why such and such porches?
so many honored, sometimes illustrious names,
of an undisputed reputation for honor, brave, generous, they go, away from the old traditions
tions, among these, were enriched more or less by wear and tear,
And do they receive them in their demauras? At once Surely, these French people, these Christians,
They sought help from the upper echelons of Jewish society, that's not "Pi the spirit, nor the amenity of relations, nor the distinction"
tion of manners, niun intellectual treat or artigr | tiquo, nothing in a word of what our is so fond of a race with refined tastes and lofty sentiments, but in the palace, in the castle of this Jew one to have fun; to be a guest of a Rothschild,

To be distinguished from a Hirsch, an Erlanger
To be part of the crowd is to be categorized. The newspapers of the Boulevards mention your name; you are the favorite of His Majesty's money, you are admitted to court of a king of finance; what grace! and what Greatness! The proud democrats of our time are outraged upon reading such a letter from Madame de Sévigné, in which the witty marquise tells his daughter about his happiness at having been the object of the king's attention, who addressed a word to him commonplace. How much even among the descendants ancient heroes puff themselves up as they read their names printed vividly in the sheets which have the privilege of recounting the great deeds of the Jewish community Elegant! That's almost worthy of a reprimand.
of the day for a spectacular action. Next to these birds bright and light attracted by the glitter of Por and the shimmering of pleasure, a host of others are driven by curiosity, vanity; others, finally,
they obey a base and less avowable sentiment.
The Jew is the king of the purse, he is the priest of this temple, where sacrifices are offered to the calf Gold brings wealth, peace, security, and dignity.
morality, sometimes the lives of so many men and of families. To count among his courtiers is to to be almost certainly the favorite of fortune.
With the Jew and through the Jew, one speculates, one

People speculate, they fiddle with things, they neglect their occupations. healthy, serious and noble work, to run quick gains often turn into ruin. Like The great beasts of the desert, the Jew is escorted of a troop of small carnivores, with teeth less sharp, with less grippy nails, and who live off its leftovers. The Jew is aware of He knows his power, he feels his triumph, and he He makes it felt. He, the age-old oppressed, he feels it. a bitter pleasure in seeing at his feet these Christians He is one of whose servants he was. To one of these Jews, king of finance, it is said that he let slip, speaking of one of his Jewish rivals: “Ah! if this man and I could get along, Would anything else soon be left for Christians besides "Their eyes to cry with?" This sovereignty colossale, implacable, constantly increasing Por Judaic, stems from the forgetting of Christian laws, which must govern societies; it comes especially from forgetting the moral law, which should govern the the heart of anyone who believes in the Gospel. Give me a society whose members be imbued with the teachings of Jesus-Christ on wealth, on the duties that it imposes, on the responsibilities it creates, on the formidable dangers to which it exposes, a society that has understood the greatness and the within the scope of this first beatitude, which is in at the same time a moral law and an economic lawmique: Beati pauperes spiritu: Blessed are those whose hearts are detached from perishable goods; a a society where duty and this flower of duty, which It's called honor, it comes before everything; a society where honest and regular work is kept in high esteem, where, in the family that preserves jealously guarding the deposit of old traditions, unite, for the common good, the authority, the respect, piety and filial obedience, where the intimate joys of home replace the joys of evilhealthy and feverish; a society, finally, where everyone, may it stand under the gaze and in the hand of God to his rank and in his place, to fulfill his calling, modestly and laboriously traces its furrow, without letting oneself be bitten by the tooth of greed and proud ambitions; give me, tell me-I, this society, and if the power of Jewry, is not thereby completely annihilated,

However, it will be significantly reduced.
You will have cut off his supplies, you will have deprived of these sad accomplices, these guilty parties complicity, which paves the way to his heart even within Christian society. Think about it carefully.
we will tell our compatriots, especially those who, by their conduct and their examples, have contributed to the worldly invasion of the Jew, think about it seriously and starting today; without reform Individual morality, without the improvement of morals Christians, in private life and in life public, you will inevitably become prey to Jew. Slaves to his gold, you will be slaves of his wishes, and when one day, overcome with shame and feeling a final drop of Christian blood, you will cry out: let us shake off the yoke, it will be too late.

CHAPTER TWO

The political remedy

In terms of government, even less so than in everything else, laissez-faire, laissez-Passing by is not appropriate. To govern is to lead.
with authority; it is above all about protecting and defend. The old poet, interpreter of wisdom naive and primitive common sense of the people, appe-Milk, the shepherd kings of the people. What to think?
of a shepherd who would not defend the flock of the teeth of wolves, or that which would lead him into Poisonous pastures? The Bible says so, and experience History confirms this statement: "Where there is no
"Without a governor, the people will collapse like
"a house in ruins: Ubi non est gubernator,

“populus corruet. » And again: “The wise prince "is the strength of his people: Princeps sapiens “stabilimentum populi sui. » As for the one who, ignoring his duties towards God, no longer the intelligence of the responsibilities of his position, -“It’s a roaring lion and a hungry bear for “the people: Leo rugiens et ursus esurtens prin“ceps impius super populum. " Intelligence, strength, devoted love, are these not the highest qualities? and basic qualities that should adorn those who are in charge of the people? In the question that What concerns us is the duty of a government. worthy of the name and which is not a company of exploitation. As we have seen, the Jewish quarter constitutes a National danger. We have stated the necessary effort. to oppose him on moral and individual grounds. Do we believe that in the political order, there is nothing What to do? The press and the revolutionary organizationHaire, whose soul is Freemasonry, are among the most effective in the service of the Jew; we have not to repeat this demonstration. Everything needs to be done. price break politically in the hands of These two destructive devices are Jewish. The work is far from being impossible for an intelligent power, bold, resolute. The man who will courageously affixsows the seeds on lying lips, and who, with a stroke of his sword, will break the feathers poisoned, will have well deserved of the fatherland.

The press in the pay of the Jews is impious – to varying degrees.– and licentious–also in different measures carefully measured according to the diversity of the clientele; – it perverts PesIt was taken and it defiles morals. Who would be repelled? by a joke that was too crude, by an attackthat it is too violent against religion, it presents a honeyed cup, with a beverage composed of the most subtle and deadly venoms. She knows perfectly well the part of the perfidious insinuinnuendo, slanderous suspicions, mencleverly concealed dreams. Who knows how it spread in the blink of an eye, to the four corners of the country, a new, skillfully crafted, recognizednaked fake the next day, but who despite all the denials, of all the requested corrections, moreover, carefully omitted or truncated, will leave a painful impression on the mind of – drive ?

If necessary, and addressing the crowd, she will borrow street language, she will throw at hands full of the mud of outrage on the dress that priest, she will slander without restraint, she will bind the the holiest chasers, the most ply people showing respect to the jeers of the rabble, she will stir up the plebeians against the nun, against the humble brother of the Christian schools, against the poor country priest, and to complete her work, she will cynically hold school of pornography.

In such cases, the indifference of those in power is a treason. The government is providing certain general conditions of public health, is there Are there no public health measures to be taken here?
In our major cities, precautions are being taken.
often meticulous to ensure freedom and street cleanliness, and we Christians, we don't have-Let us not laugh at the right to be protected in freedom of our beliefs, in the dignity of our customs against the insults and filth of a press
sold to our worst enemies |
`It is also difficult to suppress sem-Excessive blabbering?

Ultimately, a good press law is this that could be simpler.

In terms of the press, I only know the Common law, or preventive censorship; certainly,
the latter being the legislation of the Church, would be preferable, but as, for a crowd of reasons that would be too lengthy to elaborate on, she
It seems impossible nowadays and in our country except perhaps temporarily, it remains ineffective than common law.

Crimes and offenses committed through The press must be repressed, that much is obvious. Why punish these offenses or crimes according to a Special legislation?

Are there two moralities, one for those who write, and another for those who do not write: Not? | |

Why the double standards?

Strengthen common law, if necessary; Have judges who are honest and upright, and prosecute. In front of them were journalists like everyone else citizens, nothing more, nothing less.

Place these principles above all reach religious principles, these moral laws, this Decalogue eternal which form the primordial constitution of Any society that wants to live.

Hit them hard, and even harder with a fine. than through prison, and without the repercussions of the court of assizes, the writer, the journalist, who substitu the outrage, the insulting sarcasm to the methods of a high and serious discussion, which under a propagates immorality in any form or by any other means. who, deliberately lying, defames impu- Religion is a powerful force. Here are a few examples. _ have been done, severe and well chosen, the rest The troupe will take it as gospel, and you will see how quickly will the foul atmosphere be cleansed in which we breathe. The Jewish community doesn't like not to pay.

She wants to have fun at our expense. Well! that “she pays the costs.

I assure you she will soon remain silent. cautious.

But for this work of justice, it would be necessary... What? A government that wasn't of the band...

The other strength of Jewry is frankness masonry, with all the associations which radiate around her.

Here again, the duty is clear and simple.

At present, Freemasonry leads Everything must lead to nothing. Drumont has wrote: Jewish France, he could just as well have Write about Freemason France. We must wash away France must be cleansed of this shame; it must be purified of this.
leprosy; the chancre that defiles it must be eradicated and who devours it.

A simple, bold, and fair measure would have the reason for this occult power that surrounds the country in the folds of its rings.

Declare that any person legally convinced-how to belong to Freemasonry or to an affiliated association will be private, for a time to be determined, perpetually in case of recidivism, in the exercise of his political rights.

For me, I will even go, in certain cases, as far as the Deprivation of civil rights. I'm not going into the... details that the subject matter demands; I am content to indicate-to determine the path to follow. Let it also be clearly understood that the quality of Freemasonry is inexorably firm-the entry into any public function which that she may be. These will be very legitimate representations. sailles. Our victors don't hold back for us to say: "You are a member of a religious order, a Jesuit, a simple
A cleric, would you be a miracle of genius, you You're good for nothing, and you should value yourself
"Happy that you are left a modest place
"in the sunshine of the homeland."

"After all, the old pagans were right."
"when they shouted at that cursed breed"
"nascent of Christians: Non licet esse vos; he:"
"You are not allowed to exist." Well!
Let us apply the law of retaliation, and if we become One day the masters will be fooled, let's not be fooled with these grand words of progress, tolerance, etc., etc.; that would be foolish and cowardly.

A few years of such a system would have shattered the revolutionary organization and reduced to Freemasonry is nothing. This is proof.
is done, is only formidable to those who feared.

When you look at it straight ahead and walk Resolutely upon her, she faints and hides underground.

I know, the kind-hearted men who will dedicate themselves their lives and strength to this task, must Expect anything. The Revolution, concentrated at high dose in the lodges, does not give battle to Big day.

She defames through her press and she kills in shadow by the dagger of his assassins. But the man tall enough to undertake this work of justice and national liberation will have a heart noble enough to despise such things threats, and if he falls, he may, in falling, to hurl to heaven and to his country this cry of the illustrious President of the Republic of Ecuador,
_D. Garcia Moreno: God does not die.

CHAPTER THREE

The economic and social remedy

"France for the French!" That should be the first principle of a true economic policy-national ment. There is a serious danger in this, or the land, or the country's capital, are between the foreign hands. The danger increases when,
As a result of skillful maneuvers, the stranger arrives almost to the point of monopolizing public wealth. We We must treat the stranger as a brother, no like an enemy; the Christian spirit demands it. From one On the other hand, the earthly homelands are in order of Providence; they have their determinate vocation-undermined by their historical tradition, and those who Governments have a duty to protect the interest-Grievousness of this vocation and of preserving at each people the organs and instruments which are necessary to fulfill his role here on earth. The fraternity proclaimed and established by Catholicism destroys the haughty, harsh, ferocious feeling selfishness of the pagan towards the foreigner; he is perfectly compatible with a love of favoritesreference to the homeland, the land of the ancestors, and our Old theologians linked it to filial piety the virtue that commands us to love and to serve our country.

In this matter, one must be wary of, I don't know... `what humanitarian sentimentality, advocated and propaved by the Revolution, which does not prevent Europe to resemble a vast forest of Bondy, if you prefer, has a huge field battle, where millions and millions Men are ready to slit their throats for the greatest profit of the Jewish community, which collectswill be gold in their hands, in these pools of blood.

But what is happening beneath our eyes? Next to For us, Austria sees ten thousand dorural town halls fall under the intarledii of the adpublic judgment as a result of Vinsolvency of Homeowners crushed by mortgage debt lractée avec les Juifs.

In Fhalice hoûs tei soifies not čnčörë there:

but that the agricultural crisis is worsening, — and it will get worse — you will see the same thing happen phenomenon; you will see the peasant's property, of the petty bourgeois, of the little gentleman, of those Finally, who are the driving forces of the country, sold to cheap price, falling into the hands of speculators for which property has no character moral or social, and enrich the wealthy Jewish praetor or Judaizing, more or less usurious. Waiting for dant, MMors the high barons of feudalism financeCière carves out large pleasure estates in the departments surrounding Paris, and ressusThey cite, for example, the latifundia of the decadence of the Roman Republic. This peril must be opposed a powerful remedy, and here is the remedy: it A law must be drafted with two articles worded as follows:

ARTICLE ONE, — It is forbidden for any foreigner-to own a portion of the rural land of country.

ARTICLE TWO. — The Jews are assimilated to foreigners.

Article 1 is a defense measure perfectly legitimate national policy. Whether one wants Note well that I am restricting the prohibition of to possess rural property; the strange poüřwould own urban property. The spirits
The wary ones will grasp the difference at first glance.

which exists between these two orders of properties;
For the others, the explanation would be long, and without Unnecessary doubt.

As for the second article, it is imperative-demanded by the cosmopolitan nature of the Jew.
Who would dare to claim that the Jew is either French or Jewish?
or Austrian, or English; he is Jewish, and he remains He's Jewish. So he must be treated as a Jew. I know that.
what people used to paying with words, and
"God knows how many there are," they will object.
Equality! Common law. I will naively admit that I don't understand common law any better to unequal social situations, that a measure common to unequal sizes. What is needed, this What is right is, according to the profound word of a prominent Austrian statesman "the res-
"Equal respect for different rights." That's what...
Our fathers understood, that's what...
that their company, despite many flaws-sites and many irregularities in construction tion, was, all things considered, a harmony, not a anarchy.

But this external defense measure does not That's not enough yet. It's necessary to build a wise internal system of property, partial-particularly small property, and to enact measures to protect against rapacity of Jewish usury. Why not borrow from foreign legislation such as these provisions, which consolidate rural property, which attach inextricably linked to the home and the family, and which declare the agricultural domain, or at least one portion of the agricultural domain, unattainable for debts. If we do not adopt measures similar to blables or similar things, we will soon see, the crisis With economic support, alongside the proletariat of cities are forming the proletariat of the countryside loincloths, plebeians without domestic shelter, wandering in across the country , far from the children's cradle and the ancestral tomb, deprived of the hearth, guaranteed of moral dignity and material life, not possessing:

dant plus a parcel of the national soil pulverized
- by mortgage debt, and thrown prey to the a band of ruthless creditors.

There will no longer be a homeland, because there is no will no longer have family or home, and France will not will be more than just a farm operated by the Jewish community.

Is that all? No. We must prepare for danger.
more pressing.

Capitalism, to use a rather crude word-bare, like the thing itself, is the master,
And the Jew is the undisputed king of capitalism.
Capitalism is a system in which money and speculation hold first place, go-govern the entire economic life of nations.

They enslave labor. Certainly, money plays a role.
very useful to play in human affairs, and Saint Thomas determines it with his characteristic precision.
tuelle.

"He," he said, "who, by virtue of a contract of "society entrusts its money to a merchant or to
"Uh, worker, keep ownership of this money, and"
"His associates do so at their own risk and peril."
they argue it; therefore he can legitimately claim-“a portion of the gain which is its fruit (4).”
But this very moral and very fruitful contract, in _ which the different factors are remunerated proproportionately to their effect and activity, contract favored by the Church, protected by it against usurious businesses, has nothing to do with common with these modern speculations born of the freedom of the money trade and which, in definitive, resulting in more or less effective means less complicated to cruelly oppress those who have nothing and to rob those who have little. This theory of the freedom of money, so dear to liberalism, so severely judged by the Church, of which Practical indulgence in no way diminishes the truth of the doctrine, produced the beautiful result that we see: the concentration in the hands of some of the public wealth.

R

(1) She who commits pecuniam suam vel mercatori vel artifci per modum sociotatis cujusdam, non transfer dominium pecuniæ sue in illum, sed remanet ejus: ita quod cum periculd ipsius mercator de ea negotiatur, vel artifex operatur; and ideo sic licite potest parlem lucri inde provenientis expetere, tanquam dere sua. Sum. Tea. 2a 2® q.68 Art. 2, ad quintum.

A German scientist, Dr. Ratzinger, has He very rightly said: "The expropriation of society "through mobile capital is carried out with as much "regularity as if it were a law of nature. "Zion is doing nothing to stop it, in space" "fifty years, or at most, a century, "The whole of European society will be delivered, feet "and with their hands tied, a few hundred ban- “Jewish quiers.”

Don't you see that through these injustices... mules, by this enslavement to money all of man's strength, through the deployment of the soil of an entire people of workers, by the The ruins you create, through the greed you ignite, through the hatreds you provoke, you prepare for the coming and dreadful advent of the Furious socialism? "We claim, I will say "with Abbot Morel, in his remarkable "a work on interest-bearing loans, such a state "Things that create hatred, that hatred." "centralized by the same secrets that have "centralizes capital, loads the machine"

"social of so many atmospheres which it must ecla-"ter, however much thickness you give to the
"The metallic coating of your machine, that is-"
"that is to say, whatever number you add to to your soldiers, to your gendarmes, to your po-"Lice."

The real remedy would lie in a return to these _ old principles of evangelical morality which lay the foundation for fair relations between the Capital and labor. But who will have the courage? to administer this vigorous remedy? And who would you-Shall we take it? The events, docile mini-
The very justice of God will one day force the societies made wise by ruin, as well material as well as moral, to turn back and to to ask the wisdom of the Church for the secret of their temporal prosperity.

Until that hour, perhaps less distant-Given that we don't believe it, should we cross our arms and Do nothing to stop the evil? God forbid.
Please.

I confess my profound incompetence, in fact of finance, but it is not necessary to be a great scholar in this matter to understand that fair and inexorable financial legislation-applied, especially to the potentates of capitalism lism, should above all severely punish the

. fake news spreaders, prohibit the gains illicitly obtained through manipulation fraudulent, suppress the speculation that thrives on lies dreams that fool the naive public, always a little gullible, like children. S'in-bowing before the audacity of the powerful buccaneers of the Stock Exchange, not daring to touch it with the tip of your finger to one of those cosmopolitan nabobs who practice financial piracy on a large scale, and reserve all the harshness of the law for a poor devil of second-rate privateer who took on too many liberties taken with the Penal Code, that's a detestable thing an example that offends public morality and that dishonors justice. What can be said, especially of a go-government that would tamper with things for its own benefit or that would stifle a case, when the action- Those involved in this affair would be seen as recruiting. in the parties that are hostile to him! But this is only the beginning. The limited company invades all spheres of human activity. This is particularly the mani- the manipulation of money which is his work of prediction election. It attracts both small and large capital, She takes from all the girls, she seduces even the most cautious are lied to with self-serving lies of a venal press, and by the lure of fabulous gains- For them, it is disgusting to find honest and patient work disheartening.

and it inevitably leads to these catastrophes colossal where millions of fortunes and human existences, and from which arose- They felt more radiant, more triumphant, more insolent than ever the Jewish conquerors. Thanks to the a limited company, behind which are hidden knights of industry of every class, of every order, wealth is concentrated in proportions gigantic lions in the hands of a few powerful unions dominated by this cos- Jewish community A heartless, gutless mopolite who would sell the tears of families under pressure, the wounds bleeding and the torn flag of the homeland in mourning.

I am not claiming that every public limited company be guilty of such misdeeds, but wielded by For some, it leads to these disasters. I acknowledge that it is a powerful, useful, necessary instrument saire if one wants under the economic conditions questions of modern societies; I hasten to add without fear of being denied that she is an instrument dangerous. Therefore, it must be handled with care. The process is regulated and closely monitored. A little bit almost everyone agrees to ask a revision of the 1867 law.

A distinguished publicist, Mr. Urbain Guérin. in a very well-researched article, published a few months in Catholic Association (4), lists

the main reforms to be introduced into the law from 1867.

"

"

"

"

"

"First of all, a company will not be formed"
that when half of the capital has been actually invested subscribed to, contrary to the errors:

followed now, in a large number of societies where money only exists on paper...
Any author of a fictitious subscription, any administrator who will have represented as valabel a subscription of convenience, tomwill be subject to criminal law; they will have committed forgeries. The actions must remain nominative until their complete release, and such a provision will put an end to the brigandages so frequent under the law of 1867.

"Every subscription form must contain a precise enumeration of the quantum of contributions and the real figure; many simple people of which a figure of several million produced a great impression, will be less eager to subscribe, when they learn that he There's nothing behind that number.

"The stock market predators have mainly depublic savings were tied up through bonds

(1) The Necessary Reforms: The Law of 1867, by M. Urbain

Guérin. Catholic Association, July 1886, linked © THE JEWISH HOUSE.

"

"

=

AR

AR

tions; the name inspired more confidence than that of shares, and the process was all the more convenient that bondholders are left at the mercy to companies. No rights are granted to them;
They cannot, in a general assembly, like shareholders, express their opinion on the march of society, to provoke its dissolutiontion, or some other measure. From now on
They will be granted mortgage guarantees.
The companies in which this guarantee will not exist, will not be able to issue bonds tions, and it will be forbidden for others to do so.
subscribe before the share capital has been paid and used for work. Bondholders will appoint commissioners responsible for the to represent; they will have to intervene every once a correction is made to the con-primitive editions.

"The law will prohibit the distribution of any dividends" dende taken from the reserve; it will be provided by the real benefits, otherwise it doesn't exist.

"The reform of boards of directors will also recommends to the attention of the legislature administrator; the directors will receive remuneration fixed generation; they will no longer collect this tan-tième on the operations of the company which has has given rise in recent years to "Outrageous abuse..." I timidly add that he It might be a good idea to prohibit foreigners from to be part of the board of directors. That would be a severe blow to cosmopolitan Jewry.

With regard to industrial companies, pre-Special precautions would be taken. They would required to deposit a bond intended for to guarantee, in the event of liquidation, the salary of the personel. Like other companies, they do not distribute dividends would only be paid on actual profits;
and in case of a breach of this rule, they would subject to a higher penalty. Any action or part of an industrial company should remain nominal native, it could only be transferred with the consent of the other shareholders or participants pants.

It would even be advantageous to substitute in the future of anonymity, the sponsorship for the companies of this kind.

The example of Le Creusot, a limited partnership, proves that it adapts just as well as society anonymous to large companies; it is the pre-France's largest factory, one of the most significant of the world.

Furthermore, this reform eliminates one of the principal-Minor drawbacks of capital communities:
the absence of a responsible boss.

=

R

R

'HAS

“Instead of a director who is merely a subordinate given, instead of a board of directors, to be collective, impersonal, which loses itself in a
In the distant cloudy distance, she settles face to face with the workers a being of flesh and blood, and on which will bear all the responsibility.

"He will be obliged to reside, and, in the large industries, the sponsors will keep themselves It's good to put a manager at the head of the company fictional, which, in difficult times, for example In the strikes, he will be the only one to negotiate with The workers alone will bear the weight of the decisions sockets.

"Recognition of futures markets;
whatever objection it may raise in

"The spirit of lawyers would have a practical result"

"

RA

R

e AR

R

"

excellent.

"It would exclude people from all over the Stock Exchange class who are seduced by its promises, and it would inspire in them a mistrust that would be the
the beginning of wisdom.

"The abuse of emissions would be prevented by yn very high special tax, doubled and tripled when It appears to be a matter of foreign affairs, affecting Tays financial articles, announcements or advertisements recommending new business, as well as all published and distributed leaflets.

"A right proportional to the value would strike
"Any share sold. Real estate."
_“supports, in the event of alienation, a right of registration-
"Deposit calculated based on price."

"Why an action that the men of agio-
"Tiers push by five hundred francs for example
"at over three thousand, wouldn't she be able to bear a
"The same right? It would be all the stronger because the
"The share price would reach a higher figure."

"These various provisions, we will conclude © "with Mr. Urbain Guérin, will result in
"to restrict trading in securities,
"and, by raising the share of speculation in the
The country's expenses will be all the less significant.

a heavy share falls on the pro- classes
"Conducive." They will also have the effect of to stop, if not completely eliminate the exploitation of labor by Jewish capital.

That is why, with regard to companies industrial, I would gladly recommend a system conceived by generous minds, which one can easily dismissed as utopians, but who, in my opinion, their only fault is being twenty years ahead of common ideas and to better understand the conditions for a serious social reform.

To the community of anonymous capital without distinct personality, and therefore without responsibility-

defined bilite, one would substitute the cor- assumption porative of people.

Public limited companies or limited partnerships do not.
could be formed in the future, for an exploit-industrial activity, provided that: 1° of organisation manage the operations staff (engineers, foremen, workers) in corporal association tive; 2° to ensure the amortization of the capital establishment in such a way that, in a within a specified timeframe, the professional body can be substituted for the public limited company in the ownership production equipment; 3° to pay a cauoperation designed to guarantee staff in in the event of the company being liquidated before the deadlines amortization. Favors would be granted. to currently existing public limited companies which would constitute a corporate society with amortization of the establishment capital in a time to be determined. They would be unloaded. of a portion of the patent; they would be alone admitted to state tenders, departments municipalities and communes; they would receive on the customs products a subsidy to facilitate depreciation.

Another project would make workers actionmembers of the companies in which they would be employees; they would not have to pay any capital, but their work would be considered a contribution.

It is possible that these projects will provoke to the point of... from a technical point of view, and placing ourselves in the order of current facts, 'numerous objections. They do not constitute no less a theory based on the true human and Christian principles, and they lay the solid foundations for an anti- solution Judaism of the social question.

But I'll stop there; I've already been quite bold enough. And I greatly fear that many wise minds, from the In their high esteem, they don't hurl insults at me. From Festus to Saint Paul: "You have lost your head; "Too much reading has clouded your brain: Insa“Nis Paule; multe te litteræ ad insaniam convert< tunt. »

GONGEESION.

Sai said the danger; Pai indicated the feinédés.

Everyone, I believe, will recognize the danger; few will try the remedies. They will be declared inapplicable eables, disagreeing with the principles of the modern society, contrary to this solemn stupidity- the one that is called common law: in short, Von will practically conclude that nothing should be done.

The Jewish quarter will continue its course of conquests, and then what will happen? Listen:

— “The tide of popular vengeance is rising
"and rises ceaselessly with iniquity and threat"
"to break through its dam, and it's easy to predict"
"The hour of catastrophe. Already the braële inipur of the prevailing religion, the coryphaeus of the Thurii- The warriors of the golden calf cried: The Barbarians are at our doorstep. Yes, you're right, the Barbarians are at our doorstep... and when they threaten A world that is too old is, as Salvien said, that the infamies of this world have filled the measure and that it is time to regenerate it.

R

HAS

"Because this is where the social war begins," I tell you; the war of those who have not against those who possess; the war of the affwar against the well-fed; a merciless war of reaction and extermination... (4) »

"The new power, the Boyrsico- feudalism third party invaded everything, replaced everything; it alone has the privilege of arousing passions, of exciting enthusiasm and hatred, to make the hearts, to reveal life... |

"His spirit pervaded all of Europe. Of all shares arise movable property loans, cobankers' alliances, mergers, agglomerations capital and business ratios in the image about what's happening here... |
"There is no turning back now; this must happen." the situation has a way out; and there are only two possible — or the triumph of the system, that is-

(1) Toussenel.

"

that is to say, the large-scale expropriation of the country, the concentration of capital, of labor under all its forms, for the benefit of a handful of insatiable croupiers, — or liquidation (1). »
"The ministry is publishing this and is making me a crime for having..."
He demanded the Rothschild estate be stripped of its assets.
So forget about French history. Is it that in old France they did not establish court chambers to make the financiers; are the prosecutors of the time they did not demand the annihilation of their ill-gotten gains?

"What the old royalty dared to do was..."
financial thieves, the governments modern ones can no longer do so: because the financiers-
The ciers were the kings of the time.

"The feudal lords lay in ambush in crossroads for collecting taxes on passing merchants; financiers lying in wait in the Bank to put pressure on the commerce and industry.

"Convicted or acquitted, we will continue" to denounce the Rothschilds and the thieves of the finance, to stir up popular anger against their crimes, until the day when, having arrived

(1) Proudhon.

"in power by the Eveheitils, kotis potn"
"them locked up at Mazäé and (their fepréñtFe all “Fes big volas to your nation (1). 3

Totisséfiel, Proudhon, Léfafgié prephetident Pavenir. Seduced, endkvés, 6k plotted pat 18 Jaiverie fiferñätiônalé, you have fejété [at Péfernté sétiale based on stif 14 Christian justice hd, seale eapabé de to rebuke socialism: të Sediahsmeé; Reuvel Attila, Chéimitiéra terfible et tttdiphatt à tra¥ers
the world; confused with an EbfhmMané feine,
– Jews, vassals and serfs of the Jews: Vétis raver pès willed by Jesus Christ: you sure Batrabas; and Dieii Haurd pas tött.

(1) Lafargue before you eout a' assists de le Sding. .

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF CONTENTS

FIRST PREFACE BY MR. EDOUARD DRUMONT..... Street

FOREWORD......... CO 200... erere
e

PART ONE

THE JEW. – THE JEWISH CONQUEST

Cuar. ler. – The plan........... located ee dec

THE INSTRUMENTS OF CONQUER

Cuar. I], – Gold........ ETAR eee ere Dessert
Chapter III. – The press.......... PR ce denaws Cuar. IV. – Worldly influence..... indie

Cuar. V. – Politics and the Israelite Alliance at the University saddle... icssioresessceeisesesiesses

Chapter VI. – Jewry and the Revolution.........,..

PART TWO

THE REMEDY.

Chapter 1 — The Moral Remedy.............. nan 89
Cuar. I]. — The political remedy................... 99
Section III. — The economic and social remedy........ 105 CONCLUSION. .... cece re sitio desc ia ss 123
i omm

4276. — ABBEVILLE. TYP. AND STER. A. RETAUX. — 1887.

X Sa? Ps 4€ iB Bo ALT ASP awe aes ee * ae
Wings thot VAE AT TA f eee 5N poes VIAN ÉDOUARD DACHORS eee
) "3 years

ILLUSTRATED

Scenes, Views, Portraits, Maps, Reproductions |

DRAWINGS BY OUR EARLY ARTISTS 4 oe

La Presse was right to say that, if the appearance. ae ee
France Juive had been an event, the publication in edition
The exhibition of Mr. Drumont's work was another event.

This edition, as conceived by the author, okay — with the publisher and artists, adorned with remarkable illustrations, historical pages treated with exceptional care, with eee 'a Reproductions and graphic documents borrowed from the Ebtempes!= cs at the Carnavalet Museum, etc., will form a large-format volume, — and the most precious, the most interesting, the most curious. Dr.

our era, a volume whose place is predetermined by all libraries.

The complete work will cost 42 francs.
It will consist of four parts.

Each part is sold separately for 3 francs:

The first part has been on sale since April 1st, 1887.
The second part will be published on July 15, 1887. TIMES
Part three will be published on November 1, 4887. ws EN – Part four will be published on February 14, 1888.
apr to

To receive each part free of charge, simply send 3 francs.
by postal order or stamps, to Mr. Henri GAUTIER, Publisher,
| B3, Quai des Grands-Augustins, Paris. re

'You can subscribe to the complete work now'
+ FO ee

If

Paris. – Imp. G. Rougier et Cie, 4, rue + Cokes oe

This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google Books

https://books.google.com

Google

About this book

This is a digital copy of a work that has been preserved for generations on library shelve precaution by Google as part of a project aimed at allowing internet users to discover the line.

Because this book is relatively old, it is no longer protected by copyright law and is now

“Belonging to the public domain” means that the book in question has never been subject tc Expiration. The conditions required for a book to enter the public domain can vary from cc
These are all links to the past. They bear witness to the richness of our history, our cul too often difficult for the public to access.

The footnotes and other marginal annotations present in the original volume are reproducec of the long journey the book has taken from the publishing house through the library to fi

Instructions for use

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize works in the public domain and make thus accessible to all. These books are indeed the property of everyone and we are simply However, this is a costly project. Therefore, and in order to continue disseminating these necessary measures to prevent potential abuses by third-party merchant sites, in particula technical constraints related to automated queries.

We also ask you to:

+ Do not use the files for commercial purposes. We designed the Google Books Search progra
We therefore ask that you use these files for personal purposes only. They may not be usec any commercial purpose.

+ Do not perform automated requests. Do not send any automated requests whatsoever to the research concerning translation software, optical character recognition, or any other fiel For large amounts of text, please do not hesitate to contact us. We encourage the use of works and documents belonging to the public domain and we would be happy to be of service

+ Do not remove the attribution. The Google watermark contained in each file is essential and allow them to access more documents through the Google Books Search Program. Do not de No cases.

+ Stay within the law. Whatever use you intend to make of the files, remember that it is y Be sure to respect the law. If a work is in the American public domain, do not assume that other countries. The legal duration of copyright for a book varies from country to country
The works whose use is authorized and those whose use is not. Don't assume that simply pos Book search means that it can be used in any way anywhere in the world. The sentence to wh
The penalties you would face in the event of copyright infringement could be severe.

About the Google Books Search service

By facilitating searches and access to a growing number of books available in many languag contribute to promoting cultural diversity through Google Books Search. Indeed, the Google allows internet users to discover the world's literary heritage, while helping authors and online searches in the full text of this work can be found at http://books.qoogqle.com

–

.
.
–
~

has ry

+
–0
if
=

rr

one rev

—— awry
<=
> b
+$
–emea

1557 ro

gold

"t. > res

–

+.

Pe OP SP ews

=.

aes hand hs re

and be gg

glass

ver jer 7 she —en
rrr'

reser. is 27222

D:

>

“_ororere

"ii

+

EE om des. nl
+

not Moata
irr

~–

iy" Py a

+
did

vo ee aid
–
did es Gre > are
–
>
screw

#2 hid

hi = to er > one Sb ee weap ee pe pee < –
POMR teper r aa rr
CP ed D aa © À P '
“
eyy
=
D 4

i~

Prerio 77 ~

+

ro.
oor

And

zi

"re ps and re.

>

i =. -oi oe
See ae

es Sed ied tel te ge S46 ere E

$ r ah eh, a ce eth
rrr

oer oe red
" e reste

I̥-

ws

a lad row nar ab Re eh el oe

pt reg be
'ono me.

and ey ware

at ea. a ean Ol nk a ee

ARLES De bel ne ae 24 2

"Tor

t br
4 i Fe '$ si
– b abe
È E SH As tors H ++ + $ rea' t 1 i ity r LE > ter pr?' n
| CENTER te
4 rs HA $120 sit .
ate ate tae f
$ pe ta H brake f
Ijt te HE hotel? +e tole ite HAE s
+: HN RIT Apria St
+ } The `~ tent to: The re ir $4 baby mne H at rie: rand beberle jà
sae rt 35 pol
4 tet ot $o abe A, + *
+
4 PV

ate 4 o WERI

old dk ad +4

7 bi

t £
–

aims

LA Ed)

Hs

e+?

Pe eee

J

gold 22

Sx}

+

The To

–
tase

you

is > p ttt

ae

J
"
st +f. t;
| ts Ps "5
> – vd“ :
tit is | DH rtf
yet rhet rotor) fot
HiFi II
$ L +
+ t pe
| 4 ri
Let:
f pr rh
d 7 ees

i.e.

+

~

4.

>

+4
ves"

-
pa

be

~ 9s hs oe

summer AMEN)

teya

~ > -ha ka i
74 hie het 14 rel | 14-24
a +

Has

> Ree aap
pe

7

Breet tst RE
i {-head h
" at h ofat
« 1 > Teb + rei (212128 rer e d b APRS EL y what eet eee oe oat +=? porebet hte ty terate ji ` eres acer RARE: AMAR LERSE Set DD EL PIE Seb eee PET NTI EEE pot eter iiice Tere) pepeten tet pope heads ot Dehetre appt phat MARAIS
+ in to Tb bab ener Patate ert etetetst to

```
LAETUS RME EST STI ES
< | pi PORK PR PR RTE T ee abe t RE aN
F Here PET Tee Ve PTE stopper ee popat dt head gone? +5 inpar et Pons apr ere seit ai erst (PTE
Tatters Ares Mt | :
$i preg gatte
n $ 5 .
2 Ab d
> + 4
Well?
3 pepper ' +
put SA ht 4 + eters ut De r+ r A Te) Orn aeeese ee S ibe Fte tóte
x. ad, "2 mothers. IT Lars ve! steht i — ++ if LEE +
var Silda tar PTT AES bles eeteteterscsees MAMMRMAT AUTO SRE TEE ANNEE
pe bape? +> iets +4 1122 AE ra Liberte bere > 4 over l potab poetot tE Pop otal a!
TIN Ah The ra To tests = alerereterrt thee eebeb rt ore ees) abeio baby tE Iil pptetete Hiisi TELE ES? hi
NOTE TE TM EE Tree head MANTETETITE ATELIER eas with ete res ria ots otetorerer rte * rebate? stotrteteceerpeeererele? PARTI to ith 'Sapete reper aa Hii as beret a ats “= aboot Licecret HEADS rer per ister fafei bes FN Te pets iat ate re 1141250 tr TR PTT TT Lit headtetat Hi Free tr Arete stereo tnt 11274) ie aero Ry Spe ee Pe rert Pl eb abareneret ete “7 — + ? he tee ET DE ET ire Tes me Et et Ee Are TT ST stat eerte
CURE Pete PAPIT EL > AERIS MM tofs tsee DT LE cbr Pers RATS LE Ter
4 te tpl SP TE verbs art etehehet " pltabeheeeertals MATE > vert lotitete va MIPE patot TETE, peters he t— ' been RTs peek PTE Lhote tel een saree atir
+ ote tt hehehe ha P Rare A 4 parent aperet NL esdee + sagehe) het er eres tr rotetatet hrs RIRIELEILL t het meters arte bet LIe rset trhepehei ris Title In baby beast ts) porat rberereteperet err or ers ore tT a toretet x Lérretetetehehet MELLE L Me Dtoretr head Distetehe tors Toprepet te rbebetercte:
oto Vi Lose here tare ete ie pre LEtter Peped eter re pi eee seetisisarsreter ti licasaweee Forepererresrjeeterel summer SM HE MH Here tent
ete te '+ Paper phe t | 4 A heireppretcteteretstn
p. bis sistere ebere ete Sope:
Li iioreteteteate e Piippo rti iii
Peboparabsterebctetrts shareperrterP tr TETELE a popitereto DIN RS
```

– b$ “ 2 to 7 J 5 ae beh terer ae PRE
Lore? aa 1 popoe top} te $ betorr Peters t L > toretste
AMD TES + Pht oe rt MIN AMENER
Morte Li poeeparetet> aud +i she bebe MAMMA
LOTO RTE HEAD TO HEAD
4 popeners pa porene ers ….
+ i

HRHURNE
t$ ARTE TES SRE
'ga pateg ortin Tg ré to “4 reqepeteceietet opti
l eae ate! jipe QUIL EE pitt riers se

erent nh Oe {tot 497 ot.
wt Lr Lae states my

IT
go

2, st

ee nd ||
–
+

|
!
|
$
1
1

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

j

HAS

YEARS
P I have to go"

+

your

A PRESEUR re
teats 2 LES, Wiss y

"AND and YOU"
GTR PUR LS ER

be stk

uc
THE Me, at

ae

nis

soogle |

aa ©

PERSON

481575 to be

-4

THE ANTI-CHRISTIAN CONSPIRACY |

ms Lo Fi ÉsÈus

DOCTOR OF THEOLOGY

The Conspiracy
ANTI-CHRISTIAN

The Masonic Temple wanting to rise from the ruins of the Church
The powers of hell do not prevail
She.

they won't be against it (MATTHEW 16:18)

ED VOLUME I

Saint Augustine Society

Desclée, De Brouwer and Co.
LILLE, 41, Rue du Metz

NIHIL OBSTAT:

Insulis, die November 11, 1910.

IT, QUILLIET, s. th. d.
librorum censor.

IMPRIMATUR

Cameraci, die November 12, 1910.

A. MASSART, vic. gen.
Domus Pontificiæ Antistes.

DAL VATICANO, October 23, 1910.

SEGRETERIA DI STATO DI SUA SANTITA

has

MONSIGNOR,

The Holy Father Pius X received with a paternal interest the work entitled: "The Anti-Conspiracy "Christian," which you asked me to give to Him on your behalf.

His Holiness warmly congratulates you on having successfully completed the composition of this work important and suggestive, following a long series studies that also do credit to your zeal and to your ardent desire to serve God's cause and of the Holy Church.

The guiding principles of your fine work are those that inspired the great Catholic historians liques: God's action in the events of this world, the fact of Revelation, the establishment of the supernatural order, and the resistance that the spirit of the

Monsignor Henri Delassus, Prelude from the Pope's House, Lille.

evil opposes the work of Redemption. You mon-will you go to the abyss where the antagonism between the Christian civilization and the so-called civilization which regresses towards paganism. How many you You are right to establish that social renewal does not will only be able to do so through the proclamation of the rights of God and the Church!

Expressing his gratitude to you, the Holy Father made wishes so that you can, with a health still robust, fully realize the summary plan that you have drawn up for yourself, and as

As a token of his particular kindness, he sends you
The Blessing to the post-obligatory.

With my personal thanks and congratulations-Please accept, Your Excellency, the assurance of my most devoted sentiments in Our Lord.

Cardinal MERRY DEL VAL.

| FL Warie PRESERVED FROM ORIGINAL SIN ~ IN VIEW OF THE MERITS OF
'OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST'

God said to the serpent: I will put inifriendships between you and the Woman, between your pos-truth and its posterity. This one will meartrira to the head. And you will bruise her at the heel.

(GENESIS, CH. III, 15).

The Church and the Temple.
2

The two French editions of THE PROBLEM
The current ones are sold out. Resten' a few copies of the Italian version (1).
Booksellers are requesting that this work be put back into print so they can respond.
to the requests of their clients.

The author did not feel it necessary to limit himself to a TEMPTATION.

The problem that Americanism had with a-edge presented to his meditations is soon which in his mind had become that of the Revolution then that of modern civilization which dates of the Renaissance.

Today, he designs it in an amplifier an even greater study: this is the problem of the resistance that naturalism opposes to the state supernatural that God has deigned to offer to his Intelligent creatures. Thus considered, the
The problem encompasses all times. It arose to the creation of angels, in the earthly paradise, in the desert where Christ chose to submit to the temptation; it will remain a question, for Christendom and for each of us, until the end of the
world. |

1: Desclée et Cie, Rome, Piazza Grazioli, Palazzo Doria; Lille 41, rue du Metz.

To redo the work, which is exhausted from this point of view offered advantages. After careful consideration
The author preferred to section off his work.

The problem was thus posed: there is a struggle between Christian civilization which is in pos-state session and modern civilization which wants to supplant her; she will be the product of this antagonism? =

… Of the three questions;

That of the Jew and the Freemason who are well today, in everyone's eyes, the besieged giants of the Catholic citadel.

That of Democracy which is, according to the asstigating themselves, the mother suggestion of which they use it to undermine civilization-Christian tion in the or and consequently within institutions.

That of religious, social and family that the ruins already command heaped up and those that are antichristian will do it again. NE |

These three questions have been intimately linked.
in the book entitled The: Problem of the Hour present. The author thought it best to include them.
in order to be able to process each of them ™ a. background.

The question of the Himoa ae taken up again in the work which has just been published under this liter. * SOCIAL TRUTHS AND Sn and CRITICS.

The question of the anti-Christian conspiracy yours, whose soul is the Judeo-Masonic sect and arms is the subject of this book.

The author did not stop to search the origins of the sect; he is not attached to study it from various points of view where others _ publicists have positioned themselves. What he wanted To highlight is the part of the action that ba Judeo-Masonic sect delivered in the war to the Catholic institution and the Christian idea, and the aim of this war. This aim is to seize humanity to the supernatural order founded on the Redemption of the divine Savior and to fix it definitively within naturalism.

We will still need to talk about the renovation. cannot be the result of the restoration of ` The Authority:

Dien's authority over his work, pan particularly on intelligent creatures;

The authority of Our Lord Jesus Christ, the new | A damn, on humanity which he redeemed through his blood and of which he is the Lord by his person- divine nature;

The Church's authority over the Denis. endowed with Christian civilization and who will rush into his arms under the pressure of the distress into which the progress of the modern civilization;

The authority of the princely families over the nations that they have made;

The father's authority in his family and that ancestors on the FE of which they were the principle;

Finally, the right of ownership over property whose family or individual have become the authors through their work and virtues,

and not on wealth acquired through pity:
and injustice.

The Renovation requires this sixfold restoration ration. Sz it does not begin to occur under Little by little, the family, civil, religious society will plunge into the abyss toward which she runs with a speed that accelerates every day.

With this third task completed, there would be re-to construct the synthesis from which the solution would emerge
the explanation of the enigma that worries generations contemporary and which would project its light on the future of humanity.

The author, who has been in his seventies for five years, does not can hope to fulfill such a task. Please God, if it is in His plan, to entrust her to whoever can bring it to a successful conclusion.

I

STATE OF THE QUESTION

`

CHAPTER ONE

o THE TWO CIVILIZATIONS

vy

The Syllabus of Pius IX ends with this pro-
A reprehensible and condemned position: |

"The Roman Pontiff can and must reconcile and to compromise with progress, liberalism and civilization-modern station.

-The latest proposal for the decree that we have ap-Pelé, the Syllabus of Pius X, a proposal also condemnable and condemned, is thus conceived:

"Today's Catholicism cannot be..."
align with true science, unless one transforms oneself

sea in a non-American Christianity, that is to say-to express in a wise and liberal form of Protestantism.

'It is undoubtedly not without nleahoi that these two proposals were received, in both Syllabus, this place, the last one, appearing there like their conclusion. That is, in effect, they summarize the previous ones and clarify the spirit of it (1).

rity; considers the proposals condemned by the Syllabuses as the very foundations of our society."

v

&

The Church must reconcile itself with civilization modern. And the proposed basis for this reconciliation-tion, it is not the acceptance of the data of the true science, which the Church has never repudiated, which has always favored, to whose progress she has always applauded and contributed more than anyone else
So be it; but the abandonment of revealed truth, abandonment which would transform Catholicism into Protestantism-broad and liberal ism in which all men they might meet, regardless of their ideas about God, his revelations and his commandments comments. This, say the modernists, is only through this liberalism that the Church can see in new days opening up before her, securing the honor of ento enter into the ways of modern civilization and of
to move with progress.

All the errors reported in both

'Syllabuses are presented as the various clauses

---

1. The members of the deliberation on the law concerning freedom of education Higher education, Mr. Challeme!-Lacourt said: "The Univers-Catholic universities will want to prepare in the future me-doctors, lawyers, judges, assistants of the mind ca-Catholic who will seek to support and apply the principles Syllabus of Errors. Now France, in its vast majority-of the treaty proposed for signature by the Eclis for this reconciliation with the world, for its admissionsion in the modern city.

Modern civilization. Therefore, there is civilization and Civilization? So there was one before the so-called modern era. a civilization other than the one enjoyed by, or of the less than what the world of our time pursues?

Indeed, there has been, and still is in France and In Europe, a civilization called civilization Christian.

What distinguishes these two civilizations? they ?

By their conception of the end ofthe nature of man, and by the various and even effects opposites that one and the other conception produce in the social order as well as in the private order.

"Man's entire purpose is to be happy." said Bossuet (1). This is not unique to him: it is the goal towards which all intelligences strive without exception. The great orator is not lacking. to recognize it': "Intelligent natures do not have of will and desire except for their happiness.” And He adds: "Nothing could be more reasonable, for what is there to better than wishing well, that is to say the happiness? (2) ». We also find in the heart man has an invincible impulse that drives him in search of happiness. Even if he wanted it, he could notwould get rid of it. That's the basis of all his thoughts. sées, the great driving force behind all his actions; and then The very fact that he throws himself into death is that he persuade find in the void a fate preferable to thishim where he sees himself.

Man can be mistaken, and indeed he is mistaken often in the search for happiness, in the choosing the path that will lead him there. "Putting the Happiness wherever it is found is the source of all good, he said. Bossuet again; and the source of all evil is the putting where it shouldn't be (3). Cola is also true for: society as well as for the individual. The impulse-The path to happiness comes from the Creator, and God is there adds the light that illuminates its path, direct- through his grace, indirectly through the teachings the teachings of his Church. But it belongs to man, Whether individual or society, it belongs to free will. to head, to go and find his happiness where he It's nice to put it in what is truly good.

1. Meditations on the Gospel.

2. Bossuet's Oratorical Works. Edition that and comp- ae aoe Abbot J. Lebarq. | Sermon for All Saints' Day,

5. Meditation on the Gospel.

and, above all goodness, in the absolute Good, God; or in what only has the appearance of good, or which is only a relative good.

From the very beginning of humankind, man has misled. Instead of believing in the word of God and to obey his command, Adam listened to the enchanting voice telling him to put an end to his

within himself, in the satisfaction of his sensuality, in the ambitions of his pride. "You will be com- "me of the gods"; "the fruit of the tree is good to eating, beautiful to behold, and of an exciting appearance "Desire." Having thus deviated, from the very first step, Adam led his race in the wrong direction that he had just taken.

She walked there, she advanced there, she plunged into it for many centuries. History is there to tell us. the hardships she encountered during this long period of wandering. God had mercy on her. In his council of infinite misery- With mercy and infinite wisdom, he resolved to hand over man on the path to true happiness. And in order to to make his intervention more effective, he wanted a A divine person came to earth to show the way- by his word, pave the way by his example.

r

-

The Word of God became incarnate and came to spend thirty-three years |

years among us, to pull us from the path of perdition and open for us the path to a happiness not misleading.

His words and his actions overturned all the preconceived ideas until then. IT said: Blessed are Poor! Blessed are the meek, the peacemakers, the Merciful! Blessed are the pure! Until He,
We had said: Blessed are the rich! Blessed Those who rule! Blessed are those who are in to the point of denying their passions nothing! He was - Born in a stable, he had made himself the servant of

He had all suffered death and passion, so that one he did not take his words for declamations, but for lessons, the most persuasive lessons that one could conceive, given that they were given by a God and a God who annihilated himself out of love for us.

He wanted to perpetuate them, to make them always speak-yourselves and acting, in the eyes and ears of all the generations that were to come. For this, he founded of the Holy Church, established at the center of humanity,
She has never ceased, through the teachings of her doctors and the examples of his saints, to tell all those that she saw pass before her eyes: "You are looking for-Among 6 mortals, happiness, and you are looking for a good thing; just be careful that you Look for it where it isn't. You're looking for it on the earth, and it is not there that it is established, nor that we find these happy days that the Divine Psalmist: Diligil dies videre bonos... These are Here are the days of misery, the days of sweat and to-valleys, days of groaning and penance to the-

which we can apply the words of the pro-Phetius Isaiah: “My people, those who say to you, ‘Heu-’
"They mislead you and overturn all your conduct."
And again: "Those who make the people believe that it is "Happy are deceivers." So where are we to find-to happiness and true life, if not in the earth
Of the living? Who are the happy men, if not Those who are with God? They see beautiful things days, because God is the light that illuminates them.
Those people live in abundance, because God
"is the treasure that enriches them. These, finally, are uh-reux, because God is the good that satisfies them and _ that he alone is all to all (1).

Dour oratories. by Bossuet. Sermon for All Saints' Day,
vV, è li |

From the 1st to the 13th century, the peoples became increasingly attentive to this discourse, and the number of those who made it the light and the rule of their Life grew larger and larger. No doubt, there had failings, failings of nations and de-failings of the soul.

But the new conception of life remained the law of all, the law that the errors did not make to lose sight of and to which everyone knew, everyone felt they said that they had to come back as soon as they had moved away from it Our Lord Jesus Christ, with his New Testament, the doctor listened to, the guide followed.
The king obeyed. His kingship was acknowledged to this extent by princes and peoples, that they proclaimed it even on their coins. Engraved on all of them the cross, the august symbol of the idea that Christianity had introduced into the world, which was the principle of the new civilization, of Christian civilization, which was to govern it, the spirit of sacrifice opposed to the pagan idea, the spirit of enjoyment that had made Ancient civilization, pagan civilization.

As the Christian spirit penetrated souls and the peoples, souls and peoples ascended into the light and goodness, they rose by that alone that they saw their happiness above and that they would move there-

They were silent. Hearts were becoming purer, minds smarter. The intelligent and the pure introled to a more harmonious order in society, the one that Bossuet described to us in the sermon on the eminent dignity of the poor. The most perfect order, made peace more general and deeper; peace and order brought prosperity, and all these things that opened doors to the arts and sciences,
These reflections of light and the beauty of the hollows.
so that, as Montesquieu observed: "The the Christian religion, which seems to have no other purpose that the bliss of the afterlife still makes our goodhappiness in this one (1). » This is also what saint Paul had announced when he said, "Pietas ad omnia utilis est, promisees habens vite que nunc is and future. Piety is useful in everything, having the pro-

masses of this life and those of the future

1. The Spirit of the Laws, Book XXIV, Chapter III.

Mr. de Tocqueville therefore gave a reason which is not the only one, nor even the main one, but that it is It's good to point this out.

"In centuries of faith, the ultimate goal of the life after life. The men of those times became accustomedtherefore naturally, and, so to speak without the desiredormouse, to consider for a long series of years a stationary object towards which they constantly walk, ct
They learn, through imperceptible progress, to repress a thousand: small, fleeting desires to better arrive at sato satisfy this great and persistent desire that torments them.
When these same men want to take care of things
From the earth, these habits are found again. They fix volontiers to their actions here below a general and certain goaltain, towards which all their efforts are directed. We do not sees no point engaging in daily attempts to nouthey have fixed plans that they will not They tire of continuing.

This explains why religious peoples have suwind accomplished such lasting things. It so happened that in occupied with the other world, they had encountered the great The secret to success in this is that religions give the-general habit of behaving with a view to the future. In These are no less useful to the happiness of this life is more important than the happiness of the other. It is one of their most major political aspects. But as the lights faith becomes dim, men's sight becomes distorted greenhouse, and it seems that every day the object of the actions Humans seem closer to them.

"Once they have become accustomed to no longer occupying themselves with..."
per of what is to happen after their lives, we see them easily fall back into this complete and bru- indifference tale of the future which is all too consistent with certain instincts of the human species. As soon as they have perdue to the practice of placing their main hopes in the long term In the long run, they are naturally inclined to achieve without reand their every desire, and it seems that from the moment

re (1). » Had not Our Lord himself said:
“Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness.”
(2) This
This was not a promise of a supernatural order, but the announcement of the consequences that were expected to emerge logically [unclear] of the new direction given to gender human.

Indeed, can we not see that the spirit of poverty and purity of heart dominates passions, sources of all the tortures of the soul and all the troubles social. Clemency, pacification, and mediation.
Mercy produces harmony, makes peace reign between citizens and within the city. The love of justice, even when traversed by persecution and suffering France, elevates the soul, ennobles the heart and provides it the healthiest pleasures; at the same time it elevates the moral level of society.

What kind of society is it where the Beatitudes preached?
would be placed in full view of everyone, as but to pursue, and where would be offered to all means of attaining perfection and bliss marked by the Sermon on the Mount:

Blessed are those who have a spirit of poverty!

Blessed are the meek! m:

Blessed are those who mourn!

Blessed are those who hunger and thirst for righteousness!

where they despair of living an eternity, they are dispositioned to act as if they were only to exist as one our.

i » In centuries of unbelief, it is therefore always a fear that men will constantly engage in ha- daily sardine of their desires, and that, renouncing utterly to obtain what cannot be acquired without long efforts strong, they do not build anything great, peaceful, or sustainable. "

1. I Tim., IV, 8 | O
2. Matt, VI, 88. 0: og SEO

Blessed are the merciful!

Blessed are the pure in heart!

Blessed are the peacemakers!

Blessed are those who suffer persecution for the - Justice! |

The ascension, I will not say of holy souls, but nations, reached its peak in the 13th century key. Saint Francis of Assisi and Saint Dominic, with their disciples Saint Louis of France and Saint Elisa- Beth of Hungary, accompanied and followed by so many others very, maintained for some time the level which had had been affected by the emulation that had been excited in the souls the examples of detachment from things of this world, charity for one's neighbor, and love of God, whom so many other saints had given. But while these noble souls reached the highest high peaks of holiness, many others were cooling in their fervor towards God; and towards at the end of the 14th century, the a retreating movement that swept through society and which has brought about the current situation, that is to say the triumph next, the imminent reign of socialism, term obliged to modern civilization. For while the Christian civilization elevated souls and tended to give people social peace and prosperity even temporal, the leaven of pagan civilization, tends to produce its final effects; the pursuit by all of all pleasures, war, to seize them to procure, from man to man, from class to class, from people against people; a war that could never end than by the annihilation of humankind.

CHAPTER II

THE DUAL CONCEPTION OF LIFE

Christian civilization stems from a conception of life other than the one that had given birth to pagan civilization.

Paganism, pushing humankind onto the slope where original sin had led, he said to the man he is on earth to enjoy life and the goods that this world offers him. The pagan does not ambifunctioned, sought nothing beyond; and society paganism was also established to procure these goods. abundant and these pleasures also refined or also crude as they may be, to those who were in in a position to claim it. Ancient civilization was Departing from this principle, all its institutions in decmilks, especially the two main ones, slavery and war. For nature is not generous enough, and especially since it had not been cultivated for long enough long enough and good enough to provide for all coveted pleasures. Strong peoples subjugatewove the weak peoples, and the citizens put enslave foreigners and even their brothers for to create wealth producers and instruments moments of pleasure.

Christianity came, and made man understand that he should look in 'another direction' happiness, the need for which constantly torments him. fl overturned the pagan's notion of the present life. The divine Savior taught us through his His word, persuaded us by his death and resurrection, that if this present life is life, it is not THE LIFE to which his Father destines us.

This life is merely a preparation for life eternal. That is the path that leads to thathere. We are x via, said the scholastics, bringing us to our destination, en route to the Heavens. Today's scientists would express the same idea. by saying that the earth is the laboratory where they are formed souls, where fa-supernatural cults of which the Christian, after completingment, will enjoy the celestial abode. Such is the embryonic lifeborn within the mother's womb. It is also a life, but a A life of learning, where the senses that will to function during a terrestrial stay: the eyes that connature will be templed, and hearing will gather its harmonies, Ja voix qui y mulera ses chants, etc.

In heaven, we will see God face to face (1), that is the A great promise is made to us. The whole religion is based on it. And yet no created nature is not capable of this vision.

---

1. Vidimus nunc per speculum in enigmate: tunc autem facie ad faciem. Nunc cognosco ex parte: tunc autem cognoscam sicut cognitus sum. (I Cor., XIII-12.) Now we see in a mirror and in an enigma: but then we We'll see each other face to face. Now I know imperfectly: but then I will know as I am known (by intuitiontion.) (Conf. Mat., XVIII-10. I Joan, III-2.)

The Council of Florence defined: Anime sanctorum.. antuentur clare ipsum Deum trinum et unum siculi est: 'The souls of the saints clearly see God himself as he is in the trinity of his persons and the unity of his nature.

All living beings have their own way of communicating. to be born, limited by their very nature. The plant has a certain knowledge of the juices which must be used vir to its maintenance, since its roots extend towards They seek them out to ingest them. This con-
Birth is not a vision. The animal sees, but He lacks the intelligence for things that his eyes perceive. They stir. Man understands these things, his reason...

Penetia, abstracts the ideas they contain and by They rise to the level of science. But the substances of things remain hidden from him, because man is not than a rational animal and not a pure intelligence.
Angels, being pure intelligences, see themselves in their substance, can contemplate directly substances of the same nature as them and more
The inferior substances are of strong reason. But they do not They can see God. God is a separate substance. of an infinitely higher order. The greatest effort of the human mind has come to define it as an "Act"
"pure," and Revelation has told us that it is a tri-unit of persons in substance, the second generated by the first, the third proceeding - of the other two, and this in a life of intelligence and of love that has neither beginning nor end. See God as he is, to love him as he loves himself — which is the promised bliss — is beyond the powers of all created and even possible nature. For the com-taking it should be nothing less than legal of God.

But what does not belong naturally can to occur through the free gift of God. And this is:
We know this because God told us he has Done. This is for the angels, and this is for us.
The good angels see God face to face, and we
we are destined to enjoy the same happiness.

ei
on sqan:
this €

Dies

is i,

3 TO horn er Ja aga."

per

esti

4 vols!

We
no:

We can only achieve this through something. of added value that elevates us above our nature, which makes us capable of what we are radically powerless on our own, like the would be the gift of reason to an animal, or the gift of the view of a plant. This something is called heredown with sanctifying grace. This, says the holy apostle Peter, a participation in the divine nature. And he It must be so; for we have just seen, in no being does the operation exceed, cannot surpassto understand the nature of this being. If one day we are to be able to see, that is something of The divine will have been deposited within us, will have become a part of us of our being, and will have raised it until it seemsbe to God. “Beloved,” says the apostle Saint John, we are now children of God, and what we will be one day does not yet seem: we him will be similar, because we will see it as such

that he is.” (1 John, III-2.)

This something, we receive it right here below at Holy Baptism. The apostle Saint John calls it a seed. (1 John 3:9), that is, a life in principle. It is what Our Lord was showing us, when he par'milk to Nicodemus of the need for a new birthsance, from one generation to a new life: life that the Father has within himself, which he gives to the Son, and that the Son brings us by grafting us onto him through holy Baptism. This word of grafting, which gives such a vivid image of the whole mystery, Saint Paul had taken from Our Lord saying to his apostles: “I am the vine, you are the branches. Like The branch cannot bear fruit by itself, without to remain in the vineyard, so you too, if you "Do not remain in me."

These lofty ideas were familiar to the early Christians. This is shown by the fact that the apostles, when they are led to speak about it in the Epistles,
They treat it as if it were something already known. And indeed,
This is how they were presented in long Catechism classes on the rites of baptism. Then, the clothes.
The white novices told them that they were beginning-
They were starting a new life, that they were part of it for this life in the days of childhood: Spiritual sons, their was-
He said, like newborn children, ardently desire-
The milk that must nourish your supernatural life:
the milk of faith without alteration, sine dolo lac concu-Piscite, and the milk of divine charity. When the the development of the germ you received will Having reached its end, this faith will become the clear vision, this charity, the beatitude of divine love.

All of present life should strive towards this flourishing.
ment, to the transformation of the old man, of the man-
me of pure nature and even of fallen nature, in the deified man. That is what is done here below in The faithful Christian. The supernatural, infused virtues
In our 4th year at baptism, they develop during the day in a day through the exercise we give them with the help of grace, and thus make her capable of supernatural activities that she will have to carry out in Heaven. Entering heaven will be like birth, like Baptism was the act of creation.

This is what it is. This is what Jesus did and what He came to inform humankind. From then on, the conception of present life was radically changed
age. Man was no longer on earth to enjoy and to die, but to prepare for the life above and to deserve it.

ENJOY, DESERVE, these are the two words that characterize which separate, which oppose the two civilizations stations.

This is not to say that from the moment the chrisTianism was preached, men no longer thought to nothing other than their sanctification. They concontinued to pursue the secondary goals of life present, and to be filled, in the family and the sosociety, the functions they require, and the duties they entail that they impose. Moreover, sanctification does not... Father, point only through spiritual exercises. but by fulfilling all duties of state, by any act done with purity of intention. "Somethingwhatever you do, said the apostle Saint Paul, in paroin works, do everything in the name of Our Lord. Lord Jesus Christ... Work to please God by all things, and you will bear fruit in every good artwork. » (Ad Colos., I-10 and III-17.)

They remained in society and will remain there. until the end of time, the two categories of men my which Holy Scripture so aptly calls: the good and the bad guys. It should be noted, however, that the number of villains decreases and the number of good things increase as faith takes hold. worse in society. These, because they have faith in eternal life, love God, do good, observe They promote justice and are benefactors of their brothers. and through all this they establish security in society Faith and peace. These, because they do not have faith, because their gaze remains fixed on this earth, they are. selfish, without love, without pity for their fellow men bles: enemies of all good, they are in society a cause of unrest and a standstill for civilization.

Mixed together, the good and the bad, Believers and non-believers make up the two cities. described by Saint Augustine: "Self-love going so far as to despise God constitutes the sosociety commonly called "the world", love of God carried to the point of self-contempt produces the holytété and people "the heavenly life".

As the new conception of life apbrought to earth by Our Lord Jesus Christ, It entered minds and penetrated hearts, Society changed: the new point of view changed gea the morals, and, under the pressure of ideas and Customs and institutions changed. Slavery The power disappeared, and instead of seeing the powerful subjugate themselves throwing their brothers, they were seen to devote themselves to the point of... Romanism to provide them with the bread of this present life, and also, and above all, to provide them with bread from the spiritual life, to elevate souls and sanctify them. The war was no longer waged to seize territory other people's secrets, and take men and women into slavery, but to break down the obstacles that opposewere concerned with the expansion of the kingdom of Christ and proto cure the slaves of the demon the freedom of the children of God.

To facilitate and promote the freedom of men and women peoples in their efforts towards good, became the but towards which social institutions are moving rent, otherwise always their expressly determined end. And the souls yearned for heaven and worked to reach it. to deserve. The pursuit of temporal goods for the the enjoyment that could be derived from it was no longer the only one: nor even the main focus of Christian activity, at least those who were truly imbued with the es-_ adopted Christianity, but the pursuit of wealth spiritual, the sanctification of the soul, the increase virtues that are both adornment and true delights of earthly life, along with the pledges of. eternal bliss.

The virtues acquired through personal effort are transmitted through the education of one generation to the other; and thus the new hierarchy was gradually formed social order, founded no longer on force and its abuse, but on merit: at the bottom, the families who stopped at the virtue of work; in the middle, those who, knowing how to combine work with moderation in the use of the goods he provided them, founded the property through savings; at the top, those which, freeing themselves giant of selfishness, rose to the sublime verthe duty of devotion to others: people, bourgeoissie, aristocracy. Society was based and families arranged according to the ascending merit of virtues, transupdates from generation to generation.

Such was the work of the Middle Ages. During its course, The Church accomplished a threefold task. It fought against the evil that came from the various sects of the paganism and destroyed it; she transformed the good elements ments that were found among the ancient Romans and the various races of barbarians; finally she did triumph the idea that Our Lord Jesus Christ had a given of true civilization. To achieve this, it had first focused on reforming the heart of man- | me; from there came the reform of the family, the The family had reformed the state and society: the opposite path to the one we want to follow today.

No doubt, believing that, in the order we see- No one was marking, there was no disorder, se- could be mistaken. The ancient spirit, the spirit of the world that Our Lord had anathematized, was never, will never be completely defeated and annihilated. Tou- days, even in the best of times, and when FE-

The church gained the greatest ascendancy over society; There were men of joy and men of prey; but we saw families moving up, 4 reasons for their virtues or decline because of their vices; one saw the peoples distinguish themselves from one another by their civilization, and the degree of civilization, are taken from dominant aspirations in each nation: they are arose when these aspirations were refined and my- were; they regressed when their aspirations led them towards pleasure and selfishness. What- that it should happen, however, that nations, families, individuals vidus abandoned themselves to the instincts of nature or resisted them, the Christian ideal always remained inflexibly maintained under everyone's gaze by the Holy Church.

The impetus given to society by Christianity began to slow down, we have said, in the 11th century key; the liturgy confirms it and the facts demonstrate it. First there was a halt, then a retreat. This retreat, or plu- early on, this new direction was soon so manifest- it was celebrated that it received a name, the RENAISSANCE, renaissance- sance from the pagan point of view in the idea of civilization- sation. And with hindsight came the downfall. "In taking into account all the crises that have been experienced, of all the abuses, of all the shadows on the picture, it is im- It is possible to dispute that the history of France — The same observation applies to the entire Christian republic. ne — is an ascent, like the history of a nation, as long as the Morai influence of the Church dominates there, and that it becomes a fall, despite everything that This fall sometimes has moments of brilliance and epic grandeur.

as soon as writers, scholars, artists and the philosophers replaced the Church and ousted it-rent from his domination (1). » |

1. Mr. Maurice Talmeyr.

CHAPTER III

THE RENAISSANCE, A STARTING POINT OF MODERN CIVILIZATION

In his admirable introduction to the Life of Saint Elisabeth, M. de Montalembert, known as of the 12th century, which was, – at least as far as the past is concerned, –
The apogee of Christian civilization: "Never can-Being the Bride of Christ had not reigned through an empire so absolute in its influence on the thoughts and hearts of peoples.
So, more than at any other time during this harsh fight, love for his children, their devotion boundless, their number and their courage each
The days were waxing, the saints she saw each day to blossom among them, offered to this immortal Mother strength and consolation which she has not experienced since that, too cruelly deprived. By the grace of Innocent III, which continues the work of Gregory VII, Christendom is a vast political unit, a kingdom without border, inhabited by multiple races. The sei-Lords and kings had accepted supremacy - papal. It took the arrival of Protestantism to destroy this work.

Even before Protestantism, a first and well

A severe blow was dealt to the Christian Society as early as 1308. What gave it its strength was, like the said Mr. de Montalembert, the recognized and res-respected by the Sovereign Pontiff, the head of Christendom Tenede, the regulator of Christian civilization.
This authority was contradicted, insulted, and broken by the violence and through the cunning of King Philip IV, in the persecution which he inflicted on Pope Boniface VIII;
It was also diminished by Clé-'s complacency

ment V for this same king, who went so far as to trans-temporarily move the seat of the Papacy to Av-gnon in 1305. Urban VI was not to return to Rome than in 1378. During this long exile, the Popes lost a good part of their independence and prestige sen found himself singularly weakened. When they ren-They returned to Rome after seventy years of absence, all was ready for the great Western schism that was going to lasted until 1416 and who beheaded for a while the Christian world.

From then on, might began to prevail over right.
as before Christ. We saw the wars retake on the pagan character of conquest and lose the character of emancipation. The "eldest daughter" who had slapped his mother in Anagni, suffered the first the consequences of his treachery: the Hundred Years' War Ans, Crécy. Poitiers, Azincourt. Nowadays, for to say nothing of what came before, the occupation of Rome, the expansion of Prussia at the expense Europe's impassivity towards its neighbors the massacre of Christians by the Turks, and the immolationtion of a people to the covetousness of the British empire-Damn, that's all very pagan.

Pastor begins his History of Popes in the Middle Ages:

"The era in which the transformation of Pagan antiquity aside, and apart from Christianity, There is perhaps none more memorable than the a transitional period that links the Middle Ages to the present day modern. It was given the name Renaissance.

"It occurred during a time of relaxation-ment, of a near-general decline in life religious, lamentable period whose characteristics are, from the 14th century onwards, the weakening of the authority of the popes, the invasion of the worldly spirit within the clergy, the decline of philosophy and of scholastic theology, a dreadful disorder in political and civic life. It is under these conditions that was placed before the eyes of an in-mentally and physically overexcited, ill-:
dive in all respects, the deplorable lessons contained in ancient literature.

"Under the influence of excessive admiration, one one might say morbid, for the beauties of writers classics, we frankly waved the banner of paganism; the adherents of this reform claimthey would model everything exactly on antiquity, the customs and ideas, restoring the preponderance of the pagan spirit and radically destroy the state of choits existing form, considered by them as a degenerate revescence.

"The disastrous influence exerted on morality" humanism also made itself felt in a good way. hour and in a frightening way in the area of religion. The adherents of the Renaissance pagans considered their philosophy ancient and the faith of the Church, like two entirely different worlds distinct and without any point of contact. » |

They wanted the man to take his happiness from the earth, with all its strength, all its activity

be employed to procure temporary happiness rel; they said that society's duty is to to organize herself in such a way that she can reach to provide everyone with what they need to satisfy their entire needs drunk and in every direction.

Nothing could be more contrary to doctrine and morality Christians.
"The ancient humanists," as Jean Jans- aptly put it, sen (1), had no less enthusiasm for the magnificent legacy bequeathed by the peoples of antiquit than their successors later had. Before these, they had seen in the study of the antileft one of the most powerful ways to cultivate with human intelligence's success. But in their penthe Greek and Latin classics should not — to be studied with the aim of reaching within them and by They understood the end of all education. They heard the to serve Christian interests; they desirewould, above all, achieve, through them, an indeeper intelligence of Christianity and to theimprovement of moral life. Moved by the same motifs, the Church Fathers had recommended and encouraged the study of ancient languages. The struggle it only began and became necessary when the young humanists rejected all the old theological and philosophical science as not being that barbaric, they claimed that any scientific notiontifique is found only in the ou-works of the ancients, entered into open conflict with the Church and Christianity, and too often threw a challenge to morality.

The same observation applies to artists. "The E-The church, says the same historian (2), had put art at i 1. Germany at the end of the Middle Ages, p. 50.

2. Ibid., p. 130.

service of God, calling on artists to cooperate in the spread of the kingdom of God on earth and inviting them "to proclaim the Gospel to the poor."
The artists, faithfully responding to this call, did not-
They didn't raise the beautiful on an altar to make it a idol and worship it for its own sake; they worked "for the glory of God.” Through their masterpieces they wished to awaken and increase in souls the desire and love of heavenly goods. As long as art retained the religious principles that had given him From birth, he was in constant progress. But to the extent that loyalty and so-The simplicity of religious feelings, he saw the inspiration to escape him. The more he gazed at the foreign deities, the more he wanted to resurrect and give an artificial life to paganism, and moreover, he saw his disappearance creative force, his originality; he finally fell into a drought and complete aridity (1). »

Under the influence of these intellectuals, the modern victory took a completely new direction which was the opposite of true civilization. For, as has very well been said said Lamartine:

“Any civilization that does not originate from God is false.

1. Mr. Emile Màle, who published such scholarly studies and so interesting on RELIGIOUS ART IN THE 13TH CENTURY and on RELIGIOUS ART AT THE END OF THE MIDDLE AGES, ter-
The second of these works is undermined by these words: It is necessary to recognize that the principle of medieval art was in complete opposition to the principle of art of Renaissance. The late Middle Ages had left their mark on all the humble sides of the soul: suffering, sadness, reSigning, acceptance of the divine will. The saints, the Virgin, Christ himself, often frail, related to the poor people of the 15th century, have no other - rayThis art is of a nature other than that which comes from the soul. Profound humility: the true spirit of Christianity is within him.

The art of the Renaissance is quite different, its principle

"Any civilization that does not arrive at the idea of God is short.

"Any civilization that is not imbued with the idea" God's is cold and empty.

"The last expression of a civilization byDone, God is better seen, better worshipped, better _ served by men (1). »

The change first took place in people's minds. Many lost sight of the concept according to which All ends are in God, to adopt the one who wills that everything may be in man. "To fallen man and redeemed, as Mr. Bériot so aptly put it, the Renaissance opposed the man neither fallen nor redeemed, rising to a admirable height achieved solely through the power of his reason and of his free will." The heart was no longer for to love God, the spirit to know him, the body to serve Him, and thereby merit eternal life. a higher concept that the Church had put so much care to establish, and for which it had been necessary so much time, was obliterated in this one, in this onethere, in multitudes; as in the time of the paganism, they made pleasure, enjoyment, the purpose of life; they sought the means in wealth, and, to acquire it, people no longer cared about-

Pride is hidden. Man is now self-sufficient. even and aspires to be a God. The highest expressionThe essence of art is the human body unveiled: the idea of a fall, a decline of the human being, which deThe artists of the nude have been turning for so long, it does not present itself not even to their minds. To make man a radiant herobrimming with strength and beauty, escaping the inevitabilities of the race, to rise to the type, ignoring the dou- Their compassion, resignation, that's all (with all kinds of nuances). The ideal of 16th-century Italy.

[1] Cited by Bishop Perraud of Autun during the festivities of the poet's centenary.

taking into account the rights of others. For states, the Civilization was no longer the sanctity of the masses. and social institutions of ordered means to to prepare souls for heaven. Again, they contained the function of society over time, without regard for souls destined for eternity. So Just like today, they called it progress! "Everything is pointing in the right direction," he exclaimed enthusiastically Campanello, the renewal of the world. Nothing arrests the freedom of man. How could one stop the march and progress of humankind? » The innew inventions, printing, gunpowder, teleCope, the discovery of the New World, etc., coming to add to the study of works from antiquity, proevoked a heady sense of pride which led people to say: the Human reason is sufficient in itself to govern to conduct one's affairs in social and political life. We don't need an authority that supportsdoes not correct reason.

Thus was overturned the notion upon which the sosociety had lived and through which it had prospered from Our Lord Jesus Christ.

The renewed civilization of paganism acts of afocusing first on isolated individuals, then on the public mind, then on customs and institutions. Its devastating effects. manifested themselves first in the aesthetic order tic and intellectual: art, literature and science They gradually withdrew from the service of the soul to to submit to the dictates of animality: which led in the moral order and in the religious order this The revolution that was the Reformation. Of the religious order, The spirit of the Renaissance won over the political order and social issues related to the Revolution. Here he is attacking the economic order with socialism. That's where he it had to come to this, that's where he'll find his end, or we, the net; its end, if Christianity resumes his empire over the frightened peoples or rather acc-wheat of the evils that socialism will inflict upon them;

Ours, if socialism can be pushed to its logical conclusion
the experience of the dogma of free enjoyment here below and make us suffer all the consequences.

However, this did not happen, and it did not come to pass.
It continues, without resistance. A multitude of souls remained and still remain attached to the Christian ideal here, and the Church is still there to maintain it and to work towards its triumph. From there, within the so-society, the conflict that has lasted for five centuries, and which has now reached an acute stage.

The Renaissance is therefore the starting point of the current state of society. Everything we suffer from-frons comes from there. If we want to know our evil, and to derive from this knowledge the radical remedy to the present situation, it is to this that we must remount (1).

And yet, the Popes favored her, which was the
The starting point of so-called modern civilization! One
A word of explanation is necessary.

The Church Fathers, we have said, had re-commissioned the study of ancient literatures, and this for two reasons: they found in them an excellent-slow instrument of intellectual culture, and they in had placed Revelation on a pedestal; thus the Reason is the foundation of faith.

---

1. Mr. Jean Guiraud, professor at the Faculty of Letters from Besançon, who has just published an excellent book under This title: The Church and the Origins of the Renaissance, we will serve as a guide to briefly recall what happened © passed at that time. This volume is part of the "Bi-Library for the teaching of ecclesiastical history published by Lecoffre.

Faithful to this direction, the Church, and in particular-to bind the monks, put all their care into saving from the the shipwreck of barbarism, according to ancient authors, to the to copy them, to study them, to make them serve the demons-Transmission of faith.

It was therefore quite natural that, when we began-This in Italy, the literary and artistic revival, the
The popes were in favor of it.

In addition to the advantages mentioned above, they saw adding others, of a more immediate character-very useful at that time. From the mid-13th century:
In the 19th century, sustained relations had been established.
between the papacy and the Greek world to obtain the
The return of the Eastern Churches to the Roman Catholic Church.
Both sides sent embassies to each other.
Knowledge of Greek was necessary to argue-to fight against the schismatics and offer them the fight on their own turf.

The fall of the Byzantine Empire provided an opportunity for this type of study has a new and decisive im-impulse. The Greek scholars, bringing to the West the literary treasures of antiquity excited a genuine enthusiasm for pagan literature, and this enthusiasm was not manifested anywhere by da-Advantage that among church people. The printing press came at the right time to multiply them and to make them
the acquisition is infinitely less expensive.

Finally, the invention of the telescope and the discovery of New World opened up to broader thoughts horizons. Here again we see the popes, and First of all, those of Avignon, by their zeal to en-sending missionaries to distant lands, to provide a new stimulus to fermentation spirits, good in principle, but whose or-human pride abused, as we see from our days of abusing the progress of natural sciences.

The popes were therefore brought in by all sorts of of providential circumstances, to be called upon and fixed alongside them were the designated representatives of the movement literary and artistic experiences they witnessed.
They made it their duty and their honor. They lavishedrent the orders, the pensions, the dignities to those whom they saw rising through their talents to the-above the others. Unfortunately, the gaze fixed they did not take into account the goal they wanted to achieve point enough to pay attention to the quality of the people they thus encouraged.

Petrarch, who is generally called "the pre-
"the leader of the humanists," found at the court of Avignon the highest protection, and there received the charge of se-Apostolic crederator. From then on, he established himself at court the papal tradition of reserving high functions instructions from apostolic secretaries to writers more renowned, so that this college became well-early on, one of the most active centers of the Renaissance.
It was home to religious saints such as the Camaldolese.
Ambroise Traversari, but unfortunately also crude epicureans such as Poggio Bracciolini, Filifer, and the Are-Tin and many others. Despite piety, despite even the personal austerity of which the popes of this era that the Church built (1), they did not know, rightly from the atmosphere that enveloped them, to defend themselves excessive condescension towards writers

1. Martin V had a constant taste for justice and: charity. His devotion was great; he gave proof of it brilliant on several occasions, especially when he brought back He brought to Ostia the relics of Saint Monica. He supported them with a profoundly Christian resignation to the grief that They came and struck him blow after blow in his dearest places.
affections. From his youth, he had distributed most of his possessions to the poor. ; To

Eugene IV retained his habits on the papal throne who, although in their service, soon became, by the the slope to which they surrendered, the enemies of morality and the Church. This condescension... tended to the works themselves, although, all things considered-

They were, in effect, the negation of Christianity.

All the errors that have since corrupted the world-of Christian, all the attacks perpetrated against his ins-institutions, had their source there; one can say that everything What we are witnessing has been prepared by humans.
nists. They are the initiators of monistic civilization.
last. Petrarch had already drawn from commerce from the antiquity of feelings and ideas that would have The papal court was distressed, if it had measured the consequences. He, it is true, always bowed down before the Church, its hierarchy, its dogmas, its morale; but it was not so with those who followed, and it can be said that it was he who... put them on the wrong path they embarked upon. His criticisms against the authorized papal government- Rent Valla to undermine the temporal power of the popes, to denounce them as the enemies of Rome and Italy, to portray them as enemies of the people. went so far as to deny the spiritual authority of the Sunverains Pontifes in the Church, refusing to the popes the right to call themselves "Peter's vicars". From- Many appealed to the people or the emperor to to restore either the Roman Republic or Italian unity austere religious figures. His simplicity and frugality had He was given the nickname Abstenius by those around him. Vespasiano rightly celebrates the sanctity of his life and his morals.

Nicholas V wanted to have the spectacle of con- in his private life continued monastic virtues. For this, he called upon from him Nicolas of Cortona and Laurent of Mantua, two Carthusians, with whom he liked to talk about things from heaven amidst the tortures of his final illness.

a unified, or a universal empire: all things that we see nowadays, or tempted (1848), or realized (1870), or presented as the culmination of aspirations of Freemasonry.

Alberti prepared another kind of attack, the most characteristic of contemporary civilization. Ju- A writer as well as a writer, he composed a treatise on law. In it, he proclaimed "that to God belongs left the care of divine matters, and that things "Human matters fall under the jurisdiction of the judge." It was, as Mr. Guiraud observes, proclaiming the divorce of civil society and religious society; it was open the way for those who want the gou- Governments pursue only temporal ends. and remain indifferent to spiritual matters, they argue. material interests and disregard supernatural laws principles of morality and religion; that is to say that earthly powers are incompetent or must be indifferent in religious matters, that they they do not have to know God, that they do not have to to enforce its law. In short, it was to formulate the great social heresy of the present time, and ruin based on the civilization of the Christian centuries. principle proclaimed by this apostolic secretary renclosed in embryo all the theories to which it lay claim our modern “defenders of secular society” that”. All that was needed was to let this principle developlopper to achieve everything we are Today, the witnesses are saddened.

Thus attacking Christian society from its foundation, the humanists were simultaneously overturning in the heart of man, the Christian notion of his desdestiny. “The sky,” wrote Collaccio Salutati, in his The labors of Hercules rightfully belong to men energetic people who have supported great struggles or ac–

"Complicated by great works on the earth." They drew from This principle and the consequences that followed from it. The ideal ancient and naturalistic, the ideal of Zeno, of Plutarch and of Epicurus, was to multiply the energies to infinity the principles of his being by developing harmoniously the forces of the mind and those of the body. It became the ideal that the faithful of the Renaissance substituted in their conduct, as well as in their writings, to the supernatural aspirations of Christianity. This was in our time the ideal that Friedrich Nietzsche pushedhis to the extreme by advocating strength, energy, the lithe development of all passions such asbefore bringing man to a higher state the one where it is located, as having to produce the superman. (1).

For these intellectuals, and those who listened to them, and those who, to this day, have made themselves their disciples, the supernatural order was, more or less comcompletely, set aside; morality became the satisfactiona faction given to all instincts; enjoyment in all its forms was the object of their pursuit Yours. The glorification of pleasure was the favorite topic dissertations by humanists. Laurent Valla affirmssaid in his treatise De voluptate that "the pleasureSir is the true good, and there are no other goods than "Pleasure." This conviction led him, and many others, to... Others, to poeticize the worst debaucheries. Thus were prostituted the talents that should have been employed to revitalize Christian literature and art.

In all respects, the divorce was therefore taking place in– between Renaissance trends and traditions of Christianity. While the Church continued to

1. The glorification of what Americanists call "Active virtues" also seem to come from there, by the intermediary of Protestantism.

preaching the downfall of man, to affirm his faiwounds and the need for divine help for the lake-fulfilling one's duty, humanism took on the leading the way for Jean-Jacques Rousseau to proclaim the goodness of nature: he deified man. While that the Church assigned a purpose to human life | and a supernatural purpose, placing the end in God our destiny, humanism, having become pagan again, lim-gave to this world and to man himself the ideal of the life.

From Italy, the movement spread to other parts of the world.
ties of Europe.

In Germany, the name Reuchlin was, without If this scholar wanted it, the battle cry of all those who worked to destroy the religious orders, the scholasticism and, ultimately, the Church itself.
Without the scandal that arose around him, Luther and his disciples would never have dared to dream what they have accomplished.

In the Netherlands, Erasmus also prepared the way _ to the Reformation through his Praise of Folly. Luther.
did nothing but proclaim aloud and boldly execute-which is what Erasmus had constantly been suggesting.

France had also been quick to welcome at her home, human letters; they did not produce there point, at least in the order of ideas, of such bad-I will have effects. The same was not true for the customs. "Since the customs of foreigners have
"It has begun to please us," said the Grand Chancellor of the Vair, who has seen what he speaks of, — ours are so perverted and corrupt, that we we can say: It has been a long time since we were-my most French.

Nowhere did the leaders of society have enough of foresight to effect the departure of what he there was something healthy and something infinitely dangerous in the movement of ideas and feelings, of aspirations which received the name Renaissance.

so that everywhere there was admiration for pagan antiquity did not move from form to substance, from letters and arts to civilization. And civilization began to to transform into what it is today, while waiting to be what she will show herself to be tomorrow.

God, however, did not leave his Church without... course, in this trial no more than in any other Saints, including Saint Bernardino of Siena-
They did not cease to warn and to point out the danger.
They were not listened to. And that is why the
The Renaissance gave birth to the Reformation, and the Reformation...
Revolution whose avowed aim is to annihilate civilization- –
Christian tradition to replace it with the whole universe so-called modern civilization.

- CHAPTER IV

THE REFORM
DAUGHTER OF THE RENAISSANCE

In his book The Reformation in Germany and in France, a former magistrate, Count J. Boselli,
"He recounts that Mr. Paulin Paris, one of the scholars..."

more learned about the Middle Ages and one of those who knew him best, he said one day in his presence, an interlocutor who was surprised by the great difference comparison of modern France with that of the past,
"obscured by the darkness of the Middle Ages": "De-Don't be mistaken, the Middle Ages weren't so different of modern times, as you might think: the laws were different, as were the customs and traditions.
My, but human passions were the same.
If one of us were transported back to the Middle Ages,
He would see around him farmers, soldiers,
priests, financiers, social inequalities,
Ambitions, betrayals. WHAT HAS CHANGED,
THAT IS THE GOAL OF HUMAN ACTIVITY. We cannot-

That would be better said. Men in the Middle Ages were... same nature as us, nature inferior to that angels and more fallen. They had our stepssions, like us, let themselves be carried away by them, often to more violent excesses. But the goal was Eternal life: morals, laws, and customs religious institutions and civilians were leading the men towards their final endnier, and human activity was, first a place for the improvement of the inner man.

Today — and this is the fruit, the product of the Renaissance, the Reformation, and the Revolution, — the point of view has changed, the goal is no longer the even; what is desired, what is pursued, not by isolated individuals, but by the impulse donborn into all social activity, it is the improvement of current living conditions to arrive at a more greater, to a more universal enjoyment. Which counts as "progress", it is not what contributes to a greater moral perfection of man, but what increases his domination over the matter and nature, in order to make them more comcompletely and more docilely at the service of well-being temporal.

To achieve this well-being, successive steps were taken proclaimed necessary the independence of reason With regard to Revelation, the independence of the so civil society vis-à-vis the Church, the independence of Morality in relation to God's law: three stages in the path of PROGRESS pursued by the Renaissance sance, the Reformation and the Revolution.

We must not believe that humanists, literaryfailures and artists, whose aberrations we have seen from the triple point of view of intellectual, moral and religious gieux, formed only small, closed circles, without echo, without action outside. First, the artistes spoke in full view of everyone; and when, for To take just this example, Filarete borrowed 4 the mythology the decoration of the bronze doors of the Basilica of Saint Peter, he certainly did not build not the people who went there. Moreover, it was at the court of princes that the humanists had their academies; that's where they composed their books;

It was there that they spread their ideas, that they were-their morals; and it is always from above that descends all evil and all good, all perversion comany edification.

It is therefore not surprising that the Reformation,
which was a first attempt at practical application that new ideas put forward by humanists, was received and propagated with such ardor by the princes in Germany and elsewhere, and if she found it among the people such an easy welcome.

Resistance was quite weak in Germany; it It was more vigorous in France. Christianity had penetrated more deeply into the souls of our fathers than everywhere else; fought in theory by the humanists, he survived longer in the way of living, thinking, and feeling. From there, at For us, a more arduous and prolonged struggle. She
It began with the religious wars, it became con-_ it continued in the Revolution, it still lasts, as Waldeck-Rousseau noted this very well. By other-very means that in principle, continues tou-days the conflict between the pagan spirit, which wants to be reborn and the Christian spirit, which seeks to maintain itself. Au-today, as from the very first day, one and Tau-they want to triumph over their opponent: the priest-first, through the violence that closes free schools, deplunders and exiles religious figures and threatens churches;
the second, through recourse to God and continuation of Christian teaching by all means which remain at his disposal.

The various twists and turns of this long drama hold suspended heaven, earth, and hell; for if Fran-This eventually led her to reject the revolutionary venom; she will restore Christian civilization throughout the world
she was the first to understand, to adopt to spread and to propagate. If it succumbs, the world has everything something to fear.

Protestantism came to us from Germany and especially from Geneva. He is well named. He was im-it is possible to describe Luther's Reformation differently-she lies only through a whisper of protest, because she is protest against Christian civilization, pro-testimony against the Church that had founded it, protest-tation against God from whom it emanated. The Protestant-Luther's 'tism' is the echo on earth of the Non serviam of Lucifer. He proclaims freedom, the freedom of the rebels, Satan's: liberalism. He tells the kings and the Princes: "Use your power to support and to to triumph in my revolt against the Church and I will "book of all religious authority (1)."

Everything that the Reformation had received from the Renaissance knowledge and that it was to transmit to the Revolution is in that word: Protestantism.

Communicated from individual to individual, the Protestant Theism soon spread from province to province. The history-German Tory and Protestant Ranke tells us what His great means of seduction was license, which The Renaissance had brought it into the spotlight. "Many people embraced the Reformation, he said, with the-expectation that it would ensure them greater freedom

---

1. Works of Luther, XII, 1522 and XI, 1867.

freedom in private conduct. That's because, indeed There is, between Catholicism and Protestantism, such as that it was preached by Luther, a radical difference
In this respect, Catholicism promises rewards.
think of future virtues and threaten the vice of chaeternal emotions; by this means, he puts human passions-The most powerful brake. The Reformation, for its part, was coming promising paradise to every man, even the most 'criminal, subject only to an act of faith in-external to his personal justification by the imputtion of the merits of Christ. If, by the sole effect of - this persuasion, which is easy to give oneself, the men are assured of going to paradise while con-continuing to indulge in sin, even crime, well
He would be foolish to refuse to obtain it here.
...down everything he can find within reach.

The presence in a deeply Catholic country of people who share these principles and strive to propagating them, was already expected to bring a certain amount of pressure into the Stat tain trouble; it became profound when the Protestant-Tism no longer limited itself to preaching to individuals faith without works, but felt strong enough to wanting to seize the kingdom in order to wrest from me its traditions and shape it to his liking.

Since Clovis, Catholicism had not ceased just one day to be the state religion. Traditional...
Carolingian and Merovingian traditions, it is the only-the one that was kept completely intact until the Revolution. For half a century, the Protestants tried to separate the eldest daughter from her mother the Church; they alternately used cunning and force to seize the government, to to put the French people, so Catholic, under the yoke Reformers, as they had just done in Germany, England, and Seme were on the verge of succeeding.

After the death of François de Guise, the , Hugue-They were masters of all the South. They did not hesitate not, in order to seize the rest, to appeal to
To the Germans and the English, their coreligionists.
The English abandoned Le Havre; the Germans,
They promised to administer the bishoprics of Metz, Toul and Verdun (1). Finally, with La Rochelle, they-
They had -materially created a state within a state.
Their intention was to replace the monarchy Christian government and way of life “mo-delés on those of Geneva," that is to say, the republic-that (2). “The Huguenots,” said Tavannes, “are in the process to found 'a democracy.' The plan had been traced in Béarn, and the Estates of Languedoc in demanded execution in 1573. The Protestant jurist François Hatman exerted influence on minds, in the sense democratic, a great influence through his book Franco-Gallia, 1573. He puts theories at their service.

---

1. See Ranke.

2. M. Hanotaux (History of Cardinal Richelieu, t.
XII, Part 2, p. 184), thus justifies the revocation of the edict from Nantes:

“France could not be strong as long as it ren-would enclose within its bosom an organized body, in full peace, on a war footing, with independent leaders, Military personnel, safe houses, budget and justice at part, army always ready to take to the field. Fal-Would it be possible to recognize the existence of a state within a state? Pou-
Are we to admit that there are many ardent French people always had threats on their lips and rebellion in the heart? Would we tolerate their perpetual and insolent recourse abroad? A state cannot subsist if it is thus divided against itself. To ensure the unity of the kingdom, to gather all national forces, with a view to external conflicts were brewing, so it was necessary to undermine the body of Huguenots in France or to bring it to composition. "

Republicans, a history in their own way, to bring back with a great deal of text and assertion, the Fran-
The French to "their primitive constitution." "The memory-rain and principal administration of the kingdom, di-he knows, belonged to the general and solemn assembly wheat from the three states. The king reigns, but does not govern No. The State, the Republic is everything, the king almost nothing. He throws his readers into the full sovereignty of the people.

The Franco-Gallia had an enormous impact.
Huguenot pamphleteers pillaged it with abandon.
better. The system described in this book is the de-Democracy as it is understood today. That is that this form of government, by giving to agitators provide easy access to the initial loads the State provides them with the power to spread their doctrines; at the same time, it responds better to ideas of independence that were at the heart of the Reform, to the right that the Renaissance sought to confer for man to direct himself towards the ideal of happiness that she presented to him.

France, through the actions of the Huguenots, was at edge of the abyss.

The situation was no less critical for the Church Catholic. She had just lost Germany, the Scandinavia, England and Switzerland; the Netherlands
They rebelled against her. The apostasy of France, if it were to happen, it would cause in the

the world the most pernicious scandal and the shock-the deepest element: all the more so since Spain had to follow. The most consistent objective of all the Protestant party, to which Coligny never ceased to work-
The first objective was to train France in a general league.
rallies with all the Protestant states to crush

Spain, the only major Catholic nation that remained then-health. It would have been the complete ruin of civilization Christian.

God did not allow it, and neither did France.
The Valois were weakening,* hesitating, varying in their politics. The League was born to take control the defense of the faith, to maintain it in the country and in the country's government. The kafholics, who still made up almost all of the Fran-
The Spanish (1) wanted to have absolutely innate leaders.
They were wavering in their faith. They chose the house of Guise. "Whatever one's opinion of The religious wars, said Mr. Boselli, it is impossible-
It is impossible to ignore that the House of Guise was, throughout this entire period, the very embodiment of the state religion, the national and traditional worship to which so many French people remained attached. She personified the idea of Catholic fidelity. The Guise would very likely have become kings of France if Henry III had become a Protestant, or if Henry IV had not
"He hadn't converted to Catholicism."

God wished to preserve France's royal line, as he had done once before by the mis-the vow given to Joan of Arc. The heir to the throne, of a-near the Salic law, was Henry of Navarre, a student of Coligny, Protestant and leader of the Protestants. God changed-
'gea his heart. France regained peace, and Louis XIII and Louis XIV put our country back on the path

---

1. There were only four hundred thousand Protestants in 1558. That's the figure given by the Protestant historian.
Ranke. Castelnau, a well-informed witness, goes further;
He claims that the Protestants were at the expense of the rest of the nation in the proportion of 1 to 100. That's for this handful of.
Calvinists saw their country ravaged by Catholics.
for fifty years.

of Catholic civilization. Let us say, however, that The latter committed this error, which must have had so many consequences.
serious consequences, of wanting the declaration of 1682. She carried within her the constitution of the following... vile clergy, she began the nefarious work by-all of them, from the secularization that continues today from today until its latest consequences.

Louis XV, who indulged in the customs of the Renaissance-This saw the work of dechristianization begun by the Reformation, taken up by Voltaire and the Encyclopediasyour precursors of Robespierre, ancestors of those who They govern us now. Taine understood this very well.
'said: "The Reformation is only a particular movement in a revolution that began before her. The
The 14th century led the way; and since then, every century is occupied only with preparing, in the order of:
ideas, new designs and, in practical order-that, new institutions. Since that time, the Society no longer found its guide in the Church.
nor the Church, its image in society (1).

1. Studies on the Barbarians and the Middle Ages, pp. 374-375.

CHAPTER V

THE REVOLUTION
INSTITUTE NATURALISM

Protestantism had failed; France, after The religious wars had left France Catholic. But A bad leaven had been placed within it. Its This fermentation produced, in addition to the corruption of morals, three intellectual toxins: Gallicanism, Jansenism and philosophism. Their influence on the social organism brought about the Revolution, second and a far more terrible assault on Christian civilization
yours.

As the conclusion of this book will demonstrate, the whole movement imprinted on Christendom by the Renaissance, Reformation and Revolution is a satanic effort to tear man away from the super- order natural established by God in the beginning and restored by Our Lord Jesus Christ in the midst of time, and confine it to naturalism.

Since everything was Christian in the French constitution- In the caise, everything had to be destroyed. The Revolution began there. She folded conscientiously. In a few months, she wiped the slate clean of the French government, of its laws and its institutions. She wanted to "shape"

+

"a new people": this is the expression that we re- found, on every page, in the words of the reporters members of the Convention; much better: "remake man- me » himself.

Also, the Convention members, in accordance with the con- new conception that the Renaissance had given human destinies, did not limit their am- attachment to France; they wanted to inoculate: madness revolutionary to neighboring peoples, to the whole world. Their ambition was to overturn the social order in order to to rebuild it from scratch. "The Revolution," said Thuriot in the Legislative Assembly in 1792, is not alone- for France; we are accountable for it. humanity." Sieyès had said before him, in 1788: “Let us suddenly rise to the ambition of vou- "Let us ourselves serve as an example to the nations (1)." And Barrère, at the moment when the Estates-General... gathered at Versailles: "You are," he said, "appe- "They're forced to start history all over again."

We can see the path that the idea of the Renaissance has taken; how much more at the Revolution she showed herself to be raised in its development and more daring in her company, which she had not appeared to have for two centuries, Raver, in the Reformation.

In its April 1896 issue, Le Monde macon- nique said: "When what has long been re- Kept as an ideal, it is realized, the horizons more broad, a new ideal offers to human activity Maine, always moving towards a better future, new fields of exploration, new conquests to undertake, new hopes to pursue-true.

This is true in the path of good. As it says

1. What is the Third Estate?

The Psalmist, the righteous one, has placed in his heart degrees to rise to the perfection that he ambitionne (1). This is also true in the way of evil.

Renaissance men did not wear their views – at least all of them – as far as those of the Reformation. The men of the Reformation were superseded by those of the Revolution. The Renaissance had moved the location of happiness and changed its con-editions; she had declared that she saw him in this world. The religious authority remained to say: "You "Deceive; happiness is in Heaven." The Reformation dismissed the authority; but she kept the book of Re- divine revelations, which continued to hold the same language. Philosophy denied that God ever had spoke to men, and the Revolution strove to drown his witnesses in blood, in order to be able to to freely establish the worship of nature.

The Journal of Debates, in one of its issues of April 1852, recognized this lineage: "We we are revolutionaries; but we are the sons of the Renaissance and philosophy before being son of the Revolution.

There's no need to elaborate at length on the work undertaken by the Revolution. The Pane Pius IX characterized by a single word, in the Encyclical of December 8- December 1849: "The Revolution is inspired by Satan himself; his goal is to destroy fundamentally in fills the edifice of Christianity and rebuilds "On its ruins, the social order of paganism." She first destroyed the ecclesiastical order. "For twelve- 100 years and more, according to the expression ener- Taine's gic, the clergy had worked on the cons-

1. Ps. LXXXIII, 6-7.

construction of society as architect and as ma"noeuvre, first alone, then almost alone"; we rendered unable to continue his work, one wanted to make it impossible for him to ever to resume. Then they abolished the monarchy, the living link and perpetual champion of national unity, the champion of all who wanted to harm it. They got rid of it of the nobility, guardian of traditions, and of the cor-workers' preparations, also conservative of the _ past. Then, with all those sentinels gone, we put to work, much to destroy what was easy, but little to rebuild, which was less so.

We do not need to describe these here.
ruins and of these structures. Let's just say that, as far as the political structure is concerned, the Revolution hastened to proclaim the Republic, that The Renaissance had dreamed, even for Rome itself, that the Protestants had already wanted to substitute in France this to the monarchy, and which today does so well the Works of Freemasonry.

Disciples of J.-J. Rousseau, the Conventionnels of 1792 laid the foundation for the new building principle, that man is good by nature; on this point, _
They established the Masonic trilogy: liberty, equality, Fraternity. Freedom for all and for everything, since there is no in man only good instincts; equality, because that, equally good, men have rights equal in all things; fraternity, or rupture of all barriers between individuals, families, nations, to let-to unite humankind in a Republic-than universal.

In terms of religion, they organized the cult of nature. The Renaissance humanists had called for by their wishes. The Protestants had not dared to push the Reformation that far. Our revolutionaries tempted him.

They did not go to that extreme at first.

They began by calling the Catholic clergy to their celebrations. - |

Talleyrand pontificated on July 14, 1790, to the great Federation Day, surrounded by the 40 chaplains of the National Guard, wearing on their robes tricolour sashes, orchestrated by 1,800 musicians, in the presence of 25,000 members of parliament and 400,000 spectators tators. But soon he no longer wanted even those exhibitions, more "patriotic" than religious: "I] It is not appropriate, he said, for religion to appear in public festivals, it is more religious than it seems discard.

With the national cult set aside, it was necessary to search for it. Another one. Mirabeau proposed a very abstract one: "The purpose of our national holidays," he said, "must be only the cult of liberty and the cult of law. "

It seemed meager. Boissy-d'Anglas regretted everything up to the time when "political institutions and re- nuns” lent each other mutual aid, where “a "Brilliant religion" presented itself with dogmas which promised "pleasure and happiness", or- born from all the ceremonies that strike the senses, the most delightful fictions, the most soft.

Her wishes were soon granted. A new religion was founded, having its dogmas, its Priests, his Sunday, his saints. God was replaced by the Supreme Being and the goddess Reason, the ca- cult Catholic through the worship of Nature (1).

---

1. At the festival of the Supreme Being, it was Nature who received the tributes from Robespierre and representatives of the

“The great goal pursued by the Revolution, di- Boissy-d'Anglas knows that it's about bringing man back to "Purity, in the simplicity of nature." Poets, Speakers and members of the National Convention kept on doing to offer invocations to "Nature." And the di- In these months, the minister Robespierre was marking the tend- dances, the will of the innovators: "All sec- yours must blend in with the universal religion of Nature (1).» This is ac-actually what the Israelite Alliance wants saddle, what she works on, what her mission is to establish in the world, only with less than Haste and more know-how.

Nothing could better fulfill the aspirations Renaissance humanists. In the festival of On August 10, 1793, a statue of Nature was erected on the Place de la Bastille, and the president of the Conventiontion, Hérault de Séchelles, addressed this tribute to him at Official name of France: "Sovereign of the saWaves and enlightened nations, 6 Nature! this people immense, assembled in the first rays of day Before your image, he is worthy of you. He is free; he is in your bosom, it is in your sacred springs, that he regained his rights, he regenerated himself. After having Having traversed so many centuries of error and servitude, he you had to get into the simplicity of your ways to regain freedom and legality. Nature, receive the expressure of the eternal attachment of the French to your laws! » |

The official report adds: "Following this a kind of hymn, a single prayer, since the first nation. See In Search of a Civil Religion, by Abbot

Sicard, pp. 133-144. We borrow the facts from this book. which we report here.

1. Speech of May 7, 1794.

centuries of humankind, addressed to Nature by the representatives of a nation and its legislators, The president filled a cup, of ancient shape. water that flowed from the bosom of Nature: he has he made libations around Nature, he drank in the cup and presented it to the people's envoys French. » As we can see, the worship is complete: prayer, sacrifice, communion.

Along with worship, institutions. "It is through the insinstitutions, wrote Police Minister Duval, that "These are composed of the opinion and morality of peoples (1)." Among these institutions, the one deemed most necessary | to make the people forget their old habits religious and to have him take new ones, was The Décadi, or civil Sunday. Also, it is on this creation that the Republic spent the most on decrets and efforts. At the Décadi, there were added... annual festivals: political festivals, civil festivals, holidays morals. The political festivals aimed to... Ion Chénier, to "consecrate the immortal eras where the various tyrannies collapsed under the national spirit, and the great strides of reason which cross Europe and will strike the borders of world (2). » The quintessential republican festival was that of January 21st, because that's when they celebrated "the anniversary of the just punishment of the last king" of the French." There was also the founding festival donation of the Republic, fixed at 1 Vendémiaire. The great national holiday, revived in our time, was that of the federation or the oath, fixed at July 14th.

1. Monitor of the 9th, 10th and 11th of Pluviôse, year VIT.
2. Speech of November 5, 1793. Moniteur of the 8th.

As for morality, there was the youth festival, those of marriage, motherhood, old age and especially those related to human rights. Many others festivals were, if not instituted and celebrated, at least decreed or proposed.

As a crowning achievement, a cal2mdrier was invented. a republican system founded entirely on agriculture. It was a solemn consecration of the new cult, the worship of Nature.

Such was the fatal outcome of the ideas that the The Renaissance had sown seeds in people's minds. The Reform had attempted a timid, impardone: she had merely debased the Christiannism; the Revolution annihilated it as much as it had been in She, and upon its ruins, erected altars to Reason and to Pleasure.

We know where naturalism led which, in the thought of its promoters, was meant to exalt the dihuman dignity. Barbé-Marbois, in his report at the Council of Elders, denounced the school- youth laire as "exceeding all the excesses of limits, and even those imposed by nature itself seem to have been assigned to childhood disorders. And at the other end of life, all the documents from that era show us the deceased delivered to "Unclean gravediggers," families becoming accustomed to "to consider the remains of a husband, a father, a child, of a brother, of a sister, of a friend, like those of any other animal that one gets rid of.” In 1800, Citizen Cambry, commissioned by the administration-central section of the Seine to make a report on the state of the graves in Paris, did not believe he could-I forgot that in Latin, there was so much shame in these barbaric funerals. Often the bodies were don-born to be fed to dogs.

All those who had retained some honesty They were horrified by the disorder of morals that had thus arisen at its height. With the ruin of morals and the abolition-tion of Christian worship had come to the bank-road and misery.

Such was the outcome of modern civilization in its first attempt. The one we are currently-The way things are delivered will not have a better ending.

Ruin, misery, moral disorder, could not all-days to last and worsen. The public outcry demanded the restoration of Catholic worship. He had already told me-but ceased to be practiced with disregard for life. priests had remained among the people, who . exposed themselves to all dangers to promote lexer-clandestine cice of the holy ministry.

In 1800, the restoration work was essential, tou-all creations intended to replace Christianity had fallen into absolute and complete disrepute. Versel. The General Councils were unanimous in the recognize and to declare it (1). Napoleon came. If he restored, in concert with Pius VII, the Church of France, He took his measures – through the organic articles, the institution—of the University, the Civil Code, etc.—for that Christian civilization could not resume its entire power over souls and that she was not restored in the institutions.

He did nothing more than contain the situation, as has been aptly stated.

the Revolution.

The Revolution was therefore able to resume its course with

1. Analysis of the minutes of the General Councils departments for year VIII and year IX. National Library.

a kind of regularity that she wants to maintain until that the time had come for a complete reversal complete and this time definitive, she believes, of civilization Christian and of all that has been built upon the Christ, to establish upon the ruins of the supernatural order turel, the reign of naturalism, the deification of man.

CHAPTER VI

THE REVOLUTION, ONE OF THE WORLD'S ERA

At the beginning of the 19th century, one could believe that the French Revolution had been primarily a political revolution and that this revolution having been accomplished, The company was going to get back on its feet. We can't no longer having that illusion today, even if to consider the Revolution only in its first phase period. As Mr. Brunetière said: "The grandeur of the events overflows and surpasses it in every way I sense the mediocrity of those who believe themselves to be so, or that one according to the authors. The disproportion is prodiA beautiful connection between the work and the workers. A current Stronger than them, it drags them along, carries them off, rolls them over,
It breaks them... and continues to sink.

When the Duke of La Rochefoucauld-Liancourt re-Louis XVI watched over him to announce the capture of the
At the Bastille, the king asked: "So this is a revolt?"
The duke replied: "No, sire, it is a revolution."
He doesn't say enough, it wasn't a revolution, but the REVOLUTION that was emerging.

What appears at first glance in the Revolution, what de Maistre saw and pointed out there from the day when

He began to consider her, and what we see in the current situation, even more clearly, is ANTICHRISTIANITY. The Revolution essentially consists of so deeply in the revolt against Christ, and even rebellion against God, or rather, the denial of God. Its ultimate goal is to remove man and society from society to the supernatural. The word FREEDOM, in its mouthche, has no other meaning: freedom for the human nature to be hers, as Satan wanted to belong to him, and this, as we will explain later far away, at the instigation of Lucifer who wants to recover the supremacy that the superiority of its nature gives it-was based on human nature, and from which the elite ousted it the Christian's connection to the supernatural order. And that is why-what J. de Maistre very aptly characterized the Revolution through the word "satanic".

"Undoubtedly, the French Revolution has traveled a period in which no two moments are alike no; however, its general character has not changed, and even in her cradle she proved what she "It had to be." "There is a characteristic in the Revolution-satanic quality that distinguishes it from everything else we have seen and perhaps of everything we will see. She is sàtannic in its essence (1).

Pius IX, in 1849, said, — we already have your pan these words — with even more authority: “The ReEvolution is inspired by 'Satan himself; its goal is to destroy the edifice of ChristTianism, and to 'rebuild order on its ruins' social aspects of paganism.

After our disasters of 1870-1871, Mr. de Sine Bonnet said: "France has been working for a century on to remove from all its institutions the one to whom it

---

1. Complete Works of J. de Maistre, vol. I, pp. 51, 52, 55, 308. ime must Tolbiac, Poitiers, Bouvines and Denain, that is to say-To say the One to whom she owes her territory, her existence!

To show him all his hatred, to make him an in- vows to expel it from the walls of our cities, the sect has, since 1830, stirred up a hateful press to watch for the time of the feast of this "Christ who loves the "Franks," from the One who made himself "Man for "To save the man who became bread to feed him!" And he concluded: "And France is asking for the cause of His misfortunes!

To the hatred of Christ that one was not believed Within Christianity, the revolt is joined. direct against God (1).

There is reason to believe that this revolt against © God could not take place even in the ardor of the great Battle between Lucifer and the archangel Saint Michael.

[It takes a limited mind of man to rise to con- to be the Infinite. It also requires corruption and Ro baseness of heart.

What was previously unseen is now visible. "The Revolution is the struggle between man and God; this is meant to be the triumph of man over God. This is what those who say that at the time Currently, the question is who will prevail. Revolution or Counter-Revolution.

Also, Mr. de Saint-Bonnet doesn't say anything excessive, he

---

1. In one of his letters to d'Alembert, Voltaire assgne for special character in Damilaville of "hating God" and to work to make him hated. That's probably why that he wrote to her more frequently and with more intensity timidity than to all his other followers.

After the death of this unfortunate, bankrupt and se- Adorned with his wife, Voltaire wrote the following to the same person: "I I will miss Damilaville all my life. I loved the fearlessness of his heart. He had the enthusiasm of Saint Paul (that is- that is to say, as much zeal to destroy religion as saint Paul (to establish this): HE WAS A NECESSARY MAN.

perhaps he doesn't say enough when he states that "the present time can only be compared to that of the revolt of the angels.” And consequently, of Maistre, de Bonald, Donoso-Cortés, Blanc de Saint-

Bonnet, and others no doubt agree, will say: "The
The world cannot remain in this state.

Or it comes to an end, in hatred of God and of his Christ, which the Antichrist will make more general and more violent; or he is on the eve of the most great mercy that God has shown in this world of, outside of the Redemptive act.

This is the state we are in, the one that the Revo-
The revolution created him who has never ceased to be since the
the first days of the Revolution, under the rule of which we still are.

In 1796, two years after the fall of Robespierre, J. de Maistre wrote: "The revolution is not It's over, but nothing suggests the end. It has already The product of great misfortunes, it foretells even more.
still large (1). »

On the eve of the day when it seemed to minds to superficiaries that Napoleon's coronation would make "The new order of things is stable," he wrote to M. de Rossi (November 3, 1804): "One would be tempted to to believe that all is lost, but things will happen-Things that no one expects... Everything points to a general upheaval in the political world (2). »

At the height of the Napoleonic epic: "Never
The universe has seen nothing like it! And what do we owe it?
See again? Ah! How far we are from the last act or the final scene of this dreadful tra-
"Gedie!" "Nothing signals the end of the catastrophes,"

---

1. Ibid., vol. I, p. 406.
2. Complete works of J. de Maistre, vol. IX, pp. 250-252.

and everything suggests, on the contrary, that they must-rer (1). » It was in 1806 that he formulated this prediction
The following year, he invited Mr. de Rossi to do with him this observation: "How many times, of-
Then, the origin of this terrible Revolution, we have-
We had every reason in the world to say: Acta est
A fabula? And yet the play continues...
It is indeed true that wisdom consists in knowing how to envy to view this era with a firm eye for what it is, that is to say, ONE OF THE GREATEST ERA OF UNIVERSITY TOWARDS; since the barbarian invasion and the renewal- nothing has changed in terms of the societal shift in Europe. passed away, unrivaled in the world; it takes time to I am equally averse to such operations. to believe that evil might have no end or that it may end tomorrow... The political world being absolute- thoroughly shaken, right down to its foundations, nor the current generation, nor probably the one that follows it will succeed, will not be able to see the fulfillment of everything what is being prepared. We may have some for two centuries... When I think of all that must to arrive in Europe, and in the world, it me It seems that the Revolution is beginning (2).

Then came the Bourbon Restoration. He had not never ceased to announce, with an imperturbable assured, despite the advent of the Empire, the coronation of Bonaparte and the constantly triumphant march of Napoleon across Europe, that the king will return. His prophecy comes true; he sees the Bourbons again on the throne of their fathers, and he said, “A certain [person], I do not "I don't know what, it announces that NOTHING is over." "The com-

---

1. Ibid., vol. X, pp. 107-150.

2. Ibid., vol. XI, p. 284.

\

The worst thing for the French would be to believe that The Revolution is over and the column is replaced because it is raised. {one must believe, at On the contrary, that the revolutionary spirit is without com- Comparison stronger and more dangerous than he was a few years ago. What can the king do when the lu- Are the first generations of his people extinguished? (1) "Nothing 'is not yet stable, and on all sides one sees the se- 'beginnings of misfortune (2). » «The present state of Europe (1819) is horrifying; that of France in par- This particular situation is inconceivable. The Revolution is underway. no doubt, and not only is she standing, but She walks, she runs, she streets. The only difference that I glimpse between this era and that of the great Robespierre, that's when heads were rolling and that they are now turning. He is infinitely pro-It's possible that the French will give us another bones (3). » | | |

Doesn't this news seem like...
My next one?

This gave J. de Maistre this certainty of
In his view, it was because he had managed to raise his gaze above revolutionary events of which he was a witness:
than to their root causes.

“Since the time of the Reformation,” he said, “and even-
'Me since that of Wiclef, it existed in, Europe a certain terrible and unchanging spirit that worked relentlessly to overthrow European monarchies and Christianity... On this destructive spirit are all the antisocial and anti- systems that have come to be grafted onto them

1. Complete works of J. de Maistre, vol. II, 'Of the Pope.
Int.
2. Ibid., t. XIII, pp. 133-188.

3. Ibid., vol. XIV, p. 156.

Christians who have appeared in our time: Calvinism, Jansenism, philosophism, illuminism, etc. (let's add: liberalism, internationalism, modernism); all of this is one and should only be considered as a single sect that has sworn the destruction of Christ-Fianism and that of all the: thrones. Christians, but above all and most importantly that of the House of Bourbon and of the See of Rome (1). »

Not only did de Maistre see the Revolution to have, over time, a plate that extends: on four centuries, but he saw it in the space reached-to all peoples.

At the beginning of a memorandum addressed in 1809 to his sovereign rain, Victor Emmanuel I, he said: "If there is any-One obvious thing is the immense base of the Recurrent evolution which has not Cantor: pores AMS the
world (2).

"Things are falling into place for a major upheaval"
general. of the globe. -»

"It's an era, one of the most endowed"
of the universe," he kept saying, seeing at the Re-evolution of such great preliminaries and such a great surface. He added: "Woe to the generations who attend the eras of the world (3)! »

"The French Revolution was a great era, and its consequences in all genres will be felt.
well beyond the time of its explosion and the limits-
"tes of his home (4)." "The more I examine what is happening
The more time passes, the more I convince myself that we are witnessing

---

1. Complete Works of J. de Maistre, vol. VIII, p. 312.
2. Ibid., vol. XI, p. 232.

3. Ibid., vol. VIII, p. 273.

4. Complete Works of J. de Maistre, vol. I, no. 26.

one of the greatest eras of humankind (1).
"The world is in a state of childbirth."

The state of childbirth, that's precisely what makes a Time is an era. There was the era of the flood, who gave birth to the new generation of men,
the time of Moses who gave birth to the forerunners sister, the time of Christ who gave birth to the people Christian.

The era of the Revolution is the era of the anti-the most acute contradiction between Christian civilization and pagan civilization, between naturalism and the supernatural, between Christ and Satan.

What will be the outcome of the struggle? Lucifer and his followers
They fully expect to triumph. The Jews say that the coming 'of their Messiah, that the reign of the Antichrist is near, and that this reign will open, to their benefit, the most great era of the world.

We hope that our readers, after reading
This book will share our conviction, which is everything.
opposite. The defeat of the Revolution will inaugurate the social reign of Our Lord Jesus Christ over the humankind now forming a single herd under a single Pastor.

1. Ibid., vol. IX, p. 358.

CHAPTER VII

WHAT THE REVOLUTION IS DOING AND SAYING TODAY

– In the speech he delivered on October 28 1900 in Toulouse, as a preface to the discussion of the law on associations, Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau posed in these terms the question which, at this time, holds France in suspense and the world attentive to what It's happening here.

“In this country whose moral unity has, through towards the centuries, strength and grandeur, two gamesnesses, even less separated by their condition social than by the education they receive, granthey speak without knowing each other, until the day they will encounter, so dissimilar, that they risk to no longer understand each other. Little by little, things are preparing thus two different societies, – one more in more democratic, carried along by the broad current of the Revolution, and the other increasingly imbued with doctrines that one might have thought had not survived to the great movement of the 18th century, – and destinborn one day destined to clash.

The fact noted in these lines by Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau is real. Indeed, there is not only two youths, but two societies in our FranThey don't wait for the future to clash, They have been locked in a struggle for a long time. This dithe vision of the country against itself goes back beyond the period assigned to him by Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau, at beyond the 18th century. This was already observed in the 16th century. key, in the long efforts made by the Protestants to constitute a nation within a nation.

To encounter unity, morality which has been achieved, through... over the centuries, the strength and grandeur of our pasorting, and which Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau regrets, it is necessary to go even further. It was the Renaissance that began to share ideas and customs, remaining Christian among some, they returned to paganism among others. But after more than Four centuries, the spirit of the Renaissance could not to triumph again over the spirit of Christianity and reto do in the opposite direction the moral unity of the country. Nor the. violence, perfidy and betrayal of the Reformation me; nor. the corruption of minds and hearts 'betweentaken by Philosophism;' nor confiscations, the exiles, the massacres of the Revolution, could not have: because of the doctrines and virtues of Christianity has permeated the French soul for fourteen centuries. NaPoleon still saw him standing on the ruins amontconcealed by the Terror, and he found nothing better. than 'to let him live, while refusing him the means to fully restore Christian civilization yours. From then on, the conflict with di- vicissitudes verses, maintained, as Mr. Waldeck- notes Rousseau, not so much because of the diversity of the classes social than by the two educational systems present: university education, founded by Napoleon, and theChristian education which was maintained in the familes, to the church 'and soon -in 'the teaching libre.

So, the Church is still there, continuing to say that true civilization is that which responds to the the true condition of man, to the destinies that Her Creator made her and those whom her. Redempter made possible; therefore, that the company must be constituted and governed in such a way so that it promotes efforts towards holiness.

And the Revolution is still there too, saying that Man has only one earthly end: intelligence. it was given to him only to better satisfy his appetites; and that consequently society must be organized in such a way that it manages to provide to all the greatest possible amount of satisfaction worldly and carnal.

Not only is there division, but there is conflict: A conflict that has been evident since the Renaissance, a simmering conflict since the origins of Christianity; for from the day where the Church strove to establish and propagate the true civilization, she found before her the bad insinstincts of human nature to resist him.

“We must put an end to this,” Raoult Rigault had said. leading the hostages to the execution wall; there are ten- This has been going on for eight hundred years, it's time for this "End it." It must end! That was the word of the Ter- "Reaper," that was the word of the Commune. That is the word of Waldeck-Rousseau. The two youths, the two socompanies must clash in a supreme conflict; one, swept away by the broad current of the Revolutiontion, the other sustained and propelled by the breath of The Holy Spirit against the revolutionary tides. One must triumph over the other.

Having learned from experience, the sect of which Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau acted as agent, employing, for to achieve its goals, less bloody means than in '93, because she believes them to be more effective.

The first of these means was annihilation. religious congregations. Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau, in the Toulouse speech, he stated in these terms the reason for giving priority to the law that has makes disappear: "Such a fact (the coexistence of (two youths, from two societies) cannot be explained through the free play of opinions: it presupposes a substraa range of influences that were once more hidden and are now more visible, a power that isn't even hidden, and the establishment of a rival power within the state. This substratum of influences, this rival power, that Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau denounced in this way, he predictedtended to find it in religious congregations. "This," he continued, "is an intolerable situation and that all administrative measures have been impowerful enough to make disappear. All efforts will be in vain. as long as rational, effective legislation cace, will not have been substituted for legislation to illogical, arbitrary, and ineffective.

This effective legislation, Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau, of concert with Parliament, gave it to us. She had had been studied at length, meticulously prepared in the lodges for the desired effect; it was voted on and promulgated without incident in all respects, and perfected afterward by decrees and orders and measures that seem to no longer leave any room for doubt France offers no refuge for monastic life and well-being.

early religious education.

However, the annihilation of the congregations did not
Mr. Waldeck was not unaware of this, which puts an end to the conflict.
not. He also took care to say that "the law of the as-"Associations is just a starting point." And indeed, suppose the congregations disappeared, all of them and without hope of resurrection: it would be naive to believe that the Christian idea donata with them. Behind their battalions are located near the Holy Catholic Church.

And it is the Church that says, not only to the con-Greganists, but to all Christians and to all men: "Your final end is not here below;
"Aspire higher." It is in Her that we find,
to speak like Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau, this substraa tangle of influences that has been constantly at work for ten-eight centuries. It is She who would have to be destroyed in order to:
to kill the idea (1). Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau knows this, and it is That is why he presented his law as not being than a starting point.

"The law on associations is, in our view, the starting point of the largest and most li-social evolution, and also the indispensable guarantee sand of the most necessary prerogatives of the so-modern society.

A SOCIAL EVOLUTION, that's it, by his own admission
Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau, what the law he is preparing is... then proposed to submit to the sanction of the Parliament-ment, and which is now in office.

The desired, pursued social evolution is, for us we will see it throughout the rest of this work, the sor-tied, without hope of return, to the paths of civilization Christian, and the forward march in the ways of pagan civilization.

How the destruction of religious congregations
Could her be the "starting point"?

Ah! It's just the presence of religious figures at The Christian community is a preaching con-routine that never lets him lose sight of the end the last of man, the main goal of society

1. On July 12, 1909, Mr. Clemenceau said from the podium: “Nothing will be done in this country until we have changed the mindset introduced there by the Catholic authority."

and the character that true civilization must have.
Dressed in a special costume that marks what they are and what they pursue in this world, they di-they are familiar to the crowds among which they circulate, that we are all made for Heaven and that we must. tend. To this silent preaching is added that of their works, works of devotion which do not ask for any reward here below, and who af-affirm by this selflessness that it is a reward think. better than all should aspire to. En-their teaching in schools and from the pulpit will not end
'cease to sow in the souls of children, to make grow:
in the souls of adults, to 'spread throughout' all directions, faith, to eternal blessings. Nothing that opposes poses more directly and effectively to the reta-establishment: of the pagan social order. Nothing whose re-uprising of this order planned, desired, pursued
For four centuries, it has been demanding a more prompt response. disappearance (1). So long as religious people are

1. In the 15th century, as today, the monks furents attacked by Renaissance humanists, because that they represented the Christian ideal of renunciation.
Humanists pushed individualism to the point of selfishness;
by their vow of obedience and stability, the monks
They fought against it and suppressed it. The humanists exalted it pride of the mind; the monks extolled humility and voluntary abjection. Humanists glorified ri-Chess: the monks took a vow of poverty. The hu-
Finally, the monks legitimized sensual pleasure; the monks
They mortified their flesh through penance and chastity.
The pagan Renaissance sensed this opposition so keenly that it he attacked all the religious orders with just as much hatred than our modern sectarians.

The more rigorous a religious observance was, the more
It aroused the anger of humanism.

(The Church and the Origins of the Renaissance,
(by Mr. Jean GUÉRAUD, page 305.)

The Encyclopedists had the following views regarding the Religious same sentiments as the humanists.
On March 24, 1767, Frederick II, King of Prussia, wrote

»

WHAT THE REVOLUTION SAYS TODAY 75

There, let them act, let them teach, there is and there is will not only have two youths, but two Fran-These, Catholic France and Masonic France, each having a different and even ideal opposed, fighting amongst themselves to see who will make the triumph his own. And like 'the: masonry, as well as the Catholicism extends to the whole world, that everywhere
The two cities are present, and this is evident everywhere.
at the same time the same commitment in the same battle. Everywhere war is declared on religious figures, Everywhere the order is given to drive them out, to annihilate them. How many laws, how many decrees France-Freemasonry has had laws promulgated against them, in all country, nothing but the nineteenth century.

But the annihilation of monastic life is not and cannot be, as Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau says, that "a starting point". After the religious rest-tempted the priests, and if the priests themselves came
If they were dispersed, the Church would remain, as in the days the Catacombs, to maintain faith in a certain a certain number of families and in a certain number of hearts; and sooner or later, faith would recall priests and religious, as she did in 1800.
So we need something more.

First, finish subjugating the Church, then annihilate it-shooting. To subjugate it, we tried by "strict execution" of the Concordat”; to annihilate it, we hope to achieve this by the law separating Church and State.

Voltaire: "I have noticed, and others like me have, that The places where there are more monasteries are those where the people are most blindly attached to the supertition (to Christianity). There is no doubt that if one manages to destroy these havens of fanaticism, the people do not become somewhat indifferent and lukewarm towards these objects which are currently those of his veneration. It would be a matter of de-destroying the OURs at least to start reducing them the... »

CHAPTER VIII

WHERE DOES MODERN CIVILIZATION ENTAIL?

The need to annihilate the Church to ensure the the triumph of modern civilization, that is what Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau had suggested in The Toulouse speech. That's what Mr. Viviani said. abruptly, on January 15, 1901, from the top of the tribune,

“We are responsible for preserving from any attints the heritage of the Revolution... We we present here, carrying in our hands, in addition to the republican traditions, these French traditions attested by centuries of combat where, little by little, the-secularism has eluded the embraces of society religious... We are not only facing In dealing with the congregations, we are faced with — facing the Catholic Church... Above this struggle of a day, isn't it a trait that one meets once Moreover, this formidable conflict, where spiritual power-The temporal and civil power are vying for prerogatives. sovereign women, trying, by tearing away the consciences, to maintain control of until the very end humanity?

"As I said at the beginning, do you believe that this law leads us to the final basize? But this is only a skirmish at the re-Guard of the battles of the past and the future! The ve-The truth is that here, according to the beautiful ex-pressure from Mr. de Mun in 1878 (1), the founding society based on the will of man, and the society founded on the will of God. It is a question of whether, in this battle, a law on Associations will... suffice. The Congregations and the Church do not lead younot only by their actions, BUT BY THE PROPAGATION OF THE FAITH... Do not be afraid of the battles that would be offered to you, go; and if you find before you this divine religion which poeticizes suffering by promising it reparations-future actions, oppose him with the religion of humanity who, too, poeticizes suffering by offering him as a reward, the happiness of generations to come.

That's the question clearly stated.

In these words, we hear less the thoughts per-
Mr. Viviani's sonnelles than those of the anti- sect Christian. She claims to have been fighting for centuries against-between the Catholic Church: it boasts of having already achieved that the secular spirit gradually breaks down in the embraces of religious society; she knows that, in the effort made to destroy the congregations, she has not engaged in a skirmish, and to ensure, a definitive triumph, she will have to deliver new and numerous battles.

On his behalf, Mr. Viviani declares that... in the ba-Given its current size, it is something entirely different from "Republican defense" on the one hand, and on the other hand acceptance of a form of government. This which

1. Or rather, May 22, 1875, closing of the congress ca-
Catholic Church of Paris.

Here it is: "to steal the secular spirit from the embrace-
"tests of the religious society," "take the lead" of humanity," and "and destroy the society founded on the will of God, to build a new society new, founded on the will of man (1). »

That is why the war declared on the congregations-tions is only a commitment. The real campaign is the one that brings together the Catholic Church and the Masonic Temple, that is to say the Church of God and the Church of Satan, a formidable conflict on which depends the fate of humanity. As long as the Church will be standing, 'she will spread the faith, she will put in the heart of all those who suffer — and who does not suffer?
— eternal hopes. It is therefore only on its ruins that "the religion of humanity" can build nity," which promises happiness on this earth.

The discussion continued, both in the Senate and in

The Chamber only served to emphasize the importance of these statements. A few short quotes will show that the speeches of Messrs. Waldeck-Rousseau and Vi-

1. We know the watchword given by Gambetta: "The "Clericalism, that's the enemy!" and in what circumstances.
The center-right republic, inaugurated with the seven-Marshal MacMahon's birthplace had soon had to disappear.
to serve in front of a center-left republic. Mr. Buffet had been replaced at the head of the ministry by Mr. Du-Faure. Mr. Dufaure, tired of always having to resist the demands-These radicals resigned. MacMahon called ~ then the left was in power, in the person of Mr. Jules Si-Mr. MJ Simon made concessions to the far left that Mr. Dufaure had done so on the left and Mr. Buffet in the center; Three-left. Mac-Mahon then wanted to go against the current. The
On May 16, he sent MJ Simon a letter which the latter interpreted as 'a request for resignation.' The pre-President- charged: then Mr. de Broglie to form the Cabinet, and, on May 18, he addressed a message to the Chambers in which,
After explaining his conduct to them, he adjourned them to one month, in accordance with Article 24 of the Constitution.
Dürãñt cet'ajoutement; le 1er juin 1877, Gambetta reçu a delegation of young people from law schools, of me-viani do indeed have the meaning we just mentioned to say. | of Le.

Mr. Jacques Piou: "What the socialists want-Mr. Viviani said it quite frankly the other day. It's wresting consciences from spiritual power and con-to seek the direction of humanity.” The speaker is in-interrupted by a member of the left who shouts at him:
"It's not just the socialists who want it-
"Slow, that's what all Republicans are like."

Mr. Piou did not contradict him. He read aloud a Mr. Bourgeois had said in his speech: "Since French thought has been liberated since the mind
-of Reformation, Philosophy and Revolution has entered the institutions of France, the clergy-
"Calism is the enemy." Mr. Bourgeois interrupts; Mr.
Piou replies: "The quote I made is exact-and Mr. Bourgeois maintains it entirely. He maintains it, because it is the core of his thinking; it explains his enthusiasm for supporting the law on associations ciations, because the law on associations is the vic-medicine, etc., and he said something to them that would never have-but must have been forgotten, for none throws, on the quarter of the century that has just passed and on the character of the current struggle, a clearer light. "We have,

he said, 'AIR to fight for the form of government.'
the integrity of the Constitution THE STRUGGLE IS DEEPER:
the struggle is against everything that remains of the old world, BETWEEN THE AGENTS OF THE ROMAN THEOCRACY AND THE SONS OF 89.

An Englishman, Mr. Bodley, after a long investigation made In France, it was published under the title: FRANCE, An Essay on the History and Functioning of Political Institutions French. This statement by Gambetta can be found on page 201.

As for the battle cry, "Clericalism, that's the enemy-"Me!" Gambetta declared from the tribune in 1876 that he Peyrat's influence was evident. Peyrat, in fact, had written, in the time of the empire, in the National Opinion, this plerdse: "The "Catholicism, that's the enemy!" By substituting the word clericalcalism in the word Catholicism, Gambetta used FRYpor
a crisis familiar to Freemasons.

The Spirit of the Revolution, of Philosophy
...and of the Reformation regarding the affirmation of Catholicism.

At the meeting of January 22, Mr. Lasies replaced
These terms bring the question to its true ground: "There
In two sentences, I would say two dominant acts
This whole debate. The first sentence was uttered-Created by our esteemed colleague Mr. Viviani. He has said, "War on Catholicism!" I stood up and I replied, "Thank you, here's some fran-"Chise!" Another word was spoken, and this-by the Honorable Mr. Léon Bourgeois. On the invitation of Mr. Piou's statement, Mr. Bourgeois affirmed, once again... calf, that the goal he pursues with his friends, is to replace the spirit of the Church, that is to say the spirit of Catholicism, through the spirit of the Reformation, the spirit of the Revolution and the spirit of Reason. These words hover over the debate, they dominate it, and I want To address them directly, because that's the whole issue.
free from linguistic subterfuge and hypocrisy discussion sessions.

On March 11, MC Pelletan also stated that the the current struggle is linked to the major conflict underway between human rights and the rights of God. "See- therein lies the conflict that hangs over everything in this debate. "

On June 28, at the close of the discussion, Father Gayraud feels compelled, before the vote, to remind MPs, what they are going to do, what they are going to do to decide. "The law you are about to vote on is not not a law of appeasement and pacification. We are mistaken- This country is being condemned with these words. It's a hate law. against the Catholic Church. Mr. Viviani unveiled the at the heart of the project, when he declared | from the podium the "War on the Catholic faith."

Mr. de Mun fulfills the same duty: "No one has not forgotten Mr. Viviani's memorable speech which will remain, despite the abundance of speeches and posters, the best understood of all. Mr. Viviani sees in the law the beginning of the war against the Catholic Church, which is the alpha and omega of his party... In the report that the Official published this morning and which we had to read hastily, the honorary Mr. Trouillot said that the law of associations is the prelude to the separation of the Churches with the State, which must have as its indispensable corollary A general law on the policing of religious practices. The Chamber And so the country is enlightened. It's open war. declared to the Catholic Church. For this general law the policing of religious practices will only be a set regulations likely to hinder, by all possible means, the ministers of religion.

Mr. Viviani takes the podium to confirm the Mr. Trouillot's threat, which, moreover, only did repeat what many ministers had said before him: "During the sessions in which the The Republican party brought the current project to fruition, if incomplete and imperfect as its form might be gale, we fully embraced it, with the des- well stopped at strengthening it in the future by new measures. » (Very good! very good! to lex- (extreme left).

What should these measures be? What should they do?

They tender? Mr. Viviani said it: "to substitute reli-
"the union of humanity with the Catholic religion," or, according to Mr. Bourgeois's formula, "to give to the-taken from the Revolution, from Philosophy and from the "Reformation, the victory over Catholic affirmation":

the Catholic affirmation that shows the end of man beyond this world and this present life, and the spirit of Philosophy and Revolution which is of bord-to broaden humanity's horizon to include animal life and to ter-rest.

If the words we have just reported had were spoken in a club or in a box, they would merit consideration due to their seriousness.
But that they were said from the podium, and repeated, Here again, almost six months apart, applause-dies by the vast majority of representatives of the people, and finally sanctioned by a law made in the spirit that dictated them, that is surely a se-A serious subject for meditation.

Mr. Viviani said: "We are not only In the presence of the Congregations, we are faced with "facing the Catholic Church," in order to combat it,
to wage a war of extermination against him.

This thought has haunted the mind for a long time.
enemies of God. They have been for a long time
They flatter themselves with the idea of being able to exterminate the Church.

In a letter written on February 25, 1758, Voltaire
He said, "In another twenty years, God will have an easy time of it."
To Police Lieutenant Hérault, who accused him his impiety and said to him, “No matter what you do, Whatever you write, you will not come to
"To destroy the Christian religion," Voltaire replied: "We shall see (1)."

God had a good game... against Voltaire. As for what is of the Church, not twenty years ago, but a hundred fifty years have passed; and the Catholic Church is still-days standing.

The same will be true today, although they believe they are confident that this time they have taken their decisions better. measures.

On January 15, 1881, the Journal de Genève published a conversation from his Paris correspondent with one of the leaders of the Freemason majority who then, as today, the Chamber of Members of Parliament. He said: "At the heart of it all (of all these laws promulgated one after the other), there is a dominant inspiration, a fixed plan and methodical, which unfolds with more or less of order, of delay, but with an invincible logic. What we are doing is the formal siege of the Roman Catholicism, taking our point of reference in the Concordat. We want to make him capitulate or break it. We know where its vital forces lie, — And that's where we want to reach him."
= In 1886, in the January 23rd issue of the In the religious week of Cambrai, we reported on these Other words that had been spoken in Lille: "We we will relentlessly pursue the clergy and all who touches on religion. We will use against the ca-Catholicism of means of which he is not even aware. We will make every ingenious effort to make him disappear. rise of this world. If, despite everything, it were to happen that he If I resist this scientific war, I would be the first-to declare that it is of divine essence.

MG de Pascal writing in the Catholic Review and royalist, March 1908 issue, said:

“Many years ago, Cardinal Mermillod he told me a story that perfectly illustrates the situation, when He was still in Geneva: the illustrious prelate was seeing from time to time Prince Jérôme Bonaparte who lived in The land of Prangins was silent. The revolutionary prince greatly enjoyed the conversation of the spiritual bishop. One One day, he told him, "I am not a friend of the Church."

---

1. Condorcet. Life of Voltaire.

As a Catholic, I do not believe in its divine origin.
but knowing what is being plotted against her, the efforts admirably executed against his existence; if She is resisting this assault, I will have to admit.
that there is something here that transcends the human.

In June 1903, La Vérité Française reported that Mr. Ribot, in a private conversation, had spoken Similarly: "I know what is being planned; I know meticulously examining the meshes of the vast net that is ten-Well, if the Roman Catholic Church escapes from this...
This time in France, it will be a miracle, a miracle if shining brightly in my eyes that I will become a Catholic with you. » (l

This miracle, we have seen it in the past, we will see it again in the future. The Jacobins could also believe themselves sure, even more sure of success than our free-pen-sirs; they had to admit that they had been mistaken-Pes,... and they did not convert. "I have seen," he said Barruel, in his Memoirs (2), I saw Cerutti aborinsolently der the secretary of the Nuncio of Pius VI, and in impious joy, with the smile of pity, him to say: "Guard your Pope well; guard this one well, and embalm him well after his death, for I tell younuncio, and you can be sure of this, you will not have "Nothing else." He didn't suspect then, this supposed a prophet, Barruel continues, who would appear before Pius VI before the God who, despite the storms of Jacob-Binism, like so many others, will not be less with Peter and his Church until the end of the centuries. » |

1. In the session of November 8, 1909, in the Senate, Mr.
Ribot said: "We will maintain secular schools as a
A necessary instrument of progress and civilization.
Speaking in this way, Mr. Ribot no longer appeared merely as one of the insiders, but as part of a conspiracy.

2 Volume V, p. 208.

Mr. Viviani said that if the Freemasonry wanted to destroy the Church was in order to be able to replace to the religion of Christ, the religion of humanity.

To establish a new religion, the "religion of "Humanity" is, in fact, as we shall see, the term to which Freemasonry wants to bring about the movement- a process that began during the Renaissance: emancipation humanity's condition.

In a book published in Fribourg under this title: "The deification of humanity, or the positive side of Freemasonry, Father Patchtler has clearly shown the meaning that Freemasonry gives to the word "Humanity" and the use it makes of the word. "This word, -he said, is employed by thousands of men (initiates or unconscious echoes of initiates), in a confused meaning, no doubt, but still, thispendant like the nom de guerre of a certain part of a specific goal, which is opposition to Positive Christianity. This word, in their mouths, does not does not only mean the human being as opposed to to the bestial being,... he posits, as a thesis, independence absolute of man in the intellectual field, religious and political; he denies for himself any ultimate end. natural, and demands that perfection purely the natural state of the human race is conveyed to the Paths of progress. These three errors correspond to Three steps on the path to evil: [Humanity without God, Humanity making itself God, Humanity against God. Such is the edifice that Freemasonry wants to erect. in place of the divine order which is Humanity with God. "

When the sect speaks of the religion of the future, of the religion of humanity, it is this edifice, this The temple she has in sight.

In 1870, late July and early August, a holiday, in which the lodges of StrasBourg, Nancy, Vesoul, Metz, Chalons-sur-Marne, Reims, Mulhouse, Sarreguemines, the whole East in a word, was held in Metz. The question of the "Supreme Being" there was posed, and the ensuing discussions began... They move from lodge to lodge.

To put an end to this, the Masonic World, issues of January and May, made this statement: “The French-Freemasonry teaches us that there is only one

A true religion, and therefore only one natural, the worship of humanity. For, my brothers, this abstraction which, erected into a system, has served to to form all religions, God is nothing else that the sum of all our highest instincts, to whom we have given a body, an existence distinct; this God is ultimately only the product of a a generous, but flawed, conception of humanity, who has stripped herself bare for the sake of a chimera.

Nothing could be clearer: humanity is God, rights human laws must be substituted for divine law.
the cult of man's instincts must take the place from that which is returned to the Creator, the search for progress.
in the satisfactions to be given to the senses, to substitute-to kill aspirations for the future life.

At a joint session of the Lyon lodges, held on May 3, 1882, and whose report was published in the Chain of Union of August 1882, the F.:. Régnier said: "We must not ignore what is not no longer a mystery: that for a long time two armies are present, that the fight is currently open in France, Italy, Belgium, Spain, between light and ignorance, and that one will be right
On the other hand, we need to know that the General Staffs,

The leaders of these armies are, on one side, the Jesuits.
(read the clergy, secular and regular) and on the other Freemasons.

But the destruction of the Church will not bring about the space clear enough for the construction of the Masonic temple; also, to the clamor against the E-church, cries no less hateful are always joined by children against the social order, against the family and against Property. And it must be so, for the truths of the religious order have entered into substance even of these institutions.

Society is based on authority, which has its principle in God; the family, on marriage which is part of divine blessing, its legitimacy and its indissolubil-property; ownership, according to the will of God who has promulgated the seventh and tenth commandments to protect it against theft and even against covetousness. That's what needs to be destroyed, if the aim is, as the sect claims, to found civilization on new foundations.

Leo XIII noted this in his Encyclical Humanum genus: "What the Freemasons propose-
"This is what all their efforts are aimed at," he said.
it is to completely destroy the entire religious discipline religious and social, born from Christian institutions, and to replace it with another, adapted to their ideas, and whose principle and fundamental laws are derived from naturalism.

The ideas and projects presented at the podium and in the lodges, are the expression of a thought and of a will that is found everywhere. France, the Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, the ent-tooth to all democratic Congresses, read them every day in a multitude of newspapers.

In 1865, the congress of students was held in Liège.
deans. It was from this congress that everything was drawn first the general staff of the international, then the auxiliaries Gambetta's hairs. More than a thousand young people, who came from Germany, Spain, Holland, England, Representatives from France and Russia were present.
they were unanimous in their sentiments of hatred against dogmas and even against morality Catholics; unanimous adherence to doctrines and to the acts of the French Revolution, including the massacres of 1793; unanimous hatred against the... current social order, "which does not include two insti-
"Justice-based tuitions," a word spoken at the opinion piece by Mr. Arnoult, editor of the Precursor of An-verses, and applauded wildly by the assembly. A Another speaker, Mr. Fontaine, from Brussels, concluded his speech began with these words: "We, revolutionaries" and socialists, we want physical development
The musical, moral, and intellectual development of humankind. Note I say physical first, intellectual second. We we want, in the moral order, through the annihilation of prejudices of religion and church, leading to denial of God and to free examination. We want, in the political order, through the realization of the republican idea-Canadian, to arrive at the federation of peoples and at the solidarity diversity of individuals. In the social order, we wishlons, through the transformation of property, through the abolition of heredity, through the application of the principles through association, through mutuality, to achieve solidarity interests and justice! We want, through liberation-the worker first, the citizen and the individual next, and without distinction of class, the abolition of all authoritarian systems.

Others spoke in the same vein. That is because The annihilation of Christianity cannot be conceived, without the ruin of all the institutions born from him and based upon it; logical men understand itnent, the frank men say so, the anarchists will execute.

At that same congress in Liège, Lafargue asked:
"What is the Revolution?" And he would answer:
“The Revolution is the triumph of labor over the capital, of the worker over the parasite, of man over God. That is the social revolution that the principles of '89, human rights brought to their last expression. » He also said: «There is For four hundred years we have been undermining Catholicism, the the strongest machine ever invented, in fact of spiritualism; she is still solid, unhappy-"Lying!" Then, in the last session, he pushed this cry from hell: "War on God! Hatred of God!" PROGRESS IS HERE! We must break through the sky like a paper vault: »

Lafargue's conclusion was: "In the presence of such a great and pure principle as that (also free from the supernatural and everything that has constitling up to now the social order), one must hate or prove that we love.

Other French people joined him in demanding that the
The separation became clearer and more complete between those who hate and those who love, those who hate evil and love good, and those who hate good and love evil. Mr. Regnard, Paris his own, came to say where Freemasonry puts evil and good: evil in spiritualism, good in Materialism. "We are reattaching our flag."
to the men who proclaim materialism: everything
A man who is for progress is also for the Positive or materialist philosophy.

When these words "progress" and others like them fall from Masonic lips, there are some cathicles to collect them with a sort of respect and naive trust, believing they saw in it aspirations rations towards a desirable state of affairs. Lafargue and Regnard have just told us what the sect, whoever put them into circulation intended to bring them into circulation.

Germain Casse: "It is necessary that upon leaving here we let us be from PARIS or ROME, or Jesuits, or revolutionaries "lutionaries." And as a sanction, he demands "extotal, complete exclusion of any individual who represents to feel, to some degree, the religious idea. A necessary condition for it to be established and above all, to maintain the desired new order of things and continued.

There's no need to elaborate on these shorthand quotes. by the editors of the Gazette de Liège on the The congress tables themselves. The other newspapers had fear of reproducing these words in their beautiful crudity. Citizen Fontaine reminded them of the need to respect the Truth: "Only one newspaper," he said, "only one was In good faith, it's the Gazette de Liège, and that's because that she is frankly Catholic, apostolic and Roman. She published a comprehensive analysis of the debates.

The following year, at the Brussels congress, the ciToyen Sibrac, a Frenchman, appealed to the women for the great work; and to encourage them he said: "It was Eve who uttered the first cry of revolt." against God.” — It is known that one of the cries of admission The ration of Freemasonry is: "Eval Eval"

There again, citizen Brismée said: "If the property resists the Revolution; it is necessary, by decrees of the people, annihilate property. If the bourgeoisie re"Siste, we must kill the bourgeoisie." And the citizen Pilgrim: "If six hundred thousand heads stand in the way, let them _ fall!

After the congresses in Liège and Brussels, he There was one in Geneva, composed of students and...

books like & Brussels. There too God and religion were dismissed by mutual agreement, the ideas religious practices were declared harmful to the people and contrary to human dignity, morality was proclaimed to be independent of religion. There was talk of gold- to organize "huge, invincible" strikes, in front of to end in a GENERAL STRIKE.

Let's cut to the chase. Another international congress took place In The Hague in 1872. Citizen Vaillant also said there that the war against Catholicism and God could not to go without war on property and property owners silences.

"The bourgeoisie," he said, "must expect a war." more serious than the latent struggle to which the International is currently condemned. And he will not delay- dera pas, the day of the Commune's revenge from Paris!

"Complete extermination of the bourgeoisie: such must be the first act of the future revolution social (1). » |

If we wanted to give an idea of what happened said and of what has been printed in these last thirty- In the last few years, we would be infinite. It's a con- birth of all, that the republican regime, above- everything lately has let in, or even spread throughout all levels of society the most subversive ideas.

---

1. Those who desire more numerous quotes and More extensive information can be found in the book Les Secret Societies and Society, by N. Deschamps, con- continued by Mr. Claudio Jannet.

CHAPTER IX

IT IS FREEMASONRY THAT IS IN CHARGE THE WAR AGAINST CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION

In the wake of the publication of the Encyclical, by which Leo XIII denounced once again to the world Freemasonry as the secret agent of the war against the Church and the entire social order, the Bulletin of the Grand Symbolic Scottish Lodge expressed The sect's thinking was expressed in these terms:

"Freemasonry can do no less than..." to thank the Sovereign Pontiff for his last encyclopedia click. Leo XIII, with unquestionable authority and a wealth of evidence, has just demonstrated, a Once again, that there is an unbridgeable abyss between the Church, of which he is the representative, and the Revolution lution, of which Freemasonry is the right arm. It is good that those who are hesitant cease to... to maintain vain hopes. Everyone must... They are starting to understand that the time has come TO CHOOSE between the old order, which is based on Revelation, and the new order which recognizes no other foundations ments that science and human reason, between the spirit of authority and the spirit of freedom (1).

---

1. Quoted by Don Sarda y Salvany. Social evil, its causes his, his remedies.

This thought was expressed again at the Conwind of 1902, by the speaker charged with pronouncing The closing speech: "...What separates us? It is an abyss, an abyss that will only be filled on the day when Freemasonry will triumph, the tireless worker of prodemocratic principles and social justice... So far, no - no truce, no rest, no rapprochement, no Concessions... This is the final phase of the struggle of the Church and the Congregation against our society Republican and secular. THE EFFORT MUST BE SUPREME... » The Church overthrown, everything else will crumble.

Also, La Lanterne, an unofficial organ and of our rulers and Freemasonry, has not ceased Since then, they have been saying it every day and in every tone: “Before any other question, before the so- question Before the political question, we need to finish. with the clerical question. That's the key to everything else. If we were to commit the crime of capitulating, of raslowing down our action, letting the opponent escape, It would soon be over, both for the Republican party and of the Republic. The Church would not allow us to repeat the experiment. She knows today that the Republic will be fatal to him, and if this Don't kill her, she's the one who will kill the Republic. Between the Republic and the Church, it's a duel... death. Let us hasten to crush the infamous thing, or resign ourselves- "We have allowed freedom to be stifled for centuries."

A recent event demonstrates in rac-
I will explain what will be presented in the second and third parts.
Part six of this book: how the sect acts to achieve his goals.

On a flimsy pretext, a revolt breaks out in Barcelona, fires and massacres force the Spanish government to put the city in a state of the siege... The instigator Ferrer is apprehended. Instead to have him shot on the spot, he is handed over to the court

The military officer who condemns him to death. The judgment is ratified. False documents are sent to Newspapers from all countries: Ferrer has not been tried according to the law. His lawyer was arrested. The clergy, The Pope himself is implicated. "The hand bloody Church, party to the trial, writes La Lanterne led everything; and the king's soldiers
Those in Spain are simply carrying out his wishes.
The people must revolt against this religion
"Of murder and bloodshed." A caricature was shown to support this claim.
depicts a priest, a dagger in his hand.
threats of reprisals, assassination of the king and the Pope petitions are pouring in from Madrid and Rome.
circulate in Paris, Rome, Brussels, London,
- in Berlin to protest the verdict. Ferrer is executed. Immediately, demonstrations, including several-bloody lords, occur in the main Cities in France and all European countries. For
To top it all off, a kind of triumph seeks to glorify him in the streets of Paris, under the cover of the police, with the army's participation, in the singing of the Interna-
national.

The government is being challenged in various ways.
parliaments, protests are signed by the Departmental and municipal councils. Fifty-seven French cities decide to name their city after Ferrer to one of their streets.

The spontaneity and the prodigious ensemble of these demonstrations for a cause unrelated to interests
The results from various countries indicate an expanding organization.
affecting all peoples, and having influence even in their humblest localities. Among the pieces of the
In the Barcelona trial, some established that

Ferrer belonged to the Grand International Lodge, the mysterious center from which the world is exerted
The hidden power of Freemasonry.

But now the sect is denouncing itself.

The council of the Grand Orient of Paris sent to all his workshops and to all the powers: Masonic world, a manifesto of protest against the execution of Ferrer. He claimed there the emuthird for one of his own: "Ferrer was one of us.
He felt that in Masonic work was expressed the highest ideal that can be given to man to achieve. He affirmed our principles to the very end. This "What we wanted to achieve in him is the Masonic ideal-fuck

"Before the indefinite progress of humankind."
A force of arrest has been assembled, the principals of which...
The traps and the action aim to throw us back into the night of the Middle Ages.

'The Grand Orient of Belgium,' hastened to reply to the manifesto of the Grand Orient of France: “The Grand-Orient of Belgium, sharing noble sentiments which inspired the proclamation of the Grand Orient of France, on behalf of the Belgian Lodges, joins the indignant protest that he addressed to the Ma-Universal stupidity and the civilized world against:
unjust sentence pronounced and mercilessly executed cut off with regard to Brother Francisco Ferrer.

The Italian Grand Orient and others no doubt did Similarly: "François Ferrer, an honor to culture and of modern thought, tireless apostle of the idea a layman, was shot on the orders of the Jesuits, in the horrible dungeon of the Montjuïc fortress, still all resounding with the cries of countless victims...
A shudder of horror swept across the world, which in a sublime surge of human solidarity, mausaid the known and hidden perpetrators of the murder and the destined for execration and infamy.

The central committee of the TETE League Human Rights, meeting in extraordinary session On October 13, 1909, it was decided to erect a monument to the memory of Ferrer, "martyr of free thought and of the democratic ideal.” He invited all the organizations the principles of free thought to contribute to the realization tion of this project, and resolved to erect it in Montmartre, opposite the Sacred Heart church.

Freemasonry therefore declared in words and in actions that she considered Ferrer and defended him as the embodiment of the "Masonic ideal." What So, was this Ferrer's ideal? He himself made it known. born in May 1907 in the educational journal HumaNidad Nueva where he set forth the principles of "the School modern” that he had just founded with little money lawfully obtained from a practicing Catholic and even pious.

“When we loved, six years ago, the very Great joy to open the Modern School of Barcelona, we hastened to make known that his the education system would be rationalist and scientific tific. We wished to inform the public that, the Science and reason being the antidotes to all dogma, we would not teach any religion in our school gion..

"The more we were shown the recklessness that we we had to place ourselves so frankly opposite the all-powerful Church in Spain, the more we feelings of courage to persevere in our projets.

"However, it is necessary to make known that" the mission of the modern school is not limited to just-

[This] stems from the desire to see religious prejudices disappear. gieux of intelligences. Although these prejudices are of those who most oppose intellectual emancipation elective of individuals, we will not obtain, with their disappearance, a free and happy humanity, thenthat one can conceive of a people without religion, but also without freedom.

"If the working classes were to free themselves from prejudices"

religious authorities and retained that of property as it exists at present, if the workers constantly believed in the parable that there will always be days of the poor and the rich, if teaching The rationalist was content to spread notions on hygiene and science and to prepare alone-good apprentices, good workers, good employees of all professions, we would continue to live more or less healthily and robustly with the mo-food that our modest salary, but we would never cease to be always the slaves of capital.

"The Modern School therefore claims to fight all the prejudices that oppose the total emancipation of the individual and it adopted, for this purpose, the rational-humanitarianism, which consists of instilling in young people nesse the desire to know the origin of all the social injustices so that she can manage to comto fight using the knowledge she will have acquired quises.

"Our rationalism combats fratricidal wars" of, whether internal or external, the exploitation of man by man; he fights against the state of serfdom velocity in which the woman within our society; he fights in a word all enemies of universal harmony, such as ignorance, wickedness, pride, and all vices and flaws that divide men into two classes:

The exploiters and the exploited.

In a letter addressed to one of his friends, Ferrer manifested the thinking of his school even better:
"So as not to frighten people and not to provide to the government a pretext to close my establishments-I call them "Modern School" and not
"School for anarchists." Because the goal of my propaganda-Great is, I frankly admit, to train in My schools run by convinced anarchists. My wish is to call for a revolution. For the moment, we | However, we must be content with implanting in the
the brain of youth the idea of upheaval violent. She must learn that there is no opposition.
The gendarmes and the tonsure, only one means:

"The bomb and the poison."

The investigation of the trial led to the discovery at the the villa "Germinal" where he lived, hidden documents in a cleverly concealed underground passage and having several exits. They proved that he was the soul of all revolutionary movements which have occurred in Spain since 1872. Here are among other things, extracts from circulars written in 1892: —

"Comrades, let us be men, let us crush these in-Famous bourgeois... Before building, let's destroy everything...
If, among the politicians, some appeal
To your humanity, kill them... Abolition of all laws... expulsion of all religious communities gious... Dissolution of the Judiciary, of the Army and the Navy... Demolition of churches...

Finally, in Ferrer's own handwriting, this note:
"I've included a recipe for making panclastite."

This is the man that Freemasonry presented to the world as professing his IDEAL.

A few days after Ferrer's execution, the cabinet net of Madrid was forced to resign, the leaders of the Liberal Party and the Democratic Party, obeyno doubt acting on the orders of the Lodge, inform Mr. Maura that they would create an irrecompliant with any measure, any project that he may pre-would feel. However, in Spain, without two-thirds of the With fewer votes, everything can still be stopped and becomes legally impossible. The Liberal Party and the Democratic Party now refusing their con-Course, administration became impossible. This de-
The mission delighted freethinkers and atheists.
throughout Europe. The newspaper said:

"Is there a major duel taking place worldwide?"
The same everywhere, no conflict exists between religions.
* and Free Thought, between 'Autocracy and Democracy, between Absolutism and Revolution? Is it
There are borders for the Church and a homeland for The Vatican? Isn't the drama of humanity playing out there?
not around these international forces which are The Convent and the School? The fall of the Maura cabinet, as well as Ferrer's execution, will not have been that one of the episodes of this great, ongoing drama. x

We have elaborated on this fact. Nothing could better prepare the reader to understand what what will follow: the history of Masonic activity in France during the last two centuries, the exposition of the organisation — of the sect, its means of action and of his methods, the conjectures about the outcome of the struggle engaged between the synagogue, of “Satan and the Church of Our Lord Jesus Christ. 3

| ND Ke a 2 UNG \

ee ie. l
+ | NA d © 7
Yom Re ouch

Digitized by Google

IT

THE AGENT OF THE MODERN CIVILIZATION

HISTORICAL

FIRST PERIOD

FROM BEGINNINGS TO REVOLUTION

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER X

FREEMASONRY IN ITS BEGINNINGS

In a Pastoral Letter, written in 1878, Bishop Martin, Bishop of Natchitoches, in the United States, has Very well said: |

“In the face of this persecution of a universe unprecedented seriousness, due to the simultaneity of his actions, from the similarity of the means it employs, we we are inevitably led to conclude the existence of a given direction, of an overall plan, of a strong.
organization that executes a fixed goal towards which Everything is tense.

"Yes, this organization exists, with its goal," its plan and the hidden direction 4 which it obeys;
a compact company despite its global spread:
a company mixed with all companies without being subject to any of them cune; society of a power above all power, except that of God; terrible society, which is, for religious society as for the civil societies, for the civilization of the world, no not just a danger, but the most formidable dangers.

Leo XIII explained in these terms the goal that for-follows this international organization.

j

"The supreme purpose of Freemasonry is to completely ruin the entire discipline religious and social which arose from Christian institutions
yours, AND TO SUBSTITUTE FOR IT A NEW one conceived according to his idea, and whose fundamental principles rates and laws are borrowed from NATURALISM (1).

The idea of replacing Christian civilization another civilization founded on naturalism, is born, as we have said, in the middle of the 14th century; a superhuman effort, continued to this day, was attempted to create it, at the end of the 18th century. We conceive with difficulty, fought for all this time through the Church, it has survived and developed across five centuries, finally bursting forth with the
the power we see in it today, if we assumes that through this long space, it has found men to pass on the guard and the propaganda passed down from generation to generation and a powerful society to prepare for its triumph.

A true conspiracy against Christianity presupposes, in effect, not only the wish to the de-

to kill, but intelligences, a concert in the means of attacking, fighting and annihilating it.

These followers, since they were conspiring against the state of things that existed, had every interest in hiding during their lifetime, and to leave behind them only the least possible traces of the existence of their associationtion and their conspiracy.

However, there are serious indications that suggest that Vide des humanistes was collected by the Freemasonry. Whether or not it existed before them, She attempted to realize their plan in the 18th century. and she has taken it up again in our time with the experience that he gave rise to his failure.

Freemasons claim to trace their origins back to the past.

1. Encyclical of April 20, 1884.

originating from Solomon's Temple, and even being the heirs to the mysteries of paganism. We have not The point to examine here is the validity or unjustification of these claims; but we must see if, in the In modern times, the sect has truly been the soul of the social transformation begun by the Renaissance sance, continued in the Reformation, and which seeks to bring aboutshot by the Revolution (1), continued for more than a century.

The second generation of humanists, even more so that the first one introduced into people's minds a an absolutely pagan way of conceiving existence. This trend was finally going to provoke resistance of the supreme authority of the Church. That is what happened during the reign of Paul II. This Pope renewed the college of abbreviators of the chancery and made to expel all those who were not of integrity and of perfect honesty. This measure led to the final limits the anger of those who had to They suffered from it. For twenty nights in a row, they satmanage the gates of the papal palace without arriving to gain admission. One of them, Platina, then wrote to the Pope to threaten him with going to the kings and the princes, and invite them to convene a conthe city before which Paul II would have to exonerate himself his conduct towards them. This insolence led to his arrest and imprisoned in Fort Saint-Ange.

The others held meetings at the home of one of their members. Pomponius Letus, of whom Pastor says that “never can Being learned did not imbue his existence with paganism. "ancient to the same degree as him." He professed for the Christian religion held in the deepest contempt, and he never stopped spreading violent speeches against his ministers (1).

1. Note the following between these three words: REnaissance, Reform, revolution: a clear kinship. They mark the major stages of a single movement.

These meetings gave birth to a society which they called the Roman Academy. A crowd of young men, pagan in ideas and customs, came to join them. By entering this inner circle, they were leaving their given name to take on other names from antiquity, and even chosen from among the most disreputable. At the same time, they were appropriating the the most scandalous vices of paganism. Valater-Ranus acknowledged that these meetings and parties that what was celebrated there was "the beginning of a movement of-leading to the abolition of religion.

Did a moment come when they no longer believed themselves to be in Safety in Pomponius's house? That being said... that the names of the members of the Roman Academy are found inscribed in the catacombs; that Pomponius Letus is described as “Pontifex maximus” and Pantagathus, "priest" (2). To these names are added-These are inscriptions relating to debauchery. They were not ashamed to engrave them on these walls so profoundly venerable. The historian Gregovorius does not hesitate to call this Academy, "a lodge of traditional Freemasons.” She had chosen the te-darkness of the catacombs to better hide its existence tence to authority; and, by giving to its leaders the titles of "priest" and "Sovereign Pontiff", she clearly indicated that it was not a literary society raire, but a kind of Church in opposition to the Catholic Church, a religion, this human religion-

1. See, for all these facts, HISTORY OF THE POPES of Then the end of the Middle Ages. A work written based on a great number of unpublished documents extracted from the archives se- Vatican crete and others, by Dr. Louis Pastor, t. IV, pp. 32-72.

2. See de Rossi, Roma sott., t. I, p. 3 et seq.

nitarian or this religion of Nature that the Revolution:- tion later wanted to substitute religion in France of God the Creator, Redeemer, Sanctifier; and whose the sect, as we shall see, continues the adoption for all of humankind.

To pagan impiety and license they had given as a companion the republican ideal. One of the In the last days of February 1468, Rome learned of its waking up to the fact that the police had just discovered a conspiracy- tion against the Pope and to carry out numerous arrests tations, mainly between the members of the Academy demic. The plan was to assassinate Paul II and proclaim the Roman Republic. "We will not dispel probably never entirely, said Pastor, the darkness which hangs over this conspiracy. » All of this points well the characteristics of a secret society.

At the time of the Reformation, the existence of France Masonry becomes more evident.

It was in the 16th century, says N. Deschamps, in the year- born in 1535, which dates back to the oldest document in the- authentic of Masonic Lodges. It is known as the name of the Cologne Charter. It reveals to us lexis- tence, already ancient, perhaps dating back two centuries keys, of one or more existing secret societies clandestinely in various European states, and in direct antagonism with religious principles religious and civilians who had formed the basis of the Christian society.

N. Deschamps provides evidence of authenticity of this charter. Let's say they are not accepted accepted by everyone. Claudio Jannet admits them. The docu- the original would be found in the archives from the mother lodge in Amsterdam, which, it is said, preserves also the act of its own constitution, dated 1519.

Everything about this document is remarkable: the facts,
The ideas and the names of the signatories. He reveals to us existence and activity, for at least a century, — which takes us beyond Paul II and the secret society of humanists, — of a society already extending throughout the universe, surrounded by the se-the deepest creed, having mysterious initiationslaughing, obeying a supreme leader or patriarch, known only to a few masters.

"Not obeying any power in the world," they say the signatories, and subject only to superiors elected representatives of our association spread across the globe in-third party, we carry out their secret commissions and their clandestine orders through a letter trade secret and by their agents responsible for com-express missions.

They claim to only give access to their mysteries to those who have been examined and tested and who will be linked and dedicated to their assemblies by oaths.

They characterize the distinction between them and the world
profane by these words which are found in all the Freemasonry documents: "The Enlightened World" and "the world plunged into darkness," words which express the entirety of Freemasonry, because its the goal is to bring Christianity out of darkness in the light of pure nature, of Christian civilization-ties to Masonic civilization.

Among the signatories of this charter are not only Philippus Melanchthon, the great friend of Luther (1), Herman de Viec, archbishop-elector

1. Melanchthon's editor, the scholar Bretschneider, said: "Melanchthon received strangers in his private life-gers he had never seen before, and he re-commanded warmly wherever they went and provided for all their needs. I don't know if

of Cologne, who had to be ostracized by the empire for © his collusion with the Protestants, Jacobus of Antwerp, provost of the Augustinians of this city, and Nicolas Van Noot, who both incurred the same re- relatives, but also Coligny, the leader of the Cal- party — wine merchant in France.

Twelve years earlier, four years after the cons- Institution of the Amsterdam Lodge, Franz de Seckongen, whose revolt had failed to put all of Al- Lemagne, embroiled in civil war, died of his wounds in his fortified castle of Landstuchl, besieged by the allied princes of Trier, Hesse and the Palatinate. "Where are all our friends," he cried? "Where are the lords of Arnberg, Furstenberg, Zollern, the Swiss, my friends, allies of Strasbourg, and all the friends of the brotherhood who had promised me so much and who "They kept their word to me so badly?" MZ Janssen, in His work, Germany and the Reformation, asks: "What elements comprised this FRATERNITY?" "What is the dying man talking about?" It is not impossible that the answer lies in what precedes it. It is indeed worth noting that the cities where, according to The Charter of Cologne established Lodges, These are the places where Protestantism found its first members. |

From these facts, we see a probability emerging. serious, that Freemasonry played a very part great in the movement of ideas that manifested itself during the Renaissance, and who wanted to impose himself on the so- Christian society through the Reformation, whether it existed previously, either because it owes its existence to the hu- manists, who would have created it precisely to embody-such familiarity was caused solely by the virtues of these men or the renown of Melancho- tuna and the doctrine which he shared with them.

to somehow instill in it their conception of the life and their conception of society.

In its origins, Freemasonry was supposed to be... to develop a secret far more impenetrable than she cannot do so nowadays, after continued action for several centuries; hence the difficulty of re- to find her traces. But the part she played in the Revolution gives us clues that we have just re-to obtain probative value that they would not have equally great in themselves; for that is indeed the thought humanists, as we have seen, that the Revolution sought to achieve through the destruction of the Catholic Church and in the establishment of worship of nature.

Louis Blanc acknowledges that this is indeed the goal that Freemasonry continues: "In the grade of Knight of the Sun, when a reception was taking place,
The Most Venerable began by asking the pre-First supervisor: "What time is it?" And this one was to reply: "The hour of darkness among the men.” When questioned in turn about the reasons that They brought it, and the recipient replied: "I come to seek the light, for my companions and I we are lost through the night that covers the world. Clouds obscure Hesperus, the star of Europe; they are formed from the incense that the Superstition offers something to despots. One cannot say more clearly than Catholic civilization has thrown Europe in darkness, which humankind has lost sight of man's natural end, and that the Freemasonry has given itself the mission of him or-open your eyes.

For a long time, historians deliberately excluded Freemasonry in history; and through this they have presented the Revolution in a false and deceptive light fear. :

Mr. Wallon, by publishing the minutes which were erected on Theure, we were finally shown the facts as they occurred; but he did not do not go back to the causes and the primary agents who brought about this cataclysm, to the ideas whose propagation Great made it possible. Tocqueville and Taine, who have brought to the study of the Revolution a critique so enlightened, they did not extend their investigations.
on the subject of secret societies.

The actions of Freemasonry in these Recent times have brought about awakening. We see it.
prepare for further upheavals and new-old ruins. One wonders if the misfortunes and the crimes that marked the end of the 17th century

They are not attributable to him. Mr. Maurice Talmeyr did recently a conference which he later published in a brochure, under the title: Freemasonry and the French Revolution. Mr. Copin-Albancelli, Mr. Prache and others applied themselves, in different publications, to bring out of the darkness carefully-maintained, the share taken by the companies seCrete in the Revolution. For their demonstration. they were able to draw from the work published thirty years, by N. Deschamps, under this title: The Societies secrets and society, completed in 1880 by Claudio Jannet. And these had largely contributed to buting an earlier work, published in the midst of the Revolution lution, in 1798, by Barruel: Memoirs to serve to the history of Jacobinism. - |

These Memoirs do not provide, as the title suggests, documents to implement would suggest this. to write the history of the crimes committed by the Jacobins; what Barruel, in his five volumes, endeavored to provide future historians of the Terreur, it is the information that would allow them to establish the starting point, the primary agents and the hidden causes of the Revolution. “In the French Revolution, he said, everything, even its forThe most appalling events, everything was planned. said, combined, resolved, decided; everything was the result of the deepest villainy, since everything was brought by men who alone held the thread of the consplots hatched in secret societies, and which knew how to choose and hasten the opportune moment for the complots. » |

The conviction of this premeditation and of these conspiracies results from reading its five volumes. At the head of the fourth, in the "Preliminary Discourse"naire," he asks: "How do the followers seDid the crets of the modern Spartacus (Weishaupt) preshocked by all the crimes, all the disasters of this scourge of banditry and ferocity called the "Revo"Elution"? How do they still preside over all those that the sect meditates in order to consummate the dissolution human societies? (1) |

"By dedicating these last volumes to shedding light on these questions, I do not flatter myself that I can solve them with all the precision and detail of the men who would have the ability to follow the "Illuminati" sect in its underground passages, without losing sight for a moment the leaders or the followers... By gathering the traits that are revealed to me, I will nonetheless have enough to report the sect wherever the crimes signa-slowing its fatal influence. »

1. What she was planning to resume the very next day after The Revolution, she is carrying it out today before our very eyes. These are Well, it's still the Freemasons who preside over everything we Let's see.

We understand the powerful, poignant interest that presents the reading of this work at the present time-(1). What is happening, what we are witnessing, is the second act of the drama that began a century, to realize the idea of the Renaissance: subs-to title a so-called modern civilization to civilization Christian. It is the same Revolution, revived at its home, with the intention that Barruel had already been able to to observe, and to spread the fire throughout the world.
shows us this design, this will, expressed from the outset the beginning of the 18th century. The conspirators for-
Will they achieve their goals? That's God's secret.
But it is also ours. For the outcome of the Revolution depends on how we want to use our freedom, as well as eternal decrees of God.

It's to support, to encourage the good wishes that Barruel expressed in his Memoirs: "It is to finally triumph over the Revolution and everything price, not to despair, but to study the splendors of the sect. Be as zealous for good as she was.
To be for evil. That one may know how to will. To save the peoples; that the peoples themselves may know how to...
to save their religion, their laws, and their wealth as she knows she wants to destroy them, and the means
"There will be no shortage of salvation." That's also good. will and hope that we would like to see emerge from reading this book.

f

Before giving a very brief summary of Barruel's work, it is good to bring our readers... familiar with the author, so that they know what credit they should give him.

1. It had become impossible to find, it is being republished with explanatory notes by the management of the newspaper La Bastille.

Augustin Barruel was born on October 2, 1741 in Ville-Neuve-de-Berg. His father was lieutenant of the bailiwick of the Vivarais. He studied and entered the Com-Society of Jesus. When it was threatened, he surrendered in Austria, where he took his first vows.
stayed for a few years in Bohemia, then in Moravia and was a professor in Vienna, at the college Theresien. He was then sent to Italy and Rome.
He returned to France after the suppression of his Order, in 1774. His fortune made him independent, he devoted himself entirely to philosophical work quaestives and historical works, and subsequently published works ges which, although in several volumes, reached up to five editions.

From 1788 to 1792, he wrote the Journal almost single-handedly.
ecclesiastical, weekly publication of the most pre-valuable for the literary and ecclesiastical history of the second half of the 18th century. By taking the
In this direction, Barruel tells his readers: “We feel-to bear the full weight and extent of the duties that we impose upon ourselves. We do not foresee, without being frightened by it, all the diligence they demand, by now prohibiting us from any occupation which might distract us from it. But destined, by its very nature, to worship of the true God, in defense of our sacred truths, that these same duties will become dear to us!
Yes, this day under which we like to consider our functions of ecclesiastical journalist, makes them available to us precious. » He carried this in all his works spirit of faith.

The worse the days became, the more the abbot Barruel displayed zeal and courage. He changed frequently leave their homes to evade warrants stoppage. After August 10, he had to suspend publication he would write the contents of his journal and travel to Normandy. From there, he He took refuge in England.

He published there, in London, in 1794, a History of Clergy of France during the Revolution. This is it also that he conceived the plan for his great work: Memoirs to serve as a history of Jacobinism. He worked for four years to gather and prepare the materials materials from the first parts. Volumes I and I publishedrented in London in 1796.

In 1798, they were reprinted in Abu Dhabi: acaccompanied by the third, the one about the sect of the Illumined. The last two also appeared in Hamtown in 1803. Barruel published a second edition of it. tion, "revised and corrected by the author" in 1818, two years before his death, in Lyon, at Théodore's Pitrat.

You have to read this entire book if you want To understand the Revolution in its essence. To write about it, Abbot Barruel received direct revelations from several gentlemen of the period, and he found in Germany a series of first documents order. "I owe it to the public," he said in the Observers preliminary views of the third volume, the one which makes known the [enlightened ones, — a special account works from which I draw my evidence.” He gives the list of the main ones, ten in number, with a information sheet on each of them, which allows one to judge their authenticity. The list of works is being completed by that of several other less important documents clothes racks. He adds: "That's quite enough to see that I do not write about the Illuminati without knowledgesance of cause. I would like, out of gratitude, to... see name those whose correspondence has provided me many new supplies, letters, memoirs, which I cannot appreciate enough; but this recognition

"Birth would become fatal for them." And further on:

"What I quote, I have in front of me, I translate it;
ct when I translate, which happens often, chohis amazing things, things that one would hardly believe that could have been said, I quote the text itself, inviting Each person has their own way of explaining it, or having it explained to them.
and to verify. I even compare the various testimonies-ges, always with the book in hand. I'm not mentioning not a single law in the Code. of the Order, without evidence from law or practice.

Upon returning to France, he was consulted regarding the promise of loyalty to the Constitution, substituted, by decree of December 28, 1799, to all oaths previous. I] published, on July 8, 1800, a notice favorable. His reasons, very clear, combined with the explan-de cations of the Moniteur, declared official journal, deci-Mr. Emery and the archiepiscopal council of Paris to declare itself in favor of the legitimacy of the promise. Some, on this occasion, accused Barruel would flatter Bonaparte to save himself his favors. Far from flattering, Abbé Barruel was of unprecedented audacity: speaking of the first Consul;
He calls it "the scourge of God." In 1800, he adds:
“All the princes of Europe would recognize the Republic, I don't see that Louis XVIII is the reason for this.
He was less the true heir of Louis XVI. I I am French. The consent of the other sovereigns this object is just as useless to me as that of the Jacobins; he may well diminish my hope, tran-
"It is expensive; it does nothing to the law (1)."

Barruel did not return to France until 1802. There he took the defense of the Concordat and published on this subject his

---

1. The Gospel and the French Clergy. On Submission
Pasteurs in the Revolutions of Empires, p. 75, London. |

Treatise on the Pope and his religious rights on the occasion of the Concordat (1). |

During the Empire, Barruel kept to himself, and did not receive: Neither place nor treatment. He undertook the refutation. of Kant's philosophy. During the case of the cardinal Maury, he was suspected by Napoleon of having propagated the Brief of Pius VII, and he was imprisoned at the age of 70. The police continued to pursue him in Hundred Days. He ended his life in the house of his fathers, in Villeneuve-de-Bery, at the age of four-twenty years old, on October 5, 1820.

It was necessary to go into these details in order to to show how much this author deserves our confiancée. This will finally win her over.

_ During the five and seven years that pass between the publication of the first three volumes and of In the last two years, his work was read and it aroused some observations from the Freemasons. “Fu- "Before some of these brothers," said Barruel, "I..." He said far too much; according to others, it's not enough. Although I've said everything. We know that the first are among those I have included in the exception tion of the FF.:. too honest to be admitted into the final mysteries; and the others, of those who, after having seen everything in the back rooms, have finally blushed and repented of having deserved the honors Masonic brothers. I owe it to both of them thanks, but I also owe them a re- "Answer." He gives them this answer, showing that he said everything he had to say, and nothing but that that he was supposed to say.

Other Freemasons were irritated to find themselves thus exposed. and accused Barruel of bad faith. This was sur-

1. Paris, 1803, two vols. in-8°.

the entire work of an Englishman, Griffith, editor of the Monthly Review. This writer finds passable, satisfactory-even providing the evidence that Barruel gives of conspiracy against the altar; but he said that those the conspiracy against the thrones is imperfect-demonstrated. In particular, the abolition of the The monarchy in France, he said, was due to circumstances local, more than to the wishes and plots of the inspirates of the Revolution. Saying this, he does not not the slightest mention of the evidence provided by Barruel in favor of his thesis.

To answer the accusation of bad faith, Barruel observes that he has given, and that he gives of New, the texts in their original language to on the side of the translation he made of it. And for this which is one of the most important documents to | which he refers to, 11 says that not only is he Everyone is free to consult the printed volumes, but to control these volumes on the manuscripts which are located in the Royal Archives of Munich. Barruel It does more: 1 liter offers its accuser a date in Munich to show him the original writings the obvious evidence of his slander. Griffith He was careful not to go there and he even refused to to publish Barruel's reply in his Review.

Weishaupt, the founder of Illuminism, came to preach to provide strong support to Giffith, who was undoubtedly one of of his followers. Barruel also gave to Weishaupt go to the Munich archives, where he could review the originals of his own letters, including those he disputed the existence or the text. "But," added Barruel, as could not be expected without expose to be hanged (because of his crimes against (morals), he will be able to appoint a prosecutor.” He He went neither in person nor by proxy.

CHAPTER XI

FREEMASONRY IN THE 18TH CENTURY

I. — THE ENCYCLOPEDISTS

Voltaire was one of the first and most powerful agents of the Revolution.

She proposes, as we have said, following Mr. de Haller, after Leo XIII, after many others, and better incore, according to his own admissions, the annihilation of all religion and the overthrow of all authority. Voltaire took charge of the first part of this programme, if not in its entirety, at least in part- the highest tie, the annihilation of the religion of Christ.

Did he conceive this project himself, or was it suggested to him? managed? Condorcet doesn't say so, but he gives us this information: "It was in England that VolTaire swore to dedicate his life to this project; and he has kept his word (1). » |

Did this oath make him do it in his heart, or the Did he lend to conspirators? It is this last supposition-This is the most likely scenario. "It was

1. Condorcet. Life of Vollaire.

"In England," said Condorcet. Now, at his first During his trip to this country (1725-1728), Voltaire was received Freemason in one of the sodalities described by Toland in his Pantheisticon dedicated Lectori Philometho and Philaleti... (This name of Philalethes) will be that of one of the most advanced lodges in Paris in the revolutionary movement). During these Voltaire spent three years on English soil "the life of a Rosicrucian, always on the move and always-hidden days. » |

We are no longer here in the infra- darkness chissables from the early periods of Freemasonry We are being stupid, as Claudio observes. Jannet, on a perfectly str. historic site. This dates from the time of Voltaire's trip to England. land and his initiation into Freemasonry The English established the first settlements. lodges in France, at least those that have been established to prepare for the Revolution (1). They were establishedblies by the English, and in cities where the Relations with them were frequent. Such were those of Dunkirk and Mons in 1721, of Paris in 1725, from Bordeaux in 1732, from Valenciennes in 1735, from Le Havre in 1739 (2).

1. The Freemasons (Liberi Muratorii) were condemned for the first time by Clement XII in 1738.

Mr. Gustave Bord published a very serious book in 1909 documented under this title: Freemasonry in France, from origins to 1815. Volume One: The Workers of the Revolutionary Idea tionnaire, 1688-1771.

2. It was also the English who instituted the pre- prime locations in other countries.

Sir George Hamilton, dignitary of the Grand Lodge of An- England took charge of Switzerland. Count Scheffer was Lord Chesterfield was appointed for Sweden, and Lord Chesterfield for Holland. of, the Duke of Exter for Saxony, Martin Folkes for the Kingdom of Piedmont, the Duke of Middlesex for the great- Duchy of Tuscany. The emissary sent to Rome was the F.:. Martin Folkes; and the Duke of Wharton received the mandate of the masonry of Spain and Portugal.

England has always had a large part in the revolutions of the continent, and she always knew to derive great profit from it. The French Revolution annihilated our fleet, caused us to lose our colonies denied, and secured for England empire of the seas which she has enjoyed ever since (1). The hand of the Angleland was also seized during the Revolution, which Russia is currently suffering.

Voltaire was first joined by d'Alembert, Fréderic II and Diderot. Voltaire was the leader of the conspiracy d'Alembert was its most cunning agent, Fr- Diderot, the protector, often the advisor, in was the lost child. All four were filled with a deep hatred for Christianity: Voltaire because that he envied the divine Author and all those of whom He brought glory to d'Alembert because he was born the wicked heart, Frederick, because he does not know- Diderot knows Catholicism only through its enemies.

1. Mr. Lacourt Gayet has just published in one volume The summary of his course at the Ecole supé- is very well documented. marine research. We see there that, after the era of Colbert, the reign of Louis XVI was the most shining example of our maritime power. During the fifteen In the years preceding the Revolution, we have, for the first and for the last time so far, we were able to to position themselves as rivals to the English in the possession of the empire of the seas.

The Revolution occurs and the phenomena of "anarchy" spontaneous" events immediately manifested in the ports of war. Even before the meeting of the Estates-General, the clubs, municipalities claim to be replacing the car-military order which soon found itself radically Annihilated. The crews desert. Often we observe that warships set sail with a deficit of sixty to one hundred men. That England drew an immense profite de ce disorder, the proof is not there to do. Did she collaborate directly? In a letter to One of his friends, Lord Granville, confessed that "the governor-

The British government has a habit of exciting and maintaining
"To maintain internal unrest on French territory."
For his part, Lord Mansfield declared in open parliament

because he was crazy about nature, which he wanted, like the humanists, to substitute worship for that of the living God. They led away a great number of men of all ranks in their conspiracy.

Returning to Paris around 1730, Voltaire did not mystery of his plan to annihilate Christianity against whom he had already published so many writings. Mr.
Hérault, a police lieutenant, reproaching him one day
His impiety told him: "You can do what you want, but what Whatever you write, you will never succeed to destroy the Christian religion." Voltaire replied:
"We shall see (1)." He also said:
"I am tired of hearing them repeat that twelve men-My efforts were sufficient to establish Christianity, and I have wanting to prove to them that it only takes one for destroy it (2).

that "the money spent to foment an insurrection in France would be well employed.

More recently, in 1899, when England was engaged in the Transvaal War, the minister's son of the colonies, Mr. Chamberlain Jr., said in a cor-Intimate response published by Le Jura de Porrentruy:
"Besides the assurances from the French government, we we are guaranteed against all reprisals from Fashoda by domestic events that will take place in France.
If we can hardly count on the Dreyfus affair which is silenced; if the High Court trial does not appear to create a sensation sufficient to absorb the attention of the nation, we know that, from the moment Parliament reconvenes

In Paris, the government will introduce, with the support of the majority-rite, various bills against Catholics, who, by their violence could plunge France into a state of over-extreme quote and divert the attention of the French from southern Africa. My father only walked with all the guarantees on the French side.

How can we explain such confidence and such com-complicity, if not through the agreement and actions of companies international secrets?

---

1. Condillac. Life of Voltaire.
2. Ibid.

But what best demonstrates his intention is the word that constantly recurs in his writing and on his lips. "All the conspirators," said Barruel, have a secret language, a watchword, a formula unintelligible to the common people, but whose explanation is-Crete constantly reveals and reminds its followers the main object of their conspiracy. The chosen formula-Voltaire's siety consisted of these two words: "Ecra-"Sez the infamous one." "What interests me," he wrote to Damilaville (1) is the degradation of Vinfame. "Commit all the brothers to pursue the infamous..." orally and in writing without giving him a moment of Relax. » « Do, as long as you can, the most wise efforts to crush the infamous one. We forget that the main occupation must be to crush the infame. » « Such is our situation that we are-my loathing of humankind, if (in this effort) We do not have honest people on our side (the people of high standing). Therefore, all the To have, at any price: Crush the infamous thing, I tell you (2).

Who is this infamous person who had to be prosecuted? relentlessly, to degrade, to crush, at any cost was it and through the efforts of all the conspirators?

In the mouth of Voltaire and in the mouth of everyone For its followers, these words constantly meant: Ecra-Choose the religion that worships Jesus Christ. The evidence abound in their correspondence. Crush the infamous thing, It is undoing what the apostles did; it is fighting The one whom the deists and atheists fought against; it's running after any man who declares himself for Jesus Christ. That is the meaning Voltaire attaches to it, and

1. Letter of June 16, 1762.

_2. Letters to Damilaville, to d'Alembert, to Thercot, to Saurin. .

#

this meaning is no less evident in writing of others. Christianity, the Christian sect, the Christmas superstitions are synonymous in writing of Frederick. D'Alembert is more reserved in his usage of that word, but he always takes it in mind that Voltaire attaches to it. The other conspirators do not understand-They don't use the "watchword" any other way. They don't.
don't find it too strong to express the wish diabolic which is in their hearts. The extent that they don-Their plot must not be allowed to continue on earth the slightest vestige of the doctrine and worship of the divine Savior

The conspirators found themselves completely organized seized upon Voltaire's return after his stay in Prussia, towards the end of 1752.

To crush the infamous thing, the means they believed to be-seeing employed before any other was to attack the faith in souls. "To undermine the building silently and without noise-
"Fice," wrote Frederick to Voltaire, "is to force him to "fall of its own accord" (July 29, 1775). However, Even in this respect, d'Alembert warned to be cautious.
and not wanting to arrive too quickly. "If the "Humankind is becoming enlightened," he said, observing the effect.

produced by the Encyclopedia, it's that we took the pre-

"A precaution to only reveal the truth little by little."

The conspirators made the Encyclopedia the repository of all the errors, of all the sophisms, of all the calumnies invented so far against the religion. But it was agreed that she would not pay the poison, imperceptibly. An admirable art.

was used to achieve this result. "No doubt, d'Alembert wrote to Voltaire, we have bad articles (i.e., orthodox articles) of theology and metaphysics. With theological censors gians and a privilege, I challenge you to do them better-theirs. There are fewer articles on the day when everything is repaired (1). » We knew how to take advantage of opportunities to slip in these repair items. "During the war Parliaments and Bishops, Voltaire had written to d'Alembert the previous year (November 13, 1756),

You will have the leisure to fill the Encyclopedia with truths.
that we wouldn't have dared say twenty years ago." And In Damilaville: "I place all my hopes in the Encyclopedia (2). » In fact, it was, according to Diderot, an abyss where ragpickers of sorts threw together a jumble of countless bad things naked, undigested, good, bad, uncertain and always inconsistent; and this, because, according to the same, they wanted to insinuate what they couldn't say openly without revolting (3).

While they sought to shake the foundations of faith, the conspirators worked to make disappear-to raise its defenders, and first and foremost the religious leaders.
This was the second means they employed to to achieve their goals.

As early as 1743, Voltaire was entrusted with a secret mission with the King of Prussia, with the aim of secularizing ecclesiastical principalities.

In France, there were no ecclesiastical electors ques to be stripped, but there were Orders to be suppressed
First. The Jesuits were the first to be attacked.
Choiseul gave the reason for this choice: "Education

---

1. Letter of July 24, 1757.
2. Letters of May 23, 1764.

3. The Encyclopedia was printed in 4,200 copies, in 35 folio volumes. The distribution plan was set up with with all possible care and success. The booksellers there earned 500 percent. It was a kind of review where The publication lasted twenty years.

that they give being destroyed, all the other bodies "The religious will fall of their own accord." We know how. They succeeded in their suppression.

The third method was peddling. The correspondence The conspirators' response shows them attentive 4 meet dre mutually accounts of the works they preparent against Christianity, from the fruit they bear of it wait, for the art with which they employ themselves 4 in to ensure success. They had them printed to most of them in Holland, and new ones were appearing calves every month.

To obtain the right to disseminate them, they had at the court of powerful men, even ministers who knew how to silence the law and promote this comtrade in impiety. It is in recognition of this foreignthe use of the authority entrusted to them, that Voltaire exclaimed: "Long live the French ministry!" Long live Choiseul (1)! » Malesherbes, who had the daggerthe trend in bookstores, was, for this propaganda, of intelligence with d'Alembert. He showed in his functions, an odious bias in favor of the EncycloFoot soldiers. He crossed out everything from Fréron's articles that who could have hindered their work. This guillotined man at 70 years old had done everything in his power to see in order to spread the ideas by which he was to die and fight those who could have saved the sosociety.

In their correspondence, the conspirators congratulated each other on the successes they achieve in Switzerland, in Germany gne, in Russia, in Spain, in Italy. Which shows that in their minds, the avowed plot to annihilate Christianity was not limited to France.
Mr. Brunetière pointed this out: "the Encyclopedia

---

1. Letter to Marmontel, 1767.

was an international work. » With respect to the An-England, they have no concern; it abounds,
They say, of the Socinians. As for France, Voltaire and d'Alembert complain about the obstacles they they encounter, despite what we have just said of the help they found in the highlands.
Where they could not spread the open writings-impious or licentious things, they published even more very much aimed at making the great Words of tolerance, reason, humanity, including the sect has not ceased to make use of, faithful to the recommendation Lorie's mandate! who told her to make it her war cry (1).

Bertin, in charge of Padniinidieadion of the cassette of the the king, understood the danger of this propaganda and brought His attention was on the peddlers. He saw which books
They were spreading it in the countryside. When questioned by They told him that these books cost them nothing.
that they received bundles of it without knowing where it came from This came to them, they were only warned to place them in their shopping at the lowest price. The insti-Guardians were also rewarded. On days At set times, they brought together the workers and the peasants, and one of them was reading aloud from the book that had been used to corrupt him.
This is how the paths to the Revolution were prepared even in the lowest classes of society key.

Bertin's research to trace back to the the source of this propaganda, led him to a school teachers' office, created and run by d'Alembert.

This office was also responsible for procuring institutes to the villages and to place teachers in The colleges. The followers, scattered on both sides,

1. Outline of the historical picture of progress. Period 9.

inquired about vacancies, instructed d'Alembert and his coadjutors and gave in the same time for information on those who present themselves were there to fill them. Before sending them, we outlined for them the rules of conduct to follow and the pre-Deposits to be taken depending on the location and the people and the circumstances. Even then, Freemasonry had understood that no one could spread his ideas, better serve his purposes than the schoolteacher.

To gain control of the people, they resorted to other means. very average still. Barruel notes in particularment the one used by those who called themselves- The first "Economists," because they presented themselves as friends of the people, concerned about their interests, eager to alleviate his misery and to make him observe more order and economy in administration. The race is not lost. "Their works," said Barruel, are filled with those features that announce the resolution to establish a successor religion: purely natural to the revealed religion.” As proof, he offers his analysis of those of Mr. le Gros, provost of Saint-Louis du Louvre.

These "economists" had persuaded Louis XV that the rural people and the urban artisans languished in an ignorance that proved fatal to themselves. and to the State, and that it was necessary to create Vocational schools. Louis XV, who loved the fewple, seized this project eagerly, and showed himself- willing to use his own income to to found these schools. Bertin dissuaded him. "There were "For a long time," he said, "I had been observing the various sects" of our philosophers. I understood that it was indeed less to give to the children of the farmer and of the craftsman of agricultural lessons than to prevent them-

dear to receive the usual lessons from their catechnism or religion. I did not hesitate to deto declare to the King that the intentions of the philosophers were very different from hers.

Bertin was not mistaken. Barruel reports the confessions and remorse that he expressed three months before his death, a great lord who had fulfilled the functions of secretary of this club of the "Economisyours": "We only admitted into our society that those of which we were quite sure. Our assemblies held regular gatherings at the Baron d'Holbach's hotel. For fear that its purpose might be suspected, we We called them economists. We had Voltaire. for honorary and perpetual president. Our principal-

Two members were d'Alembert, Turgot, Condorcet, Diderot, La Harpe, Lamoignon, Keeper of the Seals, and Damilaville, to whom Voltaire attributes the special character of-"Cial, the hatred of God." To further clarify The King, Bertin, revealed to him the meaning of these half-words. “Ecr. Vinf.”, with which Voltaire ended a so many of his letters. He added that all those who received letters from Voltaire ending born from the horrible formula were or members of the secret committee or those initiated into its mysteries.

This club was founded between the years 1763 and 1766. At the time the Revolution broke out, he was working so for at least twenty-three years, trying to seduce the people, under the specious pretext of coming to him in: help and relieve his pain.

To achieve the grand goal of their conspiracy. The sectarians believed that it was not enough to em- to employ the general means we have just mentioned and to which all were expected to contribute in common effort. They each assigned themselves a particular task.

particular to which they devoted themselves more specifically element.

Voltaire had taken charge of the ministers, the dukes, princes and kings (1). When he could not He approached the prince himself, he surrounded him. had placed a doctor, Quesnay, near Louis XV, who knew so well how to seize control of the direction of ideas of the king, who called him his "thinker". And the means chosen by the thinker to intrude on The king's mindset was the one used by economists: to draw his attention to what could do the right thing-happiness of the people.

D'Alembert was tasked with, or took it upon himself to, recruiting young followers. "Try," Voltaire wrote to him, For your part, try to enlighten young people as much as possible. that you will be able to (September 15, 1762). Never The mission was not accomplished with more skill or zeal. and activity. D'Alembert established himself as the protector of all the young men who came to Paris with what-

1. EJF Barbier, lawyer at the Parliament of Paris, has kept a "Historical and anecdotal journal of the reign of Louis XV, published by the French Historical Society, - based on the unpublished manuscript from the National Library by A. de la Villegille (Paris, at Jules Renouard's and Company, 6 rue de Tournon, 1849. We see there how the princes were particularly sought after by the Leaders of Freemasonry: "Our lords of the Court have newly invented an order called the Frimasons, following the example of England, where there is also difvarious orders from individuals and we will not delay in to imitate foreign impertinences. In this order were enlisted some of our Secretaries of State and several dukes and lords. We know nothing about their statutes, their rules and the purpose of this new order. They assembledblaient, received new knights, and the first The rule was an inviolable secret regarding everything that happened. Since such assemblies, also secret, are very dangerous in a state, being composed of lords, especially in the circumstances of the coming change Upon arriving at the ministry, Cardinal Fleury felt obliged talent and some fortune. He attached them to himself by the crowns, the prizes, the academic chairs which he had almost complete control over; that is as perpetual secretary, either through his intrigues. His influence and maneuvers in this regard extendthey were coming well beyond Paris. "I am coming," he wrote to Voltaire to admit HelVelius and the Chevalier de Jaucourt. He gave some special care to those he intended to forsea of other followers by entrusting them with the functions teachings or tutoring. He succeeded in to place them in all the provinces of Europe and they all kept him informed of their phi- propaganda philosopher. "There you have it, my dear philosopher," he wrote. To Voltaire, in the joy of his wicked soul, here is which was pronounced in Cassel on April 8 (1772) in the presence of His Grace the Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, of six princes of the empire and the largest aseemed by a history professor I gave to His Grace the Landgrave. The document sent was a a speech full of invective against the Church and the clergy.

It was especially among the young princes destined to govern the peoples he imported to the conju-

to stifle this order of chivalry in its infancy, and he forbade all these gentlemen to assemble and to
(To hold such chapters.) Vol. II, March 1737, p. 448.

In 1738, a book appeared in Dublin which the Freemasons published especially for France. The title is: Apodogmatic and historical of the Society of Freemasons, by
5. GDMFM This apology was condemned by the St-Siege in February 1739. Clement XII had just launched the pre-First papal bull against Freemasonry; Cardinal Fleury had given General of Police Hérault the order to do an investigation into the Freemason assemblies and the
On September 14, 1737, a police order had prohibited their meetings. The attention of the spiritual and temporal Powers Porels was called upon to represent the sect. The civil power that had

The means of coercion in hand did not go far enough.
that at the end.

the task of placing teachers initiated into the mysteries.
Their correspondence shows their care not to neglecting such a powerful means. They used every means tricks to put in the good graces of Louis XVI's heir a priest willing to inspire their principles in his illustrious student, as they had managed to place the abbot Condillac with the Infante of Parma (1). However The conspirators were not given the opportunity to see the philosopher a phism seated on the Bourbon throne as he He was on the thrones of the North. But Louis XV, without to be impious, without being able to be counted among them followers, it was nonetheless one of the great causes of the progress of the anti-Christian conspiracy.
It was so through the dissolution of its morals and publicity of his scandals. Moreover, Louis XV surrounded himself or himself allowed himself to be surrounded by faithless ministers, who had close ties with Voltaire and his conspirators.
Barruel devotes chapters XII to XVI of his first volume to publicize the conquests they among the crowned heads, the princes and the princesses, ministers, high-ranking lords, the magistrates, men of letters, and finally, alas! in the clergy (2). It is true to say that the conspirators
1. Grand Duke Nicholas Mikhailovich of Russia comes to publish a book, Count Paul Stroganow. Stroganow was entrusted by his family to the care of the future member of the National Convention ar Regicide Rome, like Alexander I, whose friend he became and the advisor had the enlightened La Harpe as his tutor.

Romme took his student to France and did not leave him to miss a single session of the Constituent Assembly, "the best-their school of public law.” In January 1790, Romme founded a club, the "Society of Friends of the Law"; there he... to train his student, whom he henceforth names Paul Otcher. On August 7, 1799, Paul Otcher was received as a member of the Jacobin Club. Catherine, warned by her ambassadordeur, recalls Stroganow, who had to return to Russia

2. F.-J. Emile Daruty inserted into one of his works, a TABLE OF OFFICERS AND MEMBERS OF

GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE, in 1787.
This list included: 1 prince of the blood: the Duke of Gold-drawn from the ecclesiastical body were almost all of those who were called the "court abbots". BarRuel pays a well-deserved tribute to the entire The clergy of France on the eve of the Revolution. particularly praises the clergymen who, through their writings, strive to hinder the corruption of the estaken so ardently pursued by the conspirators.

léans, Grand Master; 2 dukes: the Duke of Luxembourg, AdMinister General; the Duke of Crussol, Grand ConserPromoter of the Order in France; thirteen priests, religious: Honorary Officer: Pingré (Abbot Alexandre Guy) member of the Royal Academy of Sciences, librarian of the abBay of Sainte-Geneviève; — Officers in office: Beaudeau (abbot), mitred provost of Vidzini, vicar-general and Plenipotentiary of the Prince-Bishop of Vilna; Coquelin (Abbot), canon of the Royal Church of Saint-Aubin, of Crespy in Valois; — Sauvine (abbot); — Vermondans (abbot), King's chaplain!!! — Non-dignitary deputies: Baudot, Benedictine monk; — Bertolio (Abbot Antoine René Constance) substitute for the Grand Master of the Scottish Philosophical Ritephique in 1776; — Champagne (Abbot Jean François), Professor and founder of the Collège Louis-le-Grand; — Expilly (Abbot Jean Joseph d'); — Guessier de la Garde de Longpré, priest, doctor of theology; — Le Febvre (abbot), Attorney-General of the Royal Abbey of Sainte-Geneviève; — Robin, a Benedictine monk; one of the founders of the lodge Les Neuf Sœurs, of which he was still a member in 1806 and Tavernier (abbot), canon of the church of Meaux (op. cit., pages 161 to 169 inclusive).

It is worth noting that the Chaplain of Louis XVI, the Abbot of Vermondans, was, in 1787, Officer of the Grand Orient of France. The unfortunate monarch was therefore surrounded on all sides by Freemasons, of those Freemasons whose representatives had joined to the Illwminés, as we will see later, to vote his death at the Convent of Wilhelmsbad!

CHAPTER XII

FREEMASONRY IN THE 18TH CENTURY

II. — THE ANARCHISTS

The Encyclopedists were not alone in preparing The Revolution; Barruel was not unaware of it. He is divisive. in three classes the demolition crews he saw applying-which undermine the foundations of Christian society: Voltaire and his followers, whom he calls "the sophists" of impiety," because their main objective was to overthrow the altars of Our Lord Jesus Christ; the Freemasons, whom he calls the sophists of the rebelligerence, because they intended—those at least who were privy to the sect's secrets — to overthrow the thrones of kings; the enlightened ones, whom he calls the sophists of anarchy, because, by oath of They overturned the altars of Christ, adding that to annihilate all religions whatsoever, and to the oath to overthrow thrones, to make everything disappear government, all property, all governing society born by law.

Later, we will see the appearance of the Freemasons of the Sales that resumed after the Revolution that she had not been able to fully accomplish. The car-

Bonari, or Masons of the Lower Sales, will have with the special mission of inciting political revolution tic and to replace monarchies with republics Chies, the High Sale, that of destroying sovereignty temporal power of the Popes, and thereby prepare for their ruin of spiritual power.

Barruel therefore calls on the Freemasons, rightly so. of the specific function assigned to those of his time:

"The sophists of the rebellion," rebels because they had to continue the overthrow of thrones; sophists, because the first method used for Achieving this result was achieved through propaganda within the society of a sophism, the sophism of equality, father of anarchy.

As we progress through this study, we will see more and more clearly that sophistry and Lying has always been and still is the great methods of action employed by the sect to achieve to his ends. He couldn't have wanted any other for to veil from the eyes of the public and from the eyes of the French Freemasons themselves, what the Power conceals forthen, what he makes them do.

This is why the first sothe phism used to bring about the revolution was apPelé, the Masonic secret par excellence.

Barruel recounts how he was able to gain entry one day in a Lodge to attend the reception of a apprentice (1). "The important article for me," he said, was to finally learn the famous secret of the masonNonsense. The recipient was made to pass under the vault. of steel to arrive in front of a kind of altar, where one gave him a speech on the inviolability of secrecy which was going to be entrusted to him and on the danger of failing to the oath he was to pronounce. The recipient swears

---

1. Volume II, p. 278 et seq. Edit. originators.

that he wants his head cut off if he betrays the secret. The Venerable, seated on a throne behind the altar, then said to him: "My dear F.:., the secret The essence of Freemasonry is this: All the Men are equal and free, all men are "Brothers." The Venerable said nothing more. They kissed and then moved on to the Masonic meal. "I was "So," Barruel continues, "so far removed from suspecting" a further intention in this famous secret, that I almost burst out laughing when I heard it and that I said to those who had introduced me: If that's all "Your big secret, I've known it for a long time." And indeed, if by "equality" and "liber"te" that men are not made to be slaves to their brothers, but to enjoy the freedom freedom that God gives to his children; if by "fraternity-"Unity" means that, being all children of the Father Heavenly, men must all love and help each other. mutually like brothers, we don't see that he one must be a mason to learn these vertés. "I found them much better in the Gospel than "in their childish games," said Barruel. He added: "I must say that throughout the Lodge, whatever it was There were quite a few of them, but I didn't see a single bricklayer. to give the great secret a new meaning.

Barruel observes that there were only non-third parties; and the proof he gives is that none of those who attended this meeting did not give in the Revolution, if not the Venerable.

Indeed, if Freemasonry is a a very large association of men, united by oaths and all bringing more or less cooperation less conscious and more or less direct at work as desired, only a small number of initiates know-representing the association's ultimate goal. This object, therefore, it is necessary, for this period, to find it "...in these words "Equality, Liberty," since they were given to the apprentice as the secret of the company, A secret to be kept under the most severe penalties, consent-bound by oath, a secret to ponder and whose meaning profound knowledge would be revealed gradually through initiations. successive.

In his recent work, Mr. Gustave Bord confirm this way of seeing things. According to him too, the first suggestion launched in the world by the Freemasonry to prepare the way for Jerusalem Salem of the new order, the Temple that the Franks-They want to build on the ruins of civilization Christian, it was the idea of equality.

Our Lord Jesus Christ had preached equality, but an equality stemming from the humility he knew to place in the hearts of the great. "The kings of the nations rule over them. But you, do not do that; but let the greatest among you be like the last, and he who governs as he who serves" (Luke, XXII, 25-26). To this equality of condescension which inclines the powerful towards the powerless, France-

Freemasonry substitutes the equality of pride which says to small things that they have the right to consider themselves at the level of the great or to bring the great down to their level.
The proud equality she preached also says equally to the brute and the unfortunate: "You are the equals of the highest intelligences, of the powerful and the rich, and you are the number.” The word “li"berté" clarified this meaning: perfect equality can only be found in total freedom, in the independence of each individual, in relation to all, after =- the definitive breakdown of social ties. No more mastertre, no more magistrates, no more pontiffs or sub- | verains; all equal under the Masonic level, and free to follow their instincts — such was the meaning Total fiction of the words: equality, freedom.

This dual Masonic dogma was supposed to have and has with the effect of destroying all hierarchy and of him to substitute anarchy, that is to say, to annihilate the so-society. While the doctrine preached by Our Lord-
The Lord Jesus Christ had the effect of abolishing the-slavery and the exercise of authority and obedience taking hold, one her inspiration, the other her power to see in the will of God what regenerated humanity unity and produced Christian civilization.

"The idea of proud legality that France-Freemasonry endeavored to bring into the bowels of the nation is, says Mr. Gustave Bord, the most harmful, the most terrible imaginable. The substitution
The shift from the idea of equality to the idea of hierarchy is destructive.
It is fundamental to any social idea. It guides societies to the worst cataclysms. » |

And further on: “The ideas of social equality impre-their mentalities (of Freemasons), to such an extent to the point that they manifested themselves before their ideas anti-religious movements, which in turn triumphed, not as the sole purpose of Freemasonry, but as as a consequence of applying their theories of equality in the afterlife, after having applied them to the social and political life; not only do they im-
They were pregnant, but they will also make France adopt them.
and to the whole of Europe their doctrines which became the

the reason for the existence of new companies.

It was on August 12, 1792 that Freemasonry believed that the time of mystery was over, that the secret was now useless. "Until then, the Jacobins had not-
- had dated the splendors of their Revolution only by the years of their supposed freedom. On this day, Louis XVI, declared forty-eight hours ago by the rebels, stripped of all rights to the throne, were He was taken captive to the Temple towers. In that same day, the entire rebel group declared that on the date of freedom, we would now add in the acts public the date of legality. This decree itself was dated from the fourth year of liberty; the pre-first year, the first day of equality (1).
|

"On that same day, for the first time, erupted finally publicly revealed this secret so dear to the Freemasons lessons, and prescribed in their Lodges with all the reli-region of the most inviolable oath. Upon reading At this famous decree they exclaimed: "At last we There you have it; the whole of France is now just one big Lodge; the French are all Freemasons and the uni-
The whole world will soon be like us. I have been I witnessed these transports; I heard the questions and the responses they elicited. I have given that the masons, until then the most reserved, responded now without the slightest disguise: "Yes, in-Finally, the great objective of Freemasonry has been fulfilled.
Equality and Liberty; all men are equal and

1. It should be noted that the two words of which is composed posed the name that the Freemasons gave themselves mar-quent, the first, what they are, or at least what they want to be, and all of humankind with them, that is-that is to say free or frank, in the marked sense of independence;
and the second, what they want to do: build masonry cons-destroy THE TEMPLE. We will say later what this temple wants to be.

The word fraternity only completed the trilogy more late. It served as a mask for society to make it pa-to become a charitable institution.

Note that the sacred formula of the Masonic mysteriesniques was so precious to Voltaire that Franklin having

He had the decency to present his children to be blessed;
He only uttered these words over them: Equality, Liberty.
(Condorcet, Life of Voltaire.)

Brothers, all men are free; that was the essence of our code, the entire object of our wishes, all our "Big secret." I heard more specifically these words coming out of the mouths of Freemasons more zealous, of those I had seen decorated with all the orders of Freemasonry and invested with all the rights to preside over the lodges” (1).

A curious thing: it was strictly forbidden to Freemasons never present these to the uninitiated Two words juxtaposed: Equality, Liberty (that's the order) in which they were then). This law, he said Barruel, was so well observed by the writers maconical, that I don't know I've ever seen her raped in their books, although I read one well a great many, and some of them highly secret. Mirabeau himself— even when he pretended to betray the secret of Freemasonry, dared to reveal only a part of it, Liberty here, equality of conditions there. He knew that the time had not yet come when his F.:. could
I would forgive you for having, through the juxtaposition of these two words, awakened attention to the meaning they could-
"They were going to take action, enlightened by each other."

The word freedom, considered alone and in itself, presents to the mind not a mysterious thing and se-Crete, but something known and eminently good.
It is even the most precious gift that has ever been given

---

1. “There is,” said Barruel, “a book that was printed a while ago fifty years (therefore around 1750) under this title: On the origin of Freemasons and their doctrine. This or-
My knowledge would have been very useful to me if I had known about it earlier.
Don't accuse me of being the first to reveal than an impious and disorganizing equality and freedom were the great secret of the back rooms. The author di-knows as positively as I do and clearly demonstrated it- by following the masonry grades step by step Scottish, as they existed at the time.

by God to human nature, he who places it in a reign so superior to that occupied by the animals evils: the gift of performing acts that are not necessities, which, consequently, carry with them responsibility and merit, and thereby allow each of us has the opportunity to grow indefinitely.

The word equality, when applied to humankind, marks, that in the diversity of conditions, the community of origin and final end gives to all the per- the sounds that compose it share the same dignity.

Therefore, Freemasonry saw no no drawback, far from it, to presenting it to some as glorifying freedom, others as glorifying equality. Which she did not want in outside of her dressing rooms, which is what she wanted on the contrary within them, it was that these words were prefelt together and united. The intelligence of what it had intended to put into their union, that's it what she wanted to be seized by her followers and hidden to the common people. That was its mystery. And this mystery, he It is still important today to uncover it, because Freemasonry has never ceased to mystify the public by these words, that she and her family take in one sense and honest people in another.

Let us first note what kind of equality France-Freemasonry was exalted in its lodges. All the masons, Even if they were princes, they were "Brothers." The equality that it established between them marked that what she had given the mission to establish in the world, it was not legal point that we hold from our municipality origin and of our communities destined, but legally-social order, the one that must abolish all hierarchy and consequently all authority, to make lanar- reign Shit. The word liberty attached to that of equality came to emphasize this meaning to the very last point. He di- knows that the desired equality would only be found in freedom, that is to say, the independence of all with regard to everyone, after the breaking of all ties which connect men to one another. Therefore, no more masters or magistrates, no more priests or of sovereigns, and consequently of subordinates to some whatever the title: all equal under the Masonic level-nique, all free from the freedom of animals, able to follow their instincts.

This is what Freemasonry wanted from the outset Upon arriving, that's where she wanted to lead the kind human; but it was a secret to keep. Let's spread the word. in the public the words liberty and equality; but Let us keep its ultimate meaning to ourselves.

Voltaire had already declared his intention to restore freedom to reason oppressed by dogma, and to restore between men the equality that the priesthood armed with the revelation had broken. "There is nothing so poor and so wretched, said Voltaire, that a man recoverasking another man to find out what he owes believe (1). He longed for "those days when the sun will only shine on free men and recognizing no other masters than their own raiits (2). »

At this first equality in disbelief, the high The masonry team deemed it necessary to attach them. Another was social equality. It was therefore necessary to... to get rid of kings and priests alike, to overthrow thrones like altars and above all he who dominated all others, the Bourbon throne. Lilia pedibus destrue, that was the watchword, which spread from lodge to lodge, and from there, among the people.

1. Letter to the Duke of Usez, November 19, 1760.

2. Condorcet. Sketch of a historical picture of the pro'sandstone of the human spirit. 9th century period).
}

In the boxes, it was being said that there was no neither freedom nor equality for a people who are not subservient Verain, who cannot make his own laws, who cannot nor revoke or change them.

The people did not need lengthy explanations. tions. All you have to do is let him hear these words: liFreedom, equality. He understood, and immediately he showed himself ready for the battles that were to bring him the objects of his most ardent desires. Also, in a instantly, armed with pikes, bayonets, and torches, He embarked on the quest for freedom and equality. [He knew where to find the castles to burn and the heads] to cut off so as not to see anything above him and to have, in all respects, complete freedom.

Freemasonry is not spoken of negatively when one claims that the secret she kept hidden under these Words, liberty and equality, that was the Revolution with all its horrors.

However, let us mention, because of its importance and of its clarity, as John Robison, professor of natural philosophy and secretary of the Academy of E-Hamburg. He was initiated into Freemasonry in the. second half of the 18th century, and soon obtained the degree of Scottish Master. With this title, he visited the lodges of France, Belgium, Germany and of Russia. He acquired such great credit with the Freemasons, who offered him the degrees the highest. It was then, in 1797, that he published the result of his studies in a book entitled: Evidence of conspiracies against all religions and all the governments of Europe, plotting in the secret assemblies of the Illuminati and Freemasons. “I had the means,” he said, “to follow all the attempts made over fifty years, under the prespecious text to enlighten the world with the torch of philosophy, and to dispel the clouds with which the Religious and civil superstitions are used to reto keep the people of Europe in the darkness of Slavery. Always the same words to express the same intentions: to annihilate Christian civilization yours to replace it with a single civilization-based on reason and intended to provide satisfactory tion here below to all the desires of nature.

“I saw,” John Robison continued, “a association whose sole purpose is to destroy, until at their foundation, all religious establishments gious, and to overthrow all existing governments so much in Europe. I have seen this association spread her systems with such sustained zeal that she is which had become almost irresistible; and I noticed that the figures who played the most part in the Revolution French members were members of this association, that their plans were designed according to his principles and executed with his/her assistance. » |

An even more authoritative figure, Count Haug-Witz, the Prussian minister, accompanied his sovereign at the Congress of Verona, and, in this august assembly-He read a memoir that he could have titled: "My confession.” He says there that not only was he frank-mason, but that he was put in charge of the superior direction-laughter at Masonic meetings of a part of Prussia, Poland, and Russia. "The ma-
"Nonsense," he said, "was then divided into two parts." in his secret works"; what another mason calls it "the peaceful part", responsible for propaganda-tion of ideas, and "the warlike part", responsible to make revolutions. "Both sides give themselvesjoined forces to achieve domination of world... To exert a dominant influence on the subverains: that was our goal (1). » This desire to arrive-

The desire for world domination is specific to the Jews;
The Freemasons are in this respect only their instruments comments; she explains almost all the events of the last two centuries, and especially those of the present day present.

The Revolution is the work of Freemasonry; or rather, as Henri Martin says, "freema-Stupidity was the laboratory of the Revolution (2)”.
Moreover, she herself does not fail to re-to claim the honor of having brought her into the world.

In the Chamber of Deputies, session of July 1st 1904, the Marquis de Rosanbo having said: "The Freemasonry has worked behind the scenes, but of a a constant way of preparing for the Revolution.

Mr. JUMEL. — That is indeed what we boast of-tones.

Mr. Alexandre ZÉVAËS. — That is the highest praise that you can do with it.

Mr. Henri Michel (Bouches-du-Rhône). — This is the the reason why you and your friends hate her (3).

Mr. de Rosanbo replied: "So we are

I completely agree on this point regarding masonry.
was the sole author of the Revolution, and the applause-_ statements that I gather from the left, and to which I am not used to it, gentlemen, prove that you
You must admit with me that she made the Revolution
French.

Mr. JumeL. — We are doing more than just acknowledging it.
We proclaim it.

1. This statesman's writing was published for the first time once in Berlin, in 1840, in the work entitled: Dorrow's

Letters and briefs about the characteristics of the weather and literature. (T. IV, p. 211 and 221.)

2. History of France, vol. XVI, p. 535.
3. Official Journal, July 2, page 1799.

In a report read at the Plenary Meeting of the Respec-Tables of the Lodges of Peace and Union and Free Conscience, at The East of Nantes, Monday, April 23, 1883, we Let's read:

"It was from 1772 to 1789 that Freemasonry developed-Bora, the great revolution that was supposed to change the face of the world...

"It was then that the Freemasons popularized the ideas they had taken from their Lodges... (Rapport, p. 8).

In the circular from the Grand Council of the Order Masonic sent to all lodges to prepare
On the centenary of 1989, we find the same admission followed by a threat: "The Freemasonry that prepared The Revolution of 1789 has a duty to continue its work; the current state of mind compels him to do so.

Long before that, in 1776, Voltaire had written to Count d'Argental: "A Revolution is on the horizon"
"All sides."

He knew what he and his friends from the lodges were planning to the Church and to society; the Convention member Guffroy

He characterized it thus: "Never the history of the few-barbaric peoples, never the awful history of tyrants, will not offer the image of a more terrifying conspiracy table nor better combined against humanity and the virtue. » |

Already in that same year, 1776, the central committee of The Grand Orient had chosen, from among the Freemasons, some men tasked with traveling through the provinces and visit the lodges throughout France, to warn them to: be ready to bring their contribution to what was about to be accomplished (1).

Mr. Copin-Albancelli made a very accurate observation.
vation: "To become mistress of desdestinies. of France, it was necessary for Freemasonry nearly seventy years of preparation.

"Why so long? This is due to the method."
that she was obliged to use.

"When Freemasonry appeared in France, we coming from England, during the Regency, she was totally she was powerless. Yet, from then on, she aimed to destroying French traditions, that is to say the elements
the elements that made up the entity called France.
Let's make France a different France! How to achieve this to the achievement of this goal, as crazy as the one that would tend to make a man into an anti-man, of the Hu-Man, an anti-humanity?

"The occult Masonic power, unable to act"
by force, since originally it did not have the

---

1. Here is an example of what, according to Barruel, was attempted in Flanders:
"As early as 1776, the central committee of the Orient chargea his deputies to prepare the brothers for insurrection, to explore and visit the lodges throughout the entire area
France, to press them, to solicit them under the terms of the service Masonic ment, and to announce to them that it was time finally, to fill it with the death of tyrants.

"He, among the great followers, whose mission was..." Northern provinces, was an infantry officer called Sinetty. His revolutionary races brought him to Lille. The Saar Regiment was then garrisoned in this city. It was especially important for the conspirators to secure the brothers whom they counted among the military; the mission de Sinetty achieved nothing less than the success he had hoped for. flattered, but the way he carried it out was enough to our object. To make it known, I only want to repeat Here is the exhibition which was kind enough to make me a witness to it eye, then an officer in this Saar regiment, chosen by Sinetty to understand the purpose of his apostolate, thus than several others from the same regiment.

“We had our lodge,” this worthy soldier told me. "Masonic; it was not for us, as for the "Most of the other regiments, that a real game; "The trials of the new arrivals served as our..." "Entertainment; our Masonic meals charmed our "Leisure activities and they relaxed us from our work. You feel force, reduced to acting through persuasion, through suggestionstion. But it is not easy to suggest to a nation that it must destroy its traditions, that is to say, unto destroy it herself. One cannot achieve such a thing The result is that by proceeding through successive suggestions, managed with extreme skill and prodiGentile hypocrisy; a hypocrisy whose measure is given by the fact that the motto liberty, equality and a fraternity that has been constantly presented, as long as it The aim was to win over the nation, like a charter. of emancipation and universal happiness, manifested its venom as soon as we had managed to dominate this RANCE, by terror and the guillotine.

"To make the entire series of NTs acceptable" through which it was necessary to pass, for to create the essential intermediate states of mind Upon achieving the desired result, it becomes clear that it It took a long time.

"although our freedom and equality were nothing" "Less than the liberty and legality of the Jacobins. The great "Generality and almost universality of officers knew" "to demonstrate it when the Revolution arrived."

"We were thinking of nothing less than this Revolution-

» tion, when an infantry officer named Sinetty, fa-"A Freemason, presented himself at our lodge. He was re-
"Received as a brother. He initially showed no emotion."
"contrary to ours. But a few days later, he in-
"He himself summoned twenty of our officers to a parish assembly"
"particular. We crimes that he simply wanted us to commit."
"to give back the party we had organized."

“Following his invitation, we went to a guin-
"A lookout called the New Adventure. We expect-
"We were aiming for a simple Masonic meal, when the neighbor-
"There, someone speaks like an orator who has important secrets"
"To be revealed by the Grand Orient. We are listening." Imagine our surprise when we saw him take "Suddenly, the tone became emphatic and enthusiastic,"
"to tell us that it's finally time; that the pro-
"jets so worthily conceived, so long pondered by the "True Freemasons must fulfill themselves; that the universe"
"At last he will be freed from his chains; let the tyrants called

Turning his gaze on what is happening
Today, Mr. Copin Albancelli adds: "The franc-Freemasonry therefore prepared its first reign during nearly seventy years. However, this reign lasted only a few years. Smothered in the blood of the Terror and in the mire of the Directory, Freemasonry she found herself as weak as she had been at her beginnings.

She was forced to start her work again, saving field, to prepare the mindsets again on which she could one day rely to to climb, a second time, the power she had was forced to give up. It took her no less eighty years old.

"Seventy years of patient and miserable effort-" Hypocritical lies, the first map eighty years

"Kings will be defeated; all religious superstitions will be eradicated."
"Greekness will give way to light; may freedom, equality"
"Lity will succeed the slavery in which the universe"
" he groaned; that the man would finally regain his rights.

"While our speaker was delivering these declamations,
"we looked at each other as if for ourselves"
"To say: What is this madman? We took the Having listened to him for over an hour, we reserved-

"before laughing about it more freely among ourselves. What we
"What seemed most extravagant was the tone of con-
"fiancée with whom he announced that henceforth the kings"
"or the tyrants would oppose the great pro» jets; that the Revolution was infallible and that it was
"Aaa, that thrones and altars were going to fall-" » ber

"He probably realized that we were not..."
"Masons of his kind; he left us to go vi-
"To cite other lodges. After we had been separated for some time-" »verted by what we took for the effect of a cer-
"What a disturbed woman, we had forgotten all about that scene,"
"when the Revolution came to teach us how much"

"We were mistaken." (Barruel, Memoirs, Volume 1) IL, page 446). In the Notes on some articles of
In the first two volumes, Barruel included other testimonies.
therefore applies to the one he has just reported here.

the second! We understand that, having been educated by her predecessors... early experiences, she could not resolve herself determined to spill the beans!

... "So she doesn't want to leave power and we we can be assured that she will do everything possible to to remain there and finally complete the work of ruin to which,
For two centuries, she has employed so much cunning and of violence.

CHAPTER XIII

FREEMASONRY IN THE 18TH CENTURY

III. — THE ILLUMINATED ONES:

L. Blanc, in his History of the Revolution, cons-test the existence of these darker sanctuaries that the lodges, "whose doors do not open to the adept" that after a long series of calculated tests of in order to observe the progress of his education revolutionary, to test the steadfastness of his faith, to test the mettle of his heart.

It is from these sanctuaries that the descend into the lodges, and "the light", and the impulse.

Before 1889, it was the sect of the "[Illuminati] who imprima to Freemasonry the desired directions so that the project to revolutionize the PTT can succeed France and Europe. After the Restoration, it was It was at Haute-Vente that the role of preparing the events that we are witnessing and that must to complete and finish the interrupted work of the Revolution Solution.

"Following the historical work of the latter years, said Bishop Freppel, it is no longer permissible to be ignorantto establish the perfect identity of the 1789 formulas with the plans drawn up in the sect of the Illuminati (1). »

Barruel brought to light the organization of the IlluMinimism, its doctrines, the influence it exerted on the Freemasonry and through it on the re- movement Revolutionary.

To make these revelations, he relies on documentaries comments, whose origin and authority must first be stated.

Around the year 1781, the Bavarian Court suspected the existence of a sect that had formed in this countries to overlap with Freemasonry. It ordered investigations, which the sectarians had the art to discard or render useless. However, on June 22 In 1784, His Electoral Highness published in his States: Absolute prohibition of "any community, secret or unapproved society and brotherhood by the State. Many Freemasons closed their lodges. The Illuminati, who had F.:. at The Court itself continued to hold its assemblies.

In the same year, a professor from Munich, Babo, revealed what he knew of their existence and their projects in a book entitled First Opinion on the Freemasons. The government then deposed Weishead of the chair of Law which he occupied in Ingolstad, no, because we knew him to be the founder of the Enlightenment, which was not clear, but in the capacity of "fabetter master of the lodges (2). » At the same time, two

1. The French Revolution. On the centenary of 789, p. 34.

2. Weishaupt, "the most profound conspirator who ever "Never appeared," said L. Blanc, better known in the an-born in the sect under the name Spartacus Bavaria around the year 1748. Here is the portrait drawn by Bar-Ruel: "A remorseless atheist, a profound hypocrite, without au-one of those superior talents that give truth famous defenders, but with all these vices and all this

Humanities professors 4 Munich, the priest Cosandey and Abbot Benner, who, after having been the disciples Weishaupt's men, who had separated from him, received orders to appear before the 'ordinary court,' for to declare there, under oath, what they had seen at the Illuminati, contrary to morals and religion bion. At the time, no one knew about these back rooms were also tasked with conspiring against the governments. Barruel published their depositions.
Yours on April 3rd and 7th, 1786. The Aulic Councilor Utschneider and the academician Grümberger, who had removed from the order, as soon as they had learned all of it the horror, they also filed a legal deposition which Barruel also published.

These depositions, important as they were, _
did not lead to taking the measures they called for zeal which gives great strength to impiety and anarchy conspirators. This disastrous sophist will not be known in the story that, like the demon, because of the evil he did and by the one he planned to do. His childhood is obscure, his unknown youth; in his domestic life, only one This trait escapes the darkness that surrounds it, and this its trait is that of depravity, of wickedness con-yes (incest and infanticide confessed in his own nits.)

"But it is more specifically as a conspirator that he
It is important to know Weishaupt. As soon as the eye of justice-Tice discovers this; she sees him at the head of a conspiracy.
alongside which all those of d'Alembert's clubs and Voltaire's are merely childhood games. One does not knows, and it is difficult to determine whether Weishaupt had a master, or if he was the father of monstrous dogmas about which he founded his school.

A tradition, which Barruel could not control, holds that around the year 1771, a merchant from Dland, named Kol. sea, after having stayed in Egypt, began to travel Europe. He is credited with having the famous Caglios as a disciple. tro, and it is claimed that he made contact with Weishaupt.

It is possible that Kolmer was a messenger for the committee milks, or that the Illuminati had intellects-agencies within the court itself, either by distancing themselves from Weishaupt's lie. He made people believe that the sect, being If decapitated, it would disappear on its own.

It took, said Barruel, for heaven to intervene. Filed From his duties, Weishaupt had taken refuge in Regensburg. good, more ardent than ever in pursuing his work-
He had near him an apostate priest, named Lanz. At the moment he was giving him his instructions, before sending him to Silesia to deliver his mysterious and deadly plots, lightning struck them down and Lanz was killed alongside Weishaupt (1).

The terror did not leave the conspirators enough freedom of mind to subtract. in the eyes of justice the central to international secret societies, or of the Patriarch which, from an impenetrable sanctuary, rules and di-

He waged war against Christian civilization.

The end of the Enlightenment, what it was supposed to lead to, did not varia never in Weishaupt's mind: no more religion, no more society, no more civil laws, no more pro-
Priesthoods, was always the fixed objective of his plots; but he understood that it was necessary to lead his followers there by concealing his last thoughts from them. Hence the initiations. mysterious and successive which occupy a large partie of Barruel's work. "I cannot," wrote Weis-
Haupt to Xavier Zwack, employ men as they are: I need to train them; each class needs of my order, be a school of trials for the following boasts.

Like his secret, his last thought could have been, a
One day or another, if it was disclosed, he was careful to expose it.
his person. He wrote to his confidants: "You know the circumstances I find myself in. I must lead everything by five or six people: it is absolutely necessary that I remain unknown” (Original writings). “When the object of this wish (his own), he added, is a unified Revolution Verselle, it could not erupt without exposing the one who had it conceived for public condemnation. It is in the privacy of secret societies that one must know how to propagate Fopimion: » (T.
(I, Letters & Cato, 11 and 25.)

---

1. Barruel gives here as a reference: Apology for the Illusions mined, p. 62.

papers that Lanz was responsible for. Reading these documents recalled the depositions of Cosandey, of Benner, Utschneider and Grümberger, and we resolve Just to search the homes of those known to have had closer ties with Weishaupt.

On October 11, 1786, at the time when Xavier Zwack, court advisor to the regency, — called Cato in the sect, — believed itself to be safe from any investigation, . magistrates went to his house Landshut. Others made a descent at the same time. at Sanderstorf Castle, belonging to the Baron of Bassus, — Hannibal for the sect. These visits put Justice, in possession of the statutes and rules, projects and speeches, in short, everything that constituted the archives of the [enlightened]. On billlets, most of which were written in cipher by Massenhausen, advisor in Munich, — called Ajax by the conspirators, — were recipes for making Aqua toffana, to make the air in the apartments unhealthyments, etc. The seizure also included a collectiontion of one hundred and thirty seals of sovereigns, lords, of bankers, and the secret of imitating those whom the order could not obtain.

Weishaupt's conspiracy revealed itself in these documents so monstrous, says Barruel, that one could could hardly conceive how all the villainy human nature had been sufficient to lend itself to it.

The elector had the seized documents deposited in the State archives. He also wanted to warn the sovereigns of the danger that threatened them all, them and their peoples. For this reason, he had them printed under this Title: Original Writings of the Order and the Sect ENLIGHTENED ONES at Ant. François's, printer of the court of Munich, 1787.

The first part of this work contains the writings discovered in Lanshut at the home of the councilor of the Regency, Mr. Zwack, October 11 and 12, 1786.

The second part contains those that have been found during the visit made by order of His Electoral Highness rale, at Sanderstof Castle.

At the beginning of the first volume and on the frontispiece of the second, there is this warning, quite worthy of attention. Attention: "Those who might have any doubt about the author The authenticity of this collection only needs to be announced to Secret archives of Munich, where orders are given for their "Show the original pieces."

These two volumes contain everything that which can clearly expose the anti-Christian conspiracy yours is the most distinctive. We see the principles there, the object, the means of the sect, the essential partstielles of its code, the correspondence between the adeptyourselves and their leader, their progress and their hopes. Barruel reproduces the pieces in his Memoirs the most interesting (1). Each of the Powers Europe therefore received these documents. All were

The other works from which Barruel drew his evidence her

10 The True Illuminati or the Perfect Ritual of the Illuminati. Baron Knigge, nicknamed Philo in the sect, who is The author of this code attested to its sincerity in these terms. from this publication: "All these grades, as I see them described, appeared this year printed in Edessa (that isthat is, in Frankfurt am Main) under the title of Genuine enlightened. I don't know which publisher it is, but they are abexactly as they came from my pen, as "DA n ai écrits." (Philo's final clarification, p.

20 Philo's final clarification or last word.

These are Knigge's answers to various questions about his connections with the Illuminati.

30 Various works of Spartacus (Weishaupt) and of Phi-Ion (Knigge). After the original writings, this work is the most important one that has appeared on Illuminism.

40. Critical History of the Degrees of Illuminism. All of this thus genuinely warned of the monstrous Rea deliberate evolution for their downfall and that of all the nations. The very excess of these plots made them perhaps to regard them as chimerical, until the mo-where the events they were preparing unfolded.

In Bavaria, a price was put on Weishaupt's head;
he took refuge with His Highness the Duke of Saxony-Gotha. The protection he found there, the protection he enjoyed-rented several of his followers to various courts.
can be explained by the number of disciples he had in the most eminent positions, at the very highest level princes (1).

What is said there is proven by the very letters of the great followers.

50 The Enlightened Leader. This is the complement to No. 3.

6. Notable depositions on the Illuminati. As Everything in these depositions is legal, as they have were confirmed by oath before the courts, no need to emphasize their probative value.

70 Apologies for the Illuminati.

Besides the documents he had in his possession, Barruel was able to to gather information through other channels. The trips he had events in various countries had put him in contact with name-a group of characters who, in person and by correspondence, They informed him of what was happening near them.

1. Barruel gives the list of characters who have made part of the Illuminati sect since its founding in 1776, until the discovery of his original writings in 1786. We find there the proper names of the conspirators, their their nom de guerre, their residences, their qualities, functions terms and dignities, etc.

We note the following because of the greater interest particular that it presents.

In the ecclesiastical world: 1 bishop, vice-president of the spiritual council in Munich, — 1st preacher
— 1 parish priest, — 1 priest, — 1 clergyman, — 2 Lutheran ministers nothing.

— 1 priest, — 1 clergyman, — 2 Lutheran ministers.

Among the nobility: 1 prince, — 2 dukes, — 2 counts, — 7 barons.

In the judiciary: 1 court councillor of the Re-agency, — 1 vice-president, — 17 councilors, — 2 judges,

Except for Weishaupt, who had managed to escape his judges, not one of the conspirators had been convicted in Bavaria to penalties harsher than exile or a temporary prison, and from Holstein to Venise, from Livonia to Strasbourg, not the
Not the slightest search had been carried out in their lodges.
Most of the followers recognized for the most coupables, had found far more protection than of indignation. Therefore, the sect was careful not to abandon-to give the part. Zwack wrote: "It is necessary; to restore-clearing our affairs, that, among the F.:. who escaped our setbacks, some of the most skillful take the in the place of our founders, that they rid themselves of the evils pleased and that, in conjunction with newly elected officials, they are working to restore our society to its former glory vigucur. Weishaupt, in a letter to Fischer, falknows how to hear this threat against those who chase him-people from Ingolstad know: "We will change their "Joy in tears."

Built upon the value of the documents that Barruel presents.
implemented in his Memoirs (1), we can,

— 1 prosecutor, — 1 secretary of state, — 1 secretary of the embassy, — 1 chancellor, — 1 coadjutor, and a secoadjutor, — 1 superintendent, — 1 treasurer,
— {1 commissioner, — 1 bailiff.

In the army: 1 general, governor of Ingolstad, — 1 officer, — 1 captain, — 1 major.

In education: 1 professor of Catholic theology lique and 1 professor of Protestant theology, — 4 professisters, — 1 schoolteacher in a princely household, — 1 Governor of an earl's children, — 1 librarian, — 1 bookseller.

Other professions: The doctor of the Douai electorate rière, — another doctor, — etc., not to mention, said Barruel, a prodigious number of other designated followers known by their war names, and whose real name has not summer. discovered..

ak, Barruel refers to the original writings.

“with complete confidence, enter the lair of the Illumined and make us spectators of the plots: by thewhich they were preparing for the Revolution.

Weishaupt was, as we have said, a professor at the University University of Ingolstad when he laid the foundations of Inuminism, March 1, 1776. Among the students who were following his course, he chose Massehausen, who He later became an advisor in Munich and to whom he gave the name Ajax, and Merz who later became secretary of the ambassador of the Empire in Copenhagen; he gave him his nom de guerre Tiberius. He said to the first: “Jesus-Christ sent his apostles to preach throughout the universe. You who are my Peter, why should I leave you Idle and quiet? Go ahead and preach. » The yearborn in 1776 precedes by very little that of the Revolution; And these are very weak beginnings. But Let's not forget that Freemasonry was organized for longer and than the sect of the IlluMinés only had to give it its final push.

No more than two years later, on March 13, 1778, Weishaupt, in a letter addressed to Tiberius, Merz He thus congratulated himself on the success of his enterprise: "I have an extreme pleasure in teaching you the happy ones progress of my order... I implore you, then put The hands-on approach. In five years, you'll be amazed. of what we will have done. The most difficult thing is on-"We've got it. You're going to see us make giant strides."

What gave him this confidence was the ease- the pleasure he found in seducing men who enjoyed public consideration. In Eichstad, where are located- He had the lodge which he himself presided over, he pushed his attempts even on two canons.

Soon, he was able to send missionaries throughout Germany and all of Italy. We'll talk about that later. how Illuminism was introduced in France.

From the depths of his sanctuary, he followed all his: followers and maintained continuous contact with them. Voltaire's correspondence is prodigious; it does not approach that of Weishaupt.

Like Voltaire, or rather like d'AlemBert, he was ingenious at placing his men near the princes, to introduce them into their councils, to to gain entry to their congresses (1). "History will undoubtedly one day have to explain the skill with which he knew how, at the Rastatt congress, to combine interests of his sect with those of the Powers and with his vows to destroy them all. That of his disciples Xavier, who followed him best in this respect, was the one who followed him best. Zwack: "No one ever knew better how to take the airs of a zealous servant to his prince, to his homeland and society, while conspiring against its own. prince, his homeland, and society.

In various places throughout his work, during From his narrative, Barruel is led to speak of the high characters that Weishaupt won over in large numbers, either by himself or through his affiliates. He knew how to do of these princes of instruments, of apostles and the propagators of a conspiracy of which they were to be the first victims.

But what Weishaupt applied himself to most, this was to seize control of the Freemasonrynetie. From the very first days of its founding sect, and perhaps even before, he had composed took the side he would draw for his plots from the multitude of Freemasons spread across the various points of the world, if ever he could obtain their competition.

In the year 1777, he had been received in Munich,

1. See Barruel, IV, p. 47, 52, 174, etc.

at the lodge called Saint-Théodore. He had thus quality to infiltrate their convents. What he He had done it himself, and he recommended it to his initiates. to do it as well. "He had the secrets of the Freemasonry, Barruel observes, and the Freemasons lessons didn't have his own. He knew that he and they tended towards the same goal, but found themselves placed, on the road leading there, at unequally distant from the goal. We will see all this happen again- leading into the next century with Haute-Vente. Mr. Copin-Albancelli, in his book The Occult Power Against France has brought this hierarchy into sharp focus. between the various secret societies, and the superiors penetrating through some of their members 'into the lower ones to give them the direction that without Doubt they themselves receive from a higher source.

The demon of Revolutions, said Barruel, served Weis- He was perfectly suited to the execution of his plan. sent him a Hanoverian baron named Knigge "Phi- "Ion-Knigge." "Give me six men of this temper, said Weishaupt when he had met him, and with "For them, I change the face of the universe (1)." These two The infernal tisons complemented each other. An occasion- A unique sion presented itself to put their plans into action. to execution.

It was the year 1780. Under the protection and the under the auspices of His Highness Prince Ferdinand, Duke of Brunswick, a general assembly of the ma- deputies conic had just been summoned to Wilhelmsbad for the following year. "It wasn't an initiatory society- significant, said Barruel, than that of which the deputies They flocked from all parts of the world. Good Freemasons at that time believed they could

1. Original Writings, Vol. I, Letter 56.

to bring the number of their initiates to three million;
those of the lodge La candeur, established in Paris, flattered themselves in their encyclical of May 31, 1782, found-around one million in France alone.

“What strange interest calls to a court of Germany, from all parts of Europe, from the bottom even from America, Africa, and Asia, the agents, the chosen ones of so many men, all united by the oath of inviolable secrecy regarding the nature of their associations and the object of their mysteries? what projects brought with them the deputies of an association-
"So formidable a cation?" The answer is that the Revolution-
The solution was decreed, that the hour of the Revolution had arrived was close. In this corner of Germany and by this The convent was located and the hearth was lit from which was to to start the fire that would ravage Europe.

Other Freemason assemblies had been held in Brunswick for about twenty years, in Wiesbaden and other German cities; none had not been so widespread; none had gathered a such a variety of sects. "It was, in a way, said Barruel, all the elements of Masonic chaos gathered in the same center.

"The F.-. were arriving from all sides equipped with passes-" ports of civil authority. For more than six months, They went in and deliberated quietly in their immense and shadowy lodge, without the magistrates deigned to worry about what was happening to them there or for their people. If the religious bodies, if the the episcopal body itself had, in those days, held a general assembly, the sovereign would have demanded the right to send commissioners there; he would have charged with ensuring that, under the pretext of ques-religious practices, nothing contrary to to the rights of the State. Here, politics rested from it.

no doubt on the princes that the masons comp- .
were among their F.:. She didn't know that he
For followers of this rank, it is nothing more than half-conconfidences.

Weishaupt therefore sent his lieutenant to Wilhelmsbad holding Knigge (1); in thought and perhaps with the mission, which came from the highest management of the companies secret meetings, which had summoned them, to train all-all the various sects of the FRE RCORREns in the revolutionary movement.

Knigge judged it more expedient to stand at the door of the assembly, to monitor its actions and to act through his confidants more than through himself.
He made particular use of the adept Minos, that is to say, the Baron Dittfurth, advisor to the Imperial Chamber of Wetzlar, whom he knew to be filled with zeal and enthusiasm siasm for Illuminism and that he had taken care to to be elected to the ranks of deputies. "The main arrangements agreed between Knigge and Dittfurth, said Barruel, were decreed by the congress. » We do not-
We will not go into detail about the maneuvers he will perform.
complit to achieve its goal; they can be read in the fourth volume of the Memoirs to serve as The history of Jacobinism, it will suffice to say that this goal was achieved.

"If I weren't afraid of overwhelming them with astonishment"
and of sorrow the honest Freemasons, said Barruel, I would urge them here to consider for a moment these paroles: 7

1. Baron Knigge, nicknamed Philon, is the most fa-best of the Illuminati after the author of the sect. He is charged with gea to draft and indeed drafted almost all the code of the Illuminated under this title, "Truly Enlightened," printed in France fort-sur-le-Mein. In another work: Last flash-
In this way, he gives his own story, that of Illuminism.
of its agreements with the leaders of the sect and ae tra worth what he undertook for her.

"Everyone was delighted, everyone was enthusiastic!"
Elected and Rosicrucians, Templar Brothers, Zen Brothers Nendorif and Brothers of Saint John, Knights of the Sun and knights Kadosh, perfect philosophers, all e-tent, receive with admiration the oracles of the Epopt Hierophant (Knigge) restoring to the original clarity their ancient mysteries, showing in their Hyram their Mac-Renac, and their polished stone, the whole story of this primitive freedom and equality, all this morality, which is nothing other than the art of
to do without a prince, a government, religion and property!

One of the most distinguished members of the no wounded from the Dauphiné, the Count of Virieu, who had been deceived by the mystical appearances of the system of Saint-Martin, founder of an Illuminism distinct from Weishaupt's was part of the lodge of Beneficent Knights of Lyon, and had been, in this quality, delegate to the Wilhelmsbad congress. From re- I went to Paris, urged on by the Count of Gilliers: "I "I won't tell you the secrets I bring," he said. But what I think I can tell you is that he a conspiracy is brewing, so well-orchestrated and so profounded, that it will be very difficult, both to religion, and to governments not to succumb. (1)

L. Blanc, in his (History of the Revolution, has strongly Weishaupt's work was well characterized: "By the only the allure of mystery, the (sole power of association, to submit to the same will and to be animated by the same

1. In a letter addressed to the Gazette de France, the February 26, 1909, Mr. Gustave Bord said: "Virieu not only-Lement did not abandon Freemasonry, but I can to prove that in 1788, he made every effort to retain in the sect, the Duke of Haire, who had resigned.

breath of thousands of men in every country of the world, but first in Germany and France; to make these men, through education slow and gradual, entirely new beings; to make them obedient to the point of delirium, to the point of death, to invisible and ignored leaders; with a legion pareille secretly weigh on hearts the sovereigns, directing governments without their knowledge, and lead Europe to such a point that all superstition (read: all religion) was destroyed, all monarchy dejected, all privileges of birth declared unjust the very right of ownership abolished: such was the gigantic plan- "Thesis of Illuminism."

CHAPTER XIV

FREEMASONRY IN THE 18TH CENTURY

The convent of Wilhelmsbad dates from progress of the Bavarian sect which was to give the im-definitive impulse towards Revolution.

"Following the historical work of the latter
'years,' said Bishop Freppel (1), 'it is no longer permitted to ignore the perfect identity of the formulas of 1789
with the plans devised within the sect of the Illuminati, of which Weishaupt and Knigg were the promoters, and particularly at the general congress of the lodges Masonic meeting held in Wilhelmsbad in 1871. We cannot know-one might forget, moreover, with what eagerness accoureturned to Paris, to take an active part in all the events, the Swiss Pache, the Englishman Payne, the Prussian Clootz, the Spaniard Guzman, the Neufcha-Telois Abarat, the American Fournier, the Austrian Prey, the Belgians Proly and Dubuisson, a prince of Hesse, some Poles, Italians, Dutch, and defectors

1. The French Revolution (regarding the centenary of 1789), p. 34.

of all the countries whose Revolution accepted the services vices and made a fortune.

The deputies from the lodges, after receiving the baptismtheorem of Illuminism, return to their countries and Freemasonry works everywhere in the
The meaning that was marked on them: in Austria, in France, in Italy, in Belgium, in Holland, in England,
in Poland. "The contagion is so rapid that soon The universe will be filled with Enlightened Ones. Their center is now in Frankfurt, at least as far as gold is concerned to organize revolutionary action. We will see what It was resolved there against the Capetian dynasty, summit of the European social order. Knigge established its headquarters there.
From there, it extends from East to West and from North
In the South, he shares his conspiracies and initiates people into his mysteries.
and he recruits this multitude of heads and arms including the sect needs for the revolutions it desires said.

“Regarding France,” said Barruel, “the sect has des-

"Deeper breasts." In Weishaupt's plan and de Knigge, the French were supposed to be the first to act, but the last to be educated. We comp-
It was about their temperament. "We felt reassured."
that their activity would not wait to erupt
The time has come when all of Europe would be in re-evolution to tear down the altars and the throne.

However, there were already a few followers there.
as early as 1782, those deputies from the lodges who had was admitted to secret sessions during the assembly of Wilhelms-bad. The two most well-known, and who were supposed to have The most disastrous action was carried out by Dietrich (1), mayor of Strasbourg, and Mirabeau.

---

1. It was at his home that it was sung for the first time
The Marseillaise. Fe E

He was sent on a mission to Prussia by the ministers of Louis XVI, became closely associated there with Weishaupt and was 'initiated' into the Brunswick sect of enlightened, although already belonging for a long time to other secret societies, Upon returning to France, he enlightened Talleyrand and other colleagues from the lodge, The Friends United (1). He also introduced the new-mysterious calves in the lodge called the Lodge of the Philaletes.
The leaders of the conspiracy were then primarily occupied with... mainly from Germany. Mirabeau assured them that in France the ground had been admirably prepared by Voltaire and the Encyclopedists and that they could to set to work with complete confidence. They gave-therefore send a mission to Bode, close advisor, 4 Weymar, whom they nicknamed Aurelius, and to this other Knigge's student, known as Bayard in the sect, and whose real name was Baron de Busche, Hanoverian in the service of Holland.

The circumstances were indeed, one could not have more favorable to their propaganda. As Barruel, "the disciples of Voltaire and Jean-Jacques had prepared in the lodges the reign of -this equality and of that freedom whose last mys-teres became, through Weishaupt, those of impiety and of the most absolute anarchy.

"Equality and liberty," he said, "are the essential rights that man, in his perfection original and primitive, receives from nature; the first

This infringement on equality was brought about by property rights;

1. In 1776, wrote Henri Martin, the young Mirabeau had drafted a reform plan, in which he proposed to the Masonic order– It's a matter of working with moderation, but with resolution.
and sustained activity, to gradually transform the world,
to undermine despotism, to pursue civil emancipation, economic, religious, the full conquest of freedom individual. (History of France, vol. XVI, p. 435.)

the first attack on freedom was carried out by the political societies or governments; the only support from property owners and governments are the religious and civil laws: therefore, to restore man in its primitive rights of equality and liberty, it We must begin by destroying all religions, all civil society and ultimately the abolition of all pro:
privacy (1).

In these same speeches, Weishaupt outlined to initiated this course of action to achieve annihilation weaving of property, civil society and Religion, the purpose of its institution.

"The great art of making a Revolution infallible–
The purpose of any mission is to enlighten the people. The enlightenment–
To rer, it is to subtly influence public opinion to the wish for the changes which are the subject of the Re– A deliberate evolution.

"When the object of this vow cannot be fulfilled, without to expose its creator to public condemnation, it is within the intimacy of secret societies that one must knowing how to spread the opinion.

"When the object of this wish is a unified Revolution– Verselle, all members of these societies tending to same goal, supporting each other, must to seek to dominate invisibly and without appearances this of violent means, not on the part the more eminent or the least distinguished by a single little– plain, but on men of every station, of every nation, of every religion. To breathe the same spirit everywhere.
spirit, in the greatest silence and with all the activity– as quickly as possible, direct all the scattered men onto the Earth's surface towards the same object.

"This is what the domain of so-

1. Barruel, III, 24.

secret societies, what the empire should focus on Illuminism.

"This empire, once established through union and multistudy of the followers, that force succeeds empire invisible; tie the hands of all who resist, Subjugate, stifle wickedness in its germ, that is to say, all that remains of the men that you you will not have been able to convince” (1).

Thus instructed by the delegates of the Illuminism, The boxes, or at least the back boxes, began to the work and began by organizing themselves more stronglyment.

A “Report read at the plenary session of the RespecTables, Lodges of Peace and Union, and Free Conscience "to the East of Nantes, on Monday, April 23, 1883" was

1. Instructions given to the one who receives the rank of Epopt or enlightened priest for the leadership of the Order of the Illuminati lower.

"It is to carry out our work that you are called todayof today. Observe others day and night; train them, the To rescue them, to watch over them; to revive the courage of the cowards Nîmes, the activity and zeal of the lukewarm; to preach and to teach the ignorant; to raise up those who fall, to strengthen those who falter, repress the ardor of the reckless, prevent the. disunity, hiding faults and weaknesses, preventing imprudence and betrayal, finally maintaining subordination tion towards superiors, love of the Brothers among themselves. Such and even greater are the duties that we impose upon you Let's ask ourselves... Help each other, support each other; increaseTell us your number. Have you become numerous to a certain extent? tain point? Have you been strengthened by your union? Don'tquote more; start making yourselves powerful and formidabledebles to the wicked (that is, to those who resist our projects). By the mere fact that you are sufficiently named-

breux to talk about strength and that you talk about it, by that Only the wicked, the uninitiated, begin to tremble.
To avoid succumbing to the sheer number, many become good (like us) of their own accord and fall in line under our dra-Skins. Soon you'll be strong enough to tie hands to subjugate others. » Barruel, III, p. 171 printed as a brochure under this title: On the Role of the Freemasonry in the 18th century.

On page 8, we read that the foundation (in 1772)
of the Grand Orient of France, which was a concentration French Masonic troops, hitherto scattered gave "considerable strength to Freemasonry" Nonsense.

"It took its entire development (continues the Report), so that in 1789 it did not count fewer than 700 Lodges in France and its colonies not to mention a large number of Chapters and Areopages. It was between 1772 and 1789 that she developed the great Revolution that was to change the face of the world...

"It was then that the Freemasons popularized the ideas they had gleaned from their Lodges...

"What men emerged from those Lodges where boiling-Human thought was born! Sieyès (L.:. no. 22), the two Lameth, Lafayette (L.: La Candeur), Bailly, Brissot, Camille Desmoulins, Condorcet, Danton, (L.:.
The Two Sisters)... Hébert, Robespierre and so many others very!... (Report..., p. 8).

The Grand Orient was from then on what it is today.
today the great Masonic Parliament of all the lodges of the kingdom that sent their deputies there.
The table of his correspondence shows us, in the year-born in 1787, no fewer than 282 cities each regular lodges under his direction. In Paris alone-
At that point, he counted 81; there were 16 in Lyon, 7 in Bordeaux, 5 in Nantes, 6 in Marseille, 10 in Montpellier, 10 in Toulouse, and almost in each city a number proportional to the population-tion (1).

---

1. Mr. Gustave Bord was able to locate 154 Parisian lodgesnes, 322 provincial lodges and 21 regimental lodges. We know

The lodges of Savoy, of Switzerland, of Bel-gic, of Prussia, of Russia, of Spain, rethe necessary instructions came from the same center to their cooperation. In that same year, 1787, we counted, said Deschamps, according to historical sources very safe torics, 703 lodges in France, 627 in Germany Magne, 525 in England, 284 in Scotland, 227 in Ireland moor, 192 in Denmark, 79 in Holland, 72 in Switzerland, 69 in Sweden, 145 in Russia, 9 in Türkiye, 85 in North America, 120 in the possessions overseas territories of European states.

Louis Blanc's words are all too true: "A on the eve of the French Revolution, the Freemason-nerie had taken an im- development mense; widespread throughout Europe, it presents-
- everywhere conveyed the image of a society founded on 'the principles contrary to those of civil society.

Under the Grand Orient, the Lodge of United Friends was in charge of foreign correspondence. Her Venerable-Savalette de Lange was in charge of the guard of the royal treasury, honored therefore with all the confidence of the sovereign, which did not prevent him to be the man of all the lodges, of all the mys-
He had made his lodge the pleasure ground of the aristocracy. While the concerts and dances kept the F.:. and the S.:. there.
of high lineage, he would retreat to a sanctuary where one was only admitted after swearing hatred to all cult and to every king. There were the archives of the

that the Revolution was only possible thanks to the sudden dissolution of the royal army: however, upon careful reading composition of the 21 regimental lodges, one is persuaded easily that nothing was — in 1771 — more likely that this dissolution. Freemasonry was established in the army from the outset by the Irish regiments; it en-My national troops; she inevitably threw the indisdiscipline.

secret correspondence, that's where the councils met Mysterious.

“There were,” said Barruel, “less con-naked and even more formidable. That's where they were talking about the spirits and the dead were questioned, or, as in
In the Ermonville lodge, they indulged in the most horrible
"Disintegration of morals."

For Freemasonry to move from documentary propaganda to trinal and moral influence on political action, a work of organization and concentration of all-
All obediences were necessary. It was done, and the Duke of Chartres, later Philippe-Égalité, was the linchpin. This prince was the obvious choice to be the leader of the conspirators and to serve as their shield. "It was necessary."
powerful, said Barruel, to support all the for-acts they had to commit; it had to be atrocious, so that he would be less frightened by the number of victims what all these misdeeds would entail. He needed Not Cromwell's genius, but all his vices.
wanted to reign. But, like the devil, who wants to less. ruins if he cannot exalt himself, Philippe had sworn to sit on the throne, even if he were to find himself crushed by its fall (1). » Louis XVI had been warned,

1. Mr. Stephane Pol published, in 1900, a manuscript unpublished work by Elizabeth Duplay, widow of the revolutionary Le Below. In the Scattered Notes, we read: "Robespierre had a
The vote (for the death of Louis XVI) was a terrible impression.
from the Duke of Orléans: "What!" he said, "when he could re-to accuse so easily.

Citizen Le Bas adds: "This profound man-immoral and so eager to become king, had spread-he spent most of his fortune to achieve his but: the Mirabeaus, the Dantons, the Camille Desmoulins, the Collot-d'Herbois, the Billaud-Varennes and so many others as despicable as he had been had taken part in his extravagances corrupting alliances.

Upon the death of Louis XVI, seeing that he had been tricked, he sent his resignation to Freemasonry in a letter full of bitterness.

he remained in a state of security whose illusory nature he did not recognize.
sion than upon his return from Varennes. "Why didn't I believe,

Eleven years ago! Everything I see today,
I had been told so (1).

Philippe was already Grand Master of the Scottish Corps, The most significant event of the time, when, in 1772, He added to this Grand Mastership that of the Grand Orient. His conspirators then brought him the English Mother Lodge of France. Two years later, the Grand Orient affiliated regularly the Lodges of Adoption and did so to come under the same management. The following year, the The Grand General Chapter of France also joined to the Grand Orient. Finally, in 1781, a solemn treaty intervened between the Grand Orient and the Mother Lodge of Scottish rite.

Having thus concentrated, they prepared for action. At the conclusion of the Wilhelmsbad convent, Knigge had The Eclectic group was founded in Frankfurt. This groupe was only four years old at the time. that it was found to be quite numerous and quite widespread outside to convene a general assembly

1. History of the Revolution, vol. II, pp. 74-81.

Since Varennes is presented here in our writing, rappelons than when the German armies were on the march -Regarding Paris, the King of Prussia halted his troops at Varennes and there, with Bismarck and Moltke, the two geniuses, at his side Following the victory, he gathered the principal officers around him. and addressed them with these words: “You know where we are and What attack took place there eighty years ago? It is from here that all the misfortunes that have befallen us originated. on France. When a nation treats its king in this way, the hand God weighed heavily upon her.

Some time later, King William, first em- The German father, as a fruit of victory, recalled himeven the incident at Cardinal de Bonnechose and the commentyour way of making it a lesson for France. (Life of Cardinal de Bonstechose, by Mer Besson, vol. II; p. 146.)

at the Grand Eclectic Lodge. There, the assassination was resolved. The court of Louis XVI and the King of Sweden (1). The fact is Today it is undeniable: the testimonies are abundant. First, that of Mirabeau who, at the opening of the Estates-Generals, he said, pointing at the king: "Here is the vic-time"; then that of Count Haugwitz, minister of Prussia, at the Congress of Verona, where he accompanied his sovereign, in 1822. There he read a memorandum which he could have titled it "My Confession." He says no. only that he had been a Freemason, but that he was in charge of the senior management of the meetings maconnics in various countries. "It was in 1777 that I "I took charge of the management of the Prussian Lodges, "of Poland and Russia."

"I acquired the firm conviction there that all this "which arrived in France, since 1788, the Revolution- "French tion, finally, including the assassination of the King" "with all its horrors, not only had been decided at that time, but that everything had been » prepared through meetings, instructions, services "mentions and signals that leave no doubt" » on the intelligence that prepared and con- "Duit." "Those who know my heart and my

1. It was at the Grand Theatre in Stockholm that Gustav III was assassinated by four lords of his court. The murders Triers spread the rumor that the king had been struck by a French revolutionary. But soon they were uncgreens. Gustave had only been wounded, but the fourteenth "He died one day, poisoned," declared the doctor Dalberg. The murder of Gustave and the rise to power of his brother were prepared long in advance by the lodges, as well as in as evidenced by the papers of the Duke of Südermania, as well as the official reports that he had drawn up and initialed following the Masonic magnetism sessions atwhich he had attended in 1783. Freemasonry had put nine years to find five thugs in Sweden to murder Gustave.

intelligence judges the impression that these discoveries make produced on me (1). »

On April 7, 1875, Cardinal Mathieu, archbishop-Bishop of Besançon, wrote to one of his friends a letter which was communicated to Mr. Léon Pagès and puforgotten by him. It reads: "There was in Frankfurt in 1784, an assembly of Freemasons, where were Two prominent men from Besançon were summoned, Mr. de Raymond, postal inspector, and Mr. Marie de Bouleguey, President of Parliament. In this meeting-

nion, the murder of the King of Sweden and that of Louis XVI were resolved... The last survivor (of the two) has said to Mr. Bourgon, 'Honorary Chamber President' at the Court) which left a great reputation of probity, integrity, and firmness among us. I I knew him well and for a long time because I have been in Besançon for forty-two years and it is He died quite recently. He recounted, remembering the fact to me and others.

Monsignor Besson, then Vicar General to Cardinal Ma-Thieu, and later Bishop of Nîmes, completed this revelation in these terms: "I can confirm the the cardinal's letter contains details that are not of no interest and which were often told to me in Be-sançon, not only by Mr. President Bourgon, but by Mr. Weiss, the city librarian, member of the Institute and the principal author of the Bio-universal writing, published under the name of Michaud.
Mr. Bourgon and Mr. Weiss were men of well, in every sense of the word... Mr. de Raymond

1. This statesman's writing was published for the first in Berlin in 1840, in the work entitled Dorrev's 'Denkscrifften und Briefen zur charackteristik der wet and literature. (T. IV, p. 211 and 221.)

The above quote is taken from History and Documents on Freemasonry, by Dr. Eckert.

He lived until 1839. He was the one who revealed the secret to them.
lodges. on the condemnation of Louis XVI, to a age when one owes the world nothing but the truth. Mr.
Weiss and President Bourgon were still quoting on this subject the confessions of Baron Jean Debry, prefect of Doubs.
A Freemason, a member of the National Convention, and a regicide, this character, that events had illuminated, played, in Besanto play an honorable role, in the twelve years that he
He spent time there from 1801 to 1814.

But here's what will seal the deal. In the pre-First days of March 1898, Father Abel, Jesuit of great renown in Austria, in one of its lectures for men given in Vienna at locca-Lenten sion, says: "In 1784, there was in Frankfurt an extraordinary meeting of the Grand Lodge Eclec-One of the members put the condemnation to a vote upon the death of Louis XVI, King of France, and of Gustavus, King from Sweden. This man's name was Abel. He was my Grandfather. A Jewish newspaper, La Nouvelle Presse free, having reproached the speaker for having thus de- Father Abel, stunned by his family, said at the conference next: “My father, in dying, left a mark on me, com- his last wish, which I would strive to fulfill- to undo the harm that he and our parents had done. If I had not had to carry out this order of my father's will, dated July 31, 1870, I I would not speak as I do now (1).

1. Father Abel is the son of the famous Bavarian minister whose career deserves to be recalled in a few words.

Initially a liberal, an agent of the Prussian-Masonic party, in Bavaria, and therefore faithful to his father's tradition, The Freemason of 1784, Minister Abel, converted to the following the death of his wife, and became what the Prussians- His followers call him a cleric, an ultramontane, because he is These two words came from Prussia, immediately adopted by our lodges.

Abel was overthrown in 1817 by... the dancer Lola Mon-

Mr. Gustave Bord believes that the king's death was not decided only after Varennes. He is probably unaware of this. Father Abel's statement which was published in the Austrian newspapers at the time it was made, that is to say, on the date marked above.

With the king's death decided, it was necessary to find the means to accomplish it and, for that purpose, to find an assembly composed of men capable of committing this for- do.

Messrs. Augustin Cochin and Charles Charpentier, in a study published on November 1st and 16th, 1904 in the Revue l'Action française, showed com- how the 1789 election campaign was conducted Burgundy. From this study and several other similar studies... They reached this conclusion, which was verified, based on their nonsense. through all their research, that in the state of dissolution where all the former independent bodies had fallen pendants, provinces, orders or corporations, it has been

It is easy for an organized party to seize control of public opinion.
and to direct it without owing anything to any of its affiliates, nor the talent of its leaders. This organization They show it as existing and active through documentaries.
ments of archives (1).
very. The king wanted to make her a countess, and it was necessary for This was an act of indigenism, which the minister refused to acknowledge.
gner. He was dismissed and replaced by Maurer, the first

A Protestant who served as a minister in Bavaria. His first act was the signing of the requested document.

1. In 1888, Mr. Auguste Carion published in Peon _(Librat(rie Vitte) this brochure: The Verification of the Old Regime and 'The Revolution. We find there this passage which enters into The line of thought developed by Messrs. Charpentier and Cochin:

It is found in certain notebooks (of grievances of the 'Third-State in 1789), writes Mr. Carion, proposals where pe the revolutionary spirit. Mr. Taine provides the explanation Done. Lawyers, prosecutors, notaries of small firms cities had written grievances and pre-

By studying them closely, noting the names and the dates, they manage to "sweep" the bricklayers, to find-to trace their steps in a series of actions which,
These shots, taken separately, are not striking, but which, seen Taken together, they reveal an ingenious system and a mysterious agreement. When comparing the results of this work in two different provinces and eloi-
With these images, the impression becomes striking.

André Chénier, who had been an enthusiastic follower ideas that produced the Revolution, that caused it to He himself was led to the scaffold, and had clearly seen when he:
said: "These Societies, all holding hands, form a kind of electrical chain around the France. At the same moment, in every corner of the empire, they stir together, push the mê-
My cries imprint the same movements.

As the opening of the States General approaches...
In the raux, secret societies redouble their activity to discredit the royal family and destabilize the government sent his notebooks to the chief town of the bailiwick, without having even assembled the community to give him reading ture. (See Taine, The Old Regime, p. 5109.) (The Truth-(Te on the Old Regime, Carion, p. 68.)

ML Ricaud in a substantial book: Bigorre and the Hautes-Pyrénées during the Revolution. (Paris, li-Honoré Champion bookshop, and Tarbes, Croharé bookshop 1894), made the same observation for the Pyrenean region.

Examining the 260 grievance notebooks of the Third Estate which are kept in the Archives of the department of
In the Hautes-Pyrénées, Mr. Ricaud researched how each
The commune had written its own, and he finds that these notebooks were not written by the municipalities at all.

Here, first of all, he said, are the notebooks from Argelès-Bagnères and of Bonnemazon. At first glance, one notices who neither Neither was composed in the village from which it expresses grievances. Both, in fact, are designed in the same terms and written almost entirely of the same hand. This indicates a common origin; because It is impossible that these two villages, separated by a dis-

ly. Thanks to the followers spread everywhere, the words Orders are passed on, legends circulate, lagi-
The situation spreads; unrest breaks out: everything done without any apparent organization. It's a movement, it is a revolution that appears spontaneous.
However, followers placed at court are lulled to sleep
Royal mistrust, some knowing what they are doing, the others not realizing, such as the prince-Lamballe ceases to be with the Queen.

Then came the "affair" of the necklace. We know at-Today, what is a "case", and by whom?
She has risen up and what she produces, Dreyfus tells us learned about it. There were several of them then: the case of the Jesuits, the Calas affair, the La Chalotais affair and by-above all, that of the Queen's necklace, mounted by the Jew Cagliostro. Philosophers and Freemasons, after launching them, they published brochures for to stir up class jealousies and awaken passions

—

considerable size and without any neighboring relations, ajent had the same ideas, at the same time as two writers, for express them in the same terms and with the same writing style ture. Moreover, the author of the two plays had left some blanks so that the name of the village, that of the members of parliament who would be appointed, as well as the date of the day when the community would gather to sign its notebook and choosing one's representative... (La Bigorre, pp. 12, 13). |

In the Hautes-Pyrénées, eight or ten villages... sins sometimes deposited the same notebook written on the same paper with the same handwriting, while for others groups of localities, the peasants merely copied general formulas that had been given to them (The Bi- 'gorre, pp. 15-21).

The same was true, moreover, forty leagues from the Bigorre, in Armagnac, where a report dated May 29, 1789, emanating from the Marquis of Fodoas, who governed this con- The draft, we learn that "... On a single draft, (the lawyers, prosecutors and notaries of small towns) were doing, for all the municipalities, similar copies, which they sell they held the advice of each parish dear. countryside.” (Quoted by M. Ricaut, La Bigorre, p. 21.)

nuns. At the same time, Turgot and Necker were imposed on the King, the provincial assemblies and the Parliament obeyed secret committees.

The preparatory movement for the Revolution spread... further.

"Elusive informers," said Louis Blanc, "fai- know how to move from one place to another, as if by a thread electric, the secrets stolen from the courses, from the colleges ges, chancelleries, courts, councils Some people were seen staying in the cities. unknown travelers, whose presence, purpose, the fortune, were: so many problems.” He shows Cagliostro fulfilling the role of traveling salesman of Freemasonry in France and Italy, in Poland and Russia.

In 1787, a new change occurred in French Freemasonry, a new grade was introduced introduced into the lodges. The Freemasons of Paris hastened-rent to communicate it to the provincial F.:. "I have before our eyes, says Barruel, the Memoir of a F.-. who received the code for this new rank in a lodge more than eighty leagues from Paris.

The resolutions adopted at the Grand Orient were based for all provinces, addressed to the Venerable Masters from each lodge. The instructions were accompanied from a letter worded as follows:

"As soon as you receive the enclosed package,
You will acknowledge receipt of this. You will attach the oath to faithfully and punctually execute all the orders that will come to you in the same form, without bothering you to figure out which hand
They don't leave, nor do they know how they reach you. If you Refuse this oath or if you fail to do so, you will be regarded as having violated the one you made

Upon your entry into the Order of Friars Minor: Remember from Aqua Tophana; remember the 'pOIRnAres which "Await the traitors (1)."

The regulatory club could at least count on five hundred thousand Freemasons, full of zeal for the Revolution, spread throughout all parts of France, all ready to rise at the first signal of insurrection and capable of drawing others into the conflict, by the violence of an initial impulse, the greatest part of the people.

We then witness what we see happening again.
Today: Freemasonry needed to the execution of his plans on a prodigious number of arms; and that is why she, who did not admit just-that in her home than men having a
In a certain situation, he then called upon the dregs of the people.
Even in the villages, the peasants came toto speak of equality and freedom and to warm up the head on human rights. For these people, the
The words liberty and equality did not need to to be understood by the initiations of the back lodges, and he
it was easy for the leaders to impress them through these alone words all the revolutionary movements that we want-milk to produce.

In the same vein, the Duke of Orléans called to the lodges and brought the Guards into the sect French women.

Nothing is done without money, and revolutions less than everything else.

The steering committee, chaired by Sieyès, and which included, among others, Condorcet, Barnave, Mirahandsome, Pétion, Ropes peri; Grégoire, was not lacking to collect and raise funds for the great business.

Doudat, in a book published in 1797, says: "This It was through the Freemasons that a correspondence was established. general weighting and the raising of necessary funds to the party (of the Revolution). These levies under the name Freemason rewards were made in all the countries of Europe and served, without all the The brothers foresee this, fueling the Revolution of France. With these funds, the party maintained a from one end of the kingdom to the other, emissaries, and in Paris, residents; he threw candidates into the corporaarts and crafts training programs, he bribed agents, spies, preachers, and assassins were unleashed. It was The treasure was in Nîmes, that's where it ended up all the channels which, responding to the various hideouts Calvinists brought and distributed the contributions butts, and with a lever, put all their machines in motion. This money was used for. bribe emissaries throughout France to to preside over the bailiff assemblies. It served to put "The people under arms." (The Verifiable Authors) of the French Revolution, pp. 451-456).

Mirabeau, in his book The Prussian Monarchyne (1), published before the events of which he was himself Even one of the great actors speaks of it this way: "The masonry in general, and especially the branch of Templars, produced annual sums of IMMENSES through the costs of receptions and contributions tions of all kinds: a portion was employed in expenses of order, but another VERY CONSIDERABLE

---

1. Barruel, II, p. 476.

flowed into a general fund from which no one, ex- accepted the first of the brothers, did not know the imp- fold. » |

---

1. Volume VI, p. 67.

The same information is given to us by the pa- secrets found at the home of Cardinal de Bernis. Deschamps cites one of these documents belonging to the propaganda club attached to the steering committee Philalethes whose mission was not only to cooperate in the French Revolution, but to tra- to work to introduce it among the other peoples of Europe rope. We can see that, on March 23, 1790, there were 11 1,500,000 francs in the treasury, including the Duke of Orléans had provided 400,000 francs; the surplus had been given by other members upon their arrival. From- The clubs or lodges had other resources. the general fund of Freemasonry had in 1790, twenty million pounds, cash; suil- Before the reports, there were supposed to be ten millions more before the end of 1791. When Ca- Gliostro was arrested in Rome by the papal police. In September 1789, he admitted that Freemasonry had a large amount of money scattered in the banks Amsterdam, Rotterdam, London, Geneva, Venise, that he, Cagliostro, had received six hundred louis cash, the day before his departure for Franc- strong (1).

With everything thus prepared, the day of the insurrection is set for July 14, 1789. The Freemasons, reve- Those in power today, naked, know very well why They chose July 14th in preference to other dates. Dates for the national holiday. "The Third Republic" chose this anniversary, said Mr. Gustave Bord, because that it is merely the political representation of France Freemasonry, and that the storming of the Bastille, despite of all the romantic legends, was she herself

---

1. Deschamps, II, p. 126.

The result of a vast Masonic conspiracy

… " (L)

1. The details, of absolute precision, that Mr. Edges, leave no room for doubt, do not lend themselves to au-no ambiguity.

It was initially the army that was hired for the com-plot through the military lodges. We approached to the Lodge of the Three United Brothers, which successively for venerable: Minette de Saint-Martin, exempt from the gar-of the corps; Schmidt, naval clerk; Chauvet, aoe of war; Desbarodières, cavalry captain erie

In another Lodge of the time, also military, Patriotism, we find Vauchelles, principal clerk of ar-tillerie, and Mathieu de l'Epidor, secretary general of the gar-...of the body.

The French Guards, whose defection will ensure the The day's successes have their Lodge: The Friends of the Glory; the non-commissioned officers even have their own special Lodge, of which The venerable one is Beyssac, sergeant: it's the Union of Good Men Cros à l'O .:. de Panis.

Freemasonry had, moreover, infiltrated all the E ria of the administration, no less than in lar-née

She held the Post Offices through the superintendent of Ogny, from the chapter of the United Friends; the Messengers, by Chignard; The King's Finances, by Savalète de Lange. Latouche, Chau-Mont, Pelletier de Lépine, Gillet de la Croix, represented the Duke of Orléans and his supporters; Perronnet brought the contingent of bridges and roads; Boucault, the waters and forests; Méry d'Arcy, the East India Company; Lalande re-believed the scientists; Roettiers de Montaleau, friend of Caglios-tro and very closely involved in the purely Masonic affair du Collier had the employees of the Mint behind him. Surgeons, doctors, lawyers, concierges The royal buildings were mostly affiliated with ges.

The City government was populated by Masons. "Widower" was represented there by the police lieutenant Thiroux de Crosne, by Ethis de Corny, King's Attorney, by Veytard, chief clerk. The provost of the merchants, Flesselles was also a Freemason, but a lukewarm one. and timid, who showed little enthusiasm for the complot. To guard against an inopportune defection or even Faced with the possibility of treason, they decided to massacre him...

In the insurrectionary committee, we still see the Marquis de la Salle, of the Lodge Les Deux Sœurs; Deleu-

The Bastille falls (1). The messengers who carry it- They spread the news to the provinces and come back saying that everywhere they saw villages and towns in Insurrection. The barriers in Paris are burned.

tre, of the Social Contract; Quatremière, of the Heradom Lodge; Jamin, of Constant Truth; Osselin, of Perfect Contenttement.

On July 13th, at eleven o'clock in the morning, the conspirators... gather in the church of Petit-Saint-Antoine. Order of the day: troop withdrawal; organization of the bourgeois militia The session is chaired by Dufour, an official lawyer. by the Grand Orient, and by Villeneuve, deputy of the Lodge Moderation.

The next day, when everything is already ready for The attack, the insurrectionary committee sends four deputies requests to the governor to encourage him to open his doors and to surrender. The first delegation is composed of Ethis de Corny, Macon; de Bellon, aide-major, Macon; of Billeford, artillery sergeant, Mason. In the third- In my delegation, we find Abbé Fauchet and Chignard, Mason; in the fourth, Poupart de Beaubourg, Macon; of Milly, Macon; Jamin, Macon.

It is once again Freemasons who are leading the attack. against the Bastille, and among them, Moreton de Chabrillan, of the Lodge La Candeur.

Once the fortress was taken, the Committee informed the As- The national assembly of this popular achievement is composed of, among others, from Garran de Coulon, Macon, from Ja Feutrié, Mason; from Morillon, Mason.

In the deputies receiving the delegation from the Assembly national, there is Deleutre, a Freemason. The member of the |'assem- national wheat which will be tasked with entering into negotiations with the Insurrectionary Committee is called Herwyn, and i

Macon, too, as if by chance.

Finally, when the Commune officially occupies the Bag: It was the Chevalier de Laizer who installed him; he was an officer. of the G.:. O.:., Venerable of the Future of the Friends of the Glory, and deputy of the Military Union, from Valognes...

1. Proof that the French Revolution was organized through a cosmopolitan association: Auguste Vaquerie wrote in the Reminder of 27 Messidor year 102, in other words, 15 July 1794, an article that ended with these words:

'Master of the Bastille, the people demolished it, and it seemed- P.S. that a weight was removed from the chest of the mon-

e. "It wasn't just France that breathed a sigh of relief."

In the provinces, castles are burned. The redou- The lantern game table has begun; heads have were carried on pikes; the monarch was besieged- He was in his palace, his guards were sacrificed; he is. he himself was taken captive to his capital.

Then begins the reign of organized terror. in order to give the sect complete freedom to execute his sinister projects.

It was inaugurated towards the end of July 1789. on the various points of France, said Mr. Frantz Funck-Brentano (1), from East to West, and from North In the South, a strange terror suddenly spread, Mad terror. The inhabitants of the fields were taking refuge in the cities whose gates were subsequently closed in great haste. The men gathered, armed. on the boulevards; they were, people shouted, the brigands. In some places, a messenger would arrive, the

In London, there was a banquet where Sheridan drank "at the "The destruction of the Bastille during the Revolution."

"The storming of the Bastille was given as the subject of | or in English universities.

» Italy acclaimed him through the mouth of Alfiéri.

"In Saint Petersburg, people kissed in the streets..."
crying with joy.

"Indeed, all peoples were interested."
to the deliverance of the fraternal people who do not work for himself alone, and who, when he makes a declaration of rights, declares, not the rights of the Frenchman, but the rights of the man

Mr. de Ségur, who was then in Saint Petersburg, wrote in his Memoirs: “Although the Revolution was not assured
I am not seriously threatening to anyone in Saint Petersburg.
I would not know how to express the enthusiasm that they aroused among the merchants, the bourgeoisie, and young people of a class higher, the fall of this state prison and the first triumph of a stormy freedom. French, Russians, An-English, Danish, German, and Dutch people congratulated themselves.
as if they had been freed from a chain that weighed them down upon them. Each one felt that a new dawn was breaking.
"was".

1. Social Reform, no. of November 1, 1904, p.
670-672.

wild eyes, covered in dust, on a white horse of foam. The brigands were up there on the hill, They were lying in ambush in the woods. In two hours, they would be... would be in the city. (Mr. Frantz Funck-Brentans describes Here is what happened particularly in Auvergne, in the Dauphiné, in Guyenne, etc.) The memory this alarm remained very vivid among the generations who knew her. "The great fear" was the denomination of... the mination that was given to him in central France.
In the South of France, they say "la grande pourasse", the "grande
"paou", "the paou's annada". Elsewhere it was "Brigands' Day" or "Crazy Thursday", "the "Black Friday," depending on the day the panic broke out.
In Vendée, the memory of the event has remained under the name "the Madeleine quarrels". The fear did indeed erupt at the Madeleine festival
July 22nd. » |

The decree that the National Assembly published on August 10, 1789, notes in its preamble the gene-reality and the simultaneity of the panic. "The alarms were sown in the different provinces, he said the Assembly, at the same time and almost the same day. "

The documents compiled by Mr. Frantz Funck-Bren-Tano shows that the "great fear" has erupted in the following provinces: Ile-de-France, Normandy, Maine, Brittany (French-speaking), Anjou, Touraine, Orléanais, Nivernais, Bourbonnais, Poitou, Sain-Tonge, Angoumois, Périgord, Limousin, Agenais, Gu-Yenne and Gascony, Languedoc, Provence, Dauphiné, Forez, Auvergne, Burgundy, Franche-Comté, Cham-
"Spain, Lorraine, Alsace." He adds that he doesn't know any of them.
a document reporting fear in Brittany Breton-speaking regions include Picardy, Artois, and Flanders. I I remember, however, having heard about it from my mother. | a

This panic-stricken terror led citizens to arm themselves-rent. The National Guard was formed. In less than For fifteen days, three thousand men were enlisted armed and adorned in the national colors. The fear of brigands begat true brigands who were currently providing the necessary weapons.
“Popular thought,” says Mr. Frantz Funck-Bren-Tano may not be wrong in considering this event-ment as the most important of the entire Revolution-resolution. Overnight, the French saw to destroy everything that had constituted their centuries-long existence.
Faced with this sudden void, there was "great fear".
in simple souls, the great pre-fever attack indicator of the terrible crisis that will shake the nation entirely and to the very depths of its being trailles » (1).

1. In 1797, a book entitled: was published in Neuchâtel.
"The True Authors of the French Revolution" 1789,” by Sourdat. On page 453, it says: “It was by the Freemasons which spread in July 1789, the same day, at the same hour, throughout the kingdom, the alarm of the alleged brigands; it was by the Freemasons established a general correspondence rale and the raising of funds necessary for the party.

The journal La Révolution française, June 1904, page 556, published testimonies from men about the great fear
who have a veritable cult-like devotion to the Revolution:

Mr. Marcel Bruneau, Academy Inspector, (The Beginnings) of the Revolution, Cher and Indre, 1902): "The great fear, through its consequences, became one of the greatest events

"Events of the Revolution." Mr. Georges Bussière, (Event-Historical details of the Revolution in Périgord, vol. III. The Bourgeois Revolution, The Spontaneous Revolution, pp. 73, 74):
“The great fear can be considered as one of the events”
'most significant elements of the Revolution'. Mr.
Aulard: This great fear of July and August 1789 which is perhaps the most important event of the Revolution French tion”.

“Many historians have seen this as proof of an organization-scholarly and comprehensive study of the revolutionary party, of which The agents, throughout the territory, reportedly obeyed to a watchword. (M. Pierre de Vitt. Fear in 1789.)
© The Day of the Brigands in Limousin, p. 7.)

Who was powerful enough to lift at the same time
The same fear, across a vast expanse of territory by the same methods, by the same Lies? How can such a movement be explained?
if not through the concerted action of a spreading sect due in all parts of the kingdom, in order to make What crimes could she have been planning?

To accomplish them, a concerted effort was needed.
and arms. To direct them both, Mira-Beau calls his conspirators to the church of the religrievous people known as Jacobins; and soon
The whole of Europe doesn't know the leaders and the players of the Revolution, only under the name of Jacobins.
designates by itself everything that more than violent conspiracy against God and against his Christ, against kings and against society.

We do not need to recount it here, nor even the table, the purpose of these chapters being solely to respond to the wish thus expressed by Louis Blanc in his History of the Revolution. “It is important to introduce-to lead the reader into the mine that they were then digging, Under thrones and under altars, revolutions naires, profound and active instruments of the Ency-"Clopedists."

In this den we find all the characters who played the most active part in the upheaval political, social and religious issues of the late 17th century

key: Philippe-Egalité, Mirabeau, Dumouriez, La Fayette, Custine, the Lameth brothers, Dubois-Crancé, Rœderer, Lepelletier de Saint-Fargeau belong to the Lodge of Candor; Babeuf, Hébert, Lebon, Marat, Saint-Just, to that of the United Friends; Bailly, Barrère, Guillotin, Danton, Garat, Lacépède, Brissot, Camille Desmoulins, Pétion, Marat, Hébert, Collot-d'Ilerbois, Dom Gesle emerged from the idea of the Nine Sisters at which had belonged to Voltaire, d'Alembert, Di-Derot and Helvétius. Sieyès was part of that of the Twenty-two, Robespierre was a Rosicrucian of the Chapter from Arras.

It was Mirabeau who, on May 6, 1789, showed Louis XVI saying, "Here's the victim!"

It was Sieyès who, on June 16, specified that he would not There can be no veto against the assembly that will to regenerate France.

It was Guillotin who, on June 21, 1792, led the deputies in the Jeu de Paume room, and it is this another mason, Bailly, who improvises the oath of the revolt. It was Camille Desmoulins who, on July 14th, in the garden of the Palais-Royal, throws to the crowd the The cry: "To arms!" signal for the first murder and looting.

It was Lafayette who, on June 21, 1791, sent to Varennes, this other mason Pétion, to seize the king fugitive who makes himself guardian of the Tuileries. The same Pétion, mayor of Paris, delivers, on June 20 1792, the royal family at the mercy of the avi- hordes born in the suburbs.

It was Roederer who, on August 10, after a new assault on the Tuileries, delivers the royal family to the Convention.

It was Danton who organized the September Massacres. bre, while Marat has a well dug, rue de the Tomb-Issoire, for burial in the catacombs From Paris, the corpses of those whose throats were slit.

This is Garat, a Freemason like all the others, who, on the eve of January 21st, came to inform the king martyr, his death sentence without reprieve.

And after the regicide, it was Robespierre who became Grand Master of the Scaffold.

The Freemasonry project was not limited not to Jacobinize France, but the entire world:
we have also seen the Enlightenment carried simultaneously-lying in all countries.

The lodge established on Rue Coq-Héron, presided over by the duke de la Rochefoucauld, had become especially that of the high-ranking Freemasons and was in charge of propaganda European; that's where the greatest advice. The one who knew this establishment best-Mr. Girtaner is... In his Memoirs on the French Revolution, he said: "The Pro- club Paganism is very different from that of the Jacobins, what-that the two of them often mingle together. That The Jacobins were the main driving force behind the National Assembly.
The one from Propaganda wants to be the driving force of humankind. The latter already existed in 1786;
The leaders were the Duke of La Rochefoucauld, Con-Dorcet and Sieyès. The main objective of the propaganda club-
The aim of this project is to establish a philosophical order, dominating on the opinion of humankind. There is in this so-society has two kinds of members, taxpayers and The non-paying users. The number of paying users is approximately five thousand; all the others pledge to spread everywhere the principles of society and to strive to all-days to its object.

Their efforts were not in vain. "Of all the phenomena of the Revolution, says Barruel, the most Surprising no doubt, and unfortunately also the What is most undeniable is the speed of the conquests which have already revolutionized such a large part of Europe, and which threaten to turn it into a revolution
the universe; it is the ease with which its armies displayed its tricolour flag and planted the tree of its disorganizing equality and freedom in Savoy and Belgium, in Holland and on the shores of the Rhine, in Switzerland and beyond the Alps, of Piedmont: Mount, from Milan and even as far as Rome itself," Then, after having acknowledged the value of the French troops French and the skill of its leaders the part which belongs to them due to these conquests, he adds: "The sect and his plots, his legions of secret emissaries of- They advanced everywhere on his armies. The traitors were in the fortresses to open the gates, they were even in the enemy's armies, in the advice from the princes to thwart their plans. His clubs, his newspapers, his apostles had dis- "Set the populace at bay and prepared the way."

Barruel provides numerous proofs of this assertion. information. The true story of the conquests of Republic and the Empire confirmed it.

THE AGENT OF MODERN CIVILIZATION

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND. — SECOND PERIOD

FROM THE REVOLUTION TO THE PRESENT DAY

CHAPTER XV

i '

FREEMASONRY UNDER THE FIRST EMPIRE

The overthrow of pro- Christian civilization thrown towards the end of the 14th century, we have seen pursued by a secret society which, from generation In generations, the plan indicated by The Humanists, as developed by the Encyclopedists, definitively arrested by the [enlightened and put to execution] 'cution by the Jacobins.'

Suffocated in the blood of the Terror and in the mud of the Directory, Freemasonry was unable to raise the Temple of Humanity on the ruins of the Church of France, which she had overthrown.

The Church rose again. Freemasonry did not renounce She returned to her project as soon as the first days of the empire. It grows year by year the circle of its action; and at the present time, it is confident of succeeding this time, all the more so

She surely knows what caused her to fail at 18th century.

Slowly and surely, that is the motto she imposed on her agents and herself, which was held and who, she thinks, will finally give her what she has been going on for five hundred years.

She wants to destroy the entire existing order of things.
religion, society and property, to replace them with the state of pure nature. She could not. The Empire was a A reaction that the Restoration accentuated. We shall see it under the governments that will succeed one another, tra-to work through their good intentions and to para-to channel their efforts into good, to inspire them and to to assist in evil; then finally to seize her-even of power, and then openly pursue the realization of the designs of the encyclopedists, the Freemasons and the Illuminati had conspired.

The initial reaction was in the religious sphere.

Catholicism could not be completely suppressed.
His doctrine and morality had never ceased to live in a multitude of hearts, and his very worship to be practiced at the risk of life. When that who had conceived the thought and who had given himself the power to restore a certain order in society,
He wanted to get to work, he understood that, for
It was necessary to rebuild France from its ruins –
How to begin with the restoration of worship. Portalis had perfectly demonstrated this in the speech which he delivered to the Legislative Body, in the session of 15 Germinal, Year X. But what cult? None other than the
If the Catholic faith had not been accepted, no other would have been viable. Everyone felt it, and Napoleon better than any other. However, the Catholic faith cannot-was to be restored only by the Pope: from 1a, the necess-

Napoleon saw this, and also- early on he began the negotiations that were to lead to to the Concordat of 1801. However, Freemasonry-Nerie was still there and she wasn't giving up at all. to his plan to annihilate Catholicism and with it Christian civilization. So we will review it. at work, no longer with the impetuosity of '93, but discreetly, slowly, and, she thought, more safely-ment (1).

From the very day of the conclusion of the Concordat – even under Masonic inspiration? it is difficult-the cost of saying it (2) – the reservations began, and Soon, the anti-Christian sentiment will resurface. After A century of relentless work, this spirit has arrived nowadays to consolidate almost all the conquests that the Revolution had undertaken, and that it had was forced to abandon under pressure from the-Catholic.

The restored Catholic religion should have been like formerly the state religion (3). It seems so that the thing thus presented itself to NapoLeo, during the first overtures he made to Pius VII.

---

1. On the history of the Church in France in the 19th century (deer nE 1900), the lectures given to Catholics by ML Bourguin. Two volumes in-12. P. Téqui, editor-teur, rue de Tournon, 29, Paris.

2. What is certain is that Talleyrand, Grégoire, Fou-the constitutionalists, the old Jansenists who had returned to the government councils, the revolutionaries of the Bonaparte's court, the skeptics and the impious who as-were besieging Malmaison, despairing of preventing the consul to deal with, they coordinated their efforts to distort the mind and the Concordat letter.

3. The state religion is the religion that the state does not impose to no one, but he practices it for his own benefit. The Republic has a religion, atheism, and it limits poses to his subjects.

In the draft Concordat dated November 26, 1800, the French negotiators let the word through of "state religion." In Title IX, Article 1, it was said: "Under the above conditions and given their acceptance" tation by the Holy See, the French government declares that the Catholic, Apostolic and "Roman religion is the state religion." Bonaparte vowedmilk therefore' restore the national cult as a cult public, as a state cult, while leaving to individuals the freedom to practice one atthree. And yet the First Consul defended himself against it soon; and all efforts were in vain, those of Spina, those of Consalvi, those of Pius VII himself, to bring it back to the original, so natural, project, so logical, which should have been obvious to such a mind lucid than his own.

Again, we cannot say whether there was, close to Napoleon, from that moment on, an intervention of this Counter-Church which we saw as the repository of Renaissance thought, and which, for four centuries, worked, with a perseverance that nothing did not discourage her, to make her triumph. What we we know, that's what history has collected, from the bouCardinal Pacca's office, this exchange of words between Volney and Bonaparte, the day after the signing of the Concordat: "Is this what you Did you promise? — Calm down. Religion in France Death in the belly: you will judge for yourselves in Ten years!

It was to an 18th-century Jew, Guillaume Dohm, that we need to trace the initial idea of equality back to its origins of cults. He was their instigator and doctor among the princes of the modern world. He was archivalrist to His Majesty the King of Prussia and secretary to foreign affairs department when he wrote, in 1781. his memoir On the political reform of the situation of the Jews, addressed and dedicated to all sovereigns.

He elaborates on the theory of the indifferent state by religion, neutral, atheist, and, what is more serious, dominNative of all religions.

"The great and noble job of government," he said, consists of mitigating the exclusive principles of all these different societies Catholic, Lutheran, socialnienne, mahometane, so that they do not turn point to the detriment of the larger company.

"That the government allow each of these small, specialized companies with a strong sense of group identity which is unique to him, to retain even his prejudices when they are not harmful; but let him strive to inspire each of its members with a more relevant topic great attachment to the State; and he will have attained the grand goal that he should have in mind, when the qualities of a gentleman, a peasant, a scholar, of craftsman, Christian or Jew will all be subordinate data to that of a citizen.

This is indeed the Napoleonic idea: this program outlined Twenty years ahead of time, Napoleon wanted to achieve it.

After lengthy debates, he succeeded in introducing into the Concordat itself, and above all he deposited in the organic articles, which he surreptitiously accompanied- a seed that was just waiting to develop to become this other civil constitution of the clergy that Mr. Briand forged in the law of separation and that he fully hoped to get us to accept it.

The Concordat states: "The government of the The Republic recognizes that the Catholic religion, apostrophes Tolic and Roman, is the religion of the great majority

"the pride of the French people." In these words, there is no that the recognition of a fact, a fact which would have could not have been there at that moment and that can change over time; not the recognition of the right that gives the Catholic Church its divine origin, and that of the unique situation that this origin creates for him. The Concordat, through this wording, recognized the Protestantism and Judaism, 4 reason for the fraction of citizens who make a profession of it, of the rights in the state, similar to those of Catholicism. These Similar rights soon became equal rights. and, currently, it is up to the Protestants and the Jews, which, however, always remain the small, very small number, which constitutes the privileged situation.

The Pope, on May 12, 1801, wrote to First Consul to express his sorrow at this requirement: "We will not hide anything from you, and everything On the contrary, we will make a clear confession to you, how much joy we experienced at the pre-

the first openings that were made for us.
restoration of the Catholic religion in France;
and the flattering hope that this religion would be re-established in its ancient splendor as dominant,
made me see, with great pain, the article disa-pleasant which, in the official project, was proposed like the basis of all the others... We cannot-will we prevent you from seeing this?
that being constituted by God for the defense of this religion and its propagation,... we cannot, by an article of a solemn convention, as a sanction-to prevent degradation... If the Catholic religion is that of the majority of French people, can you doubt-ter that their wishes will not be fulfilled by returning to him its first luster? Will you be held back by the opposition?

the sion of the small number, over which the majority prevails to such a high degree? Because of them, will you deprive yourself France and the public authority of the major advantages the benefits that the complete recovery of The Catholic religion?

Nothing worked; and the Pope, to avoid a greater unfortunately, it had to go through the will of Bonapart (1).

The question was of paramount importance. Mr. Emile Olivier is exaggerating when he expresses the opinion that this Article of the Concordat enshrined the separation of the E-:
church and state, which is now being demanded, he said, as if it hadn't been made for a century. Far from it.
to enshrine the principle of separation, the Concordat sanctions the union under a new system. It is It is true that the Catholic religion is no longer the relistate government. But although less intimate, less advantageous for the Church than the old order of chohis, the one that was substituted by the Concordat is not not of a different nature. It maintains with the State links, and mandatory links. The Concordat has con-Having preserved the principles intact, he did not enshrine the separation-ration, "the religious dogma of the French Revolution-
"Cause."

But the Revolution, which wants separation, which wants it everywhere, she has been preparing it in France as much as ever that he was inside her.

States separate from the Church and the Roman Catholic Church deprived of temporal sovereignty, such are the two most constant concerns of the French

1. In a communication delivered to the Count of Chambord by M. de Vaussay, Cardinal Pie did not ask for Catholicism, the qualification of "state religion", but this statement: "The religion of fourteen centuries in the past and thirty-five million citizens in the pre"sent is the religion of the country and its institutions."

N

Freemasonry, the dual object of its most continuous efforts. The Church must, so that we can... to be right, either first without any point of support on the earth.

It was for this purpose that efforts were made to lower Catholicism in France to the status of a religion any way to diminish its prestige and strength to humiliate and paralyze the clergy. He returns in France, but it no longer forms an Order within the State, He no longer has any rights as a body; he is no longer more than a collection of individuals who will soon no longer exist. distinguished from others only to undergo more advances Denials and further outrages. He's not even the owner anymore. We know how necessary property is to independence; the clergy will no longer have it. Its possessions, the no matter how legitimate they may have been, they will not be given to him. due; he will be reduced to the status of an employee, and We will not hesitate to cut off his food supplies. to remind him of his subjugation. It is true that arti- Article XV of the Concordat states: "The government will care to leave Catholics the freedom to do as they please, if they wish, new foundations in favor churches," and thus reconstitute the old patri-monk of the Church of France. But we know by What a clever tactic this freedom has been restricted! day by day, and then how the pious foundations must always have been constituted as annuities on the State. so that it would be easier to seize it on the day of the separation, and finally how the compensation relates to The data entry system was itself eliminated.

The government, already tasked with providing for the clergy food and shelter, the Concordat also granted the choice of persons to be raised to ecclesiastical dignities

Siastics: "The First Consul will appoint, in the three months following the publication of the Cons- apostolic institution, the archbishops and bishops who must govern the dioceses of the new districts descriptions. – Likewise, the First Consul will appoint the new bishops to the episcopal sees who Va- will subsequently be quelled. The Apostolic See will give them- The canonical institution will be established. The bishops will appoint to the parishes, and they will only choose people approved by the government.

At various times, rulers made themselves a duty of religion or public honesty of choice- sir, the most worthy; but, at other times, they went and took, on a biased basis, incompetent people and even unworthy. Napoleon set the example. He imposed to Cardinal Caprara fifteen bishops constitutionnels. Later, he looked for ways to do without them of the canonical institution. He convened for this purpose a National Council; but he could not obtain from it what he wanted. It would no longer have been the dependence for the clergy- Neither dance nor even enslavement, that would have been schism.

Alongside the secular clergy, there is in the Church the regular clergy. The latter could find in its the very constitution of the conditions of independence of refugees sees in the first place. Also, Bonaparte was careful not to to allow the religious orders to reconstitute themselves. The de- decree of June 22, 1804 pronounced the dissolution of the association of the Fathers of the Faith, and "of all other congregations or associations formed under "Religious pretexts and unauthorized." Furthermore, He ruled that: "No congregation or association- no tion of men or women will be able to form in the future under the pretext of religion, 4 less than she had not been formally authorized by an imperative decree rial. » Bonaparte also said and repeated that he did not want congregations, that this is unusable tile, that there is no fear that he will restore the monks (1).

However, he authorized the Lazarists and the priests. Foreign Missions. "These religious," he said, "at The Council of State will be very useful to me in Asia, in Africa and America. I will send them to get information on the state of the country, these will be secret agents of diplomacy.” He also authorized the Brothers of the Christian Schools as a cog in the machine of the university machine. “The Grand Master of 1 Uniuniversity will target their internal statutes, will admit them Upon taking the oath, they will be provided with a special garment and will have their schools monitored.” (Decree of March 17) 1808, art. 109). The authorization granted to the Sisters charity falls under the same plan. "The superior general manager will reside in Paris and will thus be readily available of the government.” He imposed his general rule Mr. Hanon's own mother, Mrs. Leetitia Bonaparte, did observe respectfully that the rule does not apply to the person He didn't put it in. He was locked up in the prison of Fénesbene: '

Returning to the secular clergy, Bonaparte is watching. to ensure that his recruitment is not easyment; the priests must not be in nombre. Thirty-seven thousand four hundred priests are insappointed in the aftermath of the Concordat. Bonaparte declares not to be obliged by this treaty to pay retribution only to the priests deans, numbering three thousand four hundred. He nevertheless grants five hundred francs to twenty-four One thousand parish priests. The other ten thousand, thus that all the vicars will remain the responsibility of the communicipalities, which are generally too poor or too imposed in order to give them the means to to live (1). Also Roederer, one of the presidents of the The Council of State says: "The priests have not yet could obtain a fixed treatment in any com- The peasants ardently desired their mass. and their Sunday service as in the past,

---

1. Correspondence, X, 127.

But paying is another matter (2). » It was hardly Encouraging for vocations. They are not enough.
_ point to fill the gaps that death multiplies among these old men returned from exile; nevertheless, the events that are required, before proceeding with an ordination, to send to Paris the list of those to whom they wish-slow to confer Holy Orders (3). Napoleon shortened it at his own pleasure. Bishop Montault, Bishop of An-Gers, and Bishop Simon of Grenoble, were unable to, the first in seven years, the second in eight, order
each of the eighteen priests.

But there's more. Napoleon wants to monitor and direct-to manage the teaching of seminars. "We must not,
he said, abandoning to ignorance and fanaticism the taking care to train young priests... We have three or four thousand priests or vicars, children of ignorance France, and dangerous because of their fanaticism and their pas-ions. We must prepare more suitable successors for them.
enlightened, by establishing, under the name of seminaries, special schools that will be under the control of authority. Instructional professors will be placed at their head.
trout, devoted to the government and friends of tolerance

1. The budget for Catholic worship in 1802 was 1,258,197 francs.
The 1803 budget amounted to 4 million. The latest budget regular of Catholic worship under the First Empire (1813) exceeded 17 million by a very small margin.

2. Works, III, 481.

3. Organic Articles, 25. This provision was not ap-only became available in 1810.

France (1), They will not limit themselves to teaching the theorylogy: they will add to it a kind of philosophy and a honesty and worldliness (2). » The decree of February 5th con-damned as being too ultramontane the theology of Bailly! We'll see these ideas reappear later.
to teach a certain philosophy in seminars Sophie, to give it a certain worldliness and to prepare young priests to be friends of tolerance.

Napoleon wanted to have the hand at the same time on worship. In the negotiations that preceded the signing of the Concordat, the Pope demanded the recognition of freedom of religion and of the public practice of his worship. This practice had was outlawed by the Revolution; it was important that he was formally recognized in the Concordat that these Tyrannical laws were repealed. This point gave giving rise to the most painful discussions. "By dint of indi-targets fatigue, suffering and anxieties of all kinds kind of thing, said Consalvi, finally the day arrived when it seemed-"He wanted us to reach the desired end." He had done to recognize, in Article 1 of the Convention, Freedom and openness of Catholic worship. Just as he was about to sign, he realized that we had slipped under his pen a text completely different from that which had been agreed upon. Everything had to start all over again. New discussions and negotiations. Consalvi, at this sentence: "The Catholic, Apostolic religion, Roman law will be freely exercised in France," you-milk, that only these words were added: "His worship will be public." The French commissioners had or-to demand this addition: "By complying with

---

1. This word reveals Masonic inspiration.
2. Thibaudeau, II, 485.

"Police regulations." Consalvi sensed a trap. He was not mistaken: the trap was the articles organic matter that the government held in reserve and which had never been mentioned during negotiations. The Holy See solemnly protested-ment against this extra-diplomatic act. The articles The organic cells were maintained; they were present tes as if forming a single whole with the Concordat. We know the abuse that was made of it in during the 19th century. Police regulations have completely overrun, and it is given to the mayor of the most humane-The village can formulate it as it pleases. Soon the cult The public exists only as a memory. No not only any manifestation, but any external sign-The laughing of religion will eventually be banned under the beautiful under the pretext that one must not infringe upon the conscience of the freethinkers.

The Church cannot be entirely reduced to slavery as long as the Pope is free; also there is nothing that Freemasonry will pursue with more perseverance than the abolition of the temporary Power The Popes' office, necessary for its independence.

Was it under his inspiration, or following the impulses-ions of his own ambition that Napoleon I attempted to make the Pope his vassal? He was still only General Bonaparte, commander of the Army of Italy, when, after the capitulation of Mantua, he surrendered in Bologna to make, said Mr. Thiers, "the law at Pope." From there, he wrote to Joubert: "I am to be dealt with with this priesthood, and, for this occasion, Saint Peter will save the capital again by giving us its most beautiful States." The next day, he wrote to the Director-
"My opinion is that Rome, once pri-Bologna, Ferrari, Romagna, and the thirty

The millions that we take away from it can no longer exist: "THIS MACHINE WILL MALFUNCTION ON ITS OWN."
This letter contains the first diplomatic outbreak. the nature of the Napoleonic idea, which we will see pursued by Napoleon III, then by Napoleon III; an idea identical to the Masonic idea. On September 22nd Upon hearing of the Pope's illness, he pres-he cried to his brother Joseph, "if the Pope were to come to to die, to do everything possible to prevent that another one was made and to spark a revolution-tion. » Mr. Thiers gives the reason on this occasion the last of everything that has been done in the last century against the Papacy: "The Directory saw in the Pope the spiritual leader of the party hostile to the Revolution, » That is to say, of pagan civilization. That's why The Directory and its general wanted there to be no No more Pope. In the Memorial of Saint Helena, Napoleon openly expounded this fundamental idea tale of the masonry, and how he had thought first to carry it out. Speaking of his proclamations to Muslims, he said: "It was charlatanism, but From the highest point... Look at the consequences: I pre-Europe turned on its head; the old civilization remained-would have been surrounded, and who would have then thought of worrying the course of the destinies of our France and of the regeneration-tion of the century? (1) » To annihilate the old civilization, Christian civilization, regenerating the century to the pagan, and this through France, that's the word that It delves into the heart of contemporary history.

If Napoleon was thinking these things, one might wonder... Why is he restoring Catholic worship in France? He explains it in his Memorial: "When I rise again the altars, he had said, when I protect the mi-

---

1. See also: Published correspondence of Napoleon I by order of Napoleon III, t. V, p. 185, 191, 241.

\

ministers of religion as they deserve to be treated In every country, the Pope will do whatever I ask of him; He will calm their spirits, gather them in his hand and will place them in mine.” And elsewhere: “With Catholicism allowed me to more surely achieve all my goals. great results... Inside, at our place, the The large number absorbed the small (Protestants and Jews), and I promised myself I would treat this one with a such equality, that there will soon be no more need for to know the difference. (In other words, I arrive- I would like to see indifference reign in religious matters | (gious). Outside, Catholicism preserved me i.e. Pope, and with my influence and my forces in Italy, I did not despair, sooner or later, by some means or by another, to end up having the direction of this Pope, and therefore, what influence, what le- to change our opinion about the rest of the world! (1) » We will- Rons la Haute-Vente will take over this idea and strive to bring it to a successful conclusion.

On the imperial throne, Napoleon did not lose his point of view. We know what he did for to confuse the true religion in the minds of the people with heresies, putting everything on the same level rank, which he did to gradually eliminate- sea all external worship, to make the clergy a body of officials, and even to do without the Pope for the canonical institution of bishops. All of this does not could be sustainable, if one could not manage to to take away the Pope's independence. Napoleon did so. he did his best. On February 13, 1806, he had wrote to Pius VII: “Your Holiness is sovereign at Rome, but I am its emperor.” Two years later, General Miollis seizes the Eternal City, and,

1. Memorial of Saint Helena, vol. V, pp. 384, 388.

On June 10th, Napoleon published a decree which brought together all the Papal States within the French Empire. On July 6th, Pius VII is removed from the Quirinal Palace, while the cardinals
'naux are interned in Paris or locked up in the state prisons. A prisoner, too, the gentle old-Lard suffered the double assault of violence and trickery to obtain the annulment of the Concordat of © 1801, and have him sign another one where it was done near-complete abandonment of its jurisdiction over the Church of France (1). z

In the Memorial of Saint Helena (2), Napoleon said that by thus destroying the temporal power of Popes, he had "quite different views." Speaking of the proposal he had made for another Concordat:
"I had my goal," he said, "and he didn't know it";
and, after the signature had been torn from the weakness of an old man exhausted and terrified:
“All my grand plans,” he exclaimed, “had been a-

---

1. When Napoleon's prison on Saint Helena became narrower and harder, Pius VII wrote to the cardinal Consalvi, this admirably Christian letter:

"The family of Emperor Napoleon introduced us to,
through Cardinal Fesch, that the climate of Sainte-Helen is deadly, and the poor exile is wasting away before our very eyes.
We learned such news with in-finished, and you will undoubtedly share it with us because that we must both remember that, after God,
It is primarily thanks to him that the recovery of Religion in the great kingdom of France. The pious and The courageous initiative of 1801 has made us forget and forgive-to have long since atoned for his subsequent wrongs. Savona and Fontainebleau are nothing but errors of the mind and of the follies of human ambition. The Concordat was an act Christianly and heroically a savior.

"It would be an unparalleled joy in our hearts that for having contributed to reducing Napoleon's torture. He:
can no longer be a danger to anyone, we would like.
that it would be a source of remorse for no one.

2. Vol. IV, p. 208, and Vol. V, from page 391 to 401.
The Church and the Temple. 14

Compliments under disguise and mystery... I was going To elevate the Pope excessively, to surround him with pomp and tributes, I would have made an idol of him, —he said stayed near me; Paris had become the capital of the Christian world, and I would have led the religious world "Gieux, as well as the political world."

The concordat followed by the organic articles and the em-imprisonment of Pius VII in Savona and Fontaine-Bleau are the concordant fruits of this same thought. These acts follow one another; they are the realization by-tielle and successive of the single plan conceived. by, the Revolution. Revolutionary doctrine proclaims the om-the powerlessness of the State; it cannot admit the existence of an independent and superior spiritual power, such than the Church. How to bring it down? The State will begin by uniting with the Church and making use of this union to enslave her; then when he believes her to be sufficiently weakened-He forgets, so that he can no longer live on his own; he will separate from her again; hoping that, deprived Without his support, she will perish. Napoleon, — these words and These acts prove it — he wanted, by making the Concor-that, to subjugate the Church to his absolute power. When he believing the moment had come, he exhausted all the resources of cunning and violence to seize power spiritual, not even afraid, in order to achieve it, to af-secretly weaken the Pope with potions of morphine.

In order to be able to lead the religious world in the paths that were supposed to lead to "the regeneration of the siege-"cle" it was no less necessary to impale oneself to reduce the direction of minds rather than the The Pope was treated as an idol. Napoleon understood this well. To that end, he wanted to suppress the religious press to reorganize it in his own way: "My intention," he wrote to Fouché, the Minister of Police, that the days-ecclesiastical bodies cease to appear, and that they be gathered in a single newspaper, which will... will manage all subscribers. This newspaper is intended to serve The instruction of the clergy will be called Journal of the Parish Priests. The editors will be appointed by the Cardinal Archbishop of Paris.

It was with this same thought that he instructed the Uniuniversity and gave it a monopoly on teaching. Brother Fontanes, future Grand Master of the University cited, questioned about Mr. Champagny's note which had concluded with the reconstruction of the Oratory, of the Order of Benedictines of Saint-Maur and the congress"Conventions of Christian doctrine," replied what say our teachers of the day: "In teaching, one mustmovement, as in all things, unity of view and government. France needs only one "The University and the University as one." "It is "That," replied the dictator, "you understand me." And F.-. Fourcroy brought to the Legislative Body, the May 6, 1806, a bill was drafted as follows:

“Art. I. – It shall be formed, under the name of University” imperial, a corps charged EXCLUSIVELY with Penpublic teaching and education throughout Emworse. "

In his work, Public Instruction and Reevolution, Duruy praises Napoleon for having, through the intiUniversity tuition saved the Revolution and the spirit revolutionary. "What a wonderful concept that this University of France with its grand master, its council, its inspectors general, its ranks and its powerful hierarchy! What a stroke of genius to have! understood that it was just a large secular corporation than to compete with the younger generations for the debris old teaching corporations and especially their spirit! Before the 18th Brumaire, one could already predict when the reaction would have regained in the field of education the entire field Lost since 1789. Grave danger and which does not holdit was nothing less than a matter of calling into question, in a In the very near future, the principles of tolerance and of equality, the conquest of which had been the goal of so many efforts and which have remained the excuse for so many exthese... After having riveted the present to the Revolution by The Civil Code and the Concordat assured him of his future through education. Of all the services that Napoleon made them, I don't know of any more memorable than of having wrested education from the worst enemies of the new regime to entrust it: to a pro- "Deeply imbued with modern ideas."

That such may have been the thoughts and designs Napoleon himself affirmed the same thing.

On the evening of the Duke of Enghien's assassination, he said to His close associates: "They want to destroy the Revolution. I I will defend it, BECAUSE I AM THE REVOLUTION, ME (1).

| From the Consulate and the Empire, by Thiers, V, Pp. l

Was Napoleon I in contact with Freemasonry? Nonsense?

In the French Revolution, Review of Modern History and contemporary, published by the Historical Society of The Revolution, under the direction of Mr. Aulard and Mr. Georges Bourgin published a series of articles under this title: Con- contribution to the History of Freemasonry under the pre- First Empire. On page 45 of the issue dated July 14, 1905, He quotes: "I told him (Napoleon)," said O'Meara, (Napoleon's English surgeon on Saint Helena), what- I asked him questions about Freemasonry and inquired about his opinion of them: "They helped in the Revolution and in lately, the power of the "The Pope and the Influence of the Clergy." I expressed to him the dis- sir, to know if he had not encouraged the Freemasons. "A little," he replied, "because they were fighting the Pope."

Mr. Philippe Gonnart has just published a book on the origins of the Napoleonic legend where he studies "Napoleon's historical work at Sainte-Hélène. » He identifies and claims to resolve this question- tion: "Did Napoleon alter the truth and distort his ideas by representing himself as the continuator "A catalyst for the Revolution?"

"Napoleon was right in repeating to his- "Tieté," said Mr. Gonnard, "in the writings of Sainte- Hélène, who had been a defender of the ideas of 1789 in France, as the defender of the principle of national- nurturities in Europe. What did he say that wasn't accurate?

when he recalled that in Vendémiaire, in Fructidor, In 1815, he had opposed the "reaction" and that he had saved "the great truths of our revolution- tion." He spoke the truth when he proclaimed: "I have "I dedicated myself to the Revolution, I infused it into these laws." He was right when he called himself "the Messiah of the Revolution. In the Tales of the During his captivity in Montholon, he said: "I have sown freedom." with both hands, parlout, where I implemented my code civil. » |

Napoleon III, faithfully interpreting this thought in his work: Napoleonic Ideas, rendered to his uncle this testimony: "The Revolution soft- rant, but not 'defeated,' had bequeathed to Napoleon her last wishes. Enlighten the nations, even if it meant tell him, firmly establishing the main points results of our efforts. Executes on a large scale what I had to do it in depth. Be FOR EUROPE WHAT I WAS TO FRANCE. This great Napoleon carried out his mission to the very end (1).

In fact, everywhere Napoleon carried his arms, he He was doing there what had been done in France. He was-

has

---

1. Napoleonic Ideas, vol. I, pp. 28-29.

it violated the equality of cults, most certainly one the main results pursued and obtained by the sect that made the Revolution. "There is a RE- UNIVERSAL LIGION, di le Bulletin du Grand-Orient (July 1856, p. 172), which contains all the reli- particular regions of the globe: it is this religion that we profess; it is THIS UNIVERSAL RELIGION THAT THE GOVERNMENT PROFESSES WHEN IT PRO- "He proclaims freedom of worship." Pius VII did not Therefore, he was not mistaken when he said in his Encyclical of March 22, 1808: "Under this equal protection of all cults, the perse- hides and disguises itself the most dangerous, the most cunning cut he It is possible to imagine something against the Church of Jesus Christ, and unfortunately the best-considered one to throw it into the confusion and even destroy it, if it were possible that the force and cunning of hell might prevail "_dormice against her."

While establishing equality of religions everywhere
His weapons bore him, Napoleon expelled the religieux and sold ecclesiastical property; and for to change the social order as well as the religious order, he imposed the forced division of inheritances, it abolished
the workers' corporations, he was disrupting the pro-Vincennes, he destroyed local liberties and overturned-
He knows the national dynasties; in short, he annihilates-knows the old order of things in order to establish one anew, he strove to substitute for civilization-Christian tradition, a civilization whose dogmas re-revolutionaries would have been the foundation and the principlecipe.

CHAPTER XVI

UNDER THE RESTORATION

With the empire collapsed, France believed that only those those who had made it could, after so much turmoil-payments and so much ruin, to raise it up and make it to get back on track. So she turned her eyes towards the sons of St. Louis (1). Already, in 1799, his heart
He called them. Freemasonry would have liked,
If the monarchical regime were to be reinstated, we

1. An unsuspected writer, Duvergier de Hauranne, acknowledged that "the Bourbons found no support" in the monarchies of the continent."

The opponents of the Restoration were forced to admit at the first moment that no movement was more national. Marshal Ney: "To avoid the pa-sorting through the terrible evils of a civil war, there remained more to the French than to fully embrace the cause of their former kings" The regicide Carnot: "No doubt no reasonable thing could be done regarding the wishes of the French nation
"French in favor of the Bourbon dynasty." Lafayette
He said he was happy to see the return of the Bourbons.
"to become a signal and a guarantee of happiness and freedom" public" and he added that he was deeply united with this national satisfaction.

And Guizot: "The more we prove that no will gen-general, no great force, internal or external, ap-peeled and did not make the Restoration, the more one will put in lu-
the inherent and intimate strength of this superior necessity which determined the event."

to deliver to foreign princes. Mirabeau had advanced the candidacy of the Duke of Brunswick and, as early as 1791, Carro had proposed to the leader of the Jacobins the candidacy
'of the Duke of York, son of the King of England. But the sect felt so good that the nation's wish called for the return of the Bourbons, and that one day or another this her wish would become irresistible, that she wanted to take take the lead and seize the movement for the domin-to lead and direct it. Two distinguished masons, the generals Malet and Oudet, founders of the Philosopher's Society ladelphes in Besançon, began negotiations with Louis XVIII They were preceded by Sieyès and those who, with him, were preparing the dictatorship which was inaugurated by the coup d'état of 18 Brumaire.
What Freemasonry wanted, by one means or another Another was, while enduring the necessities that It was imperative to save the Revolution, to maintain its esto take and keep as much of his conquests as possible. The the sect had obtained it from Napoleon through despotism; of Louis XVIII, she promised herself she would obtain it by what she calls "freedom". What Malet and Ou-those who had wanted to negotiate with Louis XVIII, that was, what he endured fifteen years later, the establishment © of the constitutional regime, of the parliamentary mechanism-silence which would allow the war to continue in the E-church. . |
In 1799, Louis XVIII was able to more easily to break free from the Masonic embrace. It would have been more free to restore the ancient national constitution stripped of its abuses. The restoration of worship Catholicism was, as we have seen, so essential to this extent that Napoleon saw nothing more urgent than negotiate with the Pope. If Louis XVIII, instead of Had Napoleon negotiated the Concordat, he would have been at tre. 11 clearly demonstrated this through the steps he took took the initiative with the Holy See after the seconde: Restoration, with the aim of improving that that Napoleon III had bequeathed; and, free, the Church of France, purified by martyrdom, rid of the stains- The effects of Jansenism could have put the nation back on track. Christian in the ways of true civilization.

All of Europe was in turmoil. So it was to all of Europe, and not just to France, that he It was necessary to lay firm foundations. The sovereigns of 'Russia, Austria, and Prussia wanted to get involved therebend, and made among themselves this famous agreement which was called the "Holy Alliance".

“There is in this affair,” wrote J. de Maistre, from Saint Petersburg, to Count de Valease, — a touching and respectable side that must

to be appreciated and revered, regardless of any a question that could be raised about the mind that created it dictated and WHO IS NOW POWERFUL ENOUGH TO SE "TO MAKE THE ROVERS OBEY." What was this? spirit? In whom, in what, was it incarnated to have this power? J. de Maistre, in a new communication to his king, said that this spirit was that of the Illuminati. "It is this Illuminism (not this- (the one from Weishaupt, but the one from Saint-Martin) who dictated the Paris Convention, and especially the phrases extraordinary aspects of the article that resonated throughout Europe... I am perfectly aware of the ma- the schemes that these people used to get closer to close to the august author of the convention (the father of Russia), and to seize his mind. The women entered, as they enter through- Everything... If the spirit that produced this piece had spoken Clearly, we would read at the top: Convention by the- which such and such princes declare that all the Christians are just one family professing the same religion, and the different denominations that The distinctions between them mean nothing (1). This religion universal, in which the sectarians wanted to then, confusing all religions, they called it transcendental Christianity, and conceived it as- a pure religiosity or a religion without dogmy. That's what our © continue to pursue days, albeit under other names, the Israelite Alliance

Lite-Universal and Freemasonry. And today as then, Freemasons and Jews used each other, to To achieve this, rulers and governments. J. de Maistre had observed this for the previous century: "It can be stated that, during the 18th century, European governments have almost nothing a somewhat remarkable fact that was not directed by the secret spirit towards a goal of which sovereigns do not "They had no idea (2)." He noted it again at the beginning of the 19th century; and today it is facivic, to all those who know how to see, to do the same observation by their own eyes.

Powerless to oppose the course of events- In these matters, secret societies therefore strive, during of the Restoration, to direct them to their own benefit for prevent the faith-based social order from being established sitting in Europe, and especially in France. What they had obtained through the "Holy Alliance" of the emperor the Prince of Russia, the Emperor of Austria and the King of Prussia, they endeavored to obtain it from the king of France. Undoubtedly, Louis XVIII, personally, he was not a devout Catholic, he had drank from the cup of his century; but he had the sense royal, and if he had not been circumvented, if he had had the

---

1. J. de Maistre, Complete Works; vol. XIII, 219-222.
2. J. de Maistre, Complete Works, vol. XIII, p. 339.

With his hands free, he would undoubtedly have given to the France, a more perfect and more soide.

Of all the conquests of the Revolution, that which was the most important in the eyes of the sect, the most useful to his designs, the most necessary to to keep was the indifference of power towards religion. Also; what she feared most in the royalist restoration which, in 1799, was announced as imminent, it was the restoration of the state religion; and what she strove above all to obtain when the Restoration took place, it was the maintaining equal protection for all religions that Napoleon had put it into effect (1). Another question

1. The Charter of 1814 stated the following:

Article 5. — Everyone professes their religion with equal freedom, and obtains the same protection for its worship.

Article 6. — However, the Catholic, Apostolic religion and Roman is the state religion.

Art. — The ministers of the Catholic religion and Roman Catholics and those of other Christian denominations receive only Roman Catholics ar royal treasury treatments.

The Sovereign Pontiff, in a brief dated from Cesena, said of it complained to the Bishop of Troyes: "While we hoped- we would, said Pius VII, that after such a happy return litigating the Catholic religion would not only be a disaster - relieved of all the obstacles she encountered in France and against which we had constantly protested, but restored to its former splendor and dignity. We have seen that the constitution maintains on this subject. a profound silence and that she doesn't even mention the Almighty God, through whom kings and princes reign command. You will easily understand how much it is for us It is painful to see... that this religion, which is the one of the majority of French people, that should not be proclaimed that the laws and the government protect with their authority. Our pain increases upon reading article 22 (of the plan). of the constitution adopted by the Senate in its session of April 6. The Senate, created by Bonaparte, was composed of Freemasons lessons), which not only allows freedom of worship and conscience, but promises protection to this freedom and to the ministers of the various faiths. You must not demonize-

that was also close to her heart was that of the souverainèté. She was happy for the king to reign, she could not consent to him governing, to him had in his hands effective and real authority. The Charter declared that the authority resided entirely in the person of the king, and that the Catholic religion was the religion of the State: Article 6 testified to the in- the king's claims, but these were merely contradictory words. by Article 5 and by Article 7. And likewise, the The Constitution granted freedom of worship and the freedom of the press, it restored the freedom of the tribune, silent for ten years. Two mai- Very enlightened, Talleyrand and Dallery, used nearly of Louis XVIII, the influences we just talked about J. de Maistre; to obtain that the king bring with to him these plagues, as Gregory XVI calls them. Fromtres acted near Alexander, and it was at his invitation-to find what fatal wound this article inflicts on the rethe Catholic religion in France. Because as soon as one affirms the freedom of all religions without distinction, we confuse the truth with error, and we place them on the same line as the heretical sects and Jewish perfidy, the holy and imma-

The Church, the bride of Christ, is the abutment of Christ, outside of which there is no a point of salvation. On the other hand, as soon as one promises favor and protections to heretical sects and their ministers, no We only tolerate and protect people, but in-core the errors; and that is precisely what constitutes this heresy disastrous and too deplorable, which, in the words of S.
Augustine claims that all heretics follow the good path and hold the truth: an assertion so absurd that it seems incredible. We were also surprised and afflicted by Article 23, which grants freedom of the press;
This is a great danger, the certain loss of morals and of the Faith: if there were any doubt about it, the experience of times past would demonstrate it; for it is by this means above all, it is certain, that the morals of the few were first corrupted ples, then corrupted and destroyed their faith, and finally stirred up the Seditions, unrest, and revolutions. Among the great cor-
Given the prevailing turmoil, these same ills are to be feared.
If we granted to each person what God forbid, the fa-
"The right to print whatever he pleases."

UNDER RESTORATION 221
\ .

peremptory statement that Louis XVIII made the declaration of Saint-Ouen, who gave the sect the pledge of constitutional freedoms. It was at that moment that...
It was through this that the word liberal was created, intended to serve as veil to the ideas and works of Freemasonry-nonsense.

However, the surge of love with which France acpicked her king, and the joy with which she carried towards the altars, causing fears that the precautions Captures became useless. The return of Napoleon
It was resolved, prepared, accomplished.

In the first days of January 1910, Vhis-Napoleon's Torian, Mr. Frédéric Masson, published the unpublished papers by Camille Gautier and Dumonin.
They provided proof that the return of Vile d'Elbe
It was a Masonic plot. In Grenoble and in

In Dauphiné, the number of masons was considerable It was formed in 1789. In 1814, it was augmented by all the officers dismissed, who regrouped under the leadership of Gautier (1).

1. Gautier, initiated into the lodge "La Concorde", Orient of LiVourne, became a master there in 1802; he received, two years later late, from the lodge "Les Amis de l'Honneur français", Orient of Porto-Ferrajo, considerable dignities, which he completed, at the East of Ile-Rousse, the knight prince of the Eagle and of the Pelican, perfect free mason of Heredon; January 26 In 1805 or 1807, east of Bastia, he was raised by the "Sovereign Chapter of the Rosicrucians," with the dignity of prince and perfect free mason knight of Heredon, under the title of sovereign prince knight of the Rose Cross, with all powers to convene the lodge, to hold the meeting of the assembled lodges, to do and to perfect masons up to the rank of Knight of the Sword said of the Orient. Finally, on August 8, 1808, he received from the Grand-Eastern France of supreme powers which confirmed, with the representative of the Grand Master, the delegates of the Grand Symbolic Lodge, of the Grand Lodge of Administration tion and of the Grand General Chapter. He could not, in the capitular grades, to rise higher.

suddenly, these Masonic honors could not failing to assure him, on all regiments and on all the cities where a regular lodge operated, a undisputed supremacy.

This was done with the certainty of a base of operations. It was high in the mountains that Napoleon answered the call which was done to him (1).

It is therefore to Freemasonry that we We owe the second invasion. The first was the conconclusion of the Revolution that the sect had prepared, organized, perpetrated, and the third was the result of the Napoleon III's policy faithful to the oaths he had lent them to him.

After Waterloo, the Freemasons, who were supposed to The Bourbons were so criticized for having returned in the "foreign vans" (2), solicited the

1. "Let lovers of extraordinary adventures," says Mr. Frédéric Masson, may have conceived in another way and may have also-They recounted the return from the island of Elba; that they had found

The Emperor would be more poetic if he arrived in France without having no one was warned, nor anything prepared for his return; that they had found the nation more moving, if it were only Conquered by the appearance of Napoleon, that's possible; but the version that, for the first time, allowed me to to give the unpublished papers of Camille Gautier and Dumill will appear, to anyone who reflects, at the same time more pro"babble and more worthy of the Emperor's wisdom."

2. Until March 31, 1814, the allied sovereigns had continued to deal with Napoleon, and when the disappearance of The emperor seemed inevitable; they sought a combination-a political birth that excluded the Bourbons. The Tsar especially didn't want to hear about them. On the other hand, the tetestimonies from contemporaries least suspected of parterritoriality, like Carnot, Ney, Lafayette, General Foy all establish that the unanimous wishes of the French were for a monarchical restoration, and the historians A. Sorel, L. Blanc, Guizot, Henry Houssaye, in his work capital 1814 and 1815, all agreed that it was required in the national interest.

Mr. Edmond Biré, whose historical knowledge and integrity are universally known, wrote Alfred Nettement, his life and works, pp. 267-279:

"There was no bias among the Allies in 1814." in favor of the Bourbons; on the contrary, they had disunkind positions fear the old dynasty, which had reigned over France for so long and held the first rank in Europe. They started the war without the restoration of monarchical principles came to nothing allies willing to give, with their own hands, to the France, a king other than the head of the house of Bourbon. Twice, a delegation of Frenchmen-The masons went to the Allied camp to ask them to impose the kingship of a Dutchman, the Prince of Oranage, or that of Louis-Philippe, which they succeeded in. to be installed later. The head of this embassy was Charles Teste (1). Louis XVIII, returned from Ghent was at the gates of Paris as early as July 6th. but the Masonic diplomacy that surrounded the kings The coalition only allowed him to enter his capital on the 8th, after he had dismissed those of his ministers who had followed him into exile, and that he had remplaced by men of the Revolution (2), the two apostates Talleyrand and Louis, with the regicide Fouappointed as Minister of Police (3).

The constitutional system was then established.

in their projects; they completed it without this com-
The combination presented itself to their thoughts. They had until the very end the intention to deal with Napoleon; even after having Having given up on dealing with him, they did not yet consider to Louis XVIII.

1. Eckert of Dresden, Protestant: Freemasonry, 1852, etc., vol. II, pp. 162-172. — Vaulabelle, History of two Restorations, vol. V, chap. II and IV.

2. Rohrbacher, XXVIII, 194.

3. Fouché was imposed by Freemasonry. After the one hundred days, Mr. de Vitrolles having gone to Arnouville to sound out Regarding the coalition's intentions, Wellington told him: "I ya
In all this, it's a question of things, the tricolor cockade-Re, and a personal matter, Fouché. Mr. de Vitrolles having reminded the Duke that the tricolor cockade was the sign of the revolt against the king and Fouché, a regicide: “Well,” replied the English general, “perhaps we could-to be abandoning the question of things, but for that.
It's impossible for anyone (L. Blanc, History of Ten years. Introduction). Fouché being the master of the police Freemasonry was able to reorganize itself freely. When He retired, making way for another career mason.
Descazes: "Descazes," L. Blanc continued, "was Fouché." diminished.

in France, and with him Freemasonry remained May-braid. "Louis XVIII," said the secretary of the Grand-Orient, Bazot, gave the Charter. It is the government-constitutional principle. This principle protects us (1).
It was indeed a monarchy limited to executive power.
cutative, and the real authority given to ministers, comephemeral majorities in the Chambers, which themselves-they would eventually end up being devoted to the sect. Thus Thiers was able to say in a speech delivered in 1873 to the Legislative Body: “The Cons-The constitution of 1814 emerged from the very bowels of the Revolution.” No political system is more none of them were favorable to the sect's aims.

gives him more ease in paralyzing authority legitimate, to chain the Church and persecute it.
She did not fail to do so, even under the legitimate kings.
times. They did what they could, Charles X especially, to resist his ventures; the system was more stronger than them. Therefore, it is not surprising that, having been instructed by This sad experience led Henry V to refuse to to start it again in his own person in 1873. It was

1. To explain the collapse of political power.
of Napoleon I's colossal, Chateaubriand said: "The strength
"The camp concealed the city's weakness." And to explain-regarding the fall of the Restoration, he said with equal conviction...
Tesse: "We thought we had restored the monarchy, we had simply established a royal democracy. The sheets of the imperial bed, we didn't even turn the matelas". To the revolutionary virus introduced into the laws French by Napoleon I is thus joined by the para mentalism where fleeting passions subs-These two causes are based on plans that have been carefully considered for a long time.
were bound to accomplish their work of destruction
the moral energies and material forces of the nation.

In his Memoirs published in 1908, Baron de Frenel-He expresses the same thought when he says: "There was against-meaning to restore the legitimacy of people without restau-
"To restore the legitimacy of things."

Nothing could be truer. Why wasn't this understood in 1871-1872?

also the constitutional regime that they wanted to impose on him-
to pose with what was its symbol, men who did not know which spirit they were obeying, perhaps even what influences they were subjected to and
Into what abyss they were going to drag us.

Despite the precautions taken by the sect to prevent the Restoration from favoring a return to a truly Christian civilization, this one did thisduring what she could to support the action of the clergy in its work of religious renewal.

From February 29, 1816, religious orders were authorized to to provide education. Cantonal committees are appointed to monitor and encourage education;

Not only are priests part of it, but also the preresident. Permission is given to the bishops to establish ecclesiastical schools, seminarians are not no longer required to attend high school classes, the evewho can order whom they deem worthy without Authorization from the authorities. Parish missions are encouraged, despite the clamor and slander nees, the songs and caricatures of liberals, and the missionaries are placed under the protection of the Grand Almoner. Chaplains are assigned to the army. A law is made for the observance of the di- A commission is appointed to study the ways to restore the Church to its former glory. The Archbishop of Reims is responsible for presenting to king chooses the subjects he deems most worthy to be elevated to the episcopate. Finally, an agreement with the Sovereign Pontiff increases the number of diocessations. |

In the instructions that were given to the count de Blacas to negotiate a new Concordat more favorable to the Church than was the one concluded with Napoleon, the king said: "His Majesty appreciates, as She owes it to herself, given the difficult position she was in at the time. the Holy See: but she also sees that the provisions actions taken in such different circumstances, if stormy for the Church of France, do not apply more to the current situation, and that which could agreeing to save it from sinking would no longer be enough for its regeneration.

To carry out this plan, a draft agreement. was drafted on August 25, 1816, signed by the Pope on September 4 and immediately forwarded to Louis XVIII. The Concor- The date of 1516 had to be reinstated; the two parties contracting parties would proceed together to a new new district of the dioceses and to the translation of certain bishops; finally the organic articles would be abolished.

The high-ranking Freemason Decazes, who was taking the day In a day, more influence over the king was demonstrated, showing that the The Sovereign Pontiff was demanding far too much, and that in in particular it was not possible to allow deletion thus organic products, the main guarantee of rights of the State and Gallican liberties (1).

The Chamber of 1815; the elusive Chamber (2), favored the king's good disposition. But the The masonry was watching. It had known how to place near the memorial rain, to let one of one's own into one's inner circle, Decazes, commander of the supreme council of the 33rd degree of Scottish Rite Freemasonry. Ousted from the ministry after the

---

1. The Restoration requested and obtained the veis blissement of twenty-two bishoprics.

2. This name, which could not be found, was given to this Chamber by Louis XVIII as a compliment, because of the community- a clash of principles between her and the monarchy.

Upon the death of the Duke of Maa, he took the lead of the opposition. sition.

It was then that, from within the Freemasonry, arose... nerie, another more secret society, with ser- more terrible measures and inevitable sanctions, Carbonarism. Originating in Italy, it spread with - astonishing speed throughout Europe. In France- To this end, he organized the military conspiracies of Belfort, of Saumur, La Rochelle, etc., which could be fortunately thwarted (1).

The lodges were multiplying; they were admitting the officers on half-pay, the purchasers of the property the nobility and the clergy. The Grand Orient was to investigate where they were located in name- sufficient to form a lodge; he sent them a venerable man, a foreigner in the country; the venerable man settled- milk in their midst, and through them spread into the population, Masonic ideas, gave the word order every time there was a measure to to take or to have taken, in the advice com- municipal or departmental, to achieve oppression to the Church with wisdom and with art.

At the same time, the tribune and the press were leading campaign against the Restoration. They never ceased to oppose the immortal 89 to the revived old regime, the freedom versus despotism, democracy versus autocracy, revolution to counter-revolution.

While minds were thus being worked on, the Carbonarism was arming itself and preparing the men of disorder to act when the time would be deemed opportune of a new revolution. The lodge of the Friends of the Vérité organized the June 1820 uprising. It was she who also organized the military plot of August 19th.

However, Charles X had succeeded Louis XVIII. Despite the difficulties that the sect was causing its government, the people were happy. J.'one of the most tenacious opponents of the Church, one of the revolutionthe most determined, Henri Beyle, pseudonym Stendhal is an irrefutable witness to this. Forced He clearly characterizes this reign as follows: "It will be necessary perhaps centuries for most peoples of Europe to reach the degree of happiness of which the France enjoyed under the reign of Charles X (1). » In At the same time, she regained possession of her prenence in Europe and in the world: Algeria was Once conquered, the alliance with Russia would give usto cross the Rhine border without bloodshed.

It has been said that history perhaps does not offer of a more extraordinary work than that of the government the Restoration process which in so few years knew how to repair the material and moral ruins madeyourselves by the Revolution and restore the country to peace strength and prestige.

Despite this, or rather because of it, the The noble old man is surrounded by so many traps that he It is impossible for him to escape everyone, he only has the choice of mistakes. Measures are extracted from him which they make his heart bleed as the eldest son of the Church, that he wanted to be not only in name but in reality.

---

1. A lodge, called the "Friends of Truth," says Louis Blanc, had recruited from law schools, medical schools cinema, pharmacy and among young people destined for apprenticeships "Weaving of commerce," It is from this lodge that the carboNarism, which we will have to discuss, spread throughout the France. It had received the statutes from Naples. Clavel admits that the "Friends of Truth" were the PETERs to to take up arms during the July Revolution.

All the franchises of the charter are employed to demolish the throne. He yields on one point, on a another, and he finally said: "I am confirmed in

---

1. Walks in Rome, 1st series, p. 27, 1858.

the faith of my entire life: any concession to the liber-"Raux is useless." He could have said "fatal." What Sometimes, in recent years, the Church of Prange: a
I was able to convince myself of this truth!

By relying faithfully on Article 14 of the Charter, Charles X signs, on July 25, 1830, ordinances-laws which are not contrary to either the text or the spirit of this act. They regulate freedom of the press, they tend to repress the most blatant abuse. Instead of being accepted as a benefit,
They are the signal of the revolution that the sect she had been preparing for a long time, in concert with the one she had chosen to benefit from it.

Deschamps and Claudio Jannet demonstrate, by approaching based on documents (1), that the main actors of: "the fifteen-year-old comedy" (2) were all Freemasons. It was a Freemason who put an end to it.
At the decisive moment, when Charles X was surrounded

---

1. Secret Societies and Society, Book II, Chapter VIII, §5

2. "There has been a charade for fifteen years," wrote the Globe, Shamelessly, on April 22, 1831. For those of the liberals of that time who did not conspire, either because they feared their lightness, or that they themselves had refused to play
If it's a big game, the Benjamin Constants, the Casimir Périers and A thousand others, at least, knew without a doubt that They were conspiring, that there were organized Carbonari in sales; they sympathized with the conspirators, wished-they concealed the success of their enterprise, and yet they swore Their great gods that there were no plots and committees director than in the sick imagination of men of the right; they vehemently accused the police, their beast black, then, to be the agents provocateurs of base intrigues, to compromise innocent and peaceful citizens.
A little further on, the journalist addresses the president of the Advice, Casimir Périer, and told him that he "should know well-to see that Mr. Barthe, his colleague (then Minister of Justice)

(tice), was involved in the coal mining and makes no secret of it."

The entire article is written in this tone, and the journalist does not hesitate not to declare that the comedy is still going on, with others characters, at the time he is writing and that it will continue during the reign of Louis-Philippe.

of troops loyal to Rambouillet, and had every fa- the ability to suppress the revolt and return in control in the capital, it was Marshal Maison who, by the the most odious betrayal of the military oath, consummated the work of the revolution. Louis Blanc gives some evidence which does not permit I doubt (1).

The conspirators could not contain their joy and the manifestation of the hopes that the fall of the throne He made them conceive. As soon as he saw the family On the royal road to exile, M. de Barante wrote to his Woman: "They've left. I think we're going to..." walk (2). » An inspector general of the University- Mr. Dubois, speaking at the same time, said, with more with emphasis, to the youth of the schools: “We mar- we are heading towards a great era, and perhaps we will witness- "We are at the funeral of a great cult." Three years Previously, on November 30, 1827, Lamennais had wrote to Berryer: "I see a lot of people worried- Third for the Bourbons; we're not wrong: I think that they will share the destiny of the Stuarts. But that is not Not there, most certainly, the first thought of the Revolution. She has much deeper views. des: it is Catholicism that she wants to destroy, unique- He lies to him; THERE IS NO OTHER QUESTION IN THE WORLD (3). » 4

1. History of Ten Years, 4th ed., vol. I, pp. 'mag a 431.

2. Memories of Baron de Barante, III, 571.
3. Posthumous works of Lamennais. Correspondence, vol.

I, p. 303.

CHAPTER XVII

UNDER THE JULY GOVERNMENT

The hand of Freemasonry is evident in the revolution of 1830. "Don't believe it," said a high-ranking official.
mason of the Trinosophist lodge, Mr. Dupin the elder, Don't think that three days did everything. If the
The revolution was so swift and so sudden, if we We did it in a few days, that's what we had a key to put in the vault, and that we have could immediately substitute a new order of "All things complete to him who had just been destroyed."
The sect could no longer bear to see on the throne the senior branch of the Bourbons; of the-
On the other hand, the horrible memories of the first
The Republic was still too recent to dare confront public sentiment by proclaiming a Renew public. That's why she took a means _ term and placed "as keystone" of the building which she had been preparing for fifteen years, "the son of the re-

"gicide" (1), the son of the former Grand Master of France

---

1. Metternich's recently published Memoirs, jet-cast the brightest light on the Masonic conspiracies which resulted in the overthrow of the legitimate monarchy for him to replace the Voltairean government of Louis-Philippe.

Masonry, who himself had been the secretary of the...
Jacobin Club.

The society "Aide-toi le ciel t'aidera" (Help yourself, heaven will help you), of which Mr was president, had been specifically tasked with to prepare the way for him. On May 18, 1833, Mr. Didier in made the admission to the Chamber of Deputies: "It is through the care from our society that all the brochures against The Restoration publications were published and distributed, that the subscriptions were organized in favor of the political prisoners, that was the order given, who for a long time complained about the Jesuits and shouting in the riots: "Long live the Charter!" We de-would take every opportunity to discredit the power, to cause him embarrassment and increase-to those that chance could bring into being. (1)

This society was not Freemason in the strict sense of the word.
to speak, but under the direction of Freemasonry Nonsense. Another one, which was above the Lodges and the East, were working in the same direction. It was the Order of the New Temple. It had been founded before the great Revolution, and one of its members, Aswel1, This marks his character: "A single hatred remit bends the hearts of its followers, those of the Bourbons and Jesuits... Before the Revolution of 1789, the new-
The Templar calves had no other avowed goal than the annihilation of Catholicism... At the time when Foreign hordes came to impose the Bourbons, the Templars confined themselves to continuing the expulsion of the enslaved race, and we have all been faithful, Until August 3rd, to this patriotic duty... Hatred tempered with contempt and slumbered for several years.
born; but, in the day of oppression, it burst forth as lightning... The irritation calmed, giving way to be-Care to work, with perseverance towards the goal that is

1. Cited by Deschamp, II, 274.

all factions of the Temple proposed: the freedmanabsolute destruction of the human species; the triumph popular rights, legal authority; annihilate it-of all privileges without exception, and a war to the death against religious or political despotism tick of whatever color it may adorn itself with. A immense propaganda is now being organized in this general goal.

The New Temple. Like the Haute-Vente which who succeeded him, was one of those more profound societies mysterious madness, created by the occult Power depending on the needs of the moment, with elements chosen, and to which he delivers, to the extent necessary-saire, the secret of his ultimate intentions. We We find them expressed here: "War to the death to the aucivil and religious authority; annihilation of all privileges, that is to say, private laws, particularly those that govern the ecclesiastical body Siastic and those who make up the Catholic Church a separate, autonomous company; rights to be granted to the blind multitude, to use it as instrument of war against both authorities and the two companies; finally, the ultimate goal, emancipation the absolute of the human species, even and especially to with regard to God. As a means of obtaining all this:

"Immense propaganda" of revolutionary ideas...

Such was the aim of the 1830 revolution. It was a starting point and served as a base for everything the anti-social and anti-Catholic movement which Paris expanded throughout Europe. The government July favored him in Italy through the occupation of An-cone, in Spain and Portugal by the establishment regimes similar to what he himself was, and especially in the Papal States by the Memorandum.

Inside, one of the first acts of the government-
The July Revolution clearly demonstrates the actions of the Power occult in the Revolution of 1830. Jewish infidelity daïque was placed on the same level as the commun-Christian unions. Article VII of the Charter of 1830 said: "The ministers of the Catholic religion, apos-Tolic and Roman, professed by the majority of French people, and those of other Christian denominations, receive-"Sale of the public treasury's treatments." By a expressly derogating from this article, the rabbis were included in the budget from the following year (1). "At-"Today," said Rabbi Astruc on this subject, in his book Conversations on Judaism, his dogma
And its morality, in our countries equality is complete:
Our worship walks alongside others. Our temples are no longer hidden; they are on full display for all to see,
built by states and municipalities as much as by ourselves. We no longer desire anything but

1. There was no valid reason to grant 'a Salaries to the so-called ministers of the Jewish faith.
Jews themselves do not recognize any characteristic in them priestly, nor any authority over their coreligionists. By-Regarding the privilege that had just been granted to the Jews, Portalis said: "This is a public recognition of the sect."
Whoever obtains it is granted an establishment.
These are letters of great naturalization that one has given him
This gives a solemn endorsement of his doctrine.
and its dogmas, the propagation of which is encouraged and whose teaching is provided.

The Bourbons of the Restoration had resumed with regard the Jews, the wise policy of Louis XVI, which Napoleon had not

They could not abandon it. They had made every effort to spare the Jews any vexation, but they had not deemed it necessary to do to forget to the Jews that they were guests and not sons of the house. They hadn't considered that any measure of protection must be abandoned against the ambition of the Israelites.
lites to dominate the Christians, according to the Talmudic sentence dictates: "The world belongs to the Jews." They had accorded the full enjoyment of the rights of nations and even that of civil law; they had limited their political rights, and above all they had ruled out Bush's recognition of

to freely worship the God of universal freedom.
The government of Louis-Philippe was not content-
It was more a matter of misunderstanding, like that of Napoleon I, the divine origin of the Catholic Church; he declared to deny the divinity of Our Lord Jesus Christ, by granting undue favors in every respect to those who make a profession of denying and blaspheming ephemeral. It was a new and very great encouragement-to religious indifference, the last object of vows and the efforts of the anti-Christian conspiracy.
Louis-Philippe had surrounded himself with all the Pontiffs of Freemasonry: Decaze, Lafayette, Du-Eure bridge, Talleyrand, Charles Teste, etc. Also A silent war was waged against Catholicism. This was not plus exile and the scaffold which were used against him, but the public contempt provoked by all sorts of...
Your means. Religion was insulted on almost In all the theaters, the clergy was represented under their beliefs and their worship in relation to the Christian faith

yours.

As early as August 7, 1830, that is to say two days before
The Duke of Orléans did not accept the title of King of the French, Freemason Viennet requested the inclusion in the budget of payment of the rabbis. On November 13, 1830, the minister of public education and religious affairs, Mérilhon, franca mason affiliated with the Carbonari, submitted a draft law accommodating granting rabbis a stipend payable by the Treasury.
The law was promulgated on February 8, 1831.

It is worth noting that the treatment
The number of rabbis was approximately twice as high in France.
than that of Catholic priests. They received 1,800, 1,200 or 900 francs, depending on the extent of their treatment; and the 'average obtained by dividing by the number of priests len-

The amount of credits allocated in the budget was 1,014 francs. However, the average salary of rabbis was 2,105 francs. Protestant pastors were treated worse than the rabbis, but better than priests, since they received 1,900 francs.

Thus, those to whom the State owed nothing were better treated-those to whom the State has pledged to serve a part of the interest on confiscated assets!

the most odious traits; debauchery, murder, the fire was blamed on his actions ordinary. At the same time, the administration to all the degrees relentlessly tormented him in every way. nières. I] one must follow in the Friend of Religion the the humiliations he was subjected to daily.

It was at that time that the question arose—vrière which was soon to be, under the name of question social, to take such a large place in the preoccupation passion of all, workers and bosses, governed and rulers, and even in the thoughts of the Sovereign The Pontiff himself. The formidable Lyon uprising-naise was the revelation and the first achievement.

The Restoration had inaugurated the great boom in-industrial which was to develop under the regimes which followed. During those fifteen years, there was Not a major strike. Agreement prevailed everywhere. between bosses and workers. "During the winter From 1829 to 1830, said Mr. Le Play, I observed, in most Parisian workshops, between the boss and the workers, a harmony comparable to that that I had just admired in the mines, the factories and the farms of Hanover (1). But, with 1830, A new spirit took hold of industry. The economists Official ministers put the theory in honor according to in which labor is merely a commodity like another. Many bosses adopted it with em-In their haste, they thought only of making their fortune, and exploited their workers instead of striving to to raise them up through their lessons and examples. It-was the necessary consequence of the decrease of the spirit of faith and the progress of natural doctrines realists who see no other end for man than

1. The Reformation in Europe and Salvation in France, p. 51.

enjoyment and 'well-being'. For their part, the ou-
The priests listened attentively to those who preached to them.
progress, after having placed it in ease and the multiplication of pleasures, to those who excite them were in contempt of the clergy and who put them in distrust of the doctrine that elevates souls in showing them, as the ultimate goal of their efforts, eternal rewards. What we see is not than the development of what happened at that time.

However, the Catholics did not let themselves to do as they do today. Moreover, they were striving to react. They started with the General Agency for the defense of religious freedom, then the Confederates religious academies of Saint Vincent de Paul; Religious communities established themselves in almost all the major cities of France; the Notre-Dame Conferences furent inaugurated, and finally and above all the Catholic Party'lique-opened the crusade for freedom of teaching-
ment. | EM NN |

The Charter of 1830 had enshrined in principle the freedom of education, which had entered into it, we don't know how. The first one who, in order to claim it, en-pledged by public letter the struggle which was to be So ardent was the old Bishop of Chartres. After him, the great champions rose up, Mgr Parisis, M.
de Montalembert and ML Veuillot. —

This demand for freedom of education raised other questions: the rights of the clergy to express one's opinion on major social issues ciales, and that of the bishops to be able to agree and to consult together for the defense of religious interests;
the use of the press in the discussion of these in-interests, and the support that laypeople can and should-vent bring to the clergy in the defense or the con= quest for the freedoms of the Church; the iniquity of the attacks against religious life and in particular against the Ins-Jesuit titut.

In this great struggle, we see the government- The French are looking for a foothold in Rome. He sent Count Rossi, an Italian by birth, who came in France after the 1830 revolution, named, coup At that moment, Dean of the Faculty of Law of Paris, Member of the Institute, Peer of France. This is the for- ordinary tune of those on whom secret societies cast their eyes for specific missions; as well as Rossi's death by stabbing The death of an assassin is the usual end of those who disobey. they did not follow the instructions given to them until the end. given. | |

As an extraordinary envoy to the Papal Court, he received, despite the repugnance shown by Gré- Goire XVI, the title and functions of ambassador. His mission was to obtain, through the Secretary of State, the concessions the government needed to achieve his goals. We can see in the book by Mr. Follioley, Montalembert and Bishop Parisis, com- He knew how to conduct these negotiations and the success which he obtained. ML Veuillot expressed its character and pleaded its justification in these words: “There was among us are enough timid hearts for the The Pope would have thought it wise to pray and wait (1).

---

1. Miscellany, first series, vol. II, p. 293.

CHAPTER XVIII

UNDER THE SECOND REPUBLIC

From 1844 to 1848, the campaign for freedom of the Church was led with as much courage as talent. So Freemasonry began to study the ways and means to put an end to it. To this end, it resolves- she was determined to convene a large convent, which she always does on the eve of these public upheavals, that she did not lack of effort to arouse every time she sees to raise serious opposition to the work that she It has continued for five centuries. Nothing could stop it. appear more opposed to his designs than freedom for the Church to raise children in a Christian manner; and the Catholic party showed its strength at the con- to seek.

This convent met in 1847 in Strasbourg, a place

central location for the meeting of French emissaries, from Germany and Switzerland. Eckert gives the names of all members of this assembly. We remark-
Let us consider among the delegates from France: Lamartine, Crémieux, Cavaignac, Caussidière (1), Ledru-Rollin,

1. Marc Caussidiére can be considered a type among the agents of Freemasonry. We see in him where from

They go out, wherever they are pushed, whatever they do. He was employed in a silk factory in Saint-Etienne, when he...

Louis Blanc, Proudhon, Marrast, Marie, Pyat, etc.
the entire provisional government (1).

In the first days of the following year, the revo-
The revolution broke out not only in France, but in all of Europe, with an inexplicable simultaneity, if we disregard the international conspiracy-national lodges. The explosion took place at the same time in Paris, Vienna, Berlin, Milan and throughout Italy, in Rome itself. "The Revolution," said Eckert, he waved his bloody dagger and torch everywhere arsonist.

filia to the revolutionary party. He took part, in 1834, in the in-Lyon uprising. Sentenced to twenty years imprisonment Having been granted amnesty in 1839, he became a wine broker. He was. still when the revolution of 1848 broke out. He promoted himself to his own authority as police prefect, and he created for the guard from its prefecture, the Montagnard corps, composed of members of secret societies and former convicts litigious. And since he was criticized for these strange choices,
He said he was "bringing order to the elements of disorder-"Dre." After the June days, where he played a role in the more ambiguous, he took refuge in England and then in the United States United, and after the amnesty of 1859, he returned to France to die there.

He protected Mr.'s hotel so well during the days of the riot.
Rothschild, who largely commissioned it after the coup d'état to allow him to resume trade wines.

1. L'Osservatore cattolico of Milan published in the month from August 1888 a series of letters he had received from Ber-Lin regarding the provisions of the German Emperor with regard to Freemasonry and Judaism. Between many interesting facts reported there find this one:

“Glasbrenner, a Jew and Freemason, published in Berlin, in October 1847, a calendar in which he had written under the date of February 26, 1848, the following: "The house of Louis-Philippe takes stock: the liabilities exceed the assets.
"tif." Thus, four months in advance, this Jew scored two goals.
days to the day of the revolution that was to break out in Paris and much of Europe. Obviously, as in 1789, the hidden Power had prepared the events-
details and dates. » |

It is worth noting that legal anti-Semitism took end in the West with the revolution of 1848. Emancipation-
The persecution of the Jews was then carried out in Austria, in Germany Magne, in Greece, in Sweden, in Denmark.

The Freemasons who had sat at the convent from Strasbourg seized control of the government in France ment. On March 6, 1848, the provisional government received an official delegation from the Masonic Lodges questions. The delegates, wearing their insignia, were received by Messrs. Crémieux and Garnier-Pagès, members of the provisional government, also wearing their Masonic insignia: "They saluted the triumph of their principles and applauded themselves for being able to say that the entire nation received through its members of the government, the Masonic consecration. Quafifty thousand masons spread across more than five hundred workshops, forming together a single heart and a same spirit promised their support to ache-towards the work begun (see the Moniteur of March 7)
1848). E

Four days later, the Supreme Council of the Ecos Rite.
Sais also went to congratulate the members of the government provisional of their success. Lamartine replied: "I I am convinced that it is from the depths of your lodges that emanated, first in the shadows, then in the twilight, and finally in full light, the feelings which ended up creating the sublime explosion of which we

we witnessed in 1789, and of which the people of Paris has just given the world the second and, I hope, the last performance, a few days ago (1).

1. It is impossible to better explain how the re-evolutions. They are prepared by ideas and feelings-messages thrown into the public which, thus warned, leaves to do or even applaud. These feelings and these ideas are developed in the shadows of the lodges for the result at

The Church and the Temple. 16

The Grand Orient also came to offer its congratulations.
and another member of the provisional government,
The Jew Crémieux told him: "The Republic is in masonry (1).» After this admission and this pro-Mass, he indicated what kind of work the Repa-Belgium was to accomplish in concert with France Freemasonry: "The union of peoples on all points" of the globe against the oppression of thought (by TE-church) and against the tyranny of powers"; in other In other words, the insurrection of humankind while-third party against any civil authority and any other authority religious, against everything that opposes the establishment the foundation of Masonic civilization. Shortly after, for prepare the way for this civilization throughout the universe lisation, the same Crémieux founded the Alliance-Israéin dim light, then in full light. When the sect She judges them to have sufficiently entered the public consciousness, giving the signal for the explosion. These feelings and ideas all and always connect to "Modern Ideas", to "Principles of '89," to "Human Rights." We will see-further on, in the chapter on "the corruption of ideas" that these "Principles" were forged, by their own admission, by the Jews to establish their domination over the Christians and indeed, on all humankind.

1. A senior employee of the city of Paris named de Flottard published the story in the Weekly Review of the capture of the City Hall and the creation of the government provisional government. It was composed of only five members; but when the decree came off the printing press nationally, he wore seven. Crémieux and Marie had were added. "I maintain," said Flottard, "that this addition was not deliberate and it had not been done on the proof returned from the printer and which I have under the eyes while writing this." A single name would have provoked protests. Mary's was supposed to make that one pass of Crémieux.

Crémieux also took up residence in the government. provisional arrangement of 1871 to also carry out the af- to make Jews. He decreed their mass naturalization in Algeria.

obtain, then launched into the current of 'When first

Lite-Universal, whose stated goal is the annihilation- the sowing of Christianity and the hegemony of race Jewish above all other races.

The revolutionary movement thus sparked by Freemasonry, supported and developed by the so-. secret societies experienced their strongest surge in the June days. But the conservative current that we had seen it emerge in 1843, which had grown under the actions of the Catholic party, and which had seen the arrival to him all those who were frightened by the threats of socialism lism, became powerful enough to stop the mou- revolutionary movement. Soon the conservatives will... They believed that salvation lay only in religion. and this feeling became quite widespread and quite strong to force Cavaignac and Napoleon to compete in advance- these to the Catholics. This was what imposed the experiment. the Roman Curia and the law of freedom of teaching These two great victories brought about others. We witnessed the rebirth of the freedom of councils and the freedom of Christian devotion: a pre- weighty power was given to the clergy and the communities religious institutions in favor of the sick- happy, and in the study of means to resolve- to address the social question posed under the previous regime, but that socialist doctrines aggravated sin- regularly.

It seemed that the Church was going to triumph over the es- revolutionary. But no; the Catholic current- that was not pure enough, and the Masonic current was only momentarily suspending its course to to push its waters with more vigor.

The Catholic movement was already infected with liberation.

ralism (1). Catholic liberalism consists essentially-

1. Liberalism is not an ordinary heresy. It has was very aptly called by Abbot Chesnel (the rights of tielle in the effort made to bring the Church closer and the World, the Gospel and Human Rights, to reconcile, as Pius IX said in the last proposals from the Syllabus, the Church and "civi- "Lisation," civilization as understood by humanity Renaissance manicism, as the Freemasonry. All the work of the Catholics li- For three-quarters of a century, Béraux has been a unique tenant. to arrange this marriage, a thankless and disastrous task which can only lead to the triumph of evil. Lamennais was the creator of liberal Catholicism. ral, like the Abbot of Saint-Cyran, with whom he has of the resemblance, had been the true creator of the Jansenism. Both were particularly attached to rement to let the poison of their doctrine penetrate

God and modern ideas) heresiarchy. It is the here- its own, personal sie of Satan, since it consists, for the creature, to usurp for its own benefit the independence and the sovereignty which belongs only to God, of all eternity nity, and in the order of time to Our Lord Jesus- Christ. This shows how modern liberalism differs of all that preceded it in terms of rebellion and sin. This is sin itself, the ultimate and highest term. degree of sin. Liberalism calls "the man of sin- "He is preparing the way for the antichrist."

The seductive power of liberalism has blinded almost all intellectuals. ligations; the latest notions of true Christianity complete- The wind is fading from people's minds. What a transformation! in ideas, in customs, in beliefs, of- then the royal jurists of the 14th and 15th centuries up to the present day, through Luther, Voltaire and Jean-Jacques Rousseau and Lamennais, the great seducer- Catholics! They are the sons of the same idea, the agents of the same seduction. Their successful appearance- sive marks the stages of the revolutionary movement.

The latest arrival, Lamennais, is not the least da- gereux and the least disastrous. He is the father and head of the school, both Catholic and revolutionary, of the pa-modification, adaptation, union, and finally, fusion between Christianity and the Revolution.

L. Cuapot, Catholic Review of Institutions and Law,

September 1904, number 9, page 198.

i

\

the clergy, quite convinced that from there he would easily descend-an element in the soul of the people. Even today, those Christian Democrats who come to put under this label something other than what Leo XIII approved, claiming to follow Lamennais; and they have that's right, because he truly is their father and their master.

“Lamennais,” said Mr. Crétineau-Joly, “is coming forward” me, the exterminating angel of rationalism, and he arrives leaping headlong into the apotheosis of human reason:
He only talks about the principle of authority, and he undermines it.
at all its degrees and in all its forms; its
The first battle cry is against indifference, its last breath will spread, will sanction indifference-my reality, through the confusion of the various cults in a universal cult originating from Freemasonry;
He sacrifices the priesthood and the empire to the tiara, then He eventually lowered the tiara to the authority of the masses.
ignorant or uninformed: he surrounds himself with youth Whether clerical or secular, it monopolizes goodwill.
and leads them to the abyss, at the edge of which Gré-Goire XVI arrested them both in France and in Italy, Belgium and Germany... The concealment lation was in the ways of Lamennais. He did not ex-he didn't explain sincerely; but he knew how to outrage the hopes, and pushing the fever to its limit
It was quite apparent that his opinions were bound to change sooner or later. to realize (1). » How many features of this portrait have become-naked, those of our contemporaries who pride themselves to be and to call oneself his disciples!

Announcing the second volume of his Essay, La-Mennais had written to one of his admirers about United States: "The Church is quite abandoned here; we
In truth, we only have a shadow of a church.

"Right now." We hear these remarks.

---

1. The Roman Church facing the Revolution, II, 276-284.

Even today. Another similarity: The Cardinal Bernetti, reporting on the audience granted
The gift to Lamennais by Leo XII said: "He will not be neither the first nor the last to want to dominate us from the heights of his obedience... to make us pay for his defense by imposing its doctrines on us and by us making his exaggerations his own… Affected zeal for the defense of "papal directives" he has not point also served nowadays as a passage to exams dangerous management and even to doc-ines mau-vases?

CHAPTER XIX

UNDER THE SECOND EMPIRE

The revolutionary movement of 1848 was premature killed. The reaction it provoked in public opinion republic, in France and in the various countries of the Europe, made Freemasonry understand that, hand-
To maintain the Republic within our borders was to force a retreat her work in other states. She therefore resolved to replace the Republic with a dictatorship, and choose-sit, to be the holder of it, a man linked to her by terrible oaths, which she will take more care of late to remind him: the carbonaro Louis-Napo-Leon Bonaparte (1). We can see in the work of Messrs. Deschamps and Claudio Jannet (volume II, pages 315 to 324), how this dictatorship was prepared and sponsored by international Freemasonry, and party-particularly by one of its top leaders, Lord Pal-

---

1. Napoleon III had joined Freemasonry at the age of 23. His brother had become a Carbonaro.
me to him and with him. The sect immediately set about suggesting it. manage. She gave him a glimpse of the pure halo of glory reserved for the prince who would like to impose justice everywhere to restore people to themselves. From politics to politics nationalist tic.

Merston (1), and how the sect that had taken so much care was taken to restrict the power of Louis XVIII and of Charles X, lent himself to the establishment of a veritable autocracy (2).

The hidden power has never ceased to act in this way. During-that he finds himself thrown off balance by events, this What he does is create a supposed savior or to give support to the one pushed by the circumstances current trends. Because of its origins, this-
He is doomed to save absolutely nothing.
On the contrary, it continues to weaken the country materially.
both mentally and morally. That's what happened with

---

1. Palmerston happened to be both minister in An-English and Grand Master in Universal Freemasonry.
Some people assume that he had a personal policy and that he imposed it on Freemasonry. This concept is completely wrong. There is no personal action in matters of Freemasonry. All Masonic education-whose sole purpose is to annihilate the characters, of shaping minds, and the degrees of initiation mark the progress made by the mason in self-denial and in passive obedience.

2. We talked about the convention held in Strasbourg in 1847. In 1852, another convention of leaders was held in Paris.
European secret societies. There, the dictatorship, under the name of empire, in the person of Louis-Napoleon and the Italian Revolution. Mazzini, then under the blow of a death sentence pronounced against him In France, he would only go there with a signed safe-conduct pass of Louis-Napoleon himself. Only three members of the The large convent persisted with him in demanding the establishment-the establishment of a democratic republic. But the great
The majority thought that a dictatorship would do business better.
of the Revolution and the empire was decreed.

On October 15, 1852, ten months after the coup d'état of the 2nd December and six weeks before the proclamation of the lem-Worse, the Grand Master's Council of the Grand Orient voted for a addressed to Louis-Napoleon, ending thus: "The French-Freemasonry owes you a greeting; do not stop at in the middle of such a wonderful career; ensure everyone's happiness by placing the imperial crown upon your noble brow;
Accept our respects and allow us to do so.

"Let us give voice to the cry of our hearts: Long live the Emperor!"

Napoleon I and Napoleon II, one and the other left-rent France, the wound of the bleeding invasion flank and as exhausted in soul as in body.

However, upon ascending the throne, Napoleon nl had understood, or at least seemed to understand, where was the salvation of France, and what the interest demanded-
The end of his dynasty. He had said beautiful and good things.
words, given satisfactions to the clergy, but to-one of those that could have reached the conquests Tests of the Revolution on the Church. Thus, having asked Pius IX to come and consecrate him; the Pope had replied: "I'm willing, but on the condition that the "Organic articles will be repealed." Napoleon pre-will force him to renounce the coronation.

In the book he had previously published under the title: Napoleonic Ideas, Louis-Napoleon had laid bare the depths of his thoughts. "The great men have this in common with divinity, that they never die entirely; their spirit sustains them lived, and the Napoleonic idea sprang from the tomb of Saint Helena, as well as the morality of the Gospel rose triumphant despite the torment of the Cal-Napoleon, upon arriving on the world stage, saw that his role was to be Vexeculeur testamensilence of the Revolution... It took root in France and introduced the main goods throughout Europe facts of the great crisis of '89... The emperor must be considered as the Messiah of new ideas (1), »

New ideas, a new Gospel, a new Mes-

---

1. Works of Napoleon III, vol. I. See pages 7, 28, 65, 102 and 125, Five years ago, the heir of the Na-Poleons said in a manifesto: "You know my ideas. I believe it is useful to clarify them today for my Friends. Remember that you are the defenders of the Revolution of 1789. Napoleon, according to his own expression-sion, has "stripped the Revolution bare." He has maintained its strength
"The principles."

sie, no word can better characterize what the Revolution wants to introduce into the world and what Napoleon III, after Napoleon I, established the servant... He was more discreet but also determined-undermined that his cousin, who, in the Senate, on February 25, 1862, adopted these words of Mr. Thiers in 1845: "Listen carefully to my feelings. I am from the party of the Revolution, both in France and in Europe. I wishes that the Revolutionary government remains in the hands of moderate men; but when This government will pass into the hands of men. Ardent, even if they are radicals, I will not abandon my cause for this; I will always be on the side of the Revolution. "

The tradition continues.

On the occasion of the centenary of the Civil Code, the prince Victor-Napoleon wrote a letter to Mr. Albert Vandal where he says: "We are going to celebrate the centenary of the Code which summarized the social work of the French Revolution French in its fundamental data, the freedman- . the transfer of people and property... Men of 1789 had proclaimed the principles of the new social order. He seized upon these principles; he gave them gave it a clear and precise form; he made it the monument legislative measure that Europe later hailed as the name of the "Napoleonic Code". The Napoleonic Code enshrined In France, the doctrines of 1789. He even carried them well beyond our borders: »

As we can see, Napoleon I still has heirs. of his thought and his work. Like Napoleon III, Like Prince Jerome, Prince Victor received it. He is its faithful guardian, having deposited it in his care.

From the very first day, Napoleon III showed that he was Indeed, the man of the Revolution, believing, or giving themselves the mission "to root it" in France and to introduce it throughout Europe." The French troops had barely opened to Pius IX the gates of Rome, which he wrote to Edgar Ney: "I would summarize the recovery of the pousee the Pope's temporal powers: general amnesty, secular-administration, Napoleonic Code and government "liberal nement". General amnesty, it was a newnelle bonus d'encouragement given to its F.-. the Carbonari; secularization of the administration, that was secularization without any limits other than its annihilation-absolute power of the ecclesiastical court (1); Napoleonic code Léon meant: destruction of the old property and the abolition of legislation which was presided over the name and authority of God; liberal government, Napoleon did not want any for himself, and he claimed to be able to impose it on the Pope.

Freemasonry wanted more than that. The wait-Orsini's father came to remind the emperor of this, and he had to to prove himself faithful to his oaths. He therefore set out duty to carry out what the First Republic, Then the first emperor had attempted: destruction of the temporal power of the Popes. We know this la-a terrible story: the emperor, caught between the interests of... obvious weaknesses of France and its dynasty, and its desire to become, after his uncle, the executor of his will-commentary on the Revolution, advanced, retreated, played double game, one official through his ministers and his ambassadors, the other through a clandestine diplomacy of which

According to the records established | then by Mr. Fr. de Cor-there were in the administration of the Papal States caux, 6,836 lay officials versus 289 ecclesiasticsques, including 179 prison chaplains and those attached to Vicariate of Rome. Army officers were not included. in this comparative table.

the agents were taken from secret societies (1).
The goal has been achieved. For forty years, Italy has been firstly, temporal power no longer exists except in the state of memory or shadow. We prejudge nothing designs of Providence. We do not know if, when and how she will return to the sovereign Pontificat its ordinary and necessary means of action in the regular order of things; but the sect She's quite sure it's over. And if she wants a change to what she did, that's the trans.
formation of Italy's current regime as a republic.
Uniting with the sister republic of France, with the republics Spanish and Portuguese churches that will be on the day and at the time that Freemasonry deems appropriate, to others Again, no doubt, it will contribute to forming the core of the universal Republic, or of the Jewish government-governing the world exposed from one end to the other being of the universe.

Napoleon III's entire foreign policy was inspired and driven by the desire to liberate Italy

1. In September 1896, Le Correspondant published under the title: A friend of Napoleon III, Count Arese, of the unpublished documents on the very intimate relationships that existed during the Second Empire between the Carbonari and Ronné and the sectarian. Italian. Among these documents he is a letter that reveals the hypocrisy he used in the Roman question. While his ministers were lavishing the statements intended to reassure French Catholics, he had conversations with Count Arese which the latterdenier summarized it as follows in a letter addressed to the count Pasolini:

"Put the Pope to sleep; let us have the conviction that You won't attack him, and I couldn't ask for anything better.
to leave (to withdraw the troops from Rome). After that, you Do as you please.

This phrase, attributed to the emperor by his friend Arese, Doesn't it bring to mind the words of Mer Pie: "Lava
"Your hands, O Pilate!"

and to fulfill his Carbonaro oath. He had fought the war of 1859 for her, without being able to achieve His program is entirely his. He lives in conflict the Austro-Prussian means of freeing Venetia, and This was the whole secret of his collaboration with the Cynics.
Bismarck's projects. "The emperor helped him," said Mr. E-Mile Olivier, not out of weakness or greed, but knowingly. He did, of his own free will, contributed to his fortune as much as to Cavour's.
He saw in him the providential instrument by which "The liberation of Italy would be completed." When ar-Riva in Paris, July 3, 1866, the news of the victory won at Sadowa by the Prussians on the Austrian army, a victory that carried such a harsh A blow to French power, the ministers insisted-to mobilize the army, the emperor subscribed

first to their wishes: but Prince Napoleon inintervened on July 14th and handed the emperor a note in which it was said: "For those who dream for the emperor the role of reaction and of the clergy-Europeanism to be imposed by force, they must push for an alliance with Austria and a war against Prussia. But those who see in Napoleon III, not the moderator of the Revolution, But their enlightened leader, those people would be very worried. the day he would enter into a political movement that would the reversal of true greatness and of the "The glory of Napoleon III." Napoleon III went to views of his cousin (1).

1. The Journal de Bruxelles reported the words spoken created at that time by Prince Jerome at a dinner at Mr. de Girardin's:

"The time has come when the flag of the Revolution, that of the Empire, must be widely deployed.

"What is the program of this Revolution?"

"First and foremost, it was the struggle waged against Catholicism,"

The Franco-Prussian War of 1870 also had the same end in the the sect's plans; the Augsburg Gazette has given this explanation: "On the battlefields of the Rhine, we did not only wage war against France; we also fought Rome who holds the world captive; we shot at the Catholic clergy (1).

Break the papal throne, promote the triumph of Protestantism in Europe, it was much assumed recently; this was not enough to satisfy the

a struggle that must be pursued and concluded; this is the constitution of Large national units, built upon the ruins of fictitious states. and the treaties that founded these states; this is the democracy triumphant cracy, based on universal suffrage versatile, but which needs, for a century, to be directed by the strong hands of the Caesars; this is Imperial France At the heart of this European situation is war. a long war, as an instrument of this policy.

"That's the program and the flag."

"But the first obstacle to overcome is Austria."
Austria is the most powerful supporter of ca- influence Catholicism in the world, it represents the federal form opposed to the principle of unitary nationalities: it wants to see it triumph in Vienna, Pest, and Frankfurt, institutions opposed to democracy; this is the last-to deny the stronghold of Catholicism and feudalism; it is necessary so to cut it down and crush it.

"The work was begun in 1859, it must be Completed today.

"Imperial France must therefore remain the enemy of
-|'Austria; she must be the friend and supporter of Prussia, the homeland of the great Luther, and which attacks Austria by her ideas and by her arms; she must support Italy, which is the current center of the Revolution in the world, in waiting for France to become so, and which has the mission to overthrow Catholicism in Rome, as Prussia has done for mission to destroy it in Vienna.

"We must be allies of Prussia and Italy," and our armies will be engaged in the fight before two month ".

1. Extracts quoted in Prussian Politics, by a Anonymous German, pages 133-143.

demands of the sect. Napoleon III asked Mr. Rouland, Minister of Public Instruction and Religious Affairs, to draw up a campaign plan against The Church of France. This plan, found in the drawers of the emperor in 1870, was delivered to him in April 1860.

It bears this significant title: Memoir on the polia course of action to follow with regard to the Church. It begins by de-ask if it is necessary to "abruptly change the system":
expel religious congregations, amend the law on teaching, . rigorously apply the ar-Organic articles (1).» No. «We must arrive little "Little by little and quietly." Who will not recognize this word?
the wisdom of the sect that gave to the Gambettas and The Ferry family's motto was: "slowly but surely-"lying"? How blind are those who, in this continuity of persistent efforts over a century and more, still refuse to see the hand of a A power that is still alive and active, and which, at current hostilities can find no other cause than reprisals to be taken against those who, without consent to rage against the republican regime, do not have for the Masonic republic that a relative admiration (2).

The Memorandum points out as a danger "the belief from the episcopate and the clergy to the infallibility of the Pope"; "the development of the Saint Vincent conferences of Paul and the societies of Saint Francis Regis”, "the progress of religious congregations dedicated" to popular education.

"It is impossible for the secular element," he said to this su- Mr. Rouland, to fight on this ground against the en- religious teaching which, in reality or in appearance,

1. This is the route that was followed until the separation from the Church and the State. Which clearly shows that it is always the same hidden power that controlled our rulers, yesterday as today will always present families with much more street of morality and devotion.” And a little more far away: "We would be greatly weakened from the point of view of 'Universal suffrage, if all primary education passed into the hands of the religious orders. How many of these Two sentences speak volumes!

2. See among others Christian Democracy, March 1900.

'Two new memoirs following the first were written by Mr. Jean Vallon, former editor of the Standard which passed after the council into the camp of the “old Catholics” of Switzerland (1).

The plan was immediately put into action.

First, the Society of Saint Vincent de Paul — The Minister of the Interior warns the prefects of his "shadowy schemes," and wanted to submit the con- central council, provincial councils and confederations local regulations, subject to government authorization. The society preferred death to degradation and fell as she was bound to fall. God rewarded her more. late, by resurrecting her.

Then came the 1850 law on freedom of education.
— Rouland says, in his Memoir, that she is a “great evil”, but wanting to eliminate it, souwould unleash "an immense, fierce struggle," words which show that by persecuting religion, all these men My Masonic government officials know they will against public sentiment. Unable to suppress-to prioritize freedom of education, the government of

---

1. The originals of these three pieces are in the hands from Mr. Léon Pagès, 110 rue du Bac, Paris. They were published in full in La Croix, published in Brussels from February 6, 1874 to January 4, 1878.

Mr. Rouland's memorandum can be found in issue no. 2 June 1876; and those of Mr. Jean Vallon in the issues of June 30, 1876 and July 28 of the same year. The latter procome from the library of Mrs. Hortense Cornu, born Lacroix, a childhood friend of Napoleon III and his confidante in many projects. |

The emperor attacked him surreptitiously through decrees.
administrative.

The congregations. — Rouland gave the council to no longer tolerate any state for religious people new institution, to be strict with the congresses women's gations, and to no longer approve of anything but difficulties ciliment the gifts and bequests that would be made to some or to others.

The secular clergy. — They are trying to sow discord-nie in the field of the Church, by opposing the inte-
The clergy's rights were inferior to those of the episcopate. "Nothing would no longer be more skillful and more just at the same time, he said Mr. Rouland, rather than increasing the clergy's salaries inferior." But, at the same time, he demands that this provokes "an anti-religious reaction which would the police for the misdeeds of the clergy and would form around from him a circle of resistance and opposition which would compress it.” As for the bishops, Mr. Rou-land had dictated this approach: "Choose resolutely for bishops of pious men, honorable rables (we do not say: educated and firm in character(tera), but known for their sincere attachment to the emperor and the institutions of France..., without that the Nuncio should have the slightest glance at it. In practice, we stop inviting people every five years, as is the custom did so, the archbishops and bishops to designate confi- particularly the clergymen whom they believe to be the most worthy of being promoted to the episcopate. Furthermore, interdic- The bishops are instructed to meet. Seven arch- bishops and bishops who believed they could sign, in Le Monde, a collective response to the need to consider the interests of the Church in the elections, Rouland wrote to them that, by doing so, they had held a kind of a particular council, without regard to the articles of organization niques, and prosecutes them before the Council of State.

The emperor and his entourage were thinking further still. There came a moment when they thought- return to a break with Rome.

A prelate, who at the time was considered to be devoted to the dynasty, Bishop Thibault, Bishop of Montpellier, was summoned to Paris. The Minister of Religious Affairs began by teasing the poor bishop and reproaching him for the hos- the Pie, Gerbet, Salinis, and Plantier families, The Dupanloup family against government policy French. Then Napoleon received him in a private audience. The sovereign explained that it was a matter of saving the E- Church of France and to oppose a bulwark against progress of irreligion. The prelate promised to dedicate himself to the work that was expected of him and made the commitment to revive "the traditions and doctrines of Bossuet. » | |

But no sooner had Bishop Thibault left the Tuileries reis, whose conscience reproached him for his acquiescence criminal that he had just given to what was not nothing less than a plan for schism. Immediately, He orders the coachman to take him to the ark- Bishop of Paris, it was then Cardinal Morlot who occupied the seat of Saint Denis. “Your Eminence, com- Bishop Thibault threatened, "I am indeed guilty. I come" to accept from the emperor the mission of promoting the "The break between the Church of France and the Holy See..." These last words had just expired on the lips- the prelate's verses, when, suddenly, Bishop Morlot sees his The interlocutor turned pale and collapsed to the ground. Bishop Thibault was dead.

At the same time as efforts were being made to lower FE-Church, Freemasonry was openly encouraged-
No, it is officially recognized by the minister.
From within, the Duke of Persigny; and Prince Murat,

d

inaugurating his functions as Grand Master, said hau- .
lement: "The future of Freemasonry is no longer doubted-
The new era will be prosperous for him; we resume our work under auspicious circumstances. The moment has come to where Freemasonry must show what it is, this
"What she wants, what she can get."

Then comes the Syllabus, which lists the er-contemporary. The Minister of Religious Affairs is per-He puts it to judge, and he transmits his sentence to the events.
questions. He writes to them that "the Syllabus is contrary to the principles on which the constitution is based the Empire.” Consequently, he forbade them to publish it.

Rouland spoke from the tribune, and shouts rang out even in the villages, which the Syllabus "comes to block the way to modern civilization.” To the civilization of the Renaissance, Reformation and Revolution, assumed-They let it be said. They proclaim that "the Church "will change its doctrine or the Church will perish"; this is The
The century that is charged with issuing this ultimatum.
The Church, remaining true to itself, still lives, but the Em-worse has sunk.

There's no need to prolong this review and talk about the education league, responsible for preparing the school neutral, girls' colleges, printed direction to the press, the composition of the libraries popopular, the multiplication of caha:ets and mau-I will use every means to tear the soul from the people to the empire of religion. í |

All of this prepares the Commune, which will formulate it as follows
His first law: Article 1. The Church is separated of the State. Article 2. The budget for religious affairs is abolished.
Article 3. Property belonging to religious congregations religious buildings, furniture and real estate, are declared pro-

\

National privacy. Article 4. An investigation will be conducted. immediately on these goods to ascertain the value and make them available to the nation. The punishment came in the form of shootings.

This is the program that a government is implementing today. government that has the appearance of a government regular.

The sect also uses governments to- regulars and irregulars, legitimate and revolutionary- tions to continue the realization of its des- breasts. A quick review of events. that we we have just done, from the Concordat to the National Assembly- The 1871 edition should convince all our readers.

CHAPTER XX

UNDER THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Never was there a stronger reaction, and never did it emerge more clearly. obviously from the very bowels of the nation that from 1871. i

Gambetta, who held power, did the possible and impossible, first to delay the elections, and then to make them favorable to him.

Here are some very significant news items:

GAMBETTA TO JULES FAVRE. — I persist more than never to consider general elections as disastrous for the Republic. I refuse to accept them- ter, to have it done.

DELEGATION FROM TOURS TO PARIS. — The voters would probably be reactionary. This is full of perils.

GAMBETTA, PREFECT OF LA ROCHELLE. — It is necessary

a republican assembly. Do everything you can.
will mandate the elections.

CHALLEMEL-Lacour (Rhône). — Assembly will be bad, if appointed without republican pressure, etc.
etc i

Despite this revolutionary pressure, the Assembly

The national party was Catholic and monarchist. We know this that she did.

Never did a more cruel disappointment follow such a great hope. The country watched it fall without regret, on September 4th.
September 1870, a regime which, for the third time, had compromised its existence. But, at the elections
On February 8, 1871, he expressed his lack of confidence.
= in the Republic, which had been proclaimed without him.

He sent to Bordeaux to compose the Assembly nationally, a considerable majority of men con-stripped bare by their Catholic and royalist sentiments.
From a political point of view, the Assembly included 400 royalists — Legitimists and Orleanists in small numbers almost equal in number — 30 Bonapartists and 200 republicans of various shades (1).

The first act of the National Assembly was to request prayers in all churches "for to beseech God to appease our civil discord and to put an end to our suffering.” Three MPs alone-They opposed this motion. Then he declared of public utility "the construction of a church on the hill of Montmartre, in accordance with the request-done by the Archbishop of Paris,” that is to say, for to be dedicated to the Sacred Heart as a votive offering of re
She wanted to repent, to pray and to hope.
the humiliated and bewildered country, and it is to God that she he asked for the means, obeying in this his mandate as well as to his 'own feelings'.

The army needs to be rebuilt. The law that reorganizes it stipulates that, every Sunday and every holiday, a Sufficient time will be given to the soldiers to remto fulfill their religious duties. The chaplains are restoredblis, no longer attached to regiments, but, what is better, in garrisons and camps.

1. Hanotaux, Hist. of contemporary France, I, 38-41.

After the army, education. The Higher Council-
The Minister of Public Instruction is reformed. The Church
He receives his place in the person of the bishops. Well-Soon afterwards, higher education was declared free, and Catholic universities were established.

The administrative committees of the establishments charitable: hospices, hospitals, welfare offices
The sessions are reorganized; the priest is called upon to sit on them.
next to the mayor,

The freedom of good is never hindered. Not only-the Society of Saint Vincent de Paul re-
It is established, but workers' circles are founded In cities, patronage networks are multiplying in ` the countryside, and religious instruction prepares Christian generations.

How could this beautiful momentum have been stopped, then turned around?
In the opposite direction?

Many members of the National Assembly were not well-versed in the intrigues of parliamentarism.
They allowed themselves to be influenced. Many others had also the mind full of the half-truths of liberal Catholicismral, often more disastrous, according to Pius IX, than the obvious errors. Mr. Thiers, who, in his game-Nesse had sworn hatred on the crucifix to royalty (1), and who, in his old age, had

---

1. In 1849, Michel de Bourges recalled the fact in the 15th National Assembly office: "We swore, Mr. Thiers and I, HATE OF THE MONARCHY, with this circumstance-This, rather pointed: Mr. Thiers was holding the crucifix when I took the oath, and I held the same crucifix when Mr. Thiers swore hatred to the monarchy. This was in a sale of Carbonari, provided that the police did not intervene; and, if she intervened, it was a gathering of friends for
to celebrate a laureate.

“La Provence, the Aix newspaper, recalled at length these facts in its issue of December 1, 1872, while Mr. Thiers was President of the Republic, and that, in the ambition to govern France and to reign, had quickly seizing control of the Assembly national, to lead it where he wanted. And himself Was he not led by those who flattered his a-bition, hoping to profit from it?

First, it was necessary to avert the danger of a restoration monarchical ration in the person of the Count of Chamborder; this prince, so Christian and so French, was in at the same time so firm in its views of governance-lying that no hope could arise from making him to repeat the mistake made by Louis XVIII. Tou-All the forces of the Revolution, all its factions diverse, starting from Catholic liberalism, work-They lered, not through a positive agreement, but each for his part and in his own way, to keep him away from the throne of his fathers.

First, there was the Commune, protected by Mr. de Bismarck, carefully managed in its early days by Mr.
Thiers, and supported by Freemasonry. She wanted-read all at once and violently, in the manner of 93, which is done today in a more Safer and more sustainable through legality. April 26, 1871, fifty-five boxes, more than ten thousand francsmasons (1), led by their dignitaries, donned this city, many friends were carefully watching over

Everything that was written about him. No denial came.
`Mr. Dupin the Elder explained how the 1830 revolution was so sudden and so prompt, she also spoke of this oath.
“When,” he said, “Carbonarism became established: in France, following-before forms that men, at this hour peers of France and public officials went to Italy to look for answers.
and in Germany, his aim was the overthrow of everything Irresponsible and hereditary power. One cannot be there affiliated without swearing an oath of hatred to the Bourbons and the royalty. In some places, this oath was even pronounced on a crucifix and a dagger. There are members of parliament and peers who remember it."

---

1. Ten to eleven thousand, estimates the Official Journal of the Municipality.

-

wearing their insignia, they proceeded in procession to the ramparts to plant their banners on, they sixty-two were displayed, and at the Town Hall for to salute the revolutionary power (1). The F.- Tiri-Forque had told the Communards: "The Commune is the greatest revolution ever given to world to contemplate," and: the reason that he gave it-
The fact is that it was "the new Temple of Salo-
"my," that is, the realization of the ju- design secular of the social organization. That of the members
The representative of the Commune who was tasked with replying to him said:

"We know that the goal of your association is

1. Here is the appeal that the Grand Orient of France made to universal Freemasonry, in favor of the Com-
It was published in 1871.

“Brothers in Freemasonry and fellow craftsmen, we we no longer have any other resolution to make than that of to fight and to cover with our sacred aegis the side of the law.

"Let's arm ourselves for defense!"

"Save Paris, save France!"

"Let's save humanity!"

"Paris, at the forefront of human progress, in a crisis"
"Supreme," he says, making his appeal to universal Freemasonry.
"To the companions of all the guilds, he cries: To
"I am the widow's children!"

"This appeal will be heard by all Freemasons and"
"comrades: all will unite for common action, in "protesting against the civil war fomented by the sub-» the tenets of the Monarchy.

"Everyone will understand that what their brothers want from
"In Paris, justice moves from theory to practice,"
"that love between one another becomes the rule"
"General, and that the sword is not drawn from its scabbard, in Paris,"
"than for the legitimate defense of humanity."

In the Commune session of May 17, pro-These significant words were uttered: “We have ota-"Let us strike those among the priests in particular." They were executed on the 24th.

In May 1908, a mo- was inaugurated at Père Lachaise

x
Syy

numeral of the Federals bearing this inscription:

TO THE DEAD OF THE COMMUNE
May 21-28, 1871.

not the agent of modern civilization

the same as that of the Commune, the A sdciale. »

With each of our revolutions, it's the same words that are heard, marking the same goal to be reached, and towards which we constantly strive, sometimes directly, sometimes through indirect means: the annihilation of Christian civilization in the pro- made of a contrary civilization. Raoul Rigault said the- salt brutally to the hostages: "There are eighteen hundred "This has been going on for years: it has to end."

With the Commune defeated, intrigue took its place violence. Mr. Thiers immediately employed all the his mind's ability to disintegrate the royal majority Assembly list2, to raise all sorts of de- engagements between people who everything should have brought together and unite.

'However, the people, seeing that the men...'
They were missing, she raised her voice to God. The pilgrimages to the sanctuaries of Saint-Michel and La Salette, from Paray-le-Monial and Lourdes, were multiplying; on every road resounded this cry of appeal to Sacred Heart: "Save Rome and France" The 24th In May 1873, the National Assembly regained possession . of herself. But the country was no longer what it had been. had found himself under the vengeful hand of God. The revolutionary propaganda, taken up by Mr. Thiers and Its agents demonstrated its progress day by day. in the by-elections; and, on the other hand, ca- The Catholics had cornered Henry V into making declarations which they used to get rid of him permanently (1).

1. “The Assembly,” said Mr. Samuel Denis, in his History Contemporary history, vol. IV, p. 647, was composed in large part of liberals who were also Christians fervent and convinced.

These words, in the historian's mind, are not

"Under various pretexts," said Mr. Hanotaux in his "History of Contemporary France", The National Assembly dismissed "everything that is the- the presence of strong powers: legitimacy, heredity and Authority: legitimacy, in the person of the count of Chambord, the hereditary, by the seven-year term and finally authority, by the republic.

Mr. the Duke of Broglie, the father, had published, in 1861; a book entitled: "Views on the Government of France,” which was reprinted in 1870. The first The edition seized by the police, "was not," said Mr. Hanorate, known only to a fairly small circle, but This circle was composed of the leading figures of the future national assembly.” The Duke of Broglie had wrote: "Let's cut to the chase: a republic that tou- a monarchy, a constitutional monarchy which relates to the republic and differs from it only by the constitution and permanence of executive power, This is the only alternative left to the friends of the "Freedom." He was referring to the constitutional monarchy. with a religious tone: "Admirable mechanism" which is not made by human hands, simple development development of the conditions attached by the Providen- "This contributes to the progress of civilized societies." He said Again: "The worst revolution is a restorationration (1).

a blame for the liberalism of these Catholics, at the conmilking: this fourth volume is entirely devoted to justifying them and to blame Henry V for the failure of the monarchy.

1. The ideas of Mr. de Broglie and his friends dated by far. Under the First Republic there were also "monarchians.

In 1792, it was published in Paris, with this note: “Se "Found in the Netherlands, at all bookstores," a brochure dedicated to Louis XVI, under the title: “The monarchianism unveiled, by Mr. Th. Abd. C y,

The author denounces the Society of Friends of the Constitution.

Rie os

“This book and Prevost-Paradol’s book, France news had, said Mr. Hanotaux, about the destinies future of France, and on the provisions of the As- "It seemed to have a national impact, an immediate influence."

The "fusionists" wanted a restoration of the monarchy in the reconciliation of two principles, of two orders of government that had previously been opposed. The merger consisted, on the one hand, of making it recognized by the princes of the house of Orléans the rights hereditary rights of the Count of Chambord, and of the other . to win over Charles X's grandson to the monarchy constitutional and parliamentary law of 1830. Double monarchical, a society founded "under the auspices of a name which recalls ancient French chivalry, Mr. de Clermont- "Thunder." The members of this society, he said, have widespread throughout France, under the name of monarchists.

“To call oneself purely friends of the Constitution,” observes- That would have been getting too close to its creators. We have added the word monarchical, because a little bit of it is necessary in the plan of these gentlemen. But how to stick to this formule did not seem to entirely agree with the sys-. tem of the dominant party, the expression mo- was added narchic, this one "decreed by the National Assembly" (p. 7). The author, after having taken one by one the "expressions designations of this company” and the reasons given to endorse its purpose, he concludes: "They are nothing other something that the deceptive grass is meant to cover and hide | the opening of the precipice.

The founder of "monarchism" had given this society as a symbol, a scale in which one could see, On one side a crown and on the other a Phrygian cap, with this motto: To live free and faithful. "Thus the Crownme, like an Assembly of Factious People, after having debased it, degraded, after having been torn from the august head of our sovereign is still willing to keep it; thus the liberty cap, that frightening symbol of 'license' boundless, this bloodied plume of all the scoundrels rats; both on the same line, in a variable level: In fact, this is the emblem under which the Monarchists announced themselves. a hundred and the loyalty they promise, provided they are "Free first, that's the motto of these modern knights." (p. 8.) "One should not believe that they saw in the the system they strive to support, the happiness of their operation in which each of the terms was exclusive of Vautre. |

The Count of Chambord wanted the merger in as long as it was to be pure recognition and simple of the monarchical principle of which he was the representing and the loyal rapprochement of the two branches royal family's heads.

The question of the flag had been an obstacle since 1848. key to the merger. Whereas for the Count of Chambord, the white flag, symbol of the right of dy- The Bourbons' nastic emblem was the necessary emblem. of the traditional and hereditary monarchy, the par- the elementary and liberal parties demanded irreducible-homeland; that is not the reason for their preference for this form of government which the English offer us the model; but each of them found in it, as a whole, or in its parts, enough to satisfy his dominant passion Nantes. » (p. 10.)

Following this accusation, the author, in the chapters that next, examines the Monarchist system: 19 by relationport to the king and the monarchy (p. 12), 20 in relation to the 3rd, people (p. 20), 4th, in relation to the nobility (p. 26), 5th in relation to religion and its ministers (p. 34). Then He adds (p. 46): "They said that the king, convinced of the the purity of their views, approved their plans, and that is with the appearance of a mission on his part that they were looking for "They are trying to deceive the good faith of honest people." "This What I am asking for is the French constitution in its primitive purity. They say that wanting to restore the cons-

The French institution is a chimera: that everything is de-destroyed, disorganized, and the only party left to take-
To do something in such an instance is to only consider to put the king on the throne, by giving him as his con-seats and for supervisors two rooms such as they propose” (p. 52). “But finally,” the author asks, “what Do titles therefore have mediators between them to achieve this?
The outrageous nation and the outraged nation? What mission Is it theirs? What do they want us to compromise on?

The author concludes by saying that "the pursuit of this A chimera would irrevocably prevent the restoration of throne.

History teaches little, even to the most interested people.
listen to him.

maintaining the representative tricolour flag ideas from 1789 and 1830.

“If I had accepted all the concessions that I…”
were requested, accepted all the conditions that "They wanted to impose it on me," said the Count of Chambord.
Marquis de Dreux-Brézé, I might have reconquered my crown, but I wouldn't have stayed six months on my throne. Before the end of this short space of
In time, I would have been relegated to my exile once again.
by the Revolution of which I had become, from my return
"entered France, the prisoner" (1).

For its part, Germany did not conceal its strong opposition to traditional royalty.

Baron de Plancy, former deputy of Aube, an-former squire of Prince Jérôme-Napoléon, reports in His memories, this interview:

"Republican; certainly Prince Napoleon was, and" as after a dinner at Monza Castle (at his brother-in-law King Humbert), he expressed it energeticallyment to the imperial prince. of Germany, since Fre-Deric IT, who had asked him for permission to speak freely, he said these words, "that I-
"Something for everyone to think about":

"Your Excellency, in France, the Republic, in my opinion, has no reason to exist; and if you have it, it's because

1. Donoso Cortés: "This school (the liberal school) does not dominates only when society dissolves; the moment of his reign is that transient and fleeting moment when the world He doesn't know whether he will choose Barabbas or Jesus, and remains in suspense between a dogmatic assertion and a negationsupreme tion. Society then willingly allows itself to be governed governed by a school that never dares to say: I affirm, who also doesn't dare to say: I deny it, but who always answersdays: I distinguish. All the in-betweens will be crushed by the Revolution or rejected with disdain by the reconstructiontion. »

ed =

Hat eue

we gave it to you (1)... for your misfortune!

“I heard this story of family from the Prince himselfimperial church. » |

We now know that in 1872, secret societies concerted throughout Europe to prevent the adventThe birth of Henry V. Fifteen days after his death, the September 9, 1883, many Freemasons met they went to the lodge of the Hospitallers of Saint-Ouen, and F.-. Cuénot drank there "to the health of the death of Hen"Ri V." This toast was met with applause and laughter. Immediately afterwards, the same Cuénot drank from the Mr. Bismarck's health.

On October 28, 1873, Bishop Dupanloup had written. to a Protestant minister, Mr. de Pressensé; “My con-:

1. Bismarck's letters published by his son monthirty, indeed, that the Republic was imposed on us by Prussia.

When the Prince of Hohenlohe published his Memoirs, one found in the diary of the prince's mission to Paris, From 1874 to 1885, new evidence of the support that Bismarck at the establishment of the republic. The instructions-tions that Bismarck had given to the prince in the char-

The members of the German embassy in Paris were: linen the interests of the empire dictate that France remain in a state of division and weakness that the republic guarantees. I] wants even if this republic is "as red as possible"
and that the anticlericals become the masters.

In the March 1906 issue of Le Correspondant, Mgr Vallet, former chaplain of the Lycée Henri IV, gave the account of a conversation he had with Bismarck in 1879, during his stay in Gastein. Biimarck was then meditating on to cease the Kulturkampf and to align oneself with Rome. By-regarding the state of Europe, the wishes of Germany and "France's resources," he said with that abruptness which was unique to him, to his interlocutor, who had just pro-State the name of the republic:

"To do anything, France needs a
A stable government, he read: we need a Monarchy. Me, if I was French, I would be a Carlist.

— Car'iste, for the Count of Chambord?

— Yes, yes, that's what I mean: legitimist.

Prussian interests demanded that France be in republican

The profound hatred is that the ills of France, if what is being prepared fails (1), they will astonish the world;
We will go from calamity to calamity until we reach rock bottom. of the abyss. The curse of the future and of history-
The country will be attached to those who, able to establish the country on centuries-old foundations of stability and freedom and honor, will have prevented this work and pre-precipitated this unfortunate France, at the very moment when she was trying one last effort to save him, on the fatal slope down which she has been drawn, for almost a century, from disaster to disaster. What a tri-Tesse and what remorse for some forced men then to say to oneself: "There was a day, an hour when France could have been saved, where our contribution to-would have decided everything, and we didn't want to (2)! »

We can clearly see which characters Mgr Dupan-
The wolf had in mind in his reproaches, on whom he wished milk to shift the heavy responsibility of having republic. Mr. de Bismarck had said it in his own words to Mr. d'Arnim: "We certainly do not have a duty " to make France stronger by consolidating its position internally and by establishing a proper monarchy there.” These

The words to d'Arnim are complementary to those to Mer Vallet. It's difficult to be more consistent with oneself.
than Bismarck was on that subject.

He had another reason to oppose the restoration. of legitimate power. He had d'Arnim write by The Bavarian minister: "Under no circumstances can we-
We will march with the Legitimists, given that they will be always committed to the Pope's cause.

In an interview with Prince Orloff, ambassador From Russia to Paris, he also said: "France can she can rebuild an army if she wants, but there's one thing that we would not suffer is that France of-
"The clerical wine."

1. A parliamentary monarchy characterized by the dratricolored skin.

2. Published by the Marquis de Dreux-Brézé. Notes and Memories to serve as a history of the royalist party, 1872-1883, pages 167-168.

refused to contribute to the salvation of France, and to have thus deserved the curses of the future; but we We doubt that history is associated with the thought that has ins-he copied these words and agreed with the previous one.
lat on the people to whom it will assign this res-responsibility. In any case, the prophecy had to to come to pass: from that moment on, we were precipitated We're on the slope and now we're rolling towards the abyss.

The National Assembly made excellent laws and per-put the foundation of excellent institutions but well.
The Republicans soon abolished these laws, destroyed These institutions forged laws and enero of institutions in the opposite direction.

The assembly rightly gave, in its assessment, the primary importance of religious matters and moral issues, then social questions, she is mistaken-

paid by placing in the last rank, in the order of success cession, the political question. In the work of the la-In Bour, the plow matters far more than the oxen.
which 'drag' it; however the plow is not placed before the oxen. It was necessary to restore first.
power did not belong to the assembly.
she was determined to do what she could not guarantee either defense nor duration. His sole duty was to re-to constitute the authority, to leave its august representative feeling himself reclaiming his place at our head.

She did not do so, because many of her members were more or less affected by moderate-`nism, that is to say, imbued with modern ideas.

"The essence of modernism," said Mr. Charles Per-Rin, that's the pretense of eliminating God from life social. Man, according to the modern idea, being at himself, his God and the supreme master of the world, everything in society must be done through him and by the sole authority of the law that it carries. This is the absolute modernism, giving the radical contradiction wedge to the social order that the Church had founded, to this order in which public life and private life all related to the same end, and where everything was done directly for the sake of God, and under the su-first authority of God's instituted power for to govern the spiritual order.

"There is a tempered modernism that does not openly waged war on God, and who, in some Sort of it, deal with it. Without denying it, nor fighting it,
He measures it for him, by placing him under common law, the
The place he can occupy among men. By this tactics, while maintaining the appearance of a cer-With respect, he places God under his dominion and under the tutelage of the State. This tempered modernism and circumspect, it is liberalism of every degree and of "Every nuance."

One can say with equal truth: it is the mason-nism, as we will see later.

“Depending on the circumstances,” Mr. Charles continued

Perrin, the revolution leans to one side or the other-three, but she remains the same in terms of her fundamental claim: the secularization of life social at all levels and in all its forms.

"What a strange illusion! What a sin- contradiction!" It is more common to flatter oneself that one is giving back to our time some stability, while accepting, to some degree, shell, in one way or another, however attenuated it "May be, the idea of modernism (1)."

In the quiet contemplation of his final years, Mr. Guizot, the man of 1830, had nevertheless done

1. Modernism in the Church, according to unpublished letters of Lamennais.

this confession and addressed to those of his party this exhortation: "We thought ourselves wise, the cautious, the politicians: we have failed to recognize not only the limits of our power, but the rights of the sovereign power that governs the the world and ourselves; we have not held taking into account the eternal laws that God has made for us, and we have formally claimed to put at their disposal in place, and everywhere, our own laws... Let us hasten to to break out of the ruts where the revolutionary spirit threw away; they would always lead us to the same abysses." He was not listened to by those very people. which proceeded from him.

Henry V had shown his firm resolve to settle all the political and social issues of the time, not following modernism, but following Christ-Christianism. He had thus formulated his thought. raine: To bring God back as master in society. so that he himself might reign there as king (1).

This statement shocked liberal Catholics; and for those who were not infected by modernism, or were only present in small doses, they didn't know What Freemasonry is and the role it plays for two centuries. This is the admission of Mr. de Marcère acted loyally. This ignorance made them hesitant-uncertain of what they should do, and of-Faced with these hesitations, the Revolution grew bolder and finally by taking the place.

1. To those who criticized him for having made his government Garcia Moreno, the ally of the Church, responded with Henry V: "This country is unquestionably the kingdom of God; it belongs to Him alone and He has made no other something other than entrusting it to my care. I must therefore do every possible effort to ensure that God reigns in this kingdom, so that my commandments may be subordinateborn to his own, so that my laws may enforce his laws. » |

However, there were some men who had the intuition of the measures that it would have been necessary to to take action against international secret societies. Proof of this can be found in the Report of the Comparliamentary inquiry into the insurrection of March 18.

Here is what we can read in H. Ameline, end of volume III of the depositions (1).

“Mr. Chairman of the Commission. — Some meSpecial measures must be taken against companies secret organizations affiliated with foreign factions. It is said that we would be doing France a great service by dedestroying the International; but what is the means to achieve this? It's not by deporting a few individuals. Those who are part of the sosecret societies affiliated with foreign secret societies governs, ceases to be French citizens and, by that very thing, they may be expelled at any time of the territory.

Why the measures proposed by the president of the Commission during the 1871 insurrection, did notThey were not applied to Freemasonry?

We didn't know, we didn't dare.

1. Inquiry into the insurrection of March 18, 1871, p. 253. (Paris, Dentu, 1872.)

CHAPTER XXI

In October 1872, it had taken place in the province From Novara to Lucano, a meeting of the principals leaders of Italian Freemasonry. In this convent. Félix Pyat represented France, and General Etzel represented Prussia. The dictatorship had been decided there. the Freemason Gambetta's style.

The realization of this project seemed highly improbable. Similar and quite impossible. Mr. Gambetta was returning of Saint Sebastian, situated amidst the ruins of war and the ruins of the Commune; he also had against him the FINANCIAL DISORDERS of his first dicttature and the TRAFFICKING that had marked it: these The obstacles seemed insurmountable.

Freemasonry knew how to smooth them over. The clerks- The Assembly's investigative missions fell silent, the ministers- Many abstained, although most of them did not were not Freemasons: which clearly shows to what extent can it, through its secret influences, to extend its reach.

During his oratorical tour, after the Assembly- The national wheat had declared its mission complete, Mr. Gambetta outlined the program that Freemasonry, tou- bold days and therefore always victorious (1), proposed to the country: "The new assembly must- Wheat gets up and says: Here I am! I am still here France, a land of free inquiry and free thought.

-~ After May 24, 1873, the Mac- government Mahon continued to treat the Grand Orient as an equal to Equally. Mr. Léon Renault, Prefect of Police, opened, at without the knowledge of Mr. the Duke of Broglie, Minister of the Interior meur, negotiations with Freemasonry comme with a foreign power.

The elections of February 20, 1876 replaced the conservative Republic, which the National Assembly- national had flattered itself that it constituted the revolutionary Republic Revolutionary and anti-Christian.

Mac-Mahon dissolved this Chamber on May 16, 1877.

On the eve of the elections that were to replace her cer, the heads of the Conservative government address-sent a supreme adjuration to France.

“If you name these men, — the 363 opposing tunisians and radicals, — if they return to business-res, here's what they'll do:

"They will overturn all the laws. — They will dis-" will organize the judiciary, — They will disorganize the large-
They will disrupt all the public services.
publics. — They will persecute the clergy. — They will re-establish-will enforce the law of suspects. — They will destroy the li-Freedom of education. — They will close the schools free and will re-establish the monopoly. — They will wear infringement of private property and individual liberty dual. — They will reinstate the laws of violence.
the violence and oppression of 1792. — They will expatriate the religious orders and will recall the men of

1. “Dare, this word contains the entire policy of our revolution. » Saint-Just, Report made to the Convention at Name of the Committees of Public Safety and General Security, 8 Ventôse, year II.

the Commune — They will ruin France from within and will humiliate him in public.

All these threats, in effect, said what was going on.
what we saw and what we Let's see; but not with exhortations.
that a people be stopped on the path to evil.

"The main means of influence and corruption" Mr. Gambetta's tion throughout France for to ensure his own people triumph in the election, said the Ci-Toyen, a socialist newspaper, were based on the action of Freemasonry (1), and especially in Paris on the administration of Public Assistance.

"One month before the date of the convocation decree-" cation of the voters, all the Masonic lodges of

1. Here is a very curious and characteristic trait:

While Mr. Gambetta was president of the Chamber, he one day he gave a grand official dinner to which he invited everyone the Assembly's office, and the order of precedence
To his right, the most senior of the vice-presidents, the honorable Count of Durfort de Sivrac, one of the leaders of the right wing Catholic and monarchist.

During the meal, the deputy from Anjou noticed the green-re singular and even extraordinary which his host; and with the courteous familiarity that was permitted
He expressed his astonishment at the president's character.
asking him if this strange glass was related to what-that particular memory.

"Indeed," replied Mr. Gambetta quite simply;
This is Luther's glass, which was kept in Germany fromthen three and a half centuries like a relic, and that the Freemason societies from across the Rhine have honored me-their insignia to offer me as a token of sympathy.

Chateaubriand, in his Memoirs, also speaks of glass of Luther, whom he had seen in Berlin, surrounded by veneration, like Calvin's chair, which is piously preserved in Geneva.

So that the Germans could have disposed of an object so precious in their eyes, and for which they have made tribute -to the very man who posed for personiproud in France of the idea of total war and of the re-An implacable vendetta against Germany, what services ex-eonnels, should he not have returned to the international sect-

nale | ach a

France was called upon to deliberate on the matter.
electoral,

Those who testified to the distance from Gambetti's policies were no longer invoked quaestors; but those whose adherence was established, de-They came, throughout the election period, and res-still maintain permanent centers of political action
a tendency towards opportunism.

"As for Public Assistance, we know that" considerable sums were distributed, in the form emergency relief, for election propaganda in all the districts of Paris where Gambettaism was more particularly challenged (1).

"It was mainly in Belleville that we noticed..."
of these unusual distributions over the past two months.

Cosmopolitan Freemasonry had made comto take from foreign chancelleries that the future was to Gambetta and that they should begin to comp-to be with him. A few months before March 16, he had
'was received twice by Victor Emmanuel and the re-The king's relations with Gambetta have since been put in full light.

The elections are taking place, they are being held against "the "government of priests." Mac-Mahon submits, then resigns. Then the Republican Union is founded, which goes from the center-left to the far left and declares to have an enemy to fight: "clericalism".
Clericalism is Catholicism; it is pro-proclaims loudly, and we impose upon ourselves the duty to ex-finish "slowly and surely" (2).

1. It goes without saying that throughout France the commissions of hospices and charity offices were completely renovated.

2. It was on March 26, 1876, that Mr. Spuller, filing a
A report favorable to the government's "reform" states:
"We will vote for it because it is in line with the policy-

The time has come for new elections; the country Will it prove to be better informed, more far-sighted? The
The Chamber of August 21, 1881 is worse than the previous. She is doing "the big ministry", Gam-Betta in the lead? The Minister of Religious Affairs and Linen-Public education, Paul Bert, proclaims the necessity to destroy "I black phylloxera". This Chamber makes the law of the neutral school, the law of divorce, the

. the policy we want to follow, because we want to go "Slowly but surely." On September 18, 1878, Gambetta went to Romans, and there — in that small town which had had an abbey as its cradle — in front of five to six thousand people gathered in a wooden shed, which we had constructed for the occasion, he expressed himself in these terms:

"The clerical question, that is to say the question of the rap-

Church and State ports, command, hold in suspense all other questions. That's where it takes refuge and forms It perpetuates the spirit of the past. I denounce this danger more and more great that the ultra- spirit makes modern society run mountain, the spirit of the Vatican, the spirit of the Syllabus, which is not that the exploitation of ignorance for the purpose of enslavement-general information, »

These words were met with furious applause.

Desiring not to offend the Israelites and the Protestants Gambetta continued:

"I spoke about the relationship between Church and State. I know Although to be correct, I should say: churches, but From a governmental and national point of view, there is only Ultramontanism, which stubbornly seeks to thwart the State. When examines the incessant usurpations in which he engages ultramontanism, the invasions it makes every day on the domain of the State, I have the right to say: The so- peril There it is! The clerical spirit seeks to infiltrate everywhere. in the army, in the judiciary, and there is this of par-particularly, it is always when France's fortunes are declining "Jesuitism is on the rise!"

The audience gave the speaker a long and enthusiastic ovation.

Senator Malens, who was presiding over the session, had for principal assessor Mr. Emile Loubet, the future president of the Republic.

Already in 1872, in Saint-Julien, Gambetta had exhibited The program of the so-called "republican" party. This program religiously followed can be summed up in three words: War on Catholicism licism.

Law on civil funerals. The October elections 1885 are better. The country seems to be changing its mind. and make an effort to shake off the Masonic yoke. But the sect is too powerful, too well organized. too well governed, to let itself be pushed out by a ballot. The Republican Union has 380 members. bres in the new Chamber and the opposition 204. That's too much. The majority shamelessly abuse their force to invalidate its opponents en masse, in-intimidate the voters, and portray themselves as the evil ones ideas as frank as before. As re- In retaliation, four to five hundred priests were deprived of of their treatment, if we must use that word; and by authority, without agreement with the bishops, most State-subsidized vicariates are abolished my.

From then on, nothing could stop the sect; it did this that she wants, at her own time and to the extent that she the appropriate judge to surely achieve his goals.

The general plan for the war against the Church was tabled in the Chamber on March 31, 1883 by Mr. Paul Bert. It remains the key document of that time. — Sé- The separation of Church and State — Denunciation of Concordat — Secularization of Church property both ordinary and secular. That is what must be pursued patiently (1).

1. After proposing the measures to be taken, Paul Bert This confirmed what had already been done.

'First, all monastic institutions have disappeared. We no longer see those numerous orders that devoured without benefiting the people's substance... and which did not serve, in modern states, than to maintain a foreign spirit thereger and fatal.

"Secondly, the privileges that were not intended than to protect the recruitment of clergy against intent- The maintenance of populations is eliminated: the seminarians are

Pending the fulfillment of this desideratum, he we must use the Concordat as a weapon to to surely strike the Church. "The Concordat," it said in ending Paul Bert, gives the State a powerful weapon health, if he knows how to use it; and that weapon is the choice of bishops and the approval given to the nomination of priests.

Ferry, Waldeck, Combes, Loubet, Briand, Clemen- They had no personal agenda. They had passively carried out the orders of Freemasonry for the implementation of the plan, including Paul Bert, under His dictation had drawn the lines. Each ministry had a part of this plan to execute, and he did his he does the work with varying degrees of skill. But he advances

That's in order...

The Chamber of 1889 made the law on factories; that of 1893 establishes the law of increase; that of 1898 paved the way for the separation of Church and State meet under the flags with the other students; _ no special allocation is 'anymore granted to the big seminars, which will cease to occupy buildings belonging to relating to the State, the departments and the municipalities.

"The Bishops, ranked according to their order of precedence by-departmental officials no longer enjoy extraordinary honors conferred upon them by the decrets. They will leave the palaces, whose dwellings, sometimes princely, increased at least as much their moral authority than their material resources.

"Ecclesiastical establishments can no longer possess" to seize buildings, and their movable wealth must contribute to increasing public credit, through their positionment in annuities from the State. The priests to whom you have Having already removed the domination of cemeteries, they lose that factories, whose well-established accounting does not allow no more abuses, and municipalities are no longer constrained to fill the gaps.

"The clergy, through the laws you have already passed," no longer has any part in the direction of the education system republic, and the separation of Church and State is clear-established ment.

"The priest, whatever rank he holds in the hierarchy, in the law on associations; that of 1902 accompleted the separation; that of 1906 brought it out the effects that the sect expected from it.

In January 1892, fifteen years after the substitution of the Masonic republic to the conservative republictrice, the six French cardinals, to whom adhered twelve archbishops, including two coadjutors, and sixty-five bishops, including two titular bishops Laires, published a STATEMENT OF THE FACT SITUATION TO THE CHURCH OF FRANCE followed by a DECLARATION.

They began by recalling words that ve-had just been said from the top of the French tribune On behalf of the government: "The Republic is full can no longer count on the almost always assured impunity It has hitherto been limited to the most reprehensible lapses in language. It does not will no longer be able to step out of his role without being justly punished. religious to meddle in administration, politics and. election. Whether he is provided with a concordat treatment or of a simple allowance due to the benevolence of the State, He will lose these advantages when his guilt becomes apparent. proven.

"At the same time, government decisions, under in the form of decrees or orders, will have repealed a multitude of measures taken in the interest of the Church, and none of which > The prescriptions of the concordat do not create an obligation. 4 "State.

"The Church, thus reduced to the strict execution of the Concordat which she signed, without any appearance of persedition can be invoked precisely by her, do not receivebefore more from the State, no concessions specific to increaseto wrought his wealth and political influence, will no longer that the very large and very legitimate share of authority that he grants the docility of the faithful.

"It was at that time, after having observed the results of this legislative process unknown since 1804, which, in our opinion, may be opportune and expedient to examine whether it is appropriate to pronounce the separation of the Church and the State, having returned to the fullness of its power to see, with the Church reduced to its own strength and its strict right.

"We will have fulfilled our task by preparing this future. " of regard for religion. No republican government-Cain had no intention of offending anyone in any way. religion or restricting the practice of worship. We we do not want, and neither does the entire Republican party. does not want to be portrayed as having, in any way at the moment, wanted to encroach on the religious domain and to infringe upon freedom of conscience.

'At these shameless words, the cardinals came to contrast the facts. They began by saying: "This What is unfortunately true is that for twelve years ago, the government of the Republic was something else that a personification of public power: it has been the personification of a doctrine, let's say a programme, in absolute opposition to the Catholic faith, and he ap-applies this doctrine, implements this program, in such a way that there is nothing today, neither people nor institutions, nor interest, which has not been methodically struck, diminished, and destroyed as much as possible.

Our readers know what this doctrine is, hence She comes from, what era does she date back to, what in were the inventors; and they are not ignorant of more than that, it is the shadowy association that has tasked with ensuring her triumph and establishing her reign on the ruin of all Christian institutions, to the great detriment of all legitimate interests.

Going into detail, Exposé reviewed the government's conduct towards God and of the worship due to him, with regard to the clergy, to Té-regarding education, with regard to the family. Thirteen Years have passed since then. Each of these years saw the promulgation of new laws and new-New decrees all marking the same trend: the desire to annihilate Catholicism in France.

This is what Pope Leo XIII pointed out which-a few days after the Declaration of the Cardinals: “Com-

How could we not be seized with intense grief? at present, fully considering the scope of the vast conspiracy that some men formed to annihilate Christianity in France, and the animosity that they put in place to pursue the realization of their design, trampling underfoot the most basic no-notions of freedom and justice for the feeling of the majority of the nation, and respect for the Inalienable rights of the Catholic Church?... Poor thing France! Only God can measure the abyss of evils where it would sink, if this legislation—far from to improve, persisted in such a deviation which would result in tearing from the minds and hearts of the French

"It was the religion that made them so great (1)."

It would take a whole volume to list all the acts legislative acts, all decrees, all measures taken during the last quarter of a century to annihilate the Catholicism in France. Because that is what the sect: she still considers France to be the earthly foundation of the Church, built on Peter, through Our Lord Jesus Christ. She would like to remove it from among the nations. We have drew up a summary of the persecution, in the religious week of the diocese of Cambrai, during the penultimate legislative election. No need to reto produce here; the facts are still in memory and in full view of everyone (2).

---

1. Encyclical Inter sollicitudines.

2. Those who would like to have the painting on hand legislative acts of persecution, promulgated since twenty-five years old, could use several brochures: The persecution for fifteen years by a patriot, (House (from the Good Press). Twenty-five years of government without God, by Paul GREVEAU, (Paris, anti-Masonic committee). The acts of the Waldeck-Rousseau ministry, (Paris, at Louis Tremaux). The War on Religion. Statement of the prodraft anti-religious bills submitted to the French Chambers,

But what is important to note is that all these measures of persecution were imposed by Freemasonry.

"One can assert without being reckless," he said. in September 1893 a newspaper that was thought to reflect the prevailing ideas within the Grand Orient, The Morning, — that most of the laws that are subject to the French — we are talking about the major political laws ticks — have been studied by Freemasonry before appearing in L'Officiel. » He added: «The laws on primary education, on divorce, the laws of increase, military laws, and between authe law on the obligation of service for the seminarists took their flight from Cadet Street towards the Palais-Bourbon; they returned from it inviolable and definitive.” And as a conclusion, this cry of triumphPhe: "We are still all-powerful, but at the condition of synthesizing our aspirations into a formula. For ten years, we walked in repeating: "Clericalism, that's the enemy!" We We have secular schools everywhere, the priests are reForced into silence, the seminarians carry the bag. This is not an ordinary result in a passion which is called the eldest daughter of the Church (1).

We find in the Bulletin of the Grand Orient Proof of what Le Matin says.

On September 18, 1891, the Convent voted the The following proposition: "The Masonic Convention inThe Bar Council must be summoned to the hotel quickly.

by C. Groussau, (General Society of Catholic Bookstores) (lique). The persecution for twenty years, by Jean Lefaure. (Paris, 5 rue Bayart). And especially the book published by Mr. Louis Hosotte, History of the Third Republic, 1870-1910. octavo volume of 835 pages. Paris, Librairie des Saints-Pères.

1. Article from Le Matin cited by "Freemasonry demasked”, September 1893, pages 322-325.

of the Grand Orient, all members of Parliament who belong to the Order, in order to communicate to them the wishes expressed by the majority of Freemasons, as well as the political orientation of the Federation. After each of these meetings, the Bulletin will publish the list of those who attended the summons of the Council of the Order, that of those who will have excused, that of those who will have left the invitation without response. These official communications from the Grand-East, as well as the exchanges of views that followed themwill, must be done in one of our temples, in Masonic form, at the apprentice level, the The Bar Council, directing the proceedings, the guests... resting on the columns (1).

It could easily be proven that, just as allThese laws of persecution were proposed by Freemasons, it was by Freemasons who obeyed health to an instruction, sometimes formally notified by the distress signal, which Brother Brisson is charged with to make it hover over the assembly that they were voted on and finally aggravated, after promulgation-tion, by the circulars and regulations of Messrs. Freemason ministers.

The following vow was adopted at the convent in 1894 published in the Masonic Collection, page 308:

“Every uninitiated person admitted to receive the light will have to previously made the following commitment: | I promise on my honor, whatever the political or other situation to which I am given to arrive one day, to answer any convocation which may be addressed to me by the franc-Freemasonry, and to defend, by all means in my power, all the solutions given by her to political and social issues.

---

1. Bulletin of the Grand Orient, 1891, page 668.

+

"The said commitment, after the light has been shed, must to be transcribed in full, by the neophyte on a pl.-. ad hoc and signed by Jui, after to have been dated in full. This commitment The written document will be transmitted by the V.:. of]'A.-. to the The Bar Council will then create an alphabetical ranking. Betic in its archives (1). |

Several times, the newspapers have compiled the following ministers who sacrificed their free will at the feet of the Grand Orient. In all the offices, they have todays trained, for twenty years, the vast majority. Therefore, F.-. Colfavra was able to say in all truthnation: "It is from our ranks that the heroes emerged-

---

1. This proposal was passed unanimously. It is im- It is possible to deny the scope of this document; it is "the imperative mandate in its entirety.

Here is an example of how the application in is done:

In the aftermath of the arrests of Dide and Hubard on the relationship between Church and State, all the members of parliament Freemasons were summoned to Rue Cadet. The meeting was presided over by Fr. Thulié, President of the Council of the Order. Several speakers strongly criticized whatsome of their colleagues, for not having voted in favor of view of the proposal to separate the Church and the State.

This fact clearly shows: 1° that the Council of the Order of the Grand Orient, in accordance with the decision taken or reupdated in September 1891, addressed for political purposes that, summonses to Freemason deputies, and that These individuals obey these summonses; 2° that there is consein France a hidden power, unnamed by the nation, and that a good number of deputies consider themselves comfreeing myself from this occult power.

This interference of Freemasonry in the affairs of Parliament and its dominance over a large number of deprostitutes and senators, has become even more assertive in the General Assembly of the Grand Orient at the Convent held From September 12th to 17th, 1892. F.:: Laffont He made the following proposal: | =~ "Considering that the strict duty of every Freemason is to bring into conformity with Masonic principles all acts of his private and public life; that, in particular-

has

my most important government of the Republic and the Republican Party (1). »

Nothing could be truer than the words of Bishop Gouthe-Soulard: "We are not in a Republic, but in Freemasonry"; or that of Mr. Gadaud, then Minister of Public Works: "Francegonnerie, that's the closed Republic; the Republic, "It's open Freemasonry"; or that of Mr. Massé: "The day the Republic becomes truly-Freemasonry has uncovered its secrets, as well as Freemasonry has long been...
"Something that the Republic has covered up..." (2).

A man who was one of the main players in the politics of that era, Mr. de Marcère, published four volumes under this title: THE ASSEMBLY

NATIONAL EXECUTS OF 1871. At the time he was participating to the events he recounts, as president of the centre left, then minister in the Du- cabinet Faure, having kept his wallet in the cabin Wadington, who followed the fall of the marshal, he did not didn't even suspect the existence of the mysterious powerrieux who knotted the meshes of the net in which France is taken today. Il Pavone with a admirable good faith:

"In the state of affairs created in 1871, one did not distinguishlirigement, les membres de la Franc-members of Parliament and elected assemblies have the obligation to gation to continue through their votes the implementation of the pro-Republican Masonic gram, and, in the front line, the elimination of the budget for religious affairs and the separation of Churches and the State;

"The Convention declares that Freemasons who do not conform" They did not lie to these principles, nor did they fail in their duty. "He reprimands them."

This is indeed a precise, formal notice. It is the injunction to Masonic duty in all its force.

1. International Centenary Congress, proceedings, p. 98.
2. General Convention. Session of September 29, 1908.

was not yet aware of the root causes of the problem, today today, it has reached an acute stage, from which France was suffering... no one, not even among the most conservative counter-revolutionaries had no idea of the designs formisled by the followers of the Revolution. Nobody could not imagine that through the competition, long-unconscious time, of the republican left, and by the initially secret, shadowy work of the Jewish sects Masonic and Masonic work, gradually admitted, prospanking, then becoming official, we would arrive at this An extraordinary event: the dechristianization of France and the triumph of Freemasonry... Ja-But France would not have allowed this party to establish itself, if The moderates, now excommunicated, had not been his guarantee before the country... Freemasonry has its objective is the annihilation of Christianity and especially from the Catholic Church, it continues the dessatanic breast denounced by J. de Maistre, from the time of the Revolution.

CHAPTER XXII

THE SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE

The main organ of Calvinism, the Journal of Geneva, during the convention of the Grand Orient of France in 1906, confirmed in these terms what had been said above, the sect's desire to annihilate the Christianity in France: "Freemasonry holds currently its headquarters in Paris where four hundred Delegates from the various lodges in the country are deliberating. This is A major event. We shouldn't hide it.
Indeed, that Freemasonry holds in its hands the destinies of the country. Although it only counts
With twenty-six thousand members, she runs it as she sees fit.
French politics. All the laws, including the Catholic-
The cynicism complains so bitterly that they were first developed in her convents. She imposed them on the government nement and to the Chambers. She will dictate all the: measures intended to ensure its implementation. No one No doubt, and no one, not even the most indetheir supporters would not dare to directly challenge his subdued will.
veraine, He who allows himself to be broken would soon be broken only the fact of misunderstanding it. Never since the ea time when Rome commanded kings and princes
We have never seen such power.

"The will of Freemasonry, no one is unaware of it"
Furthermore, it aims to destroy Catholicism in France.
She will have neither rest nor respite until she has thrown him away down. All its springs are only tensioned towards this goal. » |

The Revolution had already set itself the mission of
to achieve this goal.
She believed she could reach him through the civil constitution of the clergy. Through it, she separated the Church of France from Rome, and she knew full well that, left to her own devices

The Church in France could not survive for long.
Article IV of Title I of the Constitution stated:
It is forbidden to any church or parish in France and to every French citizen to recognize in no in any case and under any pretext whatsoever, the authority of an ordinary or metropolitan bishop whose see would be established under the domination of a foreign power manages, n1 that of its delegates residing in France or elsewhere.” This phrase was aimed directly at the Pope, whose jurisdictional authority was, in principle, denied about French bishops.

Article 19 of Title II stated: "The new event- that (elected by a secular electoral college) will not be able to to appeal to the Pope to obtain any confirmation mation; but he will write to him as to the visible head of the universal Church, as a testimony to the unity of faith and communion that he must maintain with him.

It was not only an organized schism, but ordered, since it is, on the one hand, forbidden to all church and every French citizen to recognize, in In no case would the authority of a bishop foreign to France, and that on the other hand, it is also forbidden for events to those appointed under the new constitution, to appeal to the Pope to obtain any confirmation "mation." It was thought that, deprived of sap of supernatural life, the source of which Jesus Christ placed at the Vatican, the Church of France would not be long in coming to die of starvation.

We know that clergy and faithful, through the outpouring of their 'blood,' obtained that relations between the Church of France and its Head were restored in accordance to the institution of Our Lord Jesus Christ.

What had been attempted at the end of the first The period of Masonic action was similarly attempted. at the end of the second period. The Law of Separation the relationship between Church and State is designed to resume the work of the Civil Constitution of the Clergy, and as she, and with the same goal, to organize the schism. The sect is experiencing the same resistance and will have the same failure. Four laws were forged successively to surprise, by cunning, the consensus- the clergy's attitude upon entering a short path green, which aimed to bring about schism, is being announced a fifth, but the Watchtower with its open eye and the equiPage is obedient to his commands.

Like the Ferrer case, the preparation, the con-infection and the application of the separation law put in a brilliant light the way of acting of the Freemasonry, and they say how she knows im-to express one's wishes to the public authorities. This is to-that's what we need to focus on.

Already in 1868, under the Empire therefore, Jules Simon outlining the program of the "Republicans", promised the tearing apart of the Concordat and the separation-union of Church and State.

Mr. Jules Simon was merely the spokesperson for the anti-Christian sect. More than half a century ago that: this program was one of the chapters of the plan a masonry plan for the war to be waged against the Christian civilization, and which was carried out without interference Breakdown since then.

The organic articles had started by putting the clergy, worship and even doctrinal teaching nal under the dependence of the State.

The concordat compensation had become a traiever since the Protestant ministers first then the Jewish rabbis were included in the budget at same title as Catholic priests.

These were, therefore, considered as officials, presented as such to the public and.
treated as such.

The churches and cathedrals were gradually annexed attached to the departments and municipalities. It does not
It was no longer possible to build them, even with the only offerings from the faithful, without making a donation in civil court, under penalty of not being able to deliver them to worship, so that when the time came for separation ration they could, without difficulty, be taken from Catholics. Similarly, despite an express clause Under the Concordat, the Church was no longer permitted to France to acquire land and other buildings, all its resources had to be converted into renyours on the State so that it would only have to close the hand that held them, when the time came of the separation.

In the presence of these long-term plans, can we deadline, the fulfillment of which is pursued by a in a continuous manner, denying the existence of an agent who designed, who executes, or has executed the various parties, according to the facilities that they present The times and circumstances? The infinite multitude men, who, in the various branches of the administration and even in senior positions of power, lent its support to this mysterious agents, for the most part, didn't know what they were working on-were worthwhile. The hidden power that suggested them, whoever was making them act knew what he wanted, and what extended his persistent action.

In 1871, Mr. Pradier, a Catholic republican, filed a separation bill. We don't want to say that in this he made himself the direct servant and aware of Freemasonry, we are certain-quite the opposite, but through the opening given in his mind to the ideas that Freemasonry propagates, He found himself, like so many others, prepared to do his work, while ignoring or hating it.

From the moment the Republicans saw themselves in the majority-
In the House, the question was raised with charity. discussion of the budget for religious affairs. At the convent On September 23, 1899, the F.°. Prêt gave in these The reason for this tactic is: "When we will have obtained the separation of Church and State that we have been calling for so long with all our wishes — because you know very well that obtaining them will be due to your influence — if we are asked So how did we manage to get it?
will respond: by proposing it and making it pro-always ask" (1).

Thus, the proposal is reiterated year after year.
seemed less and less strange and less less unrealistic.

Mr. Paul Bert had started this tactic in 1873. "The time will come," he said, "let us be patient, let us wait-" gifts that the laws on education have produced their Indeed, let us wait until women's education is de-
The religious order was launched, and meanwhile, let us hasten the break with the Church through a series of measures that will gradually weaken it.

Ten years later, he announced that the time had come. to begin by bringing the Church of France back to the exe-

---

1. Report, p. 266.

strict interpretation of the Concordat (read the Articles organizing niques) and to come to the elimination of all the pri- privileges granted to clergymen and to the Church (1).

"It was after observing the results of this legislative processes have been unknown since 1804, he added. Paul Bert, that it may be, in our opinion, opportune and expedient to examine whether it is appropriate to pronounce the separation of the State returned to the fullness of its . power, with the Church reduced to its own resources and to his absolute right.

In 1900, the Grand Orient convent was seized by a a set of proposals and wishes emanating from various Congresses and At.–. Mag.–., notably of the Congres of the lodges of the Paris region and of the Lodges of southwest; Lodges of Gap; L.:. of the Friends of Hautes-Alpes; from Boulogne-sur-Mer: Lodge of Friendship; from Melun: L.:. of the Children of Hiram; of Som-Mières: L.:. the Forward March; of Toulon: L.:. Reunion Island; from Ribérac: L.–. the Patriots' Hive-tes; of Caen: L.–. Thémis; of Oran: L.–. l'Union African, etc. After having taken note of these The convent formulated its resolution as follows:

"Considering that if the abolition of the Concordat, the separation of Church and State, the suppression of the budget for religious affairs, the withdrawal of the French embassy Spanish in the Vatican and the recovery of the assets of the hand-death remains among the demands more formal aspects of the Republican party, it is nevertheless appropriate- while awaiting the triumph of these demands, to pursue resolutions pending immediately

---

1. Mr. Emile Ollivier translated the program of action outlined by Paul Bert: “To keep the Church attached to the pillar of the temple, so that she would not have free rein, and to lash her at will, until, exhausted by sheer force, "Debased, it may be completed without peril."

achievable. » Follows a long series of wishes respondingdant to this desideratum (1).

In February 1904, Mr. Keller, in his correspondence... weekly dance said, during this preparation, Mr. Loubet, who was not yet presidenttooth of the Republic, strolling through the Senate in The gallery of Busts, said in a conversation: "I Also, I am in favor of Separation, but I do not I will vote on it only after we have finished brito disarm the Church and the priests.

This was achieved through laws, decrees, and... various measures, wisely spaced out.

However, the attention of Catholics to what is she was becoming more worried every day.

President Carnot, even if it was from his own movementWas it a lie or a Masonic suggestion? He felt compelled to to lull public opinion and pontifical vigilance fiscal, write an autograph letter to Leo XIII, proputting the sincere observance of the Concordat and the resrespect for treaties bearing the signature of France.

It was just a tactic, a stratagem. the favor of the confidence that these words inspired, The sect was making its final preparations.

After half a century of studies and preparations She believed the time had finally come to take action. However, she did not yet dare to speak openly. to present, in its own words, a confiscation law and separation. Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau was charged to pass and enact a law on associations cations in general: it would not be difficult to then declare that the dioceses and parishes are religious associations and to make them pass

---

1. Convention of 1900. Session of September 8. Account rendered, p. 313.

under the regime of other associations of the same cacharacter.

Did Mr. Waldeck-Rousseau really intend to to apply only with moderation to congregations the
The law he had just obtained and to leave it at that? Always |
The fact is that once the law was passed, he was overthrown and remplaced by Mr. Combes.

We know with what rigor he applied the law on the associations and the massacres he committed and of which He boasted. But he did not believe this weapon was sufficient.
against the Church. On March 21, 1903, in the Chamber, and on January 14, 1904, in the Senate, he spoke of an express law-he was on the topic of Separation. "I have always been," he said, "a supporter" of
"On the Separation of Church and State," Then,
He added: "But when I took power, I judged that public opinion was not yet sufficient-well prepared for this reform; I deemed it necessary-
"To be able to bring him there."

Shortly afterwards, he published under this title: A Second campaign: towards Separation, these lines:
"The congregations were dissolved, their houses were closed. The day after this operation, The deepest peace reigned everywhere, even in the oldest abandoned localities actions of the convents. Silence fell there.
as elsewhere, on the very turbulent congregations the day before. At present, oblivion has swallowed up jus-than their names.

"The same will be true of the social consequences"
i.e., the Separation of Church and State.

These words show that his opinion was formed.
and that he believed he could move forward.

Also the September convent of the same the year began with an agenda of complete confiance at F.-. Combes, where it is said that "the delegations representatives of the Lodges of France, gathered in General Assembly General on Monday, September 12, 1904, ask to do discuss simultaneously at the January session the Separation of Church and State and the treasury workers' pensions. » ag

And F.-. Combes replied on September 15: "I I will apply myself with all my strength to achieve 4 as well promptly what can be done about democratic reforms

"cratic criteria indicated in the address received."

However, for such a serious measure, it was good to mislead public opinion and make it believe that the fault lay with the opponent.

We know the heinous means that were used.

A historian, who is by no means inclined to see the in-divine intervention in human events, a thus characterized France's mission in the
world :

"At the conversion of Clovis, the land of the Franks"
and Gaul became the center of Catholicism, and thereby of civilization. How did this happen?
Pope Stephen said it: through the role that France accepted from its origins to be the defender of the Holy Siege. In a letter written to Pepin, he thus As the apostle Saint Peter said: “According to the promise received from Our Lord and Redeemer, I distinguish The Frankish people above all nations. Pre-lend your support to the Romans (to the Popes),
'so that I, Peter, may cover you with my patronage'
in this world and the next.

France remained committed to this mission at 19th century; she restored Pius IX to his throne and stood guard near him. The anti-Christian sect endured this with a shudder. She demanded of Na-Poleon III that he removed the French flag from Rome, so that the Piedmontese could enter. Europe did not accept She did not fully admit to this crime, she maintained his ambassadors to the Pope and kept him thus his rank among the sovereigns. For their part, Popes Pius IX, Leo XIII and Pius X never ceased to to protest, and thereby prevent the prescription so that a date could be set. The Popes thus maintained the law in its entirety.

The Catholic heads of state made it their law to...
It is a violation not to visit the kings of Italy in Rome.
so as not to appear, in the eyes of the people, to be recognized to establish the sovereignty that the princes of Savoy possessed there illegitimately attribute. The sovereigns of Austria, from Spain, Portugal, Saxony, Bavaria, Bel- For this purpose, they have forbidden themselves even visits family in Rome without political affiliation, so as not to to put oneself under a moral obligation to greet them the usurper. The emperors and kings of the nations schismals, when they went to Rome, have demonstrated the same willingness to safeguard them too the rights of the Holy See. Having to be admitted to pre- To pay their respects to the Pope, they resorted to © this combination: they took up residence in their ambassade, which is part of their territory, and from there, they went to the Vatican, often in crews they had brought directly from their country, thus paying the Pope-King a visit in faquelle they professed to be unaware of the presence in Rome of the usurper.

The sect bore this impatiently. It resolved- to put an end to it, and to use the Pre- President of the French Republic. She found there three advantages: to ensure that France completed re- to conceal its providential role; that the Paupauté lost the last vestige of its sovereignty, and that the

The Republic had a pretext for its law of separation- tion. Because she was quite sure that the Pope would not let not to pass such an insult without protesting, and she would use this protest to motivate a a dramatic separation.

The scenario was executed point by point. Mr. Loubet's trip was announced in the Chamber and... Credit was requested from him. It was granted. rallied left to Mr. Count Boni de Castellane to the Chamber, and to Mr. Dominique Delahaye in the Senate, the honor of defending papal law and honor of France; and what is even more deplorable, of the Two priest-deputies, one of whom was Mr. Gayraud, abstained from to vote, the other, Mr. Lemire, gave by his vote to Mr. Loubet had the means to carry out his crime.

On April 23, 1904, Mr. Loubet left Paris to... He went to Rome, where he arrived the following evening. He stayed there. conducted as a humble servant of the inter- Freemasonry national.

The Sovereign Pontiff secretly addressed the governor government of the Republic a protest against the "grave offense" committed by the head of state against rights of the Holy See. This protest was communicated targeted other governments, so that the fact would be acCompli ne pit faire loi. A half-Jew, the prince of MoNaco, the delivery & a journal to be published.

Mr. Combes claimed that this publication was the actions of the Holy See, and prompted a request for explanations. by the ambassador. The Secretary of State demanded that The question was asked in writing. Instead of going To such a legitimate and wise desire, the ambassador made knowing that he had received orders to go on leave. Then Mr. Combes demanded the withdrawal of the two letters by which the two bishops of Laval and Dijon were summoned to Rome to justify the accusations The charges brought against them. The withdrawal of these letters entailed the abdication of all papal authority on the bishops of France. On the refusal of the Holy- The diplomatic relations were definitively severed. broken.

With all things thus prepared, on the first day of In February 1905, an interpellation was debated in the Chamber. Mr. Morlot's order. It was closed by this order of day: "The Chamber, noting that the attitude of the VaTican made the Separation of the Church inevitable and of the State and counting on the government to to hold the vote immediately after the budget. "moves to the agenda."

Twelve years earlier, at the September convent In 1892, F.-. Doumer, president, had proposed and made a proposal from the L.-. l'Emancipation, O.:. of Paris thus conceived: "All F.:. M.-. invested with an elected mandate has an obligation to vote any proposal to ensure the Separation of Churches and State under penalty of offense Masonic. A dissenting vote cast by this Brother: will drag out his immediate indictment. A second A contrary vote will be considered an offense of prefirst class (analytical report).

When the bill was introduced in the House, the rallied, resuming the role of lullers that they had already filled so many times, they all shouted at once Voice: It won't work! And even if it did There would be no cause for regret, because the Church of France will thereby regain the fullness of his freedom.

The House began the discussion in the month of March 1905.

A preliminary question was necessary: Parliament
Does he have the right to vote on a law that affects so many things?
Interests without consulting the country? We were careful to avoid that.

The Marquis of Rosambo expressed the opinion that the group Catholic opposition was expected to refuse to cooperate in whatever way this law applied and to discuss the coneditions of our plunder and our servitude. The
It seemed better to him to leave the meeting room in notifying France of the reasons for this stance, and only return when the work of the Lodges is done would have been finished. The advice was wise. But we did not

We are no longer in the era of frank resolutions.

In the first days of April, the passage was voted on The discussion of the articles passed by 358 votes to 217.
and at the same time the urgency that pushed back the garansom enshrined in law by a second deliberation.
The lodge had said: Hurry.

Mr. Berthouliet requested that before the final vote we took advantage of the municipal council session and general information to gauge public opinion on this issue. This motion was rejected.

However, during the discussion
the denunciation affair that brought down Mr. Combes.
He is replaced by Mr. Rouvier. When Mr. Combes had introduced the question of Separation to the con- —
In the Senate, Rouvier had spoken out against this. project a vehement speech, ending with this phrasese: "If you make the Separation, I'll f... you."
"You can take your wallet."

Freemasonry commands, Rouvier obeys. The dis-
The percussion continued, and, before separating at the end of April,
The House voted for the famous Article 4. The culminating point-by the law, what she wanted to obtain above Everything was part of the institution of religious associations.
according to the seven articles of Title IV. The factories, at at the moment of dissolving, they were supposed to transmit to them the properties they managed. The large

The objection that was raised was that these associations, such that the law required them, they did not know the hierarchy-Catholic church, nor were they known to them. It was atso many small schismatic churches that there were of parishes in France that they wanted to create. The intentions, the goals pursued by the sect were too clearly revealed. We understood that we were would encounter resistance no less than the one that had been raised by the Civil Constitution of the Clergy. It was necessary to conceal these ends, without abandoning them. believed he could achieve this through an amendment introduced into Article 4, Title II.

Here is the article. Italics mark the modification. modification made to the project presented by the Government and the Commission:

“Within one year from the promulgation subject to the provisions of this law, movable property and real estate of the Menses, Factories, Councils presByterians, Consistories and other public establishments religious officials will be, with all the associated duties and obligations, the burdens that encumber them, transferred under the same titles by the legal representatives of these establishments to associations which, by complying with the rules of the general organization of the cult of which they are propose to ensure the exercise, will have legally formed carried out in accordance with the provisions of Article 17, for the exercise of | cice of this cult, in the former districts of said establishments.

As amended, Article 4 was adopted by 509 votes against 44. These figures show that this article was accepted by the center and part of the right. In the Catholic press, he was received with a marked satisfaction which, in some cases, went almost to the point of enthusiasm: so much so that the spirit of conciliationtion is deeply ingrained in the minds of the day. He had However, the Chamber was asked that the hierarchy, that is to say, the bishops and the Pope would have to pronounce themselves cer sur la qualité des associations qui demander the property of parishes and dioceses. Commissioners Zion and the Government had refused and had proposed this convoluted formula: "Golden Rules-general organization of worship," which was non-binding, whose meaning could be restricted at will. And Besides, who would have the authority to rule on conformity?

or non-compliance with organizational rules?
Could it be the bishops? Not at all; but the tribes-rooms where Jews and Protestants, Freemasons, are present and free thinkers, with an interest in disrupting the E-Catholic Church. "I claim," wrote Mr. Jaurès in his journal, that article 4, as we have voted, will be, before the civil courts, for the pre-Republicans and religious associations
Having them with you is an excellent means of defense.
It protects against the arbitrary political actions of the bishops.

The entire law was passed on July 3rd by 341 223 votes against. It is worth noting that the 341 members of parliament from the majority had been elected by 2,980,340 voters out of 11,219,992. They represented therefore a quarter of national sovereignty, to con-edition of putting women out of it, the young people.

From the House, the bill went to the Senate.
"It is necessary," exclaimed Senator Philippe Berger, "that she be voted on as is." And Mr. Clemenceau, after Having pointed out its inconsistencies, he said: "And yet, I will vote for her because I am caught in a vice which It is impossible for me to free myself, because I
I am a prisoner of my party.

By mid-July, the Senate Committee had adopted,
The bill was passed by the Chamber by 11 votes to 2.

without changing a single iota. A modification, however slight.
Whatever it was, it would have prolonged the discussion. It was necessary. to reach a conclusion as soon as possible. Mr. Briand, rapporteur of the Commission, did not hesitate to give, in its
The newspaper, L'Humanité, gave the reason for this haste:
"The Church today is a sleeping citadel, its its ramparts are devoid of cannons; its arsenals are empty, its armies scattered, its leaders asleep. If we know how to do it, we will fall at the im-provisional on this defenseless citadel and we we will take it away without a fight, "like the soldiers of Muhammad seized Byzantium.

Mr. Maxime Lecomte presented his report 4 the Senate committee in the final days of oc-
In October, he carried out all the modification projects there.
regarding the text voted on by the House: "because," he said,
There wasn't a moment to lose.

The Senate began its deliberations on Thursday November 9th. He too voted for the emergency measure. And yet, observed the Journal des Débats, "the Separation is undoubtedly the most serious reform we
"It had been voted on and debated for a century."

On December 6, the Senate had finished its work.

Fifteen days later, Mr. Veber, a member of parliament, presided over Pantin, a banquet in honor of the Separation.
Mr. Ferdinand Buisson spoke there. “The Separation, he said, requires three new tasks: 1° the
As a legal task, the legislation will have to, within a short timeframe, correct the law (1); 2° the moral task, we must

---

1. The official record of the Convent of 1905: "The Convent expresses the wish that the imperfect law, but improvable, regarding the Separation of Church and State, already voted on by the Chamber of Deputies, i.e. the most adopted by the Senate and promulgated as quickly as possible before the general elections, but that it then amended by the Republican Parliament in a more clearly secular." (Report, p. 402.

CI

to bring the spirit of the law into the family, the detachdear to the Church as well; 3° the social task, the Separation would be pointless if it did not become an instrument.
emancipation from dogma in order to hasten the con-
the pursuit of earthly happiness through social justice and human brotherhood.

In other words, the Separation of Church and State the state's victory is a major achievement in the A struggle between the two civilizations. But in order for

For victory to be complete, it must be for-followed on the political field, the family field and the social sphere. So the Action cried out: "The
The vote by the French parliament marks a historic date.
toric of HUMANITY. The eldest daughter of the Church of-"Here comes the glorious mother of Free Humanity."

Jaurès, taking a look at all the debates which had just taken place in the House and the Senate, on a question of such importance, was doing his journal this constalation which was not our honor :

“Did our opponents oppose doctrine to doc-Trine, ideal to ideal? Did they have the courage to draw up against the thought of the Revolution, [entire thought Catholic, to claim for the God of revelation-Christian tradition, the right not only to inspire and to guide the spiritual society, but to shape the Civil society? No, they shied away, they chi-They got bogged down in organizational details. They didn't clearly affirmed the very principle which is like the soul of the Church.

Alas! those of our representatives who would have been size – if any – to play this role, did not would not have been supported from the outside. The word of Mr. Jaurès, as reported above, was not lacking in foundation. We were in disarray, what am I saying?

t

Our adversaries had the will to do evil, we have
They have lost the will to do good. They are the only ones who are stirring.
were the mediators. Throughout the discussion of the law, every Sunday, in a certain workshop From the Ronsin cul-de-sac, Mr. Desjardins was gathering a about fifteen people, among them Mr. Buisson, chairman of the parliamentary commission, of the abbots.
Protestant pastors and the Jews Joseph and Salomy Reinach. Mr. Buisson was inquiring there about the sacrifices that the Church might make and on the unacceptable provisions for her. Perhaps it was that was where the terms of the addition to were agreed upon Article 4. |

The abbots who were there did not hold the last-

to deny rank among the mass of Christian Democrats, Sillonists, modernists who dream of an order
new things for the Church and for the world.
This mass is irritating the Church in France. Also after Did a few moans announce her intention to to take advantage of the new regime: "It turns out, di-Abbot Lemire knows this from the director of La Croix du Cantal, Catholic newspapers to say that the news
"That law is a schismatic law. Nothing could be further from the truth." They spoke like that editor of the Tribune de Genève, a Protestant newspaper, which said: "The Catholics-They will found religious associations. They will not do not mind living under a different regime than that of the concordat. They will find advantages in it.
and disadvantages. Separation is an expedient It's political; it's not a religious issue. I I believe that Catholics will draw greater benefit from it.
strength from the point of view of faith.

It is therefore not surprising that, under these conditions,
The Weekly Bulletin came to give this watchword:
"It is especially important to prepare, without delay, a unique model, uniform of these cultural associations standards that must be established throughout the territory and to 'agree on the principles which must to constitute them.

Newspapers, sent free of charge to the clergy, furents immediately created to engage him in this path and begin implementing the law. We knew - later than the editors of these newspapers had, received, in order to create and disseminate them, a share of secret funds from the hand of Mr. Clemenceau.

For their part, the sectarians loudly proclaimed that they
They wouldn't stop there. "This is just one step,"
Mr. Bepmale, the deputy for Saint-Gaudens, had said the
The law passed is only a transition: And in Congress, radicalcal, which took place at that time, Mr. Pelletan and all the speakers were careful to point out that "the charter
"It was a rushed and sloppy charter; it was merely a provisional one."

We know how the Sovereign Pontiff brought it to nothing.
the hopes of both sides.

By the same act, Pius X thwarted the plans of the International Freemasonry. She came, she believed-

- reproductions of documents kept in the libraries or other partner institutions. These are indicated by the mention Source gallica.BnF.fr / Bibliotheque municipal of ... (or other partner). The user is invited to inquire with these libraries about their conditions of reuse.

4] Gallica is a database, of which the BnF is the producer, protected within the meaning of articles L341-1 et seq. of the intellectual property code.

5/ These terms of use for Gallica content are governed by French law. In the event of reuse as provided for in in another country, it is up to each user to verify the compliance of his project with the law of that country.

6/ The user agrees to comply with these conditions usage rules and applicable legislation, in particular intellectual property matters. In the event of non-compliance with these provisions, he is in particular liable to a fine provided for by the law of July 17, 1978.

7] To obtain a high-definition document from Gallica, contact usagecommerciale@bnf.fr.

ao 1 1

hooped AAA Ar E ATL Le e fi. Head bb gph a nba ia

APAP HEI Ippe t FE a ARSE e ED Wace ae à AL a? i = ge - tear ye Lake ap: 1s Lu, tte, 1m From A i RC ci To j -TL fh 7 ce r "a ef alm rae F 2 “a oy = j = rj ka on ate ot e

= = gi oo Irm" 7 - E ma ri "T |M EII- TL rr Tre

OK.

"ji . erin a L PTIT ety a t

tyr wale ch L Al

rile peal ÈS BAT
RES –
Pe SMILES fy –u
At FOCRELE
vf 7: 11

has 1.1 vr k 1 HI L– a = ee of at oF. mh

–

UMONT

HQ
~)

uara

Edo

r

thy * ait T in

ET Ss Ee es

er z
I
L dp
c OO bh at te ak samadhi e S ig ant to As yet x ee a' '

THE Mes

BORN

Tyranni

1 hour

x

that

4 onn

THAT

E
F
1 aq
t
4
+
— Tr. c—
CITE 1 Mi
fr
TEL Tel gat” ' fri wag wh _ Ta, . “TF p +

+
4
HAS

YTI

h

#
*%
4 al

ANTI

~
q
4

LIBRAIRII

F
L |
oy +

Ti

Eoy
wef
D
Cu
little cu
aa]
=
number
Cc
z
g” rad
has
>”
E-
=
©
ee
nt
+

1899

LN

Y
was

S

w 1
!
1
z
+ TE
>
> '
LT 7 L
j AT 4 =-
- + NE
hy 1 1
1 = ` = Jc 1 y 7 + ro? . oF
'I a = i
1 L the ` - t + ol
- ; 1 7 4 F i
1 a - Eu 1 LI
+ os a J
4 hr.
— 14 r -r4 we t

=- r Hr “Fpa PR side 3
i ee ne “+.

EN ee ee ee es LE T ee Ee nl

1.

striated AND

Fr

+

—1 ee et ee ee oe 'qu

"has

w L

thd

a +
17 THE

MT Sap

has

TV
The weekend

=

rT
r'
I

Édouard ORUMONT

OUR MASTERS

—

e tn −4
A oa B |
s poo
ANTISEMITIC BOOKSTORE

14, Boulevard Montmartre, 14

aw

1
T
D]

'lu; ar TT ES 1
-epre rs L wea 4

-
kod
r

we

E

= d or a.

_ 14%
-

27 oa 4
F aft,

Las rele Thar by as

=
+

'f oan
kr na ee LE 7:

al | rk" -
— -= k =
-! a, To

I believe I am doing the country a service by publiant this brochure on Freemasonry-

Neric. She doesn't claim to be complete: this is not a brochure, this it's not one volume, it's ten volumes what it would take to write the history of the Freemasonry, or rather, to clear away the part that comes back in the history of these two last centuries to this association truly extraordinary.

If Freemasonry does indeed affect,
by some summers at the very edge of foolishness and stupidity, it seems also, judging by the political influence-that exercised, directed by invisible leaders possible beings who would be of superior intelligence

— § —

laugher; -perhaps even the superiority of does their intelligence simply consist in their knowledge of stupidity
human.

In any case, once again, I I only offered to put under the eyes of the readers, the elements appreciation by leaving it to them to to conclude, by providing them only a theme for thought.

I even wish that my readers may be happier than me and understand-nent what lies at the heart of the Mason-Nonsense. As for me, I confess I don't can you explain to me the Intel- design lectual and moral to which one can respond to modern Freemasonry.

As soon as the mind stops at this organization-Masonic sation, we are as if struck of astonishment. All the contradictions,
All the hypocrites seem to be gathered together.
to make this work the institution more bizarre, more incoherent, more difficult to define whether it is possible dima-Giner,

These are men who claim to be... defeat all religious demonstrations which they call mere gossip.

vy i ae À _ ' T lu ra 1 a Hi] a ir H r 1 hay ' . ! F 7 CE g

Kt these emancipated men have resorted has a childlike ceremony reminiscent of the savage peoples: they have all sorts of equipment utensils, attributes, cords which bear a striking resemblance to lucky charms and to the amulets of the Botocudos and the Kaffirs

Manitou worshippers...

These are men who claim to be light seekers, who in their baroque jargon is incessantly employed the word of light, "initiation into the light, F.—, received the light, the light of the 3rd apartment, »

And these men shroud themselves in darkness
the deepest ritual and the greatest mystery impenetrable, they make it "tile" in order to They ensured that the Lodge was under cover.
have passwords and passwords rallying cries that must remain unknown from the crowd.

And it is these secretive and shadowy—those who accuse others of obscurantism ism!

These are men posing for the champions of freedom and tolerance rancid and who tirelessly prepare in their Lodges measures of persecution, who themselves declare, by boasting that all the laws of oppression or spoliation have been placed under the mallet before being imposed on the government

ment, —

There is something there that confuses my understanding.

Obviously, and I believe that this brochure, after so many others, will not leave no doubt on this point — the Maconnerie is an instrument in the hands of a few unscrupulous politicians who use naive people to get ahead

has to satisfy their desires. It is indeed na-turel that those people have no shame in prostitute the noble words of freedom and tolerance.

This explanation, however, does not...
Not entirely satisfied, I admit, and not Don't give me the answer to the Masonic riddle.
fuck.

Apart from professional politicians, among the twenty-five thousand Francs-Freemasons, men who may not to be of very high intelligence but who, recruited mostly from the middle class, still have a certain culture, can combine two ideas immediately.

How are these men not seized with Villogism, absurdity, the heinous iniquity of the acts committed against them commit r

How can they not find themselves ridi-asses in their own eyes by demanding for them the privilege of being a society secret in which no one has anything to
to see and by refusing to other citizens
the right to associate as they see fit, to group themselves according to their opinions and their beliefs?

It is understandable that workers, to whom Manual labor leaves little leisure time to read and to meditate, they allow themselves to be... trained by a few rhetoricians possessing a certain gift of gab, that of beings who are impulsive or instinctive people do not realize don't always receive traps that their tends the Jewish quarter.

This is not absolutely the case for Freemasons. While they are, for the most part, of the greedy, sheep-like breed that the clever people lead by the nose, what-some, however, must be in a state to vaguely realize this what they do, or rather, what is done to them to do. How do you explain that these-lane don't get up to tell their comrades-

of: |

"What we do is very simple-" despicable lie. Our reason for being, the mission we have assigned ourselves, has always been to protest against all tyrannies, to claim the rights of man, that is to say, the freedom to believe or not to believe, to think as one pleases,
to raise your children as you Please, by denying these rights to others and by putting pressure on the government to to adopt all measures of perseverance cut and ostracism, we are or "Rogues or grotesques."

Among these twenty-five thousand Freemasons, 1 there are certainly ten or fifteen thousand who are capable of appreciating the devastation exercised by the Jews, who have more or less affected by major scams financial figures of that time, who saw their parents or their friends suffer because of it. For-What did these men leave the Jews?
to become the sovereign masters in the Lodges? Why did they stoop so low?
slowly becoming nothing more than domes-Jewish ticks?

These are the thoughts I've had that my readers will probably like me while browsing this brochure whose only merit is that it is a summary

The Masonic question. All the facts.
mentioned, all the speeches cited are absolutely accurate and it is a duty for I, on the other hand, would like to thank my friend, this excellent-slow collaborator of Boisandré who had the courtesy to collect in the publications Masonic cations, many details unknown to the general public regarding the function-the formation of this unique association where there is a constant conspiracy against freedom from others,

As for me, while associating myself with the courageous campaign undertaken by Jules Lemaitre and pursued by him with So much energy and talent, I don't ask not that we abolish Freemasonry-
nonsense,

I simply want, like everyone else citizens who are aware of their rights, that this monstrous anomaly be stopped This inequality is dishonorable for those who suffer from it:

A secret society claiming arrogancement, its power, constituting, in what-that sort, a body in the State, giving openly giving orders to the government ment, constantly intervening in the public affairs, while the others associations are threatened or banned.

All French outlaws, the Franks-Freemasons above the law, such is the spec-tackling, extravagant and abominable at the same time, which we have been witnessing for almost Forty years, this spectacle must end.
and if all honest citizens know
If he wants it, he will cease..... |

THERE

Masonic Tyranny

——— mE

FREEMASONRY

IS OF ORIGIN

JEWISH

While the Jews are overwhelmingly Frankish-Freemasons, not all Freemasons are Jewish,
Not all Freemasons are either
I know some Judaizers who are anti-Semites.
ardent and convinced, and I make no difficulty-

I must admit that I count myself among my - friends of men to whom "the acacia is known."

It is nonetheless true that the Freemason-

Nerie is an institution of Jewish origin. I would add that she remained Jewish and that she is today more Jewish than ever; everything indicates it, everything demonstrates: its symbolism, less insignificant perhaps, and less ridiculous than one might suppose, his Their function, their tendencies. To anyone who does not grasp this idea that the Freemason-

Rs
miir ie ee ee i pe paa ara- eee ol ee CEE LM

nothing is but a war machine invented by the Jews to conquer the world and achieve their the old dream of universal domination, France-Freemasonry will remain an incomprehensible enigma.
possible.

As I wrote in France-Juive, the Hebrews cannot even be accused of having used a lot of dissimulation when they created this association intended to promote their dissolving action.

Never was a clearer goal indicated under a more transparent allegory. It took all the engineering...
The Aryans' night for not understanding that in inviting them to unite to rebuild the temple of Solomon, they were invited to ensure the triumph of Israel.

Open any ritual, and everything will speak to you.
of Judea,
Kadosh means Holy in Hebrew. The chandeto bind with seven branches, the ark of the covenant, the table in acacia wood, nothing is missing from this reconstruction Figurative representation of the Temple. The Masonic year is roughly based on the Jewish year. The months Masonic are the Jewish months: adar, veadar, nissan, tyar, sivan, tammonug, ab, cloul, tischri,
heshvan, kislev, tebeth, shebat.

The famous phrase that they exchange initiates, and of which Andrieux has spiritually cheered: "The acacia is conmu me," is attached ega-relating to the most distant Jewish traditions.

kd Yw

2 pe and S. LR sh

LS

LUS Bed

The High Freemasons will tell you that the acacia is the golden bough of "modern initiation"; it is

That is why, and because of that, one is a Freemason, when one penetrated the secret.

However, according to Holy Scripture, this tree often referred to as Shitiah (plural Shittine) was considered sacred among the Hebrews. At the command of Moses, the tabernacle, the ark of al- alliance and all religious utensils were compl- made of this wood, and the prophet Isaiah recommended- in turn, it was done to the Israelites upon their return from captivity, to take care to plant in the desert cedars and acacias (Shiftim).

Look at the engravings that adorn the old ones rituals of the high degrees. You will recognize all the symbols of ancient Lot. You will see Moses there. and Elijah emerging from a cloud of fire, while on a banner reads: Reads freedom to the captifs. The passwords are Judas and Benjamin. He It is only a question of Adonai, of the fountain of Siloam, from Zerubbabel who also comes to ask, that the captives be freed and that they allow them to go and rebuild the Temple of their God.

Study the admissions ceremony and you You will believe in Jerusalem.

D. — Most respectable Brother, First Warden, are you- Are you a Grand Architect?

R, — Mighty Master, I have seen the great light of the third apartment,

D. — Where were you received as Grand Architect?

R. — In the high place and the middle chamber,

D. — Why do you name it that?

R. — Because it was the place where Solomon worked- milk at the Temple plan with the Superintendent of works.

D. — What do you do in the rank of Grand Architect?

R. — To build the last building or the third body which makes up the top of the building, to erect Tabernacles, ales adorned with precious and sacred ornaments,

D. — What are these ornaments?

R. — The Ark of the Covenant, supported by two Cherubins that cover it with their wings, the Brass Table, that of the Holocausts, that of the Loaves, and the Lampstand has seven branches.

D, — What does the Ark of the Covenant contain?

R. — The Stekenna, which fixes itself between the Cherubim who cover him with their wings in the Holy of the Saints, on the day of the dedication when he returned his oracles,

D. — What was the principal law given by the Stekenna?

R. — The one that was given on Mount Sinai, kept since in the Ark, which is the first written law.

D, — Give me the sign of this law?

R, — It is given by placing both hands on fa head, fingers open, which marks the symbol of ten commandments.

D, — In what form is the Stekenna represented?

R. — In the form of a tranquil, lying lamb, based on the Book of the Seven Seals.

D. — What kind of wood was the Ark made of?

R. — From Sethim, incorruptible wood, strewn with gold blades...

In adoption Freemasonry, which is the Masonneriety of women, you unravel just as clearly—

LS ca OE ns de ee

Jewish influence, there, it's Judith who plays the main role.

The recipient, her head covered with a black sheet sprinkled with ash, it arrives at the Temple gate. She is stopped by a guard who alerts the second The supervisor goes towards her, and the dialogue begins. The following is committed:

D. – What do you want?

R, – I want to speak to the High Priest and the principalskin of the people.

D, – Who are you?

R, – Judith.

D, – From which nation?
R, – Jewish woman of the tribe of Simeon,

–Judith is then brought between the two colonists– The Brothers and Sisters remain seated, having the right hand on the heart, left hand on the forehead, and head bowed to simulate the painful consternation that we experienced in Bethulia before the exit Judith's tie.

The High Priest again questions the recipedestal: |

D. – What are you asking for?

R, – That you would have the doors of the city during the night and everyone prays for me for five days. Then I will bring you some News from Bethulia, I beg you not to to return the city before that time.

D, – Go in peace, and may the Lord be with you YOU !

She goes out and goes back into the preparation room. She takes off her black sheet, washes herself and puts on her ornaments

dyp a =T

She takes a sword in her right hand, on the left a painted skull, which had been deposited while she was in Lodge.

Upon her return, she shouts at the door: Victory!
Victory! The guard informs the second supervisor.
who tells the first person; the latter informs the Grand-Priest, to whom they shouted twice: "Victory!" at the Lodge door.

Judith is introduced:

The High Priest, — Show us who shouted like that.
R. — It's Judith.

The High Priest. — Bring her in; my brothers and My sisters, let us stand up.

Praise be to the Great Architect of the Universe who has not
He has not abandoned those who hope in him, who has accomplied by his servant with the mercy he had promised to the nation of Israel, and who killed this night, by my hand, the enemy of his people, »

She shows him the skull!

The painful image of defeated Jerusalem appeared would thus be at every moment in the Masonic workthat. It is the Widow whose scattered sons recognize each other.

are born at the ends of the earth shouting: "A word the son of the Widow!

In the ceremony for the degree of Rose-Croix,
To the question, "What time is it?"
answers :

< it is the first hour of the day, the moment when the The veil of the Temple was torn, and: the darkness of the consternation spread across the surface of the earth, where the light dims, where the tools of Freemasonry shattered, where the blazing star disappeared, where the The cubic stone was broken, where speech was lost.

Open now, the Knight's Ritual Rosicrucian; eighteenth degree of the Freemasonry Scottish Freemasonry (Paris, printed by J. Claye. — A. Quantin and Co., rue Saint-Benoit). You will see there that certain Lodges unite with the Jews to celebrate celebrating Easter in commemoration of the exodus from Egypt.

This ceremony is called the VA gape festival is extremely curious and suggestive. Here is the description copied verbatim into the Ritual.

The Agape Hall is decorated in a brilliant manner The curtain is red with white accessories and green {sometimes green garlands and dra- white peries or flowers).

The background is occupied by the Cross and the Rose, either in relief, either in painting. The decoration is completed with the various other attributes of the 18th degree.

The table is in the shape of a Latin cross whose head is to the East,

A large seven-branched candelabra occupies the middle of this table, The chapters which have only one candelabrum a very tall, seven-branched plant resting on the ground, the pla- will be behind the seat of the T.*. Sage or Athirsata.

The glasses must be stemmed to resemble the chalices and be placed as well as the bottles and carafes on a line drawn by two rows of ribbons red,

There's only one loaf of bread for two people, but it is placed on one of the two and not between the two.

ann ert PE Pya re a one —

The Brothers, in the order of the Good Shepherd, leave 'the Temple where the Last Supper was built and go there in pro. transfer to the Agapes Hall

It is the 17th Minister of Ceremonies who is in charge of to regulate the ceremony and to ensure that the established order was observed yant:

The Masters of Ceremonies:

The Standard Bearer;

The Cheys,*. of the Chapter on two lines;

The two F.°. F.°. guardians;

The Knight of Eloquence and the Master of Dispatches;

The F.. F.. to whom the honors of the Orient;

The Wise T.°.

The 1st Minister of Ceremonies leads the procession by one side of the Cross towards the East, that is where it had the ranks opened and we headed west in surrounding the table, so that everyone is at its place.

The 1st G.. (guardian) occupies the end of the Cross on the north side; the second G.. (guardian) occupies that on the south side; the first M.', of the Ceremonies is placed at the bottom of the table, facing the T.°. Sage who sits to the East.

Before we sit down, the wise I.* takes care to pre-
The assistants will come and:

The table is called an altar;

The tablecloth, rug;

Towels, scarves;

The glasses, chalices:

Bottles and carafes, amphorae.

T.°. Sage adds:

– “You see, there’s only one loaf of bread for two.” guests, F.∗, in front of which 31 is placed, must share with F.∗, who is to his right, by prefeeling, in order to break it together, When, in the

– 9 –

During the Agape meal, we will need bread, no one will will be able to use the one that will be brought without having shared by breaking it with another F.°, e Voscœurs, TT.∗. C.∗. Chev.∗., will undoubtedly feel all that is touching and fraternal in this tradition,

"Take your seats, my Brothers, >"

The assistants break the bread, sit down and eatkind,

For the second course, a roast lamb and a The stove was lit. Then the T.∗, the Wise One, said:

– “Here is the Victim who symbolizes the sacrifices” Materials of the ancient Lot and moral sacrifices of the news,

THE LORD WILL PROTECT OUR HOMES AS HE PROTECTED THOSE OF OUR FATHERS; BECAUSE THEY HAD MARKED THEIR DOORS OF THE MYSTERIOUS SIGN WITH THE HYSSOP BOUQUET DIPPED IN THE BLOOD OF THE LAMB WITHOUT TASH.

Knight, guardian of the Temple, make sure if any profane people do not cast their eyes on our work, for the voice The Truth said that the foreigner and the mercenary must to be excluded... »

The Knight, second expert, or Temple Guard:

– “We are safe, T,*, Sage.

The T.”, Wise:

– “Let’s remove the corrupt parts and deliver them to flames.

(He cuts off the head and feet and puts them in the oven-neau). |

– “Now, Chey, let’s continue to celebrate our Agape, BECAUSE WE HAVE FULFILLED THE TRADITIONAL PRECEPTIONAL, |

The fulfillment of this traditional precept is nothing other than the pure and simple celebration of

m 1
Wa

Ī–" m 7 CRE Le .

~~ DM ae are a –

eee
SE rer ie lemme __ Ten
'Fie

mee

the Jewish Passover. It is easy to be convinced of this by rereading the Book of Exodus about how instituted this ceremony:

The Lord said to Moses and Aaron, on the earth from Egypt: “… That on the tenth day of this month each take a lamb for your family and for your home, If there aren't enough people in the house In order to be able to eat the lamb, he will get some from his neighbor, whose house is attached to his own, as much as he You need it to eat the lamb,

“This lamb will be without blemish; it will be a male and he.
will only be one year old. You can also get a kid goat.
that has the same conditions.

"You shall keep it until the fourteenth day of this months and all the multitude of the children of Israel limmo-Lera in the evening. They will take some of her blood and they will put on one or the other post and on the front of the doors of the houses where they will eat it,

“And tonight they will eat its roasted flesh”
fire, and unleavened bread with wild slats.
You shall not eat anything of it that is raw or that has been cooked in water, but it will be roasted over the fire. You will need some of it.
Manage the head with the feet and the intestines, and there is no Nothing will remain until morning. If anything remains that thing, you will burn it in the fire...

“Now this is how you shall eat: you shall gird yourselves your kidneys, you will have your shoes on your feet and your with sticks in hand, and you will eat in haste; for this,
This is the phase (that is to say: the passage) of the Lord.
And I will pass through the land of Egypt during this night,
and I will strike down all the firstborn of this earth, from man to beast. But the blood of which you will have marked the houses in which you will be staying will serve as a warning, and I will pass before you, and you you will not be harmed by the plague with which I will strike Egypt.

“You will keep a lasting memory of this day, and You will celebrate it; through your children, with a worship without END.

“When you have entered the land that the
The Lord will give you what he promised you.
You will observe the same ceremonies, Ff, when your sons They will ask you: what is certain? You will tell them: it is the victim of the Lord's passing, when he passed over the dwellings of the children of Israel, striking the Egyptians
"Hold on, spare our homes..."

Moses, in turn, when he brings to the Assembly of the Elders the orders of Jehovah, do not omit this prescription of the annual celebration of the Easter.

Compare these texts with the ritual formula spoken by the T.∗. Wise at the feast of the Agape, and You will be edified.

By celebrating Passover within their Lodges or their Chapters, the Freemasons recognize and They themselves proclaim their Jewish heritage.
the spiritual sons of Israel confess themselves, the continua-those of its religious and political tradition.

— From then on, what was obscure becomes clear; the indecipherable symbolism that seemed ridiculous or puérii suddenly becomes clear; Freemasonry ceases to be an enigma. We understand his hatred of Christianity, which is, above all, a religious hatred...

= gious, a clerical hatred; one understands the per-her own version of patriotic sentiment, the bass grudges with which she pursues the army, her sect-political rism, its appetites for domination.
This explains the predominant role played by the Jews both originally, during the founding of the main Masonic rites, which later, in the great political events of this century, and up to today, in Panama, for example, and in The Dreyfus affair. One can imagine the fury that arose.
seized the Lodges upon hearing the news of the triumph of Anti-Jewish candidacies in Algeria, outrage to such a degree that they wanted to excommunicate their F. Morinaud, because he had campaigned with
We.

All these facts would remain obscure and incomgraspable if Freemasonry was the association-a liberal, impartial, independent union that it the sting of being. They become of a childlike simplicity-tine as soon as one knows that Freemasonry is not that an annex of the Alliance Israélite Universelle, as soon as we realize that the Lodges are only secular synagogues.

And that's the pure truth, today more than ever.
Never, there may have been times when the element Judaism was more or less expelled from the Lodges by certain generous aspirations. Nowadays, there exerts a dominant influence: he is the master absolute. |

Governed by invisible masters and that no one Freemasonry does not suspect — since the War above all — has become a kind of Ju- — open Daism, a kind of caretaker's apartment lesson, from the announcements office where Jews fraternize with people they wouldn't invite into their own homes.
In this house that they had the art of presenting as the Temple of Philosophy, the Jews have attracted, along with a naive crowd of bra-people easily dazzled by grand words, everything that France could contain of politics greedy old men, unscrupulous swindlers, and ambit-They're ready for anything.

They told these straw men:

Serve us faithfully, be our slaves dedicated and discreet, work tirelessly for [Israel, without ever admitting it, and we fill you-
"Bons of honor and wealth."

Thanks to this tactic, which is incredibly clever,
It must be acknowledged that Freemasonry is no longer at-today that a large Jacobin club appropriate to the tastes and customs of our time, a vaite political and electoral machine that manufactures indi-magistrates, acting on behalf of Israel and prefects, generals, and bishops, deputies and senators, presidents of the Republic-republic and even laws!

Twenty to twenty-five thousand individuals who cannot in no way does it claim to form an elite

Fa
D pee rame ne aoe

intellectual or moral, and who themselves obey even to a mysterious password given by occult leaders command thirty-eight thousand French lions, who have no idea.

In reality, the twenty-five thousand Freemasons — for nine-tenths, at least — are not more initiated than the thirty-eight million laypeople
The only true initiate is the Jew who, sheltered behind the Masonic screen, continues tranby fulfilling his plans, accomplishing all sorts of misdeeds and swears on the memory of Abraham that he has a fraternal soul and that he only dreams of...
Technology and tolerance for all men...

ae
Li
has
X Fa Le
1 "a Lu! Were at

FREEMASONRY IS

A CLERICAL INSTITUTION

What is clericalism? 2

Is it the act of exercising it publicly and freely?
How does a cult work?

Not in the slightest. Clericalism does not

Don't confuse it with religion; it is an abuse of it.
Clericalism implies an idea of intolerance.
of oppression, of usurpation either in the domain
religious, or in the political sphere.
At certain times in our history, it happened that the French high clergy dared to want encroaching on this latter territory. The kings of France they didn't hesitate for a second to let him in in the ranks, and, in this respect, one can say that the most Christian kings, from Saint Louis until-that to Louis XIV, were the most energetic of anti-clerical.

These conflicts between civil power and the Authority ecclesiastical matters are now only distant memories. historical futures. The priest today has no-

a share in the government. Mr. Homais himself would no longer dare to speak of the "government of priests." [He would be too afraid that the answer would be: – “Old joker! Look at the Chamber and

L -$
m PFa hF inky, to a

In the Senate, how many priests are there, and compare the many of these priests are similar to Freemasons, Protestants and even Jews swarming on all benches, »

The Catholic clergy is therefore absolutely harmless defensive from a political point of view. Would he be dangerous, would he prove to be intolerant? sectarian, oppressive in the religious sphere?

No one would seriously support him, no More than me, I imagine, you've never yes to talk about a priest or bishop who might have tried to prevent a pastor from preaching in the Temple, or an officer's rabbi at the Synagogue.

So these are people who are just waiting to to live peacefully, in good harmony and in par-reached an agreement with everyone. Although the Catholicism in France numbers thirty-six million about fifteen full members, and at least fifteen to twenty million actual followers, these good Catholics-

liques even accept the situation with resignation
The erased and subordinate role that is assigned to them, Them who make up the majority of the nation, and even

The vast majority agree to let themselves to govern, to direct, to lead like a herd

by a minority of Freemasons, of Protestants so many and of Jews who, all together, are scarcely one million.

If Freemasonry were what it claimed to be—tend, that is to say the Temple of Philosophy and the last refuge of freedom of conscience, she could probably crush these with his disdain inferior types of humanity who still believe to the "lies of the priest," but she guards herself—would persecute Catholics because they have another conception of the enigma of life than Brisson. She would simply tell them everything simplys ++ es so.. ew ee and,

— “You have to be real fools to believe that there is an immortal soul, that it There is a heaven and a hell, and everyone will be rewarded and punished throughout eternity, according that he will have acted well or badly in this world. We We, in the Lodge, twist ourselves when we speak of this nonsense; but anyway, keep swallowing it, If you so wish, your stories about nannies, since it relieves you and helps you to cope—to end the miseries of existence. We will not beware to prevent you, because we are free—thinkers, that is to say, superior minds and benevolent geniuses who have given themselves a mission to ensure for themselves and others the freedom to to think and to believe, »

Instead of adhering to this tolerated philosophy—
a generous and broad estate which would have won him everyone's esteem, What does Freemasonry do?

Its entire program is contained within the Voltaire's famous letter to Damilaville:

"The Christian religion is a tiny religion, a abominable hydra, a monster that requires a hundred hands Invisible things pierce through...; philosophers must run the streets to destroy it, like the missionaries who They must spread across the land and seas to propagate it.

to dare everything, to risk everything, even to get burned for the "Destroy, crush, crush Virfame!"

— “Yes,” replies the century later
F+, from Lanessan to his illustrious ancestor in the Lodge

The Nine Sisters — we must Ceraser —

the Infamous; but the Insignificant is not the clerical-Is it really God? (Speech by Brother [name missing])
Lanessan at the solstice festival given by the L.'.
La Clémente Amutié, March 13, 1831).

Lanessan, it is true, has not yet succeeded in-that now he has to crush God. He must be excused: he was probably too busy corresponding with the blackmailer Canivet...

Another F.*. took care to specify further better understand the true purpose of Freemasonry, which is not the fight against clericalism and its abuses, but the complete destruction of the reli-Catholic Church, and of that religion alone-
ment.

"The distinction between Catholicism and clericalismlism is purely official, subtle, for the purposes from the tribune; but here, in the Lodge, let us say it proudly

For the truth, CATHOLICISM AND CLERICALISM DO NOT
They are one. (Chain of Union, July 1880.)

These confessions are not only revolting by their monstrous hypocrisy; they are remarkable-also characterized by the scent of bigotry.
the hypocrisy they exude. This is not the

Fk
Dag te

Pi

HAS
we -

A lofty and serene philosophy that would speak thus:
Passion and religious hatred alone are capable to utter these cries of war and death.

Sainte-Beuve, who was not a cleric, but an atheist; Sainte-Beuve who feasted at the sausage-his on Good Friday, said the correspondence of Voltaire and L'Alembert-+- ee.. ...

"All the correspondence between Voltaire and d'Alem-Bert is ugly; she reeks of sect and conspiracy, of con-Brotherhood, the secret society... >

It seems that this judgment of the great critic aims at Masonic literature, Browse the "boards >, the rituals, the catechisms, the bul-Latins of the Grand Orient, you will feel it fully nose, "this spirit of sect and brotherhood," which is nothing other than what is called today-of today the clerical spirit.

Have the strength not to fall asleep on the pompous philosophical tirades, have the pa-

intention to read a few pages of pretentious jargon tieux and plat that we speak and write in the Lodges; you will soon have the feeling of having penetrated into an unknown religion, of which you Ignore the God, but which is indeed the narrowest, the most closed-minded, the most intolerant, the most ferocious d: religions. ,

The writers who have dealt with France-Masonry joked > as long as they could
The symbolism of the Lodges. These writers were right.

i ER h re p S

no doubt, since this symbolism is eminent-grotesque lie; but perhaps it escaped them that this base symbolism was nonetheless the representation, the outward sign and . sensitive of a similarly base religion. That is what he im-
It's important to highlight it properly.

I found information on this subject in the brochure of Mr. Georges Goyau, Freemasonry in France, information full of interest.
Mr. Goyau, show us what importance
The true Freemasons attach extreme importance to this symbol-a silliness that excites the laughter of the uninitiated, and what energetic resistance they oppose to the children terrible Lodges who would like to put an end to these old things from another age.

These fierce freethinkers who don't have enough of mockery for the sacraments, have experienced the need to institute sacraments for them who are conferred according to special rites, and to which they They hold fast, we haven't forgotten the famous secular baptisms at the People's House where Clovis Hugh officiated, baptizing the newborns in the name
Blue skies, green trees, and small birds. ©
This was merely a fit of lyricism from a poet who does not fear facing ridicule on occasion.
The G.. O.*. has much better to offer in terms of sacraments.

First, regarding Baptisms, we will mention the Adoption ritual for veiled trotters, composed in 1885 by M. Foussier, Paris city councillor.

The child enters the Temple, where the Brothers are gathered, their heads triple-veiled. The "Brother overseer, on the order of the Venerable, tears from this young front the three "dark fabrics" on which are written in letters of gold: "Misery, Igno`- rance, Fanatisnre.2.

F.° Blatin, who was mayor for a long time and de-radical prostitute from Clermont-Ferrand, composed of
On its side, an adoption ritual, the ¥.+, Blatin does not
He didn't stop there; he is also the author of a Ritual of marital recognition, for the ma-weddings, and a funeral ceremony ritual for white outfit.

In Freemasonry, moreover, there are rites for everything, even for the most ordinary acts and the the most vulgar aspects of life. The philosophers of the Great-East, who mock the Benedictite of Catholics liques, are full of esteem and veneration for The Rituals of the First Three Degrees of the Lodge
Table of F.:. Minot. In this indisconceivable for any Freemason who wants to sit at the table decently, F.:. Minot regulates the way in which the Brothers, after having fraternally shared the
The raw stone (bread) and the sand (salt), must, in chanting their furles (plates) with their swords (knives), to carry certain health benefits with cannons (glasses) of red powder (red wine) or powder strong (white wine), temperate, if they wish, by the barrels (bottles) of white water (water) which are at their disposal.

Do you want some symbolism of order, a little bit?
higher quality?

Read about Freemasonry and the Religious Question

Mr. Copin-Albancetlt's book. You will learn there that "everything has a religious character in the at-Rosicrucian Order, The main emblems there are the pelican, the cross with the inscription Juri, the good shepherd, etc., At each meeting there are agapes, during which the Brothers eat at they each take a piece of brioche and drink a sip to the same chalice that they pass over, after having struck nine times on the shoulder, kissed and having said to himself: v Take and eat, and give to man-Give to those who are hungry! Take and drink, and Give water to those who are thirsty!

Freemasons are not content with having
They have rituals, and also catechisms.
just like ordinary Catholics, and they have even for each grade. Also Mr. Copin-Alban-Celli, who was a Freemason for six years and who speaks, Therefore, knowing the facts, do not hesitate-Didn't he declare that Freemasonry is an association of "bigots"...

Testimonies of this "bigotism" abound, Indeed. One could compose a large volume just with the texts that denounce the clerical-Masonic lism.

In 1895, F.°. Blatin, of whom we have already spoken, declared to the 'Masonic Orphanage that "Freemasonry possesses a great moral ideal which

"It is unique to him." And the Parisian Lodge Osiris ex-firstly the wish that "this great moral ideal" be taught, in every hamlet of France, by a people's advisor, a kind of secular pastor who would be installed, "in parallel with the priestly function-| .dotale. »

There is therefore no longer any doubt: the alleged free thought with which the leaders of the Freemasonry attracts gullible people, just as one Attracting larks with a mirror is nothing but...
Hatred laced with hypocrisy. When the Lodges they work to destroy Catholicism, they are not moved, as they Vaflirment, by the will to destroy forever in people's souls the idea religious. The spirit that animates them is the spirit of competition. They simply want- to substitute one religion for another, to establish altar against altar...

— What then, you will ask, is religion Masonic?

It is difficult to define, since it is secret, like everything that falls under the purview of the Masonry.

The Catholics were somewhat naive to mystify with the stories of Palladism and Luciferianism, I! We must now leave aside the "Satan's religion," which is still a religion much too high and complicated for the taverns and druggist islands of the tenth which form the predominant element of the Lodges,

we J0 —

Should we rather believe that religion maconic is simply atheism and ma- Realism?

I don't think so: materialism and atheism are the opposite of all belief; they are nothing but negations completely incapable of arousing in men: hatred, jealousy, fury, all the violent passions by which one becomes note the Masonic sect.

— But, you will object, there are formal texts...»

Yes, I know, there are texts. That's how it is, by for example, that the Convent of 1877 solemnly voted- the disappearance of God; but it was on the proposal from Mr. Desmons, former pro- pastor testing,

Here is a more recent document which seems to prove once again that the Grand Orient is the declared enemy of all metaphysical ideas:

“We are positivists… We must not…”
to address the root causes... We want to ins-
"To establish the cult of realities..."

This document is taken from the minutes of the Convent of 1886. It originates from Mr. Dide, pastor.

Protestant...

You're starting to find there's a lot of Protestant pastors in rationalism maconic?

That's not all: there's something else.

Gambetta, who was, as we know, of Jewish origin

(the fact is indisputable and Mr. Leroy-Beaulieu himself-(He even admitted it) will put us on the trail of the true religion of the Lodges. In his famous speech by Romans, in 1878, the inventor of Anticlericalism was expressed in these terms at

'* * Regarding the separation of Church and State:

S € + + p

“We cannot avoid continuing solution, or at least the preparation of the solution of Church reports — I know very well that to be correct, I should say "churches" with the State — but if I Don't say "churches," it's because, as you sensed,
I always go for what's most urgent, but justice must be served.

to the spirit that animates the other Churches, and if there is among We have a clerical problem, neither the Protestants nor the Jews are not involved; the conflict is a single, deliberate act.
"ment by the agents of the Ullramontanisne,"

What do you think of this distinction?

If Gambetta were still alive, he would would be careful not to let slip today similar confessions; but, in 1578, no one suspected not the Jew yet. The tribune spoke "covertly"; as they say in the Lodges, and, for this mixed-race person Hebrew, there was undoubtedly a profound voluptuousness ironic to express oneself in such clear language — but clear to him alone and to a few initiates — in front of this flock of goyms who, not content with to let themselves be taken for a ride, still had the naivety of lap-to plead with enthusiasm.

The same was true for Jean Macé and for his League of Education.

. Masonic, Jean Macé said:

a ee ey —4r iH JAT em oe to | ee er,

Jean Macé outlined the plan for his League under The Empire, it was then a good-natured League, having no other objective than the dissemination of the instruction tion, without the slightest political or religious bias sionnelle. In a sort of manifesto-article cited by Mr. Lenervien in his pamphlet: Clericalism

"I am appealing to all those who are involved in designing the League."
future as neutral ground, politically and religiously-speaking rather harshly, and who place the question quite high-tion of popular education, in the strict sense of word, to agree to serve her all alone on this
The terrain, setting aside the rest, would not be the
It would be pointless to try if Von wanted to do something else.

The league membership lists were as follows labels:

"The undersigned, wishing to contribute personallycontributing to the development of education in their region; .ys, declare their support for the establishment project in France of a League of Education, within which he
It remains understood that particular interests will not be served.
bound by no religious or political opinion.

As soon as the Jewish community and Freemasonry had triumphed with Gambetta under the usurped banner of the republic, the good Jean Macé hastened to to drop the mask, and cynically admit that he had worked for the Lodges.

At the Congress of the Marble League, in 1583, this "Old hypocrite declared":

“Yes, what we are doing is a Masonic work.”
No, nobody here will want to give it up because of that.

It doesn't matter to those of us who are not part of it.

4
Ti

x what happens there (in the Lodges) behind closed doors, since

what is happening in our open air is consistent with the law they recognize? The league is a Macox-EXTERNAL NERIE, I have said it a hundred times in the Lodges, from one end of France to the other, »

The League of Education is a "Mason-external negation." That's Jean Macé, the founder even from the League, which proclaimed it: Habemus confitentem reum. The reform of education in which the League initiated is therefore itself a Masonic work.

Now, what was the characteristic of this pre-
A tense reform? Who prepared it, oversaw it?
duigée?

Protestants and Jews!

I have spoken on several occasions in the Libre Parole.
of this anti-French work which delivered the teaching-national movement to cosmopolitans and product

this lineage of Dreyfusard academics that we

we saw people drooling over our army in the company of anarchists and German Jews.

Three men were the main protagonists.
of this criminal enterprise, and there were three Protestants, former pastors more or less defrocked
ques. |

It was Buisson, the director of education.
primary school, which gave this advice to French mothers Caises: |

"When we no longer see thousands of onlookers"
attend military reviews; when, instead of the ad-

As you will have become accustomed to the image of the title and the shoulder pad, you wil
The child said: "A uniform is a livery and everything
"The livery is ignominious, that of the priest and that of the..."
"soldier, that of the magistrate and that of the jackal," then
"You will have moved public opinion forward."

It was the unctuous Pécaut — the one who died of Aovleur because Dreyfus was not rehabilitated quite quickly, and who shed her last tears that day of the arrest of the "divine Picquart" — who admitted in 1879 that the so-called reform of len-teaching aimed to complete by a means diverted the religious reform begun at AVI' century by Luther and Calvin. This Pecaut, in quality of inspector general of public education that, was tasked with reorganizing our Nor- Schools males.

It was the Prussian Steeg, director of the Museum educational and school of Fontenay, which left-knows how to escape this cry from the heart on the eve of inter-:
to undertake the great work of secularization:

I feel more than ever, through all of this and
In all this, a Protestant pastor.

- In the names of those three pastors we had gone look in Switzerland to reorganize the brand-French men, and who only took off their robes to
To avoid being recognized, add those of their countless coreligionists who swarm in the university's highest degrees: the Liard, the Rabier, the Monods, the Girys, the Stappfers, etc., etc. Include the names of Jewish academics, like Weill, who gave his students...

The subject of the composition is The Poet's Dream, that is to say Dreyfus's apotheosis: a grand military parade silence at Longchamp, with Dreyfus on the right and Picquart to the left of the President of the Republic-- that; like Basch, this Hungarian Jew, whose This scandalous attitude nearly sparked riots.
in Rennes...

You will then understand how much Jean Macé was right to say that his League of Education-ment was a Masonic work,

And you will also understand that clericalism Masonic is nothing other than the coalition hateful of both Jewish and Protestant clericalism against Catholicism, which is not only the religion of the majority of French people, but which cons-it embodies a kind of atavistic mentality in France entirely.

-IP

i rc!
Ki-zi
SAN

FREEMASONRY

AND THE REPUBLIC

In the volume entitled: Constitution and Rule-general ment of the Grand Orient federation of In France, there is article 15 which says:

They (the Workshops or Lodges) forbid themselves all debates.

on the actions of civil authorities and any intervention Masonic practices in the struggles of political parties... »

This paragraph contains so many lies So many words.

The truth is that within the Lodges there are few It's not just a question of politics, and that the F.°. not only do they constantly discuss the acts of civil authority, but still do not cease to exercise control over public authorities meticulous and despotic, comparable to surveillance suspicious lance of a master jealous of his rights over servants whom he distrusts. The Masonry, over the past twenty years, has gradually taken over prepared, confiscated the Republic which became his thing, his cash cow, his farm. And that's what explains that the Jews, masters of Freemasonry, be by the same token masters of France.

Texts that could prove this control

__ Ah —

on the government of a country of 38 million of men by a sect that does not have 25,000 their members are as numerous as they are precise.

“The Masonic Lodges,” wrote Anatole in 1887 "From La Forge, they were the cradle of the new France," (Letter to the President of the Council).

“Saint Mason,” wrote the orator of the Convent, the F.:. Dequaire; –– holy, that is to say three once consecrated, you are the great crucified one of the Republic-...that. It's you who suffers for her, it's you who... Focus on yourself and all the beneficial experiences. It is you, devoted mother, admirable teacher of the democracy, which does not carry into the secular world than those of your attempts that succeeded in your "Flanks!"

At the International Masonic Congress in 1889, F.-. Colfavru, who was a deputy for Seine-et-Oise, made similar statements:

“Freemasonry,” he said, “was the nursery where the The Government of National Defence was about to find its firmer and its most energetic representatives, it is From our ranks came the most esteemed men derables of the government of the Republic and of the party Republican.

In 1894, F.-. Gadaud, senator, to whom his Masonic rank was worth the portfolio of the Agriculture, complete and precise, by embedding it in a striking formula, the thought of F.∗. Colfavru:

"The Franc-Magonnerte is nothing other than the The Republic has covered, like the Republic itself is nothing other than what Freemasonry has discovered green. > (Convent of 1894. Official Bulletin).

F.-. Lucipia, a former death row inmate of the Commune and who presides over both the Municipal Council capital of Paris and the Council of the Order of the Grand-Orient, do not hesitate any more than F.°. Gadaud to to recognize the perfect, absolute identification of the Freemasonry and the current Republic.

“For some time now,” he said, “a new spirit seems to be reborn in France, replacing the new spirit which had worried us so much... At the head of the government-In fact, there are practically only Freemasons, not of those Freemasons who, one day having received
The light, they then forgot the way to our workshops.
but Freemasons who remained brothers faithful and devoted... Also, let there be no mistake, We
It is now being said everywhere that we are not "in "Republic," that we are in "Freemasonrynerie > ; the word is from Bishop Gouthe-Soulard, Ek Well, that bishop would be right, sf Freemasonry and the Republic were not exactly the same thing. (Speech delivered at the feast of the Parisian Lodge)
The Fraternity of Peoples, December 4, 1895).

To top off this series of suggestive confessions,
It is worth recalling the very recent declaration de Brisson on the "framework" of the Republican party current, composed — he said — by the Franks Freemasons, Jews, and Protestants. When these
The words were noted; they appeared cynical and caused a sensation. However, we can see from what preceding, that Brissonsebornaita repeat purely

— Af} —

and simply what is said on a daily basis in the Lodges...

Bourgeois's arrival at the presidency of the Council ef + +
marks the apogee of Masonic power.

It is important to realize, in fact, that there is Macon and Macon, like there are faggots and faggots. There a — as noted by Brother Lucipia in the speech, a fragment of which we quoted earlier-ment —ila a les vrais Maçons, les Maçons fidèles.
active Freemasons, and then there are lukewarm Freemasons, the Sleeping Freemasons. There's the Brisson-type Freemason.
and Bourgeois, and the Macon type Méline and Félix Faure. The first fruits are in high esteem on the street Cadet, and the others are kept under close watch; they have not the confidence of the Order.

Félix Faure, however, was considered a true Brother.
the day he called Bourgeois to power. It was in the Lodges, from one end of France to the other,
a long cry of joy!

The president of the Grand Symbolic Lodge made the interpreter of the universal jubilation of the sons of the Widow at the banquet that was offered in the month of...
December 1895 to one of the cabinet members, the FE... Meter...

"You will find it perfectly natural, my friends," he said, "that by a logical sequence, I include in the same toast the entire government... The chief magistrate of the Republic, F. Félix Faure, who, in his correction constitutional, did not hesitate to call on the al-affairs
The Radical Party is part of our extended family; I will not have

Tr
4

EM

laughter +

Be careful not to forget it, especially since he is currently under attack.
to hateful attacks that deserve nothing but contempt,

They are also part of the extended family, all the members of the Cabinet, with two or three exceptions. As for
To the latter, it will suffice for me to cite as minister Prof.* (layperson) Mr. Berthelot, in order to have the right to to say that all they lack to be one of us is the formality of initiation,

Yes, we have a Freemason government.
and Freemasons worthy of the name...

The reason that earned Mr. Berthelot in particular This very flattering quote must be sought in the affinities of the former Minister of Foreign Affairs

I deal with the Protestant and Anglophile party. I don't I don't know if Mr. Berthelot, who naturally gives himself, as a freethinker, belongs or does not belong to the Reformed religion. In any case, one of its
The daughter married a Protestant. He's part of the family!
Brisson would say... | |

The Winter Solstice Festival of the Lodge La Justice
This was another opportunity for the FF.∗ to bear witness their satisfaction and to cover the government of flowers,

At dessert, the secretary excused "Brother Leon"
Bourgeois, the president of the Council who accompanied Brother Félix Faure was traveling, and all the ministers, as well as "Brother Lucipia," who left in Belgium to celebrate, in Mons, the one hundred and sixty-fifteenth anniversary of the Lodge of this city founded by the Grand Orient.

Then Colonel Sever, then a member of parliament for the North.
who was presiding, took the floor and advised everyone

Republicans to unite to maintain the minis--
To consolidate this union and make it more narrow, F.+. Sever even proposed "the institute-tion of a Masonic parliament, sitting in permanence next to the other Parliament and ready to
To prepare for all dangers.

But F.—. Tinière, member of the Council of the Order, which seems to me to be a man of infinite de von sens, observed that there was no danger in the residence and that "sf the Council of the Order were to disappear, it could be replaced by the Council of Ministers.

Brother Tinière added:

"In short, the situation is exceptional for the Freemasons. We could found a lodge at the Élysée Palace; the
The number of masters would be sufficient; the Venerable would be ideal.

It was truly a honeymoon period between the Lodges.

and the Presidency of the Republic. When Félix Faure traveled with Bourgeois, the Masons accouwould meet him; they showered him with attention tions, speeches and "jewelry."

The honeymoon gave way to the red moon, when-that Méline succeeded Bourgeois. Méline is too soft; the FF.'. reproach him for having put himselfeven while asleep. F. Felix was made to feel.
Faure, who had sinned gravely against Freemasonry...
Nothing. He was kept at a distance from now on; silence was done in his name in the x outfits" and, more On one occasion, it even happened that a sour allusiongentle from F. Orator replaced the "batteries" of joy" and the x triple houzé" of yesteryear.

Sorry for this disgrace, poor Félix Faure

He vowed to seize the first opportunity that would present itself as a way to regain favor. At the fall of Méline, he hastened to recall Bourgeois, in ` adding Brisson to the mix this time, so that joy

The FF... was complete. We know that this brand of submission to the will of the Order rather Loubet's predecessor had not fared well...

The next step is to show that when the Francs-\façons boast of being the masters of the Republic, they don't speak only in vain glory.

To conduct a complete study on this subject, it is necessary to-would have lists of all the Lodges and point them on each of them the names of the FF.*. who are ministers, senators or members of parliament, magistrates or officers, teaching staff, function-members of any administration whatsoever, of all those, in short, who hold a share of the Public affairs department.

As we currently have no means nor the leisure to engage in such research ches, we will simply take as a microcosm of Masonic power, the Cham-

the deputies' group where it is easy to get donations born with roughly the correct dates.

In a recent article in the weekly magazine François Coppée wrote that he had under the.

geux a list of 169 Freemason deputies.

There's a good chance that the figure is accurate, and perhaps even an understatement

The author of Freemasonry and the Ques-religious instruction, Mr. Copin-Albancelli, who -on Freemasonry is fine, since he himself... even Freemason for several to estimates the number of Members of Parliament affiliated with the Lodges. In the Senate, the proportion-tion is at least as strong, if not stronger.

These figures already give a singularly pen-ser, when compared to the overall figures of representatives of our two Assemblies. There are in The current Parliament has 581 deputies and 300 senators.
If there are one hundred and fifty Freemasons in the Palais-Bourbon and only about a hundred in Luxembourg, you Can you get an idea of the tremendous action?
what influence do the Lodges exert on the functioning of the Parliamentarism.

Based on the figure of 150 Masons

In the Chamber, Mr. Copin-Albancelli engaged in a truly striking calculation.

"Liya in France," he said, "approximately nine million and half of the electorate, and of those nine and a half million, five one hundred and seventy-six deputies (1), which makes one deputy for approximately sixteen thousand five hundred voters.

According to this proportion, any group of twenty-four thousand voters don't even have the right to one deputy and a half.

mm

(1) The current figure is, as we VP indicate below-above, 581 deputies.

RE ee -

- ek + Rag

—)1 —

The four Masonic federations that have their headquarters in France, not gathering twenty-five thousand initiates, Therefore, they should only be represented by a deputy and a half, and, consequently, there should not be to the House than one deputy, plus half a deputy Freemason.

But there are more than a hundred Freemason deputies fifty.

“Under these conditions,” Mr. Copin-Albancelli continued, while nine and a half million computer-- voters four hundred twenty-six deputies, twenty-four thousand Magous francs They are by one hundred and fifty deputies.

"If we divide nine and a half million by four one hundred seventy-six, the quotient we find gives ONE MP FOR TWENTY-TWO THOUSAND ordinary citizens.

“If, on the other hand, we divide twenty-four thousand by one hundred and fifty, in relation to this proportion of one As a deputy out of twenty-two thousand citizens, we find this other truly incredible one, from UN DÉPURÉ on CENf SIXTY FREEMASONS.

There are therefore one hundred and thirty-seven Freemasons. these twenty-four thousand privileged people accumulate in their small group the same eligibility power as a a mass of three million three hundred thousand voters...

What makes this calculation truly fascinating
In its consequences, it is that every member of parliament – or to generalize. 'out elected – remains after his election, as much and even more than before, the servia very humble man, the necessarily docile slave of Lodges to which he must submit under penalty of being Broken like glass.

"Circulars and printed materials are the

the only things that bind them to their elect-eurs, says Mr. Copin-Albancelli very rightly; but with regard to the Grand Orient, they are bound by oaths, as were, with regard to their rule, these religious figures whom they expelled – for this reason alone – of French territory.

It's not just Mr. Copin-Albancelli,
A former Freemason, who says that. The Freemasons Masons most highly regarded near the Widow, the most loyal, the most active, the most zealous people never tire of repeating it to those of their FF... which electoral success has intoxicated to the point to make them forgetful and ungrateful.

"He is good," said the guarantor of friendship in 1884.
Grand Orient, in the presence of the Supreme Council, it is good that we reminded those of our brothers from time to time that our trust, sometimes naive, has placed at the head of the affairs of the Republic, to which they owe loyalty to the principles claimed by Freemasonry and that their
It is our strict duty to protect those of our Brothers who struggle or suffer for the triumph of these principles cipes...

"If we have been lenient, it is because we are first and foremost peacemakers, tolerant people, and sometimes...
Disdainful. But we mustn't abuse our virtues.
and we must remind those who forget them, their oaths of solidarity; judging Masonically those who, arrived through us and who, without Freemasonry, would not be nothing, they forget or denigrate the AZma mater and finally to be proven by the active intervention of the Masonic authorities-niques among those of our brothers to whom we have given authority over the profane world, that when our adversaries are targeting only one part of the body Masonic, immediately the whole body trembles, ey ye

TER TETE

o eit itss PRIT CE

paf as A Maaa e

T 1 4 - TE -4e 1 DO a Lem ki E + DS nt ET A En QT at SE AL

takes up the defense of the victim, repairs the damage caused and makes the attack wear down, » (c)

“Our Brothers, to whom we have given authority "on the profane world!" This cynical phrase denounces with singular force the narrow affinities that exist between Freemasonry and the Jewish quarter. The Lodges give authority to the Freemason Freemason in the profane world like the Kahal gives authority to the Jew over the Gentile.

"The profane world" is for the Great-
In the East, what "cattle semen" means to the

Talmud!... |
The I'F.*., I assure you, do not pri-
"Wind is not to use and abuse this authority."

- Ask F. Blatin, former deputy.

This Most Illustrious One will tell you that the Council of the Order has "organized, within the very heart of the Parliament, a veritable union of Freemasons," and that what happened to him, Blatin, thanks to the cooperation the union's ration, "to obtain interventions- extremely reflective actions towards the authorities public, to bring hundreds of Masons.

These confessions did not prevent amiable far-hearts like Cornély to make hot laughs when we wrote that a syn-Dictatorship to rehabilitate Dreyfus!...

(1) PM Lenervien, Le Cléricalisnie magounique.

Would you like another random quote?

_ "When all the men who educated us Politicians hold the reins of power; our duty is to reminding them, from the bottom up, of simple advice coni-municipal to Parliament, that Masonic principles are the only ones who should lead a true Brother. both in civil and political life and in the middle from our humble workshops.

"From the bottom up," from the most modest of civil servants, right down to the most majestic of the bigwigs hats, no one escapes control: it is necessary that Everyone moves forward in order.

Deputy Maçon has two mandates: the one he depends on its voters, who don't count. Who is The mandate for laughs, the mandate that can be violated with impunity, for as long as one wants, and the one he holds of his Brothers, which is the imperative and sacred mandate.

If the deputy hesitates, his chain is pulled; he is... brought to Cadet Street, where some Dequaire or what-that Blatin the chapter. The deputy, did he Bourgeois or Brisson himself, only has to admit his mistake. and to promise that he would not do it again. Other-No, there is no absolution!

Ministers, when they don't toe the line, must go through this confession like everyone else Masonic union. As for civil servants,

You can easily imagine how we... Islands treats.

If they are loyal, we encourage them, we defend them,
not only against attacks from the outside,
but against the severity of their hierarchical superiors

DCR

ee ee ee OO ie ee gl

(YOUR

chiciques. You will read in the Bulletins of the Grand-
"It is a tradition of the Order."

If they are soft, if they loosen, we break them.
And nothing could be easier, since it's simply a matter of to wrest their execution from the competent minister through an approach, threatening if necessary, of the parliamentary Masonic group.

The origin of this Masonic union of the Parle-
The comment is curious to recall. It was the infamous Barbe, the Barbe of Dynamite and Panama, here he founded it in 1885 in the Chamber under the name of Fraternal study group. But the Masonic union-Nico-parliamentary has been considerably improved
It has been planned since then. Barbes had only sketched it out.
The H had other unions to organize and, while Remaining a loyal Macon, he succeeded above all in to become an exceptionally distinguished checkbook reader.

Today, Masonic unions, both in part... basic and extra-parliamentary functions
so admirably that nothing is done in France without the permission of the Lodges. This situation which thirty-eight million suffer without complaint
French has nothing, moreover, that should surprise us.
To take, The FF... if we must admit it, we had loyally warned that the return to serfdom was waiting for us sooner or later. One of them declared verbatim in 1890:

… If Freemasonry wants to organize itself, not on the the realm of theories, but on the intellectual ground which

This worries us; I say that in ten years' time, the Magonnerte will have won the day and no one "will no longer move in France outside of us,"

From what "intellectual terrain" was he... tion?

The F.. could not allude to the "intellectuals- "tuels" of the Dreyfus affair, since, in 1890, he there was no question yet of the harmful Jew in the honor of which Reinach "upended" the France, it is nonetheless true that this F.*. had rightly so, and that apart from the Masonic trilogy- that, being Jewish and Protestant, no one in this country no longer has the right to lift a finger.

The French nation, once so renowned for the clarity of his intelligence and for his impatience free from all yoke, it lets itself be led like a flock. by a secret, international, illicit association gale, which does not include twenty-five thousand members and whose management staff — those that we know, at least — is of a universally recognized mediocrity, |

FREEMASONRY

AND THE PEOPLE

Freemasonry has been fond of boasting, since for a time, to embody true socialism in at the same time as the true Republic. This is a double lie.
The truth is that Freemasonry, after having done of the ideal Republic of our fathers most selfish of the unions and the most closed of the monopoles, seeks to absorb by the same means the socialist movement she fears. The bourgeois of Rue Cadet tell themselves that if the ouvriers never had honorable chiefs at their head- They were clean and incorruptible, and they would end up sooner or later. by shaking off the yoke that has kept them chained since for so long. And what would become of the politicians then? Lodge technicians? Where would their clientele be? Who Would they now vote for them?... The true feelings of Freemasonry for the working class are feelings of mistrust and contempt, and we find them expressed enshrined in the very Constitution of the Grand Orient. Article 1 of this Constitution may well... to claim that Freemasonry is "an inst- essentially piilanthropic, philosophical tution

"physical and progressive," there is no need to go go beyond article § to see what's hidden hypocrisy and falsehood lie beneath this ostentation. altruism to which the naive have long let it happen. Article 8, in fact, tells us that to be a Freemason, it is essential, If not to have a storefront, at least to have the A suitably full wallet. He said expressly that:

No one can be admitted to initiation and enjoy the Rights attached to the title of Freemason:

we Sil has honorable means of subsistence ef sufficient, »

This contempt for the poor, within Freemasonry, goes as far as hatred. It seems that, on this point as in everything, the Lodges took the opposite stance of Church doctrine, and that she hates the humble and the little ones as violently as the Christ loved them.

"Never introduce into the Order," said Brother Beur-Nouville, only men who can introduce you "my hand, not extending it to you,"

For Father Ragon, poverty is "leprosy."
"hideous Freemasonry in France." For the F.–. Bazot, poor man, the Mason who extends his hand, is a "malevolent genius" that obsesses you by– anything and at any time.

“Nothing can remove its importunity from you, and His insolence knows no bounds, no obstacles; he is = – Ta tı

[a PEES] Hl

2” rod 27” TV
Her REg ffs aft Peer oy FA Tu,

ann EFA mu TS

at your rising, at the time of your atlases, at your meal, Upon your departure, it would be best to meet his hand.
armed with a dagger; you could at least oppose courage to the murderous sword,

I do not claim that every Freemason
I think so too; I'm even convinced that many Freemasons are beings naturally good and generous; but the spirit collective, the official spirit of the sect is a spirit fundamentally selfish, and when Brother Lucipia, President of the Council of the Order, come and see us to boast of the Masonic doctrine of Valtruism, F. Lucipia is pleasantly mocking the
world.

Masonic altruism, in effect, is a myth:
It never existed. The Freemasons have as their principle of waider that their FF.. : the profane, even those who are very close to them in matters of doctrine, They remain indifferent to them, and it's in vain.
that they make repeated appeals to the trunk of the Widow: the trunk remains hermetically sealed and impitoyably closed.

a After an exchange of observations between the members present with regard to the subsidies to be granted, to
As a propaganda title, the Council adopts the following resolution:
sells:

The Bar Council decides:

"Given the limited resources he can devoted to propaganda, its subsidies will be "reserved for exclusively Masonic works," and that "Under no circumstances will he have to subsidize groups"
"studies whose constitution and the he can approve"

ai

But, but which have no Mac character,*, properly
"said.

When the work of these groups emerges, > writings likely to help the works of Freemasonry.", the
The Council reserves the right to assess whether there is a need to subsidize > to analyze these writings and to determine the quantity of these > subsidies, »

This shows what altruism is reduced to.

conical.
Masonic solidarity — that is to say, the steadfastness mutual rebuke that the Freemasons exchange... — not does not give, officially at least, results much brighter.

The Convent, every September, votes
a general budget amounting to 101,000 103,000 francs. Of this sum, only 7,300 francs-how are allocated to philanthropic expenditures.
As for the Masonic Orphanage, it only survives in expenses of the State, of the General Council of the Seine and the City of Paris, which are contributing to it c firir an annual subsidy of 34,000 francs.
The philanthropy of the Lodges is therefore quite thin, very pale, very insignificant, if one were to compare:

to this Catholic philanthropy which It is called Charity. The FF.*. themselves are forced to agree:

"All the things we want to get into the Jomaine of the creation of charitable institutions and in terms of rescue, we fail miserably.

"The Masonic General Orphanage provides us with them" One more piece of evidence. If our adversaries, the clerics, could measure the futility of our efforts in the way through practical charity, they would find a beautiful a theme that makes us look ridiculous.

“By comparing the situation of the single establishment created by us, counting at the present time twenty-two years of existence, a multitude of institutions by means of of which the Church distributes to a clientele of aid of any kind, our enemies could verifytablement take pity on us,

"We hope that the report of the Finance subcommittee, of which (F. Leven is Mr. President, it doesn't fall on their heads. It matters to the honor of Freethought that Freemasonry "Don't make her laugh."

It is the Masonic world which, in one day of "Frankly," she lets slip this melancholic confession. It is true that to excuse the Lodges in advance of their powerlessness in solidarity works and philanthropy, one of their pontiffs, the F.". Ragon, took care to declare that "the Benevolencesession is not the goal, but only one of the characteristics, and the less essential ones of the Masonnerie. > (Ragon, Philosophical Course and Interpretation) tatif of ancient and modern initiations).

On this question of so-called philanthropy Masonic, you will find very curious details in Mr. Copin-Albancelli's book, which I already have had the opportunity to quote.

In another chapter, the same author shows

With what jealous care the Freemasons keep them closed to the workers the doors of their workshops.

a The minimum taxes for the conferral of degrees,
Article 139 of the constitution states:

For the grade of Apprentice, fifty francs;
For Compagnon's, twenty francs;
For Master's, thirty francs;

For the capitular degrees, up to that of Rose-Cross, inclusive, thirty francs;

For the philosophical degrees up to and including Che.°. Kad.∗. inclusive, thirty francs,

These taxes are payable and must be collected by the treasurer, before the introduction to the tests.

Article 141 states, for its part:

"The annual amount of contributions cannot be less than eighteen francs in the Lodges, of ten francs in the Chapters, and ten francs in the Councils.

These figures can never be understood.
neither the value of the attendance fees, nor the share due by each member for the mandatory banquets.

Membership fees are payable quarterly and
"In advance."

That's not all. There is more, says article 139 already mentioned >, the fees to be paid to the Grand Orient for diplomas, briefs or patents, as well as the price of the Constitution and the general regulations which must to be given to every apprentice during their initiation.

I don't know what material the diplomas, briefs or patents; what is certain-Damn, they're not giving them away. Judge for yourself.

A Master's degree costs ten francs, a brief
From Rosicrucianism, ten francs as well. A patent Kadosh is worth fifteen francs, and one does not obtain a major patent before having released a handsome louis from his purse.

ic.
5 years ago

— "It's salty," you might say?

— Yes; but you may not know that none
The title "can only be given to the applicant after having been signed by the Five Lights and stamped with workshop seal.

A louis d'or to get a diploma signed by the "Five"

Lights, » it is not, after all, the sea at drink..

It is nonetheless true that the worker, who has a point to fill one's pocket with something pleasant prebend, some nice little secular chaplaincy, se almost always finds it impossible to taking out the louis or even the coin so frequently a hundred sous from its depths.

If he has any money left on his wicked bowl-Zaine, he'd rather drink a liter a: ecuncopain or have a bite to eat with your bourgeois: in a suburban open-air café, what to pay: -eight francs to have the right to contemplate Briss: :2 enjambant the corpse of Hiram and dancing | not of the Master.

The worker told himself, and not without reason, that he would be better that for two cents at the Bread Fair ¢« “?spice.

If Freemasonry truly had purity for the people, the feelings she boasted of.
a very simple way would be available to her to make it easier for him Access to the Lodges.

_ This means, the bourgeois of Ja rue Cadet the neck. - are born: they are a bridge found long ago and they-

7 ee i es le ie = -

They even recorded it in the last paragraph of Article 139 of the Constitution, worded as follows:

"The workshops can lower the above taxes to the half of the minimum in favor of the lowtons, the mili-land or sea vessels, and members of the body teaching: either actively serving or retired,"

Thus, the Lowtons (children of Francs-\façons), the military, the professors and teachers who volunteered benefit from the half-price rate. But the same favor is not not stipulated for the benefit of the workers.

For what reasons?

It's still not because we haven't thought.

Indeed, on many occasions, it has happened, as Mr. Copin-Albancelli points out that... tains FF.-., finding this illogical and unjust
a barrier of shields erected against the people at the entrance Lodges have proposed complete suppression or partial rights in favor of workers. But They have always been stopped by a majority hostile which often rose almost to Unanimity.

The main reason for this ostracism, if one had to be called According to the Freemasons, it would be the ignorance of the people.
the inadequacy of his education, which did not allow him-trait not to share the work of a company like Freemasonry. Such beautiful disdain
The intellectuals are the height of comedy when one knows the collection of nonsense and stupidity that The Lodges pretentiously call their “Tra-

"Worsts" and when we went through their lists

'bila ial it st à 1- RARE DATE L followers who are generally recruited 'in the

the most ignorant and backward circles of the petty bourgeoisie.
On the contrary, it is precisely because they fear innate perspicacity and intelligence of the worker whom the big mandarins of the Grand-
The East so stubbornly refuses to open its doors to him doors. They have barely recruited a small core group.
of unenlightened men whom they dazzle with Big, empty words and big gestures: waves, that they terrify with rites and symbols of which These unfortunate people are unable to understand the real meaning, and that they are manipulating at with finger and eye, like a corporal directing maneuvers recruits.
And you would want these cunning politicians, who They only survive by exploiting human stupidity.
commit the egregious blunder of introducing into the middle of these fools who passively obey them, these resourceful and clever workers, like monkeys, these inquisitive and cheeky street urchins whose Its reputation for finesse is legendary worldwide.
whole? That would mean introducing the wolf willingly.
in the sheepfold!
The farm worker often lacks information.
instruction, but his robust common sense allows him-It's easy to see clearly and guess, through all the monkey business and all the phantasmagoria, the

The true secret of the monks, even more hypocritical.
than ridiculous people who hold court in the Grand Orient.
As for city workers, it is not uncommon

*

to meet some who knew, thanks to evening classes and in libraries, to perfect a first Neglected education, and you find some who are, not only very intelligent, but also real-well and thoroughly educated.

Suppose that these people, who are no more beasts that Brisson, Blatin, Viguier and company,

one day they will be affiliated with Freemasonry.
laughter, and that they attend some kind of event.
Their first movement at the ceregrotesque monstrosities that will be displayed before their eyes, will be to burst out laughing in unison; the second move-
The reaction will be to exclaim as one:

— We know you, beautiful masks, what You want it? It's our voices!... >

It is, in fact, up to the worker's ballot that the cunning bourgeois of Cadet Street in They want above all else, but this ballot paper, they they expect the worker to give it to them in complete confidence fiancé and without asking for explanations.
The tactics of the exploiters of the proletariat have Moreover, it's not varied. Today, it is what it is was yesterday.

In the past, the politician would say to the worker:

— Build barricades, get yourself shot in the street so that we might become senators, deputies and ministers.

Today, they no longer ask us to raise barricades, because that's no longer the fashion;
They are only demanding that we continue to vote

ne d + r

blindly for them, despite all their prying eyes and all their apostasies.

If the true people could witness the nausea- the kitchen drain that is made in the Lodges, there would be quickly found. That's why we didn't have it never admitted and will never be admitted, we'll see the "light of the third apartment". All at Furthermore, are we allowed to park it from time to time? in the anteroom, the cap in Ja's hand.

This is how, for example, the Pontiffs of the Cadet Street members view the affiliation of workers to the Leagues of Free Thought. to the associations anti-clerical citities and other similar groups areas that Freemasonry honors with its high moral approval, without however encouraging them- ger — as we saw above — of its subsi- Let the people pay and vote, that's quite enough. good for him; he would have a really bad character- tère, if he did not find himself infinitely flattered and rewarded- thought a hundredfold when the dignitaries of the Grand- The East deigns to make him aware, as to a intelligent and devoted domestic staff, that they are happy with his way of serving...

For a moment, Freemasonry was insinuated seriously of the socialist surge which seemed, a few years ago, having to train the qua- The third state towards new destinies. It had fear that the people, weary of the eternal lies of his exploiters, did not escape them definitively to mount, with leaders of his choice and his class, storming the elective offices and the power.

These concerns manifested themselves in the first time in a precise way at Conventder593,

No one will be surprised to learn that it was a Jew who, first, sensed the danger that cou- would mean the Masonic bourgeoisie would be abandoned by his troops. This Jew, at the same time as he signaled the danger, indicated the means of con- swear :

"There is a social education to be done," declared the F.*. Benoit-Lévy; public opinion is imbued with a multitude of prejudices and gives in to all suggestions; any reform rests solely on order, work, and the dissemination of scientific and sociological truths; IT'S AT THE MAÇG.°. It is up to all of us to provide this education. to compete in it.

This language was admirably understood by PAs-seemed, and F. Merchier translated the opinion of all when he summarized the debates on this point by the following statements:

"From the point of view of the explanations given by our Mr. President, we have since felt obliged to indicate certain points in order to prove that it is absolutely necessary and indispensable that there be a blow to clearer rudder given on the issues side soctales, so as to show that the Mag.*. is not afraid socialism, on the contrary.
"We believed that it was important, alongside the social-revolutionary lism, to establish masonic socialism...; that we take a clearer lead in this movement, BECAUSE WE ARE TODAY AS WE ONCE UPON A TIME THE GENERAL STAFF OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY, >

i,

The whole secret of Masonic politics, which is merely a substitute for Jewish politics, he believes in this admission of cynical naiveté. France-Freemasonry will be whatever one wants it to be, provided that it continues to remain the general staff, Voligarchie who rules and who profits. An opportunist yesterday, she arrives — after having paused for a moment at the radicalism — to socialism, a newer, more political party vigorous and which seems to be on the rise.
With such flexibility, it will become tomorrow again royalist or Bonapartist, as she has been before, if the monarchy or the empire seems to him to have what-The chances of restoration. Only one thing for him.
What matters is that it is today, as it was yesterday. and tomorrow, as today, on the side of the man-che, or rather, that this handle, it is she who

yours.

What she attempted to do in 1893 with the mou-socialist movement which seemed threatening to him its old political dominance, it tries to to do it, right now, with another mou-movement which worries him no less: the movement-in favor of revising the Constitution, and the reform of universal suffrage. In the impossibility where it finds itself to stem the flow of the rising opinion on this side, she wants at least to channel and divert it.

I found a very curious document on this subject. in the Weekly Bulletin of the Works of the Masonry in France, No. 783, February 17, 1899.

0 –

REVISION OF THE REPUBLICAN CONSTITUTION B

PRINCIPLES THAT SHOULD GUIDE IT

1. – On the initiative of the Lodge: The True Friends, then from the Congress of the LLPs of the Paris region 'his, the General Assembly of the G.*, O.. of F.°. of 1898 proclaimed that the Reform of Universal Suffrage and the establishment of proportional representation should be placed at the head of any revision project constitutional.

2. – La L.*. Les Vrais Amis, continuing her studies, expressed the opinion, in its meeting of January 26, 1399, that the current situation of the parties, their growing influence of the Reaction: and of Clericalism, the inadequacy of studies conducted on constitutional matters among the Islands advanced party groups, the absence therefore, for these parties, a common constitutional program and precise, on the contrary, the agreement of all our adversaries on principles of revision whose triumph would ensure Your ruin of the Republic, everything makes a duty to the Republic-worthy citizens, to show themselves as adversaries resolved to reject any proposal for revision by a Constituent Assembly,

She thinks that it is necessary to prevail at this time
The principle of partial and successive revision, for the 10 yen that the Constitution provides us currently governs.

"She is, therefore, of the opinion that all groups Republicans agree on certain points at revise, in order to successively create the platforms electoral elections of future elections.

aT ki
HAS;

— Fi —

I don't believe it has ever been published.
document that better highlights the tar- insignia tuferie which is the dominant characteristic of Masonic temperament.

These are people who are radicals, because the Masonic politics and radical politics are confused; these are people who, for twenty years, have as a fundamental article of their program the revision of a Constitution that they were the first to declare reactionary and contrary to proper functioning of any republic worthy of that name. After hearing them say that this
The Constitution of 1875 is a monarchical constitution.
a barely disguised chew that prevents all
The nation has finally come to believe the reforms.
their cry:

— Well, what are you waiting for to revise?
We are with you, we think like you
You. When will the Constituent Assembly be elected?

Now, it's Freemasonry ~ - that is to say, the radical party—which no longer wants revision.

For what ?

Simply because the radical party is wealthy, now; the fierce revisionists of yesteryear are today beati passidentes who no further review was allowed except for Dreyfus.

But the people don't understand anything about this.
palinode; he insists on this revision which he has been given

-r nl
fs, rr F
— Jah 1m - yarr ee

so often spoken of and which has been pro-
He demands it; he claims it, he insists...

So be it. The street politicians
Cadets are too skilled to break abruptly
They are keeping a low profile with the electorate.
know that you can't catch flies with vinegar, and, after pretending to believe that the supporters of revision by a Constitution-killing are conspirators in disguise who want-slow to the very existence of the Republic, the good apostles offer to write it themselves-even the program for a good little revision,
Not malicious, which will change nothing but words and appearances and, above all, not to take away from them will not see, to them, the monopoly of the plate at butter... | |

— It's the old classic game, you might say.

— No doubt, but this old game doesn't have any less always successful so far. He obtained in particular a complete success with the socialist party list, thanks to the Vindignation of bourgeois leaders like Jaurès and Millerand, who did not hesitated to hand over their troops to Ja I'ranc—Maconne-laughter and to the Jews.

Once again, the workers let themselves dazzle with words. Instead of listening to the warnings-Jules Guesde's weavings, they lent their ear to the tirades of Jewish leaders who have confined themselves born themselves to repeat, 'by commenting on them and by embellishing them, the hypocritical Masonic protestsniques,

ass oué 1°

Jaurès and Millerand, moreover, took good care of themselves. They decided to tell the workers everything; they spoke with enthusiasm for the resolute anticlericalism of their FF.-., but they did not add that in the name of the superiority of their philosophical doctrines, the Lodges, recruited exclusively from the bourgeois class geoise, are claiming the direction louder than ever tion of the socialist movement.

Jaurès and Millerand said nothing about the efforts tempted as early as 1393 by Freemasonry, under the auspieces of the Jew Benoît-Lévy, to institute — according to the expression of F.*. Merchier — alongside the social-Revolutionaryism, Masonic socialism.

In their countless articles, in their dis- - course, in their lectures, they never makes the slightest allusion to statements in the kind of the following, which leaves no room for doubt doubt about the goal that Freemasonry pursues in pretending to adopt socialism:

She (Freemasonry) wants to organize soctalism In practice, channeling social demands, their prioritizing the direction that will emerge from these claims cations the gospel of tomorrow... (Speech by F., Dequuire, President of the Convent, September 26, 1896)...

The workers, as I said, have sharp intelligence and penetrating, but they also have a great depth of naivety that sometimes makes them resemble children Fantas. They are beings outside, beings of loyalties that cannot bring themselves to believe in the bad faith in others.

Oo

Hollow eloquence, but sonorous and pompous de Jaurés, somehow hypnotized them, and while, delighted, they listened to the music of Beautiful, declamatory phrases, the Freemasons and the Jews have very gently... ~ channeled them.

Dreyfus alone benefited. Until... smell, from this pipe...

FREEMASONRY

– AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Much has been said about the role of the Jews and the Protestants in the Dreyfus affair. It is time to also state with some precision what has has been the attitude of Freemasonry in this vast anti-national conspiracy.

What happened to the Freemasons was... product for Protestants and even for the Jews. A few of them—too few.
many – have managed to break free from the sectarian spirit, had the energy to repudiate guilty solidarity-rites. Those people remembered that they belonged France before belonging to Franc-*tacon-Nonsense: they are good citizens who have a right to the esteem of all.

Official Freemasonry, on the other hand, did not hesitate for a single moment to join forces with Reinach's paid agents, with the allies of Panizzardi, Schwarzkoppen and William II.

Freemasonry, mind you, does not
He could hardly do otherwise. I explained to you that Freemasonry was of Jewish origin and that the Jews, especially since the War, were the

They were virtually absolute masters of the Lodges. They did not have as rivals, or rather as emulators, that some Protestant politicians, pastors more or less defrocked than the Desmons and the Dide, who are 'happy to find in the Grand Orient an outlet for their proselytizing urge at the same time as a way to satisfy their old hatreds and their old grudges against Catholic France lique.

Ruled partly by Jews, partly by a
A group of fanatical Huguenots, how did France-Could Freemasonry have avoided taking made and defended Dreyfus, while the Jews and the Protestants had made the Dreyfus affair their business?

The Jews, moreover, had the precaution of app-Peel the Freemasons to the rescue. May 29 1897. Yves Guyot, who is himself a Freemason of the more distinguished, sketched in the Srèc/e a first sign of distress:

The Freemasons having the same enemies as the Israelites, he wrote, one hardly understands a tactics that leave them at the mercy of their opponents, at instead of uniting them against these, » |

A few months later, Mr. Francis Charmes, who never passed for a disguised agent of the Je-sequels. noted in the tsraclite Universe, journal conservative principles of Judaism, and quoted in the Revue des Deux-Mondes the following appeal, as curious for its aggressive nature as for the oddity of his style:

So to you, Jews, Protestants, Freemasons, and Anyone who wants light and freedom, to hold you tight elbows and fight so that France, as said one of our prayers, retains its glorious rank among the nations, for already a dark raven has planted its gritles on the skull of the Gallic rooster and sets about his duty to peck at his eyes.

The "Sons of the Widow" may pride themselves on materialism and atheism, they hastened to repeat the prayer of the Universe tsraëltte, and to accoulaughing in the company of emigrants from overseas ghettos Rhine to the rescue of the unfortunate Gallic rooster who, fortunately, it hasn't been completely blinded this time...

It was undoubtedly the Lodges that gave rise to ended the Brisson-Bourgeois ministry, first half Ministry of treason which initiated the review against the will of the House, against the will of the country and against the law.

While Brisson and his accomplices were working openly to dismantle the national army for the benefit Jews, Germans and English, France-Freemasonry lavished its encouragement upon them and his excitements. Texts abound and we have that the embarrassment of choice among the many dowhat is available to us.

On July 25, 1898, the Congress of the Lll.*. of the The Paris region unanimously votes for an order of day which must be handed over to Brothers Brisson and Bourgeois by the President of Congress, accomaccompanied by Brothers Desmons and Delpech, senators, President and Vice-President of the Council of the Order.

— TS —

The order of the day was thus conceived:

"The delegates address to Brothers Brisson and Bourgeois, an expression of their fraternal sympathy... [ls know they can count on them... They ask themtooth to act with the greatest energy towards those who conspire against the Republic, against justice and against freedom. +

Some time later, the Tolerance Lodge "throws the cry of alarm.

“An innocent man condemned for another’s crime,” she said, is in prison; he is being held there because of his party Jesuitism exalts it. Jesuitism allied with militarism, and Thanks to the cowardice of the rulers, will it be trionPhant?

This Lodge of Tolerance, despite its name,
- showed, it must be admitted, a singularly harsh for the FF... Brisson and Bourgeois who do not deserve-They were not about to be accused of cowardice at that very moment.
where they did so well for the Jews and the cosmopolitan. The Tolerance Lodge was also unfair to the FE. who remained faithful to their duty pa-Triotic. such as F.*. Edmond Lepelietier by .
for example, who, although 33°. and a former member of The Council of the Order of the G.. O.. has not ceased to comto fight like us against the Dreyfusards and for the army. Would Brother Edmond Lepelletier have...

So, he too, affiliated with "Jesuitism"?

In any case, the Convent did not remain heeded the alarm raised by the Tolerance Lodge.
{i ¿asa like this Lodge, so well named, that The time had come to make some "resolutions" manly resolutions” and that these manly resolutions > should to then be "brought to the public authorities"
like the intangible desires of the Mae.:.
"entirely." An agenda to that effect, proposed by the Council of the Order, was adopted unanimously approved by the assembly on September 19th.
1899... |

You've made up your mind, I suppose. And it is There's no need to multiply the quotes. Let's also note, If you wish. To increase the numbers, the addresses of congratulations voted to the vile Zola, to the mo-his trial, by several Lodges of Paris and from the provinces, notably through the Lodges of Le Puy.
and from Clermont.

The Soctale Justice Lodge (O.*. of Paris)
addressed z to the great writer Emile Zola, ex-pressure of his sincere admiration for the act of covering enraged man who had him condemned by the petty thugs
"trembling geois (src) of the Seine jury."

She also addressed ~ the expression of her my deepest sympathy to Messrs. Picquart and Grimaux;

she declared the deputies and senators who, through their votes, maintain a injustice and inequity to cover up anyway

a government in dire straits (the Méline ministry) and a general staff guilty of this monstrous-site A.

At the time when the author of "J'accuse" was receiving from the Jewish Lodges this tribute of praise, all the reptilian press of Germany and Italy the neck-true flowers, along with a rage new she overwhelmed the French army with outrages-French and the Seine jury.

The National Zeitung described the verdict as condamning Zola of x victory of fear”; the Gazette de Voss wrote that the jurors, with the help of a cynical judge, had strangled justice in front of the idol of a misguided patriotism. The Berliner Tageblatt qualitiait ics officiers français de "Selling praetorians," and he threatened France with the war.

In Italy, Zr1buna, Crispi's newspaper, the quintessential Gallophobic organ, titled its Article x Long live Zola! » Amidst dithy- praise
In Rambics, Zola was criticized for his moderation.
He didn't dare go all the way, the author said.
from the article. "He did not accuse the real one, the only one, the
the main culprit in the judicial infamy that has been "Committed: French militarism!"

By mixing his congratulations and his insults as well each more odious than the last, adding its own delations and its threats to the shouts and to cries of hatred from the Jewish and cosmopolitan press, the Freemasonry has remained in its role as an association international cooperation fallen into the hands of the leaders Giants of Israel.

She remained in her role even on the day when, through Brisson, she made the tri-House bune the gesture of distress for rally the wavering Masonic deputies and save the Waldeck-Gelliffet ministry which had promised Dreyfus's acquittal to the Jews and to Germany Magne.

It is she again, in her capacity as a company, who Crete, for whom mystery is the very condition of life, which tried to stifle the Rennes trial and to settle the Dreyfus betrayal within the family as we had liquidated a few years earlier-before, the thefts and blackmail of Panama.

— # The light. All the light. Floods of "Light!" they had been bellowing in unison for two years.
companions of Reinach and Zadoc-Kahn.

On the eve of the trial, this wonderful enthusiasm fell suddenly. All the loudmouths of Justice and of Truth they spoke only in hushed voices, in the small, dark corners. Clemenceau, for a little, would have rewritten his 1894 article on the necessity-the closed-door setting, and Reinach, the spy's son-in-law The Prussian was ready to invoke the Superior Vintérct. patriotism.

The dream of all these jokers would have been that each
The session opened with these words from the president Jouaust, who was also a Freemason, at this that we are told who voted for Dreyfus:
Of

— x F.*. First Supervisor, make sure that We're under cover!... »

The nation's patriotism thwarted these intri-Dreyfus was condemned again after twenty-nine more damning hearings for him each one as good as the others.

But the Jewish-influenced Freemasonry has not laid down its arms.
in the face of this verdict, which was acclaimed by the entire country.
Read the report of the last Convention, read In the Grand Orient Bulletins, you will see...
dithyrambs in honor of Dreyfus, this martyr,
of Picquart and of Schevrer-Kestner, these heroes;
You will find the advertisement on each page some conference against militarism... >

Already, the bandit from Devil's Island has been pardoned.
by Loubet. This is not, as the Dreyfusards themselves, that's just a first step.
The Synagogue and the Lodge, in alliance, demand lam-
The traitor's snist. You'll see that they will end up to obtain it.

FREEMASONRY

IS A

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION

€
Freemasonry is an inter-association
national; she doesn't hide it, she boasts about it:
It even boasts of being universal.

Open the Grand Orient Bulletins, browse-
Read the Masonic newspapers: you will see that it
The issue of #relationships is at stake at every moment.
exteriors >.

In the Bulletin of the Grand Orient of France (Official Journal of the Federation) March issue-April 1894, I read on page 47:

"Fr. Viguier reads the account at the Council of the reply addressed to the Brothers of England and the documents attached to this correspondence.

He also reports on the sending to the Lodges of Grand Orient of France in Australia and New
"Zeeland of the € prior to the initiation" in English.

He makes known the measures prepared to give satisfaction of the desires of free spirits in the Anglo-Saxon countries.

e. Expenses for translations, printing, etc.

will be supported by funds allocated to propaganda outside, »

Masonic politics abroad, we will sees, is not simply a theoretical policy,
a policy of studies; it is an active policy,
powered by a special crate.

Foreign lodges maintain relations with the Grand Orient maintained a regular correspondence, which is not just a correspondence masonical, but a political correspondence which may therefore be of more or less interest directly French interests.

a Le F.. Geraldino, in a communication frat.., announces the sending of eight copies, with tra-French translation, of a resolution of the Sup... Cons.
of Colon and Cuba, relating to incidents affecting the Sup.*. Cons.". Dominican... (Bulletin of the Grand-Orient de France, October-November 1893, p. 665.)

"The Spanish G.O. sent a letter on November 2nd to G.'. O.*. from France sent a telegram of sympathy France regarding its attitude towards Spain,
On the occasion of the Moroccan incidents, this demonstration-tion was followed by an address signed on the 6th of the same months by a number of "'Atelters national a this Power, and animated by the same spirit, »

It sometimes happens, for communications of origin-a more delicate matter, no doubt, than the Council of The Order is much more restrained in its details
Again,

We read, for example, in the Bulletin from July 1893, under the title: Foreign Relations, _the following lines:

"What we can say about our relations with the Masonic powers from abroad, that is, despite regrettable combinations that may have, at one point given, through timidity of mind, to begin to take shape with the aim more or less overtly, to halt the rise of the mind Regarding the progress of the Grand Orient of France, there is nothing that may cause concern for the Federation, and we can to add that we maintain, with the Powers more considerable from the point of view of influence on the lay masses and moral authority in the world mag.*, the most courteous relationships and the more friendly.

“On this subject, moreover, our T.°. C.°. F.°., President of [a commission on external relations, you will give verbally, if you wish, some ren- details that cannot find space in this printed report.

What, then, is the nature of these relations of the G.. O.'. with the Masonic Powers internationals that are only spoken of in hushed tones in the Official Bulletin, and on which it is not Is it permissible to explain things only verbally?

We know nothing about it; but we are in the right to believe these relationships are suspicious, since we They hide them from us with such care.

Moreover, if Freemasonry is still and In all her mysterious ways, she is especially so in her relationships. exterior details that she carefully covers with a impenetrable veil.

-“In 1894,” Mr. George Goyau tells us in the bro-nn more TS TH Perr me mm rade mn —

the church that we have already had occasion to mention, the Mr. Dequaire's report on foreign relations, "cannot be printed, due to the delicate previews" that it contains on the relations of the Grand Orient of France with various federations of the Universe >”. In In 1896, it was mysteriously transmitted to the Commission external relations, a board relating to Spanish and Cuban affairs. In the Convents more Recent events have been met with silence.

“An international organization, located on Cadet Street, consults with Universal Freemasonry on a ~ policy external" (I'm using Mr. Dequaire's term); and the Masons scattered throughout the territory are kept out of it.

"Is it Paris, London, or Rome that gives the word order? This "Western policy," which some Historians of the present day advise France, Could this be the policy of the Grand Orient? The city with seven hills, by a kind of fatal predestination to The title of queen of the world, would she inspire [against-church, of which Mr. Bourgeois was sometimes the missionary Transalpine, as it inspired the Church? We are reduced has some hypotheses... »

Jules Lemaitre, in his brochure, poses the same questions and does not resolve them any further. It seems to me, however, that, in this line of thought, we can allow ourselves something other than conjectures-tures and even go so far as to make very similar presumptions The truth. The dream of Freemasonry is essentially nothing other than the old Isaël's dream of the cops from which she emerged: as we have demonstrated: it is always the eternal dream of conquering the world, of the universal domination, and Masonic politics, like Jewish politics, has no other goal than the realization of this gigantic plan. Here is the admission that fell from Masonic lips:

OS ae © T

Let us work, my Brothers, with Universal Freemasonry. saddle, to hasten the hour when all peoples, having arrived parune

As a logical evolution towards a republican form, they will group together naturally under Masonic aegis to form the United States of Europe.

"Then the magic triangle will illuminate with its root." clarity humanity gathered in the Temple of Justice and of Ia Ratson in the same feeling of concord and of love, and it will no longer be the angel's Mamboyante sword

jealously guarding the gate of paradise lost, but, at

On the contrary, our blazing Masonic star illuminating From its liberating glow, the entrance to paradise regained. (wide-) open to all peoples, now free and masters of their own destinies.

Then the Sage's word will be fulfilled: Humanity the whole land will be the promised land, and you The whole world for Jerusalem >.

A rabbi delivering a speech to the Committee of PA / France, universalist Israeli, would not hold another language. The lines we have just read However, they are not from a rabbi; I borrows from a speech given at the Order's Festival from the Lodge Les Arts ct Amitié. O.. of Aix, the June 1, 1893, by Brother Beaulard, orator of the Lodge. Doctor of Science, Associate Professor of the University.

What is worrying about the policy that has the aim of realizing these dreams of grandeur Masonic, it is that this policy has

we, wretched profane people, without having a voice in the chapter, without the rue Cadet ever deigning consult us or notify us in any way of the fate that awaits us.

Siles Freemasons were involved in politics For them and them alone, it would be perfect: The idea of sticking our noses in there wouldn't even occur to us. But we know that this is not the case.

"The Republic," said F.-. Gadaud, "is the Freemasonry has discovered, like Franc-Freemasonry is the Republic in disguise.

If Freemasonry is truly the Republic-
The republic has covered it, it is also covered for the exterior.
laughter only for the interior. So it is she who stipulates our treaties and negotiates our alliances, as It is she who appoints our magistrates and who makes and defeated our prefects.

This explains certain political events modern ones that are impossible to understand otherwise. This foolish and harmful policy of nationalities, which brought us Sedan and which we will perhaps be even worse, was undeniable-a policy desired by Freemasonry. In In vain Proudhon fought it with all his might-the wisdom of his logic, with all the foresight of his prophetic genius; in vain he cried out:

"I understand the new insistence with which England continues the formation of Italian unity,
What I don't understand is the attitude of the press.

French. Italy, with an army of three hundred thousand men, diminishes France in every way. We
We are too close to Italy, we have returned the favor.
Too many services for her to love us, the ungrateful one.
Study in politics is the first of rights and duties;
the coalition against France now has one one more member.

It was all in vain. The "Italians," who were merely agents of the Lodges, they reminded Napoleon II's Masonic oaths, and Napo-Leon IH had to comply.

If Freemasonry was able to exert this influence on a powerful sovereign like Napoleon III, what should not be his authority over persons feeble swimming, on instrumental beings like

Hanotaux and Delcassé ¢ |

It was decided that the French squadron would go to Kiel;
abandons Fashoda; we'll go greet Guillaume IT at Bergen; the foreign minister of France suddenly leaves for Saint Petersburg.
We see these events unfolding as the images from a cinematograph and, if by chance,
In the House, a member of parliament takes the liberty of asking a
The question is, one hundred and fifty or two hundred deputies?
Freemasons unite to shout to him with one voice
"Hush! You fool, you are embarking on a
This is volatile territory; be careful not to compromise it.
through imprudence the most serious interests and the most sacred in the country... »

It is only in the Grand Orient, in the attire secrets that we can have some explanations for

—r rrr —
NT
- -pms +! n ee ee ee

'on these very delicate matters. What the representatives-so many of the people must never know under no excuse, the Widow's Sons spit at you-tent in the ear, with a mime as solemn-nothing but ridiculous.

Neither you nor I will ever know what Delcassé went to Saint Petersburg; but The Viguier, Dequaire and Thulié families know it as well as Delcassé himself, and perhaps They even knew it before him.

There they are, on Cadet Street, a few dozen of them.
illustrations of this kind that often stand out shaping the destinies of a country of 38 million of men who was once considered the most intelligent of the earth...

F

Through a singular illogicality, Freemasonry who is an internationalist to the point of wishing ardently 'the disappearance,' – or if you prefer –– the merging of homelands is at the same time a fierce sensitivity to anything related to patriotism.

We remember the emotion that gripped the street Cadet when, in 1893, La Libre Parole published the famous summons board of the R... Ls. The Globe, Or.∗. of Vincennes, on which. figurait, on the agenda of September 3, 1550, the announcement of a conference by F.∗. Trollet on the "Reasons that should be used to destroy France, AT LA Fraxc-MACONNER(E ESPECIALLY, gue l Alsace-Lorraine) Allenrande residence. x

The high priests of the House donned their robes again. They hastened to don their most solemn aprons and adorned themselves with Their finest jewels. Thus equipped. tls sas-appeared under the presidency of Paul VI-Guier, President of the Council of the Order. for to address the dangers of the situation as quickly as possible tion.

In reality, the TT... CC... FF.∗. do not appear to nothing at all. They simply treated us, at behind closed doors, of "agents of the Gesu", of ~ hypocrites", "of scandal and insult press," but they do not did not prove, and for good reason, the inauthenticity of the illustration that we had published.

I have before me the issue of the Bulletin of Grand Orient (March-April 1893) where the Trollet affair is recounted, explained and commented on in all its details. I can clearly see indi- protests solemn declarations and affirmations of patriotism written in Lodge jargon, but I can't find anything that would reduce it the seriousness of the scandalous incident revealed by the Free speech.

From a diagram sent by FA Woirhaye, venerable, and by F.-. L. Dusacq. at the T... C.. President Viguier, it even appears that the malcounter-conference of F.'. Trollet was, during several months, a cause of conflict between the L.°. Alsace-Lorraine and the L.*. The Globe. The latter. Although reprimanded by the Bar Council, she did not He didn't want to be wrong, and there was a falling out.

in the household.
I read on page 36 of the Bulletin: °

The Resp.. L.. The Globe did not initially appear to be in a favorable position to bow before the blame that the Conseal of the order. It was then that the L.. Alsace-Lorraine delivered in his Committee meeting of December 13, 1886, the breaking of fraternal relations with this At... and carried on the agenda of its formal meeting on January 13 Friday 1887, the discussion of the following proposal of F.°. Gerschel:

"The reasons that compel the L.. Alsace-Lorraine and the Fr, Mac., to break off their relations with the L.”. The Globe, from the O.:. of Vincennes. »

The L.-. Ze Globe did not yet yield to this A warning. The relationship between the two Lodges did not resume until two months later of an agenda in which the L.:. The Globe regretted having placed on his agenda a a question that may have raised suspicions of his patriotism. It had taken him some reflection to express this regret, since the conference of F.*. Trollet, cause The first of the conflict had taken place on September 3rd. 1886, and that the agenda of repentance was not voted than on February 11, 1587.

Meanwhile, F. Trollet had given his demission of First Supervisor of the L.-. Ze Globe, but he continued to be a part of it nonetheless.

If this Trollet is still alive, it must be today—
A proud Dreyfusard today!

From Trollet to Joan of Arc. The transition is abrupt, but the Jeanne d'Are incident is worth the incident Trollet to show that the French-Masons have a completely different conception of patriotism culière.

Freemasonry does not like Jeanne d'Aré.
It's a tradition she inherited from Voltaire.

She initially tried to portray the heroic Virgin for a hysteric, for a hallucinating woman, victim of clerical fanaticism. But the thesis was dangerous, because representing Joan of Arc as clerical, that was to admit that clericalism is sometimes capable of inspiring sublime actions,

The FF.—. then reversed their thesis.
Instead of portraying Joan of Arc as a seer, a
They gave it to us as if it had been driven mad by mysticism.
the secular saint of patriotism martyred by the treatments.

You may be unaware of the apostrophes of F.:.
Senator Delpech to x this Roman Catholic Church which has provided the hideous executioners of the young peasant girl!
of Domrémy 7, and who today wants to put the hand on Jeanne, catalogue her in her calendar of saints?

It's a real shame, because it's beautiful literature.
erasure!

But I'm surprised that someone hasn't yet
I had the idea to reply to this Delpech:

— Since you claim that Joan of Arc has
She was martyred by the Roman Catholic Church. Why not?
Don't you adopt it, you, the counter-Church, you, the Chapel on Rue Cadet?

Now, this supposed victim of Rome...

Lodges refuse to accept this at any price. They protested. en masse against the institution of a Joan of Arc festival d'Arc, which, according to the Congress of Lodges of the re- The Parisian festival in 1594 was said to be a clerical celebration. removing the one from July 14th >.

A peculiar logic, we must admit! Twofold things of the moon, indeed: or else Joan of Arc is a victim of clericalism and his feast day should not to be a clerical feast; or else Joan of Arc is a Christian heroine, and in this case, it is to It is wrong that the Freemasons claim she is a victim of clericalism. Between these two terms, there is no no middle term; it is absolutely necessary, choose.

Needless to say, in this matter of the National holiday of Joan of Arc, the Freemason nerie has prevailed, as in all questions tions where she takes the trouble to exercise her influence.

The national holiday of Joan of Arc has been. It is true, voted in the Senate; but the Chamber of Deputies The parties refused to confirm this vote, despite the efforts of the old republican, of the old free-pensister and old Macon, Mr. de Mahy.

It happened at the very moment of the discussion. a minor incident worth mentioning Pelé. As Mr. de Mahy found himself interrupted at every moment by the Macon deputies who they pelted the honorable with furious insults The deputy from Réunion read from the podium from a factum addressed by the R.°. .L. "The Clemence Friendship to all FE, Mit. and especially to Members of the Chamber of Deputies.

Here is what we read, in particular, in this address :

"The Chamber is now considering a report"

sentimental, supported by petitions from women col-carried by the priests in the alcoves. The bill for a Joan of Arc celebration many signatures of members of Parliament, blind or Accomplices of the clerical reaction, the blind, address-you to them, TT.” CC... FF.°., and raise their eyelids; the accomplices... The accomplices of the Pope and the Jesuits...
That's our business; we'll recognize them and we won't
We will not forget them; but we beg you, TT.°.
CC.'. FF.°. Republicans without sordid compromises, to prevent the establishment of a national Joan of Arc holiday d'Arc.

–

The venerable of the Clement Friendship who signed
This piece of trash was none other than a certain Edgard Mon-Teil, author of vague serialized novels as well bland and flatly pornographic. Bour-Geis, upon coming to power, hastened to to place this misunderstood novelist at the General Securityrale. But it was soon recognized that Mon-Teil was unfit even to be a policeman: that's why Brisson, last year, did not hesitate to make him a prefect...

A little-known but very interesting brochure health, from certain points of view, will reveal to us the secret cause of this age-old hatred of France Masonry for Joan of Arc. This brochure is titled D Error by Jeanne Are and she has for author Mr. Louis Martin.

Joan of Arc's mistake, according to Mr. Louis
Martin, was to choose the wrong suitor.
the crown of France, that is to say, to take the party of Charles VII, the king of Bourges”, instead to take that of Henry VI, King of England.

Mr. Louis Martin simply criticizes Joan of Arc for having fought, for having suffered and to have died a martyr so that France might remain
French and that the Englishman was "x driven out".

It's a theory like any other, and I recognize-
I readily admit that the author of The Mistake of Joan d'Arc supports it with a certain originality:
But ultimately, he supports her. That's a fact, and therefore,
It is a matter of opinion and criticism.

“Jeanne,” says Mr. Louis Martin in his preface, “did not acted only out of a very narrow, almost patriotic sentiment blimable, since, coming at the time when Islands peoples, Tired of the feudal system, the provinces went to unite in solidarity.
by provinces, in large states, and finding the An-England and France united under the rule of Henry VI, She undid the ties that bound them together and that would have made it the only one, the great one, the devouring one and absorbing nation of the modern world, we can move forward boldly that French Europe was there in germ and that Joan of Arc nipped it in the bud,

This opinion of Mr. Louis Martin on the work Joan of Arc's lack of admiration does not diminish his admiration for her.
for the heroism and martial genius of the Shepherdess
He speaks highly of Vaucouleurs.
seems sincere in his praise as much as in his criticisms. But he doesn't forgive her for "Z error." He keeps coming back to it.

"Time has completed the work of Joan of Arc, The split between English and French from this moment is becoming increasingly profound; "his hatred for his

"Malvoisine" is deeply rooted in French soil, as well as in...
Today, a simple proposal for an alliance from France dealing with England seems like a monstrosity.

That's why AM, Louis Martin believes that "the adulation of Joan of Arc is "Currently the object sounds false."

Through these theories about Joan of Arc, he

It is easy to recognize two theses of essence purely Masonic: the United States of Europe and the English alliance.

This is to rectify the "Joan of Arc's Mistake 2," that Freemason politicians like Lanessan, like Trarieux, like Yves Guyot, founded, with statesmen from Great Britain, the famous group of the Ænfen Cordiale. This club Anglo-French politics had to work for us to get closer to England and to prepare a an alliance that could not fail to make us the world's referees in the near future. However, until Currently, this "Entente Cordiale" has not earned us That Fashoda, that's a rather unfortunate way.
to repair | ¢ Joan of Arc's mistake, and I like one would think that Brother Louis Martin himself, in will agree... (1).

The English alliance is not the only Masonic hobbyhorse-nique. The Lodges also aspire to the alliance

(1) We say: the EF. Louis Martin, Mr. Louis Martin is certainly indeed a Freemason, since one of his brochures, quoted on the cover of the one we
The above-mentioned, was published by L.*. The Scottish Rose, German, and Jules Ferry, in this respect, as regarding the alleged reform of teaching was only their instrument blind and servile. It has been a long time since the alliance German would be a fait accompli, if the general

Boulanger had not, at the time of Vaftaire Schnoebele, a glimmer of clairvoyance and a
A sadly too brief surge of virility patriotic.

The Freemasons and the Jews did not forgive Moreover, Boulanger never revived it at we the national sentiment by raising with energy the insolent provocations of Bismarck.
If the unfortunate man ended miserably in exile,
Abandoned by all, dishonored and defiled, that's good.
less because of his mistakes and shortcomings personal matters as well as for the crime he had committed by thwarting the political aims of the Consistoirees and rue Cadet. The Jews and the internees-

The nationalists of the Lodges coldly condemned Death to that soldier who dared to speak proudly to the name of France and who had managed to awaken in a numb and as if anesthetized race the old military spirit that once held the world in respect.

After the defeat of Boulangism, the Judeo-
The Freemasons have resumed their campaigns, sometimes in favor of the English alliance, sometimes in favor of the German alliance.

The Russian alliance was only concluded despite the fierce opposition of their representatives more qualified in Parliament and in the press. The High finance, with the Rothschilds at the forefront, has everything implemented to thwart it, and the treaty was barely signed when the same bandits...

They resumed their intrigues as if they were more beautiful than ever.
to abolish all its positive consequences and fertile,

They've more or less arrived there today.
The English alliance does not appear to be very popular.
for the moment because of Fashoda; mats us
Let us rush to the German alliance.
Hanotaux led us to Kiel; Delcassé led us led to Bergen, Wilhelm II no longer waited.
that the calming of spirits to come in perrings in Paris to put his initials at the bottom of the convention which will be the military abdication of the France.
We will see that, no doubt, during the Exposituation, and we will have nothing to say, because, at this at the time, and thanks to the Dreyfus affair, our army of which we were so proud, just two years ago,
will exist in name only.

This is the work on which they have worked without releases the Freemasons pressured by the Jews and allied with a number of Protestants sectarians.

And let the Freemasons not come and tell us the opposite !

Didn't they confess to us, through the mouth of the

F. Gadaud, former Minister of Agriculture, "that The Republic of today was only the France-Open masonry, like the Franc-Alagon-the very thing itself was nothing but the Republic at covered wf

This is letting us know that the current regime will to find out about the political orientation of rue Cadet suitable for both exterior and interior use.

We therefore have the right to think and to say that if our leaders seek an alliance with Germany order, it is solely because the Freemason-Nothing demands it.

FREEMASONRY

We remember the great commotion they made, a while ago
a few months, the Freemasons and the Jews, because the League of the French Fatherland – league national, largely open and which has nothing to do with-cult – had taken the liberty of addressing officers in service activity some circulars or bubble-membership forms.

Hiring in the arnie! You still have present in memory are the indignant articles that the Reinach, the Rancs, the Jaurès and the Clemenceaus
They wrote on this theme for fifteen days.

However, Freemasonry, a secret society, a society international, having in its budget a chapter of external relations, practiced methodically recruitment into the army, and this to the knowledge-government stance which, far from being to move, grants to this disturbing and shady propaganda, its approval at least tacit.

I read in the Bulletin of the Grand Orient of September 1893:

"...We have two categories with half-price taxation, one for the sons of F.. M.., the other for the members of the teaching staff and for the military., »

This half-price discount that she so generously grants Freemasonry has always been linked to the military.
refused to grant it to the workers, who are for-even more deprived of money than the officers.
There must be very powerful reasons for this.
sounds.

Indeed, they do exist.

"Ve Hey has a major, immense interest, both for the army that for your society, to open the doors of our Temples to those among them (the military) who, requesting this favor, will have been recognized as worthy, (Speech of the Vizier to cha', {sis Montyon, June 22, 1880, Chain of Union, (1SSo, p. 274.)

"Your committee thought that the army being a field essentially suitable for the diffusion of light Masonic, and consequently, the propagation of republican ideas clerics, is of the opinion that Freemasonry must do all its cflorts to recruit followers among permanent executives.
nents, Note, my F.*., that these officers are true educators of French youth, and that their action is to feel precisely at this very important moment when the young
"As a man takes possession of his rights as a citizen,"

This idea of transforming our officers Armed with electoral agents, it's definitely not banal, it comes from a former officer, F.: Bergère, former captain and adjutant-major of infantry
terie and former member of the Bar Council, which addressed, in the form of a wish, to the Congress of LEL.. of the South, united with the Or.'. of Tarbes, at the pea from July 1590:

Masonic influence in the army is
So, as we can see, it's an indisputable fact.

Is this hiring successful? We don't know.
it's not ideal, but it certainly produces results.

e. I have no information regarding A. general officers, but there are senior officers, who were received with the tax reduced by half, (Bulletin of the G.*, O,'. of September 1893, pe 332.)

"The Council of the Order," Mr. Louis informs us, Dasté in his interesting brochure: La Franc.
Freemasonry and the Army, encompasses almost all
For the years one or more active officers, the 1894-1895 fiscal year, it included the FF, Du-Meste (Jean-Baptiste), Rosicrucian, captain at 53rd Infantry, at Tarbes, and Pasquier (Ernest), 33rd, Captain in the 53rd Infantry Regiment, in Avignon.

Masonic officers sometimes take the precaution to take cover, to avoid no doubt these are indiscretions that could... to harm. Their names are clearly displayed on the "stages," but they appear there only in a skillfully mutilated form and almost unrecognizable, that's how on the lists, Captain Pasquier, whom we were talking about A little while ago, his name was F.°. Paquet, the owner.
Another officer, Captain Poncet, takes the Name and profession of F.°. Paucet, owner.

This way of concealing one's true self-identity and to come to the Lodge only incognito
I don't always meet, I have to recognize him.

the approval of all the Freemasons, at the Convent of
In 1895, F.*, Eymond even made the following remarks on this subject.
blunt statement:

"I cannot admit that it is permitted to F,*,, who have the honor of representing their Lodges at the General Assembly, to remove their name or at least to put one that doesn't either not theirs; I then wonder what the point would be the list we're given every year... I believe that those of us who do not have the courage to put their name or queneteulent not let it appear will "What about staying with them?"

Fe. Guillain, the rapporteur, understood in turn following the fact that this violent outburst was directed against the officers whose names had been altered. II pleaded mitigating circumstances,

"If you admit," he said, "the usefulness of the presence of officers" Ace Convent, it is necessary to admit the need not to reproduce reduce their real names... If a schoolteacher, a ceceweur Finances can come to the Convent without being threatened with being revoked, but not the same applies to officers who must to entrust to their leaders, when they are absent, not only "Where are they going, but why are they moving?"

I'll stop here, F.°. Guillain.

In the lines we have just read, he confesses that the names of the delegated officers had to be mutilated fords at the Convent because these officers came without having proper permission.

What becomes of Article 2 of the resolution of the F. Bergère presented at the Congress of Lodges of Noon by Captain Dumeste, and what is thus DESIGNED |

2° That in all the At,°,, i be recalled from now on to the Fr. M.*, who are part of the army, and primarily to the officers, that the Constitution recommends propaganda through words and example, and within the limits studied by the report THIS MASONIC DUTY N'FST NOT INCOMPATIBLE WITH MILITARY DUTY,

F.-. Guillain's plea for officers The use of disguised names has just demonstrated to us that, On the contrary, Masonic duty and the Military duty and duty are incompatible, mutually exclusive.

conversely, and that, caught between the instruction that he will hold from the Lodges and that which he will receive from his superior, the officer, did not hesitate: not to give the preference to the first, as would be done in a similar situation in the case of the magistrate or the Masonic deputy.

[It is worth adding that if the officers were attacked by Fn Eymond and defended by F.. Guilwools had come to the Convent without permission regularly, this small liberty taken with the discipline Pliny explained himself --- she did not apologize - due to the urgency and importance of the mission that they had to fill out on Cadet Street.

“This year,” declared Fo. Dequaire after having propresented with the aim of resolving the incident through a straightforward agenda item, This year, two officers came to this Convent, knowing that a discussion of a specific nature could takes place there, a discussion that will not be repeated next year next, we hope at least, a farce that the proproblems on which they will receive their solution Legally, this discussion, you, as Freemasonry, You have, moreover, closed it, by your admirable order of the Monday, » |

What was this admirable "agenda of Monday >?

According to Mr. Louis Dasté, it was a matter of " the memorable discussion that led to the una- vote nime by the Convent, of a vigorous declaration- "Dreyfusard oaths..."

Since Dreyfus didn't always exist, we have sometimes occupied in the Lodges with something other than the Dreyfus affair. Actually, we're working on it. even about everything; we discuss it, we deliberate on it, and we y votee de omui re scibilé et quibusdam aliis.

At the Convent of 1893, for example, we see Brother Racine, an active-duty officer in the army of land, to present to the Assembly, in the name of the L.°. The Vendée Fraternity, of which he is the delegate, the Next wish:

Considering that freedom of conscience must be resrespected in the navy as she was in the army of earth ;

The Cendeenne Fraternity expresses the wish:

19 That, in the navy, prayers on board no longer licu by order at a fixed and common time;

2° That the ceremonies prescribed on board the ships of the State ct in Islands ports on Good Friday be defended;

3. That the Convent invite those of our Brothers* who do part of Parliament to pursue the implementation of these two desiderata,

I don't have to discuss, in substance, the wish of F. Racine, but it seems to me that we would be in right to raise the preliminary question against him.

"What is this 'lancer' in the dragons?" said a saw that was once all the rage, One could The same can be said of Racine and his wish:

-- What is an infantryman in the navy?

But it is understood that from the moment a The man is a Freemason; he has the right to take care of everything, to make a decision on everything.

Cestégal, I'd really like to know what he would say the Minister of War, if he were to find out one day that an officer, affiliated with the Anti-Semitic League, has submitted a petition requesting that the soldiers Jews should no longer be given preferential treatment for holidays Easter, to the detriment of their classmates, This the officer, unlike F.:. Racine, takes care of-would at least be capable of something within his competence. Eh Well, I bet anything you want that he won't couIt wasn't possible, as they say, to take days off work. rigor, to begin with, and while awaiting implementation Available now!
What's interesting about these discussions is...
Boxes, so often insignificant and ridiculous in rai-

The sound of profound nothingness of the people who take it Part of it is that they are almost always the point the starting point, the seed, in a way, of the great political campaigns conducted by the press at the devotion of Jews and Freemasons.

This accusation of clericalism leveled at Convent against the navy by an officer of the ar-Once you've dug up the soil, you'll find it developed.

diluted, commented on, amplified ad infinitum in a hundred articles by Clemenceau, Ranc, Jaurès or Pelletan,

For the past year or two, you have been able to follow the progression of another press campaign in in favor of lowering military service to ten-eight months or even a year. This reform is necessary. Is it really useful? Is it practical? feasible at present ¢

These are all delicate and complex questions. complex issues that you will probably hesitate to resolve If, like me, you have not been a minister of the war, neither commander-in-chief, nor at least commander-in-chief army corps commander,

If you had seen ~ the light of the third appearance-"mentally," you would not know these timidities And these hesitations, you would be tired of yourself-same, like Lieutenant Reboulet, who, at in the name of the Lodge of Montélimar, deposited at the Con-wind of 1597, a vow aimed at reducing the Military service at eighteen months, F.*. Reboulet Ilen did not limit herself to submitting this wish, she also explained the advantages along with those of another an even more radical project, due to the initiative of THE... of the Paris region, and to the terms of which the length of military service was to be reduced to one year. The report of F.'. Reboulet was so tasted by the Assembly that, on the proposal of I's, Souchet, the Convent voted him congratulations unanimously.

Some quotes are now indispensablebles to make you aware of the feelings that, deep down, Freemasonry
professes with regard to the army:

@aso [| It's no wonder so few officers dared,
Until now, to affiliate with the French—Masonic, source of democratic principles, one could add that those who they still entered our big family they did proof of a robust republican you, by thus defying your prejudices and the ill will of their fellow nobles the bourgeoisie, too forgetful of their ancestors without breeches,” (Report of Br. Bergère, former Adjutant Captain dantsmaj or infantryman, and former member of the Council of (Order, to the King, Free Thought, of Narbonne.)

& Penetrate into the depths of this being called the soldier;
Try the psychological analysis of any man who wears a sword, and you will see that the desire to appear, to shine, to occupy space and consequently to take up space of others, is the only motive that makes him act, He speaks of Devotion, selflessness, patriotism: a lie that all of this; the first object of his worship is himself, and I see in "fui" only the most complete personification of selfishness,” {Speech by Fy', Fort à la Lee, The Friends Retained from this text to the Lev. The Trinosophists of Berey, CRAINE D’UNION 1889, p. 148. }

a Le F, Serin, absent, loaded an iron from the workshop, at The subject of the institution of the court-martial, to express this the opinion that courts-martial should be composed of military and civilians mixed together, the esprit de corps or self-false rity in Ices micux intentional the notion of justice.
We need outsiders to bring about justice
In its proper form, this innovation would do credit to a Minister of War." (Works of the L., The War, held
(of December 14, 1894.)

This question of the reform of the Councils of

ai
Ar
-P ` Fe
my T

mm Ce - - awe mal ge peel» *- + Fi
a =a = + <am mu “ = = - =I" -rm F, r = =

war is a greater concern for the Lodges than ever, and... awaiting the arrival in power of the Minister of Ideal war - why couldn't it be Gauliftet?
— Mr. Massé, deputy for Nièvre, who was rapporteur of the Propaganda Commission at Convent has already tabled a bill which, if it is adopted, will achieve to some extent the desideraZa du Fe. Serin.

A few more quotes. They are, in this ors.re of ideas, particularly suggestive ones:

The Foc. Artaule Géclare that "the soldier, -- in the narrow sense of the word, - - is dominated by childish seductions of the same kind as those

"Quis'em parent de la femme."

“Every world soldier,” said the E, “Minot, does not constitute Not a national army! Quite the contrary, an army incorporate the mass, if it is under the regime of a code ferocious and bloodthirsty, those who command form a special category of citizens, endowed with catrava- rights gloves, their chiefs escape all control under the pretext of discipline, if the soldier serving in the ranks loses his quality and his dignity as a man, independently of the just citizens. These are the fruits of human discipline; he is wounded at every moment. through arbitrary rule, through a tyranny that feeds on suffering of his victims, by the authority of a mad pride, by the trait Mixing absolute wills, where the signs of intelligence that give rise to voluntary respect, and those of the rison who inspire confidence, such a year Nest not ta mation en armes : c'est un Instrument appalling general intellectual depression":, which can causing more harm to a people, which Vhalvitue at hone of castes, who can cancel by drying up his strength ct go so far as to ctixer the characters of his tice. >

F.. Minot, as we can see, doesn't do things by halves.
paths. However, this is still only a tentative step.
than lukewarm and pale compared to F. Catalo, who, in turn, calls into question the very idea

of homeland:

~ e Avoiding the consequence. F.°, Minot came we demonstrate that the French patrician and humanity are linked, which love of the second necessarily entails
The love of the first. It was necessary to say whether, yes or no, the exasperatedthe ratio of misery combined with intelligence inevitably abolishes In the individual, the moral notion of the patrician. This question would still defy the courage of free men, discuss-sion? >

From the same F.°. Catalo. this opinion on the disdiscipline:

“On the other hand, what is the officer’s role with regard to his His relationships with his subordinates? He presides over this terrible thing: discipline, that is to say, going on strike for a time, of the freedom of the human self; this is still a a coincidence (sfc) that boosts the officer's morale in the absoluteness of his omnipotence (sic).

"Don't we still need to campaign so that..."
discipline should no longer be the ancient, immobilizing servitude,
"Degrading the individual in the hands of the leader?"

The following extract from the Magonnigue Review is still of a nature to prove that if Dreyfus is # cocky >, as Cornély says, his IF .°. the Freemasons are much less so than him:

It seems that the Society would be shaken to its foundations if we removed the right of soldiers to carry weapons in the city, as one He proposes it. The army would be humiliated and demoralized. We makes a monster out of nothing. The soldier who carries around Lardoirs hanging from his person no more than prestige that it would have if it were deprived of these accessories which, the most often, Passomment and they are for the freedom of his movements his person was subjected to harsh servitude. When one would have gotten used to not seeing our soldiers anymore wearing cutlery products attached to the waist,

One would constantly wonder how we could have done it for so long.
to maintain such an unreasonable practice, (Review Afaçonnigire, February 1897, p. :9 ct 30.)

One feels a gentle joy in hearing mockery thus the sword and the uniform by people who do not never miss an opportunity to go out on the street wearing small, oddly shaped aprons, covered From feet to head, cords, braids, and insegnes and amulets, bearers of mallets, of triangles, d'équers, d'équers, déguisés, in a word. With all sorts of strange trinkets that would make it a success from a group of rabble on a carnival day, Since they were quite willing to discuss "larder"
the bayonet that the young infantryman carries at his side, the ridiculous monks who cannot initiate the local tavern owners without drawing their zinc swords to form above his astonished head the "vault" of steel >!

We no longer think of laughing, however, when we reflected that officers of our army were taking-They take part in these grotesque ceremonies, which they are exposed daily to what is heard in the Lodges speeches in which theories are presented in the of the kind I just told you about-what samples.

The officers who agree to be part of a secret society where Von thus bets on the army, of their leaders, from their cannibalisms, show without doubt a rather ugly nature. These are not, at all Surely, beautiful souls, and one feels a sensea feeling of sadness and a kind of humiliation connection to seeing people wearing pro- uniforms to take advantage of the protective shade of the Lodges to denymanaging men and things that, in life ordinary. They pretend to respect and tosea. We are used to finding more among soldiers of bravado and more loyalty.

However, the most guilty are not the Masonic officers. The real culprits are the members of the government are the mini- very much of the war, who are not unaware of what is happening passes through Îles Loges, who know in what terms It discusses the army and the high command. discipline, and who dare not, out of fear of an arrest or a press campaign, to prevent the military from being part of the Franc-Masonry.

In 18862, at the start of his first ministry. General Billot had addressed the commanders of army corps a circular according to which Active duty military personnel were forbidden from entering in no association. Immediately the French- The Macons sent a delegation to General Billot gation to protest against this measure, and the The minister hastened to give these ambassadors

|
the Lodges' assurance that he had in no way- neither targeting Freemasonry nor understanding it within the forbidden.

In 1689, M. de Freycinet, in turn, defended to officers and soldiers to be part of an association any action not approved by the minister.

The Lodges were moved. Countless panels: were sent to the Council of the Order, which decided that a delegation composed of the FF... Desmons, Colfavru, Faure, Blatin and Doumer, would approach the Minister of the war. [It was understood that beforehand, and for To level the playing field, the delegation would first see the F... Constans, Minister of the Interior, and former Member of the Council of the Order. (Bulletin of the G.. O.:.. March 1589. p. 33.)

A superfluous precaution, since Freycinet did not ask- said that he would capitulate to the demands of the Grand- In the East, he replied to the delegates that he had to to issue a general circular, but that he not oppose- had absolutely no idea that the military would enter in the Mac... go to the LL... but at the on the condition of not making any public demonstrations that and not to draw attention to them press,” {Bulletin du Gow Ou... April 1889, p. 95.)

These pitiful retreats do not show us only the small size of the characters, the softness, the cowardice of two former ministers who played Both have a certain role in politics contemporary; it indicates to us that the action

Jewish, under a pseudonym. exercises itself on the army as everywhere, and that there as elsewhere it is all-powerful.

The goal of Freemasonry is to disorganize to neutralize the army, to destroy the immense work of national reconstruction to which France is harnessed for thirty years. Jaurès and his new friend Galliffet, who are merely the mouthpieces of the Jews and the Lodges, have repeatedly stated that he we needed to replace this superb army, which we we were proud and that had restored our respect world, by a civic guard whose sole purpose will be assignment of ensuring internal policing.

In the near future, France is therefore destined to fall to the rank of the Three Powers sixth or fourth rank, to be nothing more than a Belgic or a Switzerland.

The Dreyfus affair, as we explained so many times, it was only mounted to precipitate the military upheaval.

It is still disheartening to think that, To get to this point, we made the taxpayers sweat. twenty or twenty-five billion, and that we locked up. for years, in barracks more or less sad and unhealthy, millions of young people French people whom it would have been so easy to leave to their studies. to their profession or to their furrow.

FREEMASONRY

AND THE JUDICIALS

o If there are relatively few military personnel in Freemasonry, the magistrates in re-They abound there. One could even say without It's an exaggeration to say that the Lodges are all offices.
recruitment where the Keepers of the Seals will search-dear officials of the justice department-tice. Just as to make a stew, you need to use a hare, likewise, to make a judge,
We need to hire a Freemason.

The operation is neither long nor difficult. It is sufficient to choose an F.-. more or less vaguely tinted of legal knowledge. He is saddled with a black or red dress, with a hat with bow trim silver or gold; a rabbit skin on top of that, and That's it: here's a man who will now be able to distributing prison sentences to his peers
It was raining cats and dogs!

What is most curious, and least reassuring rant for the common litigants that we are-My, that's what Freemasons profess to with regard to your profane Justice the most pro-bottom. They think it's good for us, but they
They don't want it for themselves at any price.

4,

The Lodges do, in fact, have their own judicial organization special company. This organization is exposed throughout at length in Title IV of the constitution of the Grand-East,

Article 35 states, in particular:

Judicial power is exercised:
In the first instance, by the Lodges in charge:

"

1% — To judge breaches of internal discipline ricure;

2°. — To receive complaints concurrently with the Bar Association Council:

3°. — To judge the accused Brothers,

As a second instance, by Courts of Appeal composed delegates from the Lodges.

In addition to the Workshop Juries and the Chambers of Apppel, there is a Court of Cassation, which, says lar-Article 40, "in case of a procedural defect, incorrect application-cation or violation of the Law, overturns the decision which
The case is referred to him and the matter is sent back to the court for a full hearing be another Appeals Chamber or another jury d*Atelier >.

._ We can therefore see that Freemasonry asa Jusher own. The Freemasons who have differences returns between them or who are accused of something failure to fulfill their duty, or even of some will the crime or secular offense be explained, or are they brought before Masonic courts which

The Jews, for their part, make the final decision.

They also arrange their little family discussions in front of the Kahal. It's still one of the sides by the-What do Freemasonry and Judaism represent?
they look like twin sisters.

As for the Goym — or, if you prefer, “saint to the uninitiated — they must be content with the vulgar
The justice system you know: it's always Good enough for cattle semen!

The misfortune is, as I explained to you earlier. that Freemasonry is what-

something like a nursery for the magistrature. |

Take any court, either in Paris, or in the provinces; eight times out of ten, you will find it composed of a majority of Jews or Franks-Masons.

In the very rare cases where the Semitic element or Masonic is not predominant. it is generally reinforced by the pro- element testating sectarian, so that if the litigant that You are also a baptized member of the Church Roman, this defendant has every chance of world of being salty in the grand prizes.

To win his lawsuits, however, or to to extricate oneself from a difficult situation, an I... in a bind He only needs to be recognized by his judges. The gesture distress that saves the ministries in the House is no less effective at the palace, and it is worth it only the eloquence of twenty lawyers.

The Freemasons know this. They do not hesitate never to take advantage of this good advice given by their FF.-. of Belgium:

All these lawsuits must be brought before the courts. in which our brothers are assured of a majority. (Bulletin of the Grand Orient of Belgium; vol. III, p. 19.)

The Freemason magistrates, for their part, do not forget any more than the deputies, members of the Lodges, that the Masonic principles are the ONLY those who must regulate their conduct. If they open it- They forgot, they should. Just like the members of parliament, go to the dreaded confessional on Cadet Street!

It would be easy for us to draw up a long list of magistrates affiliated with the Lodges. We con- We will attempt to cite two: Brother Jeanvrot, con- judge at the Court of Appeal of Angers and member of Council of the Order. and Brother Poulle, councillor the Court of Appeal of Poitiers, which is also a high-ranking members of Freemasonry.

Brother Jeanvrot readily poses for erudition anticlerical. When he is tired of condemning the Laypeople face prison or fines; he composes booklets, pamphlets from the Grand Orient patron and propagates.

“In the last Convents,” says Goyau, a Mr. Jeanvrot's little book was recommended as a model, and Mr. Viguier, municipal councilor of Paris, made of following subscription by the General Council of the Seine, joo examples of this true masterpiece.

This masterpiece was entitled Science and Religion; It stated, among other things, that "existence of Jesus is problematic"; that the inscription INRI, which dominated the cross of Calvary, must interpret: Jgne natura renovatur integra; that Monotheism and Christianity are variants of solar worship; that # Athene” (Minerva) "It provided Saint Athanasius to the Christian pantheon."

If, instead of printing these swings, Jeanvrot had used his leisure time as a magistrate to write a well-researched book on depression--donations from Jews and checkbook holders for twenty-five years, you can be certain that Mr. Viguier would have been careful not to have 700 copies subscribed to. to please by the General Council of the Seine. Good that municipal councillor, F.-. Viguier, indeed. is much more concerned with satisfying his pas- sectarian sions than obtaining justice against the thieves and all sorts of shady characters who have put popular savings are dry. After all, what do you want? You? SijJeanvrot is a member of the Council of the Or- Viguier, a member of the Grand Orient, is himself a former president of the same Order. Between FF.∗. of At this level, one cannot truly refuse certain small favors, especially when it's at the end of It's the taxpayer who has to foot the bill...

Brother Poulle is an emulator of Brother Jeanvrot. both in the Masonic order and in the gold judicial.

F. Poutle perhaps gives a little less

He excels in erudition, but makes up for it in action: It is, in every sense of the word, a fight.

tif. Or will have some idea of the energy of his temperament by reading these fragments of the speech which he delivered at the Convent in 1893:

"This is the third time you have entrusted me with the first gavel of the G.. O.. and also to mark the number three, that's today Thirtieth Conv.' Island, to which I have the pleasure of attending. So you wanted to pay tribute to the Sicilian Mac.-., to the devoted man who never deserted the Mac's devorr., who did everything possible ct all his efforts for the good and for the prosperity of fa mac.. French.

… # The main characteristic of the masonic struggle* at the time Where we are talking, it's the fight against clericalism, it's always this struggle of which F... Gambetta said: "The clericclericalism is the enemy >: and from the moment of clericalism that's the enemy, that means, EVIL: FF... that we we are on the battlefield, and we must never forget that on a field of hat 'Ile, one does not resupply the enemy, We beat him. (Applause.)

I am, as I have often said, for freedom absolute opinions, and I readily admit that a An independent and free citizen attacks the priests. and to the Jesuits, as we attack ourselves even to the Jews. Which is intolerable, which is What's infamous is that a civil servant, an employee of the State, it is mainly a magistrate, who holds the the most august and the most delicate of powers. Vienna to speak in such a manner within the secrecy of the Lodges, and I say that, in the exercise of his duties, this The magistrate can only be the lowest of the low. and the JF

Who, in fact, only senses the Freemason judge.
Even if he sincerely wanted to, he will not be able to strip him of his possessions.
threshold of the Grand Orient, his sectarian passions, and that he will take them all the way to the courtroom where he has mission to pronounce on the fate of his fellow men in the name of a law that must be impartial, equal and Just for everyone?

Suppose that in front of this boiling Macon religious hatred, a vicar, should appear before the court.
a sister of charity odiously vilified, like Sister Saint Charles, by some Jewish newspaper Germans, a brother of the Christian schools, like this unfortunate Flamidian brother against whom the Jews and Freemasons have recently mounted the most appalling of machinations, what do you think?
What will the judge, still fired up by the speeches, do?
vibrant words that he will have spoken or heard at Convent?

He will put his actions in accordance with his words: he will remember that he is on a battlefield,
and that, when one is on a battlefield.
“You don't supply the enemy, you defeat them.”

On the other hand, a concerned Freemason magistrate of his duties will never hesitate to "x resupply".
his brothers and friends and to extend a helping hand to them reliable in critical moments.

Panamanians, southerners, and other checkbooks
They only escaped the penal colony because they met... enter into the political and judicial personnel of "true Freemasons" for Masonic solidarity passed before everything else. Likewise, Burdeau had not than to make the gesture of distress in order to decide Marriage to commit his crime and to defraud twelve brave people who did not want to condemn me—only a fine, a verdict that allowed him to me sentenced to three months in prison and one hundred thousand francs of insertions.

It can be said, it is true, that before having seen Je Burdeau's distress signal, Mariage had noticed Rothschild's gesture of encouragement, otherwise Significant and expressive again...

What action did the "scoundrels" of the Chamber decide?
criminal to march as one man for Dreyfus? Brisson's solemn and sorrowful gesture which calls his brothers to help, or the gesture will encourage... giant and cheerful Jew who seems to be counting Banknotes?

Nevertheless, the Loews, the Bards and the Dumas didn't need to be pulled over. They have understood at first glance, and without any need to repeat the action several times.

FREEMASONRY

AND THE SECRET

Freemasonry is a secret society.
One could even say that secrecy is one of its fundamental laws: it only lives and subsists through secrecy.

One of the first oaths that the initiate must take This is the oath of silence. Here's how... something is happening in the Lodges of the Obedience of Grand Orient:

The profane Véséréble who swears an oath of ap-Prenti, — Citizen, extend your right hand over this Laloiïimac's book*,; on this sword and on this square,
I will read you the wording of your obligation.

Os ication, — On this sword, symbol of honor;
on this square, emblem of rectitude and justice;
on this book of the laws of Ft, M,", which will henceforth be mine, I promise to keep inviolably secret Masonic, to never say or write anything about what I would have been able to see or hear in the assemblies of the M.°.
and on any question that may be of interest to the O.°, unless that I have not received express permission and only in the manner that may be indicated to me.

I agree, should I ever fail to comply with these commitments, to suffer the penalties deserved by my indi–

Generosity and that my memory may be held in execration by all the Masons,

Do you promise?

The ReetPiendatre, – On my honor, I pro–
nets,

The formula used in eco– Masonry
The seizure is much more vivid: it smells of Carbonarism is blatant. The apprentice must lend the
The following oath:

“Me...) of my own free will, in the presence of the Great Architect of the Universe, who is God, and of this respectable assembly of Freemasons, I swear and pro– solemnly and sincerely promise never to reveal none of the mysteries of Freemasonry that will to have confided in me...

"I would prefer to have my throat cut, to be buried in the sands of the sea so that the ebb and flow carry me off into eternal oblivion, rather than man–
I swear to this oath!

"May the Great Architect of 17U.°. preserve me from such a thing"
"Oh, and help me. Amen."

The formula imposed on the journeyman is more ter–
even more terrifying:

“If ever I become perjured, may I have the Heart torn out, body burns, and my ashes cast to wind, so that there may no longer be any memory of me among the Macons,

"May the G'. At preserve me from such misfortune!"
Amen!

Would you believe it? The prospect of such an end Horror alone is not always enough to impose itself on

FF... respecting the code of silence, and Sily has Sometimes there are leaks at headquarters; there are many.
even more frequently in the Lodges,

There are so many of them, even so often.
that at each Convent the high dignitaries of The Order and the delegates from the various Easts pass their time to butcher them.

They don't always succeed.

The Grand Orient Bulletin and every day-Masonic lodges are full of groans about the indiscretions that are committed despite the most severe "tiles" and the doubling-the zeal brought by the Freemasons." Supervisors and the Freemasons,'. Terrible in the exercise of their functions. Those of my readers who would like to have Some fairly comprehensive documentation on this point will find some very curious quotes in a M. Dasté's study on Masonic secrecy, puforgotten by Freemasonry, which has been unmasked.

Here are some of these texts, chosen at random.
among a hundred others:

The G.O.* of France considers the secret mag.*. as one of the rules of the Order, and the Council Bureau, too both individually and collectively, has always refused, refuses, and will always refuse any interview.
regarding islands, incidents that may occur within ja Fe. M...

By order of the Council of the Order:

E. Leveccerier, ALBERT PETROT.
B.. Ge. Os. February (p. 689).

The Council, outraged by the numerous indiscretions committed During these last few days, it is believed that there is a need to take soon, vigorous measures will be taken to avoid similar facts (followed by a line of dots to ensure more effective) (cancement the secret Mac.) (B.°, Ge, O.°., December 1893,
(p. 669).

vee Une pl'. du F., Gobert, Vén,e, à la Re, Le La Concorde, O.', of Mont-deMarsan,.., communicates a leaflet which was sent to him under cover by Ft, Riflart, manufacturer of matte embroidery and jewelry, eee

The Council decides... to engage Fr. Riffart to avoid this male correspondent whose secret is not guaranteed, (B. Gr, O.°, Council of January 25, 1874, p. 764).

Another time, it's a # plate z of the R.'.
I... The Trinosophists of Bercy, O., of Paris, who reports to the Council the putting into circulation by F.-.
Teissier, embroiderer, of a small brochure which con-retains the signs, touches and passwords of the three symbolic degrees*. This brochure/advertisement is given to any buyer of the house, without ensures its quality.

The Council decides to put F." Teissier in remains to be seen in this distribution of Rituals.

One day, it was Father Edgard Monteil who...
nunci to the Council the attitude maintained in the Chamber Members of Parliament by F... de Mahy, MP of the Meeting, on the occasion of the draft law relating to the creation of a festival in honor of Joan of Arc.
"The F... of Mahy, violating the secret mag.*., read to the platform of fragments of a circular addressed to the Freemasons of Parliament by the L..

The Clement Friendship, of which he is an honorary member
neur... >>

Another day, the same F," Edgard Monteil is in turn violently attacked by the F." Schwerer for publication in the press prof.-.

of articles and circulars that have produced, assures the F. Schwérer, a deplorable effect in the region de f Est, Le'F.*. Schweérer conståėre'que ces indiss creations constitute genuine mafia-related offenses.
and he asks that the Fe, Monteil, venerate of the Clemente Amitié, be brought to trial.

No doubt in consideration of F.'s zeal.
Monteil and his long and loyal Masonic services, |
The Council does not go so far as to take action against him
this rigorous measure, but he does not give it less reason to F.°. Schwérer by voting unanimously-
The following agenda was presented:

"The Council of the Order, meeting in plenary session of tqutnove, blame highly, unanimously by its members, the Lo. La Clémente Amitié, for the way in which her Ven.. without protest from him, he launched into Je monde prof.', through the press... the most delicate problems
The conduct of Ordre mag is interesting... He considers the breaking Masonic secrecy as a violation of commitments Contracted movements during initiation... (Consultant's Session.) of the Order of March 34, 1893.)

-- So where does it come from, you might ask, that France-Freemasonry demands so imperiously the observance-tion of the law of silence, and that she fears this
What about the indiscretions?

Mr. de la Palisse, who was a man of great common sense, despite the naiveté attributed to it, would not hesitate to answer if he were still alive:

- Apparently it's because France-
Freemasonry has something to hide.

There is no better explanation, nor more true. Anyone who has nothing to hide, fears nothing.
point the light, On the other hand, x whoever does the evil, hates the light, said St-Jean: Omnis enin gui male acts, odi lucem. Camille Desmoulins, who was v: Macon of the heroic age, expressed the

The same thought expressed in more realistic terms, but everything also precise when he said: "There are only crooks who are afraid of streetlights, %

It is certain that Freemasonry has excellent reasons not to like what laypeople put her nose in her kitchen. She has a lot of secrets which, if they were to be discovered, would probably give off a completely different scent than that of the queen of flowers.

What would happen, for example, if the citizens independents came to know what intrigues
The funds allocated are being used for obscure and shady purposes.
What is its budget for x external relations x?
It is permissible to believe that these relationships are unspeakable relationships, since, between Freemasons
In fact, we don't fully admit them, and that,
As we have seen, we can only talk about it verbally and in veiled terms,

Internal relationships, which allow Lodges to monopolize the Republic for their exclusive benefit republic and to train in the large producing state a small state of privileged parasites, are not nor those on which it is easy to to explain themselves categorically.

— This already contains 13 sufficient reasons — to explain—that Freemasonry, which has so much claimed the light in the Dreytus affair, prefers to be beautiful
This casts a shadow on her.

There are other reasons as well.

Not all members of the Lodges are swindlers and exploiters. These do not form in: Freemasonry than a general staff which lives precisely off the credulity of the masses. Which is made up of good, naive, gullible people of the magnitude of their role and convinced, as They say it happened.

= Next to Robert-Macaire and Bertrand, who alone, see the light from the third apartment ment z, onrencontre au Grand-Orient M. Homais which fills the anteroom with his "philo-" tirades sophistics >, while the true initiates occupy themselves- "Pent z under cover" serious matters, it goes without saying to say that, although kept carefully away. The pretentious fool nonetheless believes himself to be... current of all household affairs and deposit- He is the keeper of the most formidable secrets. He is the one who will prove the most ruthless towards the most

A slight breach of the code of silence. Convinced. of its importance, it would crush you with its de- dean if you try to make him understand that he is the plaything of a few clever people who mock it and who they lead him by the nose,

How do you expect the tavern keeper of corner and the druggist next door not be at the complete devotion of the exploiters who call them in Lodge “Prince of the Royal Secret z, “Knight of the Brazen Serpent 2, "Sublime Oedipus of "Great Secrets," "Guardian of the Incommunicable Name" cable >, or z Pontiff beloved of the White Pelican »?

To keep these good people zealous and with respect, to preserve their faith, it is It is useful not to neglect any opportunity to per- suader that in fact they have terrible secrets about conscience, and that is why, at the Convent or in the z outfits >, Ja question of Masonic secrecy- The issue of "nique" keeps coming up.

Let us add that the FF.-., for the most part of the less, have a personal and direct interest in what The code of silence must be strictly observed. IIs willingly denounce to the politicians who serve as leaders the officer guilty of con- to take his wife to mass or the unfortunate can- Tonnier bold enough to think that in a countries where the word "Liberty" is inscribed on all the walls, he has the right to send his granddaughter to the sisters; but they are essentially keen to con-

*

to complete this noble task without anyone Know this, they don't even want their quality of Frat:-3-Macons is known, because, in some regions, that can be a hindrance in business.

These frank and loyal natures have found a a worthy interpreter of their wishes in the person of ..+#.". de Lanessan, the friend and correspondent of blackmailer Canivet, the group's president Anglo-French “Entente Cordiale”, of which Reinach demanded the appointment of [name] as minister the navy, to be sure that France is reduced to impotence at sea at the same time than on earth, |

"I am very flattered," said F.*. de Lanessan;
I am very flattered that people know I am membre of the Cons.'.of the Order: however, in each F.. there are two men: the private man and the Mag.*. » And he was afraid that they would use the second to harm the first; for “our compatriotes have not yet crossed the line into stupidity (sic), and it is unfortunately all too true that many humble Ff°.+., small shopkeepers of province, saw their businesses decline as a result of the disclosure of their names in a sheet clerical.

In conclusion, Brother de Lanessan issued the opinion that it was necessary to "leave in the shadows all those who serve with such dedication in our ranks.

S

It is impossible, when dealing with this question-tion of Masonic secrecy, not to recall exquisite history of the Rosicrucians of Lyon and the Free France, it is already a classic and it deserves to become legendary.

Our Rosicrucian was one of those Freemasons at which, to use Lanessan's expression, There are two very distinct men. Organist of his condition, he cycled both to church and in the Lodge; He played the organ in some parish or other. and the harmonium in some Sanhedrin masonic.

Free France got wind of it, and it said politely to this job-hogger who didn't have the sense-mention of incompatibilities: "One cannot swear-to have two masters at once; one must be for or against us, choosing between Christ and the Great-Architect. After singing in the morning: Gloria In excelsis Deo, it would be improper to go and shout the Evening: "Let's crush the infamous one!"

This appeal to the most vulgar loyalty was not to the taste of the Rosicrucians who found that the "galette > has no smell, even when it is clerical. This imposter had the audacity to attempt a trial against Free France and to demand from it large damages.

Mouthon, the director of Free France, did appeal to the talent of Saint-Auban, who came to Lyon and who spoke in defense of the incriminating newspaper mine is one of his most biting and witty pleadings,

"Ah," he said, "how astonishing these Masonic trials are!" And since, thanks to them, I conducted some strange surveys, curious descents into the depths of Fillogism and Human appetite! It's still very base veganism.

"'hourgédis who, with a fre, with a tide, 'willingly' the avañages, but it postpones the risks and drawbacks,

This grocer joins a Lodge to acquire customers Masonic, like a Freemason, what enlightens him is the "Light from the third apartment; but, as Epictetus said that what enriches one is the light of one's candles.
and he insists that they burn in the candlesticks of the Catholics-liques,

Similarly, the pharmacist: like Mason, he wants to kill the Catholics; but as an apothecary, he prefers to purge them,
It's more productive.

In this party of inconsistents, where appetite stifles logic-that, the palm undoubtedly goes to this strange Rosc-Croix, who was not ashamed to hold a position in the church employee, and who dares to attack the newspaper that laughs at his unconsciousness Science!

Ah? I'd like to see a militant Catholic, who would be In Catholicism, what is a Rosicrucian in Freemasonry?
nonsense — that would require something like a bishop — forcing the door of a Lodge and accompanying them Hymns in honor of Lucifer! I think I'm reading the newspapers Masonic! Tudicu! What a racket. And what indignant laughter!
to mock this cleric who's cycling in enemy territory...

The organist, playing in double part, had no less winning the case. Like the courts of France, the The Lyon court was probably composed of a majority of Freemasons. These Freemasons

there

+

who were perhaps nothing more than vulgar "companions" gnons >, saw the Rosicrucian making the gesture of distress. They understood at once, and, bowing Under orders from their superior, they condemned
Free France to pay the organist of the Parfait Silence regarding the 3,000 francs in compensation that he demanded... ee e eese oree

Freemasonry tells its whole story in this unbelievable anecdote, and yet absolutely true. We recognize there the bour- revolutionary geoisie with its lichété, its four- berie, his pedantry, his cautious, lying sides and tremors.

Some Catholics, in the past, had wanted us to portray Freemasons as so many disci- Satan's ples. It was to make oneself a Freemason- That's too lofty an idea. The Satan whom they worship Lodges, is not in all cases the Archangel the terrible revolt sung by Milton; Satan of the Grand Orient is a bourgeois Satan, a Satan coward and cockroach, who only acts in the shadows and triumphs only through intrigue and corruption.

It is nonetheless true that silence and the secrets are in the hands of Freemasonry an instrument of terrible power. And I don't I'm not just talking here about minor precautions that consist of crossing out or mutilating the names of FF.". on the "stages" or even at baptism- ser «compte rendux»le Bulletin du Grand-Orrent,

THERE

- as was done in 1894 - to avoid the obli- transfer of the deposit to the National Library.

Those secrets are twenty-seventh-century secrets orders that only arouse concern among The lowly servants of the Lodges. The real leaders in - know. otherwise. considerable, of which part. once a judicial search, ordered with regret and always executed too late, we are led to guess a small part.

Boulangism, for example, the campaign me- born in 1889 by German Jews against a French general, as she was to be ten years later against the entire army, the High- Court, exile and the tragic death of the soldier that the

The crowd had loved it for its patriotic pride, everything
It all comes down to this short letter that Rouanet has published in his report on Panama:

My dear Minister,

Now that the Attorney General has returned, I am here to remind you your good promise to try to eliminate both.
"Tablets" and "Beds" items in which the
The general has the best role. That makes it all the more necessary. as you can see from his response that he is taking advantage of these two affairs in which he knows he is safe from falling into

Joseph,

Thank you in advance, and to you as well.
Signed: Jacques DE REINACH,

A scrap of banknote forgotten in a drawer ex-will probably explain just as clearly one day 8.

or the other, how Brisson, appointed president of the Panamanian Commission of Inquiry thanks to the ap-then of Freemasonry, managed to stifle the affair and to save the checkbooks.

Another time, it will be the inner workings of the electricity...
Loubet's tion, which will suddenly be... revealed.

And so it is with all events of contemporary history. They all seem to us initially fantastic, incomprehensible, senseless, and it was only much later that we com-Let's assume that they are simply the result,
very natural and very logical, a multitude of intrigues mysterious things that we still don't know about, because that, unlike the Jews and the Freemasons, their Servants, we are not privy to the "secret"...

-r tSo Ft- E_Z . f . F

VVE

FROM A LEGAL POINT OF VIEW

The most formidable argument one can Opposing Freemasonry consists of monter, no longer just in its functioning and in his action, but in his situation to the point from a legal point of view. It is through this examination that we will-We will examine these brief studies.

There are two hypotheses in which the Freemasonry could victoriously repel the attacks to which she is subjected:

1° If freedom of association existed in the French legislation;

2° If Freemasonry could call itself a authorized association.

The first hypothesis eliminates itself. Everyone knows, in fact, that fake democrates who have confiscated the Republic have not never been able to decide to submit to Parliament a Bill on freedom of association. When They were part of the opposition under the Empire. these jokers loudly and vociferously demanded this right to as-association which, along with Thiers, they included among necessary freedoms >. For thirty years that

The Republic exists, they have never ceased to claim it. which again at each election in their programs and their professions of faith; but here For over twenty years they have been the absolute masters, and democratic France, the France of the Revolution The solution still awaits the proclamation of a right. which, even within monarchical countries, is considered one of the most natural rights of man.

In his courageous pamphlet on France-Masonry, Jules Lemaitre provides a brief overview of the situation of the various nations of Europe at this point of view, and he notes that, thanks to our false Republicans, in this respect we are entirely... placed at the very bottom of the civilized peoples.

The Belgian Constitution of 1831 states:
x Belgians have the right to associate; this right cannot be subject to any preventive measures.

The Dutch Constitution of 1848 states:

"The inhabitants have the right to associate and to
"To sit down."

The Swiss Constitution: x Citizens have the right to form associations, provided that there is no has within the purpose of these associations or within the the means they employ are nothing illicit or illegal.
"Dangerous for the state."

The German Constitution of 1849, the work of Frankfurt Parliament: "x The Germans have the Right to associate. This right cannot be restricted.
by no preventive measures whatsoever.

The Prussian Constitution of 1559:

x All Prussians have the right to form associations whose purpose is not contrary to the laws penal.

In England and America, the right to sit-science is as natural a thing as the faculty to walk down the street. In the eyes of all American and all Englishmen, the right to associate for a private, literary, charitable or of pleasure. is by itself a simple private right, where the State has absolutely nothing to do.

Austria and Spain itself have since freedom of association was long proclaimed.

The Austrian Basic Law of 1849 states
this :

“Austrian citizens have the right to to gather or associate, as the goal, the the means and form of the association are not contrary to general law. Dangerous for State. "

And the Spanish Constitution of 1576:

“Every Spaniard has the right to associate for the ends of human life.

France is an exception to the general rule.

It is practically the only country in Europe where the citizens may not gather in groups of more than twenty people They ring without seeing a police commissioner arrive at their home.
police officer, bloodied by his scarf and carrying all-your kinds of arrest warrants or search warrants sitton.

It is therefore understood that the French-Ma-lessons cannot respond to those who attack them how much:

— And what are you complaining about? You blame
Our doctrines? Well, do as we do, found-Create a rival association to ours and spread, to combat ours, your religious conceptions-religious, philosophical, political, or social.

This situation of free competition is, at
For us, it's legally impossible; we've just... to observe. It is no less impossible in fact — the affair of the Leagues under the Dupuy ministry, and the so-called Waldeck-Rousseau conspiracy which is merely a greatly amplified repetition of these pre-first vexatious measures, we demonstrated it on a-abundantly.

It is therefore our absolute right to turn-to turn towards all these so-called republicans who have always on their lips the words equality before the law and impartial justice, and to say to them:

— “You arrested and searched the League of Patriots, to the Anti-Semitic League, to the League of the French Fatherland, etc., etc., under pretext that these various groups do not exist that in violation of the law, and invoking article Article 291 of the Penal Code.

"We don't have to discuss it at the moment."
the validity nor the regularity of the measures that you you thought you should take, but we would like to know why only one association, the Franc-

Masonry. has remained sheltered from your ri-gueurs. |

What is "out" worth to the Street League?
Cadet, this immunity of which all independent citizens-Are the pendants surprised? Is Freemasonry-is it an association authorized by law, or would she enjoy special privileges that the "Common mortals?"

You can ask as many times as you like.
This question should be asked of any government.

You will never get a clear answer and to be precise, and for good reason, which is that Regardless of the ministry in office, there are nine cheecss out of ten so that a good half — stnor three-quarters — of its members belong to the unshakeable union of Cadet Street.

The Freemasons were perfectly aware that
That was, for them, the weak point in the armor.
Deep down, I'm convinced, they have I must have found that Mr. Charles Dupuy, although Ma-faithful and influential member of the Lodge Les Children of Gergovia, had restored to them a good poor service by not understanding them in the prosecutions, ridiculous in any case, brought against the di-Leagues.

It is all too clear, in fact, that people who have not yet having abandoned all common sense, could not to do something other than saying to oneself:

-- 4 Why is the League of the Fatherland being prosecuted?
French, the Anti-Semitic League and the League of Patriots who are open groups whose affiliates everyone knows. The function-the purpose and the objective, and why are we not pursuing it?

Freemasonry, which is a secret society, international, mysterious in every respect sight, living and acting only in silence and "In the shadows?"

The Freemasons got out of it -- it's not the first time this has happened to them — by the equi-Voodoo and lies. They replied:

— 4 Freemasonry was not prosecuted life, because it could not be. Franc-Masonry is, in fact, an authorized association.
It was invested with legal existence by Imperial decree dated January 11, 1862... >

I don't know if you agree with me, but I found a truly enormous joy, explanation of those scoundrels who swear only by the Republic, who claim to have founded it, who boast of
to be themselves only a kind of Republic selected and perfected, a Fourth Republic with a neck-"green" according to the word of F.". Gadaud, and who comes-They then told us:

— # How dare you claim that we Don't we exist legally? But that's an abomination! nation! Proof that our existence is all that The most legal and regular thing to do is that it Napoleon II himself, who gave us the in-Clothing!...x

The Freemasons who invoke the imperial decree of 1562 cannot ignore that they are committing the most Unworthy of such trickery. They know perfectly well,

Indeed, the decree of January 11th, far from of having been rendered with the aim of conferring on the Ma-
The stupidity of legal existence, on the contrary, had no legal existence.
the objective, in the mind of Napoleon III, of to domesticate her by imposing on her a grand-nater Marshal Magnan, who was not even Freemason when the Grand Mastership was bestowed upon him thus conferred ex-abruplo.

Masonic Powers other than the Grand-Eastern protests with the greatest energy against this intrusion into their domain of the au-government authority. We recently recalled the conflict that arose between Marshal Magnan, Grand Master appointed by the Emperor, contrary-regarding Masonic statutes, and Mr. Viennet, Grand Master duly appointed by the Supreme-Council. The marshal, having tried to abuse his authority to force all Masonic powers ale recognized as Grand Master of the Order in France, and to dissolve them in the event of insubordination Sion, Mr. Viennet took it from a great height and signaled to him by the following letter that he had by no means qua-
It is appropriate to speak in this tone to Freemasonry:

Paris. May 25, 1862.

You are demanding that I acknowledge this for the third time your masonic authority.", and this last summons is accompanied paid for by a decree that purports to dissolve the Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite. I declare to you that I do not I will not respond to your call, but I am reviewing your decree.

as if it had not happened,
The imperial decree that appointed you Grand Master of Grand Orient of Paris, that is to say, of a Masonic rite which has only existed since 1772, has not submitted you the old Freemasonry which dates from 1723. You are not, in one word, as you claim, the grand title of The Masonic Order in France, and you have no power to exercise with respect to the Supreme Council which I have the honor to preside; the independence of the Lodges of my obedience has been openly tolerated even by deputies the decree of which you provide support without having the right to do so.

The Emperor alone has the power to dispose of us. If S. Al. believes it his duty to resolve this with us; I submit without protest; but as no law obliges us to be Masons against our will, I would allow myself to withdraw, for My account, at your command.

I am no less concerned for your dignity. Sir

Marshal, the most humble and obedient servant,

VIENNET.

The FEF... of the Grand Orient, who represent especially in Freemasonry, the obedience of the clergy.
They pretended, it is true, to submit.
outwardly accepted the grand master whom he it had pleased the Emperor to give them, but this did not It was only reluctantly done to avoid closure of their Lodges.

The k.°. Colfavru very accurately reflected the state the spirit of the Freemasons of that era. when he
he said a few years ago: |

… # It was not without great apprehension that the
The Grand Orient was forced to adopt a grand master.
foreign to Freemasonry and who only became a Freemason after his high investiture. For the civil war marshal was one of the tragic heroes of December 2nd, and the great men coup d'état and execution are not considered to be gates by scruples z.

Moreover, the official investiture of the Grand-Master of French Freemasonry that some Modern Freemasons would like to invoke as a title of legal recognition is only one a unique exception in the annals of the Order.
As the r.' rightly points out Louis Redon, "she only existed once" for the grand mastership of Marshal Magnan, and for a period of only three years; mats, Since 1864, the French Mac.' has entered into her right, and, as before, she chooses herself-even his Grand Master.

By 1804, absolutely nothing remained. nothing of the famous decree of January 1, 1862. The Freemasonry regained its autonomy. But Elijah simultaneously lost the benefit of the pseudorecognition that for a moment the government imperial had seemed to want to grant him for fa better to maintain one's discretion...

The Freemasons are so convinced themselves that they have no legal existence that, until the trial of the Éigues, they did not
There was no difficulty in admitting it.

We read in the Granud-Ortent Bulletin?.
February issue t891, p. 554:

"The Council reiterates that these LEs are not recognized" by the State as companies and that they do not have to do any declaration to the Civil Security Authority, >

The Fi. Poulle. i at the same time, was worried of this situation and spoke of the need to do

steps to obtain recognition legal:

"You will have," he said, "a legal existence that will not..."
could not be overturned at will, that the head of state does not Could not destroy by its mere will... We say: we are going to put ourselves in the hands of power. But com-
So, we're not there yet? Power can
To close our Lodges, since he can close our Temple, if he
He wants it.

The same opinion is expressed, at a later date.
recent, in the report of the Conuniversal Masonic reference of The Hague, which took place from July 25 to 28, 1896.

In France, this document states, it would suffice to the rise to power of a ministry hostile to the Order, for that a simple decree came to close the Lodges, by virtue of Article 291 of the Penal Code.

'While fearing the rise to power of a
A ministry hostile to the Order. The Freemasons still love it.
It's better to run the risks of this accident, by the way.
It's highly unlikely, given the current climate, that... request official recognition which they obtain-would obviously do so without difficulty, but who would | the disadvantage of alienating at least part of it their freedom, and especially to expose their little ones matters of curiosity to people who are not... of third apartment.

My colleague in the House, Brother Pourquery Boisserin even discovered another argument against the legal recognition of France Masonry:

"It is better for Freemasonry," he said, "not to
to become beholden to the power from which she would derive a right association than other companies, that there is no need to designate, would also be entitled to claim. » (Bulletin du Grand-Orrent, 1890, f. 70.)

It is impossible to confess with more candor the claim that the Freemason has always had-the folly of enjoying a privileged situation to the exclusion of sion of all other societies. The Lodges experience even less the need to be recognized by power that this power, they dominate it, then-that they create it.

But it is unfortunately all too true that the Freemasonry commands as sovereign mistress to all the governments that have succeeded one another in France under the misleading label of republican governments citizens, this illegal association cannot have the longer the pretension to command also to the Law, which must be the same for all categories of citizens.

In today's ministry, as in that of tomorrow, we will say:

— g Enforce the Law.

~ As an unauthorized association of more than twenty people, Freemasonry falls under the blow of article 291 of the Penal Code, and of the law from April 1834. As a secret society, it falls under of the decree of July 20—August 2, 1548, concerning clubs.

Finally, as an international association, it is punishable under the law of March 14—23 1872.

x You have filed a lawsuit against the League antisemic, against the Patriots' League, against the League of the French Fatherland, against all the political groups that exist in France.

What are you waiting for to act with the same? vigor against the League, which has its central headquarters, under the name of Temple, rue Cadet, and its branches sales, under the name of Leges. in almost all The cities or towns of our country?

Your agents invaded homes at night, burgled drawers, raked papers, arrested and incarcerated: citizens under the pretext that these citizens were gathered in numbers of over twenty for blame your messy and criminal policy.

#7 What do your investigating judges expect from send your commissioners to the 33rd, to the Kadosh, among the Rosicrucians, among the Venerable Ones, who boast of commanding an army of twenty-five thousand affiliates and to be more masters than yourself from the government of the Republic. since they claim to give you orders and To dictate laws to you?

Of two things, one:

"Either prosecute everyone, or don't" Don't sue anyone.

We prefer this second solution, because We are always and above all for freedom.

So finally give us this right of association that tz

'all the monarchies of Europe proclaimed
for a long time and we will leave the Franks-Let the masons scratch their hands all they want, guitar to scratch us in our hand in turn and to work our best to repair the harm that the Masonic regime, falsely called republic-Cain, did to unfortunate France... >

Today's ministers will not answer us
No, that's understood, and the ministers of tomorrow will not more. They would be too afraid of being forced to go through the confessional on Cadet Street.

From these servants of the Jews and the Lodges, we we will appeal to the free people, and we will commit all those who love us and who love France to sign the following petition, which Jules Lemaitre has took the initiative and which is addressed to the Chamber Members of Parliament:

"The undersigned,

"Considering that secret societies are prohibited by law:

4. That the association known as Freemasonry is in made, by its statutes, and by its own admission, a secret society:

“That this secret, criminal character within himsame, lends a particular gravity to this fact that Freemasonry affects in giving orders to the government, to impose on the legislatureauthors the vote on bills drafted by her, and that his aim appears to be the seizure of power public views:

"That she maintains with Freemasonry"
foreign occult relations and, for that reason alone, suspicious;

"That the law must be equal for all;

"That public conscience cannot admit" that a political and secret society benefits from a system of tolerance, while the Law is applied has associations that operate openly;

Respectfully beseech the Members of Parliament toto be addressed to the Keeper of the Seals, Minister of the justice, to sanction the principle of equality before the Law by applying it to members of the the so-called Freemasonry society, article 13 of the decree-law of July 28 and August 2, 1848, maintained by the Law of June 30, 1831, 5

Petition forms can be found at Libre Parole offices. 14, Mont- Boulevard marten. and at Mr. Alain Leret's, 21, rue Croix-des~Petits-Champs, in Paris.

Paris, — Imp, Mot, 14, Boulevard Montmartre.

Liu:
wT-

FOR SALE

TO THE

ANTISEMITIC BOOKSTORE

14, Boulevard Montmartre, 14

PARIS

ge WF

Works by ÉDOUARD DRUMONT

Jewish France, 1 vol.
Jewish France, ordinary edition, 2 vols.
Jewish France in the eyes of public opinion
The Testament Gun is anti-Semitic
The Last Battle. . ....,.............
The End of a World, red binding
The Secret of Fourmies. ....
My Old Paris. (1st and 2nd series)
100 drawings by Gaston Coindie)
Gold, Mud, Blood. ....
The Jews against France. (A new Pulogae). . .

ER mu = M +
mm +

CS SE D SE ee

LL ë Rl le

PP Eh Pl EEE Pl aa

All these volumes are sent FRANCO at the above prices against s postal mandate.

í PRE EE EE Pel

tr

Coming soon:

wy

A brochure by GASTON ME RY on

[ae | so To -OUBE = '=
=. to Er Sa l L

WAR
ANTIVILEGE

Daniel KIMON

PARIS

AT THE AUTHOR'S HOME: 196, Rue de Rivoli
And at major booksellers in France and abroad

This volume was deposited at the Ministry of the Interior (Bookshop section) in October 1897.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR

ISRAELITE POLICY

PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDY

I. Politicians. — II. Journalists. — III. Bankers. — IV. Jews in political parties.
— V. Judaism and France. — Combined action of the Jews and the Germans against France. —

Conclusion

| flight. in-18 Jesus, paperback, price 3 fr. 50 (postage paid).

Third edition.

THE PATHOLOGY OF ISLAM

and the means to destroy it.

Antagonism between Christian and Semitic societies.— Psychology of France. — Definition of the Religion and Politics. — Islamism. — Psychology of Muhammad and the Quran. — Explanation of the Fatalism.—Errors of Scholars. —Osmanism. —Mysterious Power of Judaism. — Solution of

The Armenian and Eastern Question.

| flight. in-18 Jesus, br., price 2 fr. 50 (free 2 fr. 80)

Third edition.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Explanation of Raphael's painting

The Grandeur of Anti-Semitism

Jewish influence produces cerebral automatism

Arabs deported to New Caledonia

Egypt abandoned to the English

The French Parliament consents to the deposition of France
The massacres in Armenia

The disintegrating influence of the Jews

Universality of the dissolving action of the Jews

Jewish infiltration constitutes a morbid immensity.

Panama

Reinach's Resurrection

Jewish suicide

Contagion of Jewish suicide in modern society

Foreign invasion. Impending denationalization and de-Frenchification of French territory.
If France were denationalized, what would be the condition of the Jews there?
How to combat brain automatisms

The Anti-Semitic Revolution

The Jewish Police

The Israelite Tripod

Jewish Slander

Jewish police espionage genius

Its functions

Its traps

The Role of the Jewish Police in Parliamentary Corruption
Why is Parliament so poorly composed?

The Jewish police are jeopardizing the security of France
Measures to be taken against the Jewish police

The Israeli Army and the Anti-Semitic Army

Anti-Semitic Army Organization

The anti-Semitic specialists.

Advice for specialists

Study of Jewish Crime

The speaker, the statesman, the Committee

Foundation in Paris of an anti-Semitic institute

First steps to be taken against Jewish preponderance
The Jews must be removed from the top management positions in the railways.
Dissolution of the Universal Israelite Alliance
Consequences of the first resolutions that will be taken against the Universal Israelite Alliance
Repeal of the Crémieux Decree

French nationality and anti-Semitism

The Role of Jews in the French Revolution

The Jewish Impulse in the Crimes of the Revolution

The French Rabbinate and the French Revolution

Circular from Mr. Zadoc-Kahn

Jewish societies in Paris

Anti-Semitism is, in France, a regenerative force
How will the Revolution take place?

The French woman and Anti-Semitism

The Catholic Clergy and Anti-Semitism

New duties of the Catholic clergy

SAINT MICHAEL OVERCOMING THE DEMON
SYMBOL OF ANTI-WARF WAR

Explanation of Raphael's painting, Louvre Museum

Michel is an orientalization of the Greek word Hàxn meaning "War". The two vowels à and ń have were transposed to make uńxá “Mikha” with the Hebrew el, Mikha-el, Michael.

The archangel Michael represents Christian genius at the psychological moment of victory. The demon represents Judaism with the supple body of a reptile, the eyes of a serpent, the beak of a vulture, the convulsive monkey grimace.

His goat horns represent his immorality. His dragon tail symbolizes his destructive power and his countless devastating consequences: stock market speculation, crashes, hoarding, borrowing corrupt governments, fraudulent speculation (companies, Panama, etc.), where savings are swallowed up, ruin of nations through Revolutions and Wars.

Its claws paint a picture of its ferocious cruelty, both violent and refined. The poker it holds in His hands are the image of his incendiary genius, a symbol of social hatreds. He wears strange wings, of a particular structure, wings of a bird of Darkness, instruments of crime to penetrate at night within the government and silently sway consciences. It is on these wings that he is trying to climb to the sky.

But Christian genius, having studied its rapid movements in every way, engages in the struggle, the terrace and strikes it down. Such will be, until the end of time, the destiny of Israelism.

The grandeur of anti-Semitism.
Antisemitism is essentially a big, serious, laborious, absorbing thing.

For France, the nobility of nations, this is a matter of life or death, a rebirth.
rapid, dazzling, to operate, or of an irremediable decadence to suffer, of a slow disappearance and gloomy, leaving behind an eternal void.

For Christian France, condemned by Semitism, its implacable enemy, this meant withering away and... to become anemic in humiliation and servitude, to reorganize her strength, to become again what she should be,
that is to say, an army that commands, and not a flock of sheep fleeced by crooks of all kinds.
country, to break free from the Reptile's grasp, to overpower it in turn, to break its vertebrae, to

to finally regain, after a hard struggle, the direction of intelligence and the hegemony of civilization.

Antisemitism is often also a profoundly sad thing. Indeed, to dismantle the power Israelite, one must penetrate to the heart of Judaism, probe what is most hidden within it, illuminate what it has darker and blacker.

However, studying the development of human nature in the paths of evil, the cultivated perverse instincts in a hothouse and constructed at an immense depth, with the system of a science, perfection of an art, the immutable underpinnings of heredity, and the irreducible tenacity of the religious Idea;

To study the activity of a perpetually overexcited, inventive, indomitable cunning, the artifices of a greed as calculating as algebra, as cunning as a magician, as agile as a bird of prey; the maneuvers of a corrupting intrigue, designed to insinuate itself into all social organs and to

to carry gangrene;

To study the methods of a daring advertisement that confuses minds and shapes reputations, pushes to the forefront those whom the Jews have designated — puppets or corrupt officials, always their mannequins; — of a slander as subtle as fire and as acidic as vitriol, which attacks all this which authoritatively represents the true France, depresses him, isolates him, uproots him, destroys him, and corrodes the talents in bloom, drying up the sources of life around them;

Explain how all these forces of evil achieved such rapid and appalling success, how they form an organization endowed with a terrible unity of action, how everywhere triumphant, they portray the Jew as a being of a superior structure and, in a way, as the king of modern humanity;

Is this an attractive task, an aesthetic contemplation, a relaxation of the mind?

We must therefore forgive antisemitism its harsh appearance. It has the physiognomy of problems that darken the horizon; it is the anxious expression of the historical phase that France is going through, of His suffering, his extreme peril. What he analyzes is harmful, what he pollizes is an agent of atrophy and death, what he proposes to reduce to impotence is the most cunning form of domination.

and the most destructive in the universe.

If it elevates the soul, it is by revealing dark abysses to it, by leading it through a labyrinth filled of darkness and monsters, from which she emerges oppressed, suffocated, but ready for sublime impulses towards the beautiful and divine. If it expands thought, it is because it imposes labors upon it that overwhelms it, that it compels it to

to open up new spaces, to read in the unknown, to decipher the enigmatic, to overcome the impenetrable.

Jewish influence produces cerebral automatism.

Against this Judaism, so profoundly evil, yet so extraordinarily strong, how can we organize the Struggle? The difficulties are countless, the obstacles frightening.

One of these obstacles, at first glance, seems like an insurmountable mountain. Here it is: the Societies dominated by Jews inevitably fall under the regime of CEREBRAL AUTOMATISM.

Not only does the Jew monopolize wealth and public offices there, but he also seizes control of... intelligences. Such a society, afflicted by mental decay, has nothing left but ideas, feelings, the dreams, the obsessions he suggests to her. He, at will, fills her with hallucinations of ghosts, blinds her as if he
It paralyzed her retina, pulsed her like a hypnotized person, immobilized her like a cataleptic, it

It stupefies the memory, it abolishes foresight.

It is the Jew who dictates his sympathies, antipathies, admirations, and repulsions, who creates the currents of opinion, which impetuously propels minds in certain directions, and, in others, it freezes them of indifference and anesthetizes them. He is the one who acts as a broker between the ambitious and the public, who distributes, as he pleases, glory and obscurity, popularity and contempt.

Where its force stirs minds, they are illuminated, vibrant. Where this jolt is lacking, They are lazy, inert. The Jew thus becomes an indispensable instigator, a mediator without whom the the selection of men for power, the various movements of political life, the very acts of the intellectual life is no longer fulfilled.

A strange domination, which penetrates, so to speak, into the very heart of the brain, removing the organs the noblest, the most precious faculties, individual reflection, reason, foresight, and the replaces it with mechanical springs that it operates according to its selfish interests and passions.

base and cruel instincts!

Arabs deported to New Caledonia.

I will be asked to demonstrate with proofs, to clarify with examples. Ah! Examples, the Evidence abounds. It's plentiful; there's an embarrassment of riches. The history of the Contemporary France is almost entirely defined by this shameful state of dependency, by this mental deterioration.

A first fact.

In 1871, a major insurrection broke out in Algeria. The cause is well known: the famous decree of the 24th October 1870, known as the Crémieux Decree, which conferred, en masse, upon the indigenous Jewish population, the French nationality. This was, in the highest degree, an unjust and criminal act. The Arab was paying his Blood for France, overwhelmed by the German invasion. As a reward, he was given for Master the Jew, despised and abhorred. I say: as master, because the Jew was, in fact, becoming the sovereign of Algeria.

Indeed, since that time, the history of Algeria has been one of Jewish tyranny and the system Israelite, with the voracious exploitation, multifaceted corruption, and electoral prostitution that they characterize. This story, after a long detour, seems to be reaching a turning point; will it Renewed by heroic efforts? Will the French there have the strength, the perseverance? Will energy transport be unshakeable? Will it live up to their expectations and ours?

Patriotic?

Jewish exploitation, moreover, was the poison of our African conquest. Behind the needless cruelties, the barbaric pillaging, which, alas! accompanied it, one encounters at every step the Jew, the merchant of booty, the beneficiary of the raids, the middleman who deceives everyone and gets rich every time slaughters itself. If it is true that at the capture of Tlemcen, our soldiers tore off the ears of Arab women Their counterparts, you can be sure the Jew was there, behind them, to buy them at a bargain price. And what bargains they were! of usury with our officers! What fraudulent speculation at the expense of the Treasury! What concessions he obtained from an administration molded in his own image! And the Arab, to what degree of Misery, he has reduced it! Truly, it is to endow Israel with an incomparable Promised Land and to found upon it the shores of the Mediterranean a Jewish kingdom, that four hundred thousand French soldiers died and that the

France has spent billions!

Here, moreover, are some extracts from the Report made to the National Assembly by Mr. de la Sicotière, on behalf of

from the Commission of Inquiry into the 1871 Insurrection. (Volume 1, No. 1416 g, page 305 et seq.):
It was especially among the Arabs most devoted to France that the irritation and humiliation caused by the naturalization was taking shape. "It's not the Jews who become French," they said with

"Bitterness; it is the French who are becoming Jews." (Akbhar and Union of Sétif, May 1871.)

The most respectable authorities, the most competent men to assess the effects of this
The decree did not hesitate to include it among the main causes of the insurrection. Testimonies about this

The points are numerous and formal.

Mr. Alexis Lambert, Commissioner General, also requested the suspension from the Government immediate execution of this decree, as necessary for the tranquility of Algeria, on May 1, 1871 (p.
308).

Mr. de Prébois, a retired squadron leader and former Representative of Algeria in 1848, was more severe

Again.

At the time when a Committee, known as the Republican or Defense Committee, was obtaining the mass naturalization of Jews, that is to say, the least interesting part of the Algerian population and certainly the most insignificant

From a defense standpoint, the insurrection of the Arab and Kabyle populations was a response to this.

When they learned of Mr. Crémieux's decree granting citizenship to Jews, their exasperation turned in profound contempt for the French who had stooped so low as to send delegates to the Jew of Bordeaux to solicit their assimilation into a despised race. Then the first symptoms of Uprisings broke out. For anyone familiar with these proud and warlike native races, it is
It was evident that their pride was wounded by the threat of being subordinated to the Jews.

In their eyes, the French were sinking to the level of the Jews.

Thus, the Jews who were naturalized for electoral purposes, after having caused us much trouble...

The difficulties that had plagued the colony since the day of the conquest were bound to endanger it. (Akhbar, April 25, 1871.)

General Ducrot wrote in 1871 (The Truth about Algeria, Paris, in-8°, p. 49):

"Mr. Crémieux's decree on the naturalization of Jews set everything ablaze."

The author of the pamphlet: / Algeria before the National Assembly (1871):
"Mass naturalization was a grave mistake. The natives could not see it and did not see it."
that it was an act of preference for which nothing seemed to motivate it. It had a significant impact on the tribes.
considerable, and most of the Indigenous people felt insulted in their pride by this arrangement. "

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR AO

The Courier of Mostaganem, April 29, 1871:
"The naturalization of Jews was one of the main causes of the insurrection; it hurled the insult in their faces."

of the Muslim people, by proclaiming the supremacy of the native Jew over the Arab and the Kabyle.

Akbar, November 15, 1871:
"Do you know what you've done with this decree? I'll tell you. You've subjugated, annihilated the French population. You have placed the municipal councils, the General councils and the National Assembly. By virtue of their numbers, they will hold the elections, they Those who possess wealth will have power. If that is your goal, it is achieved. But is that the thought of the France? Is it for the great satisfaction of the native Israelites that France has been paying its "Blood and lavish millions in Algeria? You, Mr. Minister, are creating an Israelite kingdom."

Algerian Truth, March 12, 1871:
"While citizen Gambetta was being deceived and betrayed by the pack of crooked suppliers who had shot down around the Tours delegation, citizen Crémieux worked tirelessly at the

"The political and administrative disorganization of Algeria was preparing the ground for an indigenous uprising."

La France Nouvelle, May 20, 1871:
“If the citizens rose up,” some say, “the fault lies with the Crémieux decree, which with a stroke of the pen...”

naturalized all Algerian Jews. Now, who doesn't know the hatred of the Arab against the Jew? The Jew, who before the conquest he trampled underfoot, whom he covered with the utmost contempt? And from this execrable being, you have made a Frenchman! You make him, his former slave, his master! That's why the native rises up, the hatred in his heart and the desire for revenge in his soul.

The Governor General, in his dispatch of May 1, 1871, requests the withdrawal from the Minister of the Interior immediate effect of the decree:

“It creates serious difficulties for me,” he said. “This naturalization of Jews was the determining cause of...”

the insurrection.

General Rustaud telegraphed Citizen Gambetta, Minister of the Interior in Bordeaux:
"If, at the moment, decree of October 24th, the mass naturalization of indigenous Algerian Jews, is not
"Not reported, it's a crime...., In the name of the Republic, we urge you to rescind this decree..." (p. 312.)

The 1871 uprising was followed by harsh sentences and confiscations. Two hundred Fifty Arabs had been deported to New Caledonia; the Jews had made them mercilessly condemn them, at the same time as they had acquired their confiscated properties at good market, as the Jews know how to acquire in the aftermath of violent struggles, when the ground is covered with ruins and littered with corpses.

It is then that they operate with the full force of their predatory instincts; the Jew, as we know, is the king vultures, as it is the most flexible of reptiles and the most venomous of parasites.

However, as the years went by, amnesties came to do their restorative work for all. except for the unfortunate Arabs. They saw the condemned of the Commune leave and return to France.

For them, there was neither forgiveness nor mercy. An inexorable power had decreed that they would die.

at the antipodes, and, with the exception of about twenty, they all died there.

How could France, the quintessential magnanimous nation, have defiled itself with such barbarity?
Protests, however, were not lacking. In Parliament, outside Parliament, there were many times demanded that the benefits of amnesty be extended to those convicted in the Algerian uprising of 1871. Mrs. Séverine dedicated a passionate and generous article to them; she took care to declare loudly proclaimed that she was not anti-Semitic, that she never would be.

It was all in vain, because the wretched African Israelites, with their trembling souls, with their carrion-like souls, to translate the Arabic expression 1, they did not want the deportees to return and disturb their security of unpunished plunderers, and also because, it must be admitted, French public opinion, controlled by Like a sleepwalker under the spell of her hypnotist, she remained asleep, cowardly apathetic. None

No movement occurred, and the attempts fizzled out in silence and emptiness.

To let oneself be fleeced, stripped, and expropriated by the Jew is nothing but weakness and stupidity. But to consent to
To serve as an instrument of Jewish cowardice and wickedness is to deliberately dedicate oneself to the disapproval of the universe.

This is a perfect example of cerebral automatism: France incapable of wanting what the Jew wants from her defends against wanting, France forgetting, at the suggestion of its perfidious dominator, its traditions generous and with that kindness of heart that makes it a chosen nation. God protects it because it is
She was helpful to the weak and forgiving to the vanquished. She applauded when Prince Louis-Napoleon granted, on parole, freedom to Abd-el-Kader, the energetic and chivalrous Arab hero, who has now ceased forever to be our enemy. What a fall, what a shame, when his
For a quarter of a century, rulers left behind unfortunate people who had been insurgents, but no traitors, perishing one after another on a distant beach, because the Jews

they ordered it!2

Djifat, meaning carrion, is a synonym for Jew in Arabic.

See in La Libre Parole of August 20, 1897, the eloquent article by Edouard Drumont on Algeria.

Speaking of Mokrani, the main figure in the insurrection, Drumont highlights the contrast between him and the one who
Mr. Zadoc-Kahn called him "the unforgettable Crémieux." (Speech delivered on March 1, 1885, on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Alliance Israélite Universelle, Sermons and Addresses, 2nd series, page 236.) “It was

"Truly," he said, "a great and proud figure, this Mokrani, a figure of a loyal enemy who forms a striking contrast with the oblique figure of this Crémieux who, at the moment when France was dying, did not think than to the interests of his fellow believers.

"To enrich a few Yuddis," Drumont concluded, "the great, dazzling France of '89, the France that has emancipated nations and broke the chains of the oppressed, imposed the long sufferings of the penal colony on men guilty only of having defended the independence of their country... »

See also the article by Edouard Drumont, "Un Cuba Français", in La Libre Parole of September 18, 1897.

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR - 11-

IV

Egypt abandoned to the British.

I'll move on to a second example. Here, it's no longer a question of a dishonorable act, but of the demolition of the French power in the East, through the abandonment of Egypt to the British. No need for a history lesson. and to retrace France's glorious and epic eastern past. In these lands, in the work that she accomplished there, her idealistic genius and the interests of her politics are intimately intertwined and go hand in hand. His influence, his prestige in the East are perhaps even, of all his heritage grandeur, the most beautiful and charming thing there is. By liberating the tomb of Christ, it is the idea Christian, which she wrested from the clutches of Islam—this regression of human nature in the orgies of violence, voluptuousness and crime.

How this influence, this prestige, was ruined—who can ignore it? The situation of France in Egypt was hindering England's grand projects. England was determined to eliminate a a break in the continuity of communications within its gigantic empire; Egypt, with the canal of Suez was the linchpin of its universal domination. That is why, since 1870, it had pursued, without relaxation, through oblique maneuvers, the goal of which no serious statesman could However, let's not delude ourselves; the solution to this crucial problem is to dislodge France from Egypt and establish itself there.

as sovereign. The purchase of the Khedival shares of the Canal and the acquisition of Cyprus were works approach. The skillfully provoked insurrection of Arabi Pasha served as a pretext. We know what events unfolded in quick succession.

But what is most remarkable, nay, most incredible, is the sluggishness of public opinion.

in France and the weakness of the French Parliament, which consented to everything.

Why this apathy in public opinion? France, threatened in its most serious interests, fails to notice.

no danger; she doesn't even stir on the surface; she sleeps as if drowsy from a narcotic.

Need I say it? Jewish influence was there. France's mind was dulled by this elixir of adulterated conceptions and frivolous chimeras that the Jews force upon the nations they have invaded.
he was scavenging his inheritance, and she remained calm like a dazed woman whose belongings the junk dealers were importing the most precious furniture, assuring her that it relieves her of vile scrap metal, of which the merchants of goods would sell the most beautiful properties, boasting of doing her a service, of ridding her of them. of unproductive buildings, expensive to maintain and which it would be foolish to keep. France was doing this what the Jews wanted; she had drunk their drugs.

Naturally, the Archives Israélites have been ranting about what they call the legend of Mokrani (see the latest (issue from 1895 and the first issue of 1896.)

V

The French Parliament consents to the deposition of France.

But what about Parliament? Can one imagine a French Assembly accepting, organizing the deposition of the France and the supremacy of England, its age-old enemy? Has anything ever happened Comparable in the history of barbarian or civilized nations?

England, it must be said, had taken its measures admirably. With its prodigious art of making action through indirect influences, she had resorted to a prominent Jew, well-off and gifted with the mental fortitude needed to dominate certain parliamentary figures who believed themselves to be eagles, but in reality, they only wanted to submit to the influence of a wealthy backer. If ever A man has rendered England an invaluable service; that is Cornelius Herz, who had preached, at the In the Chamber of Deputies, the anti-patriotic argument for abstention prevailed, and its consequences followed promptly.

Moreover, it's impossible to imagine the absurdities that the Chamber listened to and applauded. a well-known speaker, too well-known — God grant that he no longer has the slightest influence on French politics influence! — was able to say that he highly welcomed the presence of the English in Egypt, that France he could not go there to serve English interests, that it was beneath his dignity to stand guard along the Suez Canal, that if one went to Egypt, it would inevitably lead to war with England, that a A fatal hand was preparing an explosion, setting a trap for France, whose freedom of action had to be preserved. etc. (Sessions of July 20 and 30, 1882).

This vulgar sophistry, accompanied by a great deal of self-assurance and boulevardier nonchalance, has led the Chamber and determined the most cowardly and, in any case, one of the most fatal resolutions that has never taken a French assembly.

Isn't this a phenomenon of Jewish audacity? An adventurer, an exotic scoundrel, subjugating the Parliament obeys his wishes with the help of deceitful spiritual leaders, political parties whom he sponsors, He fascinates and directs! I am convinced that those receiving subsidies took him for an oracle and did not believe him.

not to betray France by obeying its wishes.

Perhaps they were less coldly corrupt than careless and weak. Their small minds were subject to the ascendancy of the infinitely more robust brain of Cornelius Herz, who was for them the light and reason, as well as a political patron. Every Frenchman wants a master, he said.

Voltaire; a great demagogue governed by a generous Jew should not be too surprising.

Incidentally, when the French government requested the extradition of Cornelius Herz, it A complete lack of tact. England handing over Cornelius Herz! They might as well have asked him to evacuate Egypt, Malta or Gibraltar.

But, if public opinion had not been bewitched by the Jewish spell, the harmful activity of the prodigious corrupter would not have been so successful; a swift, irresistible reaction would have erupted, and Parliament would have shrank back in the face of immeasurable cowardice, brazenly presented as an act of wisdom and high politics.

This reaction did not occur. France vaguely opened its eyes, then fell back asleep. in this fatal sleep where nations die, unless Providence, awakening them with a blow of thunder, do not come to snatch them from their peril and pull them from the abyss into which they are beginning to descend.

VI

The Armenian Massacres.

The third example is even more recent; it's not from fifteen years ago, but from yesterday. I want to talk about The massacres in Armenia. I'm not describing them, nor even summarizing them. They are events that cross the line into horror. Even the most imagination-familiar with the dramas of madness and the The furies of crime are powerless to imagine them. This Islam, with its bloodthirsty impulses, this nervousness, elevated to the status of a religion, engaging in murder, pillage, and other acts of violence across a vast expanse of land.

Rape, under a directive originating from Mecca and Constantinople, what a revealing spectacle!

Never before had the hideous mental illness, the spread of which has shaken Christendom and which would have made the conquest of the whole world, if on the historic battlefields of Poitiers, France had not stopped the march of no scourge had ever manifested itself in a more terrible eruption. The Omars, the Amru, the Caleds, the Selims, have Fewer Christians were put to death than Armenians were slaughtered in a few months. At the capture of Constantinople under Muhammad II, less blood was shed.

Could France remain passive? Shouldn't it have acted immediately, with the authority it possessed? exercises around her when she pursues a great goal, to take the lead in the moral uprising of Europe and transform it into a swift and devastating action?

Wasn't this the case for showing Islam that the France of Peter the Hermit and Saint Louis is still alive, that the Republic, successor to the Monarchy, has not withered its soul, nor diminished its genius, that the Gesta Dei per Francos is its immortal motto?

Well! France did nothing. It barely deliberated. There were arrests, meetings, and Eloquent words, impassioned articles; ardent men have tried to stir public opinion. Ultimately, behind the individual or collective demonstrations, no national movement has emerged. drawn; none of the powerful upheavals that dictate to an indecisive government and force it to to do what the nation wants, did not happen. France reacted with indignation as an indolent spectator, willing to rely on false statements and vague assurances. She was incapable of everything impetuosity, of any passionate outburst, of any bold resolution. The Israelite Bank, this The vile aristocracy, protectors of the Ottoman Empire, would not allow it; it tolerated only official hypocrisy, with its diplomatic formalities and pompous language, ostentatiously speaking of "European Concert" and not uttering a word, of course, from the financial syndicate, his close advisor and his constant source of inspiration.

Moreover, upon closer examination of these events, it becomes difficult not to hypothesize that they were organized long in advance by the leading Jews of Berlin and London, in agreement with those of Constantinople. The mechanism of secret societies, which Anglo-German Jews know how to use in Perfection, under their impetus, worked on both sides. That is how they precipitated the Armenians and Muslims against each other, with this simultaneous action that characterizes political movements led by occult associations.

Is it any wonder, then, that people in the East say: "France no longer counts, no longer exists!" or

"Well, 'France! She is the slave of the Jews!'"

Ah! If, instead of three hundred thousand Armenians, it had been a matter of a few hundred Israelites, swindlers, Usurers, merchants, professional fences, pimps, owners of brothels in Galata, traders of hashish and aphrodisiacs, spies betraying all those who use them, what eagerness one would have seen! How the French government would have rushed to their aid, at the urging of the Synagogues and the Universal Israelite Alliance. French warships are said to have crossed the Dardanelles, followed English, German, Italian, and Russian ships. Constantinople was said to have been occupied, the murderers arrested en masse, and, for every Israelite less, twenty Turks would have been beheaded.

Alas! They were only Christians, that is to say, people whom Islam regards as dogs, and the Judaism as if it were mere cattle.

One last thought on these grim events. If the Sultan had not been perfectly informed about the state of public opinion in France, had he not considered it to have fallen, as had the French Government, under the absolute domination of Finance, he would never have dared to order or permit cruelty Muslim women were unleashed on such a vast scale, with such frenetic intensity. Well-informed, the Sultan knew that French public opinion, which he feared most, would not be revolutionized and that

The most vehement protests would be dampened by government inaction.

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR 10%

I cannot go into the details that the study of these facts would require here. In my next
In this volume, I will investigate the role that must be attributed to the occult actions of the Armenian massacres.
Jews, to their deep hatred for the Armenians, their quintessential mercantile rivals in these countries, and the relationship of these events with the gradual reconstruction of Palestine into a Jewish state.
The weakening of the Armenian element in Türkiye and the rise of the Jewish element were, in
In any case, the most immediate effects of these massacres, carried out and directed with the same genius exterminator than those of the French Revolution.

I must only observe here that the Jewish state will in no way aim to unite all the Jews of the land, but only to give universal Israelite domination a geographical center.

The Temple would then be rebuilt on Mount Moria![3]

This would be the pinnacle of Israel's triumphs. Would Calvary and the Holy Sepulchre still be tolerated?

In any case, Judaism would majestically crush Christianity.

VII

The disintegrating influence of the Jews.

These strange events, this neglect of its own interests and grandeur on the part of a nation that boasts long centuries of existence and glory, having endured so many terrible struggles and weathered so many storms, This inability, after having shaken the world, to act with virility and willpower, is not things so mysterious, so inexplicable that one might believe it at first glance. Far from it: these are the fatal consequences of Israelite influence. The nature of this influence is, in fact, to be disintegrating.

Let me explain.

A nation cannot exist without politics, I mean, without intellectual, scholarly and profound, which guides its destinies. This intellectual force has, in thinkers and statesmen, its centers of concentration. But it is necessary that it radiate in all directions, that the elements Historical and geographical aspects of national power, the conditions of its development, the material interests attached to it, the hatreds, ambitions, projects, intrigues, machinations of its enemies are, to varying degrees, present in everyone's minds. When these ideas circulate in all the brains and that they are clear, positive, vigorous, a nation is heading; it knows what it must to do and its rulers know it even better. Between them and the nation reigns trust and harmony. Similarly, its new interests effortlessly come together alongside the old ones. as if around a common trunk, and the resolutions that the complications of the present dictate to its era

$ This is a fixed idea of the Jews. “The Temple, it is true,” says Mr. Zadoc-Kahn {Sermons and Addresses 1 159), will be rebuilt a second time on Mount Moria.

Series p.

Statesmen are bound to its age-old traditions within the framework of a powerful unity that develops without ever stopping.

When, on the contrary, this set of ideas collapses, and a nation, losing en masse the vigilance and lucidity, abandons itself to dissolving reveries, to ideological phantasmagorias, where His greatest interests and the most immediate dangers become invisible to him, then there is no longer any politics, nor direction. Public reason is obscured; statesmen disappear; the ambitious vulgar, low-level schemers, rhetoricians, declaimers, charlatans, merchants, Pornographers occupy the stage, while financiers, behind the scenes, pull the strings and make to advance, move, retreat politicians like puppets.

I am astonished by the mindset of so many French people. I cannot better express it. to characterize it by comparing it to the ecstatic madness produced by certain poisons and diseases of the brain. The defining characteristic of these states is an incredible carefree state, combined with delightful dreams.

Speak to these French people about the grandeur, the prestige, the glory of France; they will listen to you.
will applaud. Show them the foreign invasion infiltrating from all sides, the underground work of English in Algeria, German in Morocco, the destruction of French power in the East which It's drawing to a close, and you generally won't be able to hold their attention. It seems that it
It has become impossible for them to grasp, in thought, this totality, so complex and so magnificent.

developed over centuries, which is called France.

This is indeed the disintegration of the political idea. What was solid, substantial, and profound about it, the historical foundations, the geographical context, the realities of the present, the predictions of the future, all of that It crumbled, dissolved, evaporated. All that remained was the phraseology, the bursts of lyricism, the surfaces sound, hollow or verbose illusions.

The cause of this disintegration lies primarily in the influence of Israel. From the moment the Judaism, an international or, more precisely, anti-national element, was making its way into politics French, through finance, the press, and secret societies, as an extremely active factor, there necessarily brought unrest and instability. A stranger to France, his temporary homeland, the Jew a system was being created to exacerbate negative tendencies and replace them with true patriotism the insane dreams of cosmopolitanism and the ramblings of a delusional vanity.

He was, alas, listened to all too well. France, seized by vertigo, was forging a novel of apostolate.
humanitarian, a mission of renewal, worthy of a flock of Freemasons. Instead of looking at it with a

With a defiant eye on the neighboring nations, full of hatred and consumed by ambition, she made it her duty to... help to transform into large political units. Certainly, if France, in 1859, committed the inconceivable folly of throwing away, by watering them with his blood, the foundations of Italian unity, the influence

The influence of Jews on people's minds played a significant role; if, in 1870, it was so cruelly crushed, it was because

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR - 17 -

The Jews, increasingly controlling public opinion, had concealed the German invasion from him. France was able to thus becoming, in politics, a phenomenon of ignorance and shortsightedness.

The most remarkable thing is the slowness with which it lights up and its inability to become irritated. All the
The world knows that the Jews were the perpetrators of the Algerian uprising of 1871; however, this crime
The public did not provoke any anger against them. On the contrary, from that time onward, the Jewish schemers proliferated to the point of overcrowding political life; they were seen, more and more, to arrive deputies, senators, ministers, prefects, mayors, to govern the country, to overturn its institutions 4 and

The idea of eliminating them from deliberative bodies is barely emerging.

In any case, the Jewish spirit must be expelled from politics, so that none of it remains.
vestige. Then a work of reconstruction can begin; all that Semitic influence has destroyed by its poisoned breath, it will be necessary to do it again, to restore to the sources of national vitality their abundance and their purity, wresting French idealism from the Masonic mystifications of brotherhood universal, above all to inspire in France a holy energy that will allow her to strike down with lightning bolts

The tyranny of gold. May we undertake this work and accomplish it!

* He is a Jewish harlequin — one must call men, like things, by their name — Mr. Alfred Naquet, who has transformed, in our country, the divine institution of marriage into legal cohabitation. French society has never, since its origins, underwent a deeper upheaval.

The law of divorce is a wound that constantly festers and spreads its fetid stench to the smallest details.
villages.

The Catholic clergy currently has a magnificent task to undertake: to organize a great agitation for to obtain from Parliament the repeal of this law. He is certain to find an echo everywhere, especially if he knows how to bring, in This campaign, the vigor of an absolute conviction, and the paralleling of religious spirit with scrutiny positive of the facts. If he succeeds in this undertaking, France, already disgusted by the divorce, but lacking the strength to to get rid of it, she will be highly grateful to him for having placed marriage back on the national foundation of indissolubility; because divorce is not a French and civilizing institution, it is eminently an institution oriental and bestial. "Go to the Jews!" cried Bishop Freppel in disgust from the tribune, with infinite truth.
The same Mr. Naquet, whom so many fools consider to be a first-rate intellect, was the initiator, at the Chamber of Deputies, and the rapporteur, both in that Chamber and in the Senate, of the law of March 28, 1885 which legalized gambling operations involving government securities and commodities.

Thanks to this law, backroom dealers and unlicensed brokers no longer have to fear the gambling exception, which has been abolished as immoral (!!!); they can thus, safely, fleece their dupes, not only until the exhaustion of the Coverage, but down to the last penny.

Furthermore, gambling operations involving commodities have, in recent times, taken on an alarming extent in various parts of France, particularly in the western departments. A large number of people, foreigners to traders speculate on flour, sugar, alcohol, oil, etc., and are ruined in a few months. The printed forms that the agents they work with make them sign reek of fraud. It's to such an extent that the Paris Court of Appeal endeavored to react against this scourge, by declaring the law of 1885 inapplicable whenever it was clear from the documents and circumstances that the operations being intended to be resolved by the payment of simple differences, they openly constitute a game.

HIV

Universality of the dissolving action of the Jews.

This characteristic Jewish influence is found everywhere; nothing escapes it. moral conceptions, notions of practical common sense, literature itself, everything that is subject to it, of a

In general, it deteriorates, becomes distorted, becomes depraved.

Men who had long been honest, having come into contact with Jews, breathed in their atmosphere and were influenced by it. absorbed the miasmas. An astonishing metamorphosis soon took place within them. To make a fortune quickly became their fixed and obsessive idea; skill freed from vain scruples was appeared as an intelligent force that had to be appropriated at all costs.

This particular member of parliament, who, deep in his province, was considered the very embodiment of integrity, could not resist a few conversations with the barons of High Swindling and the dazzling of their luxury 5.

The contagion of this triumphant immorality and the splendors of this Asian opulence superb, seized him, and, in a frenzy of desire and pleasure, his consciousness disintegrated. He became what you know, he did what we know, not to mention what we don't know not, and that's something we'll never know.

Let us not forget that the Jewish financier possesses a corrupting magnetism. He who allows himself to be charmed Through him, corruption begins; he who lives in his inner circle worships the same gods as him: gold and lies.
and Sensuality. And what skill to embellish corruption, to make it attractive, to clothe it in Seductive colors! He is its artist, poet, and priest, as well as its sophist with his theories.

unscrupulous and Machiavellian with diabolical schemes.

In economic matters, the same disintegration can be observed. This is under the influence of the Jews.
that mad speculation has driven so many minds away from work and useful activity. It happened there, among Many people, a destruction of healthy ideas, which have been replaced by a devouring chimera.
In general, the chimera, queen of devastation, only left them after total ruin. How many unfortunate souls... are committing suicide! Can you see them holding, in one of their clenched hands, the last account of liquidation and, on the other hand, bringing the dose of strychnine to their mouths? And their children, the disenfranchised sons, Girls who have fallen into gallantry! For sociologists, this would provide material for a painful study.
Investigation: Statistics on the devastation of all kinds caused by rampant speculation and market crashes financial figures would be far more revealing of our moral and social state than those published by the Ministries of Public Instruction or Commerce.

See: Israelite Politics, by D. Kimon, ch. XXII. The corruption of politicians.

In the literary sphere, is it believed that the Jewish spirit, false, grating, grimacing, acidic, hateful, living on mocking puerilities, pretentious modernism, concealing its sterile narrowness and its rotation in a few fixed ideas under a loquacious mobility and artificial disdain 6, not also has rubbed off on the French spirit and has not, more or less, deprived it of its harmony, its charming graces, its sense of elevation and truth?

One telling fact, in any case, is that Albert Wolf's writings could be considered a product of The French spirit, what am I saying? For its quintessence, its refinement, the ultimate expression of elegance French. If there is a literature that reeks of German-Jewishness, with its monkey-like malice, pushing everything to the Caricature, the comical, the grotesque, is that of this character, before whom our Our artists, our novelists, our thinkers. Even our sportsmen and our high-lifers. To admire it, one had to to truly have a taste for physical and intellectual ugliness; it was to pay homage to a Harpy tainting everything she touches.

Albert Wolf is dead, let the venomous creatures, vipers or scorpions, who came here, sleep in peace. from Germany; but despite naturalization, the decoration of the Legion of Honour and the enthusiasm of a A frivolous public, dazzled by trickery and Parisian gimmicks, let's not make them into French illustrations.

I return to Cerebral Automatism, but only to close this chapter. The subject is far from being Exhausted. I still need to talk about two great and striking examples of this disease and look for the ways to combat it.

Perhaps I have tired the reader's attention by focusing on too many things already. But antisemitism is The opposite of amusement. Profound foresight, tireless application, fearless will, energy Without rest: that's the motto. One doesn't become an anti-Semite by chance.

IX

Jewish infiltration constitutes a morbid immensity.

Before presenting new examples of mental illness, previously described under the name Regarding cerebral automatism, I must make a general observation of the highest order concerning the Semitic invasion.

importance.

THE EFFECTS OF THIS INVASION DEVELOP WITH THE CHARACTERISTICS OF A MORBID IMMENSITY.

The Jew replaces wit with inept puns, eloquence with phraseology, and enthusiasm with epilepsy.
He takes up residence in the theater where he becomes a fool. (Race of Vipers, by A. Puig, pp. 227-228.)

I will try to give this idea striking clarity by means of an analogy drawn from the pathological science. There are viruses that attack the entire organism. It's not just in one or more specific parts through which they exert their action. The brain, the lungs, the viscera, the sense organs, the skin, the muscles, the bones, the fluids such as tissues, the blood such as the nerve ganglia, everything is affected and undergoes profound alterations. In the body thus infected, everything

A kind of disintegration phenomenon appears; all functions are more or less troubled. Imagine, with its proliferation of degenerations, the ravages of syphilis, type of these infectious diseases which become a diathesis, that is to say a general condition permanent, not to say perpetual, of the organism on which they implant themselves. To embrace these

To understand the full extent of the devastation, one would need to, in a way, consult the encyclopedia of medical specialties.

Well! The Israelite invasion is also a disease of the entire social organism; there is not a corner where It reveals itself through a few symptoms, no vital force that it does not weaken, no manifestation of material or moral activity that does not suffer from it. From the highest spheres of intelligence that it
This invasion corrupts everything, even the fertilizers it adulterates; it is found everywhere; it is indeed, as I

As I just said, an immensity, a morbid ubiquity.

The society she enters no longer has the same politics, the same mental system, the same regime economic. Working and living conditions are disrupted, diplomacy is turning away from Through its channels, the Government is nothing more than a façade through which one glimpses the hidden power of Kahal; the course of national history seems suspended by a gloomy and shameful intermission, and, in their diversity, all these aspects of the same evil are linked by infinite connections, so much so that the study of a only requires that of most others.

It should therefore come as no surprise if, under the heading "Cerebral Automatism," we find ourselves led to to encompass an incalculable multitude of facts and things. The reader would be wrong to reproach me for too much to expand; for, if at times I yield to the attraction of an infinite subject, often I also restrain myself and I will limit myself to indicating in a few strokes what it will be up to him, through his own reflections, to explore further and to delve deeper.

X

Panama.

I will simply touch upon a major fact that is on everyone's mind. It concerns Panama.

that I will say a few words.

Greece looks back with pride on the age of Pericles, Italy on its constellation of marvelous artists, the France with its historical epics, Spain and Portugal with their famous naval expeditions, England its statesmen and its universal empire. Judaism has the right to contemplate, with no less

Panama, with its pride. It has never done anything so prodigious, so colossal in its excess; it has never better demonstrated in the world than in terms of ruin, financial disruption, and demoralization of bodies

Politically, he was sovereign.

Will historians and apologists for Judaism, however, dare to openly celebrate this Iliad of The Swindle, to which he provided, as heroes, extraordinary individuals, these Reinachs, these Herz, who appear to us as inspired by infernal powers? I doubt it; Israel is too cautious to display its secrets in this way; he will probably prefer to repudiate Panama, to make himself skillfully accusing and blaming his crimes on others. In a moment, it is true, I will show that he does not does not absolutely disavow these dreadful beings in whom even the least mystical man recognizes a satanic phenomenon, I mean the embodiment of evil in human beings at its maximum.

concentration and willpower.

Of course, I am not painting a picture or sketching of Panama; an abridged version of this astonishing adventure would require a volume. I will only speak of it from a very specific point of view.

Doesn't Panama demonstrate that, under Jewish influence, a revolution began to take place in The French character? When Montesquieu, in Venice, was conversing with the famous Law, the latter was saying, between the French and the English of high standing, this parallel: "The French are not, like the
"The English are ardent geniuses, but they are far more incorruptible." I don't know if our men Current politicians are ardent geniuses; but many of them have gone too far in terms of corruption.
Flat and vulgar, nothing we've seen before. The corruption of decadent Greece, such as Polybius described it, that of the Roman Senate, when Jugurtha, who must have had some Arton at his orders, he bought it, were certainly overshadowed.

But that's not the most surprising thing. How is it that upon discovering this mountain of depravity, France, which, en masse, has remained the epitome of honesty, has not been spared from this hideous parliamentary cesspool. not aroused by mortal disgust, that the Panamists could defy public conscience, rise to the tribune, head held high, eyes bold, lips trembling, and there to achieve successes of vehement anger and of theatrical impudence, that they could emerge victorious from the electoral struggle and boast of having been washed clean by universal suffrage of the accusations of their "slanderers"?

The explanation is obvious: France is intellectually Judaized. If it had been in control of itself, She would have had magnificent outbursts; she would have demanded what was necessary, everything necessary, and she would have gave its representatives precise orders to search for and ruthlessly punish the great guilty. An exceptional tribunal, vested with ad hoc powers, would have been created; an energetic undertaking atonement and regeneration would have been undertaken!

Certainly, if half a dozen Panamanians had gone and attacked the sinister machine which, a while ago A hundred years, cutting down so many innocent heads, France would breathe more easily, she would have rid herself of of a nightmare that oppresses her and of this veil of shame that she shakes off, but which constantly

It falls back down and burns his face.

Panama has indeed become, throughout the world, a symbol of public corruption. Italy He borrowed it from us and made a nice diminutive (// Panamino), to refer to the mischief of his politicians. Thus, France, under Jewish influence, still reaps glory. But it is a negative glory. a black and ignominious celebrity. Both hemispheres are watching us; only, instead of jets of

In the light, all they see is a volcano of nauseating smoke and pestilential mud.

XI

The resurrection of Reinach.

A brief epilogue from Panama has served to demonstrate Jewish power to the world. Earlier, I quoted The name of this Baron de Reinach, the suicide victim in whose home an arsenal of poisons was found. He was studying, it was said He said, toxicology. I don't know why, but I have trouble picturing him as a scientific researcher. I'm afraid that a man, so active, so versed in dark intrigues, would not, on occasion, have drawn upon his Damn wardrobe. The police, where the Jews hold sway, may well not have revealed everything about him.

that she knows.

In any case, this financier, driven by pride, despair, or necessity, rid the world of his No one had collaborated on a ballet. Was this ballet a masterpiece? I leave that to the specialists. care to discuss it. But even if it had been a choreographic marvel, the circumstance that it emanated from the brain de Reinach, this alembic of corruption, commanded that it never be exhibited.

But this ballet was performed for the Tsar himself, in the Hall of Machines. The great sovereign, in Imagination, to see the shadow of the villain who had taken justice into his own hands hovering over the groups of dancers. "That "These Jews are powerful in France!" he must have thought. These French people, so hospitable, don't realize...

"Not even the impropriety they are made to commit."

I wouldn't want to give undue importance to this incident in commenting on it. But wouldn't one say...
Not that Reinach's resurrection was a blasphemous parody of Jesus's?
Judaism seems to have wanted to show that it too could miraculously emerge from the tomb and to return to the midst of the living to stroll there with that insolent lack of restraint that distinguishes his great scoundrels as well as his petty crooks.

Yes, undoubtedly, Judaism possesses an indestructible vitality. But if it is eternal, so too is the Gospel.

is always new, and the Christian idea possesses inexhaustible treasures of life and energy. If, at

At times, she seems to waver, even patiently accepting Israel's outrages; she also knows how to

to rise again, stronger, prouder, more invincible, to snatch Satan from heaven and hurl him into the abyss.

XII

Jewish suicide.
Sometimes Satan takes the initiative and rushes himself into the abyss.

The suicide of the famous Barnato is, in this respect, very suggestive. Why, after so many triumphs, the

Did this great speculator feel an irresistible urge to end his illustrious life by drowning himself?

in the ocean?

I am forced to make an assumption, which may seem strange to those unfamiliar with the constitution.
neurotic of the Jewish world. Like all great Jewish neurotics, Barnato was telepathically in intimate communication with this common brain center which activates its coreligionists and where The ambitions, angers, and terrors of all Israel are constantly simmering. Perhaps he heard some Lugubrious cries, groans of misfortune, voices resounding with sinister premonitions. This His obsession gradually became acute torture, and he killed himself to escape it, in circumstances which gave his suicide an extraordinarily dramatic and impulsive character; one would have said that it symbolized the destinies of his race.

This is the likely explanation for the tragic end of the former Cirque director, whose funeral, in London, almost equaled the splendors of that of Nathan Meyer Rothschild in 1836 7.

“The remains of Nathan Meyer Rothschild (he had died in Frankfurt) were brought back to England,” Ambassadors from Austria, Russia, Prussia, Naples, and Portugal attended his funeral. The coffin which contained his heavy and powerful remains was sculpted with the greatest artistry and ornamented to excess. It resembled rather than a splendid piece of furniture, destined by the hands of an artist to embellish the boudoir of a beautiful woman under the vaults of a tomb.” (The London Stock Exchange, by John Francis, trans. by Lefebre Duruflé, p. 316).

The same author (p. 311) paints a vivid picture of Rothschild's grandeur: "People only talked about the parties he

He gave, collected subscriptions, and occasionally supported charitable institutions... He entertained at his table Peers and princes of the blood; priests and laymen bowed before him, those who declaimed with the most Those who vehemently opposed Mammon were the very ones who flattered him most slavishly... He saw the representatives of all the states of Europe sought his friendship and were proud of it; his hospitality was also accepted by the democratic envoy to the New World and the ambassador of the Russian Empire. Finally, those who They were eager to fight against servitude in all its forms and phases, and they bent the knee as slaves. before his golden scepter.

XII

The Contagion of Jewish Suicide in Modern Society.

Regarding Barnato's suicide, I'll allow myself a brief digression. The spread of this strange madness,

Isn't suicide due, at least in part, to Jewish influence?

This is, in fact, one of the specific diseases of the race, or, if you prefer, of the Jewish mentality, where The delirious overexcitements of greed and pride create a state of chronic erethism, making any more or less unstable equilibrium. Also, since the suicide of Abraham Goldsmid in London in 1810 up to that of Barnato in 1897, the chain of select Jewish suicides has many links. Such an Israelite family, obsessed with hereditary fate, has already produced, for fifty or sixty years years, five or six victims of this madness and perhaps he will give it more.

For psychographers, this presents a subject of research no less interesting than the study of madness.
of imposture in the same world. Moreover, the very nature of the Jewish question is to raise problems the most varied: the theologian, the philosopher, the psychiatrist, the lawyer, the economist, the Sociologists, all of them, observers or thinkers, have their own ground for meditation and their own field of discoveries.

It is worth noting that Judaism was the literary initiator of suicide. It provided Goethe, in the person of young Jerusalem (Jewish or of Jewish descent), the type of Werther, the first incarnation of suicide in a poetic ideal. The awakening of Judaism in the 18th century 9, its entry into activity universal forces thus manifested themselves through a disastrous gift to the society that lay before him; for it is cultivating, following in the footsteps of Goethe, who had been seduced by the false charm of Jewish lypemania, this flower of madness, to which novelists and playwrights have contributed, in a proportion considerable, to make the grim and monstrous act of the man who attempts his own life, an event commonplace, an everyday occurrence, a common solution to the miseries and disappointments of existence.

Our society presents a lamentable spectacle. It suffers from the vices instilled in it by Judaism.
Speculation, corruption, suicide, along with her own, such as alcoholism, which she is powerless to repress. Politically, it doesn't know how to govern itself; morally, it is without spring and without a compass; finally, in the sphere of hygiene, it cannot even wage war on the alcoholic poison that destroys brains and fills asylums, while France is becoming depopulated and

The door is wide open to foreign invasions, rolling in new waves every day.

8 The great financier Abraham Goldsmid, seeing a tremendous drop in a loan of 14,000,000 pounds. ster. (350,000,000 francs), of which he was a subscriber with the Baring firm, and fearing a catastrophe, gathered numerous guests at a grand dinner he gave at his magnificent residence in Surrey, and there, at "Getting up from the table, he went and killed himself in the gardens." (The London Stock Exchange, by John Francis, trans. Lefebre Durufié, page 193.)

°” What the Jewish historian Graetz calls die jüdische Gaehrung, the Jewish fermentation.

I will provide a demonstrative proof of this.

XIV

Invasion of the Foreigners.

The impending denationalization and de- Frenchification of French territory.

I will limit myself here to a brief indication. Later, I will elaborate on what I am not doing today. that only superficially. But things speak for themselves; it will suffice to show them to anyone who is not blind.

A huge event is currently taking place in France: alongside the influx of foreign workers, there is... sees another, incomparably more threatening one: that of foreign banks and companies foreign insurance, foreign manufacturing and foreign trade.

The growing importance of foreign life insurance companies is particularly alarming. These companies are accumulating French capital by privatizing it; they are acquiring substantial real estate holdings; they establish branches in the provinces by means of whose affairs they exploit; they become, they already are, powers. I don't believe to exaggerate by saying that an American company, possessing a billion, raised in France, and protected by its overprotective government, it is necessarily a first-rate power.

respected and feared.

As for the invasion of foreign trade, one only needs to walk the streets of Paris and the main cities from the provinces and to look at the signs.

In any other country, these facts would be studied; associations would be formed to establish the Statistics, calculating progress, and considering remedies. This is, in effect, large-scale denationalization.
Speed, through economic grabbing and subjugation, threatens France. What a prospect.
I! France, fallen into the state of Portugal or Ireland, devoured by the Anglo-Saxon masses and Germans, the French dispossessed of their land, dragging out a miserable life at home or going to enlist as cooks in hotels around the world and in the homes of prominent Jewish families across all latitudes and all the depravities!

Alas! Not a glimmer of reaction is visible; no one dares to sound the alarm; the public authorities
They sleep soundly, and anyone who pointed out the danger would likely be ridiculed.
like a pessimist who sees everything in black, an eccentric with gloomy obsessions, a madman who has made a choice of a boring hobbyhorse, or rather not even a voice would answer him, either to contradict him, or to

to fool him.

Here again I observe a paralysis of national consciousness due to Jewish influence; the French do not
They don't concern themselves with what is not a concern for the Hebrews. The latter have nothing to lose, at
On the contrary, they have everything to gain from the denationalization of France. Israel's glory would then be at its peak; and until the end of time, the Jews would reign over the universe without having to fear that a
The commotion that originated in France did not spread to either hemisphere, and the triumphant ones

Do not let the despised, the reviled, the enslaved of tomorrow be made of today.

XV

If France were denationalized, what would be the condition of the Jews there?

I am making a hypothesis, strange at first glance, but which unfortunately, upon examination, is not.
Only a national awakening, of which Anti-Semitism is the most ardent expression, will prevent it from happening.
I imagine France denationalized, de-Frenchified, fallen under English or German protectorate.
What would be the condition of the Jews there?

This question is easy to resolve. Even today, France represents, for Jews, a Magnificent Promised Land. I don't think one could imagine it any other way. Without needing Without any effort of imagination, the French population appears, to anyone with a metaphorical sense, forming immense herds of oxen, dairy cows, sheep, and swarms of pigeons. These oxen work tirelessly for the Jews; these milk cows come morning and evening to

They have the sheep milked by them; these sheep provide them with abundant wool; they shear them with scissors
The most ruthless in the world: those of speculation, usury, and taxation. And those suckers, the Jews...
They pluck them with skill and delicacy... they lure them in by charming them, into hidden traps, then
They take them with a caressing hand, and, in the blink of an eye, the bird is naked, I mean, the Frenchman is ruined.
This is not a vision, it's a pale reflection of the reality of every minute, at four points cardinals of France, on the banks of the Seine as on those of the Rhône, in the major cities, as in the valleys of the Pyrenees or the Vosges.

Well! If France became a vassal state of the German Empire, or if the English acquired enough influence to govern it by means of a Resident[10], the Jews would make further progress there.
Their exploitation, which is bleeding France dry, would be accompanied by perpetual security; moreover,
As intermediaries between France and foreign domination, they would realize their dream aristocratic. They would monopolize the high offices more than ever, populate the bodies deliberating, they would administer justice and sovereignly direct public opinion, they would persuade French people believe that France is greater, more respected, more admired than at any other time in its history.

history.

[10] Cornelius Herz was an early attempt at an English resident.

Look around you, and you'll wonder if they aren't already preparing for this eventuality, if they do not conduct their encroaching intrigues in such a way that the protectorate

A foreigner finds them in the middle of installation and only has to connect to the already established network.

the "Jewish aristocracy."

Go to the Financiers. They speak English there as much as, and better than, French; the women have, in their voices, English intonations and pretensions. Moreover, carriages, coachmen, chambermaids,

For the teachers, everything is English and what is not English is German, Austrian, Italian or Belgian.

Look at that passing carriage drawn by magnificent horses, those insolent Jewish figures Radiant, those eyes where espionage and treason glitter, and reflect: is France

Today, a free people, an independent nation?

XVI

How to combat brain automatism.
The disease has been described. But how can it be treated and cured?

The defining characteristic of antisemitism is that the difficulties always escalate. Understanding that the Jew is a malevolent being, a truth accessible to all intellects. But to judge the degree to which he is malevolent, to discover the means of expelling its pernicious influence from souls and spirits, finally to move from the thought in action and effectively liberating from his domination those whom he has mastered, these are increasingly difficult, complicated, and thorny problems.

Collective cerebral automatism resembles individual cerebral automatism, like the number resembles unity. However, if one closely examines the man who underwent Jewish bewitchment, one is struck by what is happening within him. He hates, without knowing why, those whom the Jews hate, and makes himself against them the propagator of their slander and organizer of their traps. He celebrates those whom the Jews praise. with the same feigned enthusiasm and self-assurance as them. Moreover, he has become deceitful and treacherous. like the Jew, with this difference: in the latter, deceit pursues a calculated goal, while In his case, it is, more often than not, bizarre and unreasonable: it is an illness he contracted. rather than assimilating a strength. Sometimes he appropriated a few grimaces or inflections of Jewish insolence, which has become stereotyped in him.

One idea in particular obsesses him: the belief in the superiority of the Jew; he proclaims it with conviction.

expansive and an inexhaustible abundance, as if it were an amazing and admirable being.

As for his awareness of his mental automatism, he only has it in a vague and obscure way, by intervals, without it being possible for him to escape this dependence, which has become for him a second nature. Even if the most astute, most wittily mocking description of his condition was given to him, one would generally be no further ahead.

What must be achieved in him is an intellectual and moral revolution. As long as this

The revolution has not been accomplished; the result remains zero or at least uncertain.

By uttering the word "Revolution," I demonstrated the magnitude and indicated the solution to the problem. Indeed, Judaism is composed of INSTINCTIONS and FORCES, forming this great compact whole that it
It is about fighting and breaking. Each of these instincts, each of these forces, must therefore be opposed.

feelings, forces, energies of a superior and sublime nature.

Let me explain: the spirit of falsehood must be countered by the ardent worship of truth; Israelite solidarity, the genius of charity and devotion; to Jewish cunning, a luminous clairvoyance that envelops him its clarity and penetrates it in every way; to Jewish activity and promptness, a vigor of action, a an improvisational capacity that eclipses and overwhelms them; to Semitic improbability, a probity incorruptible; to Jewish science, a science far more vast, creative, universal, without falsehood prestige, without trickery or charlatanism.

As we can see, it is a whole system of forces, a whole organization that needs to be created and developed.
The principle of this metamorphosis can be formulated very simply in these terms: to want and power in the sphere of GOOD is greater than Judaism's power in the sphere of SELFISHNESS and EVIL. That is a fundamental formula with infinite applications.

An example:

Judaism has its extraordinary men; its prodigious schemers, its corrupting masters, its major financiers, cunning schemers, tireless destroyers. Therefore, to combat the Jewish monsters, men of a special mettle, of a genius deeper than villainy and the most concentrated and devouring Jewish audacity.

Ancient Greece showed us the way: Oedipus slaying the Sphinx with its deceptive voice and claws cruel, Perseus cutting off Medusa's head, that petrifying head, plumed with snakes, Bellerophon attacking the Chimera, with the head of a lion, the body of a goat, and the tail of a dragon, which

"Those who steal from the clouds were, in bygone ages, the heroes of Anti-Semitism."
The dramas of their great struggles were transformed into these myths that Greek genius created for to represent, through symbolic figures, the formidable forces and mysteries of Semitism and, in

At the same time, to engrave in indestructible lines the methods capable of defeating it, myths which, by the 11 See The Israelite Politics, by Kimon, ch. iv, Animal Stability of the Israelite Society.

depth of ideas, as well as poetic splendor, belong to what Greece has bequeathed to us.

more sublime and more immortal.

And Christianity, what is it if not a magnificent evolution of human nature through creation? of a new type which, tearing it away from Israelite Hell, connects it to Heaven through its archetype, the divine Mediator, MAN:-GOD.

Those who, basely accepting Jewish supremacy, believe they are following in the footsteps of Jesus, are mistaken.
strangely, and they commit the ultimate outrage against him. The wretches who blaspheme his name are perhaps less criminal; for blasphemers, at least, fear him, and their furious hatred is still a

A tribute to the One whom death could not defeat.

Jesus is the indomitable denier of Jewish superiority, the destroyer of the Jewish system and of Jewish exploitation is the masterful portrayal of Jewish hypocrisy and crime; it is the light that, until
The passage of time will illuminate the depths of the Jewish soul and the hidden underpinnings of politics.
Jewish; it is the lightning that will strike from the extremities of the East to those of the West to awaken the asleep and announce to the City of Curse the approach of the terrible punishment.

XVII

Anti-Semitic Action.

Any anti-Semitic action, to be effective, must therefore open up a heaven to the human intellect and soul.
new, and from the very first steps, proceed with the force, the decisiveness, the authority of a revolution. It does not
It is not enough to describe the evil, to contemplate its ravages, to count the ulcers and sores. We must open to open minds to new perspectives and, beyond the darkness, to show them a horizon of freedom, of grandeur and glory. This, moreover, is the first condition for the success of any regenerative effort. Who He who does not have an ideal before his eyes will never break the yoke he most abhors. Anti-Semitism has this ideal, in the light of which he walks and fights.

To this cerebral automaton, chained to the Jew by the bonds of respect and servile imitation, who has Make him intellectually a director and materially a master; make him conceive of an order of things new. Show him French society reclaiming itself, the course of destinies national, currently interrupted by a retrograde disturbance, regaining its lost direction, the French politics once again becoming an expression of the soul of France, of its generosity, of its religious faith, of her devotion to justice and the cause of the oppressed. Represent to her, transformed, this France, today so profoundly degraded by Israelism which corrupts it, degrades it and condemns it to Universal contempt. He will see her placed back in her historical context, at the head of the Aryan world, striking at The double blow of Semitism, Israelite and Muslim, was redoubled, each as perverse and execrable as the other.

the other; he will see the Jew dethroned, now nothing more than a reptile that hides and crawls; he will see intelligence

French, freed from a shameful yoke, to soar, with a magnificent leap, in all directions of the thought, in all spheres of philosophical and aesthetic creation.

Tell him all these things, project this dazzling future onto his field of vision, inspire him with a a delusion of will that irresistibly draws him there. Then the Jew will be nothing more to him than a hated tyrant. an unmasked charlatan, a merchant of lies and corrupt documents; the Jewish aristocracy... will appear hideous and ignoble, laden with the stench of the ghetto, and the cerebral automaton of yesterday will become a Frenchman in the true sense of the word, full of enthusiasm and faith in his homeland, this France that His God, the God of Plato, of Jesus, of Peter the Hermit and of Joan of Arc, protects against Satan and against Allah.

XVIII

The Jewish Police. — A general reflection.

Before embarking on this analysis, I must draw the reader's attention to a condition of the effectiveness of antisemitic studies. Each particular branch of these studies already has the scope and the proportions of a science. The forces to be examined present themselves as long-disciplined, methodical, learned. Every organ that is dissected is composed of marvelously arranged, connecting to other equally perfect organs, comparable, in their function, to instruments of precision. Never before has what biologists call coordination in life phenomena was achieved in such a comprehensive manner.

I make this observation because the fruitfulness of these studies depends on the aptitude of the person undertaking them. dedicated to embracing the relationships of the whole while deeply scrutinizing the various parts. Anyone who loses sight of this necessity will never truly understand the Jewish world, will never explain not its successes and the kind of dynamic inevitability that characterizes its pervasive march. It would be either the slave or the stupid admirer.

Spectator of a prestigious phantasmagoria featuring illusion machines, surprise devices, the

If the artifices of deception or terror remained invisible to him, he would wonder if Jewish power was not not a phenomenon of the same order as the movements of the stars, over which man has no of empire.

The subject I am addressing is precisely one of those where we must proceed in the light of these principles.

XIX

The Israelite Tripod.

Does the number three possess mysterious properties? It appears in religions, philosophies, The conceptions of poetry, the analyses of psychologists. There is the allegorical group of the three Graces, the group of three theological virtues: Faith, Hope, and Charity, which console the afflicted and move mountains.

Israel also has its group of three powers:
SLANDER

ESPIONAGE,

THE BETRAYAL.

These three powers form the tripod of the greatness of Israelism. What they can do is Horrifying.

These powers, closely linked, have played a role in Jewish evolution since ancient times. To this day, the role of a historic framework. From the seas of Alaska to the Magellanic Islands, The Cordillera mountain range is no more continuous. Similarly, the vertiginous peaks follow one another on thousands of leagues, likewise, throughout the centuries, the procession of treacherous and malevolent Jews did not never stops. The Jewish slanderer of today is no less venomous than that of the Ancient Jerusalem 12; the Jewish spy who steals our political secrets on behalf of England or of Germany is as subtle and cunning as those of which the treacherous Pharisees — the financiers of that time — surrounded Jesus; finally, when Alfred Dreyfus betrayed France, Judas only made a comeback.

XX

Jewish slander.

In writing these words: Jewish slander, I would like to be able to give them immense scope. The Jewish slander is, in effect, the encyclopedia of human wickedness and the most extensive arsenal of perversity that exists in the world. It burns like fire, it disrupts like a violent acid; it

It poisons, tortures, isolates, uproots. Everything its breath touches is already withered and dried up.

This slander is marvelous, incomparable, protean. It has every trick, every Strings, all the effects: divination of vulnerable points, the subtlety of police investigations, audacity, bite, brazen precision, adaptability to all tastes, the art of

to make it attractive through facial expressions and vocal play. She is even, one can say without fear, the

1? Maledica et suspicosa Civitas, said Cicero {Pro Flacco) speaking of Jerusalem.

the most brilliant manifestation of the Jewish spirit. The slanderous Jew is fully revealed; slander a sparkle in her eyes and, lively, light, happy like a newly emerged butterfly, she leaps from her lips; his stories, fueled by an inexhaustible memory, unfold in wicked arabesques; his Invectives explode like small bombs, with rolls of strident brilliance and leaps of the grave from high to low, with airs of triumph and mocking grimaces; his words have even medal claims. What a virtuoso a Jew is, performing a piece of slander! Is it that in historical Jerusalem there was a Conservatory with classes in slander?

But perhaps that's not the most surprising thing. This slander has special properties which distinguish it from all others. Thus it does not age. The same malice, which a Jew repeats ad nauseam, It retains the same freshness and youthfulness for many years. When he cuts it for the
For the millionth time, you'd think he was improvising and that she was, for the first time, causing an explosion in the mouth. The reason for this phenomenon is that the Jew has, deep in his soul, a venom gland, still active; the vitality of his hatred, continually renewed as if by an internal secretion, allows him, each time he utters the same cliché, to make a new print of it.

It has another property, no less curious. Not only do cerebral automata—and, in
In France, they are, alas, countless—on whom Jewish slander has managed to bite, can no longer rid themselves of the slanderous idea they have absorbed, which will cling, like a spider, to the ceiling of their brain. But they feel a singular need to repeat it and spread it. It obsesses their minds, itches their tongues, torments their lips. Jewish slander thus has a power of expansion, of incredible diffusion; the most abominable or ridiculous of his inventions spreads like a contagious infection, it radiates like a miasma which, far from a source of emanation, does not lose nothing of its toxic wealth.

But it is especially formidable as an organized force, when the Jews, to lose a man, to to remove him from public life, or else to destroy him in his profession, his business, his industry, They set up sophisticated batteries around him. He can no longer take a step without feeling, at every Instantly, a mysterious action discredits him, denigrates him, disqualifies him, distorts him, and sterilizes his efforts. cuts off his relationships, surrounds him with a deadly vapor of distrust and antipathy. More often than not, He almost always ignores the origin of this defamatory persecution that besieges him on all sides, and, not Unable to explain it, he hopes she will tire of it and calm down. What a mistake! The years will go by. for him, nothing will change; until the very last hour, he will be consumed in an exhausting struggle; for the Jewish hatred, inexorable, never lets go of those it has singled out as enemies or merely as rivals of Israel; she pursues them even beyond the grave. She never denies herself the satisfaction from desecrating a corpse.

21st

A genius of espionage for the Jewish police.

Jewish slander would not accomplish so many miracles if it did not have an organization at its disposal Hidden: the Jewish police. Few men, it must be said, suspect what this police force is. We know

It is commonly said that Jews have keen eyes and ears, that they excel at gathering and to share the information they need with each other; but what is not known is the existence of one or more Jewish police networks throughout France, the perfection of their system information and the crucial role these police networks played in the invasion of the Jews, the establishment of their domination, their monopolization of major businesses, the corruption of power public and judicial, the ruin or moral destruction of those who could stand in their way.

The Jewish police, it can be said, are everywhere:
e In the corridors of the Chambers.
e In Ministries, Embassies, Consulates, Prefectures, Sub-Prefectures.
e In the Post and Telegraph offices.
e In the court registries.
e At the Police Headquarters and in the Police Stations.

e In the press, printing houses, publishers, etc., etc.

She knows what we do, what we own, what we earn, what we lose, where we go, where we come from, this What you say, what you write, what you plan, who you talk to. She searches, in every direction, your past. family, your life, your relationships, your habits, your tastes, your weaknesses, your every move, especially if you belong to the category of designated individuals.

She has at her disposal all the files from the police headquarters and police stations.

The General Security Directorate at the Ministry of the Interior holds no secrets for her. 13.

XXII

The functions of the Jewish police.

The functions of the Jewish police are diverse.

As an information service, it is the epitome of accuracy. What a man is worth, what he can do, his aptitudes, character, ambition, morale, corruptibility or incorruptibility, sympathies or She knows the enemies he encounters, his temperament, his physical strength; she measures them with a Unparalleled precision. She researches in advance, gathering information she will use later.

13 Jews, notably Isaïe Levaillant, were directors of the Sûreté générale.

of letters and papers which will serve him, if necessary, as means of blackmail. Every man of any standing importance or some energy of spirit should not forget that from a Jewish point of view, it is classified; the
The Jewish police know to what extent it can be useful or dangerous and by what means, if necessary.
We could lose him or harm him. At the first opportunity, she is ready, instantly, to act.
resembles a chess player who can read his opponent's mind and, at each of his movements would paralyze the maneuver he had devised.

XXIII

Jewish police traps.

As organizers of traps, the Jewish police are unparalleled. If you believe in friendship, they have...
You, at his disposal, are false friends who will show you high esteem and deep affection.
will gain your confidences and lose you very neatly by pretending to only talk about you with admiration. If you are sensual, beware; the Jewish police will send you, under some pretext any woman, vicious and boisterous; a gallantry will become a resounding scandal.

Ah! Scandal, that is indeed the very essence of the Jew, the combined result of his dark genius and his Infamous wickedness! What he plotted in the shadows, he now exposes in broad daylight with a noise infernal. What a choir, what an orchestra, what instruments, what brass, what rattles, what voices of Sabbath when they unleash themselves in a noisy symphony of slander and outrage!

If you are a politician who is somewhat ignorant, somewhat gullible, and who can be deceived with… Whether it's alleged revelations or fake documents, be wary of your imagination and don't let yourself be fooled. Swept up in the enthusiasm of your friends, you might find yourself in a difficult position. Ridiculous. Endless bursts of laughter would whip your face, and you would be forced to disappear. from the scene to take refuge in a corner… Facing the Jew who is watching you, you cannot be too cautious, too circumspect.

If you're a politician short on cash, what won't the Jewish police do to you? They'll… will send loan sharks, initially very accommodating and soon threatening. You will inevitably fall under their spell.

domination by the Jewish banker who will get you out of trouble…

As a shaper of public opinion, the Jewish police also do a marvelous job. Should we quickly push for a A man of fame? Do Jewish financiers, for example, need to give to The lawyer tasked with pleading their fraud cases, the authority of a great reputation? The watchword is given; the claimants (all professions, all circles are infested with people affiliated with the police)

Jewish), function with an impetuous lyricism. These advertisers are extraordinary; they have been styled to
They speak of the chosen one of the Jews as they would speak of the sun; they are delighted, charmed, intoxicated by the light; this

What they see and hear is admirable, incomparable. And their enthusiasm will endure; at each

`

Opportunity, new momentum, new transport of the stock market that is rapidly heating up a favorite stock.
How could public opinion resist such a powerfully orchestrated action! Drumont, who expressed with So much wit, so many profound truths, he was quite right to say that, in today's society, everything is rigged; there is, in any case, no rigging tool, no fake punch comparable to the Jewish slap.

Should we, on the contrary, reject a man?

Those familiar with the Jewish police will ignore or disqualify the person reported to them, and this with a
With a precise, dogmatic, contemptuous tone, they will create an atmosphere of ice around him.
If necessary, they will attribute to him all sorts of faults and vices; in their eyes, he will sometimes be called a scoundrel,

Sometimes a fool, sometimes a madman.

The Jewish police will take great care to inform them, with all the necessary details, of the calumnies they must spread out, and distribute the roles among themselves, to better organize around the cursed man the repulsion and emptiness, by varying the poisoned cuisine.

XXIV

The role of the Jewish police in parliamentary corruption.

Parliamentary corruption is only surprising because its mechanisms are unknown. Hence, between the effects that we observe and the causes that explain them, a discontinuity that misleads the mind.

How did the corrupters find their way into people's hearts so easily?

IIS had an admirably organized police force. Arton himself recounted that after bribing the
He had been monitoring parliamentarians to know exactly how they would reinvest the funds of the Corruption. If he monitored them after bribing them, we can be sure he monitored them much more closely.

subtly spied on before being corrupted.

Each member of parliament or senator was vetted with police-like precision. If necessary, a few minor details were provided.
insidious ones like those mentioned earlier (subscribing to a loan shark, sending a woman of easy virtue to an impressionable man, inciting the legitimate wife to spend money by a (seamstress who gives him unlimited credit, etc.) were cleverly woven around him. Arrangements were made, if he...

it was necessary, in order to claim his compensation.

This compensation, as we know, is subject to seizure. Such is the French political shortsightedness that

No one seems concerned about the danger that the… poses to the integrity of parliamentarians the seizure of their compensation. Was the Constitution made by manipulators who wanted to have Parliament at their disposal?

Nothing demoralizes a man more than secret embarrassments in a high position. Beware of Beware the indebted magistrate, and especially the hardworking magistrate to whom the Jewish Trust allocates a monthly stipend!

to the MP whose allowance is being seized!

This MP must have, at one point, anxiously sought money. The money kindly offered. "My dear Member of Parliament, I am interested in the Panama Canal; it is a national undertaking; I intend to…"
"on your vote." Half baseness, half gratitude, the deputy promised his vote. If that vote cost Dear to France, it did not, as a rule, cost the corrupter dearly. The latter, who knew his world, proceeded economically without spending more than necessary; I suspect that many parliamentarian unwittingly tampered with his mandate for a mere thousand francs.

XXV

The lower composition of Parliament is due, in large part,

to the actions of the Jewish police.

Why is Parliament so strangely composed? Why does France have the following representatives:

More often, men who are either mediocre or unworthy?

Because all those who, through the energy of their minds and the elevation of their character, were capable of to represent it in public life with strength and grandeur and to give to its Government, if they had they held the reins, an independent leadership free from Jewish influence, they were ruthlessly Catalogued, hunted down, annihilated. Everywhere the Jewish police spotted high abilities. politically, where she sensed a highly ambitious nature, she organized her batteries and traps.

It's so easy to lose a man!

Some readers of this book may revisit their memories. Many events from their lives that Their enigmatic nature will be illuminated in a new light. In mysterious and skillfully crafted hostilities tortuous paths they encountered, in the inexplicable relentlessness of such a character, official or magistrate, to lose them, to humiliate them, to throw them out of their normal sphere of development, they

They will recognize the Jewish money that has been secretly doing its job.

We can and should generalize: Is it surprising that the Israelites are considered such remarkable beings?
In all spheres, their principle was to skillfully remove and, if necessary, destroy through…
secret artifices, those that would have prevented them from rising to the forefront, from being masters and from playing a significant role as men of dazzling and incomparable superiority. Slander and smears have still He did more for the glory of Israel than his true talents. With a purely mercenary strategy, he…
committed to eliminating competition, whether good or bad, whenever it was likely to hinder its ambitions or its operations.

14 Arton saved seven to eight hundred thousand francs from the funds of corruption.

XXVI

The Jewish police are jeopardizing the security of France.

I imagine a great financier, half French, half English, but mostly English, because England is rising and France falling.

I suppose he has a police organization under his command and connections within the Police Prefecture.

whose records he can consult whenever he wants.

I suppose, finally, that the English Government, which has this Financier as a friend, needs to precise information on French affairs, on those in power, on the deputies influential, on diplomats, on public opinion, the press, etc. Well! I imagine it would be enough for him to do telephone the financier in question from his home in the City of London. Within a few hours, he would have the most complete information, such as the Jewish police know how to obtain.

This is the current situation in France. England (and likewise Germany and Italy) knows with a With frightening precision, she can monitor everything that happens there. She can keep an eye on it just as well as in India or Egypt.

all those whom she suspects of being her enemies.

XXVII

Measures to be taken against the Jewish police.

These measures are quite simple: Every Israelite element must be eliminated, down to the last atom, from the French police;

Any police force established on behalf of Jewish financiers or Judaizers must be equated with the crime of high treason;

Any communication to the Jewish Finance Ministry, by direct or indirect means, of the Prefecture's records police misconduct must be punished with extremely severe penalties;

Finally, a special police force must be organized to monitor the upper and lower Jewish quarters, from the

From the merchant of toiletries to the kings of Finance.

XXVII

The anti-Semitic army and the Israeli army.

Israel — this is a fundamental concept to which one can return without fear of exhausting it — forms an army, the best organized and most active in existence.

They possess an abominable experience of destruction there, they are trained in all the stratagems of the Perfidy, we know how to maneuver in every direction, attack from behind, plunder, exterminate. Never rapacity, the Falsehood and cruelty have never been so thoroughly encompassed in such a homogeneous whole; never have the desires of a masses of men, inflamed by greed and hatred, have not been more skillfully concentrated in a same direction 15.

This Israeli army is astonishing. It seems to march in a vibrant ether, in a sort of infernal electricity that establishes communications between all brains, at any distance instantaneous. The most complicated movements are executed with lightning speed. Subtle information to transmit, shadowy espionage to plot, dark calumnies to spread, villainy to combine, simulations, deceit, insidious surprises, infamous betrayals, blackmail, Charlatanism, all the industries of evil, all perversions have reached a certain degree brilliant improvisation, supreme perfection, an unprecedented intensity of operation, and above all a promptness of coordination that makes the activity of each one that of all, of the eye and the ear of each man had the eye and ear of the entire army, of the tongue of every Jew, financier, steward, doctor, politician, junk dealer, pimp, that of the community itself.

The cerebral overstimulation that reigns there unites brains in a common and continuous inspiration: the Deceit has wings, deeds of devastation follow one after another, revenge is sought for even the smallest defeats. through merciless executions; those in which

We fear future enemies.
A complete analysis of the inner workings, the internal strengths of the Israeli army, its tactics, and its strategies, exceeds the capacity of the human mind. One can begin this study, push it very far; one cannot never to complete it. However immense what we know may be, what we don't know is even greater.

1> See Israelite Politics, ch. II.

XXIX

We need to organize the anti-Semitic army.

So, immediately, a problem arises. This formidable Israeli army must be countered.
one even more powerfully organized, possessing, in infinite abundance, the skills and the energies of war, ardent impetuosity and learned calculations, trained in rapid formations of combat and prolonged efforts, combining profound foresight with suddenness and a simultaneous terrible actions and where above all a severe method, a special education to converge, without loss, all individual forces towards a single goal: to overthrow the power

Jewish.

I hasten to add that anyone considering joining the Anti-Semitic Army must think about the commitments he will make. It's not about enlisting in a band of irregulars and to wage war for amusement, occasionally performing acts of bravery. The enemy is not one of those with which one can play and which one simply has to harass left and right. It forms a mass

Far too compact. It won't be demolished with arrows; it will be demolished by enveloping and...

raining down upon him a hurricane of fire and iron.

I am speaking here, of course, in symbolic language; I mean that the intellectual forces which Those who overthrow Jewish domination must break, pierce through, and annihilate like a formidable Artillery. Each explosion must blow up some block of the satanic citadel. Of course, it won't There must be neither massacre nor pillage. The Jew will once again become an object of execration in France, but he will be carefully protected against any physical violence.

Not only is the enemy formidable, but the sublime nature of the goal to be achieved makes it impossible to... to pursue as a pastime. It is, in fact, a great thing above all others: the deliverance of the France. Now, in order to overcome Jewish domination, France must regenerate itself, transform itself, it must

to bring forth from its womb a new being, resplendent with life and light.

Similarly, every anti-Semite is obliged to undergo a metamorphosis within himself and to imprint upon his faculties an energetic development. His intelligence must become more penetrating, his will must acquire the habit of extreme tensions, and its character, the tempering of indestructible steel. Breaking with ignorance, the softness, laziness, frivolous tastes, a repugnance for strong ideas, disciplining oneself Intense application and continuous action—that is the first duty of the anti-Semite. Let it be well known! A superficial antisemitism, devoted to clichés and childish mockery, will never accomplish anything.

useful. Israel does not fear it; if necessary, it would subsidize it.

XXX

The Anti-Semitic Specialists.

The Anti-Semitic army needs an extraordinarily solid framework. I will limit myself here to indicating one or two elements that must be included in its composition and whose immediate creation is the most necessary. Once formed, these elements will give rise to others; the work will develop accordingly.

of an organic impulse.

The first, and perhaps the most essential, is the anti-Semitic specialist, the man who dedicates himself to the study of the Jew, who scrutinizes him in his intellect, his instincts, his historical life, his international organization, his methods of invasion, which are shaped by reading his dark soul and following the movements of his subtle mind. This study is extremely difficult. Let us not forget that the Jew considers himself as unobservable, impenetrable, he is at least convinced that the depths of his being escape With all human sagacity, it will know, if a piercing eye happens to plunge into it, that new spaces will open up. cunning, new horizons of deception, and that, in this duel between Aryan reason and himself, he will have Finally, and always, successes.

He is as proud as he is deceitful; his confidence in himself, in the future of his race, is absolute. delusions. Struck down, reduced to humility, he prepares for conquest; he bequeaths to his descendants his ambition and his revenge.

The specialist in antisemitism must never lose sight of the infinite complications and abysses of problem. Not only does it require a huge application, but it also needs to somehow create itself, new tools in the brain. I wouldn't want to overwhelm those entering with too much advice.

in this noble career; it would hinder their independence of action and their personal inspiration.

However, I will outline some general rules to spare them from the occasional...

trial and error or mistakes that would slow down their work.

XXXI

Advice for specialists.

There is a set of fundamental concepts that every specialist must possess deeply ingrained. in his mind, and so bright, so vivid. If only these conceptions existed there only as ideas fleeting, fleeting glimpses, their studies would lack an essential infrastructure and would not would not link to the work of their collaborators, known or unknown, through the unity of the first foundations.

Here are the most essential ones. They concern:

1. The mentality of the Israelites, their cerebral mechanism, so different from the intellectual organism Aryan, and where the lively, cunning, audacious impulse replaces thought and discipline.

philosophical.

2. Their moral structure, their passions, their instincts, their pride, their ardent greed, their neuropathic hatred of other men, so well characterized by Tacitus: Adversus alios homines hostile odium, against other men, hatred and hostility.

3. The dependence in which each Jew is in relation to other Jews, that is to say their status constant suggestion and telepathy

4. Their profound knowledge of evil, their perfected technique of deception, and their police organization.

5. Their historical life as a society immutably distinct from those in which they live, and their constitution for this special existence, for parasitic invasion and universal exploitation.

6. Their internationalism and the active and incessant communications that link them to each other others the Jewish communities of all countries.

7. Their religion, the concentration in the Divinity they worship, of their passionate system and visionary, as well as their methods, ruses, treacherous skills and combinations destructive.

Once these concepts are firmly acquired and thoroughly considered, the specialist can push in all his observations and research will be guided. Everything he sees and discovers will fall into place. bright framework and each acquisition of his mind will have the fruitfulness that knowledge gives human factors, method, and organization.

I do not, of course, disdain studies that do not rely on this broad foundation. A traveler a trader who, for example, had observed the practices of Jews in the countryside, could to have acquired valuable experience, and it would be useful to make it one's own. I only mean that The man devoted to the labors of Anti-Semitism must create within himself an intellectual framework, full of cohesion and clarity, imposing and effective, like everything that unites at the deepest level, the diversity of applications and multitude of developments.

XXXII

A Study of Jewish Crime.

The specialist must not neglect any opportunity and, at every contact with the Israelites, practice them to probe, to examine them with the same sagacity with which a psychiatrist would study a mysterious madman, analyze the deceptive and seductive inflections in their voices, become familiar with their mechanism impulsive, their brilliant cerebral jolts which have a disturbing effect on all people and Disturbing.

He must not let any of their crimes go unscrupulously, without reconstructing, ring by ring, the A chain of refined perfidy and dark audacity. There are, moreover, crimes that are incredibly revealing and allowing us to read into the depths of the Israelite soul. Whether one take as a specimen the scandalous affair that took place about fifteen years ago (February 1882) before the Bordeaux Assize Court. What kind of Jewish crime! This pharmacist Henriquez, this That matchmaker Bar Dubora, these are indeed Israelite scoundrels, profiting from vices and... vile curiosities. These children, whom they abduct and subject to unspeakable practices, these

They are Christian children. They were not bled; but worse will be done.

And what cleverly convoluted methods they used to achieve their ends; the hysterical servant (the Laborde girl), that Henriquez has mesmerized and who blindly carries out his orders, the narcotic administered to the father and Mother, every time the children are taken to those infamous sessions! What a calculation of the conditions of impunity! These monsters took care to choose the children of a wealthy family, hoping that, if If their crime were to be discovered, the parents, out of honor, in the interest of their tainted children, would not They wouldn't denounce them, they would even beg the justice system not to prosecute, so as not to see it exposed.

their shame exposed to the world.

They also knew how to associate these depravities with men of high standing, dilettantes of vice.

Depraved spectators, worthy of the sulfur shirt. It's the pimps' system everywhere, anyway. Israelites to create a high-level clientele; they thereby secure powerful protectors, so that the Justice is backing down, for fear of compromising, directly or indirectly, certain individuals eminent. We know how the case of the famous Mrs. Leroy, Jewish by name (Mrs. Eppinger), of the Duphot Street, fell into the water; Mr. Andrieux recounted it in full.

In another era, the population of Bordeaux would have risen up, and I dare not say what would have happened. inevitably happened. In 1882, in Jewish-occupied France, not a single voice, not a single pen even highlighted the profoundly Jewish character of these nameless infamies.

The journalists from the legal press who were following the proceedings were suffocated with horror; the President Morand, who led them, fell ill. But the word "Jew" was not uttered by no one, and all of France was unaware that this was essentially an Israelite affair, as had given the Middle Ages.

These monstrous practices explain all too well why the edicts relating to the Jews are used expressly using the word crimes to characterize their attacks and misdeeds 16.

XXXIII

The speaker. — The statesman. The Committee.

After thought comes speech, its form and its vehicle. It is through their genius for persuasion that the
The great anti-Semites of the Middle Ages accomplished miracles. Modern anti-Semites should follow their example.
traces and to bring eloquence and lofty meditations together. Let them boldly enter the Career! Let them learn to capture minds and electrify crowds!

The anti-Semitic statesman will come in his turn. He will be the exact opposite of the other characters. who have been on the scene for twenty years. I hope he has the makings of a Richelieu, a lucidity immense, an iron will, a sublime idea of France, a profound horror of domination foreign in all its forms and under all its masks.

As for the Anti-Semitic Committee, I will say about it what Mr. Zadoc-Kahn said about the Synagogue: "It is the
The Synagogue, my brothers, which, in a way, elaborated, founded, and created Judaism. Similarly, the
The Committee will develop Antisemitism, organize it into a collective force, and make it the soul and thought of Every anti-Semite in the soul and thoughts of all. It is in the burning heat of these meetings, blessed by the Heavens, may the half-convinced, the undecided, the irresolute, the indolent undergo this metamorphosis which

France needs it, but it is moving towards it rapidly.

Is the day far off when the anti-Semitic army will have the organization of Israel's army, when it will be as strong, as Ordered correctly?

I don't believe I'm deluding myself. From all sides, I see it taking shape. Intelligence, courage, discipline, Leadership, passion, faith, enthusiasm, perfect knowledge of her enemy, she will have everything that makes an unwavering army and ensures his victory.

16 The edict of September 17, 1394, which ordered the definitive expulsion of the Jews from all of France, states:
We have been informed for a long time and on several occasions by trustworthy people, and also by our Prosecutors. and Officers, from several great complaints and outcries which came to each of them for excesses and offenses committed by the said Jews were doing and are doing every day against the Christians; and for this reason our said Procurators and Officers have made several information which clearly shows that these Jews, both men and women, have committed and perpetrated several crimes, excesses and offenses and in many ways having committed offenses... We have deliberated, willed, concluded and determined... that henceforth no Jews, male or female, shall inhabit, reside, or converse in our said Kingdom or in any part thereof d'icelluy.
(Ordinances of the Kings of France of the Third Race, Volume VII, pages 675 and 676).

Sermons and Addresses, 1st series, p. 159.

XXXIV

Foundation in Paris of an anti-Semitic institute.

France is destined to become the center of universal antisemitism, both an intellectual and center of action. Action, the offspring of thought, will be all the stronger if it has capital behind it.

accumulated knowledge and ideas, and that this knowledge and these ideas will be linked together in a

a more harmonious and grander whole.

I would add that Semitism has many scholarly societies that are assiduously devoted to its study. glorification. In Paris itself, there is a society for Jewish studies. Anti-Semitism must not remain inferior to his opponent in the scientific field. He does not appeal to ignorant fanaticism, but above all to science and truth, in their most incorruptible aspects: observation, experience, thorough examination of the facts, comparison of documents, philosophical criticism, the determination, through rigorous inductions, of the general laws that govern social phenomena.

Theology, linguistics, history, statistics, mental pathology, politics, art—antisemitism stirs them all up.
the worlds of knowledge and thought, raises the broadest problems, those that touch on the
the formation of societies and the genesis of religions, from which centuries separate us, as well as forces us to disentangle, in modern political, social and economic events, the influence dissolving and tyrannical, which he fights relentlessly, until he has annihilated it.

This question will be addressed more fully in my next volume.

XXXV

First steps to be taken against Jewish preponderance.

Anti-Semites are still far from having matured their ideas. They have a sense of the devouring evil that gnaws away

France; they understand the need to study it thoroughly. But their practical ideas are lagging behind.
They search, they grope, sometimes timid, sometimes wanting to embrace too much and being pushed aside, at the examination, as unfeasible,

In my opinion, without causing any offense to public opinion, extremely useful measures can be taken right now.
can be taken. Not only will they be accepted, but they will lead by themselves, without effort, to other more radical measures whose necessity they will reveal. Moreover, there are things, especially in politics, that can only be done gradually, through a series of approximations.
The key point is that, as in mathematics, the results, by accumulating, give the solution.
complete. Moreover, most certainly, the attitude of the Jews, in the face of the first reforms intended to contain their invasions, their fury and their threats will soon have created a divide between them and the

The French nation, an unbridgeable abyss, the anti-Semitic idea will thus proceed to its realization, of a in a safe and efficient manner through continuous and smooth gradation,

XXXVI

The Jews must be removed from the top administration of the railways.
FIRST MEASURE

But what are these measures, these initial points of attack? In my opinion, what, for the moment, The most urgent task is to remove the high administration of the railways from the Jews. By what right, I ask you, are they the masters there?

Because they have considerable interests there? But it is an evil, a great evil, that the Jews have in French railways have enormous interests. The conventions of 1883 taught us this the hard way. God knows how much of a burden they place on the budget. Far from being a right to administer them, the the fact that the wealthy or powerful Jews are the largest shareholders and bondholders of the railways

French railways ordered to completely remove their administration.

Is it because they possess a superior, incomparable administrative capacity? France Has it fallen so far that, without the Jews, it can no longer run trains on the railway lines, nor complete the networks, nor organize employee pension funds?

On the contrary, I believe that the flaws in the administration of French railways stem primarily from to the preponderance of Jews in the upper echelons of leadership, and that the day this influence is eliminated, the service will improve, safety will increase, accidents will decrease, and staff will be less overworked and, above all, responsibilities better distributed.

Is it because railways are an integral part of the military infrastructure, that it is appropriate that the Jews should have complete control over this equipment? That would be absurd. Far from it, it's because the roads Iron constitutes an essential element of national defense, and in the event of war, victory or Defeat depends largely on what they will be: lines, personnel, equipment, services, what is needed remove from the hands of the great Jews and their creatures.

To justify this proposal, I do not need to resort to any extreme ideas, to evoke any dark suspicions, to conjure up, behind every Jew, the specter of the traitor from the Salvation Islands, awaiting a liberator or avenger. No, I want to believe that these great international players, whose coffers are overflowing... foreign values, who handle English and German as well as, sometimes even better than, the French people, who at the height of the season go to London to parade in the luxurious fashion shows of Hyde Park, who,

Among themselves, they speak of France as a hotel where one feasts and of its government as of a ballet corps whose principal dancers are kept in training, I want to believe, I say, that they love it with a ardent love, more passionately than Joan of Arc and Richelieu loved him.

But I also believe it would be preferable to remove them from the upper echelons of railway administration. of iron. Their situation, their relationships, the composition of their global fortunes, Jewish internationalism of which they are the leading figures, and which has its eyes fixed on them from all points of the Earth, disqualify them and create against them an insurmountable presumption of incapacity.

Once again, I accuse them of neither culpable duplicity nor far-reaching plans of treason. I am convinced that under no circumstances would they become auxiliaries of Germany, nor secret agents of England.

But it seems to me that we cannot prudently allow them to perform functions that are so closely related to the supreme interests of defense, that is to say, to the very existence of the nation.

The elimination of senior Jewish personnel from the Ministry of Public Works is also necessary for practical reasons.
that it is too directly dependent on big capitalists and that it cannot defend itself against
They will pursue the interests of the state with the necessary energy. Here, I am not asking for immediate change, a swift substitution of new men, profoundly French, for those who, under the Jewish wing, are established in high-ranking positions within this Ministry, but a methodical, cold-blooded elimination persevering.

To Semitism, so calculating, so tenacious in its attempts to invade, we must oppose the tenacity of elimination gradual. This is, moreover, the system that must be applied to it in all spheres; the reaction against its invasions must often proceed less like an emetic than like a corrosive, which will slowly burn an infectious virus in the last cells of the body. This method will... is suggested by Semitism itself. Everything it attacks—man, business, nation, resembles a phylloxera-infested vine; isn't it just to turn the methods of

His destructive strategy?

XXXVII

Dissolution of the Universal Israelite Alliance.
SECOND MEASURE
I move on to a second measure. — This one is of major importance for the reputation of France.

I am expressing myself very weakly here; I should say: to put an end to a dishonorable situation. The reader understood that I was going to talk about the dissolution of the Alliance Israélite Universelle 18.

18 See in Jewish France the masterful exposition by Drumont of the origin and formation of the Israelite Alliance Universal.

This Alliance has a worldwide reputation for being the sovereign power of France. It is indeed all-powerful at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and everywhere there are Jews, our Legations, our Consulates have more or less become its agencies. Jewish domination over France is thus asserted. through the existence in Paris itself of the center of Jewish Universality 19, in whose service the Government France is putting what little prestige and strength it has left at stake. The result is incalculable disrepute for France.

If you ask a Persian, an Indian, or an Arab today what they think of France, they will answer invariably with the enigmatic smile of the Orientals: "France is governed by Jews!" But this idea—being governed by Jews—brings with it indescribable contempt. To be Jewish is not

Nothing yet, but to have the Jew as a master is the infinity of abjection, the synthesis of downfall.

Dissolving the Alliance Israélite Universelle is therefore, for the public authorities, a duty of utmost urgency. capital. Why was this not discussed in the session of May 27, 1895? Was it due to a lack of Information or ignorance of the external situation? Should we see in this oversight a consequence of this An intellectual illness that makes the things the French most need to know invisible to them?

Perhaps also, the anti-Semitic speakers, Messrs. Denis and d'Hugues, feared, if they laid hands on the Alliance, to stir up a storm. I believe, in this case, that they were too cautious and that a happy Their boldness would have resonated throughout the country and shown to minds, which thirst for precise directions, a citadel to take away, far more despotic and threatening than the old fortress taken by storm on July 14, 1789 20.

How should the French Parliament proceed to dissolve the Alliance Israélite Universelle? I will to surprise the reader with my moderation. It is obvious that the question of the dissolution of this Alliance is will categorically pose the question before Parliament in the near future. Well! I won't ask him, Regardless of my convictions about the role of this association, to make a hasty decision is unacceptable. It's a slow process. A calculated approach seems preferable for developing the measures that will certainly be taken and for printing them. more authority. If I dared to offer some advice, I would recommend that their initiators ask for the appointment of a Commission of Inquiry whose powers would be defined by law.

This Commission would have the right to have all the Alliance's archives reviewed. The books or documents that may have been transported to London or elsewhere must be returned without delay, under Severe penalties will be imposed on those suspected of embezzlement, pending the investigation. The Commission would also have the right to have its representatives from the archives of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs represented. Foreigners who are of interest to the Alliance's actions. Furthermore, all persons, agents diplomats, officials, employees, private individuals, whom the Commission deems it useful to hear, would be required to appear before her and testify under oath, without being able to 19 “The Israelite Covenant, my brothers, has said and said again, is not a purely charitable association; it is a "A powerfully organized force... the Alliance is the great Jewish creation of modern times." (Zadoc-Kahn, Sermons and Addresses, 2nd series, pages 229 and 237.)

"The Alliance Israélite Universelle, this institution which counts, organizes, and unites all the Jews of the world, adding this cementing force to the formidable power of money.” (Edmond Picard, Synthesis of Anti-Semitism, page 228).

hide behind professional or functional secrecy. She could even charge subordinates commissions, attaching to them, if necessary, special men of his choosing, to transport themselves into various countries to study on site some of the most scandalous or the most shameful actions in which our diplomacy, under pressure from the Alliance, has been involved. The role of The Alliance in the naturalization of foreign Jews and in the recolonization of Palestine would be all particularly studied 21.

In short, this would be the most common type, either as a scope of powers or as a framework for study. completed by a parliamentary commission of inquiry. This conscientious approach will allow the Jews, If the Alliance is unjustly accused, it must demonstrate that it has never compromised our diplomacy, nor France has been subjected to disrepute and contempt. The investigation will be conducted with rigorous impartiality, without prejudging the final result. How could they protest? I have no doubt they would, instead of Giving in to rage, they will arrange things so that the investigation leaves the most in the shadows much of the truth. They will speculate on the commissioners' intellectual laziness or credulity.

investigators will put their intelligence agencies on their trail, offering the greedy money, they will send beautiful women to the pleasure-seekers. Ah! how difficult it is to fight against the Semites!

What reptiles! What monkeys! What demons!

XXXVIII

Consequences of the first resolutions that will be adopted against the Universal Israelite Alliance.

But I dare say one thing: the mere appointment, by the Chamber of Deputies, of this

The commission of inquiry will have a colossal impact on the world.

What! people will say, this France subjugated by the Jews, who had made it the center of their domination, She's woken up! Her brain, paralyzed or hypnotized, is free again! She wants, she acts, she will
To climb back up the slope that Judaism had sent her down! Soon, freed from the Reptile's grasp, she will embrace him in turn, overpower him, plunge the sword into his mouth... Like France, Resurrected, she will appear grand and beautiful! What a signal for the oppressed! | We shall see, perhaps then,

to begin the collapse of universal Judaism.

The Judaizers, no doubt, will cry out that France is failing in its civilizing mission, that it is dishonors, regresses to the Middle Ages, that Judaism is invincible, even in France; they will celebrate us with great fanfare the talents of the Jews, their flexibility of mind, their aptitude for everything, their marvelous activity, the impossibility of doing without them and the fatal necessity of their preponderance.

1. The numerous schools created by the Alliance in Asia or Africa, where French is taught, aim to The main goal was to facilitate the relocation of Eastern and African Jews to France. This, moreover, is the dream of every Jew.
enriched by coming to Paris to take his place alongside the Rothschilds, the Ephrussis, the Camondos, etc. (See in the work of Mr. Edmond Picard (the chapter "The Jews in Morocco").

We will let the Judaizers declaim and shout, in all eras, in the Spain of yesteryear.
As in France today, the Judaizer was the same, a profoundly false, corrupt being.
Vile, unpatriotic. He has his own distinct appearance and language, which remain unchanged throughout the ages, characterized by perfect solidarity with Israel. Likewise, indeed, like the Jew, the Judaizer is more or less already an international. In today's Judaizing, I glimpse the English or

The German of tomorrow.

XXXIX

Repeal of the Crémieux decree.
THIRD MEASURE

The question of repealing the Crémieux decree has reached such a point of maturity that it seems to me

There's no need to treat it again.

This repeal, from every point of view, is urgently needed. However, and as a complement Obviously, I will quote a few passages from the remarkable brochure published by Mr. Gourgeot, senior interpreter for the retired Algerian army, under the title: Jewish Domination in Algeria 22. I I would like to see this brochure widely distributed throughout France, and I hope that the quotes that

I will make sure that many of my readers decide to get it.

(Pages 50-51) "The Jews of Africa are superstitious, fanatical, hypocritical, greedy, vain, licentious"
And boastful; of dissolute morals, they stop at nothing to satisfy their brutal passions. There is no
Not long ago in Oran, one of these wretches stabbed a young and pretty Spanish girl to death.
because she refused to give herself to him in the hallway of a house. He was not executed. In this Even in the city of Oran, they allow themselves all sorts of attacks against our Zouaves, whom they beat to death.
treacherously, with stones and sticks. Knowing they had the support of their department's representatives,

They are becoming increasingly aggressive.

In Algiers, the Jewish population is so dense that the number of thefts, scams and of attacks committed by them. As I write these lines (February 1894), the newspapers of Algiers are reporting that a man named Ben Simon has just stabbed to death his sister-in-law, Suzanne Abou, who was very pretty

A person aged sixteen.

They are greedy for the possessions of others, coldly hateful, without faith or kindness. They are never more to be feared than when they smile as they speak to us and lavish us with that artificial pleasantry whose secret only they possess, which we all fall for... They utterly despise all those who do not belong not to their religion, and they take perverse pleasure in robbing them; they boast among themselves of their high facts. "

2? Algiers, 1894, at Pierre Fontana's, publisher.

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR - WHERE -

(Pages 72, 73, 78, 80 and following). "They enrich themselves by all means, moral and immoral, legal and illegal, avowable, and unavowable. They say they have a genius for business, that's false; they have a genius for mercantilism, the accumulation of wealth, the theft of gold.

Algerian Jewry is a vast association, a powerful suction pump that absorbs everything cash flow at the expense of neighbors, whose productive capacities it drains. No one in the world can claim to know the number and variety of maneuvers employed by the Jews to

to get rich.

The Jews get rich by going bankrupt. If we were to look for the real owners of the magnificent houses that they had built on Lyre Street in Algiers, which is entirely theirs, one would discover that they are the large manufacturers of Rouen and other places in France who have not been paid for the goods delivered by them.

They are getting rich by engaging in rampant usury in Arab countries. And even the word usury should not be taken in this context. that in the sense of a euphemism masking all the frauds, all the scams, all the plundering, inseparable companions of usury itself, which they practice skillfully to

to seize the property of others.
(What follows is a sadly interesting description of the fraudulent practices of the Jews to ruin the Arabs).

Do you want to see proof of what I'm saying? It's written in flames on fortunes.
scandalous things we see today, on the sumptuous clothes of usurers, — Jews in

"In particular, — on the ruin of our native chiefs, on the corpse of the plowman."

(Pages 101 and 107). "Jewish domination, with usury and public contempt as its auxiliaries"

These inseparable individuals are one of the major causes of the banditry that reigns in Algeria...

Usury ruins the Indigenous people and forces them to become bandits to feed themselves and their families.
They adapt all the more easily to this profession because they find themselves in the presence of a system of domination where the Jew, whose reputation for cowardice is well established, exerts a clearly dominant influence on the public affairs department. And he does it brazenly because he sees one of his own from time to time.

to become a Minister.

(Pages 121 et seq.). The Jews are endangering Algeria through the disrepute, I would say through the contempt they attract attention to the French from foreign Europeans, and in particular from Muslim natives...

The Spanish and Italians, very numerous in this country, among whom the Jews dare not raise their heads, are astonished to see the ways we allow them to behave, the insolence, the provocations, that they

They allow us to do so, and they conclude that we are a people without strength and very close to our end.
Therefore, they are only thinking about preparing for the arrival of their compatriots...

As for the Muslim natives, although they prefer the French to both sides, the feelings
The feelings they have for us are a mixture of pity, contempt, and hatred. If it weren't for the memory enduring legacy left among them by those illustrious generals named Bugeaud, Mac-Mahon, Lamoricière,

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR HOT e

Bedeau, Cavaignac, Changarnier, d'Aumale, de Ligny, Chanzy; if they did not remember our glorious

If it had been for the Crimean and Italian campaigns, they would consider us today as the last of the nations.

We who could not tolerate the haughty attitude of the leaders of great empires such as those of Russia, From Austria and Germany, we now bow before the Jewish hordes... The hatred they what we carry stems from the fact that not only do we bow down before the vile Jew, but that, at

By means of our army, we make them devour them, insult them...

This administration, which should have presented itself to the people as a protective and restorative institution the evils of war, seeking ways to heal their wounds and put an end to their suffering, began by placing the Jews above them... Far from making France more beloved, it contributed to make her hated. She has assimilated to the Jews, to such an extent that for the Indigenous people the words Administration

Civil and Jewish domination are equivalent.

(Pages 138-139). "The pure-blooded French of Algeria shuddered with horror from one end of the colony to the other."
upon learning that their compatriots from Fourmies had been shot under the administration of Mr. Isaac, a Jew from Constantine. People in France don't realize the impact these painful events had here. No one could believe it. Frenchmen killed on the orders, it was said, of a Jew from Constantine. Then people learned that the Prefect of the North is also Jewish and that his name is Vel-Durand.

(Pages 149 et seq.) “The Jewish race, taken as a whole, is fundamentally greedy... They are perceived everywhere surrounded from a cloud oozing betrayal... The rapprochement we have with the Russian people, the only one who shows us affection, displeases them...

Algerian Jews are particularly fond of the English and fundamentally detest the Russians. I
I remember that during the recent passage of a Russian battleship through Algiers, the ship's band, playing In Government Square, they performed the Russian national anthem at the request of the French who They listened to him standing, bareheaded. Well! I noticed a group of young Jewish men who, far from ruffling their hair,

They pretended to spit while insulting the Russians in Arabic...

I still remember that in 1870, at the time of our disasters, a party was formed at the head of which were the Jews. A delegation from this party approached the English consul in Algiers, begging him to want to place Algeria under the protectorate of England.

(Pages 157-158). "They affiliated themselves with Freemasonry to play an important role in the lodges." of which they too often become Venerable. They have become freethinkers so that they can, at their leisure, in In public, shielded from suspicion, they treacherously attack the religions of others while respecting their own.
with diabolical tenacity strive to break among neighboring peoples this religious bond which, grouping in A single beam of their dispersed forces tends to render them invulnerable. But they are careful not to... to break in their own homes, knowing by tradition and experience that it is only to him, to him alone, that they are indebted for having been able, despite their great misfortunes, to survive unscathed through the vicissitudes of the times.

(Pages 169-170). "Let us pay attention, extreme solutions are repugnant to the French, but something does happen..."
A psychological moment when, at the end of their tether, they become terrible in their revenge. The Jews have

Their batteries have been exposed; everywhere they are caught red-handed in acts of treachery. It is therefore in the name of humanity,

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR 02

to prevent terrible crises, it is necessary for government officials to take the lead in an irresistible movement that is taking place.

I quote a few more lines (pages 176 to 178), these ones trembling with anger and eloquence:

"As a Frenchman, I feel the red of shame rising in my face every time an Arab..."
says that I am subjected to and subjected to Jewish domination, the most degrading of all... Christian, all my

Racial sentiments revolt upon realizing each day that my religion, the one which, for fourteen years centuries, has made France great and has so identified with it that the misfortune of one causes the Woe to the other, that my religion, I say, is persecuted, vilified, by impure cosmopolitan sectarians who, in order to destroy it more easily, brazenly adorn themselves with the fine title of French...

Soldier, all my military energy seizes my being and leaps with anger at the thought that so much blood French troops sank on this African soil to do what? Make it prey for the Jews! A new land of Gessen, a land of Canaan!

What do we see? Our colony delivered into complete anarchy; the French dominated, exploited, robbed, poor, working from morning till night, fighting with the bandits for the small piece of bread that is theirs essential for their survival and for feeding their children. Beside them, nay, above them, the Jews Impudent, arrogant, rich, sated, always celebrating! Calling us dirty French! That's too much. That's the absolute worst...

France, an essentially Christian nation... must no longer base its general policy on the Jewish element that brought her only shame. Then, freed from the poisoned embrace that defiled her,

She will continue, head held high, her traditional march along the dazzling paths of progress.

civilization and true freedom."

One last, prophetic word from Mr. Gourgeot (p. 162):

"The catastrophe will undoubtedly begin with the annihilation of the Rothschilds."

Yes! May we see the power of the Rothschilds annihilated, the Universal Israelite Alliance dissolved, and

The trembling Synagogue distills its poisons in a corner of the ghetto!

FOURTH AND FIFTH MEASURES

Creation of a Financial Court. — Gradual elimination of bearer securities.

In my next volume, I will deal, with the necessary scope, with the creation of the Financial Tribunal, its composition, its responsibilities, its investigative methods, etc., as well as the crucial question of the the elimination of bearer securities, which is an integral part of the Jewish question 25.

3. I have already addressed these questions in several articles that appeared in the newspaper La France in 1895 (See including the issues of November 16 and 20 and December 3).

XL

French nationality and anti-Semitism.

ANTAGONISM BETWEEN FRANCE AND JUDAISM

France is, par excellence, the embodiment, in a nation, of the Aryan and Christian conception. None has carried the grandeur of ideas, selflessness, and the worship of moral beauty so far. Her A turbulent, uneven history, it is sometimes the most magnificent of poems, sometimes the most moving of Dramas, sometimes (as it is today) the most improbable and distressing of spectacles.

But, if this nation can be criticized for being romantic, imprudent, short-sighted, for letting itself to delude, invade and dominate through parasitic nations, it will never be accused of being vile and deceptive. Its abasements even seem to have been dictated by a higher law of destiny; because they inspired his most extraordinary impulses, they brought forth from within him phenomena of willpower and energy.

It was then that his inexhaustible vitality asserted itself through convulsions, outwardly terrible as The spasms of death, inwardly beneficial and fertile like regenerative crises. France, above all, must never despair, nor doubt herself. What she wants, God wants. One The English statesman did not hesitate to flout his generous traditions in Syria and Palestine, in treating them as matters of sentiment. All the shrillness of Anglo-Jewish sarcasm will not prevent him to have played a brilliant role in the Levant and to soon resume it with its former vigor.

For this to happen, it is enough that she resolutely, without fear, tackles the solution to the great problem and...

to rid it at all costs of this Semitic domination which demoralizes it and corrupts its genius.

It is necessary, because between France and Semitism the contrast is absolute, the antagonism eternal, and the struggle a historical inevitability. Dominated by Jews, France becomes morally and materially a corpse. They despise it, and it despises itself. They strip it, and it witnesses, indifferent, the destruction, piece by piece, of its power, the plundering of its wealth and the ruin of its prestige.

Is it even conceivable that France could be Semitized? The association of these two words, "France" and "Semitism" is simply monstrous. What a chasm between the French type and the Jewish type, between France and Israel, between the national vocations of the first, which carried out the Crusades, and those of the second, which has

He was the instigator of Islam 24 and unleashed Muslim devastation upon the Christian world! There is no

Jews boast of having been the inspiration behind Islam. Islamism is merely an Arabization of Judaism, he says Selig Cassel in the article Juden (Geschichte), that is, History of the Jews, of the great German Encyclopedia Ersch and Gruber. See pages 168 and 169 of the volume in which this article begins. It is therefore to Judaism that Islamism has borrowed its characteristic idea of war and its ferocity.

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR 04:

From a deeper perspective. Generosity, loyalty, idealism on the one hand; selfishness, greed, perfidy on the other. From a On one side, Joan of Arc; on the other, Dreyfus. Merger is impossible, reconciliation will never happen.

That's a lie. Triumph of the Jew, enslavement of France, that's what it means.

When the Jews played the part of enthusiastic admiration for France and celebrated it at great length orchestrated the French Revolution of 1789 as inaugurating an era of universal fraternity and justice, How could they have been considered as having irrevocably entered the orbit of nationality? French? However, not everything in this pathos was feigned; there was, in their exaltation, a true recognition for this France which, by emancipating them and preparing them, through its example, their general emancipation gave them the world and themselves, first and foremost, to devour.

That is why, in their writings, they often express themselves about the city of Paris with lyricism declamatory, to compare it to Jerusalem, even to call it, without hesitation, the New Jerusalem.

Ah! Certainly, the Jews have the right to surround with a mystical halo this Paris that has become a Jerusalem where Jewry reigns and spreads, constituted as a public power and organized with prodigious cohesion, so that, while pretending to move within the French national sphere, it preserves intact, immutable, impregnable its contemptuous independence and its special life so relentlessly and so universally hateful. France, ultimately, is for Jewry nothing more than a splendid hotel, of which she occupies the first floor.

The Jews were not only the theological and psychological inspirations of Islam. They were everywhere the beneficiaries of its depredations. The Muslims killed, the Jews plundered the corpses. (See: Politics) Israelite, pages 256-257.) In the Diplomatic Documents published by the French Government (Affairs Armenians, supplement, 1895-1896), includes (pages 50-51) a dispatch from the Consul of the Portuguese nation in Aleppo, dated January 29, 1896, where, after the account of the massacre in Orfa, of 10,000 to 12,000 Armenians, we read:

"The Jews of Orfa were entrusted with the task of burying the dead. The corpses were dragged through the streets by..."
They were roped and thrown into a ditch where they were burned by pouring oil on them. This grim task lasted several days.
The Jews seized whatever valuables they could find by burying them inside the bodies of corpses.
that they drove around ignominiously like filthy beasts. Some Muslims showed humanity in these sad circumstances and deserve praise.

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR +99:

XLI

The role of Jews in the French Revolution.

It must be fair and acknowledge that the exuberant enthusiasm of the Jews for the French Revolution is genuinely sincere and even very legitimate.

Indeed, the more one studies the French Revolution, the more the role of Judaism in its preparation becomes clear.
appears considerable. It was in the secret societies where Judaism held sway that…
developed, through a fermentation of violent ideas and chimerical conceptions, the appalling explosion. It was at the famous Congress of Wilhelmsbad 5 that it was decided that France would be illuminated that is to say, ravaged from top to bottom and bled dry. Mirabeau himself was the instrument of the Jews, who had chained him with pleasure and with the gold he so desperately needed. It was in Berlin, in the arms of a beautiful and skillful Jewish woman, Henriette de Lémos, married to Doctor Herz, whose destiny was great

The revolutionary engine has received its final impetus.

“We will now know,” said Father Joseph Lémann (Jewish Preponderance, Part 1, page 147), “that between
Of the women abducted by this giant, the Jewish woman from Berlin was the most perceptive, and perhaps the most dangerous. She sensed it, she heard the volcano rumbling in that chest, and mingled with "the bubbling and fiery bellows that would erupt from it, those of his nation."

As for Jewish gold, how can one doubt its influence over Mirabeau?

“It is a matter of perfect historical certainty,” says Abbé Lémann further on (pages 149 and 150), “that the great and Poor Mirabeau was in need all his life because of his pleasures; he is also of a perfect certainty that, on urgent advice, Louis XVI resigned himself to buying Mirabeau and gave him 400,000 francs, in addition to a pension of 50,000 francs per month. Therefore, we are not risking a judgment.
reckless, thinking that if the King of France had to give gold to win Mirabeau's favor, at the very least
The reason, the Israelites must have thought, was that they remembered an episode.
From the Bible, their ancient story: this lion who was met on the road with a honeycomb in the mouth. It is likely that they imitated bees, and that, in the mouth of the lion of the Revolution,

Eloquence was aided by a persuasive ingot...

Moreover, gold greatly aided the emancipation of the Jews in France. I quote again Father Lémann (pages 182 to 185).

"No one will ever believe that gold, which has always been the great power of this people..."
since its dispersal, had not been of use to him in this circumstance, and that the purse which had provided him with so much at times the means to resolve the most delicate difficulties, had been, this time, scorned by him, so much so that his

The cause would have seemed ideal to him, and his views would have been so selfless! It is, however, the strange

See, regarding the congress of secret societies in Wilhelmsbad, the work by Abbé Lémann, "Entrée des Israélites" (Entry of the Israelites)
in the French Society, Book III, chapter VI

an assertion supported by Graetz's story: "The enemies of the Jews," he says, "had spread the rumor that a Jew very rich (Cerfberr) had distributed very considerable sums of money to win over lawyers.

It was a terrible slander. Can a city of seven hundred thousand inhabitants be bribed like that?

A far too innocent assertion, and a far too biased justification! No, certainly not, one cannot bribe a city of seven hundred thousand inhabitants; but in a city of seven hundred thousand inhabitants, one can bribe this or that inhabitant, such and such lawyer, such and such deputy. This is what our good Hebrews were careful not to disdain.
We believe this very firmly, without in any way diminishing their qualities. Yes, it is our
Out of sentiment, they had to spend and distribute a great deal of gold. The Duke of Broglie, moreover, declared it openly Parliament...

The hands that offered the gold are not worthy of praise; those that accepted it are even less so.
It was to be expected that the Jews would resort to a similar means of persuasion. But what else
On the one hand, we favored their emancipation by allowing ourselves to be won over to their cause with money; this was a sign characteristic of the proud and, at the same time, not very proud era inaugurated by the Revolution... The society, alas! was beginning to exhibit that venal aspect which inevitably came to it from its doctrines materialistic and Voltairean errors, and which will later be completely assimilated to the Jews. Who Like attracts like. That's why the gates of society were no longer strong enough to withstand the Jews. They Those heavy medieval doors, all locked with honor, were no longer there. The golden key was already playing with them.
"O venal city," exclaimed a foreigner, seeing it as a degenerate Rome; "you lack only one thing

"Buyer!" "With their keen perception, the Jews had sensed that society had become

"Mercenary, and they themselves presented themselves as buyers!"

Father Lémann finally demonstrates that, in order to force their emancipation, the Jews "They employed a final means, a clandestine and underhanded one, reprehensible in every respect: recourse to the suburbs and to the "Commune," and demonstrates that it was indeed to the Commune that the Jews
"They asked for the supreme impetus, the categorical help that brought about their emancipation." (Page 190) and following) 26.

I refer the reader to the work of Abbé Lémann, one of those books where the originality of the research and
The luminous insights are combined with the most exquisite delicacy of Christian meaning and a profound love of France. Who has spoken more eloquently of Joan of Arc?

The Jewish Impulse in the Crimes of the Revolution.

But Father Lémann, who so clearly discerned the role of Judaism in the revolutionary preparation, Hasn't he remained only halfway to the truth? The fierce march of the Revolution, its violence

26 Graetz (XI, p. 211), admits that it is only through revolutionary fanaticism (Glühenden Revolutionseifer) sections from which the Jews wrested their emancipation from the National Assembly.

bloodthirsty, his frenzy of murder and plunder, all this grand drama of horrors, are they not more or less of Jewish origin?

From the moment the Jews joined secret societies and mixed their poisons with those of Freemasonry, "this confluence of betrayals"?7, they necessarily instilled in it their views and dictated programs aligned with their age-old hatreds and the calculations of their gigantic ambition. However, they harbored resentment against France, which in 1394 had given the signal for their final expulsion, an unquenchable passion for revenge. On the other hand, the more appalling the act of destruction, the less
The establishment of their domination would encounter obstacles. What could be easier to occupy than a country devastated, where, without resistance, people settle on the ruins, cheaply seizing degraded properties and is effortlessly accepted by the population, whose ideas have been shattered and whose ideas have been annihilated by a cataclysm.

memories !

The Jews therefore had every interest in inflaming revolutionary passions, in pushing them to their paroxysm, to have as many distinguished heads, priests and nobles as possible cut down. While in Nancy, Metz, and Strasbourg the guillotine was in operation, the Synagogue of Metz sang, in Hebrew, hymns composed for the occasion in honor of the Revolution and its victories28. Apparently, only one Jew in the whole region of Lorraine and Alsace had the misfortune to be guillotined?9.

This Revolution, so cruel for the French and so benevolent towards the Jews, how can one not see that it developed under an initial inspiration and according to certain directions given by Israel himself, whose supreme skill is to seize control of minds and coerce them through suggestion, When he dominates them, to make them the instruments of his most criminal designs? Generally speaking, It is permissible to assert that Judaism communicates with all the political upheavals in which it influences, through the contagion of its cerebral nervousness, an impulsive, delusional, fanatical character Devastating and exterminating. Every movement of humanity of which he was the initiator or collaborator more or less falls under the category of mental pathology and psychopathy of crime.

Moreover, when one observes the Revolution, one is struck by a strange fact: in the midst of the turmoil, the The system of Jewish exploitation was laying its first foundations. On August 24, 1798, the Convention rendered the A meticulously crafted decree established the Great Book of Public Debt. This was while France is ablaze and blood flows freely as the tree of curse begins to grow. For the Debt public debt is crushing and stifling France (33 billion not counting departmental and municipal debt, that is to say, 5 or 6 billion more), while at the same time it is the glory of Israel. It is not even just a part of a much larger system, an organization that pumps, every day, the best of French energy and labor. The Jews are convinced that this economic organization, which they had

*7 Happy expression of Mr. Abbé Lémann.

#8 See in Graetz (XI, p. 224), the Hebrew text and the first stanza of one of these hymns.

% Id. 225. In Bordeaux, no Jews were guillotined; however, three or four were sentenced to heavy sentences. fines. Their mass acquisitions of national property were seen as evidence of patriotism and saved them from the scaffold.

the art of imposing on France, cannot be broken, that it is, for them, an impregnable citadel and that the

The day their political and financial dominance was threatened, an indescribable crisis would erupt.

The Jews are mistaken. Breaking the chain of their exploitation is not an insoluble problem. will be addressed in due course; the methods are not impossible to find. I will study this in my next volume, the economic reforms that the anti-Jewish Revolution will require, and which will be its

preparation or supplement.

XL

The French Rabbinate and the French Revolution.

To give the reader a break, I quote, chosen at random, a few fragments of Judeo- eloquence revolutionary, excerpts from speeches by French Rabbis on the occasion of the centenary
of the Revolution
(May 1889).

From the speech of Mr. Elle Aristide Astruc, Chief Rabbi of the Bayonne district:
"Thank God, the Revolution has restored society to its true foundations: Law and Justice...
The people
The apostle, despite the divisions tearing him apart, imposes the new law on his internal enemies and compels his external enemies to recognize his right to determine his own destiny... It is in vain that the forces
The past obstructs progress and attempts to stir up hatred. The apostolic nation illuminates the spirits...

The ideas of 1789 can be denied for a time, but no more so than those of the Bible from which they originate.

the powerful expression, they cannot disappear... »

This comparison between the ideas of the Revolution, one of which, the idea of the brotherhood of peoples, is at the highest degree of dissolution of the national spirit, and those of the Bible which systematize into a dogmatism hateful and proud, by fitting them together—nationality, race, and religion—me
It has the effect of a pleasant fantasy. I don't know if the ideas of 1789 will disappear like sounds. misleading. In any case, if France played the role of apostle on behalf of the Jews a century ago, After a century of experience, she would do well to return to the anti-Semitic apostolate, in accordance with her true nature.

vocation.

From the speech of Rabbi Aron at the Jewish Temple in Lunéville:
"Before 1789, what were we? Nothing but the playthings of a despot. Tossed about by every wind, having Sometimes there was nowhere to lay one's head. With May 5, 1789, a worthy counterpart to the Sinaic Revolution whose glorious anniversary we will soon celebrate, this painting, with its deep, dark shadows, changes
All of a sudden. No doubt, May 5th does not complete our total emancipation, but no matter, it prepares for it.
On May 5th, the Declaration of the Rights of Man was proclaimed; this immortal charter, this Decalogue modern, or rather this amplified Decalogue of humanity, is now engraved in all hearts;

France presents him to the world as a second Moses; on September 27, 1791, the Israelites are called French citizens...

The Midrash tells us about the upheaval of nature on the day of the Sinai Revolution. A spectacle
A similar situation presents itself to us in 1789, in the moral world. Look: on the horizon, rising like...
Clouds of dust; a swift, impetuous wind rises; the sky is covered with a dark veil; at long and mournful gusts, followed by the flashes of a thunderous storm; the trees twist and are uprooted; the
The ground trembles; all of nature is in the grip of a terrible convulsion; the mountains, as if seized by vertigo, they waver on their foundations and from their half-opened flanks escapes, threatening and terrible, a

A torrent that leaves nothing standing, a torrent that fertilizes and destroys, destroys and fertilizes.

Behind him, ruins and more ruins, ruins of all prejudices, all injustices, all abuse; ruins of arbitrariness, collapse of all barriers, separating humanity into two camps, here
The chosen ones, there the oppressed; the crash of a society falling and upon the piled ruins, the erection of a Temple
Majestic, the Temple of Humanity, and at the summit of this Temple, this house of peace, floating in full Air and winds, the glorious flag of the great French Revolution with this unforgettable trilogy: Liberty for all, Equality for all, Fraternity for all. Noble and beautiful land of France which has had "The honor of inscribing this admirable motto, 'To you our blood and our life!'"

This painting, taken from a Talmudic book, is not without dramatic effect. It looks like a machine.
of theatre that comes to life. But Rabbi Aron has forgotten something: it's France who bore the brunt of the cataclysm and Israel who reaped the benefits. One could apply, here, by

By analogy, the proverb: "Fools give dinner, wise men are at fables," and saying: "Fools do

"Revolutions, and the treacherous take advantage of them."

From the speech of Mr. Bloch, Chief Rabbi of Algeria:
"The movement of renewal that began in our time and which took the name of the French Revolution was like a life-giving sun for all the oppressed of the earth; but it was Israel that benefited the most... The French Jews, sensing that the end of their centuries-long humiliation was near, acclaimed the ideas news. Led by prudent and devoted chiefs, the Cerf Berr, the Furtado, the Gradis, they brought Their demands before this energetic and proud assembly... They did not triumph without a fight.

There were the fanatics, who could not forgive the cursed race, and the cowards, who feared to see The Jews, once free, invaded and seized everything. Thanks to it (the French Revolution), Israel is not plus that epic vagabond of popular legend, who roams the earth without respite or rest, his head bowed under God's curse, with misery as a companion and final annihilation as the only outcome hope; Israel is a colossal sower advancing with its brow haloed by a reflection of Sinai, in The immeasurable field of centuries. Each of his strides measures hundreds and hundreds years. With each movement of his powerful hand, he deposits in the furrow a seed of truth, which will rise and ripen behind him.

The Midrash, or rather the Midrashim (Interpretations), belong to the third period of literature.
Hebrew, that which spans from the beginning of the 3rd century to the end of the 5th century. This period notably produced the two Talmuds which increasingly systematized, in scientific form, the perverse instincts of the Jews.

He sets off, and Ezra's genius rejuvenates the weathered mosaic. He turns to the right, and here is the Spiritual Christianity, which reveals itself to reconciled pagans; it turns to the left, and it is Islam that emerges, gathering and propagating his monotheistic doctrine. Then comes Luther's Reformation, which brings back to their primitive simplicity, the obscured beliefs, and then this prodigious movement which we celebrate

"Today marks the first centenary..."

Judaism, the creator of spiritualist Christianity! What an impudent lie! Christianity is,
In relation to Judaism, development is based on antagonism, not on lineage. Nothing could be more absurd.
than to make it a Jewish work. It would be just as much as making the Sphinx the father of Oedipus, or Medusa the mother of Perseus, and from England the educator of Joan of Arc 31.

As for Islam, it is indeed an offshoot of Judaism. Same fundamental instincts, same structure mental, even nervousness. Judaism is more cunning, Islam more violent. 32 But they are, like Naturalists would say, two species of the same genus. Allah continues Yahweh, as Mr. [Name] very rightly said.
Edmond Picard.

The Catholic clergy will also undoubtedly note the appropriateness of the dithyrambic praise of Luther in the middle of the Synagogue. This was a gesture of rabbinical delicacy towards him.

Chief Rabbi Bloch could, however, have paid a better tribute to Luther and quoted some passages from his famous work The Jews and Their Lies, alongside which the writings of the Anti-Semites

Modern ideas are nothing but rosewater. Here are a few phrases taken at random:

“There is no people under the sun so eager for revenge, so thirsty for blood,

"Believing that God's people are only meant to slaughter and sacrifice nations..."

“Know, Christian, that after the devil, you have no enemy more cruel, more venomous, more violent than a

"A true Jew..."

"These are all vicious, perverse, venomous, satanic beasts that have been around for fourteen hundred years"

And beyond that, they have been and still are the ruin of governments, the black plagues, and our cancers.

They learn these things from their Rabbis in their Synagogues, dens of foul spirits.

This is why Luther urged princes and magistrates to burn down the synagogues and reduce them to ashes these "offices of blasphemy".

It is worth noting that Luther knew the Jews intimately and that he had, on the occasion of his Hebrew studies, observed very closely. The great and vehement heretic certainly had the qualities of a psychologist.

31 “Jesus, who was the greatest of the Aryan reformers… Jesus is the opposite of a Semite.” (Ed. Picard, (Summary of Antisemitism, pages 102 and 134). A charming remark from this author: "For the Jew, there may be physical impossibilities, but there are hardly any moral impossibilities” (page 87).

See: The Pathology of Islam, by Kimon (1897).

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR - 61 -

From the speech of Mr. Emile Cahen (Chief Rabbi of the consistorial district of Lille): "Let us celebrate with joy this forever unforgettable day, when, with the meeting of the States-Generals, sublime truths were engraved in indelible lines on the conscience of our well-born France.

Beloved!

Let us sing with love of this blessed era, when, upon the thick darkness of feudalism, came a a torrent of light whose dazzling brilliance spread over the most backward regions of Europe!

Let us glorify this unforgettable page of modern history! Let us exalt virile energy, moral courage, and… majestic independence of views of which the Clermont-Tonnerre, the Mirabeau, the Sieyès, the Duport, all

"Valiant fighters of the National Assembly demonstrated their support for the Israelites…!" (What follows is a depiction of the deplorable condition of the Jews over many centuries.)

"But then the light appears. Around this floating mass of lost men, blinded by the prejudices or ignorance, shines the noble constellation of great thinkers of the 18th century, fanatics of law and of justice. Through careful study of past centuries, they denounce its shames and its culprits. misdeeds... Under their fruitful influence, the science of religions establishes that the Jew is not what a vain the people think; that they play a large part in the progress of astronomy, medicine, in the
The renaissance of letters and arts; that through him this great dogma of the unity of God, surrounded by his luminous satellites: love of neighbor, the worship of family, respect for the property, life, the honor of one's fellow human beings, tolerance, work...

Ah! If on this classical land of brotherhood, abominable doctrines and odious theories have tried,
In recent times, to sow seeds of petty jealousies or burning furies deep within people's souls...
Rest assured, my brothers, the Genius of France watches over us. He will not allow us to be compromised by "These are vile pamphlets, this gigantic work of 1789."

The virile energy, the moral courage, the majestic independence of the protagonists of the emancipation of Jews! Chief Rabbi Emile Cahen could have said a few words about the magical influence of this metal precious that Israel has the property of hoarding like a sponge absorbs water and with which it buys everything that is for sale.

As for the "vile pamphlets," I suppose that's an allusion to /4 France Juive by Edouard Drumont. I leave it to the great writer to defend himself and to posterity to place him first.
among the intrepid initiators. However, I warn him that, in two or three hundred years, historians

Israel will tear him apart again with their teeth, like one of the men who dealt blows to their race the most terrible.

Incidentally, anti-Semites cannot afford to over-study the major figures of anti-Semitism. especially the group of three great Dominicans Geronimo de Santa Fé, Vicente Ferrer and Pedro de Luna, and especially the Franciscan Capistrano, the Napoleon of Anti-Semitism. Graetz himself, the

The sophistical and venomous historian had to recognize Ferrer's great character and the incomparable

Capistrano's energy, which brought down Jewish domination in Germany, Bohemia, Poland and Hungary {History of the Jews, Volume VIII, p. 106 et seq., 186 et seq.).

From the Address of Rabbi Kahn at the Jewish Temple of Nîmes:
“1789 | Ah! my brothers, what a great date in the history of Judaism! 1789! It is the feast of our Deliverance, the anniversary of our social emancipation; it is our exodus from Egypt, it is our Passover.

modern. "

From the address by Rabbi Korb at the Jewish Temple in Nantes:
"The settlement of the Israelites in France dates back almost twenty centuries. The French genius is Naturally frank, loyal, hospitable... Thus, Judaism in France soon shone with a bright brilliance...
Then came the time of the Crusades. Religious fanaticism was at its height. At the same time, it precipitated

With countless hordes sweeping across the East, he sowed misery and death in Europe. From that moment on, the
The fate of the Israelites became increasingly miserable… Finally, long prepared by the writings of bold philosophers of the 18th century, the great French Revolution erupted… Also, in every place where a

"France has a friend at heart, an Israelite."

How could Judaism, which abhors the Crusades, fit within the framework of French nationality?
France would first have to disown its history. Rabbi Korb lacked prudence.
when he denounced what medieval France had produced that was most beautiful and greatest, and called them hordes the French armies commanded by Godfrey of Bouillon, Philip Augustus and Saint Louis.

From the address of Chief Rabbi Alfred Lévy at the Consistorial Temple of Lyon:
"There is a virtue that the Israelite possesses to a high degree, which he has cultivated in all periods of his life."
history, and which was particularly recommended to him in the Holy Scriptures, is gratitude…
May God, my brothers, protect France! May He bless this great initiator of nations; may He…
allows us to always remain at the forefront of progress, to pursue in peace our glorious destinies…»

France at the forefront of progress! On the contrary, it is currently lagging behind Europe, and She will only regain control of the situation the day she is out of the rut in which the Jews have dragged her, covered in mud.

and wounds.

From Rabbi Emile Lévy of Verdun:

“A century has passed since law and humanity raised their eloquent voice in our favor. Israel has made giant strides in the career that has opened up before it... On all the fields offered to its activity, he quickly rises to the top... Our country has no more loyal citizens, our homeland has no

No more intrepid defenders, no more devoted children's France.

From the speech of Rabbi Mossé in Avignon (very enthusiastic):
"How many children of Israel have distinguished themselves in all careers over the past century!... Their Their success was immense, thanks to their tireless and patriotic fervor, their admirable perseverance...

Let us pronounce with respectful admiration the illustrious names of the Rothschilds, whose fortune colossal, which originates in probity, powerfully supporting, when necessary, the peoples and the governments; let us proudly claim the Goudchaux, the Crémieux, who, in times of crisis Supreme, they wisely held the destinies of the nation in their hands!... Shall we forget Osiris the great philanthropist who, at this moment, arouses, through his patriotic generosity, the admiration and gratitude of the

All of France 7... »

The Rothschilds' integrity, Crémieux's wisdom, Osiris's philanthropy—it's dazzling. I I hasten to acknowledge that while Mr. Osiris Iffla has had some unfortunate lawsuits in Paris and Bordeaux, a particularly original event on the occasion of the Portuguese Rite Synagogue at 33 rue de Buffault, he
He has repeatedly shown himself to be a philanthropist, even to the point of extravagance. But rabbinic eloquence has Generous enthusiasm! She doesn't wait for death to celebrate you, she canonizes you with your living, in the middle of the Synagogue, and he praises you to the skies as a benevolent billionaire or millionaire.

Why didn't Rabbi Mossé add that Mr. Osiris shunned ostentation and abhorred publicity?

Was he paying newspapers not to talk about his generosity?

From the Address of Mr. Armand Bloch at the Jewish Temple of Toul:
"In a very short time, the French Jew rose to the moral and intellectual level of his fellow citizens."

He assimilated, with prodigious speed, the customs, the traditions, the language of his new homeland... »

In terms of assimilative abilities, Israel possesses a prodigious capacity to assimilate the property of others. The Jews

They assimilated the wealth of France even better than its customs, its practices and its language.

From the speech of Mr. Moïse Netter, Rabbi of Saint-Étienne:
“Yes, my brothers, if suddenly, through some catastrophe, the memory of the Revolution were lost...” in the memory of men, without any mention of it remaining anywhere, the historian, the philosopher and
The moralist could easily demonstrate its existence through the profound and fruitful changes it has brought about.
operated in the world, following the example of one of our most illustrious scientists who demonstrated, by the appearance of the sky and the calculation, the existence of an important planet, even before it had been seen in the field of telescope.

Rabbi Moïse Netter undoubtedly aimed for the sublime. This French Revolution lost in the spaces and which the historians of Israel, the Cassels or the Graetzes, rediscover by means of formulas of the Mischna, just as Le Verrier discovered Neptune using perturbation theory, this makes to dream of the power of the human mind in a Jewish brain developed by the Synagogue and Talmudic training 34.

See Gazette des Tribunaux, August 23, 1884.

34 I strongly encourage my readers to browse through Mr. Benjamin Mossé's work: The French Revolution and the French Rabbinate, Paris, 1890, published by Durlacher, which contains the speeches from which I have given some extracts. They are Reading them will convince readers that the Revolution is much less an event of French history than of history itself.
Jewish. The gloom was for us; Israel was the victor.

XLIV

Circular from Mr. Zadoc-Kahn.

Finally, here are some excerpts from Mr. Zadoc-Kahn's circular, dated May 3, 1889, on the occasion of the same centenary:

"For a hundred years we have had the good fortune to be French citizens and to be able to exercise our rights and duties attached to this title. From the first day, we considered it an honor to love and serve our country.

We embraced its interests, contributing our work to its prosperity...

But as French Jews, we have a particular reason to celebrate the anniversary of 1789, to pay tribute
A tribute to the benevolent genius of modern France. The memorable events that inaugurated it, there
A century, a new phase in the history of our country, also marks the starting point of a happy transformation in the destinies of Judaism.

France, which has been the providential instrument of our recovery, is entitled to our unalterable recognition, and it is right to take advantage of the moment we are in to give expression to our feelings.

You will join us in thanking Divine Providence for having granted France the glory of to brilliantly represent the principles of liberty, equality, and fraternity in the world, and to ask him to continue its protection of our country, keeping it always prosperous, united, powerful and respected.

The future of humanity is linked to the greatness of France.

Then, alluding to that violent and unfair war which history will one day brand under the barbaric name

"of anti-Semitism," Mr. Zadoc-Kahn added:
"We note with sorrow that some French writers have joined this campaign so contrary to fairness, at the risk of weakening the prestige that France owes to the elevation and nobility of its feelings. We are confident about the outcome of this campaign. France will not repudiate its Its past, its traditions, its principles which constitute the best of its moral heritage. It will welcome with disdain a system of denigration imported from abroad that clashes with its liberal and generous spirit."
(Archives Israélites 35, 1889, page 154).

This circular is quite a plea, its unctuousness betraying a hint of bitterness, and which

The cautious address veils what Judaism does not wish to show. It is clear that it is written for the French, not for the Jews who don't mince words. It would be easy, moreover, to comment on it.

3 The Archives Israélites have the following epigraph:

1/ The 4th verse of the 1st chapter of Genesis: “And God saw that the light was good;”

2/ The verse from the Aeneid (X, line 108): Tros Rutulus ve fuat, nullo discrimine habebo.

This last epigraph (which is only intelligible when considered in conjunction with the preceding verse) is the exact expression of the
The situation of Judaism in France. It is Jupiter, in this passage from the Aeneid, who speaks and says: "Whatever "Today the fortune and hopes of the Trojan or the Rutulus, both will be equal to me" (Trans. Nisard). In other words, Judaism compares itself to Jupiter; it is like Jupiter omnipotens (Ibid., line 100). It is, moreover, supremely indifferent to the destinies of nations; he hovers above events. France may perish: Israel will be no worse off. As for the first epigraph, it is arrogant. The reign
"Judaism would be the land of light! Come now! Let's put darkness in place of light."

We have embraced its interests (those of France). Judaism embraces no one's interests and even less so those of France, whom he has hated for centuries. His soul is that of a courtesan, to say the least.

not to use a more forceful word.

Our work contributed to its prosperity. Judaism put a noose around France's neck and delivered it to the torment of a consuming exploitation. This is precisely the opposite of prosperity. Mr. Zadoc-Kahn gives me the impression of having spiritually confused the decline of the phylloxera-affected vine with the flourishing of the parasite that destroys it.

Memorable events... mark the starting point of a happy transformation in the The destinies of Judaism. That's absolutely true! France has declined gradually while Israel was making its triumphant ascent.

France, which was the providential instrument of our recovery. Why not say the instrument Satanic? Because, by unleashing the Jewish scourge upon the universe and upon itself, France has been the instrument of Satan, not God. She atones for her sin and will continue to atone until the day she brings him back into the fold.

Hell of fire, the descendants and continuators of the deicides.

You will join us in thanking Divine Providence for having granted France the glory of to brilliantly represent the principles of liberty, equality, and fraternity to the world. How can Mr.
Is Zadoc-Kahn speaking of freedom, when everywhere Jewish tyranny reigns, the tyranny of base exploiters, of a blood-sucking vampire, an Asian policeman, an ingenious executioner who, through secret schemes, decapitates society; of equality, when Jews proclaim themselves superior beings; of fraternity, when

Do these same Jews only plot fraud, defamation, corruption, plunder, and pillage?

This violent and unfair war that history will one day condemn under the barbaric name of anti-Semitism.
Antisemitism is an unfair war! In this line of thinking, Judaism is the master of masters.
Fraud, that is his genius, that is his vocation for all ages and all moments. If Mr. Zadoc-Kahn
He is unaware of it; he has never looked around him, never studied Jewish history and literature, hence

Perfidy and cruelty are exhaled in torrents.

We are confident about the outcome of this campaign. I too am confident and convinced that the
The fight against anti-Semitism will restore France's prestige and will allow it to regain precisely this elevation and this nobility of sentiment that Mr. Zadoc-Kahn speaks of, and from which she has seriously deviated by prostituting herself to the Jew. She will thus reconcile herself with her traditions and walk towards the future in the light of his past.

She will disdainfully welcome a system of denigration imported from abroad. Mr. Zadoc-Kahn is dreaming. Where has-Did he see that antisemitism in France was an import? Was it from England, Germany, Italy, or...?

Is it possible that he escaped to enter our country?

Could he perhaps possess the nomadic temperament of the Jews and have assimilated their cunning in order to infiltrate?
in a country that doesn't want to receive him? Mr. Zadoc-Kahn missed a golden opportunity to remain silent, either to make this honest admission that if anti-Semitism were to erupt in several parts of Europe at once, it is that everywhere the Jews were the same and attracted the same repulsion.

I am, moreover, convinced that France, which, in terms of anti-Semitism, has received nothing from abroad, will have

In this respect, it is considerably exportable without impoverishment. It will be the great source of inspiration, the center of explosion and action. This is the grandiose mission that Providence assigns to it and to which it will not fail, for his glory as well as for the salvation of Aryan and Christian Humanity.

XLV

The Jewish Societies in Paris.

The Jews were the true beneficiaries of the French Revolution. This is an obvious fact that no longer needs to be acknowledged.

I need a demonstration. I would like to make it tangible by providing a descriptive list of the principal properties of the Israelites, in Paris and the neighboring departments. But I would be accused to incite the population to loot. I will therefore simply add a list of Jewish societies of Paris, according to the Jewish Yearbook:

. Talmudic Studies Society, 10 rue Cadet.

. Jischoub Eretz Israel 38, rue Richer, 50.

. Etz hayim, faubourg Montmartre, 43.

. Esrath Chitounim, rue Richer, 50.

1

2

3

4

5. Guemilout Hessed, rue Bleue, 13.

6. Société de la Terre promise, rue de l'Ecluse, 18.

T. Society of Eternal Repose, 104 rue de Turenne.

8. Olei Reguel, rue du Chemin-Vert, 106.

9. Dutch Jewish Society, 26 rue Cadet.
10. Friends of Humanity and Union, 43 rue du Temple.
11. Bienfaisante Israélite, boulevard Montmartre, 15.
12. La Chaîne de fer, rue Sedaine, 28.

13. Disciples of Moses, rue Saint-Sébastien, 17.

14. Twelve tables, rue Saint-Gilles, 14.

15. Children of Krakow.

16. Children of Daniel, rue Geoffroy-Saint-Hilaire, 11.

17. Children of Isaac, Boulevard Saint-Marcel, 21.

38 An extract from the Archives Israélites, 1896, page 3:

Jewish Agricultural Assistance in Palestine. The Society for Assistance to Jewish Settlers in Palestine, known as Jishub Eretz Israel (No. 2) held a session on Saturday evening at the Consistorial Hall under the chairmanship of Rabbi Weiskopf.
The audience was large... The sustained attention they paid to the deliberations, the friendly curiosity with which it welcomed the communications made to it, the exchanges of observations and views which had These places testify to the vitality and depth of the worship of Palestine in Israelite hearts.

18. Children of Jacob, rue des Blancs-Manteaux, 35.
19. The Fraternal.

20. Children of Japheth, rue de Rivoli, 3.

21. Children of Sem, Stephenson Street, 2.

22 Children of Sion, Archives Street, 47.

23. Children of King Solomon, Temple Street, 18.
24. Children of Lemberg, rue Saint-Martin, 123.
23. Polish Israelites, rue des Francs-Bourgeois, 13.
26. Dutch Society.

27. Links of Israel, cited Rougemont, 6.

28. Sacred Law, rue de la Trémoille, 6.

29. Mission of Israel, rue d'Allemagne, 149.

30. Mount Sinai, Meslay Street, 62.

31. Mutual insurance company, 14 rue Bérenger.

32. Patriarch Abraham, Bugeaud Avenue, 18.

33. Union Israélite, avenue de Lamotte-Piquet, 32.
34. The School Union, 19 rue Bérenger.

39. Brothers of Israel, 24 rue des Roziers.

36. Talmud Torah, rue Bourg-Tibourg, 35.

37. Polish Oratory, Letort Street, 28.

38. Israelite Truth, 10 Taylor Street.

39. Zorobabel, rue de Bretagne, 39.

40. Oratory of Batignolles, 116 rue Legendre.
41. Ladies, Temple Street, 43.

42. Dames Kapronot, rue Dombasle, 39,

43. Deborah, rue Rambuteau, 4.

44. Esther and Rebecca, Cail Street, 20.

43. Women of Israel, rue Saint-Antoine, 103.

46. Daughters of Jacob, 244 rue de Rivoli.

47. Daughters of Zorobabel, Strasbourg Boulevard, 35.
48. Jerusalem, rue Etienne Dolet, 30.

49. Union of Jewish Ladies, rue de Grenelle, 148.

All these societies, even if their sole purpose was charity or mutual assistance, are at deep within small synagogues where Jews exchange life-giving fluids and where they surrender themselves, with intoxication, the pleasure of feeling separate from the society in which they live, despised and abhorred by them as inferior and ignoble.

If any Frenchman still believes in the gradual absorption of Judaism by France, he must be the the most narrow-minded, the most ignorant, and the most credulous of men. As for the Freemasons, to whom the orators Lodges continually portray Clericalism as a dark conspiracy against the Liberty and equality, they would do well to change their spectrum, to leave black behind for yellow, and, at instead of insulting their religion, of wondering if they have not become the flat and trembling servants of The infamous God whom Israel fashioned in its own image and whom it worships in its Synagogues, the God of pride delirious, filled with profound hatred, inexorable vengeance, atrocious cruelty, and calculated plunder, audacious lies that ensnare and mislead, slander that burns, betrayal that kills like a deadly poison.

XLVI

Anti-Semitism is, in France, a regenerative force.

Antisemitism has suffered the fate of all great things, and of all lofty doctrines. It has He encountered ridiculous calumnies and inept paradoxes along his path. They tried to caricature him.
as an eccentricity, a base passion, a depravity of moral sense. The Jews represented Anti-Semites are sometimes portrayed as envious, sometimes as madmen or fools. Moreover, the Israelites are imbued with the idea that they alone have the right to judge themselves and that they are exempt from judgment.

of other men. How could anti-Semitism not be, in their eyes, a crime and a blasphemy?

In any case, antisemitism no longer needs to refute these all-too-palpable absurdities. It has taken hold. possession of public opinion, but the rank he occupies there is far from the one he will occupy when it is understood that it is, in the highest degree, by its very nature, a regenerative force, a powerful and irresistible surge of

The national idea.

Antisemitism is France reclaiming its historical identity, its Aryan genius, and its tradition

Christian.
It is gold, insolent and false, that descends from its throne.
It is political and judicial corruption that is hunted down and ruthlessly punished.

This is the government of statesmen, which Jewish intrigue and police have systematically excluded from public affairs, succeeding the government of their cronies.

This is the rebirth, in European and Eastern politics, of the bold and French initiative.

intrepid.

It is the French spirit, purified of the Jewish spirit, that has given it its vicious ugliness and filth.

pretentious; it is the French soul freed from an impure contact which materializes and depraves it.

It is a stronger, more vibrant, more active national unity than it has ever been. Antisemitism connects to one another men of all classes and professions. This will be for the France, a melting pot where all its elements, today more or less dissociated, will merge into one one and the same metal. It unites, in effect, all classes with one another through community. of danger and the brotherhood of the struggle. To present it as a seed of division and as before

Dividing France into two camps is the most absurd of mistakes and the most inconceivable of follies.

France is dividing itself over the Jews! Are they then demigods, beings almost Supernatural? Or does France have a cult of swindlers and traitors? Does it have a penchant for insolence? Great Jews, a degenerate admiration? Has his great soul become a soul of lackeys?

And if we consider the various professions, with the specialization of their studies and their development intellectual, with the particular experience they provide of matters of public and private life, Anti-Semitism appears as a center where the highest concerns of all men come together.

The priest, custodian of the Christian Idea, struggles to defend it against the Jewish solvent that represses it.
in devotional practices by removing its social direction. Go to Lourdes while you can.
You will want to, but suffer the divorce: such is the law imposed upon him by Semitism. Now, divorce, the brother, and the a precursor to polygamy, it is the negation of the most beautiful of Christian conceptions: the equality of the woman and man and their union in a love enlivened by heavenly thoughts. May the clergy Catholic, so rich in virtues and courage, and lacking only a stronger direction, does not Don't forget it! It is only on the day when Jewish power is overthrown that divorce, this Regression towards animality will disappear from our institutions.

For his part, the legal professional, magistrate or lawyer, who had to delve into Jewish affairs, these affairs convoluted paths where deceit abounds, scrutinizing these files where beneath each document, each list of shareholders, every set of minutes from company meetings, every letter, every note, we discover a fraud, a trap, a sleight of hand, where the lie has, so to speak, the dense vegetation of a forest
As a virgin, how could he be indifferent to the Jewish question? He knows the devastating power of Jews and their infernal tactics; he knows the ruins, the despair, the suicides, the fallen lives,

Extinct families, wandering destinies.

The honest magistrate — and there are many of them in France — felt the corruption creeping into his mind; a few words

Strange things were whispered in his ear; perhaps a colleague, in debt or a spendthrift, listened to them…

The psychiatrist also contributes a valuable body of observations to the study of antisemitism.
Judaism, which is in itself a kind of neurosis, spreads nervous disorders around it. And

Not only is he a factor in mental instability; but, as he reigns over France, he does not

It does not allow him to rid himself of the alcoholic poison from which he himself does not suffer. The eminent alienists (doctors Magnan, Garnier, etc.), who conducted studies on the ravages of alcoholism so complete, they wonder with astonishment why the public authorities are not taking action without delay the necessary measures to stop the growing evil. Let them rest assured! When France has Having broken Jewish domination, within a few weeks their proposals will be studied and the laws will be passed.

against alcoholism voted. I boldly predict it for them.

As for the farmer crushed by taxes, gnawed away by mortgages, and ruined by speculation on wheat, on whom, more than anyone else, falls the burden of this insane public debt, the work of cunning Jewish, which France contracted, if he did not fully embrace the anti-Semitic movement,

It means he would be paralyzed or dazed.

Similarly, the soldier who expects formidable battles from one day to the next knows that the Jew is not not only the usurer with hooked fingers, but also the spy and the traitor. Not all Jews are, no doubt, not traitors, but even considering treason in Judaism only as a fact exceptional, it must be acknowledged that he has, in order to produce this exception, a disturbing aptitude.

And the politician who has reflected on the internal and external decadence of France;
The economist who studied large-scale land grabs and the complex mechanism of Jewish exploitation;

The sociologist who seeks remedies for social ills, for this general tendency either towards disorder or towards a weakness worse than disorder, which is the characteristic of contemporary France;

They too have a wealth of ideas and perspectives to exchange. Their gazes are fixed on the lofty edifice of the Jewish power, they know that France will only find its way again the day this edifice has covered the ground with its ruins, and where then it will become itself again, having its politics, its organization its own economic and moral life, without borrowing anything from Judaism, its tyrant and corrupter.

XLVL

How will the anti-Semitic revolution unfold?

How will France be liberated? What role will a slow and peaceful process play? What Will it be the France of the storm? True France is immortal, imperishable, while Semitized France is merely an aberration of history, a well-orchestrated lie that can loudly dominate the scene, but destined to dissipate like impure darkness before the light of day.

In vain does Semitism boast of being the master, of burdening the Administrations with its creatures and the public promenades of the capital with its sumptuous carriages, to drive with a firm hand

Chambers and Ministers, to suck France dry through taxes and debt, down to the very last bone, of to corrupt even his soul and to let a virus flow into it that breeds stupor and apathy. In vain his
The genius of demoralization has unfolded with an astonishing abundance of resources and activity.

than at any other time.

In vain, he fortified himself on all fronts and secured powerful support abroad so as to
to be able, the day the French dare to wake up and stand up to him, to boldly throw off the mask and their to spit in his face, in his most venomous voice, the words of Tartuffe: "The house is mine, it's yours"

to get out of it.

The abyss is nonetheless there, gaping, ready to swallow Israelism. If he doesn't see it, it's because he is blind; and if France seems not to have the necessary forces, it is because these forces are still scattered, unorganized. But everywhere work is taking place at an increasingly rapid pace; consciousness national identity is reborn; the most diverse minds feel a new, intimate and ardent bond forming between them.

This link is France, which must be wrested from the clutches of the Reptile.
Ah! What a sublime hour it will be when, throughout France, this cry will burst forth: Israel must be defeated!

How beautiful France will be! What a spectacle she will present to the world! What a brilliant page in the epic!

of its national life! As we will see men and heroes arise, and the formidable army of Israel,

Broken into pieces, to flee and spread the terror of its defeat to the four corners of the universe!

Ah! No doubt, the Jews abroad will conspire against France. The prominent Jews will go and incite Against her is England, to which they already belong in heart and interest. But what does it matter! Why would France, purified of Judaism, which poisons it, shrink from complications? diplomatic relations and the dramas of war? If the English go to the Îles du Salut to look for Dreyfus and in If one of their generals were to do so, France would regret having been, as always, too lenient, too little forward-thinking.

XLVIII

The French Woman and Anti-Semitism.

How could a French woman not be anti-Semitic with all the love she has in her heart? For France? It is not only the most beautiful expression, it is the truest expression of this noble country.

I admire Richelieu, his bold views, his masculine genius, his vast mind. But the soul of Joan of Arc,

Is it not even more sublime than that of the great man? If Richelieu's thought has left Behind her a luminous furrow, Joan of Arc, from the heavens above, watches over France and tells her not to Never despair.

Like the immortal heroine, the French woman has an indomitable faith in the destinies of the homeland.
How many men, dazzled by Jewish prestige, convince themselves that France will forever remain subjugated to the domination of Israel! We even hear some who put resignation into theory, proclaiming Israel is invincible, and they repeat these flat and cowardly clichés as absolute truths: These people (the Jews) are so clever, so extraordinary | There's nothing you can do against them!

The French woman, more judicious, more sagacious, is not so easily fascinated. Christian and Aryan, She feels an instinctive repulsion for the Israelite. Beneath his caressing manner, she senses the reptile. His false arrogance and upstart infatuation wound her. When the crew
The great swindler passes by with his princely bearing, his astonishing horses, his exuberant lackeys of insolence, when she sees the Hebrews of both sexes displaying their radiant, elegant persons there conquering and contemptuous, she feels an inner disgust and, towards him who swoons in admiration Stupid, she replies with a smile: //So these Jews intimidate you! Just wait a while, and you

You won't see them anymore.

For the French woman has a prophetic intuition of imminent deliverance. How can the blessed land of the
Is France destined to be forever the prey of the abject invader? She loves this land, with a love deep.

For her, nothing is beautiful, charming, poetic, nothing speaks to the soul like the sky of France, like the monuments of its cities, like its rivers, its forests, its plains, its valleys, like its history, its glories, its sorrows, its hopes often disappointed, but often also miraculously victorious. If France were to remain forever the slave of a foreign dominator, that is, the flames of heroism and the light of inspired devotion would have been extinguished there.

How would the French woman, who feels she possesses a wealth of energy, accept this? Decadence? Semitic domination is a trial, a punishment from God; it cannot be a irrevocably condemned. To end it, one simply needs to resolutely, fearlessly, immediately put to work.

This is what French women think and want.

New duties of the French woman.

She needs to think it and want it even more strongly, and to use power for that purpose.

sovereign power that, as a mother, she exercises over the future.

This child to whom she gave birth and whose soul she will shape by communicating her own to him, it is necessary that she teach him, along with love of country, a horror of the exotic tyrant. She will tell him that France is unhappy because the Jew reigns there, because this being of falsehood and lies oppresses her and degrades. She will tell him about Judas, Deutz, and Dreyfus. She will show him the army of reptiles that covers the soil, the countless Jewish vipers that make the most beautiful land in the world a cursed place. She will plant in his young mind, in his young intellect, the precious seed, faith and the holy ardor.

Ah! If only the mothers who raised the current generation had better understood the Semitic peril, if only they had they prepared their children for the most difficult of struggles and the most inevitable of tragedies, we would see-we, this honest, loyal, undoubtedly generous youth, but too often weakened, indolent, do not unaware of the immense effort required to repel destructive parasitism. This, in turn, led him to believe that... What's lacking is grit. She'll only acquire it by resolutely embarking on her career. turbulent situation that lies ahead, I don't think I'm venturing to say that everywhere the level of characters are rising, where the rebirth of the national idea is vigorously manifested, the influence of Anti-Semitism is there, penetrating like light, active and beneficial like a vital stimulant.

French women have another, more complicated duty to fulfill. They must, as much as they can, to protect her husband from all Israelite contact. This contact, she should know, is almost infallibly a cause of moral upheaval. The Israelites not only have the ability to spread around them the imbalance. But, what is very characteristic of this mental contagion, any perversion which passes from their brain into a French brain, implants itself there like an inflamed tuber, and produces the devastation far more considerable than among the Israelite himself, absolutely like the tuberculosis, which the Anglo-Saxon tolerates through accommodation, is for the native of Oceania a cause of rapid destruction 7.

One of them, impressed by the mockery of his polygamous banker friend, will imagine that fidelity Marital infidelity is a fool's game, old-fashioned, a naive ignorance of life and its greatest pleasures. legitimate; soon he will prefer the lewd caresses of prostitutes and their tenderness to his wife's affections he will spend the best of his income, if he does not ruin himself for them.

$7 The phenomena of psychic contagion have been known for a long time. Goërres (Divine, natural and mystical diabolical, trans. by Charles de Saint-Foy, volume V, p. 287).

"If in any society there is someone in whom evil has reached a certain degree, and has concentrated in such a way as to form a special focus of infection, this man thereby becomes a supporter of the demon, capable of producing in others what it experiences in itself and of communicating its contagion to all those who, although separated from him by greater or lesser distances, are nevertheless bound to him by ties of a deep and personal sympathy.

Jews possess precisely this power of accumulation, emission, and propagation.

The other, amazed by the sudden enrichment of the Jews he knew who were pulling the devil by the tail, will launch itself, like them, in pursuit of the million on the wings of stock market speculation. But, Inexperienced and unskilled, he will lose, and, to make up for his losses, he will devour his wife's dowry until... last penny. He will pawn his jewelry, his clothes, even his wedding ring to try and fortune one last time...

Am I making this up? Am I embellishing? That the women who were thus ruined by their husbands and Those left destitute question their memories! It is very rare that they will not find, at the origin of their misfortunes, a Jewish influence whose danger they did not suspect in time. It is from the It was at the moment this influence took hold that their husband became extravagant, a liar, and a deceiver. with a sly trickster's touch to steal their signature, with a marauder's shamelessness to make a quick buck based on their rings and lace and then selling them off at the junk dealer's.

In turn, the husband of a beautiful young woman would do well to be wary of the Jewish matchmaker. She is a monster of wickedness and skill. She has every audacity and every pretext for to introduce oneself, if necessary through a charitable organization, all the enveloping addresses for a Infamous negotiation, every trick in the book to set up the ambush for rape. If there existed in France a a special tribunal with full powers, having at its command a police force trained to search meticulously the crimes of these creatures, most often hidden in thick shadows, it is believed that we would not recognize the need to do with them what the Middle Ages did with them, not because it was blind and fanatical, as the Jews claim, but because he was, on the contrary, clairvoyant and that he abhorred immorality and crime?

XLIX

The French Clergy and Anti-Semitism.

Never has Christianity gone through such a difficult phase, never have more formidable problems are imposed on the Catholic Church, the true representative of the Christian Idea, and especially on the clergy

French Catholic.

I say: to the French Catholic clergy; for if this clergy is a member of the Church, then it is a member of the unity

As a Frenchman, he has a mission to fulfill, without which he would remain below his religious mission.

I will explain myself, asking forgiveness for the boldness of my advice and hoping that a a more authoritative voice than mine gives him more precise and firmer ones.

Unity and complexity of the social organism.

In a social organism, four main things need to be considered:
Religion,
Politics,
Intellectual, philosophical and scientific culture,

e The economic system.

The stronger each of these elements is individually and in close and continuous communication with the others, the stronger, more moral, intelligent, prosperous, and impervious to dissolving actions the society is 8.
When these elements become dissociated, there is immediately a tendency towards disorder, or, what is worse than the disorder, weakening.

Politics without religion is as weak as religion without politics. It serves no purpose, from the point of view socially, it's about contemplating the heavens without acting on earth. Similarly, action without a religious ideal is lacking. almost always of a grand purpose; his works, in general, are then incoherent, illogical, ephemeral.

This union of heaven and earth is admirably expressed in the Lord's Prayer: Fat voluntas tua sicut in heaven and earth. God reigns in heaven; Christianity makes man the servant and interpreter of divine will, and the earth thus reflects the heavens.

Here is a very simple demonstrative example of the disastrous consequences of any separation between the Politics and religion:

Is it believed that if the Catholic clergy had been in possession of political influence and exercised, by a through assiduous practice in directing the movements of public opinion, France would have offered, in the presence of The massacres in Armenia, the spectacle of its scandalous inaction? If there had been, in the Chamber of Deputies, ten or twelve highly talented priests, versed in diplomatic matters and knowing how to handle them with the firmness of mind and breadth of vision of statesmen, the shameful lethargy into which France has fallen evidence would have promptly given way to resolutions worthy of her, her past, and her honor.

As for the politicians who were passionate about the Armenian question, there was a lack of most Eloquent among them is this vital force that nothing can replace: the religious idea. If Mr. Jaurès had spoken to the once in the name of religion, to which, better enlightened, he would one day return, and of politics, he would not have Had he only delivered a magnificent speech, he would have silenced opportunistic hypocrisy and led all of France. How did a man, so richly gifted, throw himself headlong into the career 38 See Pathology of Islam, by D. Kimon, pp. 119 and 120.

sterile irreligious socialism, what the Germans call, with picturesque brutality, the Socialism of the belly?

If the social organism weakens when politics and religion separate, the danger is no less. When science and religion drift apart, science, in turn, despises religion.
backward, trapped in narrowly unchanging conceptions, averse to intellectual progress human and a friend of ignorance, and religion, on the other hand, regarding science, which is progressing, either with disdain, or with poorly concealed apprehensions.

In the 18th century, this separation was profound. On one side, the theologians, the Bergiers and others;
The other was the d'Alemberts, the Laplaces, the Lavoisiers; in other words, stagnation, perhaps laborious, but certainly barren, or at least not very creative, in the face of movement, bold effort, of grandiose results that bring science to the forefront, which is admired, and relegate to the background religion is falling asleep.

Is it believed that, if at that time the French clergy had associated themselves with scientific developments and if, at the same time
In time, he would have been able to judge the society of the era and, over time, become its organizer, or at least the
as the regulator of the metamorphosis that was being prepared there, the revolutionary crisis would have erupted with this violence Appalling and terrifying? If secret societies, with their incandescent ideas and their words Fanatical orders then acquired such power over people's minds because the clergy had lost the ascendancy, the intellectual direction, which was becoming increasingly static, while the world moved on

Not dizzying.

Is it also believed that if, during this century, the clergy had largely and energetically understood its mission, if he had known how to take advantage, with great vision, of the law of March 15, 1850, by means of which he
If he had flattered himself by demolishing the University, would Catholic France be what it is? As long as the theologian
He was becoming an educator; he had to make room for the scholar, in the broadest and most complete sense of the word, and for the formative, of character. Taking charge of the education of youth meant making a commitment to to form a highly educated, very strong, capable generation, in all branches of activity and of Human thought, to place France in the forefront. To take charge of this in order to train very young people pious, very gentle, in whom religion would take on the aspect of a sentimental reverie or idleness To embrace Buddhism was to play into the hands of the Protestants and Jews and hand France over to them. The direction of the world never belongs to that which loses energy, even while preserving the number.

I am even surprised that unanimous protests have not arisen within the clergy.
against this insidious degeneration which specializes the Christian idea — the highest, the most sublime, the proudest of ideas, — in the sweetness of devotion and the languor of passive resignation.

It was through specialization in this way that paganism slowly died out; it was nothing, it didn't matter.
more in general activity, and he still had beautiful ceremonies that gave him illusions on the eve of to die. More far-sighted, more politically astute, the Catholic clergy would understand that sectarians are organizing

In the same way, with the same method, the social depression of Catholicism. Among them are... deep-seated enemies who pursue this goal while cleverly disguising their progress and arranging so that the clergy, of its own accord, seems to be embarking on this fatal path.

L

New duties of the clergy.
The remedies for this situation are easier to suggest than to implement.

Politics in France has become de-Christianized; it is up to the clergy to restore to it the great driving force that has ceased to exist. to act. However, he can only do so by entering into active politics, and by entering it with the whole of faculties, ideas, and knowledge indispensable to a politician. He will be all the stronger for it.
He will behave less like a priest than like a politician, capable of embracing the entire system of interests nationals.

Religion, I can predict, will lose nothing. Only the services that the priest will render it will be of a

of a different order and of greater utility. It is far more difficult to study the dissolving politics of the Protestant states in relation to Catholic nations, their genius for intrigue, espionage, and influence secret, from which the Papacy itself did not escape 39, than to learn by heart the History of Bossuet's Variations. Protestantism and Judaism are first and foremost political organizations.
economic issues, and it is in the realm of politics, far more than religious controversy, that they must be addressed.

fight 40.

And why should the clergy allow themselves to be intimidated by those who want to imprison them in churches, the
to put, so to speak, on a leash before the altar, allowing him to leave only to administer the dying?

Do rabbis refrain from engaging in politics? And what about pastors? I don't think so.
No one will be able to contradict me if I say that, when two Calvinist pastors meet, after the

After the initial pleasantries were exchanged, the conversation turned to politics and never left them. 41.

°? See Macaulay.

* In one of those excellent articles that he unfortunately ceased to write, Mr. Georges Thiébaud exclaimed with Much to the point: "That under the fallacious and noisy pretext of protecting us from the government of priests, she (the Republic) knowingly does not deliver us, through a kind of confessional complicity, to government of pastors." (Eclair, November 24, 1896).

| In the current regime's economy, Protestant pastors seem to have a special mission: monitoring of the Catholic clergy. The Jews could not have found better allies on that side, and the pastors

They carry out their task with exemplary zeal and diligence. They are meticulously informed about the The priests of each diocese know everything that is happening there, read all the pastoral letters, and are aware of all the... meetings of priests and all the bishops' travels. They are the ones who suggest the men to be nominated. for the episcopate.

Naturally, their candidates, whom the Government approves, are educated, respectable men, as well esteemed by Catholics and Protestants, but not, of course, possessing the anti-Protestant temperament, nor the anti-Semitic temperament, and not representing the militant Church.

Undoubtedly, the difficulties of this evolution are immense. But it is by acting that we learn to act. The founders of Christianity were certainly very active, very bold men. Why? Wouldn't its current representatives possess the same virtues, the same fearlessness? What's the point of celebrating?

The heroism of the martyrs, in the era of persecutions, to retreat before the Judeo-Protestant cunning?

On the other hand, for religion to regain its rightful place, the French clergy must reassert itself at the head of the human mind. This is an effort whose difficulty it generally doesn't suspect. And yet, it must to accomplish: or the Catholic clergy will assimilate the progress of genius and thought in all the spheres, it will appropriate philosophical and scientific universality, or it will languish in inferiority perpetual, like the one in which the Greek Orthodox clergy gradually and perhaps irreparably mummified 42. His best students, once they have left his hands, will go and ask the Protestant or the Jew for high knowledge that he will be powerless to give them.

I cannot, due to space constraints, go into the details this subject entails. One last thing Observation: One of the clergy's major errors is their failure to conceive of, alongside culture religious culture, something other than literary culture. However, due to the transformation that has taken place in the In economic life, scientific culture now occupies the foremost place. There's no point in protesting against it. an obvious fact. Moreover, the constitution of material interests is such today that: Anyone dominates a country economically, it dominates morally.

The Catholic clergy would be committing an unforgivable error if they lost sight of the fact that Christianity, so that it does not dominate, and as soon as it ceases to dominate, it ipso facto becomes a religion of combat and of conquest. If he does not know how to embark on this path and if, deserting the struggle, he takes refuge in isolation contemplative, relying on the attractive charm of devotions to draw crowds back to him and repel the enemy that surrounds him, he is gravely mistaken. The ruin of the Catholic religion, under these conditions, would be certain; Protestantism is there, ready to seize the inheritance which, in anticipation, it has already appropriated considerable portions.

The clergy must therefore not remain a passive spectator in the anti-Semitic struggle. It must, from this moment on, look beyond and prepare for a new role. It is essential that once Jewish tyranny is overthrown, the France imagines that this tyranny leaves a void and that at least, however detestable it was, it constituted a force, had its own plans, ran the Government as best it could, knew everything shaving the country to the quick, organizing its finances and administering it.

To restore France to its former glory as a great Christian nation, to liberate it from Semitism and to free it from influences Foreign influences that are dissolving it are the problem of the time. The support and energy of the clergy in will facilitate the solution, stabilize the crisis, and protect it from any regressive movement.

As for priests who possess this temperament, accompanied by vigorous faculties, their fate is already sealed; they are relegated to some remote country where they waste their strength in vain. They are fortunate if no intrigues are involved.
not tied around them to lose them to the bishop, thanks to these indirect influences that the Sectarians know how to operate even within episcopal palaces.

The Greek Orthodox Church can only regenerate itself through its reunion with Catholicism.

THE ANTI-JEWISH WAR Jde

It will be accomplished as it must be accomplished, and Semitism, defeated for centuries to come, will no longer reign.

on France, which he has dishonored and martyred.

ISRAELITE POLITICIANS

FIRST IMFRESSIONS

He who, not knowing the Jews,
would find, for the first time, in contact with an Israeli politician, perhaps First, he was fascinated. He would admire a brilliance, an appealing vivacity, even a certain air Inspired. Ideas, freed from constraints.
doubt, swift as arrows, spark-

they appeared to him like small meteors.
they would spring from a superior intelligence.
Unintentionally, he would compare opinions complicated, the scholarly conceptions of the es-

= - me 2 us One l- ei CU one "En PRE

Li = IF zm z : m : ja OE, =.
PONS NE ef PEtel PA PROS fa k: EA T e Fa a == = mil aga Sreru te re,' a =- I € Eal a RS ren Le Hra Fin m ee eu rs Ji LCR T de — + à Use E b

rer ip

"Fr to ER hwl
ES ri iE,
ien pm ai = s =

| = Ta in Er ii 1 |
= == Li a" E 7 P

Te pl Big "et a p E

E 8 #

of Eee AE In 5 MF
m = K ! "k ia ij dae i aa E ant ee in A

EL UN

EE a =:
k É ea = ji ganL- mE e E a aa a © l ra

S ISRAELITE POLICY
took Aryan, with that marvelous agility and this dazzling audacity, and perhaps gives-would he have a preference for the Israelite spirit; could-would he consider him as destined to take the direction of Humanity and to hold henceforth but the reins of government.
However, if this observer possessed what-
With such sagacity, he would soon be struck by a host of strange things. Gestures, the inflamed eye, the shrill bursts and the venomous rolls of the voice would warn him to be wary of one's first impression. Well-Early on, while listening, he would notice, with surprise, that the Israelite brain lives on all kinds of ideas formed, arriving suddenly, impulsively,
as if brought by an invisible telegraph.
From then on, perhaps, he would suspect that in every Jewish politician has a beginning The mind of a madman. But, no doubt, for a long time time would pass before he could probe and recognize them that, in his case, madness obeys pre- laws sharp, always pursuing a goal, always at

ISRAELITE POLITICIANS 9

its base of ardent and perspi- desires CACES.

One particularity, of which there is no less importance, would capture his attention. Israeli politicians-the beds seemed connected to each other by remote communications. At the same time,
They have the same idea, the same word on their lips;
the same suggestion, the same jolt, the makes them act and speak; one could not do them better compare only to dependent nerve centers

the ballot boxes of others, through which a commotion would propagate instantaneously of a reflex action. They do not need to neither see nor confer with each other to know what that they must say; a mysterious voice to them
He dictates his orders and they obey him punctually.
element.

If the observer, continuing his study, exa-examined more closely the eccentricities of the poli-Israelite clerics, if he were to try to discover the differences between intelligence and reason normal, as conceived by the Aryan genius,

|
|
t
]
i

Er RE CC D | "A Dam PR - PO UT
TITLE Qi. - The well Let = ria =tr m ai ET
j L he ima pi
a J Le = N

i = m

Er i ù me ii

= ER LT
=æ-

E Eem
F m=

E æt n. >: F 3 =zr -ei
LD) Ts = A. g “ fe Nsg Ha Vu a. F` me | TE = =
T: z ia E z $ ma
= =m ne Cm mn © mme - à mn ne ge, à Er
"E. TI = ri Er iia hF h -m mga and their state of mind, he would pick up these excesses tricities, these differences, so to speak, to the Pellée. Not only the ideas of the Jews in Policies exclude any moderation; but provided that we do not let ourselves be imposed by their brilliant impetuosity, we observe that they are always agitated, unbalanced and more or less uncoordinated. They keep going over the same ground.

generally the same background, the poverty of the head betrays itself through the fluidity of language, and of appalling shortcomings are evident there. The organization
The intellectual development of the Jews seems not to include a profound view of the past and the future; they are not given to embrace the facts in their distant causes and their gradual march, nor to follow them in their future development; they do not have the ability to look back and forward, so well expressed by the double face of the god Janus, which symbolized genius among the Romans politics; their horizon is limited to current events pure; they grasp it in an intense way,

They exaggerate it and their loquacity embellishes it.
as far as the eye can see.

Their language goes hand in hand. Common sense nv is not necessarily represented, but the madness always appears there in a proportion more or less intense; admiring hyperboles, vehement curses, imprecations, futhreatening prophecies, reasoning falsehoods, brazen contradictions, absurdities pables, it is very rare for an Israelite to be able to to speak politically without one's words being foolish more or less impregnated and sometimes saturated of all these things. Often the verbiage of Israeli politician produces on his listeners the effect of a foul-smelling vapor that one cannot breathe without getting a tired and troubled head-wheat.

Other facts do not belong to observation.
current velocity and can only be studied on elite Jews. Some of them, at-contributing a superior political capacity,

readily assume extraordinary airs,

= =. eina N aaaa
i

1E OSEO ë e RU ë e CON)

You'd think they ruled the world and that Both hemispheres obey them. Satan of the Christian religion, seated on his throne of pride, is no more magnificent, his gaze
does not soar majestically over the universe.
This gait is valuable to observe; for it reveals, through a phenomenon of concentration individual, the ambitions of the whole of Judaism and the transcendent idea he has of his des-destiny.

As for lying, how do politicians Would the Israelites abstain from it? Everyone has His small background: he was a close friend of Gambetta, or perhaps he inspired Bis-'s policy Mark; or else he recounts his interviews with characters he's never seen. He is so delightful to deceive, to make someone swallow a story Vain with meticulously crafted details! We have the double pleasure of giving ourselves an impression of lift and to play spiritually with the world.

Some features are also not lacking picturesque. This number is repeated Enraged by certain words, The Jewish press German, for example, made a terrible use of the word "Chauvinism". Alienists they might link this habit to what they they call it the madness of words, that is to say to this a morbid need to continually utter a or several specific words, which torment a category of mentally ill people.

H CE,

Finally, if the observer, probing the Israeli limeLite, wondered what instincts drive the Jews, when they engage in politics, are under an illusion. Could it be possible? Hatred and vengeance, orextravagant pride, charlatanism, pre-ocenpation to deceive and mislead: such are the instincts, the passions he would see on stage and behind the scenes; he would see them acting with a incredible vigor and the power of a long centuries-long accumulation.

=

TA aa

EF mE E a

a nn E

11

THE ISRAELITE SOCIETY WITHIN ARYAN SOCIETY

To explain the Israelite world and discover- To understand the laws that govern its expansion, it is essential to penetrate the structure of his intelliaison. He has a very active, very lively one, and very different from Aryan intelligence. In the Semitic brain, the multiple planes, the vast horizons, the grand moral framework of The Aryan spirit is replaced by a demon full of fire and malice, alert in its movements subtle in his deceptions, skillful and Bold to the point of being prodigious. What suddenness! to invent a lie! What a clever trick to ne p E a

QU nt er me are

EE am Me em I e

w '5
o
f pad

i
| 4
he
i |

= e Re mp -=-= =

— = = eee © E

To set a trap! What a clever trick! to satisfy his insolence! And what art to to disguise oneself, to hide one's claws under a charming sweetness, beneath the seductions more delicate forms of flattery and tenDress up!

A noteworthy point! In this intelligence-Semitic license, everything is organized with perperfection, everything has received pre-education completed. If there are, among the Israelites, natures more or less rich, in all we notices the same gears, and these gears operate with the precision of instinct. (Anyone who has studied Semitic frauds has been struck by the instinctive, almost fatal character, which reigns there. The Jewish merchant who goes bankrupt, or wrests a composition agreement from its creditors friendly, it takes no less care than a bird to build its nest; the evolution of women The duleuse follows its course according to fixed laws; It consists of a thousand details, a thousand stratlagemes which, adapted to the circumstances, find themselves, in the most diverse cases, with a surprising loyalty. She has words, accents, characteristic scenes; who has them once seen, all seen.

The demon also has its own moral system; if the Greed consumes him, pride does not torment him.
No less. Confused by his own superiority, he looks with disdain the Aryan world and told himself that he
He is, or will be, the master. Shouldn't everything be his?
How could he give in, given his systematic abilities?
read, its faculties that nature has trained and prepared for conquest, do not submit him trait-1] not to his empire? Doesn't he have treasures Out of energy and abysses of cunning? Doesn't-1] not so much to avenge the defeats of his past and to to justify the oracle of his universal domination, oracle that survived the destruction of Jerusalem and to the destruction of the Temple?

With these ideas and passions, politics Israelite can only pursue one goal: the domination of Israelite society over society Aryan, and this goal she pursues with fervor

1
|

and the activity of war. For Israel is not only one society; Israel is first and foremost a society an army: and this army, a masterpiece of gold-oe- , has its hierarchy, its leaders, its soldata, his emissaries, his spies; the orders they are transmitted with electrical speed. or rather, each one, through an inner revelation knows what he has to do, as for the methods of
For combat and attack, one only needs to read the Bible.
To know them: a profound perfidy anime; Israel excels in attacks by behind (1).

Periodically, after having, slowly and In silence, having amassed its strength, the Israeli army stirs and launches itself onto the world stage. She breaks everything in her path and marches on with success in success, from triumph to triumph.

What a wealth of strategic resources! What supernatural agility to harvest the fruits of a deception before the light do (1)! What genius in the handling of the Ad (2)! What a multiplication of time by the speed of the action (5)! What preparation-scholarly tion of invasion by corruption and espionage (4)! And what a capacity for destruction! tion! What a wealth of plunder! Like gold and money trickled into his hands victo-laughing! Finally, what admiration and what Terror reigns around her! The kings of the The earth trembles; Israel deals with them as equals. equal; and woe to those who would not send their ambassadors at the funeral of his princes and at his daughters' weddings!

(1) Book of Joshua, ch. VIII.

(1) The manna, which must be harvested and eaten before Sunrise. If we wait for daybreak, the bounty. It stinks and worms get involved, that is to say, the whole thing smells bad and we can no longer fool anyone, (Erode, ch. XVI.)

(2) The trumpets of Jericho. (Book of Joshua, Ch. vi.)

(3) Joshua stopping the sun, (Book of Joshua) ch. x, V. 12 and 15.

(4) Book of Joshua, ch. IT.

It should therefore come as no surprise that politics Israelite acts on Arvenne society as a solvent, which she uses to blind the minds, to weaken historical consciousness, to destroy faith in the past, to spread On all sides, thoughtlessness and unreason. If the Aryan society is going through one of those sad times. phases in which a nation, seized by dizziness, is seduced by ghosts, dazzled by clouds of images logic, convinces itself that everything, in its long History has been nothing but error and lies, crowd At his feet, his glories, he appropriates and repeats them outrages from foreigners, falls asleep on the danthe forces that threaten it and the covetousness that They besiege, then Semitism will have free career to hasten decomposition, and He will not fail in his task. He will know how to enveLopper in his disorganizing attacks both the deep and distant foundations of the Arvenne society whose contemporary grandeur poraines. Religion, military heroism, memoiré of glorious enterprises, of the great struggles that saved national independence or European civilization, Greece as France, the poems of Homer as the Gospel, everything will be held in contempt; and the sophistry, irony, caricature, in prose, in verses, set to music, will extend their reach everywhere leprosy patches.

nm == E =

"SES i A aq

ei oo a- BJ i rs. i me da i E me E lz] bap =

a | lon = ouch AND mi -=

mipien ML

|
C tes = 0 CU pump a

D:
-am

mu

Em y ex

ee E gi

i: _
ne ns sl mn = iaia Le s Te poioma
n pma

CR a E Fa aa

T
ER pe BATTERIES

5 È mem m = ma
EE upp J

nE pii E ea pi "e pEi e PL

1st ma

laugh

ES ai a- CO ea S a E

III

PERNICIOUS INFLUENCE OF THE ISRAELITE SOCIETY ON ARYAN SOCIETY

Analyzing the causes that make contact of the Jewish society so dangerous for the Aryan society is not an easy subject to exhaust. The mere illusion of the second on the trends of the first, the chimerical idea that she absorbs it and makes him share her feelings the most expensive items, would already constitute a grave danger. And this illusion is all too real. widespread. How few people see Semitic society as it is, with its immutable principles and its prodigious cohesion- precious, nurturing deep in her heart the an- eternal tagonism that separates her from the world Aryan! Scattered, dispersed across various countries, This society has only gained more unity, more opinion niåtrete to distinguish itself from what surrounds it:

She lived all the more energetically within herself.
herself and for herself. If she seems to to integrate into Aryan society, to let oneself be drawn in in the same orbit, it is always more or less than a feint, a role adapted to his interests. She undoubtedly plays this role to her own ends.
watch; she seems, at times, to identify with Aryan society, but, at the first signal, it regained its independence, like a court-Herbal tea that never reveals its heart. Also, and even unintentionally, the Jewish society exerts a pernicious influence on Aryan society influence; good can only be done to those whom one loves and to whom one gives oneself; one can hardly only harm those whom you hate and despise.

An example, as simple as it is demonstrative, will highlight the dangers of this influence,

THE ISRAELITE POLITICIANS RO

Sily had a preoccupation in the Jewish world.
passion that works on all brains, it is that of quick fortune, of considerable profit obtained by a helping hand. But, at Is-Raëlite, the passion for gain has cunning at its command:
She doesn't go astray, she doesn't abandon anything.
chance; lucid, defiant, always on the lookout, quick to seize the opportunity, she marches to her but with a sure and agile step.

Through contact with Jewish society, the same

Passion spreads throughout Aryan society.

Everyone dreams of multiplying their fortune through “happy combinations. But something else is contracting the vices of a race is another matter.

is to assimilate his genius. The credulous Arven and ignorant, who wants to speculate, serves the Israelite of preferred victim; this one has precisely the infernal skill of exciting at Arven lap-They steal the gains only to rob him more easily.
the Arvenne company, which has become speculators, provides to Semitic speculation, its best prey; and Semitism finds in the contagion of its

os =m: mm CS pos E)

greedy tendencies an excellent way to fortune and conquest.

Moreover, misfortune befell the Arven society during-that, in the face of Semitic society, it loses given the abyss that separates them! The first one has the delicacy of a higher organism; the apti-
The capacity to degenerate is equal to the capacity to rise.
As soon as the upward forces cease to act,
She descends in a frightening way. The good it works miracles; but vice, if it is not not fought, it acquires an expansion of-destructive. It only subsists, in a way, if by the power of sublime conceptions, by the ceaseless contemplation of an austere ideal, through learned precautions to repress the evil and moderating souls on one type at a time virile and divine. If she relaxes her severity of these principles, if weakness penetrates them, if the moral ideas weaken there and the cult impure with wealth and pleasure replaces it that of virtue, the feeling of truth

obscures and that the art of lying corrupts it — = pP e = =E, Ek” E rF” Dr ae o == = m - m : = a = hearts, if she no longer has anything to guide her high intelligences and strong characters, We can say for sure that it is decomposing. Charlatanism in the field of poli-league, the scam in that of business, I disorder in the family, public debt overwhelming, the invasion of foreigners, all the shames, all the scandals, all the wounds invade it and gnaw at it, and, beneath the blossoming-the sement of material well-being, under the illusions of poisoned ions, one can see them from all sides the symptoms of death.

IV

ANIMAL STABILITY OF THE ISRAELITE SOCIETY

The Israeli society has an influence on the Arvenne society the advantage of constituting an infinite organism-simpler. Enjoying stability perfect, comparable to that of an animal species male, she does not demand, like society Arvenne, the continuous intervention of an ac-higher tion, This is governed by IDEAS, while Israelite society is by very constant and very strong INSTINCTIONS organized. These Jewish instincts provide the law complete, uniform, and inva-viable throughout the ages, they govern the individual like the whole of society. Also, training Is there a transmission effect from Phomme?

hereditary and not the result of specific work special and difficult. The only nature, in the so-Israelite society, does what, in the Aryan world, can only be obtained through wonders of method.

Therefore, society's mistake is senseless.
Aryan when it takes over Israelite society as a model. She doesn't care about ideas.
sublime and of ideal virtues; she does not comprehend them-
He doesn't accept or he despises them. These ideas and these Virtues, on the contrary, are the foundation of society Aryan. Israelite society easily tolerates-a dose of corruption. Introduced into Aryan society, this dose is sufficient for the break down. Some freedoms do not present no drawback for Jewish society who isn't even tempted to use them, these memes freedoms (for example those that allow the mass alcoholic poisoning of the population) are fatal to Arven society.

ISRAELITE POLITICIANS 1

Finally, in Israelite society, man... develops of itself into a well-centralized whole-read, which is directed, without any deviation, by a burning aeoism in his desires and cold in His calculations, from childhood, he knew how to make conversions to direct all his actions towards his own interest, which is sacred thing, which represents the absolute for him and the divine. The Israelite, a simplified man, of a quasi-elementary structure, therefore No scholarly education is needed. It is quite differently in Aryan society; there, Education is, par excellence, the problem.
to solve; every man must bear within itself the grandiose foundations of Ja Arven civilization, whose intelligence and his soul forever receives the imprint of thoughts of immense grandeur and of incorruptible purity. I] it is not a matter of doing it regress by instilling in him the cult of the ar-the sense and the mechanisms of deception; 1 it is to imprint on his whole being a movement towards the celestial ideal.

And man, formed on this superhuman scale-Maine, must not be weakened, crushed by the excessive suction weight; it is still necessary that he possesses within himself all the elements of strength and individual management. The company of which he part must be large, suitable for achievement his mission; to achieve this goal, he must constitutes itself a robust and complete being, Wise and thoughtful, upright and courageous. He is therefore It is true to say that there is no such thing in society Arvenne, with a problem comparable to that of education. What a dreadful aberration during-that, instead of being guided by its own principles cipes, she wants to imitate Semitic society, lets nature take its course and convinces himself that he has ache completed his work by furnishing man with a a certain amount of material knowledge and what-false talents, instead of forging his character to silence and inspire in him a horror of evil!

In politics, the limitation of Semitism is perhaps even more fruitful in consequences disastrous.

Israelite society, strictly speaking, has No politics. Driven by instincts.
that she has no need to meditate or put In theory. Sure, it's about never getting rid of it.
to dismiss, she can never enter the con-Arvennes political conception. Nomadic society, of Parasitism and exploitation. How to-would she include an Arven nation and “To live off one’s history”? That’s why the poli-

The tic of an Israeli politician consists of emprunts, superficial overexcitements, ideas
day to day; she is frivolous and boisterous, Mobile and grimacing; she exudes nervousness, Talkativeness, gossip, insults. Society Arvenne, which is inspired by it, is being worked on.
by a harmful agent; she soon has the brain Disturbed, she no longer recognizes herself, no longer knows herself.
science of its own laws; its movements disrupt the fundamental ideas of power

-J

w ĀE

T RS O r RE 5 er

EE S a ESM a ME aeaaaa

ISRAELITE POLICY

kar
==

and government are deteriorating; enthusiasmsblind siasms, sudden explosions replace cold foresight; the poli- arena tick becomes a noisy theater scene and convulsive, where masks clash to the clicking of sonorous words and formulas resounding; statesmen disappear-
It is felt, and it must be: what relationship can it have?
to have between the genius of the Aryan statesman

And the audacity of the Jewish journalist? Where reigns
This one, the other cannot exist.

y

INTELLECTUAL CONFORMATION AND INSTINCTS JEWS

The exclusion of Jews from politics is all the more harmful because of their shape intellectual appeal irresistibly draws them to Something else. Nature, said Aristotle, does not Nothing is more perfect than what she creates in view for a special purpose (1). The Jew received from the nature this high distinction; it made him a

---

(1) Nature gives each being its destiny particular; thus each piece of his great work is all the more perfect because she has a more exclusive, (Politics, 1. I, ch. 1.)

ET EE rr bla EE e, re jee ip E e pL o Tie ai et ea

DR mg aa

= s EE

consummate trafficker; she gave him the substitute-intelligence, flair, cunning, flexibility, activity, the quickness to pounce on its prey, cruelty to devour it, finally, all the qualities requests to live at the expense of other men my. His head is constantly fermenting like a laboratory of lies and deception;

his innuendo tongue knows how to speak a language persuasive, and, by a treacherous melody, to make to vibrate the inclination of the heart that he surprised; the tenderness and affection flow to him, if necessary, lips, and never did ancient Siren have better Fadmira lured her victims with her charm.
tion and the intoxications of flattery.

Whether it's about seducing or corrupting…
to break, to dazzle or to lull to sleep, all the arts
The snake is familiar to him. A man…
weakens-11? At that moment the Jew appears, too although, in the plains of America South, the vulture, invisible in the sky, rushes down suddenly on the injured horse that is abandoned and which will expire. A son of a wasted family-

Does he have his inheritance? The Israelite usurer, the mar-Israelite goods merchant, the Israelite jeweler, rush to hasten his downfall. As one will throw it in the banknotes, in the hypo-Libraries, in the bargain sales! What Emulation will drive them, and as they will know act in concert, while appearing not to get to know each other! Should we launch a A fraudulent society? The Jew will be its organizer. sateur, if he is not the initiator; he will elaborate the prospectus, he will establish the statutes, he will choose the administrators, 1] will lead to the slaughterhouse the flock of shareholders, he will invent and execute-
He will cut everything, he will speak and act more than anything else.
world, and, despite that, 1l will know how to reject the responsibilities towards others while retaining the huge profits for himself. A government Is this crazy guy issuing a loan? These are ruins who are preparing and a great Israelite fortune which rises. Should we sink a ship in open sea to collect a large compensation insurance on goods that have not

This

They weren't taken on board? The Jew will organize this fraud, he will obtain from customs employees Brazilian or Mexican men's certificates dreams of embarkation, and everything will be so good combined, the disaster will occur in conditions so natural, that the Company will pay the amount of the compensation, including alleged gold ingots that remained at the bottom of The Ocean.

And in all trafficking, in all affairs
In terms of money, the Jew brings perfections of virtuoso. He has the discernment of the place where he
You have to get settled in and from the moment you need to act:
he knows how to give to his establishment as well as to the display of its merchandise, the brilliance and the color

their necessities, he knows the language that is needed
He knows how to hold on and how much noise to make.
baiting credulous passions and laying the groundwork to expensive whims. He knows how to put in He knows how to attack the intermediaries.
his competitors through skillful disdain and

He knows how to inspire confidence despite slanderous rumors.

and to bring it back to life after losing it, 1l knows to draw the powerful into his speculations,
He knows how to pay the price for his audacity when he is unmasked.
and, through intrigue, obtain silence and

He knows about impunity... what doesn't he know? But Above all, his will is constantly at work, elastic to the highest degree, shrinking from nothing effort, lending itself to all combinations, and also capable of successfully bringing to a close a fraud in ten years than to conceive it and to | execute with lightning speed. His am-tireless bition is that of a son of hell for which nothing is conquered as long as he there is still something to conquer.

an Te Beror
THE N°

arr

LU a il M

i paan =

THE

Sp PS PAM Fe |

l uk p | -
"1 = | CT yp = gm } LI kir
| Meg line Re Jda PANES : > s
J ir = nu. to | m aa 0 pl DURS nr ES | k li N sd to F to | ji T Ur: '
=F i À -J Š à qui en ge IAETH
1 =H- ets 1 TE > nam n æl als hs —— mji mi p! At =4 soft. “ar. mms en md er Sa D NUE ire lb. D mp PEU Rs me in a Fer.
a, to not to d E æ Piep Er En +" Dis ft | Lo | [ass | a me as å „d 7 LE OT TL" H r caa a ~ En, mt i
ie pay Da JLFL! y >f EA: | a “re 7 -i = _ Ta. is CL -TE i ma a LA à 3 Pi i ial F
E ns pE x . JD, D AE "| ye ar DNS ur =} CL = eu p Cane a PR + rl
mes me ms = Saa r , Res | The: ji Ep al 2 eg LL. ie lee Fg zo
i = gd fold To them 1 We laugh Pa gg E se".

Nature, which doesn't like to stop at mojitie path, eliminated from the intelligence of lIsraelite everything that could have hindered its development specialized intelligence. This intelligence, properly-through sudden bursts of energy, through sudden ideas bites, always aiming for facts immediate, conceiving of them as if they had not neither eve nor tomorrow, repugnant even to any serious and severe understanding of the choits, form with the qualities of intelligence Politics presents a perfect contrast. In politics, it is no longer a question of mystifying a buyer or of

E}
+)

to spread panic; the leaps and bounds of mercantile cunning, which sees only success of the day and disregarding moral law, would lead a government destined for its inevitable downfall. On the contrary, in trafficking cases, those on-Where the Israelite excels is in strengths sovereigns. Who will ever recount the miracles? of fake news, the wonders of rise and fall, the wonders of the broadcast and those of the hoarding? The Chimother of Greek mythology had the body of a goat and the tail of a dragon; the spec-

Israelite culture, with its upheavals and its devastation, is that not its emblem? Transported into politics, this mobility, these unexpected acts of daring, these maneuvers in the false and by capricious zigzags, this passion results within the hour, as if it were to plunder and flee (1), this contempt for the con-

---

(1) High-speed looting is for Israel a sacred law: "Let us hurry up and gather," said the prophet Isaiah; let the plunder be hastened." (Ch. vrir,4.)

human sciences, can only produce Incalculable disasters. There, 1 liter of fan for everything at the moment the design of a vast complex, broad views, continuity, wisdom, the measure, foresight of the far-reaching consequences taines: we must respect the truth and be wary fleeting victories; confidence is needed slowly acquired and the consideration savam-justified. The intellectual forces of the policy and the special faculties with which-they amass a great Israelite fortune are thus placed opposite each other others; 11 there is a difference between them of same order as between a majestic building destined to last for centuries and the too dazzling-your splendors of a circus of acrobats.

Besides, 1 liter is enough to lack common sense perverted to perceive, in the language of the Israeli, for whom politics is hardly his domain. The eloquence of the Jewish politician, steeped in traffic, exhaling all the smells. In its warmest exuberance, it always seems to be promoting the article; his enthusiasms have the the fervor of a sale conducted at breakneck speed, and his enthusiasms, accents of slapping theatre; its aggressive outbursts, its invectives, often crude or bitter emphatic, they breathe the fury of rivalry commercial; his shameless boasts and his

The dispute over the field of this fair or the Bourse vestibule.

He exaggerates every incident of the day, making a major event; a new insignia-
"The Russian troops," he cried, "are taking over the territory."
with anxiety, they focus en masse on the borders of Galicia, the war between the Russia and Austria will exacerbate, France will be "Caught up in this conflagration!" Convulsive, Həgard, he is certain of what he is saying: it is the German ambassador himself or his first secretary who told him in the morning meme, A few days later, when his face will have resumed an expression of security splendid, beware of reminding him of his grim predictions; he would look at you with astonishment and would accuse you of lending him worries he'd never had before and words he never uttered,

Not only does the spirit of traffic imprint itself on the Israelite politics, its physiognomy. But, der-Behind the politics, the drug trade is still present and acting; or rather, he is never more active that when politics, broadening its scope operations allow him to penetrate as far as the

The heart of public life. So, master of government secrets, nothing more to say. Fearing a timid justice system, he can speculate. in complete freedom; the Promised Land is in With his hands, all that's left is to harvest.

And if some Jewish politician affects a integrity, more or less real, that one does not Don't be fooled, his fellow believers are speculating around him, and his state of cerebral dependence brale, compared to them, forces him to put his influence in the service of their interests. Who hasn't noted, for example, the wheelbases

m = me

= TENN MESE ë ee E nn mpeg je ali oi oea PT aa E RE i

Hi ISRAELITE POLICY

of Israelites, themselves making no comtrade, against customs tariffs, abhorred by Jewish cosmopolitanism, which pursues them with a eternal hatred?

This intimate mix of politics and trafficking found its embodiment in certain beings hybrids that have made the conch work in tandem political tion and bursal swindling, Well The nation where this awful guy was able to get away is degraded. to exist and where the insolent stockbroker was able to play at future undersecretary of state!

A curious thing! Despite his sea- instincts cantiles, the Israelite readily believes himself to be a An extraordinary aptitude for politics. Who He who desires his favor would do well to listen his sweeping dissertations on the events Daily updates: however, to displease him, it will suffice to avoid engaging in his conversations political actions or to politely leave them to fall.

The Jewish community shares the same idea ambitious, The magnificent Beast, with a golden diadem,

a ™
in |

ISRAELITE POLITICIANS

aspires to govern humankind, and, in her gigantic pride, she would prefer rolling to the bottom of the abyss rather than not realizing the oracle of his universal domination.

nn me Re es lan

Re u -

RTS CE pe

Fr + ii

+
=

==

,
i

has

2

=

I == pm =
LB

Ad
3 E to:

put
=. | . ay

=
im g
æ !

has

CA CE,
zi=..

i el

TEE . j f GLT m Ee my iert = ei yE
You E

4. a j eE”

not i]

Ee i gl ns m ia

Rae

a= ú=

me

I'm going to ST a little more Piaj er Baies |

Red ae er ser rar

= =

5 k = ae Lun, mn 3
"hi: to is
| -
E ET En rs ei H ipc

VII

CAUSE OF WEAKNESS OF ARYAN SOCIETY OPPOSITE THE ISRAELITE SOCIETY

At certain times, Aryan society... the Israelite's anger and dream of reconciliation with him; she convinces herself that she has been unfair and barbaric, that the true Israelite is quite different that the one she persecuted, whom she took The crimes of a few, for the vice of all.

or that by degrading the Israelite, she makes her criminal, which it is necessary, finally, in a common interestmun, put an end to his old hatred and se to rejuvenate herself by inviting Judaism delivered to enter its fold and to contribute to its renovation.

= mn © “SE, From em. mn to LL LE = MF m ==

|
Ri
fl
i

ISRAELITE POLICY

Warned by his historical experience, the Israelites-Lite has long held these trends and He follows its progress with ardent joy.
knows that, soon to become widespread, they will make the law, that his chains will be broken, and that he will will be allowed to invade the world stage, rich in energy accumulated over the centuries of oppression, amplified by the thirst for revenge.
session.

He knows that everything will turn out in his favor: he was despised, and he will be considered a superior being-laughing; they insulted him, and he will insult them; they will insult him
He was being pressured, burdened with taxes, and he will to deliver all of humanity to exploitation Devouring. Great and small will be humble.
before him; he will inhabit the castles of the aristocracy, and the diamonds of the most august of wreaths will adorn his wife or his mai-

braided.

He knows these splendors will not last:
An eternal Providence has marked his limits, and this Providence, vigilant in its

DE a EO ë aa E y MJ a = to CRE CORRE CORRE CON CE CE =

Immobility and formidable in its patience, will arrest him at the necessary time.

One must have never observed the Israelite to not having noticed any dark forebodings ments deep within his soul. "If you look-
"At their bold march," said Bossuet, speaking demons, and their proud and pre-magnificent, you will first see their strength and their power; if you look more closely Their gait, you will easily recognize their tricks and their detours; and finally, if you penetrate-Go all the way to the bottom, you'll see that with their superb mine and their formidable apparatus, they are already broken and undone, and that being still Trembling and frightened by their defeat, he is It's very easy to scare them away.

There is something similar in the Israelite's attitude. Outbursts of arrogance successively, without transition, silence and I humilitant; the grand, domineering airs do everything Suddenly, a strange unease takes hold;
that would be like neurotics from the Middle Ages who, at 2 z Te ment core a F

I EEE in

amidst the nocturnal pumps of the sabbath, ver- would be terrified by the appearance of day. head rising into the cloud seems to have Never stopped kissing the earth!

But the era belongs to him, the trumpet of deliverance and victory sound at his ears; the gloomy oracles that will come later to dismay him, do not make themselves heard dre; he has time to conquer the land and maybe- By hurrying, will he forever ward off the fate.

Aryan society, it must be said, is ingenious to assist him. She falls in love with the Israelite and He falls in love with her, in a way. He makes her the effect of a more intelligent, more com- Complete, more perfect than the others. His mind… Her charm and her voice intoxicate him; with time, she will listen more attentively to this voice, and, under the flattery- harmonious laughter, under tender caresses, she will hear the hateful whispers and the abject brutalities; she will analyze laughter and the smile. But this disenchantment does not produit qu', with extreme slowness; the illusion remains mistress for a long time, and the more the Israelite is The more Israelite the Aryan society loves him and He admires him.

{
|

She even sometimes feels the need to to prostrate herself before him. When she meets him in a concentrated state, sparkling with audacity and inSolitude, wielding insults with dexterity, like a fencing master wielding the sword, imprestigious purveyor of lies, well seductive, quite mystifying, achieving in one the famous type of magician of yesteryear, She takes him for a supernatural being, almost for a god.

Once on that slope, how does society Would Arvenne stop? The Israelite, to whom She gave her heart, enjoyed all her confiancée. He can use it and abuse it, he knows it; Thus, there is no sphere into which it does not penetrate. with the fervor of an invader. Government, diplomacy, army, administration, maHis style, everything seems to have been created for him.

= e Åe E ON PC © 2 Á =

|
j
|

|

Everywhere the top spots are reserved for him He used to be considered an international player. and his own tenacious Israelite patriotism and jealous, seemed to exclude everyone else. Now, he is considered a patriot in the second power, and nobody thinks-would ask him where he was born. Neither his extrablatant negligence, nor his accent hinder his career; and Aryan society believes itself to be of theIt is so much better run that it has more Israelites in his head, in possession of the secrets of his politick, speaking to the stranger on his behalf and him shaping intelligence in their own image.

NUDE

BITTER TRUTHS

To dispel a few grand illusions bitter truths is the best way to fight. Why does the Arvenne society res-Does she feel this admiration for the Israelite?
Why does she accept his intrusions?
with such ease?

The explanation is not difficult: an examination
Conscientiousness is enough.

She has fallen into some disastrous habits of inaction; enamored of fine language, she flees any sound reasoning, any strong idea, and = EE lem B mm ren au ;

me...,
-ymm

== =
=

Ba FE nee AER a an a Es al = i = EE 5 m "Em re to = + PTE = Li iml M = qe Zam; ia == =

pn aaaa LPS Bi Ts I k ai 1] T = E ; Eyepmeie e Oai =! nn e.

rym NE pm Ein i

= == s,

"E a

— =im =
mx gen © ms Ë

i ——“...—

- om
Lal prie E Se LE a SE. =

ES “Em ë i EE

She prefers attractive lies to them; she has He had forgotten his old experience, he no longer knows its own foundations and sees almost without pain falling piece by piece the glo- edifice laughing at his past. Instead of acting beyond its borders and to turn back foreigners, it lets it flood and imagines itself to be all the more envy that it is no longer invaded.

The warnings find her asleep and Nothing can rouse him from his drowsiness. weakened characters are averse to prolonged; the great virtues, the energetic labor- The austere, almost gic, study style seemed outdated to him. almost eccentric; she pursues successes easy and enjoyable aspects of well-being, while that artistic virtuosity reigns over the Hearts: simultaneously the plot and the verbiage seize the scientific and political regions tics; reputations are made through experiments vulgar advertising techniques; men

They no longer even have the strength or the pride to possess thoroughly seduce the knowledge of their car-

THE ISRAELITE POLITICIANS OF

behind; what's the point? The more their luggage is super-
The more licit they are, the better they will be understood and appreciated.

It's surprising that in the middle of this degeneration, the Israelite plays the role of a To be stronger and better led? Everywhere, in science, as in commerce, in the
In the arts, as in war, activity strips away the laziness. Semitic activity is all the more formidable, she knows how to adapt to vices and She will make prodigious use of it. She will hasten to provide the weakened Aryan society with administrators and officials. They will save-will at least do their jobs and will not flee the work. The plot will play a significant role in their multiplication, but the thing will be, until
To a certain extent, legitimate.

In vain, moreover, would the Arven society want to indulge in frivolity; in vain she would want to delude himself about his ignorance rather than false scholars, gorged with honors and money, they carefully hide it from him, and brave the shame of being the last to be initiated into the major works of the

|

Tia ISRAELITE POLICY

Universal science, the implacable truth does not will not allow itself to be corrupted indefinitely; and the day will come where those satisfied with national science will come from.
those who did not create it, but who exploited it-tent and compromise it, will have to count with foreign science. (it will be imported) tator? Naturally the Jewish doctor, for which will open up a wide career of success THESE.

There are plenty of examples. Do we believe that, if the French doctors, those to whom it was entrusted with higher professional education, had been attentive to the work of science
German and Austrian medical, such as doc-
The Israelite leader could have overwhelmed them with his railleries, ridiculing their ignorance in front of themmemes, and behind the scenes, mixing the false with the true, to attribute to them a thousand absurdities that they had not never said, to tyrannize them, in short, with the mischief of a friendly monster and pick up millions by flouting his colleagues?

The importance of the foreign Israelite scholar in the field of Oriental languages and the Greek history, astronomy, etc., is not no less accusatory for French science

French; and we can say that by obliging France
By resorting to foreign science, she has earned the right to do so.
Contempt. If France didn't need it, from this foreign science, she distinguished herself-said with pleasure, she has, with her own hands, attacked its scientific prestige and raised the German science on the shield, by constituting itself-killing while in a state of blatant inferiority.

Ah! It's not in Germany that pa-These aberrations could become entrenched until-than to become a system! Suppose a Laplace or a Burnouf applying for a professorship of a professor at the University of Berlin or of (xwttingen? All doors would be closed to him- if, by extraordinary, he was named, the corps of professors, supported by public opinion, get drunk would see him en masse; surrounded by hostility, he The place would soon have to be vacated, and the natural-

|
|
i

sation would not allow him to escape lostracism.

In matters of finance, ignorance and inca- French pacifications produced the same effects. The people who do not know how to treat their own financial affairs, which appeals to capital Israelite rates to fill the deficits of its budgets, which uses the intermediary of Israelite bankers to gather during a crisis, the funds from a loan, this people is manifestly lacking an essential organ tiel. Certainly the Romans, fighting against the Carthaginian Semitism, did not go far dear money in Carthage nor kneel before its capitalists. If the Eternal City was indebted to Carthage, she soon had vanished from the face of the earth. More knowledgeable and more experienced, more calculating, and less France, a spendthrift in this century, would not

Never fell under the yoke of the Jewish usurer:

IX

ARYANIC SOCIETY'S REACTION AGAINST THE SEMITIC SOCIETY

The repression of Semitism requires in the Arvenne society of superior forces, and these for-These only act effectively when-that they have reached an extreme stage of development.

1° He needs a high degree of foresight.

Semitic genius was constituted by the nature to deceive and surprise. Impreclairvoyance, thoughtlessness, inexperience, inattention, He guesses and uses all the shortcomings of the mind. He has an intuition for weaknesses.
of the heart and the senses. He knows the dizzy-

RS j L =s
- = =

FROM ISRAELITE POLICY

the risks of presumption and credulity, the abandonments of seduced vanity, the recklessness of self-esteem, the negligence of laziness, the insane confidences of love, the exa-Servings of sensitivity and delicacy, the naive hopes of dazzled greed
by the mirage of fortune. He knows that the vigithe most active launch and the most penetration sagacious people have their intermittencies, and that is enough to take advantage of it to make them lose the benefit the result of many years of work and effort.

The famous Hannibal possessed the rarest of them all.
to what degree this genius. The Greek historian Polybius, after to have made a masterful painting of these aptistudies of the great Semite, he adds:

"If we could know the weaknesses" of others, and that by attacking his enemies one took their leader by the place that lent itself the most to their surprise, in a short time they would be captivated the whole earth (1).

(1) General History of the Roman Republic,

(L: FIE CR EVIL:)

= ET ZE ES OS SE a E = — = Aa Fr = =

ISRAELITE POLITICIANS IN

This is indeed the principle of Semitism: to-cover the gaps in the armor and embed them
Between the hook and the dagger!

The problem that confronts clairvoyance Arvenne, facing Semitic cunning, can therefore to formulate it thus: to treat her as she treats ignorance and trust in Arvennes, to probe it in every direction, scrutinizing its most subtle impulses secrets, the most hidden secrets, the pre-the most invisible preparations, and seeing all these things with a subtlety and acuity of every moment.

As long as the Arven hasn't practiced reading in the Semitic brain, to hear what it happens there, he is not yet trained for this difficult task, Had he learned much, his Even if her clairvoyance was already profound, it is incomplete and ineffective if it does not see everything, right now.

Gradually, and as the Arven lightens uprera, the space, initially very vast, which occupied Semitic cunning will be curtailed. Methods

Eme aa F PEEL CRT OR TR INR CE NS CR. Ru 1 EEE TE =r TTE mother aa aaa | = E st ë ke oB mm = © a too similar, stereotypical lies, traps of a uniform mechanism will to leave the stage. No doubt a Semitic trick. will remain untamed for a long time; the first Defeats will further stimulate his inventive spirit. But Aryan intelligence, having begun to penetrate his opponent and gained confidence in his method, will continue his study with unwavering firmness. Every incident will enrich the treasure trove of his experience, each an unforeseen difficulty will awaken in her a prdivinatory dence, each stratagem of a diabolical perfection will provide him with the opportunity of a new victory.

The day will come, finally, when this deception Semitic, so fertile, so adept at evading through a thousand changes, so elusive at at the bottom of his labyrinth, will no longer seem to him a mystery, and the undecipherable enigma will be read corramment. Then the Aryan will compare his tertheir first experiences and his insightful judgments; he will see from what ignorance he has emerged and before

What artifices he trembled with. And his clairvoyance will be full of anger, for she will embrace worlds "trick and she will dive into abysses of perfidy.

2 It requires immense energy.

Through cunning, through the subtle science of informationtions, to the art of oblique maneuvers and of inextricable traps, Semitism combines a audacity and a capacity for action that hold of the phenomenon. It is necessary to oppose it with the same forces constituted to a transcendent degree. The Semitism has a knack for acting with speed extraordinary; we must learn to act with an even more extreme speed. He is infatigable; you have to be more than him. He knows how to strike with skillful violence; it is necessary to administer to himHe was talking about lightning strikes. He vomited. hatred and anger; it must be submerged in the torrents of burning anger,

HAS

HO ISRAELITE POLICY

Against such an enemy, Aryan energy will not It must allow itself neither truce nor rest. Defeat, Instead of giving up, he must redouble his efforts. and victory excited him even more. Marcelmore of the Second Punic War, the hero sublime of the great struggle of ancient Rome against the world-dominant Semitism should serve as a model for him; he needs the resiron spells, fearlessness, the genius of audacity the immortal Roman.

As Aryan energy gives itself this formidable education, she will notice surprisingly, the shortcomings of Semitic energy that, the softness which demands its rights, the appethe essence of well-being. The refinements of luxury, the sensual or vain pleasures of the polygamy (1), which is preparing to anger him. And

CI

(1) At Capua, as we see in Livy (Book XXIII, 18), most of the Carthaginian Semites The Ginois had burdened themselves with mistresses, plerique scortis impliciti.

In recent years, such a major banker

ISRAELITE POLITICIANS (34

then, growing from all that the Semiism, she will accelerate her work of repression, until the day she forces Semitism, defeated, had to abandon the field. and, like Hannibal, expelled from Italy, to remto boat, despair in his soul.

An old and decrepit Israelite flaunted his polygamy. in the public promenades of a spa town, with royal insolence, Germany understooddra.

|
i

e

Ee C oi OO nn

HAS

MORAL FORCES

3. Aryan civilization cannot resist to the Semitic invasion by reconstructing the moral ideas.

A very serious error, which has already been reported. of Aryan society in the face of Semitism, consists of wanting to limit and deviate more or at least moral ideas that serve as his base. She probably doesn't lose them, but these ideas become hesitant and vague; The concepts of good and evil are no longer separate. through an abyss and seem, up to a certain point, to reconcile; ill-gotten wealth

4.

H be EEr T e -i "F5 '=

ro RE SES DES eg

Pii ne. pi mel. Re M a

Fes

x 3 I i=
>= =m Oo oe me nn e OO i E ë S l E i E ne paaa | NE ml. mom

no longer causes horror or shame; corruption tion takes avenues; fraud sees the crowd to prostrate herself before the palaces she has built. To cheat and to enjoy oneself, there is no other ideal anymore. In such a society, Semitism is widespread.

to his right, On the one hand, his victorious skill is admired there; and, on the other hand, the characters softened, they offer no resistance to him.
(Some men may want to sub-to milk for general affluence. On some, the Semitism will exert its influence; on other islands, the slander; and many of them will also be exposed to falling back, weary of their efforts and of- courage, in the flow of pleasures and vulgar profits.
Rebuilding on unshakeable foundations Moral ideas are therefore a primary condition of the struggle. Semitism is the spirit of men- dream; the Arvenne society will be horrified by it will punish with implacable contempt any outrage to the truth. Semitism has a passion for fraud is how he lives and grows;

The Arvenne company will make probity its foundation.
the foundation of the moral edifice. Semitism only has disdain for great virtues, he does not comp-
It takes neither integrity nor selflessness any more than it does He needs corruptible souls and justice elastic; the Arvenne society will surround the great virtues of inviolable and obligatory respect will even make those who hate them give back tribute.

ER ne DE Ts 0 so

=
m =L o rE ki p ha ES
has

CET: „= HU jee “JL MS TRE Fan M Do D am os “A

XI

GREAT MEN

4. Aryan society needs large men to lead it.

Designed to achieve an ideal top, the Aryan society can do nothing without great Men. And this need throughout all eras. he becomes even more imperious in his fight against Semitism. So, he needs intelligences of marvelous clarity, stubborn wills, men, in short, which spread around them the strength and the light, reconnect the chain of tradition

Arvennes, broken

> by Semitism, and render

=
ža hr b pme RE e en =

= "i TE qii mil
=== == pmm RS EE a SM an D EE CLS en = Where Oo o

11 ISRAELITE POLITICS

to the Arven genius, weakened and shaken, the resolutetion and faith in himself.

But, to create great men, one must that the Arven genius draws from what he has of more intimate and deeper: because the great The Aryan man is the living expression of genius Aryan, he personifies him, he makes him explode grandeur and moral beauty, as well as the dazzling deceit of Semitism in embody the genius of imposture.

The difficulty for the Arvenne society, subjugated-guided by the Semitic:ie, to produce great men, is immense, and for a reason Jort simple: the Arvenne company doesn't know itself

Furthermore, she turns her back, unknowingly, on her its own genius, therefore, those who represent it in a powerful way, which are the energetic personification, cannot Plat- She shoots them. She flees from them, hates them, humiliates them. pleasure: she takes cruel delight in them ignore them or relegate them to the third or fourth plan. S1 she honored them, if she consented to be led by them, the Idol Semitic, who reigns over her, would be furious; because she, this Idol, distrusts everything that It is not her, or does not bear her mark.

The day comes, however, when Aryan society finds herself. She only resigns herself to it after having much has suffered; how often has this resounded "Cry: 'There are no men!' But..." All mistakes have their limits and their remedies. The Arven society, torn from Semitic prestige, finally pays homage to Aryan genius who vanquished his enemy; she proclaims the intellectual kingship of Oedipus, when, having delivered her from seductions and from the Sphinx's claws, he brings him the descum (1).

This delivery marks a new beginning for society A new era begins in Arvenne. She feels reborn. and sees glorious destinies opening up before her.

(1) The myth of Oedipus and the Sphinx represents the struggle of Arvennes science against Semitic science tick,

= a En a S Tn - -iii =
IG a ur i

EE Ti Te E = e ë e ëo NS EN EN M = = = c OC CN ur — e CE

curious. She remembers the phases of the terrible struggle, and its anxieties, and the shame that Paccablait; for every dominated Aryan society by Semitism and all Arven who delivered him His soul feels an intimate shame. The genius Aryan may well, for a given time, be let it be obscured by the smoke coming out of the Semitic hell; but, like the sun, it never goes out, and its light will carry the trouble to the very depths of the consciences of the most asleep.

B oe E o JO DOS SR

BOOK TWO

ISRAELITE JOURNALISTS

= RE - . a E LE, xa Le SP mu e Li a ea ter mms = D ES mE - D aa amm] 3 zy īa i = g, T = e TENES in ns 2 mE mi T ramme a aar $

ISRAELITE JOURNALISTS

ISRAELITE JOURNALISM

In every era, Semitism excels at... build appropriate war machines
to the circumstances and conditions of the fight; and these machines, designed to break and destroy, spread around him the submissive-Zion and terror,

The newspaper is leading the pack.
modern; and it is one of the best suited to Semitic aptitudes.

The Israelite's athinity for the newspaper na no one escaped. He grabbed and read the newspaper.

eo

S0 ISRAELITE POLICY

- E= = = em -= =
CORRE RE = = = + shift GR = = OR CN = m

OO E s oE Ñ o SR CONS E © ë NS CS E o Con Es a oo Hem E:

eagerly absorbs the news in his memory, is fascinated by the incidents the most trivial, bursts into anger at the faith of the most audacious conjectures, prophesies the Wars and revolutions, dislocate alliances these—precipitate nations against one another others, overturns the map of Europe... in one In short, in every Jewish politician there is a Journalist, not in the serious sense, but morbid and exaggerated use of the word.

This affinity, based on instinct, is very revealing. The Jew knows that in his hands the newspaper will become a power, that it will allow us to influence society, to shape it at his discretion and to bring it to a singular state, where, having no opinions or feelings but those he dictates to him, believing only what he wants that she believes, admiring what he wants her to believe admires, or despises what he wants her to misunderstanding, she will fall before him in the pas-
The spontaneity and automatism of a sleepwalker in front of his faith healer,

ISRAELITE JOURNALISTS If

= me a

Admirable is Nature, which, in endowing the Lily-Raëlite of this instinct, gave him all this that was needed to use it.

Indeed, all newspaper industries... seem familiar at first glance: 1l knows how to pick up the necessary capital, launching it, operating it, attract the reader, pique their curiosity, make prosper the advertisement, obtain protection influential men. To secure subsidies, to use the currents of opinion and throw food caters to his most unhealthy whims: he knows how to be corrupted and keep at the same time

Some time outside of independence; he knows alternately demolish and praise; we reDoubt, and we pay for it. Expensive friend, expensive enemy Inconvenient, that's his motto.

The very style of the Israelite adapts to marvel at the newspaper. Outraged disdain, saremphatic pronouncements, bitter insults, cries of triumph, superb pronouncements, revelations to grand orchestra, daring inventions, all his flaws, his personality rage, his verve

= = = e = Top =: Er
k 1 m E pes
F uF = = = =

srimacière, her insolence as a hysterical woman, give what he writes a devilish flavor. a clownish outburst, and, it must be said, a virtue Communicative and engaging. Ugliness doesn't It's not immediately obvious, and many men read with delight what perhaps One day they will appear unbearable and hideous.

The aspect that the Jewish newspaper gives to Politics is quite peculiar. Under the pen Jewish politics, having fallen into a chronic state nic of nervous erethism, seems not to governer than by blows of the whip impulsive. Uneven like a convulsive, the press Israelite only rests from a crisis to... preparing for another one. And what crises! What Unrest! What dark clouds on the horizon! would believe that the world is going to collapse or that a The volcano is about to erupt. The next day, it doesn't look like it. Furthermore, the radiant Jewish press proclaims that peace had never been more assured; and the fools, that these displays of terror had Impressed, they look with delight at

j.
=)
Ka È = LR
i
+
i
L

ISRAELITE JOURNALISTS

clouds dissipating and the storm that moves away.

The Jewish press thus plays a role in the world of human credulity, the role of a magician
An old woman who changes the weather at will, does to rumble the thunder when it pleases, or read order to be silent.

At certain times, in bygone days-tion or war, its uproar transforms in a tumultuous sabbath: it is then a eruption that overflows. The campaign of the German Jewish press against France, in 1870-71, offers a remarkable example.
What a hurricane of projectiles this press has unleashed!
Vomited on France! Who will recount his outrages?
and its calumnies? France would have been a pro-
If she had been so vile, she would not have been overwhelmed.
of more contempt.

Moreover, the psychology of the Israeli press-
The lite can be summed up in three words: hatred, men-dream and neurosis. His practices are those of Deception, and its arts, those of evil.

= È: irei =a = En - z az BT m sus; ne. = aie l.

My DJ; PS):

Li = nu EE “= z to sm
Mrs. O E EET

"rE en nt — NS RS a Sn = — —+ ETPEE mer EE Rs, oc ruins and disintegrates public reason; it destroys feelings of impartiality and justice ICT; it teaches how to process from top to bottom the most respectable men, if they are adversaries (1); she hunts intelligences

---

(1) The question of whether the famous war of Troy took place between Aryans, or between Aryans on one side and Semites on the other, could, strictly speaking, to be decided by this single consideration, qne Each people respected the dead of their enemy. If the Trojans had been Semites, they would have outraged and mutilated the Greek corpses, and the Greeks, in retaliation, would have ended up doing the same Trojan corpses.

Homer, moreover, seems to have been quite familiar with the Semitic perfidy, which had left in (Greece A primitive passage of very bad memories, a passage from the Odyssey, which recounts the fraud of a Semite Phoenician, is very instructive in this regard.

Here is the passage:

€ ... But around the eighth year, a man from Phoenicia, full of mendreams, and which had already caused much harm to men. And he persuaded me with his lies. to go to Phoinihie, where his home and his

aaaae FS p EE or EE SE i Ee pe cm thought and replaces it with bursts of vioslow and manic excitements; finally, In all things, she agitates, enrages, and inflames. disorder, disruption.

Moreover, it spreads a characteristic disease-- goods. And I stayed there for a whole year with him. And when the days and months had passed, and that, the year being completed, the seasons returnrent, he made me get on a ship, under the pretext to drive a load in Libya with Lul but to sell me and extract a great deal from me price. And I followed him, suspicious, but contrain. And the nave, propelled by the favorable breath of Borcas was approaching Krete when Zeus (Jupiter) pondered our ruin. And already we had left Arele, and nothing appeared but Ouranos and the sea. Then Aronion suspended a nute black on the hollow nave, and beneath this cloud all the The sea also turned black. And Zeus thundered, and he hurled lightning struck the net, which overturned, struck by the Zeus's thunderbolt, and it filled with smoke. And all The men were thrown from the ship, and they were carried away, like seabirds, by the waves, around the black ship, and a god refused them the return. » (Homer, Odyssey, Rhapsody XIV, trans. by Leconte de Lisie, p. 214, 215.)

C

AND.

zi ss mire as =j = me = = = L Ome o F Er - mm ma: ue — ae i = y = m
"r

'

SG ISRAELITE POLICY

Israel's teristic, suggestive dependence.
Subjected for a number of years to the action of the Jewish press, the men did not they no longer belong to themselves; all their ideas belong to them come from the Jewish Gazette: sympathies, anti-Pathias, admirations, illusions, she approached them watches at her leisure, and everything she throws in their brain is accepted with a promp-Foolish attitude and blind faith.

The men who fell into this state did not, in General, no awareness of the degradation of their reason. Do they find any charm in it?
One would think so, because 1! is also difficult to find them in to uproot rather than cure a morphine addict his passion.

a 5 + In wall at == SE sd R Eai ns D EE

7 Read
i

L

XIII

PRINCIPLES AND METHODS OF ISRAELITE JOURNALISM

The methods by which the press Israelite establishes its influence, demanding a Special analysis. We can reduce them to two main groups:

1° The quintessential principle of the press Israelite is to divide.

To incite hatred, to awaken resentment, to fan the flames of animosity, to spread the treacherous interpretations and insinuations poisoned, exaggerating the truth, corrupting it by falsehood, to exacerbate it with irony, and, by these articles, keep men in a state

e—a on meme © © Ces meme © CR ca e E ee aa ea a MO SES On acute distrust and hostility, fueled by the suspicion, separated by outrage, ready to throw themselves piled one on top of the other: such is his fundamental tactic. damentale.

This is true, both when she addresses to nations as well as to parties. In all things, the spirit of division, the very opposite of estaken by charity, animates this press; and it does not the fact that following the old traditions of the Semiism. Droysen, in his History of Hellénism, explained very well how the Carthaginian Semites practiced this me-

method with regard to republics and monarchies Greeks of Sicily (1). Today, in

(1) “If the law,” said the famous historian Drovsen, reigned in Rome, material interests dominated in Carthage; they established the constitution and treaties there.
of commerce and all acts of political life.
The rich civilization of the Semites, which, in the East, had already been weakened and extinct for centuries
under the pressure of foreign conquests, avail Carthage has rediscovered a new vitality, a incredibly advanced industry, extreme care

EE T = ic NE E per ST ee es me | D

In France, Germany, Italy, the Israeli press-Lite doesn't act any differently. The goal is clear: divi-to serve in order to reign. The more men tear each other apart-
The more Israelism spreads in all directions, the more it will spread on all sides.
his empire.

Moreover, the internal dissension and the

and the most rational methods applied to soil cultivation and livestock breeding, an activity-widespread in all classes, a con-awe-inspiring with the interior of Africa, combined with the western coasts of the Mediterranean and those on this side of the ocean: such were the bases material of this State. [He had at his head an aristocracy of wealthy merchants who applied to government policy well understood of interests material resources, IH was trying to extend as much as possible the sphere of Carthaginian trade, to stifle all serious competition, above all to prevent a maritime and commercial power to be formed in the vicinity of the West, to arrive at these

In the end, the State did not back down from the biggest material sacrifices, nor before military enterprises the most audacious silences, , ...

= i = n FE È = i = = = ELF m

"Nowhere does this characteristic of Carthaginian politics-

i
L
|

i
d
>
|
|

has .

TEE CSS EEE
ME 5

= =æ = za

ə Fæ == where
Te | Ti
=

=u E l mep E, m Be
B
T n ier neen

— year 7
pet

=
=. ==

ER pole at Le _ mire rm
T Cr". S

i
= LEE nn nn
LE = - Ens = LE] LL = = E = a za i Š : | z = = to D EP 2 0, TE E
pe ne 5 Tu = i mmn. = =

O0 ISRAELITE POLICY

Wars benefit him and fatten him up. The embloans, speculations of all kinds, the Stock market rails, like loot purchases,
They come to bring him gold in abundance. An entire country is devastated and impoverished for long periods years. But what does it matter! the Israelite banker

Ginoise only shows herself more clearly in her relations with Sicily. We can assure that it never intervened on the island when the Greek race was weakened there, but she still intervened when she got up, and especially when she led-
It was about becoming more real. The nature of things excluded the Carthaginian trade in the eastern regions and of Ports of Greece: the possession of the ports which make-trade with these regions was therefore not known
For him, almost no importance; also the Car-Didn't the Thaginians have an interest in subjugating the island?
entire, not to mention that it was difficult for them, with the only resources of a trading state, of to subjugate a free, highly cultured people, and who political passions were very strong. They it was only important to prevent the union of the various States, » (J.-G. Droysen, History of Hellenism. Trans. French by Mr. Bouché-Leclercq. Volume III: pp. 209-284.)

=

ISRAELITE JOURNALISTS Sp

earned millions and the Jewish secondhand clothes dealer made a small fortune.

The Israeli press therefore obeys a historical law. toric when it sows division. Gette An intimate tendency gives it, so to speak, Its scent and color at any time. It does not One should ask him neither for generous opinions, nor calm judgments, nor fair assessments; She always appeals to some feeling bad, she always pushes men to to hate or despise one another,

In vain she would try to disguise herself, to pretend the moderating reason, playing the concise wisdom-binding; she would not succeed; under these outside composed, the indelible stigmata of His perversity would reappear at every moment.

But what skill in accomplishing it! The nature of this mission of discord! As she knows how to irritate a morbid pride, to revive a injury, stirring up hatred, perpetuating a quarrel-real! How subtly she knows how to reach by the needle pricks, the secret sensitivities, or stimulate lazy passion! Like her salt, by repeating the same thing a thousand times, in obsessing the reader with the same hateful theme, to penetrate his mind in such a way as to denying that he will never leave again. And, in the slander or sarcasm, what an imperious, vehement What a dramatic and striking accent! These are arrows that cross space, small conical bullets to which the armor of the good Ordinary sense does not hold up.

v The Jewish press makes use of another This method, no less dangerous, aims to... a system of always flattering national illusions neles,

Not only is she skilled at petting them:
She knows how to bring them to life; she senses my need to indulge in excessive admiration or to avzugles hopes, to take for extraordinary geniuses of characters who are barely half of a great man, or not at all are even that the facade, or even to believe to imaginary supporters, to fan- alliances tactics, based on which chance a terrible war could be faced.

She excels at transforming these illusions.
health or latent in public belief and to free them from wise restrictions. Borrow-as much as the voice of patriotism, it organizes the egarament; one would think, from her language, that she wears
In it lies the soul of the nation and throbs with its life.
The consequences are easy to see.
We suppose a people of imagination excitable, absolute in his enthusiasms, repugnant to any cold and severe examination of things. With such a people, the Jewish press will have an easy time of it. By constantly talking to him about his prestige and to marvel at its resources

endless, she will instill in him a mania for granshe will launch him into the rul- expenses
The nuses and the mad expeditions. And this people
The credulous person will imagine that he is regaining his power and

Ee — E
mt

T ë =æ E

repairs his losses, while he digs the sulfur of its debt and is preparing for the future of Incalculable embarrassments!

It is true that Semitism finds its account. It's never without a specific interest whether he is propagating an illusion or surfing a personnage. Alas! he succeeded only too well at it; the Examples would be painful to recall, and
The series may not be over yet.

If Semitism were to persuade the France that a Frenchman celebrated by her can everything he wants and that this Frenchman will, in a few years, build a suspension bridge from Calais to Dover or an underwater tunnel From Marseille to Algiers, the whole of France added-would drive him mad, and French savings would be lost in the English Channel or the Mediterranean... no, in the coffers of Jewish bankers, where it would flow in in the form of bonuses and rich commissions.

AV

PORTRAIT OF THE ISRAELI JOURNALIST

Jewish journalism presents a great deal of variety of types: The scale is vast; at | extreme- The superior position, the director, who has free access to statesmen and which one don't speak without first asking him for permission. dience; at the other end, the small articlier, who picks up the news items or rushes through the bulletin of the Stock Exchange. These beings belong entirely- sometimes belonging to the same fauna and are linked to each other to others by numerous traits. The dif- The differences that separate them are, in essence, only

aspects of the same character, manifestations

Diverse forms of the same nature. Between the pride of the one and the servile graces of the other reigns a double ascending and descending chain- Dante; fortune and influence would give well quickly to the thin man to articulate the grand airs of his director, and he, ruined, would promptly return returning to her affectionate ways of the past.

As a whole, Jewish journalists characterized by an indescribable mixture of wit, vanity, and charlatanism; they readily have a high opinion of themselves and their feverish demeanor is that of come- actors on stage, who want at all costs to attract attention. They pay attention to facial expressions. Bring- Are they bringing bad news? They are. overwhelmed, and consternation is painted on their face. A diplomatic complication arises- Will it unravel? They arrive radiant with Joy, as if they were experiencing relief Inexpressible. Has an opponent demolished some sensational article came out of their Feather? Anger is simmering, eyes are swollen.

naked

= To

ISRAELI JOURNALISTS c)

=== x = = nma mmm — CRE RE = mmm =
s = = a = EU a == = e P = = =
in = eem m = = us Ë s = =

roll in their orbits and the swear words of "Scoundrel" and "bastard" follow one another like thunderclaps. Their work even has something rushed and anxious about it which is never free from pretense; one might say that peace or war depends on their ruffling.

To what extent do they take themselves at Sêrieux? The most subtle analyst would give up on to seek it: for, among them, vain folly and the spirit of lying works so well pair, are so intimately associated, that any se-A comparison would be virtually impossible. The same fact contains them in proportions indistinguishable. How to distinguish, in the Vazetier, an Israeli who recounts an interview, 1maginaire, where the hallucination ends, where the Deceitful? He goes into so much detail, he describes so meticulously the reception that was given to him done, he lends the words to the great figure so precise, he imitates his voice and his jacket, he so cleverly attributes to himself an important role! Mad vanity has a certain-his part in this little poem; but the There is also a cunning element to consider. The blue tale will spread its wings in the columns of the newspaper and might make some noise for two or three days. The denial attends; the brazen wittic will get away with it maintain the accuracy of his account and enrich as needed, new features.

Israeli journalists shine through the know-how. For them, the newspaper is the con-to be part of a school of public reason. But, Living in a world of falsehood, they strive to simulate true science. We see them displaying a learned-political tion as far as the eye can see; they know the names and origins of all men policies of all countries in the world; they are aware of all parties and all movements the secrets of the opinicu; they are initiated into the secrets from all the cabinets of the globe; nothing, finally, e-chap to the infallibility of their information and to their universal confidence. Do not contradict them

No; they would throw names and numbers at you. to the figure with the dexterity of Harlequin and the accuracy of a spoken Gotha Almanac. But Care to check; you might have Shame for letting yourself be flattened by a mystic-a craftsman who improvised names and numbers.

Regardless of their rank, journalists Israelites are, in general, affected by a A strange idea: they consider themselves called to lead everything. Humanity owes them faith and homage, and any power that is not agreed

Their press already seems criminal to them.
Perhaps this explains the violence of their attacks. Resist them, do not de-To demand the investiture is to insult a sovereign right, and this outrage, they do not par-They don't give. Also, when they hate ur man, unable to dominate or circumvent him

When they come, they make a hail of slander and insults; they cover him with me-
They call down curses upon his head;

Never a relentless bombardment, never a half-Terrible trail did not approach the furies of Israelite ink. All the animals of the diabolical mythology, from the dragon to the mouth ablaze up to the scorpion's stinger poisonous ones are represented there.

This claim to control everything takes root in the... wind a more agreeable form. Maint journal-
The Israelite list recounts with perfect naturalness that he was the close advisor of such a great European statesman and the inspiration behind his political. He did nothing without the consul-ter, and the unity of Germany or dualism
The Austro-Hungarians were the fruit of his inspirations tions. Sila made the journey to Constant- in 1876 Tinople, he does not fail to claim the the dethronement of Sultan Abdul-Aziz or the ren-payment from some grand vizier. We are free to believe or to smile.

Israeli journalists don't get all worked up.
Too many people are consistent with themselves.
Logic is good for the Aryans; but some pun O aaa -m =

= CS © mm AND — n -= -a | == = = = cmn m mn eo OE ë ë EUOE ao EE superior beings hover above these nevulgar ecstasies. They change altars with a admirable nonchalance; the thing is done quicklydemented, without false modesty, without transitions Useless. Time to receive and collect payment.

A big check or a small check, and that says it all.
They also excel in restoration and trickery.
cage; but there is a great difference between Jewish antiquarian and Jewish journalist: one sells often new stuff for old stuff; the other, at
On the contrary, it sells old things as new.

XV

ESSENTIAL REFLECTIONS

How to remove men from lin-Influence of the Jewish press? No problem is perhaps more difficult to solve. Those who all more or less suffer from this influence.
awareness of their weakness; in all of them one observes a secret reaction of their reason;
but very few have the strength to shake off the yoke.
Moreover, bursts of courage are not enough to achieve this; above all, what is not Learning to read in the darkness of human malice. Some Reflections on this subject will not be useless.

1° The influence of the Jewish press on the Aryan society is that of an intelligence inferior, but ardent and mobile, on the lintelsuperior liaison that bends and does not defend itself No. This one obeys the attraction of the other. she agrees to leave her own sphere and to downshift,

That's a good gesture indeed, a demotion which is taking place. Aryan intelligence cannot to allow it to be dominated by the Semitic spirit without to fall from grace. There is more: the struggle of intelligence Aryan and the Semitic spirit does not include of the middle ground. Or perhaps Aryan intelligence, unwavering, asserts itself more energetically at She herself better understands her wealth and her native grandeur, and then she represses and repushes the Semitic spirit. Or else it gives in and S gives up. Then, guilty of having betrayed herself, She is destined for the most shameful of punishments: Semitism controls and directs it.

Why is one so easy and the other so difficult? cie? To solve the question, it would suffice to

T z TT EE OO ER MOTHER TT D UE CRC MN E RS comm mem muted at Um. OC 2 l

nee me com mom m8 cu cu mu

To put it this way: Why is it so difficult to Going up is so easy, and coming down is so simple?

In the intellectual sphere especially, to become impoverished is easy; understanding that one is becoming poorer is a difficult reflection to do on oneself. When Semitic nervousness invaded the intelligences and accustomed them to living in a artificial life, full of loquacity and men- dream. We must almost renounce their demon- to find that they have fallen into an unhealthy state. This state has its appeal, its intoxication even; We escape it momentarily, only to fall back into it with delights. Imperceptibly the vital forces of the Thoughts wear out, judgment weakens, sense the truth dies; we seek, we worship, we acclaim falsehood and the priests of falsehood; one is then became the perfect slave of Semitism.

% In politics as elsewhere, the Israelites have at their disposal deceptions of a Oh.

incredible effect on the ignorant. Why the absurd noise propagated from the mouth of an Israelite Does Lite find so many credulous ears? For- What the most blatant slander, the anecdote The most suspicious ones, launched by them, will they to engrave deep in people's minds, to become fixed in the memoirs, so that it is difficult to Uproot them?

There's nothing so mysterious about it, and it's enough to listen. The Israelites carefully cultivate the Voice effects; they know how to spout their clichés. In an impressive way, they put some effort into it. biting theater. This biting edge, which is sharp irony sharpens the lie, attacks the intel- soft ligaments; they allow themselves to be penetrated and agree to believe what the Israelite tells them suggests.

Those who want to resist Semitism do not would be too keen to observe these effects of voice, to unravel its preparation, to dismantle the mechanism. What they bring in cold and long-term perspicacity; they will be rewarded, and these things so dangerous their will one day appear as they are, namely grimaces of speech and abominable sinsgerles.

This Scrutiny of the Arcana of Semitism

The Jewish press uses similar methods. Nonsense. Anyone who wants to understand it properly has no than to give him, in imagination, the voice and the physiognomy; he will see it vividly and hear it speaking: here, the audacious lie launched with the airs of a prophet who might glimpse a lightsudden eruption; there, the venomous sarcasm adragging along in a strident dragging; elsewhere, the A short mimed story with details of a Fabulous precision.

And likewise the Israelite in his conversation tion, the Jewish press has a passion for the cliché; she keeps dwelling on a farcical idea, as if this idea enjoyed eternal youth; she repeats the same thing thousands of times funny word, as if that wasn't too much of having used it only once. She also adorable impertinences; she speaks willa third of a man like Mr. Gladstone or of Mr. de Giers, in the same way as at the In the stock market, we would be talking about an ambiguous money changer. These lovely insolences are one of the flowers of the Jewish press.

We are truly exempt from the influence from the Jewish press that when one experiences For her, it was an indescribable contempt. Yes, he didn't It's not enough to know her and judge her. This Knowledge is imperfect, this Judgment is still undecided, if he hasn't gone down into the depths of the soul, and the detestable influence n is not eliminated. If it were necessary to represent by an image the energetic action of this elimination tion, the burning ardor of contempt which must To operate on her, she couldn't be better depicted. that by applying a sulfur jacket

THE ISRAELITE JOURNALISTS

= = RS SRE ms nm comes cm Em Ce

Er - z =- = = me ee me OCR E Ce Co EEEE © © 2 EE cm aa mm om LE on a hideous monster. So intelligence is Once purified, it is immune to poisoning.

deleterious.

a D

Jp" ak7

BOOK THREE

THE ISRAELITE BANKERS

whore. mu he to

|

ISRAELITE BANKERS

XVI
THE ISRAELITE BANK

SKETCH OF THE JEWISH BANKER

Gold is the great lever of Israeli power. lite. Jewish banks are rising in the world like proud citadels, and The major Jewish bankers are truly sovereigns.

This sovereignty has this strange quality, that one does not
She never respects him. One can be humble before him.
hold, one can tremble before it; but the Consciences and hearts do not belong to him not.

11 ISRAELITE POLICY

An equally strange thing! The higher you go, the more... in the social hierarchy, the more this sovereignty It reveals a powerful and weighty side. The simple man, the hardworking laborer sees the carriage of a great Jewish banker, without being dazzled by it; he diverts meme with unintentional contempt. The bourgeois, on the contrary, opens his eyes greedy. The nobleman, who spends, is more demonstratif again, and graciously greets his creditor, who had become his equal.

Finally, the monarch returns to the great banker a greeting from sovereign to sovereign. The banQuier greeted him like a slave, it is true:

but the monarch said to his aide-de-camp; "They are our masters (1)!"

In the person of the Jewish banker, the conTraste is nonetheless marked. Flexible and

---

(1) See Psalm 61:5, verses 5, 6, 7 and 8, where it is said that the beloved of the God of Israel will exact vengeance among the nations, will punish the people and will bind the kings and the great ones with iron chains.

brittle, caressing and insulting, amiable to the point of seductive and insolent to the point of outrage, cala lover and pleasure-seeker, quick as a snake voluptuous like a cat, sly to the fingertips and lavish by fits, especially for his pleasures, the Jewish banker seems to at first glance composed of alternatives and oppositions. But, behind these varied appearances, one can easily glimpse the unity of a single naThe whole thing is, in essence, very homogeneous. Is pride in him a base victor? rieuse, or the baseness of pride turned inward upon itselfEven? It doesn't matter, because it is quite certain that This baseness and this pride are not different substantially different from each other, and that one can alsemantically find them one within the other. Reduced to its basic elements, the banker Jewish could be defined as: deception in the state genius, learned and inspired, audacious and dvoracious. This deception is aimed at gold, and gold that she picks up is sensual, hateful, oppressivesister; he thirsts for revenge, no less than for voluptuousness. The cup of delights in one hand, the iron rod (1) in the other, thus the great

The Jewish banker should get a paint job.
What an idea the characters of the upper class had!
Do banks create themselves? This idea is absolutely extraordinary, Olympian, sublime. In their superb independence, they see other men at an incommeasurable and they work for them. Despite their privileged situation, the nation where they are The buildings do not absorb them at all, or rather they do they live a double existence: one on borrowed land and passing through, as wealthy citizens of ceite nation; the other true, passionate, grandiose, as princes of universal Jerusalem saddle. Therein lies the eternal attachment, therein lies the bond indestructible, which will be passed down in perpetuity.
May their descendants be, like them,

(1) “You will crush them (the nations) with a scepter of iron; you will break them into pieces like an iron vessel.
"Gile." (Psalms, II, v. 9.)

Princes of Jerusalem, queen of the world!

That's the main point; the rest matters little.
whether they are French, English, German, or American Americans or Turks.

No human language will ever describe intoxication the pride that these bankers feel in contemplating the universe at their feet. They have transports of contempt and ecstasies of ambition.
They see kings and enslaved peoples and the Jewish banks forming a vast belt of fortresses under whose protection the army
Israel deploys its triumphant battalions.

Nothing could quench their thirst for domination.
tion: because centuries of hatred simmer in their souls, for the past is dreadful and the future

This may not be reassuring.

Yes, the future often comes first.
their eyes like a sinister vision.— For-
What has suddenly made you pale, you great arti-Without robberies and swindles? Why?
your eye, which is usually illuminated by lightning of fraud and the cruel joys of perfidy,

Bie DO MO es e O o ce me T RER SE oi E e apple

Did he adopt this expression of anxiety? What Do you see? What are your night voices telling you? If They foretell misfortunes, gather your energy, project a solid presence; be threatening, biting, mocking. Certainly, you have the right to do so and You can admire your work; with the debris of wretched people whom you have ruined and caused to die
In despair, we would erect an enormous ossuary.
And what are you afraid of? You are above justice.
and laws, But no, you remained pale, your re-guard does not detach himself from a distant object and Scary. Is that the ghetto calling you?

AV II

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THE JEWISH BANKER

Certainly, the conquest of the world by the Jewish Bank presents a dazzling spectacle health. The preparation for this event, its its invasive march, its universality, the ener-gie and the forces of spirit that achieved it, all

It deserves study and meditation.

How the descendants of secondhand clothes dealers or Discounters of Frankfurt and other cities q Al-Have Lemagne become great figures of the earth ?

It would be absurd and unfair to refuse them immense activity, supported by faculties intellectual acuity of extreme acuity and by passions of unparalleled fervor. Undoubtedly, this activity, this sharpness of mind, these passions ardent, everything is more or less special, everything Ultimately, it's nothing more than cunning in action.

But there is such a complete set there, all the acts are so well combined, so well marqués at the corner of a divinatory conception and of perfect execution, which they must pay for a large tribute of admiration.

However, this admiration should not be trembling; she shouldn't even go as far as astonishment. The Jewish banker has nothing of so impenetrable; it is not an inso- problem luble.

As a general rule, it attaches itself, without... to have the brilliance, to this class of neurotics among in which the arts of perversity are in what-that sort constituted from birth, and what The Middle Ages abhorred under the name of magicians.

In these beings, nature, amplified tenfold by the he-

The re-edited version led to a frightening result.
would believe that the genies of hell watched over their cradle. They readily offer, in fact, the phenomenon of moral inversion: for them

Evil is good, and good is evil (1). No not only do they practice fraud, but they They worship him, and they sacrifice to him as to a god jealous to which they belong. And, in their home, Evil is not disorder, disturbance,
a morbid accident; it is a normal state,
a regular organization, a foundation intimate; he has the instincts and the means, the impulses and weapons, precautions, sea-nightlights and terrible impulses; he especially has the faith in himself, an exalted faith, a trustee of a long past of triumphant joys and of cruel disappointments; in short, it is a

(1) Fair is foul, and foul is flee.
(Shakespeare, Macbeth, act I, scene r.)

The same formula is found in the Bible (Isaiah, ch. v, 21). We have the right to conclude that these states Moral madness was common in Jerusalem.

ee

Í a

|
|

= ë ë eo -eee © — pP rm

science, education, a duty of piety towards the ancestors, a patriotic work.
Moreover, in these beings, everything seems to have was created for the same purpose, each element

the assembly is linked to others as one organ to another organ. The pride of Jewish banker and his greed are closely associated; his greed and sensuality are no less united. From one extreme to the other of his mental system, everything in him forms a living chain, everything is force, tool and spring. That is the great cause of his power. constitutes psychologically a harmonious whole unique and complete. Everything in it converges towards the same end; if it contains nothing useless, He lacks nothing essential and we can to rank it among the most accomplished works of nature, besides what it has done most flexible, more elastic, and more dangerous. Thankfully, so does nature, in its highest form. Foresight has created forces to resist him perhaps slow to get moving,

ISRAELITE BANKERS 125

D am aaaa 'aa H l N au

k

but impossible to stop. She did more, she lodged in him secret causes of decadensity; the very gifts with which she showered him often come to blind him and lead him to his loss. Amidst his riches, the banker The Jew must always remember the Colossus with the head of gold and feet of clay, this famous symbol of the fragility of Israelite greatness,

4 = == = Ü mi =
arxk E "= [= mm =. üd = z5
Tim. J3 aa aa TS Arg 7 2 PO Po ani md, ! NN LS ee Per AU HI pe ii

, a ser: 7 ; == Ëa = = mE = ee $ ig œ d i EE = ; Tæ iisi. E =- The "M =- m = - + z me nn

z
E OT a

TR i E

= z FE Es =

AVIDI
THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THE JEWISH BANKER

THE DEMONS. — THE DEMON OF PRIDE

When, from the entrance of a cave, one has thrown a quick look inside, you have to have the courage to enter and examine the inhabitants so much.

The soul of the Jewish banker effectively resembles tively to a cavern where move singular, capricious and violent beings, mali-Heavenly and cunning, despotic and wrathful. In Their savagery, these beings have the picturesque and The interesting thing about animals; we find in them

year

RE | =
"LE m ka 27 EnG ik w =. z : = =" ... =. u Æ EE - pe a = ;

the serpent's artful undulations, the graces ferocious tiger and gymnasium skills-monkey things.

What should we call them, because we have to call them Give it a name? The name Demons seems the more suitable for representing them by a figure animated; and it is easy to justify its use.

Certain psychic forces of vitality extreme, with an inspiring energy without interruption rupture, seem to constitute a being in a to be; they have achieved such spontaneity They are so action-packed, they all attract so much attention. the other faculties, they dive so deep in the depths of the individual, that one does not would be able to distinguish to what extent they obey the one who owns them and in what to what extent they govern it. The truth is that this obedience and this domination do not that one: he who has the demon at his command is at the same time his slave.

And this notion of Demons is not recommended not only by poetic charm; it does not not only does it bring out a difficult designcile of the domain of abstract intuition, for give it a body and make it live in the image gination. It has a much wider range high: it provides a valuable indication on the difficulties of the problem posed by flax-Semitic invasion and shows the way to the solution tion.

Indeed, to overcome certain forces of a formidable activity, they must be countered with counterforces constituted to the same degree of goldorgisation, developed with the same plenlife studies, equally active, equally inspired. As long as the struggle has not yet reached

Creating them does not establish a balance; it does not it only begins to appear on the day when these counterforces, having become aware of themselves-memes enter the scene, the flaming sword at the hand. In short, to defeat the demons, he The intervention of counter-demons is necessary; it does not-only those who leave it to break the empire of first and to defeat them.

To what demons does the Jewish Bank owe its existence? His miracles? The first of all is that of pride, extravagant, senseless demon, Even fanciful. But what a prodigious spring-Wow! What a sublime idea of himself! What indomitable ardor! And what style! This pride of the Jewish banker, with his superb majesty and its quivering irritability, resembles a wild beast. He is nonetheless the principal architect of Colossus; it was he, prophetus of greatness, who, in announcing to petty usurer whom one day his descendants crushed-would be the peoples and would march in tandem with the kings, was the soul of the great work; and it is to him, above all, that it must be made of faithful sacrifices. He continually demands them: slight prick, calculated negligence, outrage skillful, insults delicately intertwined in politeness, hurtful familiarity, respect ironic, brutal insolence, venomous bite Meuse, bloody contempt, etc... All of you who If you frequented Jewish bankers, ask your memories, you will recognize that the demon pride demanded a sacrifice, and that The sacrifice was made at your expense.

TO THE
THE DEMONS OF THE JEWISH BANKER (continued)

THE DEMONS OF GREED AND CUNNING AND OF PLEASURE

Beside the demon of pride sits that of Greed. Is he in charge? No, he is rarely in rest; if he appears motionless, it is because he is watching prey.

How to sketch this monster? The pen Humanity will never achieve it. That is the the speed of his movements, which he seems to be in a hundred places at once. His powerful arms stir the gold blocks, as if these blocks

— eom am moo MM = n mocme aae eam an = > omm m =m D RUE CSC o D DS CE CEE — 3
|

= as E

had no weight, and her delicate fingers They know how to collect even the smallest atoms.

He too has the despotism of a tyrant and wants continuous sacrifices, terrible sacrifices. He is never satisfied. His mouth opens slightly. constantly to devour new victims and he feeds on their cries of despair.

What power is armed with the man who has a Such a monster at his command! But also, what Addiction! If he wants to disobey him, the demon He comes during the night to overwhelm him with reproaches. He threatens to abandon him; then it would be ruin, misery, shame, and the imperious demon, sinking its claws into his-

Trailles dictates his terrible commands to him:
"Start a company..., launch a loan..." deceives... wear...) Mold... I want it, you
"It belongs to me."

It was bad for him, especially if he wanted to return this that he took! The demon of greed admits, Strictly speaking, let's not take it, if the thing is too difficult or the danger too great; but

Returning what one has taken is the crime of crimes.
The horror of horrors.

According to theologians, the spirits of darkness form a hierarchical society where everyone has its function. The demons of pride and of greed has at its service a marvelous agent them, the finest, the most intelligent being, the
The most inventive demon in hell: the demon of cunning.
In the art of deception, this demon is a prodigy; he knows everything, and those who made a pact
They know everything about him, just like him. Their talents do not need to develop gradually-through long experience; the revelation infernal creates them all from the very first day. These men know all the secrets of evil by virtue of an innate science; they know instinctively read the depths of souls and speak to bad inclinations; they even know what
What is even more astonishing is discerning good and not doing so.
serve.

They never need to fumble; all this
What they conceive is lucidity itself, all of this

Sis iggi SC E haaa ; Aii

a -ia : 1 .murs nil

What they do and say is absolutely certain; It's the perfect snapshot. They combine a trap in the blink of an eye, this trap is a master-of the work, he who falls into it will not get out. If they improvise a lie, everything is admitted. rable: their quickness of mind, their audacity, their inventive resources, their emphasis on The stark truth. They know how to make their voices heard. of an oracle, of infallible authority, to utter the most horrible falsehood.

Ah! It's because the demon of cunning is also... In his sphere, the master of masters. And he He also has his demands; he orders his followers to pay tribute to him every day under a torma of lies, of pretty mystifications, of ingenious calumnies, of implanned, clever tricks.

You, who are so proud of the friendship of such a ban-You richest person, feel your pulse; don't Hasn't he been mystified sometimes? Hasn't he told me a few little stories about you Funny, right? Didn't he lend you some pro-ridiculous poses or boasts rude?

These three demons have a more amiable brother: the demon of lust. Yes, that banker, so greedy for gain, so cruel in his plundering, is the most refined being on earth, Never the linen of his body will not be thin enough, nor the cuisine of his rather delicate table; he will never rest

L

on fairly soft cushions; never ia music that soothes his nerves will not be enough suave; his mistress will never receive caresses quite intoxicating (1). The demon is there; for this pursuit of sensual satisfactions has,
at the Jewish banker's, something of sacred and strange, he gives himself over to it as if was fulfilling a higher duty. This reli-region of voluptuousness, he likes to spread it around of him; also it is rare that those who fre-

---

(1). Projectissima ad libidinem gens (very given to pleasure), says Tacitus. (History, Book V, N 9.)

those who are currently unaffected escape contagion; they become-
They, like him, are sybarites and voluptuaries.

The Jewish banker thus presents, in the the splendor of its blossoming, this appetite of enjoyment, the propagation of which, of society Semitic in Aryan society, is not one of the lesser dangers of mixing them.
That Aryan society should not allow itself to be contaminer, that she observes Semitism in
The delights of Capua and renewed energy!
The hour of deliverance will not be long in coming.
ner (1).

---

(1) Marcellus, speaking to the Romans, shows them
The Carthaginians, softened by pleasure:

"Those who fight," he said, "are agitated by the delights of Capua, through wine, through courtly love sanes, through a whole winter of debauchery. They have They have lost their former vigor and energy; they have lost that physical strength, that courage which had It crosses the Pyrenees and the Alps. These are not more than the remains of the Carthaginians of that time, barely capable today of bearing arms and of

ISRAELITE BANKERS 137

O zm æ m=

to carry themselves,” (Livy, Book 83, 49) Trans. Nisard: T. I“, p. 619:)

Doesn't it look like this was written yesterday, in Is Paris entirely Jewish?

g

ES TS ET T zi TENTE -

SU “iris dre

TEE

i

E

ps

AA
MASTERPIECE

PUBLIC LOANS

A picture of the bankers' machinations Israelites would require an encyclopedic intelligence pedic. Like Athens, like Rome, Jerusalem-Salem is a unique city in the universe; and,
just as the Roman armies deployed all the virtues and accomplished all the wonders of the war, likewise conquering Jerusalem, has took the art of getting rich to extraordinary heights dinars. She too has her men of genius and his humble soldiers, his audacious and irresistible

To Re PR The in nn _a5 matt ni".

RS mn

and her tenacious patients; she too knows how to-
to slowly follow his work through the ages, as she knows how to accomplish in a few years the work of a century. Like Rome, it has its rules of strategy and its maxims, its discipline Pliny and his heroism. She has more pride.
even than Rome, and dares to defy it; and that is only the day Rome, outraged, strikes and destroys it,
that she recognizes the mistress of the world.
In the evolution of the Israelite conquest, the Bankers play the role of army commanders.
Their brain activity, their science of their terrain, their genius for maneuver, their flair for great occasions, their bold resolutions, their attention to the smallest details, their will calm that dominates storms, and their obstinate tion which brings back victory, entirely within them, until an arrogance of a victorious general, justifies This designation. Let it be known! All The fight against Semitism, which will not have to based first on an in-depth study of its qualities, strengths, knowledge

special abilities, will be struck, from the beginning, impotence and will only serve to do so to appear more invincible.

The plan of this work does not include, in Regarding bankers, this study complete. A few quick overviews will help, perhaps, to shed some light on them.

The Jewish banker is first and foremost a fascidistinguished professor. Is it a matter of pushing a tastegovernment to take out a loan? Eloquent and persuasive, he will demonstrate with a prodigrievous clarity the Government's difficulties, and the ease of remedying it through a necessary measure a savior who will simplify everything. As he knows soto laugh subtly at the Minister's hesitations Finances and refuting his objections with a imposing irony! As he knows especially how to bringto demonstrate skillful negotiation skills, to display appropriately its power, its universal relations, the unions ready to to organize itself under his direction, the financial marketcement, whose threads his hand holds in its grip! In this

5.

A discreet display of his power reigns mysterious security and the authority of a master. We can't do anything without him; the state's credit is in his hands, he can lower or lower at will raise the Annuity, and any attempt to issue a loan, outside of him, without suffering his intermediary and its conditions, would be a pure chimera; large capital, like the small savings, no longer know how to move except when he sets an example for them and teaches them to... orders flow into the state coffers. How guilty these rulers are, who for so many years, have lent so many times Lorelile to the insidious proposals of the banQuier Israelite! Like all vices, lemPrunt has its seductions, its enchantments deceptive, his sophisms, his theorists. He may have its reasons for being exceptional; but in its chronic state, it is the permanently installed disorder, and, in a Time gives, misery and shame. The wasteAge accompanies him and slavery follows him; and the debt, like cancer, increases by its its own strength until it had gnawed away at the best of the public substance.

EE mT comen cu “Se ER mm © me CS an ne mm e le nm el me o Oo mm, ë

Certainly, this banker who has just taken charge of a huge loan, he knows all too well that, In a short time, there will be another knock at his door; the loans will accumulate, the chain will become heavier every year and The day will come when the entire nation will say, Head bowed: "He is the king of kings!"

==

TO XI

FRAUDULENT COMPANIES

Is it about founding a company and giving A huge police raid? The banker: Israeli deploys its creative resources and its apti-Actress studies. Discovering with one eye
The eagle has the big business to launch, he will soon organized his combinations and chose his auxiliaries areas. Of these auxiliaries, some are affdice, the others, influential people including him
You need the competition and the name. With the first ones,
The agreement is reached quickly, the share of the loot is quickly stipulated. With the latter, a di- address

Plumber is needed. How do I get it in?

Se En e mms = RENE mu mn z
- THIS

EE CCS 2 = su — ms = = = = p= q = > ea TE 5 i L 3

T

the Duke of X..., Count Y..., the great proprietor-Silence Z... in a dubious company? Com-How can we hide their responsibilities from them? But The Jewish banker faces no obstacles.
Didn't he inquire, through information secret, about money needs and the fair-wounds of those he undertakes? Also, he is It is very rare that he attacks falsely, and, when he present, he has, as a general rule, in the soul of His dupe, a devoted accomplice.

But this is only the beginning. He
You have to talk, seduce, train; you have to conquer legitimate fears, apprehensions of enlightened friends, the warnings of the people of 101; 11 In short, one must completely dominate a man and reduce him to no longer seeing and to not no longer hear except through eyes and ears of his palmer.

The Jewish banker will perform this miracle.
Warmth of speech, feigned friendship, speculator's enthusiasm, appeal, by deep vocal inflections, expressing passions burning hot, money loan made on the spot, he em-will deploy all these means with vigor and an incredible ascendancy. Never before have we will be able to trace, with their dramatic coloring, These scenes of financial magnetism. Cagliostro he couldn't have done a better job of evoking a person
His beloved, whom he doesn't know, the skillful imposter, conjure the dazzling phantom of the Wealth. The shadow of the prestigious thaumaturge must sometimes tremble with joy, and he has the right to be to say that his genius did not die with him.
The unfortunate man is no longer able to resist; it is enough to to finish it off. Led by the banker in his
In his study and its salons, he sees magnificent sights.
incredible, treasures of universal luxury, the works of art from all eras. These splendid their tears go to his head and the intoxication of their it takes hold of him so much that he ceases to appease to leave. He agrees to everything; he will appear in pre-First line on the brochure, it will be one of the coryphaea, at least mute and decorative, of the foundation assemblies, he will be part of the con

sde ee = 2

administrative seat; the banker handles it perinde ac cadaver.

Moreover, he leaves nothing to chance.
set up the machine. The financial press em-
The trumpet is in their mouths, the beaters push the game, the friends of high finance celebrate the company and engage their customers to sub-to write. Lul, present everywhere, directs the ma-work with the decision of a commander-in-chief;
He embraces everything, provides for everything, his activity of giant eclipses everything around him. A semblshareholders' blessing, it is superb to lan-cage and authority. He even has something Imperial, a breath of luminous majesty beautified her face, and, in a powerful manner from which he obtains the statutes or the report, we dream of Moses carrying the Tablets of the Law. We do not
If it is not contradicted, there is no discussion; the deliberations-The motions are passed by acclamation. An observation a timid vation would remain without echo in a assembly of which, through its creatures, it is of a-advance the master.

Often, too, he slips away with swiftness.
of a conjurer. It involves taking a reso-
A decisive, but compromising, solution. He He believes it's necessary; he's the one who inspired it. We're going to to gather; at that precise moment, he disappears, undergoes-He was called away by an urgent matter. That one he hurries to do the thing without him, there is no One minute to spare. And the thing, which he had so once properly set in motion, it happens without him, automata continue to act under its impul-Sion, even in his absence. When will the bell ring?
The time for responsibility will come, we will understand.
why he escaped. He will be able to say, "I

"I wasn't there!" and deny his participation in the the measure in question, of which he did not leave Visible trace. His denials will resonate. in court, and perhaps they will listened to. This method used by Jewish bankers is very well illustrated by the Persian expression: "To pick up a snake with the hand of a other. "

And what an art to appear, when necessary, a stranger to

=
e me em e ë <e mr T =

the founding of a company from which he alone benefits, to make it, for example, founded by its debtthe seller who will pay his debt in released shares! These shares will be resold at par, sometimes with a bonus, then the crash will come. But the banker, we can be sure of that in advance, will be disblocked in time; his practiced tact warned him of the moment that must not be missed, and its The more traps there are, the more treacherous they become. a moment to better build confidence in his victims

Companies set up by Jewish bankers recall a famous historical event Roman army, the Battle of Lake Trasimene. Roman woman, skillfully lured by Hannibal, engaged in a parade in which the cunning CarthaGinois closed the exits, and she was merciless there. brutally massacred, likewise, the unfortunate shareholder engages in the Israeli cutthroatlite; they promise him the moon and the stars, they guarantees that no appeals will ever be made funds, and he subscribes to as many shares as possible.

RE EEE MNT IE ©

= PE mm CE cm

The massacre will not be long in coming, the trustee of the bankruptcy will be the executor.

Thus, whether it concerns armies and operations military, or capital and speculation, the artifices of Semitism are always the same, and the grandiose epic of the second Punic war (1) extends hand over the centuries to contemporary plunder. But, Alas! Is the financial war less cruel, less deadly, less devastating than ordinary war?

(l) The most memorable of wars: Bellum memorabile maxim, says the historian Titus Live.

ES aa {Em Piin © E m SRE CE" =%

pen IB Su ME m am Coia |

Lu J i Pr SE Sn oa
s A Hi Er D om 9 F = to i "E m Ehm

TL E. ER ar pa ja im. au à +

XXII

CORRUPTION

Of all the nefarious arts of the Israeli banker-Lite, there is none on which the legislators and statesmen must have their eyes more open than the art of corruption. If the Corruption did not exist; he would have invented it.
Where there is any germ whatsoever, so hidden Whatever it may be, he knows how to discover it and bring it to fruition:
and where corruption is already a chronic problem,
She suddenly takes on, under his influence, gigantic proportions; she was the exception-tion, it becomes the general plague. We cannot better compare the work of fermentation which then takes place in certain regions than in sudden development of a stunted plant under the effect of a hot and humid climate, because the corruption under the rule of the Jewish banker differs as much, without exaggeration, from corruption ordinary tion, that the vegetation of the tropics differs from that of the North.

There, as elsewhere, the Jew is admirable-
This was aided by his heredity and origins.
race, which so religiously guards its habits.
retains his talents no less well, and his successes in the European world hold preprecisely to what, while adapting in appearance-
With no connection to this world, she remained fully immersed in it.
possession of her oriental skills. The corruption is one of those she uses with the more happiness, and every Israelite brings it,
At birth, inspirations and rides.

What a man, holding in his hand the nest of a bird, lined with moss, padded, and insulated, at the Both elegant and solid, geometric and poetic,
Did you experience a surge of admiration? Well, he who, observing Israel in the act of cor-break away, following him in his cunning march, since the initial preparation of the work up to final consumption, n would experience not such an admiring movement, would not be nor artist, neither poet nor philosopher. Blind and Deaf to what nature has created that is most perfect,

It would be forever unworthy of studying it.

The Jew approaches the man he wants to corrupt as delicately as a seducer-
A professional man approaches a woman.
His first words already envelop her in a atmosphere of devotion and affection, of~ delightful to breathe. Soon the sympathy spreadblit, trust is born. Whoever opens their heart does not doesn't take long to let his secrets slip; moreover-
For them, the Jew knows his man in advance.
even in what it hides best; it is ren-signed on the extravagant mistress or the embarrassing debts, and all his blows for-tent. An unexpected or provoked opportunity
A complaint arises about trivial difficulties.

SR T So Émilie

x =

=

RE | 3

nn Ce em, ru

The D QE "Ï

. LIE -Form r OU MS rt a makes itself heard. The tempter seizes it with the swiftness of a bird of prey.

"What! You," he exclaimed, "a man of Your merit, you have to fight against pa- They're in trouble! You risk not being re-elected lacking the ability to subsidize a miserable newspaper! And yet, there are few men like you in France. If, on that side, you If you had security, you could devote all your energy for national recovery.

Gradually, the proposals appear- are defined, but with what threats? What precautions! A clever loan She often precedes them. Above all, she excels, this hideous corruption, presenting itself as one very simple thing. The Jew, like the se- womanizer, seems to exude a charm which lulls the moral sense. And he has an eloquence which embraces, arguments which disturb, of specious reasoning, tailored to each individual. He demonstrates, with the utmost clarity, that the politicians cannot provide for their expenses that public life provides them resources, which everyone, in one way or another, can use On the other hand, they are obliged to procure, that to act otherwise is to not know how to manage to be and to expose, at each election, to be, Lacking money, dispossessed by the first person who came along and rejected in private life with poverty and 'the contempt in perspective, that we must leave the timid and idealistic people profess principles absolutes, that, moreover, those who profess them are the first to rape them, that finally, in certain cases, such as the one he is proposing, we make a legitimate profit without trafficking in his conscience, that it is better, no doubt, not to disclose them unnecessarily, but only by definitively, it is not a betrayal of the State to think about yourself for a while. The examples follow one another-tooth on her nimble lips, and the whole Parliament It happens there; truth and slander can both... none of them claim their share in the thousand events that he recounts; but, in his case, the lie it so perfectly takes on the appearance of truth, it o,

| NT a, BEN jF Je y5 Per" ip mag
Tem r = deg. MayM m. a gan r -s

!
|
|

a. fn I weigh pe

RL p ge PP le - = mr o- eus 7 RS a er CS EE Ce T RE eee "ci

sn a MC T iF N ii

4 mer, RE PP TT

155 ISRAELITE POLICY

It plays with such naturalness in the details

observed, that they can no longer be untangled,
In any case, corruption quickly took hold.
climate, in the mind of man so well assièégwé, as a universal practice el almost indispensable.

However, this man retreats. The need to ar-Gentlemen are devouring him, his creditors are growing impatient, its banknotes in circulation can no longer be To renew, his compensation will be seized. He is to torture... But if the thing were to be discovered-Covered? Ah! That's where the banker has of a terrible weapon: silence. This silence impenetrable, which will cover up the work of fraud, this discretion that will render her invisible, this vigilant dexterity that will make the most disappear slight clues, that is the sacred pledge he offers, and We know all too well that he will be loyal to his pro-Mass. Yes, this deceitful being knows not to betraying others so as not to betray oneself (1).

(1) o Eternal, varde IMA mouth, warde opening

from my lips.” | Psalms, GAL. V. 3.)

Corruption, it must be admitted, has a great virtue, that of knowing when to remain silent; the crime committed fold, she retreats, like a snake, into a deep hole where it cannot be reached.

The banker also knows the
The power of numbers. One would not be corrupted.
X... with ten thousand francs; there would be no what to pay the subsidy to the Flying Toad or at the Cameleon in the main town, nor the posters and ballot papers for the upcoming election, but with

One hundred thousand francs is something else entirely. The election assured, and, moreover, a small fortune with which will allow us to envision the future with security Charity, we don't ignore those kinds of opportunities. Char-
A well-ordered order begins at home:
And then X... did so much for the country! He did well entitlement to certain compensations. The banker
The Jewish man knows all this, and when, in his vibrant voice,
He utters the magic word: € One hundred thousand francs," an echo answers him in the soul of his interlocutor.

(What practical measures can be taken?)

= : : 1- = qm oo eo Jm a © me = mee ea mE DR
| qe 2 = me E ire + m EE mem mm 2
z

shovels an invasive, elusive corruption
Is it possible to achieve this through sheer skill? There is a study to be done here.

Highly recommended for statesmen. Absolutely.
no one would dare to claim that, in the countless lawsuits against Jewish bankers have maintained for half a century, no ma-

| Gistrat was not corrupted. And yet-
| æ + | DO - 2: to, ON i

| dant, would it be useless if there were, beside the Minister of Justice, a special commission,
'

- = ra Ei e de np n EU ES SN me
NS Eire je aii M i

Armed with sophisticated investigative tools?

aa i

Would it be pointless for a strict law to make the head of any magistrate who had allowed himself to be corrupted Break up? If judicial corruption doesn't exist no, these measures will eliminate up to Poder, and the consideration of Justice will be

-iaaa EE. ne, to adorn Em kF

This
Mira Ca B PES at 2nd
E

L'
E
i F
j
b 4 now better protected against suspicion.

-A ni ne ee

D. The ot The en

= = + z
E PAR o {J = T

CNT LE. LELE- irre a E r

I LERRA Tai =

i RS ET i aa

ES
er ee, en CRT aa nr Les

ANLI

POLITICAL INFLUENCE OF JEWISH BANQUIEAS

It is not possible to separate finances of politics, nor the debtor of his debtcier. Every indebted state tends to fall under the domination of the Jews, and especially of the major bankers, masters of the market. The souVerains and statesmen must count with them. Not only do they owe them personal considerations: Israelite power, the naIsraelite tradition, which these bankers represent, wants something else; she intends to advance, conto seek and to reign.

undoubtedly, this situation involves in

d
E Bi
i
j

E
i
m
; i Eg
neither
p
F
HAS
I " (|
i:
W
J
L TS
| The
(|
| a
r |
YOU
HAS
=i
E
F
i
||
|
E

=. EL -mi em < eg En a rep a Re pat 2 mins EP EE Aa ee SRE to CI NE TEE

TE E a E Æ
re ie EP

DPF SE The a;

roc der je mr a.
THE

+
z pry ar aF a EE La
E

3 = re
CRETE Fe + Se

The different countries vary greatly in degree. a strongly constituted power, there an aristo- energetic cracy, elsewhere the rigid habits- orderliness and the commercial spirit of the population, will put up a healthy resistance to silence the invasion and will contain it within tolerable limits. But, in other countries, all possible causes, the flaws of the national character. the versatility of politics, unrest, revolutions, chimerical enterprises, corruption of ideas, the inadequacy of public figures, lim- The morality of the parties will accumulate. to hasten and spread the invasion.

So what kind of show will the nation offer? We'll see. They will look for the statesman and they will not find him. No. On the other hand, the aristocracy of capitalists The Jews will raise their lofty peaks to the heavens. One could even say that there is a correlation perfect between the disappearance of men of the state and the supremacy of Jewish bankers. There where these begin to dominate, one can predicting the imminent disappearance of men of the State, and, where the power of the Bank Jewish identity is declining, where public opinion envelops it of its clarity, while awaiting Justice's decision.

=- = CUS CONS ME COS -eee = O ee E e ë ooo ë ë e

strikes, the eclipse of political genius affects certain training at its end.

There are slopes that are difficult to climb. For to free himself from the yoke of the Jewish Bank, he is It is essential that a revolution takes place in minds and extracts paradoxes from them terés, of these paradoxes which, borrowing some-that thing in truth, in outrageous usurpationthe name.

Undoubtedly, it is useful for a state to have... credit, but it is useless for him to have debts. [I]
It is still true that some debts respond to productive expenditures. The State, by contractor, behaves like a merchant who borrows to expand his business. But, no more than this one, he must never lose from the perspective of the profit-expense ratio, and, all things considered, its operations

= = CES TO CREATE" HN CORNE | 2 mu DO RER “ON CNE = E = = 2: RENE COS CO OCR CONNUS E CES SE

loan agreements are governed by the same principles.
cipes. To incur a debt without paying it off.
extinction within a relative time frame restricted ment, it's like sliding down the slope of de-disorder; and — let us not forget! — in ma-financial crisis, the wound that is opening today
dhui will become, in a few years, a bottomless pit.

To refute each idea one by one sophistry by means of which the system of Debt has been recommended; it would be necessary to long pages. Thus, the debt was surrounded The French public basked in a halo of glory. London bankers, the Jews of Bombay, the Armenians of Constantinople, subscribing on the same day, with the same eagerness, to A large French loan, what an impressive fact! What universal confidence! it was said and printed; and foreign flattery has not were the least enthusiastic. If there is anything there Greatness, it is very sad; France travaliant for the capitalists of both hemispheres, obliged to collect each year from the best of his taxes a sum efiroyaable to pay the interest on his debt, and perhaps to be forever powerless to repay it Capital, if this isn't a disgrace, it isn't no longer a source of pride. One can, as the Jews, boasting of being the creditor of the the whole world, but to boast of being its debthe author, it is, by an incredible aberration, conto melt the labor and torments of the slave with the security and enjoyments of the master.

This French people, congratulating themselves on having the qualities of a loyal, honest debtor, that his Creditors value and who works for them: And he's surprised that people are looking at him in the universe. like a breed of flycatchers made for to be eternally duped, like the cow Milk from exploiters and swindlers!

When the Jewish banker takes a walk in the campaign and that, from his crew, he contemple in the middle of the fields the peasant penislightly bent, he never fails to...

shouting, overjoyed: "What a hardworking people!"

He admires the French economy and the spirit of e-French language. He absolutely has the right! The tra-French valley, it is he who collects the tithe:
As for savings, how many times did he and his Didn't Parells pass them through their cash registers through financial sleight of hand candle!

Such is the confusion of ideas that the SVS-
The term "debt" has been erected into a political force.
Tick. It was claimed to be found in the diffusion public debt securities, a guarantee of Government stability. Wouldn't it be more It's simply a matter of saying that any indebted state weakens and becomes less able to repel an inya-Foreign sion? The conqueror, if he is skillful, will never fail to maintain the debt, except.
of course, to leave it to the sole responsibility of the conquered country itself. To ask such a person country a desperate struggle like that of the France against the English invasion in the 14th and X centuries, that's hardly knowing the faj-eternal wounds of human nature.

But of all these sophisms, the most disastrous perhaps it was an exaggeration of the economic idea mic. Certainly, public wealth has a of great importance; but she is not alone, she That's not all. It is a considerable force.
not a primary and sole objective. That is true.
for France more than for any other nation.
France, an industrial and commercial power, will hold honorably takes its place alongside England, from Northern Germany, from the United States; she will have lost its primacy in the universe, The sys- The term "excessive debt" has had the effect of ielet to launch France at full speed in this path and depress the characteristics accordingly lands and souls. Instead of overworking the pro- In terms of economic development, it would have been better to strengthen- some of the basics of education French morality: the horror of debt, of Unnecessary spending, ill-gotten gains and of those who possess them (1).

(1) The horror of ill-gotten wealth was

s

LG ISRAELITE POLICY

—

If that had been done, there would be today fewer poor and marginalized people, and the poorly-happy, whose savings have gone to suffer from government borrowing corrupt and fraudulent companies would enjoy one of the characteristic traits of the Romans. Poiybe highlights in these terms the difference between them and the Carthaginian Semites:

"The means the Romans used to increasing their assets is even more legitimate than those of the Carthaginians. Among them, However one becomes wealthy, one does not is never blamed; among the Romans, nothing is more shameful than allowing oneself to be corrupted by the gifts, and to amass wealth through evil ways. As much as they value legitimate wealth acquired skills, they abhor those that are acquired by others, just as much as they abhor those that are acquired by others.

procured by unjust means. Among the Car-In Thasin, positions of power are bought through acts of generosity.
and gifts; among the Romans, this is a crime capital. Also, like the rewards offered virtue differs between the two people, it is not surprising that the ways for
"To achieve this, they may be different." (Polybius, History)
(General of the Roman Republic, I, VI.)

= CR —= im -a IEE z E eee e EE rt

O NS E o = = — a

at least of decent means, which they have lost to kissing a ghost.

In any case, the public debt is today a key factor in politics French, and the leading figures at the Bank have the
the right to deal as an equal with anyone
What a mess! If they don't...
Exactly the law, we can't fool them either.
and the slightest discontent would make them formidable. In just a few days, a drop in The French government would warn the government to return to duty, and he, he would not repeat the lesson. Moreover, the audience joins in.
would be for the bankers; hasn't he fallen, this public, to the point of making the Stock Exchange the appresupreme and infallible witness of the acts of Government?

Moreover, the condition of the indebted state is,
It's quite simple. It has, within its walls, a sovereign to which, at every moment, he must fear
To displease, this sovereign undoubtedly uses, in embarrassment-

ral, of his power with prudence; he does not act

has

=: mm = = a ns = ==

= == mg ==

that appropriate and when its interest requires it; but He is always on the lookout, he knows everything.
4. He needs to know; he follows Cabi-'s advice.
clear, as if he were attending or as if he were there had a telephone mouth. What he knew The best thing is that they talk about him with a respectful fear.

In general, it is not beholden to a government determined nement. The power of gold has,
In this respect, some resemblance to the spiritual power: she aspires to the same universality, it soars above nations; everything must depend on gel, and it must not depend on no one's right. And gold is right: the luxury of court, the prodigality of the nobles, the wastefulness democratic: isn't all disorder equalexploitable, also dependent on Intelligent wear and tear?

AALY

DOMINATION OF JEWISH BANKERS OVER MEN POLITICS

The intervention of Jewish finance in the Government can occur in a way more precise and more direct. It suffices to assume a man or a party that has risen to power, with his support to a dominant situation. The bankers those who commissioned it would not be satisfied not obviously to influence the policy from afar tick. They would need, in various forms, the sharing of power and the management of affairs.

Or they would see their creatures invade the highlands functions and ministries are becoming Semiticized.

= m

= -im ù ET am p FEET me so mm] AND

-ii

ME

In
... D
"ps

ISRAELITE POLICY
would see these banker memes pushing towards expensive companies, covered in cou-their grandiose, but having the real aim of
to provide them with a vast field for speculation.

An immense and sudden development im-awarded for public works across the entire surface
a large country would provide an example characteristic: government loans, company formations, share issuances and
of bonds, sponsorships, manipulations, etc.
What can't one do with a Jewish address?
to get out of the first line of public works

pa-
before all a credulous and enthusiastic people #
And if someone knows how to pull rain from a bag-gentlemen mills, these are the Jews in general and Jewish bankers in particular. When the public works, undertaken on a scale extravagant, will have collapsed the finances, at Israel will certainly have traded its lean years for something better.
for fat cows,

This action by Jewish bankers on the poliwhich, moreover, can present itself under a

-ee © Es © E = = = — = = = m E ~= m = m BE © a infinite aspects. Nothing prevents us from conce-See the following hypothesis: A union of Jewish bankers are masters of secrets, few-to be even of the will of the public man leading; they know (and their incentives don't are not foreign) than a military expedition silence will soon take place and will result, in the form from protectorate to near-annexation; the debt of the annexed state will be guaranteed by the protecting state; it is understood that this will be the

The first consecration of the conquest. What of more natural than picking them up in advance, on the market, the stocks devalued? Then when the events-the situation will have taken shape, that the expedition.
begun under the guise of a comedy, will be once irrevocably committed, it will not be no less natural to feign surprise and deny

The participation of the celebrated friend was very high,
the beloved statesman, to the company, of him lend even words of disapproval or formal disavowals.

The absolute domination of Jewish bankers 10

"EEr ET EE Æ REP TE I re

on the politician whose career is a very remarkable fact. Get man feels deep in his soul that he... owes everything and it belongs to them. Also, don't He never even thinks of breaking the knot, and it looks like that the concern of giving Jews signs of trust and affection obsess him continually; he places them near him, their book reveals their most intimate secrets, the pre-It applies to everyone. It's gotten to the point where one wonders if he is not Jewish himself, if he does not obey
Some hidden hereditary affinity. No, it It is not, and it is not recognition the only thing that acts within him. This confessed complacencyan inexhaustible glean that can only be compared to the submission of the creature to its creator theorist is, deep down, filled with fear. When the Jews help a man emerge from nothingness, they do it in such a way that he remains chained to them for life. The pact made with them resembles a pact with hell: it can no longer be broken:

We will be able to see this man, surrounded by a

-um Er = = i Í 08 = m = i = == J EF mu, = z = = is E pm mm ee

a group of Jewish bankers, taking sides with them against another group of Jewish bankers;
for Israel lives in discord as in its element. People hate each other there, they tear each other apart in beautiful ways.
teeth, they are constantly plotting against each other the other and hatred of the foreigner alone brings him back the union. The astonishing aptitude of Jerusalem ancient to assimilate the deranged and the evil-Makers from all the surrounding regions
Is she somehow responsible for this chronic condition?

nique of division within Judaism (1)°

(1) Nam per vicacissimus quisque illuc perfuge-rat, eoque seditiosius agebant. (Tacitus, History, MON CR XIT.)

"For if there were somewhere a determined scoundrelundermined, he was sure to find asylum in Jerusalem;
Thus, the Jews were plagued by discord.
(Translated by Nisard.)

The great historian, who had such extensive knowledge exacia of the Roman universe, thus qualifies the he teterrimam gentem. The reader will translate. (74.,

The Jewish historian Josephus, for his part, did o repeated confessions regarding the multiplicity of crimes Jerusalem. (See especially the Jewish War) against the Romans, Ch. XXIV.)

In any case, if ever the Israeli domination-lite was definitively established on the world, it would be terribly divided: envy and anger would agitate him without truce or respite, and the Jews would force the rest of humanity to to immolate themselves over their furious rivalries.

One of the most successful operations praticked by the Jewish Bank in the area Politics consists of organizing storms alarms. There is no better way to to make substantial profits on the Stock Exchange. These Storms are conducted with an infinite art. When a favorable opportunity arises, it is seized on the fly. Newspapers in the pay of the bankers They spread disturbing rumors. Then the events unfold. precise, military movements, combinations diplomatic negotiations, the threatening declarations cantes enter the scene; the Jewish press retainstit of warlike prophecies and sounds the charge. Already, under these redoubled efforts, the The stock market is volatile, prices are falling, the

The public is disturbed. Suddenly, a terrible news report.

It all falls apart, everything is lost... A tremendous drop strikes all values, and superb is the harvest; the Promised Land had none more beautiful. A few days later we'll be talking about maneuvers, fabricated dispatches; one will dare even invoking the laws that repress these Fraud. Laws! What nonsense! Imaginei-on a (late of the Seals ordering of pour-What happens in such a case? It would be broken as glass and would learn the hard way to think on the princes of finance and on the canvases spider.

Jewish finance directs these operations with all the more successful because she uses her international resources. It acts simultaneouslyborn in various countries. In Vienna as in In Paris, she is making a march towards the same goal army of lies; the big article to sensationtion of the Viennese newspaper and the terri- dispatch

London's fiasco, which is shaking up the Stock Exchange
From Paris, they link up like two maneuvers convergent under which reason can-10,

SET OF PEERS L =
J1
z

E eai OO CS arr ere paper =
m

Congolese, lost, overwhelmed, she can no longer resist and... takes her prisoner. The victorious banker... gives freedom a few days later, not without
to have made him pay a heavy ransom.

The politician who rose through the ranks Jewish quiers are exposed to drinking from the cup of repentance. Sometimes founder of a society ve-He sees a responsibility bearing down on his head.
unexpected bility; sometimes deluded by hopes deceptive, he sees them vanish, leaving behind-Behind them lay an unpleasant reality, twenty or thirty thousand francs in banknotes subscribed to at the ban-Quier, in representation of his advances. Finally, Whatever he does, and even if he were their idol, the man policy that owes its car- to Jewish bankers
the rière would do well to expect cruel experiments things. If necessary, a mysterious disregard for the environment in which he will find himself surrounded teaches himdra quon ne reçu rien deux impunité.
Heaven returns a hundredfold what is given to it:
But Hell demands a hundredfold what it lends.

XAV

INFLUENCE OF ISRAELITE FINANCE ON PUBLIC MORALITY

That Jewish finance exerts an influence considerable moral obligation, the fact is certain, and it It is not difficult to specify its nature.

Society depends, in fact, on what it admires her. Any grandeur that overwhelms her She traces the path; she takes it as a model and aims to limit. If this magnitude is based superior virtues and feelings sublime, the whole of society rises. If, On the contrary, its foundations are cunning and Society does not view fraud without to suffer, in one's moral strength, a depression deep.

The heroism of the warrior, the labors of the scholar, the profound selflessness of the great statesman shed light on the society that possesses them. The more she understands, the more she... She is surrounded by respect the more she grows up. It is no less ennobled when it renders ho- a magician of modest virtues, of integrity, of the benevolence, charitable devotion. Or rather, from one end of the chain to the other In moral terms, everything is connected and forms a single whole: a society truly great does not revere the incor- the integrity of the upright magistrate and the zeal of the a selfless doctor, whom she does not admire the neck- the rage of his heroes.

The reign of Jewish finance does not destroy absolutely these high aspirations, but he shakes. A new sun rises on the horizon.

before which moral ideas pale.
All of them become more or less uncertain.

and some even invisible. To their instead, a frenzy of Semitic imitation invades minds and produces a general abasement, Easy to explain. When money became the ultimate center of attraction, which imposes itself on everyone as the supreme goal of existence, it inevitably penetrates even to the the deepest depths of social being. In a

In such a world, passions and vocations are They shrink, the politician looks like a Businessman, science advertises,
Art falls under the umbrella of commerce and professions.
liberal degenerate into exploitations of an honest-With questionable clarity, they repudiate their old traditions with a joyful cynicism, and the men they provide to public life they behave like schemers in a hurry to get outrichir.

However, if there is a principle in Arvenne society-
The sacred principle is that money should never be there to hold first place. As soon as she misunderstands him-is born, she is no longer herself, and this profanity
A nation's foundations never go unpunished.

It is not the worship of money that made the orands men of ancient Greece el Roman, and it is not this cult either which made France. Certainly, it would be childish to to hold Jewish finance responsible for all the shortcomings of the time, but she has her part, and France, kneeling before the Calf.
can rightly consider herself fallen from his most beautiful heritage, the love of the noble and du gran,

BOOK FOUR

WITHIN POLITICAL PARTIES

THE JEWS

WITHIN POLITICAL PARTIES

AX VI

HOW JEWS ARE INVOLVED IN PARTIES POLITICS

THE STATE OF SUGGESTION

There has been previous reference to a A remarkable characteristic of the Israelites: the state of suggestion. This state, which plays an essential role in their political action, deserves a description Special lion.

Israelites, separated from one another,
They speak the same language at the same time.

Not only are their ideas the same, but read that they express them in the same terms, with the same accent, and, we can even add-third time, with the same gesture. Who heard one of them? He heard them all. And more, their opinions. they present exactly the same phases, they they go through the same nuances, they beat in retirement or changing on the same day, at the same time.

The political demonstrations of the Israelites are no less distinguished by their appearance precise and decisive, where the Aryan gropes, the Jewish decision. Would the Israelites be, in Politics, exempt from thinking? Thinking, at their home, it instantly leads to a A fixed idea? Or perhaps they wouldn't receive it. their preconceived ideas of a brain center common and invisible?

Upon examination, it is difficult to escape this last hypothesis; any clear observer-seeing, skilled at probing the underbelly of the pen-will be forced to reach this conclusion:

that the Israelites should unite with one another

-= m Á ë o ë == me = r = m = = ā ; = CT EE of Er + == = = o

others by the same focus of innervation, in In other words, that the state of suggestion to dis-tact in relation to one another is a the foundations of their mental life.

In some, the more richly gifted will more richly deranged, these communications reach a frightening level of activity. Their heads are constantly boiling under the linen-influence of a fermentation that affects the Delirium. All the passions of the Israelite world come to resonate within them, and, in their voices, one thinks one hears the Abyss rumbling, as In their eyes, you can see the flames glowing. What is most striking about these beings is the precision and universality of the inspiration suggested gestures. A telephone would speak to them and their would send the watchword from afar, that their language would be neither more precise nor better appropriate to the ambitions of a united Israel Versel.

How do these communications take place? Do they occur through revelations?

n Toa - Pe Pons © me ces — = = sudden, through vivid illuminations and invrantes? Or by voices of a clarity Sensational? There's a problem here that needs scrutinizing. and a first-rate field of exploration for pathologists; they would do well not to not to disdain medieval studies too much, easy to translate into scientific language molast. In all likelihood, these communications are most commonly carried out by unconscious bursts; but often Strange phenomena betray a job intense neuropathic. Upon examining many Israelite in the morning, one can imagine the agitation of the night and the kind of meeting he had, by way of suggestion, with his coreligionists (1). In any case, the suggestive property is of a major importance in the policy of Jews. It allows them to join a party with the advantage of a prodigious unity of action

(1) These suggestive nocturnal storms have been studied diċs in the Middle Ages under another name.

tion and with the ascendancy of an extraordinary language Dinner decided. Their explosive confidence stimulates prophetic intuition and imposes on Orand number. Very few detect neurosis, and far fewer suspect, behind the apparent brain life, another brain life

a brale full of mysteries and darkness.

A AV LE

ROLE OF JEWS IN THE PAATIS

Having joined a party as a compact group, the Jews behave very skillfully there to to establish their influence. They have nothing more eager to embrace all its passions and to profess all of its ideas. They erect them in absolute truths, cover with sarcasm those who impose restrictions on it, detlink
the party figures, slander with fury attack the men of the opposing parties and launch the daily motto with arrogance dogmatic and contemptuous. Gom-

How could one not listen to them? The party was languishing

PERS sen M to

RE. mpm Sa 2 EE. z

E i Hideki:

Perhaps he lacked faith in himself.
some grumpy people wanted to play the game there role of moderators; in its leaders, he foresawthere were worrying gaps: here he sensed a an incomplete man, a vulgar, ambitious man, Finally, the wisest men would go just-that admitting the need for a lengthy elaboration a ration to purify ideas and form the men.

The Semitic intervention acted promptly on the party like an exciting drug and the frees him from his doubts. He begins to believe in himself.
even and convinces himself that the country belongs to him.
Aren't his ideas the encyclopedia of the Political wisdom? Aren't its leaders...?
Huge men? The Jewish press he told him to his heart's content. So he soon began to lookder those who provide these illusions like his flower and its quintessence. To the Jews the pre-First places and the spoils. We
They are encountered everywhere, they clog up the reception areas official statements, nomination lists, the ne nl ER. OCR M © mm © 1- e mn © = = il à Sn extra-parliamentary commissions. The party seems to live only through them and no longer conquering only for themselves. It seems like they're only interested in it. are the head, that his victory is due only to their efforts, that they pulled it from nothingness and that they will carry it tent on their shoulders.

= = =

To a certain extent, this opinion is founded. Entrepreneurship and quackery Jews played a significant role in the successes too hasty of the party. They made a propagandalarge active and their hymns of admiration have brought to the forefront the man whose, With their business acumen, they discerned Pavenir. Besides, they occupied the stage without interruption and in 4 thousand ways make them indispensable. Big and small, svices, newspaper foundation, organization of committees, advances of money, the party ad innumerous obligations; and they did nothing and given that, with good reason, the Israeli politician proceeding, like his usurer father, with the logic of an interest table. Also, with with the help of the plot, this Semitic plot, mobile like the wave and devouring like the fire, the huge profits from the victory flow into their hands. Of course, all the favors are due to their rare merit: is not an Israelite not double or triple that of another man, A masterpiece of nature and education?

= ae ln = + RRSP = = = me = me = = mi ES EE

+
+ %

When the party, having entered its period of des-descending, marching by decrees to its ruin, the

The Israelites displayed no less zeal there.
It is no longer about invading, but about not being evicted. Now, for the Israelite, giving back is the thing abomination above all others, and he who contraint, the last of the monsters. That's why-which he defends himself with furious obstinacy.
Then we hear the outbursts of insults, the torrents of insults, bitter calumnies, exciopen positions to extreme measures and criminal means. The Jewish press, like a volcano erupting, spewing flames and crammp NRA a -emml = m am ES OE = > meme me om em RS E = m

The subject matter. Sometimes, when reading his articles, we imagine ourselves using them vipers at the witches' sabbath, subjected to a horrible overdemonic excitement.

What bitter reflections must be made?
the men of this party, those who have believed he would do wonders by accepting the COMPETITION Jews and giving them the first Places! "It's the Jews who are destroying us," they finally tell themselves. But when they recognize-He senses the cause of the evil, but it is too late to stop it.
to bring about a remedy. The party that rises with help of Israelite perishes by the Israelite; sooner or later, i] succumbs under public disapproval and his fall, like any Israelite fall, is a nameless collapse (1).

(1) Chapter XXX will explain further Why do the Israelites lose the parties they lead.

AXVIII

HOW JEWS CIRCUMVENT MEN
POLITICS

THE FLATTERIE

Everywhere, but especially in France, the parties can do nothing without a head that understands them.
order. The Jews know this; therefore they put all their efforts were focused on seizing the man called has this role or is capable of playing it. For the circ-to suit her, to capture her heart, to dominate her mind, to help him identify his ambition with their interests and persuade him that he has in them his his most trusted friends, to finally bind him to them by indissoluble chains, their kind surpasses and rises to prodigies.

Their strategy can be reduced to three means they are simultaneously implementing:

1. FLATTERY. — The Jew, born a flatterer, has, without having learned them, all the arts of flattery His disposition and ability to make all the strings. He excels at affectionate flattery.
as in admiring flattery. Not only-11 admires a man, but he loves him: he
It tickles his vanity and he knows at the same time to speak directly to her heart. This admirable-Read, coupled with a deep affection, is of a irresistible effect; one would think one was hearing the harmonica:
denial of respect and the whisper of devotion.

An artist to the core, flattery
Jewish women abound in exquisite details and caresses.

ingenious; she has seductive smiles, Charming surprises, lies inimitable and a genius for discovery that does not Never tires, the accuracy of a thought like the unexpectedness of a sudden outburst, originality of an expression such as the subtlety of a remark-that, like high reason, infallible memory-accessible, she discovers, understands, celebrates, multi-Fold, garland everything. Similar to drapery wet with the ancient statuary, it applies delicately to the whole being and surrounds it in every sense of a delightful deception. A less of a strong character or a clear-

With her experienced clairvoyance, she is irresistible.

It is all the more blinding because, being cautious and Careful about appearances, she knows not to contradict. The Israelite flatterer flatters a man even far from him; out of his presence, his admiration is only warmer, more convinced. Did he have any doubts about the sincerity of the words addressed to him in his face, his common sense suggested to him that he
We have to lower our expectations; he couldn't refuse his heart to the ardent affection that exalts its me-rituals and its reputation grew.

Would it, however, be so difficult to penetrate?
within the intricacies of this flattery, to glimpse,

TE Ae age:
| =i" ouch Imm- Jame i ee m zi hir

a ES ES TS | EP ne — =m e = mms = Å T = E -=

behind the enthusiastic friendship, the deceitful... macuante? If, listening closely, one were to examine the inflections of the voice and that which we analyze the sounds, as if one were untangling the work of the Falsehood! As if one could hear the voice... gather to produce low notes, vi-expressions of sympathy, or the little flute of men-Think about preparing your modulations! And don't-
He cannot ignore the Jew, so as not to know that,
In his culture, the flatterer is the brother of slander.
theorist, that flattery and insolence are only the two sides of his double face

At every stage of their career, but especially-politicians, right from the start, are very susceptible to Jewish flattery. Let's be It features an ambitious individual whose future is taking shape, but who has not yet taken possession of his destiny. If, in this phase where he struggles against the last shadows of darkness and maybe-to be against one's own indecision, flattery
A Jewish woman, coming to meet him, told him that he was An extraordinary man, she is welcomed

CR and mn) a EE = aoa å = mma = m: Es a UE D 2 = = mx sis = oi = CE z

E mm cn © l mn © mile © cl Re =.= =< like a revelation from heaven. The joy of possessing to seduce a group of enthusiastic admirers ridding him of his uncertainties, 1 liter rises to a magnificent idea of himself and a con-Bold confidence invigorates all his actions. Desor-

But he marches boldly towards the goal, he imposes his will. He is captivating. It seems that by crowning him king, the Jews had given him the prestige of a Grandiose charlatanism. Thus established-1l Between them and him, there were perpetual ties. He did not can no longer do without them; Jewish flattery If he were absent, he would cease to be a god and would again-to come, a mere mortal.

If this man has a generous heart, the Jews will undoubtedly try to attach themselves to him by the most seductive deceptions: the simulation of a sincere and passionate friendship. We will see him... to tour young Jewish men sparkling with devotion ment and zeal. Quick to interpret his desirs and to carry out his orders, they will form Around him a sacred battalion. Continual-They will sing his praises on the lyre enthusiasm. And, if he falls ill, they will have affectionate concerns, tender-heart, public figures! And do not betray the France to the Jews because they pretend to be of you to like !

XXIX

ADVERTISING — MONEY SERVICES

99 ADVERTISEMENT. — Daughter of lies like Flattery and advertising are among the foundations of Israelite greatness. The genius of advertising seems even more special to the Israelites than that of flattery; they certainly have it brought to an ideal degree of perfection.

As practiced by the Israelites, the re-Claiming is a prodigious art of seizing the thought through the eyes and ears, subjugating-to overwhelm reason with noise, to induce vertigo upon reflection, a shimmering light disturbs her and the dazed,

= EG
i OF AND in
= “to!
< DEL. £ = P =, 0]
£ US

20 ISRAELITE POLICY

Noisy and mobile, Jewish advertising...
It is governed, in reality, by principles that...
These principles can be reduced to three:
the advertisement must ring out with a re-thrilling, she needs to repeat the blow on suddenly and tirelessly, she must It spreads everywhere. As for its means and instruments, the diversity is such that it is not Don't even think about listing them; each pro-
The Jewish federation has its own: the financier, the merchant, the doctor each owe him their greatest successes and the best part of the gold that they gather themselves (1).

From the very first contact with the Israelites,
The ambitious politician discerns this power.
He can more or less guess that it's of poor quality.
But it is so pleasant to be praised, to pro-

(1) See in Joshua (ch. vr) the capture of Jericho.
Loret, the money flows in such quantity into the hands of Israel, thanks to the miracles of advertising, of which the capture of Jericho is the symbol, that we consecrate to the Eternal.

to gain ground in public opinion, to hear his name on everyone's lips, to become a top-tier celebrity. Then, the Israelite advertising will do the work of years; he will not have to exhaust himself in efforts exhausting, gnawing at one's soul in the torment of The waiting, the despair of a future that slips away like a mirage, it vanishes only to be reborn.
It is reborn only to vanish. How can one resist the temptation, if he does not possess a superhuman virtue?

We could probably tell him: "Take be careful about the commitments you are going to make.
to pull. Also, beware of premature successes.
killed. The difficult years you dread are perhaps necessary to mature or even reason and temper your character. You will arrive-You'll see later, but you'll arrive fully equipped.
and without bearing the stigma of advertising.
Jewish.

Would he heed these warnings? According to all In probability, it would be too late, the vapors heady flattery would have already done

=— E = ES UE EA z E = — m © © = on Re UE mm = CO DES NE © | DRE CSS CN CORRE = © s S CU CS -J com mms em = TE ë - es = -m = |

dreams of domination passing before her eyes

has

tion, and these dreams, he would see them walking at their realization. Under the influence of Jewish advertising, his reputation would grow like a balloon that swells; and he, amazed, would consider this proclaims like the trumpet of truth and like the providence of great men.

Moreover, she is so ingenious at perceiving it for him= Suader! Not only does she forget nothing, but Everything she touches, she adorns and transforms into...
Morphosis. Eloquence, character, genius, she
He adorns his man with all the divine attributes.
He climbs rapidly, he can no longer see the ground...
The descent and deflation S will take place even faster.

3. MONEY SERVICES. — Flattery and advertising forms two chains that are difficult to break ser; money services add to this a third, even more solid one; for the Jews are too experienced not to forge it in accordance with all the rules of the art.

em = J Í OEE CONS E DS D CDS E èë ëE ë O CN E ë E En [= ZE CEE 2 E ë o E CES E èë ë ë E CONS EE EE © EEE CENT o

Funds are needed to create a newspaper; the Jewish capitalists are making the necessary advances.
The expenses of an election must be covered;
The Jewish man has money. He needs to live comfortably while waiting for power;
His needs are anticipated and met.

Also, the protégé of the Jews looks at them-1l like his dearest friends, much better, like brothers. He displays them, flaunts them with bones-temptation, his intimacy with them, and the assault of to be able to do so, their book is all the best heart, from finance to diplomacy. Governing with the Jews, by the Jews, and for the Jews, seems to be the first article of his program. Their despair will be the consolation of his fall and he will die in their arms.

man and woman

E
= 2 e m to Pi i kaa

= ne EEE TE

=
Be Eeee e P mem png ee SHAME EE

TO TO TO

HOW JEWS LOSE MEN AND POLITICAL PARTIES

Why do the Jews invariably lose? the men and the parties they dominate?

We could replace this question with the following: here: How could they not lose them? For, If they didn't lose them, the effects wouldn't respond. They would be more concerned with the causes, the laws of society and human intelligence would be disrupted-SEES.

The Jews are losing the politician they dominate:

Because this man is necessarily 12

A = Da
E æ Te
LE EE =

= =
ms

pd m T

i

pF Es = + = Pi m Thep TM Pa a es 5

incomplete, of an inferior nature, open to unhealthy influences. Gifted with sound judgment.
Tound, impervious to flattery, incorruptible,
He would never have allowed himself to be swayed by them.
and the Jews, abhorring those who know them,
would not have become his admirers.

Because, even if he were capable of becoming a a statesman worthy of the name, the man fallen into the hands of the Jews prefers irresistible eerily, the Semitic prestige is juxtaposed with realities severe aspects of Aryan genius. Instead of developing His thinking cultivates the arts of deception.
the appealing attraction, the captivating self-assurance,
the charlatanism of irony; he indulges in ma-from the works of the plot to the practices of staging on stage, with theatrical effects, to the detriment serious and true; finally, drunk on incense and From flattery, he indulges in a delicious verse.
stem and ends up believing itself to be a being of a species transcendent.

Because all political greatness, including Jaifs are the artisans who carry within them a

The death knell. Public reason, seduced, is not removed. It has, for this reason, inaccessible depths where Semitism does not can never reach it. A reactionary movement is brewing there.
lion, there this character that the Israeli press exults to a silent and sorrowful judge. In the middle Cheers, doubts, reflections distressing thoughts permeate consciousness; the smell of The advertising and the negative surroundings are worrying.
men of an independent character distanced themselves the symptoms of a deadly cold manifest, and, through sudden disillusionment, the
The false king of Olympus falls back to earth. Ah! This Arvenne society for which pro- Semitism

She's so contemptuous, she's not so blind!

It does allow Jewish financiers to

She will never allow milking and shearing.

to the Israeli politicians to govern it nor to
He will choose his great men.

The causes that make it so disastrous for men political influence of the Jews acts

even on the parties that fell under their leadership,

=
E gm = s En > Lu
TT e =

Not only are these parties necessarily de-endowed with the essential virtues for a great political party, but accepting the ceremony Jewish, they realize the acquisition is forever Impossible. Under Jewish influence, science government is withering away to make way for arts of decadence, to the petulances of exploits to the schemers, to the unscrupulous coalitions, to the brazen-
The claims of the advertisers. Once launched into this
In this way, political life is now nothing more than a means to an end.
to make a fortune while maintaining appearances, or even without keeping them. Arrived poor and Lean, you come out rich and fat: the scavenger of he Ten years ago he paid off his debts and married off his daughter;
Instead of waiting for the bailiffs to arrive, he cashes in.
coupons. And woe to anyone who would revoke them.
His honesty is doubted! He would be struck down by the Jewish press and derelict in the courts.

Isn't this a fatal necessity? Con-
Is there a party led by Jews where there reigns-How would Roman virtues be understood? How could they souls consumed by the thirst for gold would produce

Are they the miracles of civic devotion?
The Israelite in politics is the merchant in the temple, it's speculation, with its insatiable rapacity, mistress of the thing pu-republic. Now, if there is a sphere where the mercantilism must never penetrate, that is politick. As soon as it gets in, everything dissolves and deteriorates, all the higher ideas of public life is becoming corrupt, all leadership becomes impossible, every noble conviction is subjected to ridicule.

To what degree of degradation has a great nation can then descend! Degenerate beings heartbreaking today to mend the wounds of-hand, sometimes seizing power, sometimes the joint operator, prostituting their in-influence, speculating in companies, speculating at the Stock Exchange, fiddling with suppliers, tra-even including seating and decorations,
This is the show she puts on for herself.
and to the universe. His indignation grows with each Day after day, his anger rumbles. And everywhere, infiltration 12.

Es "Re er

21 ISRAELITE POLICY

The Israeli infiltration is making progress; everywhere this infiltration proceeds methodically, with a view to invading-subsequent acquisitions; each conquest is the preparation of a more considerable one, likewise that each phylloxera colony constitutes a new area of expansion. We can calculate:
mathematically the time when the Governorment and | Administration will be fully Semitized. Jerusalem will take its revenge.
about Rome. But no. Don't be frightened, of only! The party of which the Jews are | soul crumbles in the mire. Do you hear?
the cries of despair, the tears and the creakingments the teeth of

BOOK FIVE

JUDAISM AND FRANCE

zm LE n
z E = = * rzi | :
Tim" of = A s, T
| 1: È I. mp - y aa in "aie ve us e -5 Mim Mg ee] Eimi © me a Ebe e nl a rh = Eu pe 1 I La = ET mm un. M EE Ben 0 nn #2 = pe ME et — "5 mon T l -= = where i= i” F = :
- DS E © pl a ms rm
F = pe ms D = Hi = = = CR spe lm Hs rman mamo m = 5 5 - | = = | | | -
F 7 “sr Dr”; = =r "+ CE] bau m = == = mm = = = +: — =, — aN N on m —. ip = = nm o = me: = m

JUDAISM AND FRANCE

Be ce mm © RE CU 0 “50m

XXXI

HISTORICAL MISSION OF JUDAISM

Ouelle is the historic mission of the JuDaism? What is the historical mission of France and Judaism? What are the must be the relations between France and the Judaism?

Judaism assigns itself a crazy mission and absurd, that of dominating the world, but not of Don't admit it, another one, more real and better suitedsuited to his genius.

This mission consists of acting as an assistant of all invasions. After as before

Er
L
er op SE to RS, OS Re = I p

E and

Es PE
ES E".

D

He faithfully fulfilled the Christian faith.
Co-author of the Persian invasion of Babylon,
a regular accomplice in the Muslim invasions ASile, in Africa, in Europe, servant of the English invasion of France during the war of Gent Ans, now an agent of the invasion German Judaism has been practiced throughout the world.
as an eternal principle of putting oneself on the payroll of all ethnic excesses and their facilitate the routes.

He succeeded all too well. His flexibility cosmopolitan, his espionage skills (1), his His genius for hatred and betrayal led him to be included.

on the front lines during major invasions

(1) Carthaginian Semitism already excelled in the art of espionage. (V. Mommsen, Roman History) Maine, French translation, vol. III, p. 125.)

His army of spies (he even had them in Rome, said Mr. Mommsen, speaking of Hannibal) the kept himself informed of all the enemy's plans.

We also see this in Plutarch (Life of Fabius) that Hannibal had the pretension of influencing public opinion public union in Rome.

historical. If he didn't instigate them all,
They all obtained his help: he didn't
When asked, he hastened to do so.
to offer it, and the invader quickly recognized the immensity of the services that would be available to him renderings.

Nothing could give a more accurate idea the role of Judaism in the invasions that the method of insinuation described in the Bible.
The Israelites, to seize a city.
resorted, as can be seen in the Book of Joshua (ch. 11), to innkeepers who were secretly sheltering. The army outside She thus had spies in the place;
knew where and how she should attack.
Judaism, complicit in an invasion, resembles to these innkeepers; he prepares it, gives it secretly sheltered, he serves as an informant, propage and perpetuates the errors that the invader has an interest in spreading, flatters illusions, lulls to sleep Vigilance, in turn, leads to disastrous decisions.
In short, it renders the services to the invasion most abominable and, alas! most useful,

those of cunning and treachery.

The danger to the people threatened by this travail occulte is due to his ignorance.
Well-informed, knowing what's happening beyond within its borders, not giving in to a childlike trust, nor deceived by protests

attachment issues, he can address them in time.
But woe to the reckless and insolent nations!
ingers! Woe to those who, while in Sus-Knowing evil, they do not know its pro-londeur or do not take time, of a
In a comprehensive manner, the necessary measures are being taken!
The fate of Spain, conquered by the Muslims-mans with the help of the Jews, is reserved for them (1).
History, all too often, simply repeats itself;
and, all too often, his teachings do not They're useless. We only see the fatal slope when when you're at the bottom of the abyss.

---

(1) Gibbon. (History of the Church and the Decay(denture of the Roman Empire, ch, LI.)

Weil. (Geschichte der Chalifen. Mannheim, 1846-62, t, 1°", p.517, 927 and 528.)

Dozy. (History of the Muslims of Spain until-than the conquest of Andalusia by the Almo-greedy. Leiden, 1861-02.)

Mr. Weil, a learned Jewish scholar, could not disguise the active participation of Jews in the Muslim invasionmane in Spain. The capture of Toledo, notably-
The lie was due to their betrayal.

Even before the Muslim invasion, as If he sensed it, Spanish Judaism would have felt... had an ambitious fermentation. He was already meditating to establish Spain as a Jewish state.

"Around the year 674, says Mr. Dozy (vol. II, pp. 27-28) seventeen years before Spain was conquered through the Muslims, they planned an uprising general with their coreligionists on the other side of the Strait, where several Berber tribes practiced. Judaism and where the Jews, exiled from Spain, had found refuge. The revolt was bound to-could burst on several points at once, at the mobile where the Jews from Africa would have landed on the coasts of Spain; but before the appointed time

= cs SN PANNE PEL vou ue F

me y
=

ne oi me Le ee pae,

n
Era e T pmp

a pole a N eee| n T TF Fu +

For the execution, the government was notified of the conspiracy. King Egica immediately took action dictated by necessity; then, having con-He convened a council in Toledo, he informed his guides spiritual and temporal culpable projects of Jews, and begged them to severely punish this race Damned. After hearing the depositions of some Israelites, from which it followed that the conspiracy aimed at nothing less than making Spain a Jewish state, the bishops, trembling with anger and indignity, condemned all Jews to lose their property and their freedom.

If Jewish hopes were not fulfilled They were not entirely disappointed either. Judaism, under Arab domination and Berber, had a period of prosperity in Spain- unparalleled rarity. Granada was called the city of Jews: and, for a succession of years, under the reigns of the Habous and Badis kings, Judaism, by the hands of Samuel-ha-Levi, there was the direction absolute control of public affairs

Mr. Dozy (vol. IV, p. 35) thus paints a portrait of this statesman:

"As a statesman, he combined a spirit lively and lucid, a firm character and prudence

Blackberry

= =e oO CRU M CES ARS CNE © EN © En © sn er D a == = Ë ES. T om mo pan camm | = gr me us = bi } consumed. Ordinarily — a precious quality among a diplomat — he spoke little and thought a lot. He took advantage of every circumstance with a wonderful skill. He knew the character and the passions of men, and the means of... dominated by their vices. Moreover, he was a man of the world. In the magnificent halls of Pathambra, he appeared so perfectly at ease One would have thought he was born into luxury. No one spoke with such elegance and skill, never ma-

He denied flattery better, knew better with art affectionate or familiar tone in speech, leadingnant by his eloquence or persuasil by his arguments-

ments. TEL

Modern Judaism fondly remembersthis era and seems to exaggerate its splendors difficulties, especially from an intellectual point of view. In all In this case, these memories and that of his expulsion to 16th century engraved in his heart a hatred deadly for Christian Spain. We have seen this hatred erupted during the Caroline Islands affair. The German Jewish press wrote articles Horrible. Those from the National Zeitung of Berlin, translated into Spanish, made the blood boil venerable nation, thankfully. The great man that Germany has at its head does not intend to be the insa tool of Judaism; he did not allow himself to be led astray to a senseless war, and, to the disappointment of the Jews, protita seized the opportunity to give the man admitted rable who occupies the papal throne a brand radiant with respect.

SAAL

HISTORICAL MISSION OF FRANCE ON THE OTHER SIDE OF SEMITISM

'between France and Judaism, or, more generally, between France and the Semiism, there exists an irreconcilable antagonism. France occupies, in modern Europe, the summit of the Greco-Latin world, that is to say of everything that is most incompatible with the Semitism. In this respect, it is the continuumnuatrice of ancient Greece and Rome.

Greece was formed through repression.

(1) See the Greek History, by Ernest Curtius (French translation by MA Bouché-Leclercq), vol. 1°", p. 48 et seq.:

“In general,” said the German historian, “the tribes of Phoenician Semitism (1). Rome owes Empire universal to its death Guel with Semitism Carthaginians (1). France, finally, could not not to remove from its history its struggles against

Semitism, without erasing its most prominent pages

related, closely or remotely, to the Greeks were very keenly aware of racial diversity and mounted would harbor a deep antipathy for the Phenriciens, which were reported throughout the Archipelago like the perpetrators of violence and lies, Being related to them was regarded as a stain, and Herodotus is bitterly reproached for ato see dared to give Greek families anPhoenician censers.

Primitive Greece, as seen in HeRodote (Clio), has suffered many kidnappings of young girls and young men by the Phoenicians The ciens, who were the pimps of the Orient. The Semitism continues the same industry. Could it be? no need to open in Paris, London, Vienna, Saint-

Pelersburg, Warsaw, Bucharest, Constantinople,
New York, etc., a vast inquiry into the p'oxen-Jewish ism?

(1) Polybius. Book I, chapter XIV.

important and without ceasing to understand each other herself.

If, in the 16th century, France had not refueled the Muslim invasion, including Judaism everywhere the partner was becoming, the destinies of The universe would have been changed. Semitism, victorious at Poitiers, would have extended his domination on the rest of Europe and Euro- civilization European, this civilization so varied, so rich, which, from century to century, has new flowering-sounds, where each nation, Italy, France, England, Germany, has its place and its uloire, would have been stifled in her cradle, and the Muslim nervousness, coupled with Judaism, would have taken his place.

At the end of the 11th century, France was beginning to again, through a bold initiative, at the head of the anti-Asian struggle. It is to French thought-Chinese, as with French courage, which is principal-mainly due to the prodigious movement of Crusades, a movement that repositioned France, eclipsed for a time by the German Empire.

at the forefront of European nations.
It would be a national impiety to diminish these orange souvenirs.

But Semitism never rests.
Attacked in Asia, he had done in Europe, by skillful propaganda, invisible progress.

One hundred years after the First Crusade, in the south of France, under the influence of Jewish and Muslim, had become Semitic. The horthis terrible scourge of magic, this queen of degenerates cerebral neuropathies, exerted its influence everywhere ravages. The very genius of France was threatened; for, given over to greed and lies, France does not exist in hatred or revenge. It would be more, it would be a geographical expressionphic, a more or less conscious political forceastounding, but we wouldn't be talking about her anymore with love. It was necessary, under penalty of falling from grace, that she reacts. The great and terrible drama of war Albi was thus one of the phases of this eternal struggle against Semitism, which seems one of the foundations of historical destiny,

A century had barely passed when a newThe old struggle was beginning. Judaism, with its invasive abilities, had managed to do the conquest of France; the properties notwere in the hands of the Jews en masse; the nobles, interested in their fraudulent speculations duleuses, favoured them: their abuses, Their usury and their crimes remained unpunished: already, directly or indirectly, they seemwere in power, and little by little the Government The entire system fell under their control. The reaction was inevitable: it was cruel and Bloody. France no longer remembers it. But the Jew did not forget her: the memories survivors of this terrible struggle are alive in his ime as if they were from yesterday.

Very imprudent are the nations that oublent! Instead of indulging in formulas from 1789. The French would do better to study their story. They would see the scenes withoutolantes, the Jewish women slaughtering their their own children rather than letting them, Chris-aniser (1)... France, chimerical, idealist, has forgiven Judaism; Judaism does not He will never forgive her. A few elite souls will perhaps cleave the abyss. But the Ju-Daism itself, with its eternal passions, Judaism, which has three in its calendar

15.

solemnities to curse victorious Rome Jerusalem (2), is and must remain the enemy of the Hrance: 1l can exploit its protection, it can
He will never cease to seek to dominate her.

ia hair.

(1) Sismondi. (History of the French, vol. IX, pp. 400-101.)

(2) 10 of the month of Tebeth, siege of Jerusalem;
17 of the month of Famuz, capture of the Temple; 9 of the month of Ab, destruction of the Temple.

AA NINH

CENTURIES-OLD HATRED OF JUDAISM FOR FRANCE

France is like that, because of the hatreds of Judaism, a chosen land. Other causes, also historical, further sharpen this hatred. Nowhere has Judaism conceived more ardent hopes and did not see them to move more quickly towards their realization; Nowhere had he experienced greater disappointments.
unexpected and suffered even more resounding defeats.

French integrity and generosity allowed everything to be invaded; the clarity, the de- the sion of the French spirit have suddenly arrested, French ignorance was easy to sur- to take; enlightened French reason has reacted with an indomitable force.

The image best suited to express the destiny of Judaism in France is provided by legend. It is said that the Jews, having obtained from a Roman emperor permission to rebuild the Temple in Jerusalem, set to work. The foundations of the building had already been laid; but the flames, rising from the ground, devoured works and workers. Similarly, in In France, Judaism continued the enterprise gigantic reconstruction of the Temple; He imagined himself as the master of France. and, from France, dominating the rest of the universe. A future a thousand times grander than that of ancient Jerusalem opened before his eyes. But suddenly, the ground opened up. and devouring flames consumed everything.

The passions of Judaism towards the France can be defined by a dual formule: a deep hatred and a fixed idea of domination.

mid

EE on mo: EO a — ne a = em E: e EEE: E: EE èë E ë ë M e E

Judaism hates France with all its might. site of the defeats he suffered there. He hates it because that he had dreamed of making it his own and the home of its universal domination and that this dream collapsed. He hates her because of her fall. France exerted a decisive influence on its destined for Europe and that France, obliged to strike him, brought into this work cruel, the ascendancy of his thought and the authority of his genius. [He hates her, finally, because, at For him, fears about the future amplify the resfeelings of the past and that, in this France Captivated by the surface, he glimpses abysses of willpower and fears explosions of energy, capable of resonating at the ends of the earth.

That's why he absolutely wants to dominate her. convinced that, as master of France, he would not renwill overcome more obstacles. Since, in the vast group of European nations, to which today link the United States and America Spanish-Portuguese culture, at the same time as the Russian Empire occupies the East and extends

= č nee EE CU, G pe C2 ee ON EN = EIRE omm om mam o EN n (CRE E: EE OE E ë E ë E COMM AS EEE © ON ES EE a ë EL o aah e — CO N ONN CEE |

Europe on the borders of Asia, France plays the role of heart and brain, it is necessary, for to dominate Europe and the world, to dominate the France.

Judaism, therefore, is simply conforming to geographical and historical necessities in striving to establish its supremacy there. Break the barrier that France opposes to its domination is a supreme necessity for him. If this

The attempt is foolish if it is met with resistance.
against a higher law, ambition of Judaism at least pays homage to the mission and the genius of France. Judaism
He knows full well that he will never be French: he de-
It is therefore true to conclude that France will never be Jewish.

Er LES — mm == = =mn pp

XXXIV

THE ROLE OF JUDAISM IN GERMAN EXPANSION

What role did Judaism play in the expansion?
Germanic sion? What influence did it have?
exerted on development and character
Anti-French sentiments in Germany?
What services has he rendered to politics?
Prussian and German?

This vast subject can barely be touched upon here.
But, lacking a general outline, the
The following instructions may call for to draw the attention of the French public to these serious questions.

The role of Judaism in Germany has been essentially that of a tireless exciter of hatred. In Germany, outside of Germany

Germany, in neighboring countries, in all the regions of both hemispheres where It's teeming, the German Jew has put his tongue and His pen in the service of Germany and torn apart
France with incredible tenacity.
From caricature to slander, there is no weapon poisonous, which he employed. What characterizes

This war is especially devastating; it is a fervor and a consuming fire, a frenzied passion for invectives and outrages, a rage to invent, each day, a new insult, to make the least incident a new theme of attacks, and in At the same time, a treacherous ingenuity, a the inexhaustible fecundity of malice, an address consumed to give to the most false or the most violent, with a convinced air and even spiritual.

How formidable these Jewish slanderers are! They ranted with superb self-assurance, a dramatic flair, an air of authority that imposes and trains, and as they know how to speak To evil instincts! Masters of their voices,

They have an intuition of hateful passion and 1 can speak to him directly as to a f | being with whom they would be, by their nature, l | in intimate communication. At the Infinite as the world, the Jewish slander HE German has all the strings and all the venoms; ijl She has formulas for everything, in her store. ready, insolent dogmas, insulting words | | rieux, outrageous inflections, and everything, in | | His mouth is alive, full of energy and fire. $ | Whether it's about denigrating France in its i | literature or in its great men, of {

to disguise his role in the story or of him to attribute heinous plans of aggression against i neighboring nations, it does not cease to act and;

IET e

eag = eej Bie eaei T

to vomit. And such is its power of repetition-ki ne - Tay

ES EE

lion, its audacity, its sonorous crash, that we He listens to her and believes her. What is base, ignorant, ii | ble, abject, perverse, execrable, not to undermine- sees that slowly and when it has produced its effects in an irreparable way.

Facing Germany, France must not never forget that she has two opponents to fight: the Germanic element proper said, and the Semitic element, closely united with the same goal. France, conquered by the German armies would certainly be prey Jews; it would suffer the same fate as crushed Greece by the Turk and plundered by the Jew. Such is the danger that threatens it and on which all illusion would be fatal for him.

To gauge its seriousness, he simply needed to into question the past. Twice in history Roman, during the Second Punic War and during the wars against Mithhidates, we saw this combination of Asian ingenuity and barbaric vigor, Rome called its terror those who had managed to turn these forces against her combined, But, as insightful as he- King, she studied them and shattered them; nor the perfidy Neither Asian nor barbaric courage stopped the The course of its destiny. Today, that the France should know well that, in order to defeat Germany

Magne, he needs to delve deeper into the Jewish subject!

NA NN

GERMAN ISRAELITE SLANDER AND THE ERRORS FRENCH WOMEN

The entry into the campaign of Jewish slander German rivalry against France is nothing new. From the mid-17th century, it appears to have He was expected to play a major role. What an ininfluence the Semitic interactions onl- Did they exert their influence on the famous Lessing? In To what extent was he inspired by passions? Israelites in the creation of this scholarly system and methodical denigration to which he has Subjugated France and French genius? 1l there is there a question of historical psychology of utmost importance.

s T i zhoa i = DB a: z CE. a O z5 Pa

-m H
5 g biie biem | oi d TE y oo oo aoe

-F ki EE — E an Es

= = = to i EE a ir P = us f 1
: - : = EL. == 3 sn z ==
ka En aa, EN x P i š ii . =

CR eoole = = = z a- 3 F = = rm a T nr
5 D "E j
-gn E ET ee
" = J =; we
zog po

In any case, if there was any in Germany egregious and ardent slanderers of France who were not Jewish and had no family ties Judaism has left its mark on the Jews. imprint on German slander; he has provided a disciplined army, trained for all the maneuvers of slander, always ready to fight, only retreating to better to resume the offensive, proceeding one day by oblique steps, the next day by bold surprises, feigning, if necessary. a hypocritical impartiality, affecting even the sympathy for France, especially capable (in (by virtue of suggestive communications) to act at a multitude of points far removed from each other others with the whole and the simultaneity of a a precision-driven army, and never missing, of course, to blame the French for the vice minute of slander and outrage.

This German Jewish slander exploited like an inexhaustible mine the portrait tradressed in French, which has been in use for over

J
r

oo

One hundred years in Germany. According to this portrait, the French is an incomplete, narrow-minded, credulous being.
childish amateur of distinctions, preferring the a pretty banality to science, having in literathe taste for false elegance and the rhetoric, and, in politics, devoted to charlatan-tans and chimeras; he is ignorant of geography and foreign languages; a horrible disease of mind possesses him, "Chauvinism"; this his illness makes him believe he is in charge and enlightens the world, that France is the nation of nations, that everything revolves around it, that one
He is owed admiration and respect on all sides.
respect and that she owes it to no one; it is It is not possible for a Frenchman to escape this illness, it is always more or less affected, that is to say, always a stupid man and ridiculous. If the conclusion of the slanderers Germans are not as formal, the substance of Their thinking is never in doubt.

What truth lies in this portrait? The at-A silly caricature would have been less dangerous

j

=
E

LR

ISRAELITE POLICY

if it had not borrowed certain traits from the truth to adore them excessively. France, Alas! He didn't listen enough to what was being said.
beyond its borders; she didn't follow me, as she should have done, the work of demolition of its national character; ellena
I didn't understand that with the new era, inaucured at the end of the 18th century, it was necessary that I 1n-French intelligence is being transformed and that the cult of universal science took its place literary enthusiasms. A long time ago that the defeats of 15870 could have been predicted; It's also been a long time since we could have announced as inevitable the defeat of French science French by German science. If the students people from all countries are heading towards Berlin, Heidelberg or Leipzig instead of coming In Paris, one can boldly throw in the face of French scholars reproached him for not having known to hold the flag of national science.

Glory be to those who make it illustrious!

which prove, by their great works, that the sn

=

French science. Momentarily eclipsed, esl ready to be reborn and regain its prestige:

Not only did France fail to listen-to address the bitter criticisms and to dispel exaggerated views rations some precious truths. Eile a committed a more serious fault, that of listening treacherous praise. For a long time, 1l has fashion, abroad, to celebrate the clarity of The French spirit: the French have no genius, but also order, taste, and clarity;
they know how to arrange what the German or I An-Glas discovers; they are thus the retailers, the shopkeepers of Anglo-German intelligence order; this one, as it says somewhere Insolently, Macaulay is Moses, that is to say the inventor, and France is Aaron, that is to say-to say the implementer.

This adorable perfidy found no place of more accommodating ears than in France. The French began to celebrate unanimously- their clarity of mind, their common sense, their the art of tastefully dressing up ideas that come from

Em mme mme memes meme mn a
— ER.

the foreigner, thus abandoning the high regions of thought. And they are astonished that the altars of French science may be deserted. that we go and attend courses at the University of Berlin! However, has there ever been between the Cause and effect: a more immediate relationship? To abdicate bold initiative, creative effort incessant, tireless discovery, the search- the same adventurous woman, to fall to the rank as arranger and popularizer, it is proclaimed sea his intellectual decline and expose himself to be removed from the list of scientific nations tiques.

XXXVI

THE WRESTLING

The fight against Jewish and German slander The order is all the more difficult because it requires, in the French character and spirit, a veritable transformation. How to behave, in front of of such an enemy, like 16th-century France. 51st-key in the face of English and Prussian policy His own path is to ruin. And it's not enough not to perceive the danger more or less, nor to combat it through commendable efforts; it is necessary measure it in every way, become familiar with methods of warfare whose study is repugnant to the French soul and to oppose learned hatred energetic sagacity.

The old-school Frenchman has finished his time and must, especially in national life external, be replaced by another, less Pleasant perhaps, but otherwise quite solid of head and willpower. This one. Setting aside generous illusions, will not be afraid to apptake everything that a Frenchman, concerned with He has an interest in knowing the future of his country. will be thoroughly informed about foreign matters. He will study modern languages, he will flee like a plague, the boulevard, and won't believe it a phoenix when it knows how to speak seriously a string of well-ordered and well-structured sentences combs.

It's so easy to succeed cheaply in France! With a superior, masculine bearing and a harmonious phraseology, which does not Can't we! But, too often, the character, examined abroad, was quickly pierced at Day, and we wondered how the Fran” They took it seriously.

It is also sad to see how easily

The melancholic French sometimes accept certain foreign superiorities, instead of react vigorously to regain their position. Caesar, in his Commentaries, painted the Gauls fallen into this shameful state opposite Germans. They don't even dare anymore, he said, to compare themselves to them. Well! The Frenchman who shrinks from certain studies, such as that foreign languages, and who, in order to exonerate themselves per, dares to say: "We are not made for the study of foreign languages, » is at the same point. But this Frenchman doesn't know, then? than the first words of Turkish or Chinese, uttered from a German mouth, are a Slander against France? But, Did it take miracles of energy to evaporate? such inferiority, supremely humiliating degree and full of practical drawbacks, 1 They should be accomplished! The Frenchman who resigns himself to the intellectual superiority of Germany mand, from the German Jew, from the Englishman, from

The Italian is now nothing more than a fallen man;

In any case, he knows his country very poorly and doesn't I don't know that the day France is no longer the First, it is not far from being the last. Abroad, the Frenchman would not know too much about... to watch over oneself. One is on the lookout for one's illusions. naive and his unbelievable ignorance. The Jewish and German slander has been made against foreigners salts, UNDER This report, a special education, And we mustn't forget that it's everywhere. The French would not be able to arm themselves against this enemy implacable crumb, too much distrust and circumspection. Always on his guard, he must to be ready at any moment to stand up to him, to to oppose system to system, theory to theory. contempt for contempt. If he remains too focused on the defensesive and does not occasionally take the offensive, one will speculate on his exaggerated politeness towards him throw the insult in his face, and, if he takes offense. We will feign surprise and accuse him of inconvenience. nance. That it is, as a general rule, cold and silent, but knowing how to use himself when necessary from the steel rod and burn with the red-hot iron,

In this struggle, the leading role belongs to French scholars. This requires some Explanations. The German and Jewish slander is organized science acting as a slanderer.
French science must therefore position itself from the same point of view as the French army in face of the Prussian army, let it purify itself of all her shortcomings, let her submit to a rigorous discipline, which, freed from worn and rotten, it becomes a waste-organizational work, and that, taking to abroad, an energetic initiative, it forrelentlessly pursue the elimination of this science German who invaded everything. IF there is a tra-a Herculean task to accomplish; to reconquer the Belgian universities on German doctors and German Jews, who Germanized Belgium:
vicique, is already a giant task; and yet-which it must be undertaken, under penalty of seeing
One day Belgium will be fully reunited:
to serve as a point of attack for Germany against France, just as five centuries ago and a half, Flanders served as a gateway and base operations during the English invasion, France:

too often forgets her past; that she no-
Don't forget your geography!

French scholars and thinkers who do not will not back down in the face of formidable difficulties
The achievements of this task will deserve great recognition.
of their homeland, and posterity will recognize them.
nascent for having preferred the labors of a glorious struggle against the flattery of a reception academic tion or the fumes of a banquet at the Hotel Continental.

THE GERMAN ISRAELI PRESS

To name the German Jewish press is to to designate what is most Jewish in the universe.
The soul, like the spirit, passions, like
The style, everything about it is Jewish, everything about it exudes the em-insulting phase and malice.

This press occupies a considerable place in the political development of Germany OTIC contemporaine. 5a propaganda q grandecontributed to the pruning work, and Prussian policy had no better agent. She focused primarily on to inflame the passions of the Germans, to porto quell their hatred against France to a degree which hatred has never reached, to do not-to be in the German soul the treasures of fury a thirst for revenge that has been brewing for centuries in the Jewish soul.

Evil has wings, said Voltaire. Never-
No other darkness has been crowned with such success,
What man will ever be able to kiss her in His entire body of work? In his remarkable works on Franco-German politics and the war, Mr. Rothan has often recounted, with a saga-luminous city, the role of this press and art infernal with his slanders, so well combined with the maneuvers of diplomacy. Behind the discreet language of the eminent diplomat, one glimpses an intimate horror. And what a man wouldn't experience it! If the French, instead to ignore German, had the patience of to read the Jewish newspapers from across the Rhine. What Anger would gather in their hearts!

Throughout history, no doubt, slander has France continued: it seems that this is a necessity of its existence, and perhaps it is necessary-He wished for her that she would always have numerous slanderers. But slander anti-French sentiment had never arrived, at any point.

at the time, to the systematic organization that the
The German Jewish press gave it to him; never she had not involved herself in the events of her history in such an intimate and uncorporous to his misfortunes as a factor of a teile importance. Wherever there was a distance, the German Jewish press has dug a abyss; everywhere the wounds began burning with the outrage. She even wanted to blow up the

As it closed, she poured the liquid war in 1875, and strove, the National

The Berlin Zeitung, in the lead, to push on the France, the Prussian armies under pretexts of an audacity that is more than Semitic.
It was France that was threatening Germany. who was on the verge of attacking him! He was from any necessity that Germany should take the lead and brought France to its senses!

š iea i AR E ye AEEL me T Te E eai = E = FR ions i e = D a TA S

m ET PET sem r ml T

è Pm, ENE ph oe TE a A

mom n aa ER Fi j RES ne a EUR.

2" ISRAELITE POLICY

RE n GGM Ll ON yë l dF ne = < CN © EE D "SE = =

But the work to which the Jewish press has the most assiduously collaborated is the transformation- regarding the direction of Italian politics, it was important to Germany to detach Italy from France. The Jewish press worked there with a con- incomparable stance, 1 more needs to be said, with love. With what skill she managed to persuade Italy, which was in his interest and his A duty to hate France! What she published articles to flatter and intoxicate Italy, for to amplify his real or imagined grievances, in order to to represent France as ready to wait- to its national unity, to constantly stir up before his eyes the specter of Nice and the Sa- way, to excite him to rush towards Tunis at the first opportunity, to finally get through The Italian donkey, mobile and impressionable, the The poisons of his hatred are truly incredible. Italy listened too much. She, unfortunately- It also lies, a Jewish press, which extends a hand across the Alps to the German Jewish press

He orders it and accommodates his wild theories.

rer E commen RE m SEE mn mp em

Not only the Jewish press, in exci-Italy, against France, obeyed the law of her passions; she was perhaps inspired by a
A more refined calculation is as follows:

Judaism owes its emancipation to the France in 1789, like Italy to France of 1859. But, after receiving from France this benefited and took advantage of his protection in the the whole world, Judaism, seeing France to decrease and Germany to increase, is very quickly returned to his old hatred. Now, an agent of Germany, he thought of nothing but doing the war on France, and a merciless war.

leading Italy down the same path, by demonstrating to him every day that he needed to to separate from France, to hate it and to plunder it, German Jews were enlisting Italians under the flag of their ingratitude. Eclipsed by Italy's ingratitude, shouldn't theirs have Not to appear less odious?

Currently, German Judaism for-

He follows the same tactic in Greece. He works constantly trying to Germanize it and ruin the in-French fluence (1).

The German Jewish press would deny it her origins, if she weren't also so steeped in the deception is more akin to outrage. It passes effortlessly.
from outbursts of crude hatred to flattery insidious, of which French credulity does not know not to challenge each other. The praise directed at the

(1) The Germanic-Semitic infiltration into Greece has was reported in published correspondence by the newspaper Le Pays in November 1558.

"Greek nationality, carries one of these correspondences" pondances, has a terrible enemy in front of it; because the Israelite is the age-old and deadly enemy of the Greece; he harbors against it one of those deep-seated hatreds in the depths of heredity, which thirst for to lose and to destroy, and which never forgive.

"The facts of Greek history of this century are moreover, speaking of which: in 1822, when Sultan MahMoud had the Greek patriarch hanged at the gate from the cathedral of Constantinople, he delivered the caDavre to the Jews, and they dragged him to the sea while shouting furiously and cursing. The infamous Chios massacres of 1825, which

ER pnu- Se = EL ES EE =e CR © RS = =n mr = E = SN CNRS © CE èë = eme PRE

France's economy offers tangible proof of this. pable. The French newspapers reproduced, at envy, the admiring articles in the Jewish press German on financial resources ineresources from France, based on the resounding success of its major loans; these same articles deplored the economic situation of Germany Magne, and noted, with sorrow, its infe-

inspired the painter Delacroix to create one of his most maoenific compositions, and those of Chalcidice had the Jews as collaborators; everywhere inFinally, in the course of this memorable struggle which resulted in the liberation of Greece, the cruelty A Muslim woman has found a willing companion in Jewish perfidy and greed. It is necessary-

One would have to ignore the Orient in order not to know that...
Having lived through many centuries, there have been few massacres of Christians where the Jews did not behave like perverse arousers, or like vagrants ferocious attacks to finish off and rob the victims.

"Alongside the massacres in Chios, the scams" from the Ricardo company, of London, during the em-loans that reborn Greece had to contract
In the English market, these are mere trifles.
too familiar to the great Israelite bankers.

financial priority. The French, for what-
In recent years, Germany has been believed to be more ruined.
for having received the war indemnity, that France for having paid for it: and their Governments nants, instead of tightening the budgets of a maunyielding, they threw themselves headlong into it on the path to indebtedness.

In the industrial struggle, the German press
The order similarly lulled the French to sleep; it
She lulled them with sweet illusions, she sang their superiority, the taste of their workers, the Far- perfection, inimitable in Germany
Paris article, until the day when the batteries have been exposed and where the German industry, in all markets worldwide, was able to do French industry, a Victo- competitor ricuse. And the French newspapers are quick to react.
still to reproduce any press article German who isn't too malicious. or-ignoring that, malicious or not, it is always Treacherous!

Courageous men will undoubtedly know

poring over all the junk of the German Jewish press order and make it known to France, in length and extensively, in all its malice, they extract from it-will endure cruel mockery, horrific sarcasms irritable, bursts of infernal joy and outrageous-countless signs, such as these: "The France! The Great Nation! This
The work, hopefully, will be undertaken one day.
But, if the public still lacks the necessary information, the public [French, they should not be lacking in Governments. Never subsidize any newspaper abroad, especially in Italy, in Germany and Austria should be for They have an absolute rule: What's the point of publishing?
in a Jewish newspaper articles devoid of of authority, and enrich a banker who, by doing renting France in a newspaper for a fee species, does, at the same time, insult in another (1)?

(1) The German Jewish press affects to portray the French as being, with regard to Germany and the Germans, in a state of embargo ma = du em = 1 = si = z æ = m

EO CON = D CE = = E Poe a continuous behavior. Perhaps she would do better to admire their patience. The Government will-Mand expels Berlin's correspondents French newspapers; no correspondent from the

The German press in Paris wasn't even bothered.

And God knows what most of them have written against the France!

Certainly, if a press correspondent French woman in Berlin allowed herself to write against Germany, a tenth part of what such a Jew German, too famous, has published, for twenty years, against France, in a major foreign newspaper, and that the German Government delayed the expulsion ser, he would be slapped by the Prussian officers and provoked into a duel on all sides. The patience of the French… Caise had only one flaw: she was excessive.

We must often have asked ourselves, abroad, how France could have naturalized and decorated people who make a living vilifying her, and comshe hesitated, in the face of multiple outrages folded and even scandalous, to take away from them a naa turalisation of which they had proven themselves unworthy.

GERMAN JEWISH ESPIONAGE IN FRANCE

JECKER AND THE MEXICO EXPEDITION

German Judaism has the right to demand a share of honor in the defeats of the France; because of the wonderful organization of the espionage that prepared them was certainly a result composed of the Jewish address and of French credulity.

The French, in their prodigious naivety, considered German Jews almost like brothers from across the Rhine. The politicians Jews of 1848, refugees in Paris, became the intimates of the French republicans; they pushed them-saltent, in all likelihood, to be done, at Legislative body, the apostles of disarmament and to combat military reorganization projects to, by persuading them that Prussia disarmed would be the day when France had disarmed,

In public services, in education,
The German Juli was introduced via the High naturalization. German Jewish banks
The authorities were monopolizing the money trade. Who had not noticed the Prussian battalions der-
Behind the invading Jew, one would have been truly blind.

No truth should be exaggerated. If the German Judaism has filled so many systems
the role of spy, French Judaism, eu
On the contrary, he remained outside of this task odious. The exceptions, in any case, seem-feel reduced to a tiny minority, and the The fault must be attributed to this fever of to naturalize all the Jews in the world, which has reigned for a whole era in France and which is not yet cured today.

As for the distinguished German Jews

JUDAISM AND FRANCE (5.3

to whom high positions were granted,
The fact is undoubtedly regrettable. In the Scientific sphere, where he has mainly pro-
It was, in every respect, a symptom.
a time of decadence and had disastrous consequences consequences for France's reputation.
But ultimately, we can and must assume that,
endowed with high functions, charged with honors neurs, they set aside a long time ago the hateful passions of German Judaism and who sincerely love France.

Of all the services that Jewish perfidy has returned to Prussia, there are none (who equals the Mexican expedition. To launch Prussia in the quarry of expansions which began with the Danish war, France needed to be immobilized; and, to im- To mobilize France, it was necessary to throw it into a a large and far-reaching military undertaking. A Jecker (1), a German or quasi-German Jew

(1) Originally from Aarau, Switzerland,

He took charge of it. Thanks to his intrigues, France, or rather his government, already ailing, allowed himself to be persuaded to undertake in America an expedition that was to absorb his forces and whose insanity, in the presence of the 1m- projects eminent figures of Prussia, escapes all compa- historical reason, except perhaps, alas! in the present. France thus paralyzed, the Prussia was able to enter the scene. We know the rest. When the Communards shot Jecker, 11 one could tell oneself, as a last consolation, that, like Bismarck and Moltke, 1l had Sedan.

The French have never even asked themselves, Regarding the Mexican expedition, one point question mark. What were the relationships Jecker with the Prussian government? Did he have intimate relations with anyone? major Berlin banker, serving in the poli- Prussian tic of general organ of trans- mission in the Jewish world, either with

German Jewish bankers in Paris? The embassy

Bii ne =

Did Sade of Prussia in Paris facilitate his access to... access to high places? Did she provide him with any information? valuable information? No problem deserves- would allow for a more thorough examination. Perhaps, It is true, but would the research not lead to anything? in the absence of any physical evidence, the Israeli fraud not leaving unnecessarily of remains behind it; the building can be seen. There is no trace of the scaffolding.

15.

X TO HE TO

SEMITO-GERMANISM IN THE EAST

There is no fact more general or more worrying that the invasion of Semito-Germanism in the five parts of the world. We see it meeting everywhere: in Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Poland, Russia Hungary, Serbia, Romania, Türkiye, Egypt, Persia, India, China, Japan, in Australia, the United States, Mexico, in South America, at the Cape of Good Hope France, Morocco, etc. England itself is forced to reckon with him, and everything predict that Semito-Germanism will become increasingly powerful.

JUS ISRAELITE POLICY

Everywhere too this fact is directed against the France; and it cannot be otherwise: Jewish or Germanic, Germany grew richer of everything it takes away from France.

In the East especially, the Semito-Germanicnism works tirelessly to supplant the France, and this substitute work is not It is perhaps too far advanced today. It is still possible for France to react. But She doesn't have a moment to lose.

First of all, it needs to be lit up and... This idea permeates the mind: that in the East, IsraeliTism and Germanism are two equally powerful forces ment turned against France. Thanks to the IsRaeliteism, Germanism embraces the whole ter- the history of Turkey, and, thanks to Germanism, Israelism becomes a political organization Thessaloniki, with its eighty thousand Jews, provided him with a European capital; the Palestine and Syria, recolonized, are recognizing themselves gradually established a Jewish state.

The Israelite calculations, in this association, deserve all kinds of praise for their safety. and, one might even say, for their depth. Not only by relying on Germany, Israelism provides itself with a protection in the East. a respected and feared leader, ready to grant anything for the extension of its power, but more Germany's eastern influence will have Jews for agents or intermediaries, more Germany will have to establish itself in all areas the protector of the Jews in the lands of the globe, The Jew who works for Germany in Asia therefore works for itself, both in Asia as well as Europe and the rest of the world.

His conduct stems from a logic of self-interest.
of an absolute, imperious instinct, free from any consideration of loyalty or recognition birth.

Admittedly, France was quite ingenious.
How naive to make herself the protector in the East Jews. The protégé readily accepted-this overly generous support, he even celebrated-welcomed France with hyper- enthusiasm

= =. r = mu = 7 - =

lique and played the comedy of devotion towards her
ly. But, having thus emerged from an abyss of humiliations and having taken possession of his
With resurgent forces, Israelism has unleashed the France for Germany, long ago, from
The fact remains that this change was planned, and if the French diplomatic agents, instead of allow themselves to be circumvented by the Jews and trained to to take their cause in many cases above pecte, had observed them better since a half a century later, they would have seen that it already existed between them and Prussian diplomacy in The East has discreet but close and cross-links becoming more and more frequent every day. In diplomatic matters, that, as in military matters, Germany reaped what she sowed through invisible labor possible and silent, and the great movement German-Israelite in the East is no more an improvisation that the war of 1870 and the annexation of Alsace-Lorraine (1).

(1) See, in the work of Mr. Georges Corneil-Han, Jews and Opportunists (Paris, 1859), details

= T 'o OOOO DO EE ON CS Ce E ťţ¢ o M

But nowhere are there any advances in Semito-Ger-Manifestos constitute a danger for France as formidable as in Morocco. If Germany-He manages to place this empire under his control.
serious complications can occur in the event of war, erupting in the interior of Algeria and very interesting on Judaism in Egypt and in Syria, on Jewish recolonization in Palestine, etc.

Mr. Georges Corneilhan recounts how the pro-French protection was granted to Jewish colonies German women in Palestine.

"It is obvious that today," he said sadly this author, the. mission of a French consul in The Orient is no longer there to protect the French, nor by consequently to defend the interests of France;
his mission, similar to that of our leaders, consists of protecting the Jew and allowing him to act and to plunder under the protection of the dying prestige of the name French. "

There is nothing comparable to these errors that the im-caution of French trading houses which were represented in Türkiye, Egypt and elsewhere, by German Jews, these, from that the clientele was created and that the plasters, for to use the colloquial expression, were wiped

Fo Ds ge ee aM
7 = + JE : i E

e
E Mie ee EE n E m ON EU EU UN MON < == = os men es een:

on its western border. The men of the French state, if they have a sense of the future, do not must not cease to keep their eyes on the tra-underground network from Germany to Morocco, and on the gradual integration, which takes place there, of the Jewish population in the German leadership order (1).

funded by French money, they rushed to offer their services to German households and to supply to ship German goods. Also the annihilation-is the development of French trade in the East
general,

And how could it be otherwise? The French capitalists who are interested in business trade in the East is quite simple for choose, as intermediaries for their purchases, German Jews; these, of course, buy from preference for German or An- goods
clays; naturally these purchases are made in Paris, at the offices of German Jewish commission agents, and the French capitalists, in the illusion of their patriotism, are convinced that they are making the domestic trade.

(1) It should be noted that German Jews, during-that they became naturalized citizens in the United States, no

CRE ES EE eo M CRU E CH eo CE M ë o SON e EME = o © — SJ ET CDI WHERE . =E i- =E a EML = o mem NES èë oe

=O Lie Ob oso č =nmey UNI

in Morocco do not fail to use the protection American. The United States pavilion there covers thus the expansion of Semito-Germanism, which allows Germany to save its action direct. A long correspondence, published in The Times of July 28, 1886, gives horrifying details on the usury and cruelties practiced by the Jews, under American protection, in this unfortunate country.

CONCLUSION

What should France do? It cannot, that is Obviously, there is no question of persecution, nor of neither plunder nor even hatred. But, as that Judaism constitutes a factor in the in-German evasion, and the most active factor in France is obliged to repel this invasion.
first. Similarly, as Judaism for-would follow the plan to form a nation in a nation, a state within a state, France must break it in such a way that this design does not It will not be reborn. Finally, France, under penalty of losing one's freedom of action and dignity, should not

SE E = ee a = E EON OS ES An Le RE BT CE OO DRE Cm O US S CUS Re © CS ES CNRS RS CU Cm CEE “En

Not to fall under the yoke of financiers.
It doesn't matter whether they are French or foreign.
Jews, Protestants or Catholics; France,

France is no longer in the hands of financiers.

While these concerns are legitimate, It is necessary to be just as careful not to... let them lead us beyond the strict necessary. The abyss that separates Judaism France's problem is profound; should we despair of Crossing it? Alongside a deceitful Judaism and greedy, hating everything that is not him, is he impossible to conceive of another less mevaluing, less selfish, and capable, by absorbing the first, to bring it into the vast Within the framework of Aryan civilization? We like it. hoping for this renovation upon reading certain certain works where Judaism, imbued with a Platonic breath, resembling a Gospel anticipated. S1 historical truth is sacrificed therelinked, we must applaud the wisdom of the intentionlion. Reconciling the Semitic world and the The world of Arven is a difficult work between

ms to m — = = "mm x — m

EE RE E] = Ca = DS OM CCR OS © CSS © CONS COR 2

all of them, and we cannot encourage them too much noble minds, who, within the bosom of Judaism, strive to rid him of his instincts greed and hatred. May they succeed in this arduous task and achieving results durable!

On the other hand, many Israelites seem entered, definitively and without any afterthought, in French national life. Some military personnel, magistrates, administrators fulfilled their duties with zeal and interest grity. Were there, among them, any regrettable ones?

exceptions? Some Jewish magistrate at-
Would he sometimes have been intrigued by his coreligions?
some advice to his colleagues? Some advice-
Would the Israelite neo-strategist have facilitated the scandals?
Jewish speculators? In any case, and even if-These exceptions are numerous and should not be ignored.
not to reflect on those who have faithfully ac-nor complicate their duties, nor deprive them of the es-time that is owed to them. And why even the Would high political offices be...

— E oe E a = : = EE SUR ë SE CN E “ON E aao ia (a E assigned to an Israelite solely on account of his ear-gine?

If the Israeli politician, as he has been described higher up, is a detestable being, France does not asks those to whom she confides that an understanding of her needs and a true heart-French comment.

Should we end with a piece of advice? Whatever be, in all circumstances, the faults of the Is-Raelite, Aryan must always use mena-cements with him. He must not forget: that he has Facing him was an irritable being who only had too often sucked with milk, the poisons of the Hatred and revenge. Never hurt.
The Israelite must be a sacred rule. If the Israelite-lite owes, in large part, to his passion for ou-his historical legacy, he was too cruelatoned for so that it wouldn't be made easy for him, by often closing his eyes, forgetting his own pass.

PREFACE

Yet another new book against the Jews, it will be said in a few days, in:
reading this headline: Jewish Algeria! — One does not will not be mistaken, because an independent Frenchman-during this time one could not speak of the semues.
without speaking against them!

- In the presence of the ascending step-- new and dangerous Jews, some writers have published some works whose aim was to put the public in guard against the invasion of our en-

has

o N PREFACE
K

Most of their writings were not / that historical treatises ancienne, which, not being of interest to the reader, could not achieve the proposed goal.

The public wants facts above all else.
close enough to be able to con-to skirt authenticity. He attaches no importancetance to a work that, as much as it comp-he easily grasps what he reads, and he is I am happy to be able to say in closing:
"How true it all is that This man wrote!

This book, accessible to all, was expected; no one had been notified, and | we were convinced it was going to be delivered to advertising. We didn't know what it would mean by it.
the author would have said; one could not have foreseen how-how he would take some of the ideas from each one; but we knew that the Island book

It would appear, because it was bound to appear.

The publication of Jewish France does not --

PREFACE 1x

was therefore a surprise to no Français. |

The name of Mr. Edouard Drumont, almost unknown the day before most of his readers, had just acquired a well-deserved fame.

Jewish France required work over several years, and the author has done evidence of activity and consistency extraordinary to bring together all the do_cuments which allowed him to show the public the Jew as he truly is. From In the first few lines, we find ourselves naturallement trained towards the author; on comassumes that this is not the work of a vulgar a writer who tried to make this important Jewish question, a questiontion of interest, but rather the work of a Frenchman who comes to unmask the enemy. of France.

Mr. Ed. Drumont does not exhibit iiè

xX rRÉKACE

In theory, he recounts obvious facts. gives the names of the kings of finance and makes known the processes used by each of his characters to arrive to the Power which has always been the ohjecthe Jew's tif.

The author shows us how the descendants of Israel, after having settled-They were at our place, thanks to our trust and our naivety, at the head of our destinies! He proves to us, finally, undeniably, that the Govern-
The French language is in their hands, and that they have reached such a point that none of our representatives dare to proto test against their oppressive power and degrading for us.

Done under similar conditions, the
The success of Jewish France was assured.
Mr. Drumont had written down the ideas and almost the impressions of each one, and each one wanted to read what he thought.

The blow dealt by Jewish France has
It was terrible for the Jews, and we will not fear...
Let's not say that this is the common ground.
The beginning of the end.

Next to Mr. Drumont, a young writer Vain talent has proudly entered the arena. Mr. Jacques de Biez made a A remarkable work, The Jewish Question, where (to repeat Mr. Dru-'s phrase) (mountain) grandiose images highlight vigorous maxims struck.

Just recently, a writer
Polish, Mr. Kalixt de Wolski, published Jewish Russia. It's a real- work Interestingly, where the Jew's theory is explained at length. The author details clearly the spring that makes the move Jewish machine.

Today the momentum has begun.

and those who will have retained their independence
Pendance will work towards reversal Jews, because they will understand that This is a crucial question.

The Frenchman who, thanks to Mr. Ed. Dru-Mont, is initiated into the maneuvers of the Jews from France, must be eager to know the conduct of their coreligionists this second France which is called A/gc-laughter: that is the goal we set for ourselves by publishing Jewish Algeria.

To better study the Algerian Jew,
We wanted to know what he was before the conquest and we have, at this
In this regard, having taken all the necessary information, Necessary among the old Arab chiefs.
We were sometimes so surprised certain details that we don't have I felt compelled to hand them over to the public without to control them.

In Jewish Algeria, we take the Native Jew, almost in a savage state, coming to grovel before the Arab whom he did not can exploit it. We are following it step by step to this day, by trying to mon-to see how he gradually lets it all through all his flaws as soon as they are no longer driven back to their homes by brute force.

After reading this book, one will gladly reread La France jurve, because that by comparing our two types, we will understand that the pr grac for the des-descendants of Israel consists in the development development of all innate vices in them.

The conquest of Algeria goes back to... over half a century ago, and yet this rich colony, despite its proximity to the The metropolitan area is still unknown to the
the majority of French people.

Many talented writers have—
A blow spoken of by Alocria; unfortunate-their accounts, if not erroneous, of the less strong, incomplete, have left in the minds of their readers that a good idea wave of the inhabitants' customs, of the the situation of our settlers and finally of what may bring the exploitation back to France of this fertile soil. Instead of talking about this which is, they focused mainly on this which should be. E

It is not enough, in order to know the Al-

Algeria, to explore it as a tourist, to se- -

day in major centers and visit some picturesque landscapes and rugged terrain, such as the Pa- gorges lestro, de la Chiffa and du Chabet, the cases-

Sidi M'sid cades, summer, it is still necessary venture inland, visit the villages and experience a little of the life of our native people to study their customs. It is equally important-element of seeing these small villages created by our settlers, both on the coast of the

s < at the bus stop -

ss |

I said ar

(y

Re ee
4 oF Nenda m6 des + EU FH

CE |

Mediterranean than inland and principal mainly in the south of our colony, where no way to communication, to realize of the situation created for them by the mode current state of colonization.

It is a long and arduous study, whose importance will be recognized, in con-astounding how many there are re-media to contribute so much to the organization than in the operation. We will be surprised then to see what Algeria cost and costs France annually, thinking about what she should do for us report.

By nature, the Frenchman is quite sedentary; he rarely emigrates.
ment and when he has hope of finding all-their comfort through work and the economy. However, besides these old soldiers, who, after having participated in the campaigns of Al-mm aarne

gcrie, asked and got some arable land, a large number of farmers, attracted either by proximity of our new colony, either by the promass of a concession, went to settle in Algeria, with the conviction that the go-government would enable them to de-
to cultivate these new lands fruitfully.

Their illusions were short-lived.
They understood a little late that, by due to the malfunction of our system of colonization, the fruit of their labor inevitably passed into foreign hands manages, let's say right away, in the hands of Jews. Most of these settlers, after having exhausted their savings, ct arr sé these lands of their sweat, have returned in France, deprived of all resources.

In the course of this work, we we will dedicate a special chapter to the co-

Jonization. After having done the historical-

mae

RE RE aF DRT a ee aa ee e P ee ee ne +

risk, we will indicate what it is, to our
In my opinion, besides the evil, there is the only remedy.

In Algeria, as in France, we we allow it to be exploited by the Jews, with this difference, however, that over there we we find ourselves in the presence of individuals who the primitive state, which, although usurers, ld-They are wicked and hypocritical by instinct, and do not have yet another trick by their coreligionists France. It will therefore be much more to us.
It's easier to show them as they are.
to publicize their maneuvers, and finally to talk about their relationship with the Jews of the Metropolis.

In this first work, we Let us place it in a general point of view and we will completely abandon the question of people, we reserve the right to publish

A new book on Al- will be coming soon.
management, where we will indicate the role played by each Jew to exploit our co-

African Union at the expense of our colonists and Arabs.

So we're going to talk about both the French, Arab, and Jewish, and we we will focus primarily on the role played by the latter.

It is essential, for proper communication to assume the role of the Jew in Algeria, of to know a little about Arab customs,
and we will recount them briefly

during the course of the first chapter.

As for the customs of the Jews, we we will limit ourselves to saying that they change according to before the countries where they are located. Which follows them everywhere, it's paralysis, the e-selfishness, cowardice and hypocrisy.

mue 9 were or ere er

JEWISH ALGERIA

... CHAPTER I

mæ a

THE ARAB AND THE JEW BEFORE THE CONQUEST.

Before the conquest of Algeria, this country
It was inhabited by Arabs and Jews.
The first, former Moors, had been different-

. once one of the most civilized peoples in the world;
it was only after they were driven out of Spain that they had taken refuge in northern Afni-

+ than. Their customs then changed abruptly-

They became sedentary and lazy.

and lived in complete ignorance.

During their invasion, their new territory-

The village was inhabited only by Jews, who
i

not yet having managed to slip into the, various civilized states of Europe. Cowardice The Jew's natural disposition quickly placed him under the domination of newcomers who con-were less stunned than a slave, since he was
For them, it was something of no value.

Although they were supporters of freedom, the Arabs willingly submitted to the yoke of their Arab chiefs. They were under the authority of the dey.
from Algiers.

From an administrative point of view, the territory was divided into bach-aghaiats, aghaiats, caidats and sheikhs, at the head of whom were the bach-aghas, aghas, caids and sheikhs (1). Justice

(1) The bach-aghaiats and the aghaiats have been abolished shortly after the conquest of Algeria. We have conserved the local authorities until the civil authority renounced placed the military authority: some, however, were maintained in the few remaining military territories tent cncore en Algérie.

As for the sheikhdoms, they have instead been augmented mentioned during the suppression of the caïlats. The sheikhs are the assistants to our civil servants. When a .
If an offense or crime is committed on their territory, they must- immediately send a written report to the ma- French gistrat. They depend on the administrators who are, in a way, their hierarchical superiors.

oo mrommeuprs t

The year
parearea *. .

`
ESS

nt + CS nd en

was rendered by the qadis, who had as auxiliaries the bach-adels and the adels (1). Every Arab had the right of life and death on the Jew, without having to answer to anyone his superiors. The Jew did not belong not exclusively to a specific person, it belonged to everyone and consequently had to to obey everyone's orders. When a Jew

(1) These Indian magistrates were retained. They are under the direct authority of the justice of the peace in the cantons and the public prosecutor's office in the districts.
Their power varies depending on whether they are in a canton where the justice of the peace is or is not responsible for judging civil matters between Muslims.

While the French magistrate only judges civil cases between Europeans, between Jews, or between Europeans or For Jews and Muslims, the qadi alone is in charge of matters Muslim women. However, the justice of the peace holds every se-Maine, a hearing in Ain Ide Chicaya, where they must attend all the judges of the canton; the litigants who had to complaining about the cadi submit their grievances to the ma-French gistrat, who, after having heard the observations-the instructions of the Arab judge, dictates to the latter what he must
TO DO.

When the justice of the peace is in charge of civil matters
Among Muslims, the qadi is in a way only his assessor,

All criminal cases depend on the judicial system.
French tion.

Jewish Algeria

when he met an Arab, he would humbly prostrate himself.
deafeningly before his formidable master.

Jewish women were at the mercy of Arabs, who, as they pleased, would go and find them in their hovels or ordered them to return home, without fearing the slightest obstruction.
parental rejection. It was even an honor for a Jewish woman or girl of having been raped by an Arab.

Our readers who only know the Jew superficially, they will be surprised by these details precise and will wonder why the Jew does not did not revolt and did not try to take back control: its supremacy? We will limit ourselves to answering-to say that the Jew will never fight openly: that he will always prefer to crawl and submit to final humiliations rather than revolting third; we will add that it is today this that he has always been, that he will never change of character, and that he does not feign boldness that when he feels supported.

Unable to conduct his usurious business in the presence of a savage and despotic master, we will tell you the depths to which the Jew to obtain money. For this he

It is useful to know the customs of the Arabs.

and we are going to give a summary presentation of it.
mayor. | k
Customs of the Arabs. — On habitation. —

The Arabs lived in tents or in huts. To build a tent, we traced a sort of circle, we piled-knows around and pell-mell the stones or pebbles loux that were within reach, and with the help of stakes, one of which, in the center, was 2 meters high The wall was covered with a canvas. As for furniture, All that could be found were carpets and bowls made of wood, a few pans or pots to make bake the bread and prepare the couscous, and finally a coffee pot and goatskins for Add the water.

The hut was built of stone, neither tail-neither aligned nor aligned, with a height of 1°50 to 2 meters... |

The Arabs who lived in the tents, trans-carried their encampment from one place to another other, depending on the season.

Of the family. — The family consisted of

< a)

of the father, his wives and his children (1).
The father, in his capacity as absolute leader, had right of life and death over the members of his family, who all had the deepest

respect.

The chef ate his meals alone, and nothing
it was to be served to his wives or children, who hadn't already passed in front of him. The women they rarely went out and always accompanied accompanied by the husband. It was their responsibility the work; they made the carpets, thus that the fabrics for burnouses; besides the care

They were in charge of the housework, not the household chores.

fields. The heaviest loads return born to the oldest, the most recent arrival being always the husband's favorite.

Food. — The Arahe was ct est

Even today, he remains very sober. He doesn't indulge in no work, meager food was enough to

(i) According to the Quran, woman is the property of the Arab, like his field: he can dispose of it and Consequently, he has the right of life and death over her. — She is still his property today, but he can no longer to attempt suicide.

+ ER ne on To kite -aa er i Me. +

AES
pm aea F p- Fr maintain balance in its functions animales. His favorite food is couscous. He also feeds on sheep, goat, eggs, milk, bread and cakes made-fruits, prepared by his wives, and finally, fruits. Other-Sometimes the Arabs didn't drink any liquor

Alcohol and syrup were their favorite liqueurs.

Arabic bread is flat: it looks a bit like to our Limousin galette; it is made without salt and unleavened.

Couscous is prepared either with butter, or with mutton; at the time of serving, one season it with a very spicy sauce which gives it a pleasant flavor.

For family celebrations, it is customary to to cook a whole sheep. For After stripping it, it is coated with a thick layer of butter, it is skewered in a a long piece of wood and we spread it out in front

a large fire engine lit outdoors; two Arabs placed at each end of the im- pin makeshift are responsible for the functions of turnpin,

On marriage. — Marriage is not, as among civilized peoples, the legal union of two people of different sexes but indeed a sale concluded between the father of the The bride and the future husband or her father. He arrives frequently that the two spouses have They had never been seen before on the day of the wedding. Here's how it's done: The future or His father will go to the bride's father, and Jui said, "Do you want to sell me your daughter for "to be my wife or my son's wife," the father answers affirmatively and we determine the price which is generally the same for everything a douar (150 or 200 francs). When one is. Okay, let's set the wedding date.

The fiancé sends gifts to his fiancée following: the fabric needed for a dress, two sheep, one of which is to be eaten wedding day, flour for making couscous Cousins, cakes, and fruit. On both sides On the other hand, parents are invited and guests are invited musicians who are to perform the famous tam-tam.

On the appointed day, the future husband and his father meet with their guests at the bride's father's house, and there, in the presence of the qadi and four witnesses (formerly the presence of the qadi was indispensable-

sand, today we're content with four witnesses), he said: "I'll count out the sum con-came to buy your daughter who from this day will be "My wife." The father replies, "Here is my..."
"Girl, make her your wife." Immediately this for-The deed done, the couple and guests go to bed.
on the carpet around the dishes that have been served in honor of the wedding.

As soon as the meal is finished, the musicians they begin their drumming, accompanied by the more or less melodious singing of all the assistants; soon it's just a hubbub indescribable, because already part of the con-
The dancing began with vivacity.

Meanwhile, the couple withdrew,
and we eagerly await their return, because if the young girl had not yet been married, the husband must provide proof of the virginity his wife's nity, and the cloth must be placed as a banner above the father's tent. If The young girl is not a virgin; two camps are form immediately, and a lively discussion

THE

The sion erupts, which always degenerates into a brawl.
bloody. If, on the contrary, the young girl __ has not been defiled, and it is generally Thus, the party continues and goes on for two days, after which the husband brings back his woman at his home or at her father's home.

- There is no age limit for marriage, the Arabs, moreover, having no civil status. In Generally, we wait until puberty.

The Quran permits polygamy, an Arab can have four legitimate wives; the name- The number of concubines is not limited.

When a husband no longer wants one of his women, he takes her back to her father, if he exists again, and said to him, "I'm giving you back your daughter, give- "I'll take back the money I gave you." The father is We have to comply. We'll give the money back!

On religion. — The Arab is very fanatick. His religion is Islam, of which the main dogmas, recorded in the Quran, are the unity of God, the immortality of the soul, a paradise with all the sensual pleasures suelles, predestination and fatalism. Their temples, which are still very widespread,

They are called mosques (1). The marabout, A Muslim religious figure, he is highly revered by the Muslims who consider him an ensent by Muhammad to lead them.

The Arab does not fear death, and nothing would be able to distract him from his religious duties.

In the interior of Algeria, one encounters with every step of the Arabs performing their prayers, either on the side of the roads, or in the middle mountains; at that moment, they let themselves- would strike, even kill, rather than these- to serve their invocation.

The Arabs are convinced that after their Muhammad will come and take them by the hair to take with her to her paradise;

---

(1) In large cities, mosques are of veritab.es, some very curious monuments to visit; that of Algiers It is especially very beautiful. But next to these mosques, what have

could see most of our readers who know In Algeria, several are found in the interior of our colony which, built by Arabs who have not-They didn't have the slightest notion of masonry, they couldn't-wind has nothing to do with architecture. These are generally small white towers, which, placed on as-high stakes, seem to bring a small variation in the monotony of the Arab villages.

It is for this reason, moreover, that they leave push a long strand of hair to the middlicu of their head to facilitate the Prophète.

Their Lenten fast, which bears the name of Rama-Dan, falls in the ninth month of the Turkish year.
that (the months of the Turks being lunar, the ra-Madan returns every year ten days earlier than the previous year). Throughout its
For a duration, Muslims maintain abstinence more complete, from sunrise to sunset
dear to the sun. Fasting was once practiced by ohlisuch strict gation for them, that it cost the Life to the one who dared to break it.

Arabs must be barefoot to pe-to enter the mosque. Women are not there. never admitted; they are even excluded from all religious exercises.

Customs and habits. — The Arab is very lazy by nature. His most
The greatest pleasure is to stretch out nonchalantly in the sun during the hottest weather.
Despite everything the French have done for to make him understand that he would find through the 0 ` L to g^if

: RS yi se
Lors gertae le lee, rte mn he dans ne ur

rs D EROE

+ i LI '
k orgo A ”. y 3 a mii arim A to Aah e am? Dorah aa 7 0, PT UT PR mm ln var.

t
"a pame +

t ve =

JEWISH ALGERIA 19

He prefers to work with ease and well-being. To be content with little and not to work. The Arab is of a very robust constitution; it can withstand easily the extreme cold and the scorching heat wrinkles. We see it frequently during the winter crossing the covered mountains barefoot of snow, wearing nothing but a light gandoura (Arab shirt), and a few shreds of burnouses.

Our native Algerian is agile and skillful;

- He is an excellent shot and a very valiant soldier when it is incorporated. It can do very long walks, taking only a small food.

The Arab woman. — The woman is very few of no value to the Arab; it has no worth as long as she is pretty and hardworking. For the father, daughters are things of report which will give him more or less following before the customs of the village; for the husband, the woman is a being who must give him the sensual pleasures and making him live by his work. In all the assassinations (and they are numerous) committed by the native, it is necessary first and foremost, seek the woman. The Arab doesn't-will never stop killing the one who has obtained the favors of one of his wives. This should not be-while not concluding from this that the Arab is If he were jealous and loved his wife, that would be a serious mistake. He considers her his proprie, because he paid for it, and he wants by then reap all the benefits, among them-What is carnal possession?

According to him, if someone touches one of his wives, he takes something away from him that is his own property, in short he derives a enjoyment to which he had no right. When a woman dies, her husband does not re-He doesn't care, he only considers himself as having lost part of its capital (1).

The Kabyle. — Although not having the in-

(1) Arab women are generally pretty, but she is decked out in dirty rags that create a striking contrast She's beautiful. — She has tattoos on her face and on the hands and yellows the nails with hydroxychloroquine. This a type of dye gives off a very unpleasant odor for Europeans.

When an Arab dies, his wives, his daughters and his other relatives scratch their faces and darken their skin the wounds with charcoal.

-0 t æ -ae yr a nl

attention to talking about the different kinds of A-
In this very brief summary, we judge-
However, it is necessary to say a few things.
Kabyle words.

This inhabitant of the Algerian coast is more civilized than the Arab proper. He is tra-valiant and ingenious; it is indeed through him What are these rugs, these trays, these made of?
necklaces and these thousands of cuii:...."* which we come-every day of our colony.

The Kabyle usually only has one or two women, and although considering them as inferior to him, he nevertheless places them at-above Arab women.

The Kabyle has something of the Eurcyan about him.
and primarily French. Our soldiers, called upon to stay for a long time on the coasts from Africa, were reduced to not disdaining to control Arab women, despite their pitiful state their attire and their repulsive filth.

This brief glimpse into Arab customs... will make it easier to explain the ma-to avoid making a Jew into a shameful act industry. Knowing the defects and the flaws-wounded by the Arab, the Jew sought hypocrisy-willingly to serve his master's passions.

He crawled to warn a husband that one of his wives had been raped; for
As a price for his cowardice, he received a meager reward.
munéralion, often accompanied by what-blows from a baton. Other times, he-dait a lover arrives at the woman desired. Always wandering and crawling, he conwas born into wealth and knew where the ar-gentle; lacking the courage to steal, despite His intention was to warn those of his mai-very who were willing to act and he received Another award. Unfortunately, his This sad profession was soon known, and for to escape a deserved punishment, he was forced derrer from douar to douar and from catdats to ` caïdats. | |
To summarize, the Jew who had taken refuge

gié in the uninhabited territories had placed voluntarily under Arab domination, during their invasion of North Africa.
Despite the humiliations inflicted upon him, he never sought to revolt, preferring mn e

'to crawl before the one who was hitting him. Not to knowsinging where to go, he could not leave this a country that has become inhospitable, convinced that, as a cursed race, he would be driven out of pareverything. Alone, moreover, he is incapable of fighting against the weakest enemy.

He was already trying to return to Europe, but He knew that no people were willing to help him. to serve as an aegis.

CHAPTER II

DURING AND AFTER THE CONQUEST

The Jew learned with joy of the decision of the France after the insult to our representative so much by the Dey of Algiers. Fearing at leastas a manifestation of being exterminated, he became even more humble and more groveling beside his master. He understood that if France seized Algeria, an era of renewed freedom lative was about to begin for him, because in Europe, no people ever disregarded it anymore the life of a man.

Despite the advantages they knew in reto fire, the Jews remained throughout the expedition edition in the most complete neutrality, too cowards for taking sides with some or the others others; much more, despite their desire to us

To see us succeed, they insulted us in front of their masters, reserving the right to change their attitude tude, as soon as they could cover themselves with nothree shields.

The campaign was long and perilous, and we only achieved conquest thanks to the superiority of our weapons and to the discipline _plice of our troops.

We could not expel the Defeated Arabs, most of whom did not askthey only lived in laziness and indifference faith; we could not trust either promises of this wild and courageous people (the numerous insurrections that have succeededceded until 1871 show us in effect. that they only bent with difficulty under our yoke); it was then necessary to deploy our power to keep them under our dominion nation. A military governor was placed there. Algiers, and throughout the entire territory they createddifferent military centers, each with a different cun an Arab bureau, tasked with cracking down against the natives. It was preserved for a very long timetime the old administrative divisions and judicial bodies of the Arabs, whose leaders were under the direct orders of our French officers.

+

Today, we no longer have as administers than the sheikhs, who are the Auxiliaries to French civil servants. The Cadis are always responsible for rendering justice ICT between Muslims; offenses and crimes are punished by our French courts.

For a very long time, the Arabs and the Jews were considered indiscriminately by:
we, like the natives of our new colony.

Many villages were quickly established.
by our former soldiers who became concession-lands left uncultivated. We traced a few paths joining together the most large centers with the aim of facilitating com-trade and agriculture, but no communication route to enter the southern Algeria.

The Jews were not satisfied with this new... in this state of affairs. They were always

Slt AR 0 RO AS. LÉ EE "Mens «mr + ram ry
i = ' | 1 ' aa .

nmm bmd a Le
+ x

under the same conditions with respect to the Arathey and could not complain to the representatives
so many French people who treated them like natives.
This submission was painful for them in the eyes of the defeated, but their lack of energy forced themwçait was to endure it.

In the early years, we saw them very little to become somewhat closer to French villages, and to settle even in major centers. What-some left Algeria for good to settle in Europe. They spread little by little in the different states, in ca-

their origin song, so as not to be chased away and vilified.

In Algeria, some are trying to establish themselves They were like merchants, but they managed to do so. They have difficulty, as a result of despotism Arabs who are pursuing them everywhere. They are trying to obtain the protection of our nationals by slipping close to them, in their offering false praise. They approach our officials give them to understand that they are ready to serve as spies for them. They _sometimes feign boldness to attack- secretly sought the Arabs, but they did not accept never attempt a confrontation. With the Arab, flatterer and enemy of the Frenchman, with our na- nationals, friend and hater of the Arab, such was the The role of the Jew in Algeria.

However, he has more freedom than under the Arab domination, because, if he always has to endure their insults and blows, he did not He fears being killed more. For added safety, he no longer lives in the villages and stays nearby mutilation of our military centers.

He soon begins buying the products Arabs at rock-bottom prices and he resells them to our civil servants. He is often struck by part and others, but what do blows matter to him? From the moment he can deceive those he flatters?

We would like to depict here faithfully the indignation of our elderly French Algerians when they tell us with what a honeyed voice. These Jews were sly and hypocritical, supporting without complaining about the harshest humiliations, came to offer them merchandise that they had acquired them for a few pennies. Bad-

f

v.

i

"e

Li ` .
pack p iaai w
-

THE

DE nd Le aain

+
tawn `

X

. z N 4 pts dE s + ps reug $ Ouch a To 4

b

#
HAS

i 4

i
|

Despite the horror they inspired in us, they served us as protectors for to carry on their shameful trade, and that's because:
that instead of imitating the barbarity of the Arabs, -
We had the good humor to put up with them.
Despite his natural aversion, the Fran-
The French indirectly encourage the + illicit trade in Jews. At first glance, one limited himself to buying supplies from him-elements, of which he was almost alone holder; but he soon began to tend his nets, implying that he had some savings to invest. To ac-seeking to gain some influence, he tried to put himself in a position to...

to be under the aegis of our officers, to whom he shamelessly handed over his wife and daughters (1).

(4) Our old officers who, from the earliest days of the conquest, were attached to the Arab offices, doone can still recall the appearance of those old Jews when they humbly came to offer them their daughters,

...always taking care to ask for a service.

Since the earliest times, we have observed 'that the Jews have always prostituted their women and their girls to get the first money that was supposed to be the foundation of their fortune and future power.

He understood that this was one of our flawed sides. bles, and that is how he sought to atpull him.

His sole aim has always been to extract the most of possible money and to use force dausow to acquire a certain power; To achieve it, he is ready to use all the means.

Little by little, we see this vile slave, under the veil of hypocrisy, becoming prouder atnear the Arabs. He is not attacking them yet.

openly, but he seeks to elevate himself to to their detriment, by distributing them to our functions tionaries as dangerous enemies. He no longer leaves our Arab offices where he wears constant complaints, more or less founded against his first teachers; he stirs up the severity of our military magistrates against these unfortunate natives, who, although savage- - waves, seemed quite willing to bend under the yoke of the strongest. His complaints are rare. controlled, and often we are contrains of inflicting severe punishments and unfair. Is it possible, however, to doubt

as te be Ce Tu

of the veracity of this man, who, by a sem-full of affection, he gives you the honor of his wife or her daughter?

Our goal is not to let people believe in our readers that the Arab was safe from any reprimande; far be it from us to have such a false idea.
It is obvious that this courageous native does not could only slowly bend under our yoke. If patience was necessary to arrive-we were not subject to this submission.
less obliged to crack down, even cruelly,
against those who knew only force.
We had to make them understand that:
Algeria had become ours, by right of conquest, and that if we tolerated them in our country and let's not exterminate them, it was the only provided they would align themselves with our domination.

Unfortunately, alongside these punishments necessary, how many others, no less Se-
They only served to satisfy their thirst for revenge.
The Jew? This sorry fellow never retaliated to blows often deservedly inflicted upon him by the Arab,
when he came crawling to buy from him cheaply

price of a commodity he knew how to resell very expensive, but it was against his legitimate aggressor, an unfounded complaint, which...
warranted a severe application of the law.
frequent repetition of these scenes could not to go unnoticed by our natives, who were amazed by the confidence we We placed our trust in these Jews, who were naturally cowardly. and hypocrites. This was, moreover, one of the causes the frequent uprisings that followed the conquest of Algeria.

With a little foresight, we would have I had to foresee the Jew's goal, which was to... force to expel the Arab from black newcalf territory; he could then have, abusing our kindness, using our strength to place us under his dominion. MalhcuFortunately, we were blinded by his hypocrisis and his adulations; he seemed so willing to voluntarily support our interests that the The most skeptical didn't dare utter the slightest doubts about his intentions.

His lack of foresight should, however, have... betray. He was already abusing the trust he

z. - am m

thought he had inspired us to exploit us and satisfy his greed more quickly.

It was no longer enough for him to simply run a business. illicit; he was already thinking about the realization of his dream "Power through money"; he wanted to seize the wealth of others by means diverted.

Our unfortunate colonists did not delay to need the Jew's purse. The mostpart indeed did not have the resources bornnecessary to clear the land which belongs to them had been given; they could not cope to initial expenses without a loan and no bank would have agreed to do so.

the smallest loan (1). Under such conditions, they were constantly searching for a funders and capitalists being rare at that time in our colony, they had to He had to go to the Jew. He made himself beg.
to loosen the purse strings, and he did not paid the funds only after taking its precautions

'(i) Even today, our settlers still do not find that are very difficult to borrow, and they cannot to do so under very expensive conditions,

ae me ne =

guarantees by requiring a mortgage registration
-Cairo for a sum far exceeding that that he was offering (400 or 500 for 100 francs).
Our colonists were not the only ones to address to him; officers and other officials had also frequently resorts to this loan shark. With From them, he feigned misery, and said, in their giving money or merchandise, that's what it was there everything he owned, the fruit of his savings miles. He was then content with a lesser interestdre, but the borrower was withdrawing from the merchandise-said given in lieu of money a sum much lower than its estimate in the loan.

In a few years, the Jews were par-came to seize control of part of the treatments of our naive and good-natured officers: they reap-on the other hand, they were the fruit of the labors of our settlers. Algeria's fortune lay now too small to satisfy the am-greedy greed of this numerous breed,
Some also come to settle in Europe where several of their coreligionists have already extracted a certain fortune, which, .

3

thanks to their deceptions and the trust of various European peoples, had to go each ` day by increasing in an illegal manner!

t

We regret that we cannot enter here. in certain details and specify the facts by

, referring to individuals; but, as we

As we said in our introduction, we are placed from a general point of view, and _ we cannot make the slightest anticipation on the new book that will appear in the

during the year. From the very beginning, we were so duped by the Jews, that our officials, who ~ had paid so dearly for the services rendered, seemingly-

However, blaicnt be their debtors; in of

Under such conditions, they could not refuse their former lenders to accredit them in the Metropolis. Thanks to the recommendations which they had torn away, they settled in heroes upon arriving in France, and could consequently exerting influence on a larger scale Their illegal industry. So they already saw to carry out the first part of their program, since they had acquired in Algeria, thanks to 2.

stolen money, an influence such that one had to to submit to their will.

The Jews, however, do not intend to abandon this first field of their explows. Despite their fear of brute force _ of the Arab, their greedy nature makes it their duty to watch diligently to 'monopolize all the small fortunes that will be swallowed up in Algeria. After the settler soldiers, the cul- French investors, attracted by promises fallacious, will certainly come to bear on this new soil the fruit of their economies Mies, with the hope of seeing it increase thanks to diligent work. It is therefore essential, to achieve the common goal, that this race = cursed, spread throughout all countries without Never abandon a position you've gained. If the Jews succeeded, thanks to their hypocrisis, to seize most of the riches of this country, where they were only of vile slaves, they must still remain for to watch for new prey.

Thanks to the financial power they possess
They settle, they will fight secretly to obtain to abolish citizenship. Their provisional goal will be So, naturalization, and to achieve it, they will force to submit to them those who will use their scholarships.

The Jews fear only force, and they know that, thanks to European civilization, They have nothing to fear from that quarter. Consequently from the shortage of money, they will be able to make fruit-
to invest their capital in a considerable way
They will exploit misery on the one hand, and Furthermore, in the case of public borrowing, they become-including the most powerful shareholders.
change, that a few thousand savages natives would be enslaved, that's fine-early on, to hold under its control a part of Civilized Europe. Nothing will stop it in its ascending walk, and she will not see the collapse to build his fantastic scaffolding only when All our blind people will finally understand this what she was, what she is, and what she remains tera. Each people will simply need to make him understand that he wants to be the sole master of his own house him, so that this cursed race may regain its primary purpose.

CHAPTER II

VOLUNTARY ENROLLMENT,

Despite the relative submission of our indi-Algerian genes, we were forced each year to increase the size of our troops in our new colony. We had to...
to ensure peace and quiet for our settlers, who,
In the early days, they were forced to over-guarding like soldiers the lands they were clearing so painfully. The Arabs did not submit.
as much as they were sure that we had in Algeria sufficient forces to repress severely punish the slightest insurrection. Mal-Despite their military inferiority, they hoped for a long time to regain their independence dance. They were indeed afraid that we wouldn't We imposed our customs on them, and they saw on the other hand, with rage the protection that we we granted to their former slaves. They did not could admit that a people, strong and powerfulsant, since he had defeated them, remained at the Thank you to the cowardly and hypocritical Jew. They pre-saw the sad situation that would be theirs done, if, abusing our strength, he were to arrive by She was to dominate in Algeria. They hoped however, that our blindness would not have that for a very limited time.

As a result of our recruitment method military, ct by the obligation where we are.

we found it necessary to continually send trou-
In Algeria, our numbers are dwindling.
knows in the metropolis, and our situation becomes-

He was born highly critical in the presence of jealous neighbors. and provocative. To counter this danger, presant, they considered the voluntary enlistment of our natives. We hoped that the Jews, despite their natural cowardice, they would not hesitate not to serve France, in compensation for the the protection she had granted them.

addressed himself indiscriminately to the Arabs and to the Jews, and, to encourage them, they offered, in addition to a bonus upon hiring, naturalization for those who would make their desee. This was a great favor which some And the others knew the importance. For the Jew especially, he was momentarily the fulfilling his wishes. French, he would not have There's nothing more to fear in carrying out his exploits. on a vast scale.

From the very first call, the Arabs presented terent in large enough numbers that one could immediately form several specialized regiments ciaux (riflemen and spahis). There were none. of the same Jewish race, none of which members did not deign to respond to our invitation tion. Its purpose was not, in fact, to serve the France, but to be served by it. The Jews knew they would obtain naturalization by money, and if, on the one hand, they were too - cowards to don the military uniform, they they also needed all their freedom 'to put into action the plan they had devised.

We are not naive enough to believe

`
4
r
THE

,

JEWISH ALDERNESS 35

pairousness or out of love for the France. © The bonus was only a small apartment,
This is not the case with naturalization.
native Saurazes also included
I knew I was coming out of the domination of France, that would mean falling back under that of another European power, and their their teachers had taught them to distinguish com-Our authority was gentle, compared to that of other nations, such as England or Germany. If the Arabs did not help us-They didn't know, however, we were no longer with them.
unsympathetic; we would even have obtained their complete submission, if we had not protected the Jew at their expense. Whatever the case may be Therefore, we must recognize that, in all the campaigns where we needed them, our riflemen and our spahis valiantly
They did their duty for France; we must add that during the uprisings of their coreligionists, often motivated by con-Ifs, we were not betrayed by Soldiers, when an expedition

,

An unexpected change forced us to appeal

To their bravery, one always presented itself.
a number much higher than the one requested.

What have we done for these men?
days ready to shed their blood for France?
We gave them the bonus set during * & their commitment. For naturalization, yi Despite our promises, we refused it.
to the bravest. We would find in the backs- | ministerial officers (if these have arrived: (until then), thousands of requests for natural- ;
realizations, addressed by former soldiers:
whose fathers themselves had served before them, and some of whose parents were:
fallen on our battlefields; these de- .
requests generally remained without response response, and when the petitioners insisted;
too close to our civil servants, these ones!
had orders to crack down on these old ser- |

PESE E Em EE D.

speeds. z
This, some of our readers will tell us-eurs, is incompatible with our character;
and we hesitate to believe such a blatant Injustice. We will simply respond to them.

that verification is easy, limiting ourselves to add that this is a Jewish act of revenge, to to which we remain almost strangers, by a consequence of our blindness.

The refusal of Jews to enlist in the service of France should have been an averted for us beneficial weaving; unfortunately this fact capital had gone almost unnoticed by the residents of the metropolis. Our civil servants
The Algerians themselves were so charmed through their hypocrisy, which they had not attached to it that of minimal importance. The Jews, from those who remained fearful of losing ground,
They were anticipating the explanations. They were parmilks constantly of their attachment to France, adding that they were ready to to serve, but that they could not enter the same regiments as our Arabs who, pre-were they aiming, were they intending to us betray. They also said that their desire was to make themselves better known to us, so that we granted them the status of Frenchmen;
they would then be loyal citizens whose France would be proud.

Our officers dared not utter the slightest doubt about protests that seemed so sincere. These native Jews were in besides, they are such skillful usurers that one cannot-They were going to anticipate their intentions. Weren't they entitled, moreover, to collect a certain profit on their loans, in the presence of the risks they Did they have to run? Didn't they comply?
to the ordinance of December 7, 1835 stating that in the French possessions north of Africa, the convention on interest-bearing loans Did they dictate the rules of the game? It wasn't them who... were going to look for the loans, but they who came to find them, driven by necessity sity; by advancing them money, they do not sa-they didn't know if they would be paid, and that these conditions

the good guys had to pay for the bad guys.
Our naive civil servants were unfortunately unaware of... luckily, the Jews only lent money after having taken all their precautions; if they do not breastfeed
If they couldn't find our colonists, it was because they knew that These were obliged to come to Cux; if they laisaicnt pricr, c'était pour volcr plus facileour nationals' last remaining resources.

THERE
~- mee PR ge pe re
EAE S SA AEAE to Pc NE EAS,

TA pyr st = The nés Des GORE ST a

D pe han #7

er +

- mam: a

z LS e a. y popr ea ms adini es

-amer vans

ss
am TLT P TE a

mn re Fp ap E SE le a nt nt i > << W -ao A Le ee tb 4 n

Hey
peA

Our readers will not be too surprised by
'this trust, if they have ever found themselves in : the presence of these native Jews. These jn 'avicent pas encore le audac des ces brocan-

those who widely exploit misery in

They were major European centers.

I suppose, moreover, that this poor wretch covered rags, buried so many treasures, and
'so willingly deceived those for whom he 'feigned such profound respect? With each loan,
'He seemed to be giving away everything he owned, and we could not find it right to strip
"Thus this obliging lender who appeared
He was ruined; Zion wouldn't reimburse him.
As for the Arabs, they were treated as savages.
Rages. If they would agree to serve in our ranks, they were only driven there by their naturally belligerent (1). Such was at least the opinion of our officers, based generally

(1) The Arab is eager to don the military uniform, and that legitimate pride is one of the main causes of first settlements of our natives.

nm, and on the explanations of the Jews. If the Arabs they were killing for France, that's because that they were forced to do so as a result of their voluntary commitment; the Jews, on the other hand, they only wanted to serve France and to be governed by common law. Some-Some even added that if they hadn't had serious reasons to resist their They would have refused the desire to commit.

bonus that was offered to them for taking part service, |

We will wonder how our officers could give credence to such mendacious accounts Eers and such fallacious promises? That's that at that time the Jews were unknown to most French people. We couldn't sup-
To assume, upon seeing them crawl, that they would try
One day to rule the world. If today we got to know them through our dedication:
thinks, it's that after acquiring power Through money, they revealed themselves as they wished to be. let it be. To get to that point, they had to They cleverly concealed their game, because if our representatives had had the slightest doubt about

Their intentions, they would have been driven out of Algerie ct would never have found in Europe this credit which allowed them to exploit the mid-
This will kill trade through usury.
exorbitant.

We believe we have sufficiently established the difference that existed between the two species of natives of our new colony for to address the serious issue of colonization, by determining the role played by the Jew. We we have shown how the Arab, savage and

'Lazy, but strong and courageous, had fought to maintain its independence; after having Having lost all hope of winning her back, he does not hesitate not to enlist in our regiments and to serve bravely France. The Jew, at the coniraire, fearing the brutality of the Arab, his

The first master approached the victor.
took advantage of his good faith and deceived him with impunity.
ment.

}
|

CHAPTER IV

OF COLONIZATION.

We regret that we are unable to provide a thorough treatment.
this important question, but we must we confine ourselves to our title and do not that the history of colonization for let's return immediately to the subject at hand.
However, if we are obliged to be brief,
We will strive to be accurate.

We will divide this chapter into five parts and we will deal successively with: the domain of the State, — of the different modes of alienation state-owned properties, concessions, — of individual private property, — of the tran-

PN TER

me mg --

real estate actions, — and finally of the pro-indigenous property.

The part of Africa conquered by the France had been militarily occupied, but had only been partially so. The result was the obligation to fight incessantly the natives and, lacking culture and industry, Algeria had remained for France a charge without compensation.

The Treaty of Tafna, concluded with Abd-el-Kader in 1837, had indeed provided some respite; but the illustrious emir had not benefited from the peace than to rouse the indigenous populations. The French government had found itself by continued in this alternative: conquering Al-We manage the whole thing or abandon it. we were too far advanced to turn back and he it was necessary to go back on the campaign trail to to achieve the occupation of our African colony cainc. T and to colonize it, that is to say, to surrender it culture and industry to the Europeans. We do not We will not recount the long works of the conquest, mixed with partial failures and successes brilliant, we will limit ourselves to talking about the colonization.
Towards the end of 1840, General Bugeaud, appointed to the government of Algeria, between-undertook this dual task of conquering Africa

The timing was not right. The colonists, ruined and discouraged by the disasters of 1839, were hardly tempted to repeat the experiment rience. Furthermore, a difficulty for the work of colonization stemmed from the uncertainty of Property. The bad faith of the natives. .€t the incompetence or greed of the Euro- settlers Europeans had too often affected the contracts of sales, exchanges, etc. The result was Great confusion. Consequently, no one dared not buy, nor risk improvements on a surface from which he could be stripped after having done them.

- An order dated October 1, 1844 seemed to remedy this state of affairs. She regulated-risa, under certain conditions, all the prior sales, establishes the principle of repurchase of the annuities established, settled the formalities expropriation for reasons of public utility and, to achieve settlement and to the development of the territory, struck by a special tax on land left uncultivated.

which she subjected to expropriation.

S I. Of the State's domain

During the conquest of Algeria, the administration French transmission had no other claim to make.
- tion on the conquered territory than that of se to put in possession of state property Algerian, as it was constituted between the hands of the Turkish government. Unfortunate-sultanatingly, after the fall of Algiers, the Turks disappeared They left without leaving any records, plans, or archives, nor any authentic document for-before helping to recognize the domain of the State.
We had to, as the goods had belonging to the Turkish government, furniture and buildings, rights and royalties, were recognized and denounced, to declare them united at State-owned properties. Properties belonging in Mecca and Medina were now required be governed, rented or leased by the administration Transfer of land ownership. Various decrees of 1840, 1843 and 1818 were later intended either to confirm, or to count and extend lan-connection to the domain of property belonging to mosques, marabouts, zawiyas and, in general, to all Muslim religious establishments Le Mans. In this history of the formation of in the domain of the State in Algeria, we must also include the sequestration, a rigorous measure reuse which first struck the Turkish emigrants and hostile to France, then populations in-third parties and which has been regulated by various decrees (1834 and 1840).

Finally, a decree of July 26, 1834, attributed to the State vacant and ownerless property: this devolution, confirmed by art. 137 of lord-decree of August 21, 1839 on the financial system of Algeria, which added the properties in abandonment opened a source for the Estate important acquisitions, especially when the Articles 109 and 83 of the ordinance of October 1st Articles 1844, 46 and 5 of the ordinance of June 21, 1846

meeea qe Gun ge ap Ceep- eagya S
-~ aan
$ Weeen T OR aa © 7 E —

TS pg RE mt a “pee + >

had assimilated all vacant properties marshes and all the lands that would not have were requested within a certain timeframe, during the general verification of properties.

When the law of June 16, 1851 came into effect, that it was considered as the charter of the proland ownership in Algeria, it was rightly believed having to place at the beginning of this law provisions tions on the domain of the State and principallies about its constitution. It is this law that has clearly established the principles in the light of which it is easy to recognize what makes, or not, part of the state domain in Algeria, and we understand what the importance was a clear and precise solution in this regard, since what is not included in the the domain of the State must constitute naturalthe portion reserved for private property indigenean or European.

According to Article 4 of the Law of June 16 1851, the state domain in Algeria, comincludes: 1° The land, fortifications and the ramparts of the squares that are no longer squares | war, and in general all goods that have ceased to be part of the public domain without 1° entering private property; 2° property vacant and ownerless; 3. lost things or abandoned, such as shipwrecks or rivers and land wrecks; 4° the unclaimed assets.

In accordance with the ordinance of 1844, one considered as vacant the land of which the the owner had not served his title deeds to the administration within three days months. The legislator had, moreover, admitted the principle of expropriation for reasons of inculture. |
_ From September 4, 1830, the administration of the state domain was entrusted to a director.

owner of public domains and revenues, who had only a few agents under his command.

From a management and administrative point of view
In the administration of state property, it is necessary to distinguish-to protect buildings that are used for services public vices of those who do not have this affect-tation: the first ones are administered by the heads of the departments to which they are assigned,
while the others are by the administration

CES LI pan obert a ME ay OS i PO era ne o — 4 r G y a O a mm at e = mm - à i nt ma

-are T

E AEAEE
land management and can be rented,
exchanged or alienated.

Article 6 of the law of June 16, 1851 provides that the assets belonging to the State can be alienated, exchanged, granted, leased or allocated to public services public entities. The allocation of state-owned property to public services could not take place in Algeria that by virtue of a decision of the governor-General manager. Later (order of November 9) 1845; it was enough to make the request to

- head of department, who communicated it to the prefect;

it was then carried out by a decision of our Minister of War, surrendered on the proposal or opinion of the Governor General.

State-owned buildings that are not assigned to a public service, must, at the termy of the ordinance of 1845, to be leased in the following forms: The leases have licu at public auction, on the notebooks charges approved by the Minister of war (today by the governor). They are done in administrative form and passed through the finance director and the trade (the prefect). The legislation do- Algeria's national law does not, however, prohibit in an absolute sense the rentals or amo- negotiated settlements with regard to the property of the domain. It is indeed stated in the 1845 ordinance: "Nevertheless, if of exceptional circumstances require it, the leases can be made by mutual agreement with the prior and special authorization of the minister of the war, on the advice of the superior council of the administration (1). The duration of leases will not exceed nine years. Later this right The prefects are granted the power to make direct decisions. "with the assistance of the Prefecture councils, but they can only do so after estim- - contradictory information on the rental value of buildings. If the duration of the lease is agreed upon by agreement must exceed three years, and if the building- The state-owned property has an annual rental value of more than 1,000 francs, it is up to the governor general that it is up to him to rule on this

E (1) This part of the ordinance of 1845 relating to leases of Negotiated agreements have led to numerous abuses.

tap Re A ue “2

rental with the intervention of the Council of government.

The woods and forests (1) belonging to State domain, to municipalities, to established-public or undivided estates between They, the individuals, are equally and Full rights subject to the forestry regulations.
operational difficulties prevented the State to draw from the forest wealth it possesses In Algeria, the entire party that this wealth behaves. Furthermore, the fear of seeing re-to reignite the fires, which, over several points, have wrought such deplorable devastation-tions, diverts capital from all exploitations Somewhat large forestry stations. At

(i) We do not want to give our readers any impressionthose who believe that there are forts in Algeria like ours in we have in France. In most of these forests, the ar-These plants hardly deserve the name of shrubs; they are barely 35 or 40 centimeters in diameter and exceed-rarely feels a height of 3 meters.

However, it would be very easy to create very beautiful forests in Algeria, but for that it would be necessary to address the drought. These works would therefore fall to the a government which unfortunately remains uninvolved in everything that interests Algeria.

ee +

terms of the specifications agreed upon on June 10
In 1861, the cork oak forests were... ceded for ninety years devoted-crops. This long duration of the leases was motivated by this twofold consideration, that he
On the one hand, it takes a lot of time for the forest regeneration, and that it is right, toto take part, to allow farmers some time to enjoyment long enough for them to be to benefit from the work they have done.

Having clearly established what were state-owned property, we will we will deal with the different modes of alienationtion and deal specifically with colonization.

$ II. Different modes of alienation State-owned property. — Concessions.

State-owned property is alienated negligible and therefore subject to prescription. Contrary-compared to what exists in France, the buildings state-owned land in Algeria can pass into the private domain of individuals, without the in-prior intervention of the legislative power.

The idea of a concession must have arisen.
first as the mode according to which there had the right to hand over the state-owned lands, in the interest of colonization, in the hands of those who were supposed to cultivate them. The most self Fertile only has value in fact that which it gives the work of man, and at the beginning of our occupation, work had many Adverse circumstances. It's a matter of taking up arms.
that our brave colonists had to defend lands they had cleared. In such under those conditions, selling to colonized the field he was supposed to guard as a soldier. Moreover, it was not possible, in the early years following the conquest, to have of fairly considerable extent to establish a a well-defined system of alienation. It was... remains taking it one day at a time, following the army, and as in camps, which were indeed being created population centers, which have since been had become very important. So we were conforced by circumstances to give lands to those who, first, presented themselves were for cultivating them.

Unfortunately, the concessions were soon subjected to such formalities that they became an obstacle to development and to progress of colonization. By order of the governor-Governor General, dated April 18, 1841, a private individuals could, without spending a penny, to become a concessionaire of a certain extentdue from state-owned lands, but he did not have the advantages of ownership. During its implementation in possession, 11 was only issued to him once provisional title granting him only a proconditional right, that is to say subordinate to the accomplishment of a crowd of conditions and charges, and by virtue of under this title he could neither alienate nor mortgage that, without administrative authorization, the Concessionary properties.

According to the order of December 9 In 1845, state-owned buildings could to be alienated: 1° At public auctions, in

-authorisation from the Minister of War;

2 by private sale, and based on appraisal

prior, authorized by an order.

royal; 3° by way of exchange carried out according to

E en Re EOE De P RES re Lo E EA eaa who .

o mam -oae e —

= ee aro s oe y a av or nn 0 e am M d te CR RER ER A, bo

p Tady

— :

certain forms; 49 as a concession sion, either individual to settlers or indigenous, either collective to communes.

Later, a new ordinance (1847) was to supplement the provisions relating to concessions mode. It conferred on governor general the power to authorize the concessions of 25 hectares and below on the territory of the new population centers tion regularly approved; it regulated the form of concession applications; — it diknows that the sale is the responsibility of the conassignees in favor of the State would not run that upon expiry of the deadline set for the executioncut of work required as a condition suspensive on the part of the concessionaires; — that imposed on the concessionaires the obligation- a prior deposit of 10 francs per hectare; it determined the shape and the effects of the provisional title; — she traced the formalities relating to the verification of travaux; — finally she authorized the governor general and the Minister of War to grant, in case of a legitimate excuse, to the dealers extensions of the deadline for completion of these same works. The concessionaires natives were exempted from the obligation of security deposit.

anea
<

A major flaw in the concession system unions, as organized by the ordinances of 1845 and 1847, consisted of the fact that the con- assignee acquiring ownership only subject to a suspensive condition and not able to under penalty of forfeiture, mortgage the assets thus provisionally granted, nor the trans- to make available to third parties without the consent of the au- administrative authority, it followed that this The dealer had absolutely no means of credit, and was out of order, at the

to the great detriment of colonization, to procurer, if not at ruinous interest rates the advances that could have been made to him- necessary to establish or develop its exploitation. That's when we started to to address the Jew, who was going to take advantage of the dif-

a facility created for the colonists to exploit and thus indirectly appropriate the fruit of their labors.

We will not discuss the role played by the Jew in colonization only after the history-that of this important question, by explaining how all the improvements we believed to do up to the present day, have always been fictithey and only produced a negative effect.

A decree of April 26, 1851, substituted, in this which concerns concessions, a property under a resolutory condition to the system of the ac-acquisition of property subject to the following conditions Pensive. The acts of concession in Algeria will now give immediate ownership buildings granted, at the expense of the ac-fulfillment of the prescribed conditions, and the concessionaires will be able to, without authorization prior administrative procedures, mortgaging and to transfer, whether for consideration or free of charge, '
all or part of the land granted to them.

Unfortunately, the colon remained for the ob-retention of the final title, even in the case execution of his duties, at the discretion of the authority. In addition, the credit of the concessions-the naires were far from being free of the en-obstacles that have always prevented him from becoming,

for colonization, a principle of force and progress; in the event of a change of ownership, in In effect, the resolutory condition weighed on the successive holders and on the creditors hy-pottery. One could not consider as a serious means of credit a mortgage possibly capable of being carried away from same blow by the event that will cause eva-to bind the right of ownership to the constituent.

If the main provisions of the decree of 1851 did not achieve the goal with a view to-which ones had been enacted, we must recognize-to be born that they had introduced into Algeria.-- to the detriment of colonization, a new germ of unease and ruin.' As a result of facilities granted by article 7 of this decree for the sale of state-owned land under concession, no concession was being sought for the culture (culture being virtually impossible, (due to lack of credit), but for the sale; hence the most sterile speculations and the most disastrous form of speculation.

The decree of 1851 finally brought about the innovations

The following points: 1° he unloaded in a manner general all concessionaires of the obligation-to provide a deposit of 10 francs per hectare; — 2 he granted to the prefects the right to authorize, on the advice of the pre-facture, concessions of an extent of less than 50 hectares; — 3° he assigned to dealers a mandatory deadline, under penalty of forfeiture, from three months from the date of the concession to request their taking possession of the granted property; — 4° it surrounded the act of the verification of the work imposed on the concessions Zionists and he submitted to publicity, in the interests of third parties, the administrative decision which declares the building exempt from the condition-resolution, or which pronounces forfeiture;
— 5° he ordered that after the forfeiture pro-stated, if the dealer had done on the building of useful and observed improvements as detailed in the verification report, it was proceeded publicly, through administrative channels.

at the auction of the said building, for the
the sum resulting from these improvements attributed either to the expropriated party or to their creditors ciers (1). By this decree, it is the judicial authorityciaire which has become competent to rule at least on the disputes raised between the dealer and the ticrs, with respect to the buildings under concession, and administrative jurisdiction administrative only remains with regard to the relations between the concessionaire and the State.

Experience has shown that the system of colonization, which takes as its starting point land transfers to settlers
by way of concession, or subject to conditions suspensive, or subject to a resolutory condition, was the most defective one imaginable,
and the least likely to attract in Algeria European workers and capital. The

(1) It was on this last point that the Jews based their guarantees. The added value resulting from the improvements tions made by the colon was often greater than the value attributed to the building at the time of the concession sion. It necessarily followed that the Jews withdrew always the full amount of their claims, then that they had lent much smaller sums

This was the first means used by the Jews to ento raise up for our settlers the fruit of their labor.

Mrs. eaa te

e_r =—

concessions were initially subject to delays caused by administrative formalities administrative: how many people full of good will, confidence, bringing with them Haven't they grown tired of all their hard-earned resources?
disgusted, ruined in the circuits that me-for years, they were using the power-see civilians in military power, offices of the ministry in Paris at the government offices lying in Algiers! On the other hand, the concession Given that, what was the colonist's situation?
The administration believed it had the right to impose to the dealer of countless prescriptions tions, and then to ensure their execution by an inquisitorial surveillance. Seduced by the idea of receiving a piece of land without Nothing to pay, settlers showed up who had neither the energy, nor the experience, nor the essential financial resources for any establishment. A very small number put fulfill the prescribed conditions and acquire a definitive title deed. The others, no having failed to pay within the specified period, sc were always found under the threat of eviction
| 4

tion; they could neither sell their property, nor exchange it, nor offer the lender any guarantees serious; to find money, they de-were going to have to endure crushing conditions. None credit institution did not come to their sc-classes. They were languishing; the authorities had to shut them down.
the eyes: if she had expropriated all the con-defaulting assignees, the colony would have found depopulated (1).

A decree of July 95, 1860, was introduced. manage a new system for distribution lands intended for colonization. This decret first deals with the perimeters of colonnisation whose fixation must precede this Distribution of state-owned land. Projects These perimeters are prepared in the territory civil by the prefects, in military territory by the generals commanding the provinces and

(1) It was rare for a dealer to fill allthe conditions imposed on him. We could nothoped, from the outset, to find wealthy settlers who willing to sacrifice a hard-earned fortune. Those who were demanding concessions, having no ressource and unable to borrow, would have been exowned without the forced tolerance of the authorities,

Pie da aaa un Ge pm

m æ

ER.

Orders issued by ministerial decision. The decision ministerial which establishes a perimeter for colonization nisation, must designate the parts of the subdivisionment and the batch numbers that must be held in reserve, both in the public interest than for the immediate placement of settlers, and determine the mode of alienation of others lots.

Nothing is more important, from the point of view of Algeria's development, which is a fixation suitable colonization perimeters, and it falls essentially within the scope of responsibilities the government to verify, before proceeding last to the distribution of land to settlers available: 1° if the country in question is a few-pler is sufficiently defended, and offers its settlers all the guarantees of safety and peaceful possession; — 2° if this country is found, Furthermore, under economic conditions such as those who will come to live there will be able to easily thrive there and settle there with advances tage. Until now, this fundamental rule, in In terms of colonization, it has not been sufficiently observed in Algeria. Thus, one does not have

D

that too often tolerated or even allowed settler settlements 60 or 100 leagues from the sea, in the middle of the mountains or at the edge of the desert. As a result, these settlers, far from the coast, without communication routes easy cations, found themselves in con-precarious situations, they could only survive with the help of resources provided by the military occupation to remain silent, and were reduced to misery when They were beginning to lack these.

According to a circular from the governor-General de Mac-Mahon, dated 29 no-November 1864, the colonization perimeters must be formed around the chiefs of the three provinces. It is only in cflet as much as European populations will thus grouped together instead of being scattered, that one will see the development of product exchange and to establish this multitude of small industries which are born in civilized societies.

The colonization perimeters once ar-restricted and the free disposal of land re-.

known, the first and principal mode of alienation nation, which is enshrined in the decree of 1860, is

Denia has notes + dt mn $ E ~ ete m7 8 ne On aa D a nn à TR de m Un — PR ER

? 5 č ka f oee eee ©,
(J

-h een à es © a Aile

"
Mr. +

cs nl mt mt 4e mt ein 2e

<_> mmt e

JEWISH ALGERIA: 65

that of fixed-price sales. This system of fixed-price sales are recommended by example from America where it has long been adopted time, and where emigration from Europe comes from,
each year, bring in a contingent so con-a staggering number of workers. It is, moreover, that which presents itself under the most simple. i

New provisions on sales to Fixed price and open office land domain-the laws in Algeria were enacted by the de-Decree of December 31, 1864. Article 4 of this
The decree establishes the strict rule to be followed.
future plans for land alienation state-owned lands allocated for the purpose of creation or the expansion of colonization perimeters lion. The price of each lot for sale is fixed by the Governor General, the Gov-government understood.

Fixed-price sales are made by the registrar of the district's estates where the properties are located; they are, two months at least before the start of the operation, an-announced by means of posters, and they continued

has.

Nuent until all stock is completely depleted.
The price of each lot is no longer payable by thirds, but by fifths: one-fifth to at the time of signing the contract, and the others year after year. After paying the in-legal interest for unpaid portions of the price
This interest, in cash, was reduced by a de-subsequent decree of July 21, 1866 at the rate of 5 percent. The buyer pays, in addition to the price of the sale, stamp duties, etc.
registration and transcription hypothe-Cairo.

Fixed-price sales have been established according to a draft contract finalized in a uniform for the three provinces, and of which the
The main conditions can be summarized as follows:
three points: 1° payment in five annual installments of selling price; — 2° taking possession of the buyer after payment of the pre-first fifth; — 3rd emancipation of all charges relating to the implementation land value. All sales become definitive by the mere fact of the signing-the contract's structure, without being subordinate to

. qre-mpa Rens mar at LS ont ne ce on A 2 nn ESS OS 9 ES dd end PT

nt RS RE nes nd DS nn RSS A nn And RER RS
` +

1
s

. <- m

no kind of administrative ratification (1).

When it comes to lands which, by their proximity to a town or village, or to im-major communication routes, by fa-irrigation practices, and finally by the conditions special economic zones where they are located already have a real and very ap- market value precious, and must, by that very fact, be sought after by a large number of buyers, as this market value comes solely from the social and economic environment where the lands find themselves placed and it would be unfair that the state was not called upon to benefit from a more-value that he himself created, the decree of July 95, 1860, had to authorize for this case the Public auction. Another case where there is a licit to resort to the same method.

Is the sales price the one specified in the articles?
Article 17 of the decree of April 1854 concerning the divisions

(1) The State's privilege as seller existing right-that upon final payment, the buyer finds only difeasily borrowed, by the sole fact that the property
the building is conditional upon his payment of the price in five annual installments, and that the lender does not know if These payments will be made regularly.

Oe om em eo

of undivided property between the state domain and private individuals.

The decree of 1860, in accordance with the opinion issued by the High Council and by the di-the Algerian authorities had not pros-critizes in an absolute manner the faculty of concession. Why repudiate the right to grant-der some lots needed to build the first houses of a village where come-artisans and farmers will group together tors, when it comes to establishing centers of population whose creation is often commandated by a political interest and is not always without difficulty, and when it comes to the establishment of former soldiers who have ar-pink with their blood the earth they want to clear-Dear ?

However, the power to grant was restricted.

confined to the narrowest possible limits. Thus concessions could no longer be done only exceptionally by the minister and on the reserved lots within the perimeters of colonization; they could not, moreover, excede 30 hectares, and did not impose on the con-

assignee of an obligation other than that of

to build a house on the land granted.

The decree of 1860 had finally established retroactive-actively by providing the same benefits advantages for all owners whose con- the transfers were prior, provided that they fulfill the building requirement stipulated in their titles.

The decree of December 31, 1864 states that the free land grant system is now removed. The free access to However, the concession is maintained, for the cases where defense needs or any other reasons of public order would require on a advanced point of the country the creation of a center of population. The granting of concessions can no longer be authorized by a decision- ministerial sion, it is necessary, for any concession-

sion whose extent would even be less than 30 hectares, let it be returned by the emperor a special decree, based on the minister's report of the war, according to the proposals of the government

' Governor-General of Algeria.

Article 12 of the same decree grants to all

D ter E — P The JR To me em y SEES the concessions made to date the liberation-cancellation of any other termination clause than that of the payment or the redemption of the sale. However, it leaves the obligation in place. made to dealers during a period of ten years, to deliver without compensation to the State all the land he would need for the construction of roads, paths, aqueducts and watercourses, with ordinary easements of freeboards. They must finally pay the im-property tax and all the other taxes that come-would encumber property in Algeria

S$ III. On individual private property.

In Algeria, private and individual property dualism originated and was established as a result alienations of state-owned land and: numerous real estate transactions which have agreements were soon concluded between the Europeans ac-chased after the conquest and the natives.

* Private property has not really been cons-

|
|
}
|
|

PE US PS 2 o

-- — + am — -a

Jewish Algeria (laughs)

titled in Algeria only by the ordinances of October 1, 1844 and July 21, 1846.

Property acquisitions made before 1844 had only resulted in conféto offer European buyers a property Uncomfortably seated and unsteady. It was therefore a matter of consolidate this property.

According to the ordinance of 1844, were
The sales were validated and declared unassailable.
consented to on behalf of indigenous landowners to Europeans, which could be argued of nullity due to insufficient resources sees cadis, husbands, fathers, brothers and chiefs of family, having, without special mandate, stipulated for minors or absentees, for married women, for children, brothers, Sisters or relatives of the same degree. The sale made by the Muslim mother from the property of her minor children remained outside those which were validated by the order.

The same ordinance stated that no officer land or sea forces, no function-citizen or military or civilian employee not for-

would, during the duration of his service er.

— ei ————

geria, to acquire real estate there, directly or indirectly, by himself or by intermediary persons, or become pre-fear or tenant of these same properties by lease exceeding nine years, without authorization-tion of the Minister of War. — A second prohibition, which is far more serious, applies-also qua-
real estate action, to all acquisitions at onerous title to buildings located outside limits that would be assigned to the establishments-European settlements and colonization by orders from the Minister of War; there were none exceptions that, with respect to acquired rights, actions taken by the State for public services,
or by individuals for establishments industrial and commercial sectors with self-special intervention by the Minister of War.

At the time the ordinance was promulgated
From October 1, 1844, economic progress Algeria's efforts were hampered not only by the uncertainty that hung over all the properties, but also as a result of the land cultivation failure caused by the difficulties of a nascent colonization,

_

and especially by the spirit of speculation which pro-led Europeans to seek a fortune pide rather in land trafficking than in agricultural work.

Unfortunately, this order led to a large number of lawsuits; it was noticed It quickly became clear that the remedy was insufficient and one decided to undertake the verification by administrative measure of all properties real estate in Algeria. It is for this purpose that the order of July 21st was issued let 1846 ct the ministerial decrees of 17 Sep-November of the same year.

The goal of the colonization of Algeria must to be: the settlement of the country to create a defensive force that prepares for the future reduction in army size; fertility soil preparation to ensure protection against any event the tuality of the food supply for its inhabitants; finally the development of the territory to achieve the tax that will first disinherit and eventually paren-enrich the Treasury. Colonization will be able to operate either by settlers already established in Algeria,

-aee CR RE CEE de es + + © + D either by the new settlers who demand the concession of land to be cultivated (1).

According to Article 1 of the Ordinance of July 21, 1846, the Minister of War was tasked with determining by special decrees
the perimeter of the territories within the extent of which the rural property titles of-_ had to be checked, and we can see, in con-consulting the Official Collection of the Acts of the Government government of Algeria, numerous decrees under which various parts of the territory-have successively been subjected to the measure of the general verification of pro-privileges. Each decree of the Minister of War was made public by means of posters and by a double insertion in the uni- Monitor versel, then official journal, in Paris and at Algerian Monitor. Within a timeframe that the or-

---

(1) These three key points should have concerned everyone particularly the French government, unfortunately- sement i! completely neglected them and colonization would have made no progress if a few rare capitalists had not bought sufficiently vast tracts of Lorraine to to plant vines there.

giving fixed at three months, from this double insertion, any European or native who claims to own land including within the designated area must file its property titles at the prefecture of each department.

This same order states that "the seller unpaid as well as the landlord with a perpetual annuity-tuelle or their assignee, and generally anyone claiming to have a real right on the building, will be allowed to do or to com- to complete the filing of property titles": they there have an interest, since their rights can be compromised as a result of the decision to be made on the validity of property titles and on their -field application.

According to the text of the ordinance itself, the the delimitation it prescribes is mandatory for both the natives and the Europeans, and it also seems to follow from this same text that this legislation specific to Algeria, by derogation from the principles of Islamism, not re-knows, in this case, only titles to which cannot replace the prescription.

The lands included within the perimeter of-completed by the Minister of War and whose property was not claimed within the time limits prescribed, are deemed vacant and without maì-tre, ct the administration can make it immediate-immediately the concession to the clauses and conditions actions that she deems appropriate.

The mission to verify the securities produced has was entrusted to the administrative authority. After cnavoir entrusted the litigation council, this jurisdiction has been replaced by councils of direction, then by prefectural councils.
However, they were not competent to verify the titles of rural properties located within the boundaries of territories that would not have not been determined by special decrees of the minister.

According to the ministerial decree of 2 no-
November 1846, notarial deeds passed since July 5, 1830, but before October 31, 1844, can be considered regular in the form when they contain the statement original titles prior to July 5, 1830;
only these original titles should

EE of the RER EtnÉ
+ At GR CO ONG a

Jewish Algeria Oon

-eee eea ae a mn

not to be mere acts of notoriety.

The same decision that declared regular in the form the titles produced, should order that one of the members of the prefectural council sc would transport to the scene to make the apapplication of the titles, with the assistance of one or several experts appointed ex officio by the conprefecture seat, if the raid had licu in the province of Algiers, and by the member deJégué if the descent took place in another province.

Article 16, paragraph 2 of the ordinance of July 21, 1846, stipulates that following the homohousing the prefectural council makes a decision sion which serves as title in favor of the owner, and which cannot be attacked, for whatever reason whether by third parties who have not claimed previously. But opposition may have arisen. to occur before the approval decision, Herein lies an important distinction. as to the competent authority to decide on these oppositions which, if they have occurred during the application of land titles, have due, at the request of the parties, to be inserted in the minutes of the proceedings. If the questions raise only a simple question of limits, they are the responsibility of the conprefectural seal; but if they raise a Regarding property ownership, the prefectural council must postpone the approval until the civil courts have ruled on the dispute.

When the securities are filed within the deadlines fixed, do not meet all the conditions required, the prefectural council must declare in to reduce nullity. Along the same lines, It was decided that, assuming the provisions tions according to which property rights rural areas claimed by natives, for causes prior to the conquest, cannot to be recognized only insofar as they are supported by specific titles with a certain date before at that time, they did not oppose the fact that, in in the event of loss of such securities due to force majeure, iy is to be replaced by the production of acts of notoriety, the prefectural council cannot from less to admit the actions of the latter espiece in the case where they lack preprecision and concordance.

RE En Po Lu À + re =" NA a en BE n Ea E EO re te A emanates nn + beard SUR we me to: who Sa TR LES EC ARTEA
D ei
.

JEWISH ALGERIA = 7

According to Article 24 of the ordinance of July 21, 1846, the one who had cultivated even in the absence of a regular title received the condefinitive transfer of the portion of cultivated land, if the work carried out complied with prescriptions of the said order. He was decited: 1° that if the cultivation work carried out on a domain may give the right to the contransfer of cultivated land, it belongs only to the administration to make this concession, and that the prefectural council cannot do it himself through the roundabout way of a validationtion of irregular titles; — 2° that the concessionsion cannot be directly requested from prefectural council; — 3° that this same No further concessions can be requested. directly to the Council of State.

Other provisions establish a right to preference for the concession in favor of the reclaiming from whom, there is cu, priorregarding the publication of the order, simple commencement of land clearing work and of culture.

Section IV. Real estate transactions.

Article 14, § 1, of the law of June 16, 1851, reproducing the principle of common written law, declares that everyone has the right to enjoy and to disto assert one's ownership in the most absolved in accordance with French law for European owners, subject to Muslim law for the native landowners, and for all to the special law of Algeria.

The freedom of real estate transactions was only truly established in Algeria from of the promulgation of the senatus consultum of April 22, 1863. Prior to this promulgation, various considerations had led the legislator to prohibit im- transactions movable property to certain people or in certain cases certain territories, and thus to refuse colonization sation to the English and American colonies: land to buy and the right to buy freely freedom in supply, freedom in demand order.

By a decree of May 5, 1848, issued by the governor general, by virtue of the powers exceptional qualities conferred upon him by the government Provisional amendments, articles 11 and 17, are repealed.
and 18 of the ordinance of October 1, 1844, which prohibited military personnel and civil servants public entities in Algeria, to acquire buildings or to lease it for more than nine yearsborn.

According to Article 15 of the Law of June 16 1851, were null and void by operation of law, even between the contracting parties, all alienations or acquisitions made on the soil of the territory of a tribe by people foreign to this tribe. Notaries or other public officials who will have lent their ministry to allies nations or acquisitions of this nature, will be, depending on the severity of the cases, suspended or revoked qués without prejudice, where applicable, to domMagcs interests towards the parties. This prohibition stemmed from the fact that the tribe respondedconcerned with the security of its territory, to govern itself she administered it herself; it was, as
As has often been said, a government by contract.
8.

And

A decree of February 16, 1859 had established in Algeria, freedom without territorial distinction Loire, real estate transactions involving on property owned under regular titles private property rights; but the execution of this decree was almost immediately suspended in by virtue of another decree dated May 7th followingbefore, and it is only since the promulgation from the senatus consultum of April 22, 1863 that a a new era has been definitively inaugurated for Algeria from the point of view of freedom complete real estate transactions and beyond transferability of undivided land ownership duel. From now on all the dogs on which exists and is exercised a private right of ownership freely transmissible in all territories Loire, and there will only be the buildings that appear clinging to the collective being called tribe which remains-will be outside the traffic and the domain transactions.

Land is not lacking in Algeria to the settlers, that's not the price of The ground that frightens them and can ruin them. This the initial investment is nothing compared to

Agreement mt agreement D. eu D LAS l I DS E DR do RE ag
OS Se D a Ai
S a Den a aa me en aaa | Gun | P.S.

- set for 4" ed TR VAT “2 Hands. to the second, relating to operating costs, and It is up to the government to improve these installation and operating conditions establishing large tra-

public utility works, and especially roads, communication and transport routes of all kinds without which it cannot exist serious agriculture.

The law of June 16, 1851 stipulates that the real estate transfers from Muslim to Muslims will continue to be governed by the Islamic law. An important consequence
The principle consists of the fact that the buyer Muslim, to become a property owner with respect to third parties of the building sold, is not bound to have his acquisition contract transcribed. However, according to a decree of December 31st In December 1839, Muslims were able to protest to consent to real estate transactions by agreeing that they will be governed by law French; they can in particular constitute mortgages by referring to this law, and have the documents drawn up by a notary.

Real estate transfers between all people other than Muslims to Muslims are governed by French civil law. We com- 'includes transmissions in this category' of goods between Europeans, — between Euro-Europeans and Muslims, — between Jews and Indians genes (D, — and between native Jews and Buro-Peans.

2 om

Although real estate transfers relations between Muslims and Europeans should be governed by the provisions of the Napoleonic Code, it is However, according to Muslim law, one must refer to to compare in order to appreciate the Muslim's capacity seller ct the validity of the prior easements-funds constituted on the property sold. This is the main cause of uncertainty and of the insecurity that inevitably hangs over the transfers of buildings between Muslims and Europeans.

The European buyer, if there are any securities that the Muslim seller can produce must take care to check them by going back up

(1) We can already see a difference between the two indigenous races of our colony; the Jews are assimilated to Europeans.

EE RS mens. bent Le san Des Donittel uae ae

amgaange

.
R a aaar aaaee aaa

JEWISH ALGERIA 85

up to the limit of the acquired prescription: and - It suffices to recall here that property, in law Muslim, acquits himself, even without a title or good faith, through ten years of possession between foreigners and forty years between parents. But the insurmountable obstacle to full security- The nature of these transactions lies in the fact that, the Muslim buyer becoming the owner with regard to third parties, regardless of any transcription, the European buyer, at the time where he enters into a contract with a Muslim seller. has no way of knowing if this seller has not already ceased, perhaps even since the only watch, to be a lim- owner furniture that is the subject of the transaction.

To prevent miscalculations and fraud to which the acquisitions made directly onto the natives by the colonists Europeans, the legislator has taken various measures sure precautions relating to the drafting and to the form of the acts. A decree of February 2vricr 1835 states that no act received by the nosilence, the qadis or other public officers of Algeria, is not valid when the parties do not

tn

They do not speak the same language, without the mediation of a sworn interpreter/translator who sign as an additional witness. A second _Decree of August 23, 1839 decides: — Art. 1. Any public act or act under private signature, redigested in Algeria by the qadis, rabbis or other, or in a foreign country, otherwise than in French language, will have to, in order to receive the formality of the recording, to be accompanied of a translation done at the expense of the party rerequesting, certified by a sworn translatormentioned. — Art. 2. The prescribed time limit for the enreview of the acts that are subject to it is extended by ten days with regard to the acts not written in French, which would not points recorded on the day of publication of the present decree. — Art. 3. The mention of the en- The registration mark will be affixed to the translation. and by duplicate, on the original.

Finally, Article 17 of the law of June 16, 1851 says that no act transferring ownership of a building belonging to a Muslim in benefiting someone other than a Muslim man cannot be attacked because of inalienability based on Muslim law. After exhausting the specialties that relate to the transferability of the right to property in Algeria, it is important to point out another characteristic that is still inherent to it, and which is so much of its essence that, if it If property did not exist, it would not be the property: we want to talk about its inviolablebility. — Article 10 of the law of June 16, 1851 it proclaims it in these terms: Property is inviolable, without distinction between the possesstheir native inhabitants and the French landowners or others. There are, however, two exceptions to the principle of the inviolability of property: The first consists of the law which appearsis attached to the State, in Algeria as in the Méto demand the sacrifice of property private for reasons of legal public utilityas determined, and subject to a fair and prior compensation; the second consists of the right belonging to the State to seize, In some cases, the property of the natives. We regret that we cannot do this here. an overview of the successive regimes of expropriation

TT

her ce

HAS

PC

tion for reasons of public utility in Algeria,
But this question is a bit off-topic.
Regarding our subject, we will limit ourselves to saying that today we proceed more or less as in France to arrive at expropriation, which,
For a long time, it was operated by simple Here it is, in fact, and without any of these formalities.
protective measures that guarantee the rights of the private property.

§ V. Of indigenous property.

Article 11 of the law of June 16, 1851 was limited to recognize and maintain, as they exist-at the time of the conquest, the rights of ownership and the rights of enjoyment belonging-nant to individuals, tribes and fractribal divisions.

A preliminary question is that of its-
to see if, in law, individual property exists among the Arabs. It has been argued that, in the countries conquered by Muslims, the soil belongs entirely to God and to the sultan who

has

is the representative of God's shadow on the land; that thus individuals cannot have on the land, a precarious right of enjoyment, a kind of usufruct and not a right of ownership privacy. But, as has been observed Dareste, when the Quran says that God is the master of the whole earth and that the sultan is his vicar, he is only expressing a truth purely religious, not a rule of law.

During the conquest, property in Algeria was structured in much the same way as in France. The Arabs said: This land belongs to so-and-so; I am so-and-so's tenant farmer. The lease presupposes owners. There were without doubt in Algeria, as in our country, of the bicons communal lands within grazing areas, but the rich surfaces are exactly partagged between owners. Let us add that the former Turkish government, ct Abd-el-Kader. himself, when they so often took land, for example to establish posts military personnel have never failed to pay compensation to the Arabs they dispossessed, In Kabyle tribes, property is constituted according to laws which appear to have were borrowed from the Romans.

A significant distinction divides the land located in tribal territory, in lands beylik, melk lands and arch lands. — i0 The Beylik lands are those that belong to the former government, and which were devolved to the state domain; — 2 the melk lands are thus called when individuals and the population groups that hold them have the right to enjoy and dispose of it as they see fit gré; — 3° the lands arch are thus namedthen, collectively owned by an arch tribe, or a fraction of a tribe, they cannot alienate themselves, they do so in case of death or of the disappearance of those who possess them, return to the community.

When the Beylik lands are leased purely and simply to a tribe, they are say azel: the tribes who obtained the concession of the former beys under the condition of military service are said to be makh- tribes Zen, and the territories, which are the subject of the concession, blad-el-mahkhzen. Among these nas

D

Among the tribes, one can mention the Douairs, the Sméla, the Gharaba, the Bordja in the pro-Vince of Oran, the Hadjoutes in the province of Algiers. — The property of religious corporations gieuscs (Zaouya) s'appelle blad-el-habous :
They are generally leased.

When a tribe holds its territory without title, by virtue of immemorial possession, and such is the situation of a large number of tribes, the legislator of 1851 limited himself, in Article 16 of the law he enacted, to recognize-the rights of the tribes, as they existed at the time of the conquest, or as they have were maintained by the treaties of submission.
or resolved by the decisions and actions of the ad-French ministry, or finally constituted by It is a means of exchange, translation, etc... It does not s has in no way concerned himself with specifying and challenging-to preserve these rights, particularly in cases where a tribe holds territory without any title, and sully by virtue of immemorial possession riale. This state of affairs left the door open-green to the claims of the domain: the uncertainty-

study that hung over the rights of the tribes by:
in relation to the territories they occupied, and

Furthermore, this consideration that the said territories-the towers were immense and disproportionate with their real needs, gave rise to the idea of a transaction. This transaction was supposed to consist of restricting the territory of the popu-Arab lations, ct, in exchange for the sacrifice which would be forced upon them, to decimate them as owners of the portion that would be left to them... This operation-ration, which was given the name of cantonment, had the advantage of making freely available tion of land administration that this could then grant or sell ct affect-thus to meet the needs of colonization.

It was realized that these canton operations-their own use
real land; indeed, these were not the lands |
which were lacking in colonization, but the colons and capital; so why would we followed up on operations that had the in-extremely serious matter of worrying the tribes, to discredit the pro- |
Arab prie, and to bring in the product

A significant decrease in Arab taxes?
The fundamental innovation, inaugurated by the senatus consultum of April 22, 1863, is con-held in Article 1* which is worded as follows:
"The tribes of Algeria are declared pro-priories of the lands of which those have the enjoyment permanent or traditional session, at some whatever the title. — All acts, divisions or distractions of territories that occurred in the center the State and the indigenous peoples in relation to the land ownership, are and remain cunfirmed.
Article 2 states the following: The following procedure will be followed administratively, as soon as possible:

— 1° to the delimitation of the territories of the tribus; — X to the distribution between the differentrents douars of each tribe of the Tell and of the other countries of culture, with reservation of the teritems which must retain the character of property communal; — 4° to the establishment of the proindividual privacy among the members of these villages, wherever this measure will be recognized possible and opportune. — Im- decrees.
The periaux will set the order and deadlines in the-.

what this individual property will have to be constituted in each douar.

Article 3 states that an administrative regulation-
The public assembly will determine: {1° the forms of the delimitation of tribal territories; 2° the forms and conditions under which the Individual property will be established, and the method of issuing the titles.

Decrees issued on the proposals of Governor-General of Algeria and on the rap-the port of the Minister of War, designate the tribes whose boundaries and distribution it is necessary to define and divide
The disputes that arise-
Winds on the borders between tribes are judged by the committees, and their decisions on this in this regard, approved by the prefect or by the general general, can be deferred via the contenticuse at the Council of State, in accordance with the Common law. The delimitation of the territory
The tribe's meeting only takes place after the judgment has been rendered. by the commission on limits.

The distribution of the delimited territory of the tribe between the villages that compose it is done immediately, in the presence of the representatives

TT.

D a mél x .
ban aBa anea te aa Le aaaa db es e, am et SR à à Aia ie aaan amet mines A aaa si iias iii aido bdr na Lame dea + ah

me

sentinels of the tribe and interested villages, by the same commission that has just proceeded-last to the delimitation: it is made subject to lands of the tribe which must retain the ca-the character of communal property, which few-wind remain temporarily undivided between the Jouars or be attributed to one or more of them, according to local customs and the statements from those concerned

Melk and Beylik properties do not not part of the collective property to be allocated to the tribes, and then to be distributed among the douars: the owners of the melk and property the domain agents with regard to the beylik properties located on the territory of the tribe or villages must, within two months from the publication of the decree which orders the delimitation and delimitation operations distribution, to form, under penalty of forfeiture, their demands before the president of the commission. These demands are immediate-information communicated to the representatives of tribes and villages concerned, which have a deadline one month from this communication for to form an objection; this deadline having expired without opposition, melk property and beylik property are granted to the authors of the claim. If, on the contrary, opposition is formed in time useful, the claimant must, under penalty of nullity, to file their legal claim within one month of the communication that will have been made to him. The claims are brought before the legal system. competent tion, that is to say before the qadi, if only Muslims are involved, then... before French courts in all the other cases. The appeal is always brought before the court of Algiers, by way of derogation from Article 22 of the decree of December 31, 1859, according to the terms ofwhich the courts of first instance conjudgments rendered by the qadis arise up to a predetermined rate.

According to Article 4 of the senatus consultum, the annuities, royalties and benefits due to the State by the holders of the territories of the tribuses will continue to be perceived, as by the past, until it is otherwise organized by decrees issued in the form of public administration regulations.

It follows from article 5, § 1, of the senatussulte, that the beylik bicns and the melk goods should not be included in the operadelimitation and distribution terms; on does not have to go back over the forms and the conditions tions of the claim which constitutes the sanction of state law on beylik property, and of the rights of individuals over property melk. The same article, paragraph 2, thus declares reserved the public domain, as defined by art. 9 of the law of June 16, 1851, as well as the domain of the State, particularly with regard to the woods and forests.

Article 6 of the senatus consultum pronounces the aIrogation of the second and third paragraphs phe of art. 14 of the law of June 16, 1851 to terms of which no property rights or of enjoyment relating to the land of the territory of a tribe could not be alienated for the benefit of people from outside the tribe, except for all laws the right reserved for the State to acquire the ownership or enjoyment of land making part of the land occupied by a tribe, in the ininterest of public services or colonization

tion, and to render them in whole or in part suspended susceptible to free transmission; since the senatus-consulte, this prohibition no longer exists. However, the aforementioned article adds, the proindividual privilege which will be established for the benefit members of the villages will not be able to alienated from the day she became regularconstituted by the issuance of the titles.

Article 7, the last article of the senatus consultum stipulates that no derogation is made from the other provisions positions of the law of June 16, 1851, notablyment to those concerning expropriationtion for reasons of public utility and the sequestre. |

We had to limit ourselves to doing the historicalthe risk of colonization, without the slightest comment comment, reserving the right to address this later, in a special work, this important questiontion. We would have been happy to explain to measures how laws, decrees, senatus consulta and the decrees that succeeded one another sold within a fairly short period of time, canceled each other out without contributing

— eo

aee

the slightest improvement in the development of colonization.

We kept going around in circles vicious, without seeking the true cause of the unease and the impoverishment of our colonists. land was given to them or sold to them mostly uneducated and who could not to be cleared advantageously either by following their situation, mainly because of the drought. The unfortunate settlers, drawn by the promise of a concession that they do not obey held on with difficulty, saw very quickly their illusions vanish, in the presence of the impossibility where they were to make the ground productile. |

The heavy burdens imposed by the premium first to the dealer they put it in the impossibility of deriving any profit whatsoever essential work for clearing the land ground level, having no means of credit as a result of the situation in which he found himself the legislator, he had to either renounce the concession, or seeking a lender who will perput to continue the operation. Given the difficulty to find at that time a Euro- capitalist European, the colonist necessarily had to address the

A Jew, who had already succeeded through trade illicit to monopolize a large part of the argent brought by our nationals.

However, one should not believe that, despite the exorbitant rate demanded from the lender, this vile usuricr put his purse at the mercy of everyone European settlers. To achieve wealth,
He was only supposed to lend money if it was a sure thing. But he knew that, when a dealer was depot-Sédé, the added value was taken into account.
given to the land he cleared, and this capital gains were generally quite important aunt, by that very fact that the initial estimate

The ground was very limited. It was therefore on this guaranteed that the Jew lent his capital to two or three hundred percent (1). It was a blatant theft, which a more enlightened government would have prevented it from the outset. Little was known about—fortunately under what conditions did he lend?
I am Jewish, and we didn't know what guarantee
He surrounded his loan: our good faith suggested that he was lending indiscriminately to all dealers, and that its chances loss forced him to exi-
to manage a very high rate.
The legislator believes he is bringing an improvement-tion to the colonist's situation, by giving him the property subject to a resolutory condition, instead of to him: to give it subject to a suspensive condition.
right, with the resolutory condition, the conces-

---

(1) To more easily deceive his naive borrower,
The Jew made sure never to lend money in cash.
He delivered goods instead of money, and besides the at an exorbitant rate, he estimated the aforementioned goods well above their value.

the owner immediately becomes the owner; but if he does not meet the conditions which are imposed, the sale is automatically cancelled right, —whereas with the suspensive condition, he can only become an owner after having fulfilled all these conditions. However, to the point of From the perspective of the warranty, what difference is there? between the one who owns a building that can be taken away from him if he does not fulfill the imposed burdens and the one who cannot become owner of the said building only after having fulfilled these same duties? There are certainly none. deament none, c the lender's situation is absolutely the same. In similar due to these conditions, several settlers had to give up to cultivate the lands granted to them: they seekare keen to sell them, either to the Arabs, or to European farmers who brought some savings; some even not demanded concessions only after having found the investment. It was then up to the buyer that the burdens imposed on the conassignee.

6.

The Jew never sought to become proowner of the land protected by him. Of a for his part he made his money earn a rate too high to replace it with buildings wounds, on the other hand he feared seeing one day the Arab to reconquer his former territory, and he had everything to fear from such a formidable master. The sale had, moreover, been licu to the endear public, and as a creditor, he toudirectly receives the sum from the added value given to the building. That was the complete ruin for the unfortunate settler, who no was dying of hunger and misery on this watered soil of his blood.

To protect him from the Arab, the Jew compsilence not only on our troops, but also on our national traders and cultivaeurs. Especially in the south, he had come to take shelter in French villages, knowing It's very good that the Arab wouldn't come there to denesting. Its safety was less assured than in major centers, but its situation was more lucrative, and he couldn't do his willingly renounce the exploitation of our settlers. It is regrettable that they did not have not delivered to these natives ready to annihilate it; they would thus have rid our colony of a terrible scourge and perhaps opened our eyes of our rulers! At that moment the Jew was very little, and he had to limit himself to take advantage of our mistakes to steal from us, sosay that today he is almost at the head of our destinies.

Seeing the drawbacks of concessions, the legislator believes he has found a remedy in the replacing it with the sale of state-owned property.

ne RE ee D

From now on, concessions will not be granted that exceptionally, on the sole condition of to build, and the other lands will be sold, either either by private agreement or at public auction. The price will be payable in five annual installments, the first being due on the day of the sale. The legislature-

Theor has gone down the wrong path again, ct, instead
Instead of improving, he worsened the colonist's situation.
It is no longer just the result of its economics not only the losses he will incur, but also his capital.
Apart from rare exceptions, the buyer does not retainrera no income from land purchased during the
The first five years. So it will be with his scullery, his money, which he will be able to pay the price of sale. Furthermore, during those five years, he will have to, along with the costs of food and other expenses here for him it was his own, to do many expenses for planting and irrigation of his lands.

What will result from this new state of affairs?
Things? Unless you have a great fortune and advantageously situated land, the new farmer will walk to a ruin certaine. Our readers who know Algeria born cunt 0 0 Re Se e ER SE O Ru 0 eaaaa E a AE aaa

Jewish Algeria

here ©

know that in most of our Colonic, water is hard to find.
necessary for initial care, and a fortiori Water is essential for irrigation. Today even today, the tourist who travels from Algiers to Constantine must be astonished by the nudity of the ground. Only a few marshy areas are encountered. unhealthy and not a single tree to be found to rest the eyes: on each side one does not sees only uncultivated plains and mountains steep. The railway lines and the few local roads that connect the
the most important centers only exist for a very short time; therefore it is easy to

to realize the difficulty that there was formerly to procure, either the materials to build, that is, agricultural implements to clear the land. We can plan by there the impossibility where the colonist found himself to tra-to work profitably in these lands acclimatized to a pittance. His chances of success were not based that by a providential chance; — the rains in-Indeed, dispensables rarely come.
to soak completely dried-out land.

The farmer had quickly spent his savings, either to pay the purchase price, either to cover the initial necessary expenses sites for land clearing, or finally for buy the seeds, and he found himself in the impossibility of continuing cultivation, due to lack of credit. Generally, even, it found himself without money, before having fully-
He had paid for his land. Hoping to
To get out of this mess, he was then looking for a prosecutor.
and was forced to comply with his demands.
This moneylender was the Jew, always willing to to wrest the last remains from the misfortunesgreedy victims who fell into his hands.
After providing the necessary funds for
He was waiting to complete the payment for the land.
that the settler has given the land added value sensitive, to ask him for a refund immediate. ('since he could not carry it out, was being pursued by his vile creditor, to whom he had admitted owing a considerable sum higher than that advanced; the buildings were sold through legal channels, and deve-the property of the Jew was acquired for the amount of his debt. He resold them again to a farmer arriving from France with what- resources. The latter rarely paid counting and was consequently, from his ar- riveted, indebted to the Jew, who was dealing with him as he had done with his predecessor. It is, moreover, through this process that this being, Thief and hypocrite, hoarding the major part of our nationals' money.

Far from making progress, colonization was decreasing every day; the colonists returned to France ruined, and the lands res- were uneducated; on the other hand, the budget of Algeria's annual deficit was significant. of several million. We could see the harm, but We weren't looking for a cure. The laws and Decrees followed one another without bringing the least amount of improvement. We seemed not to understand- to take impossibility for a colon of ass- to cultivate fruitfully a land scorched by the heat without the slightest stream of water for irrigate it.

Since the conquest of Algeria, the mode do Colonization has not changed significantly, and we are not afraid to say that after five- As many years of occupation as we are not We have not yet reached the point of colonization. We must to recognize, however, that, thanks to culture From the vine, our colony produces today a fairly satisfactory income, but which for- could quintuple several times. This progress is unfortunately not due to the intervention government initiative to facilitate the cultivating this soil, which could be very fertile nor to the protection it grants to the colonist against the Jewish usurer.

When security was completely asSure, some rich European capitalists bought vast tracts of land with the intention of planting vines there. They they chose as much as possible the lands more advantageously situated, and there made digging canals to be able to irrigate them easily. They then planted vines, who, today in full prosperity, are a great resource for the Metropolis.

Despite this favorable result, we have regret to note that this exploitation is done by capitalists, who are rather industrialists as well as farmers, and this at to the detriment of the unfortunate colonist. What we what we would have wanted above all is to see the conassignee or the small purchaser put in measure of cultivating one's land and extracting from it, by his work, a certain income. For this, he We needed government support, and we advise We regretfully feel that he did nothing for him. who was expected to contribute most to development the colonization process. Moreover, despite the armariveted in Algeria by capitalists of which we As we were saying earlier, there is still a lot of uncultivated lands, which will not become fertile that following very expensive work that will never undertake simple particularlicrs. We therefore hope that this will be understood the importance of this work that we will specify, when we realize this what does the small part of Algeria report? cultivated tullement.

During the sale of state-owned lands, either by concession, or by one of the others

modes indicated in our history, we have 1

Ignoring the main issue, I want to talk of the impossibility where the colonist would find himself to clear these new lands. It was not enough not in effect to give concessions to those who requested it, it was important first and foremost, in the very interest of the colonysation, to give them the means to culto tive successfully.

During the first few years that followed the conquest, the concessions even entirefree services could not have been considered as a gift, by the very fact that to this At the time, no buyer would have wanted to buy land that he had to cultivate as a soldier with the likely prospect of dispossession. What result could one consequently expect from concessions with overwhelming costs? How did these men without resources succeed? would they provide the initial investment indispensable for land cultivation, then that through the various modes of concessions, one How did they take away all their means of credit? would they correspond with the inhabitants of large centers, whereas it did not exist in all the colony no passable path for vehicles? Such were, in our opinion, the questions that our representatives should have asked themselves sentient.

_—

The French government wanted to do economies, hoping that the many tra-values necessary for the development of the colonization would happen on its own. It wouldn't He did not understand that these tasks were incumbent upon him.
baited; he didn't see that this was an excellent-slow placement for France, which, at the end of a few years, would have removed from this African soil-Cain of considerable income.

It is easy to see that, if the debt can-
The republic has always been increasing, this the increase was never due to tra-values which, while being of great use, must also have been of great value. We Let's go find the remedy by indicating in what way, in our opinion, it should have been proceed.

The governor's first concern-ly, to arrive at colonization in a
The country was almost impassable; the goal was to connect it.

-æ

the various points by means of communication cations, such as roads or paths local roads. These works could not obviously-how to do it only after the complete conquest of Algeria, that is to say after 1840, but it is . also from this time that we will try to trace the average sculpture specific to to give a good result. Thanks to the many workers, both indigenous and European, that we had these works at hand-could have been carried out at little cost and at short time, avoiding as much as possible for these initial routes, the major accidents of ground. The main goal was to facilitate- to read the transport of the materials needed for the construction of French villages, ct of favor- first increase imports, then exports- continued. Later, as the need arises would have made itself felt, new ones would have been created routes that would have allowed for easy movement throughout Algeria.

This first point was completely born- neglected; we merely connected them together the most important cities, but we haven't opened no outlet for the thousands of settlers, who inhabit the south of our colony, and who, at- Even today, they are forced to do their Transport by horse or mule. tourists who visited Algeria in these In recent years, we have been able to see with what difficulty: we penetrate as far as some villages Europeans, who are not connected to a path, sometimes 40 and 50 kilometers away, that via a narrow and impassable path for the lightest vehicle.

It was then the duty of our representatives so many who were on the scene to do inform the French government of the state of drought affecting most of the land maniacs by explaining the impossibility for the colonists irrigate them. Apart from a few springs abundant, it is quite difficult to obtain the water necessary for basic needs; one does not encounters only rare scattered rivers and shallow, and most of which are complete dry throughout the summer. However, The marshes are very numerous; the laurels-roses, which grow there in abundance, are one of the main causes of these intermittent fevers tents that affect most of our settlers.

The remedy, however, was quite simple.
We will not talk about the inland sea which would have been an impossible project at that time at the time, reserving for ourselves the right to say what-a few words on this important question at the end of this chapter; — but there was on the one hand reforestation, on the other hand, and the creation of canals. These essential works cannot-were to be made by cojones without ressources. Reforestation itself, which does not requires only insignificant costs in France, is very expensive in Algeria. To preserve
The young plants need protection from the heat; they need to be protected from the heat.
shelter carefully during the first few years born. However, the colonists who didn't even the money needed to buy either the se-mences, or agricultural implements, were consequently, due to the material impossibility of to take care of tree planting. It required some a large part of the territory remains to be forested Algerian, to preserve the other part of this destructive drought.

It also belonged to the State to facilitate irrigation by creating nommany canals. Unfortunately, we didn't never concerned with the means to be employed for to make fertile this soil that was going to be sold or to give to those who would present themselves for the cultivate. It was probably believed that labor settlers would be enough to fertilize these lands arid, and it was hoped that, from the first years, our new colony was going to be of a great report for France. If there were

Thus, there must have been many illusions. because every year Algeria costs us more- several million, and that's because we have- always shying away from a sacrifice that he It will certainly have to be done one day.

We finally arrive at the modes of alienation-nation of state lands, the sale and the concession, and we will make it known the serious drawbacks.

We will not go back to the beginning modes of concession, which, as we have been able to as seen in our history, were absolutely impassable, and we immediately arrive at the concession, made under the sole conditions that houses and barns will be built, that will inhabit the said houses and that will be cultivated the lands granted.

We are not afraid to say a bonus firstly, the farmer who will have obtained a concession under these latter conditions will be inevitably forced to resort to it in the short term to the Jew, and that he will always ruin him. What is, in effect, the situation of the French colonist? French people with a few billion francs of savings economy and coming to request a concession? He is forced for more than a year to do dis-steps upon steps and to go further-sicurs fois, either at the government office at Algiers, or at the ministry in Paris, after having Having obtained it, he has already spent part of his capital. He is always given this concession sion in an impassable place, where it is forced to trace some paths himself narrow; that done, he must immediately build. Where will he find bricklayers, me-pests, carpenters? — In the large cities, and their travels are paid for accordingly sequence (1). How will he transport the Materials needed? On horseback and mulct; or these modes of transport are always very long and consequently very expensive. For cons-Truire, the dealer spent approximately 5,000 francs, and that's usually the amount from his savings. Let's take a richer one And let us continue. After building, he must deto clear the land. He then needs to buy some animals, farming implements and seeds; he finally needs to live and give life his family. That's one more annual expense.

of 1,000 francs, and he cannot for much longer to count on a harvest, even a very small one.
When these expenses were repeated for several years, like our colonist,
Although rich, he's not quite a Croesus.

(1) The number of workers was formerly very limited in Algeria, and they only lived in the big cities.
When they were called up to the interior of Algeria, They demanded a high salary. As a result, it sometimes happened that for the construction of a small building, which by its
the situation itself should only have an insi- value significant, it was necessary to pay the workers more than at Paris.

+ Se ms mn

p + - _—— o= -

he soon realizes that he has exhausted even his latest resources.

The earth, however, is not yet sa-ownership: he does not have the definitive title, and he does not
He can neither sell nor mortgage it. What will he do?

What to do? Abandon the concession, and take advantage.

Capital gains are unlikely.
since, in addition to his labor, he spent a a sum much higher than the estimate an approximate estimate of this capital gain. He is looking for then to borrow, and failing other capital-Talists, he addresses the Jew. The latter, the seer caught in its net, it won't let go, and forces him to accept ruinous conditions. The money the loan still helps him to buy things essential for cultivating its land, and,
thanks to the numerous expenses he was forced to
to do, he already anticipates the moment when his concession-Sion will provide him with income in proportion.
Unfortunately, he forgets his creditor, and this one always appears as soon as the earth is in full report. Despite the usurious rate of his loan, despite the colonist's pleas who promises to pay him handsomely, interest

- =

and capital, thanks to the proceeds from the concession mortgaged property, he wants nothing to do with it.
tender, and he immediately begins to pour-legal proceedings. The sale takes place before the court, and it generally becomes adjudicatoryto remain silent for the minimal sum of which he was creditor. This concession is then resold.

by the Jew to a new colonist, who, later,
will also be his victim.

These are the conditions under which it took place and have still been making concessions today
In Algeria! It's ruin for the settlers.
This is a serious attack on colonization.
tion, it's a loss for France, but.
This is of great use to the Jew who devorc makes it all the easier to find his prey because he... found almost lifeless.

As for the sale, the price of which is payable in five annual installments, cllo also offers se-rich disadvantages. The colon that will not bring not with him a sufficiently strong capital will be found unable to make payments
annual, from the moment when, as in the case Previously, he would not be able to rely on sales.

harvests. It will fall shortly between the hands of the Jews, who will exploit it and become-will own the land purchased and de-made fallow by him.

- To facilitate the development of the colonynisation, the French government had to to carry out the work we have just to speak, — to create various avenues of communication cations, — to reforest part of the territory al-Gerian and digging canals. — Culture was only possible under those conditions. He had to then grant land to the French settlers cais, by imposing the sole burden of the cultivate.

During the first few years that followed the conquest, one could not hope to have in Algeria of wealthy settlers, abandoning their situation in France, to come and clear the way new lands whose ownership was not theirs not assured. Therefore, only an- French military personnel or settlers who, Having no fortune, they would have been happy to build up a small fortune through work; — also, it was necessary, in the very interest of the colonization, not only giving them the land, but also to provide them with the means to cultivate them. By proceeding in this way, one would have allowed the working colonist to make productive this land, once uncultivated. Despite the names- Despite the numerous obstacles he had encountered, he did not He wouldn't let himself be discouraged, seeing himself supported by the government; he would have com- - taking into account that his work would bring him later a small fortune, and this hope- France would have been the best stimulus for him. lant.

These first settlers would have come to add to join, after a few years, new French farming calves. In the presence of the result obtained by their predecessors, they would no longer have hesitated to come and water with their branches these new lands which they knew pro- deductive. The demands would even be de- so many people came that one could have soon proceed with the sale of the Doma- lands niales under special conditions.

Each lot would have been sold for a price determined payable in thirty, forty or five-ee.

for several years. The state would also have facilitated the means of credit for culture.

By proceeding in this way, France would have already deducted a considerable income from Al-Algeria, and our colonists would have become rich there. As a guarantee against all laws against people who-those who would have neglected the lands concessions gifts or purchased under the conditions above specified, we would have reserved the right to them dispossess. It was indeed obvious that, fai-making great sacrifices for development In the context of colonization, the State could not relying only on settlers willing to facilitate to finish his task.

Alongside these poor farmers, but hardworking, wealthy landowners, who came from the Metropolis, would certainly have gone purchasers of vast tracts of land, where they would have planted vineyards and others, which would have increased in proportions considerable contributions to the wealth of our colonia.

We could also have created schools of agriculture and send some of the en-

nt nt enne e R ES ne Of masses abandoned children, who do not often meet wind, at their entry into life, that misery, and which consequently inevitably become thieves or murderers. Upon leaving the school, the State would have given each of them a con-

a transfer that they would have cultivated fruitfully, from the moment they had completed specialized studies
These unfortunate children would have created a family through marriage, and, instead from the misery of the cities, they would have found by work and well-being in rural areas.

That, in our opinion, is how it should have been done to proceed with the colonization of Algeria.
Instead of that, 'the colon was put in place from the beginning' unable to remove the slightest be-benefit of the lands granted to him; he was im-Furthermore, it placed excessively heavy loads which were bound to lead him to ruin.
It is for this reason, moreover, that today still a large part of Algeria's land are uneducated. Who would dare to surrender?
successful bidder for these vast tracts of land completely naked and that it is im-
Is it possible to water it? That would expose us to a real danger, because of the immense works which must facilitate irrigation cannot to be the responsibility of individuals; they are of those who, by their very nature, must into the State.

RES

|

TT ee LL, NA Ah, co oo SAME TT

|

'In summary, we possess the Algeria of-then more than fifty years, and yet this colony, despite its proximity to France, costs us several million each year.

Most of our settlers left their mark there.
small fortune: some had to, after having done numerous expenses, abandoning the lands granted or sold, because their Their dry state made them unproductive;
the others, after overcoming the obstacles and added value to their concessions, have were pursued by the Jew, and after having been Stripped of their belongings, they returned to France in-Completely ruined.

Apart from a few more favored concessions from various points of view and the lands purchased by companies or wealthy individuals to cultivate vines there, we rewe still find, in different places, the Al- A |

re a: n

1830 era. Entry is only difficult-lying in the south of our colony while crossing the ravines and climbing the mountains; there,
At every step, one encounters immense plains.
which have never been cleared. The Arabs there live in isolation, seemingly almost unaware that they are under French rule.

It is permissible to ask why the
The French government has always backed away from-before such necessary and intended expenditures born to make a soil productive than thousands settlers were asking to clear land, so on- everything he knew he would later have to remove from Does this crop represent a considerable tax? wanted to save money, or did he hope that Would this work happen on its own? During- think of all the millions who since a few years have been so wildly wasted by our rulers, are we not authorized to to say that we cannot even think of making economics for essential work, and One might even wonder if our ministers are only responsible for their own bad administration?

Besides these works, there is another which is essential today: we want to start- the first of an inland sea which would have as its bed the Sahara Desert. We are no longer, as some people have claimed, In the face of the impossible: the Sahara has already It was a sea and it will become a sea again, because that this is necessary in the very interest of the colonization. For this work which seems gi- In the Gantcesque style, if one wished, one could find in Algeria has a considerable number of arms, and a few years would be enough for the recovery- the state of this sea.

Unfortunately in France, we neglect too much the colonies, which, while costing us a great deal dear, they only benefit our neighbors, otherwise to our enemies. Regarding the sea project Internally, we have heard from men politicians were aware that this was an inutile, from the moment when sooner or later, after four or five centuries, the sands would fill in- This sea would become deserted again. Less anticipating that they, we do not concern ourselves not what will happen several centuries from now.

and we will simply say that our governments
nants never knew how to use what taught us France was leaving because of their stupidity.
has always been in debt where it should have been.
richir.

We would have liked to explore this idea further.
a significant question, but we cannot to distance ourselves further from our subject; we However, we reserve the right to deal with this later.
of colonization, and to expand on this inland sea, whose usefulness seems to us Undeniable.

We sought to demonstrate how much were bad, our various modes of alienation;
we have made the results known, and we have finally stated the means employed by the Jew to ruin our naive colonists, who have Never been protected by the representatives of French government. Binc as a summary,
This chapter was essential to do it right.
to understand to our readers how naivety of our first representatives has degenerated

under their successors in collusion with the.
Jews.

CHAPTER V

THE ARAB EXPLOITED BY THE JEW

(2

- It was not enough for the Jews to monopolize the concessions that our unfortunate colonists had watered with their sweat to resell them to. of new owners who were later to be their dupes, they also coveted the fortune of the Arabs. They were not unaware, however- what legitimate hatred these were animated towards them, so they did not move away Never French villages!

To extort money from the Arabs, the Jews were on the lookout for every opportunity that could- were expected to present themselves. The most common means

EE nn nu

The practices involved were usury, espionage, and prostitution. tion ct the abuse of power (1).

Usury. — The Jews attended all the hearings, ct when they heard pro- to impose a fine on an Arab, they They would greet him as he left, and make him... offers of money to pay on time read. This proposal was repugnant to the condemned man, but most of the time he was forced to go there Submit to avoid legal fees.
In this case, the Jew demanded the following in payment: transfer of part of the harvest from his company lender. He generally lent at a rate of 500 percent, the Arab was obliged to him consent to the sale of his wheat, until he-

---

(1) We could add the attempted expropriation from the Arab by the Jew, but we would have been obliged to repeat what we said about the French colonist. However, the Jew was even more of a thief with the Arab. than with the European.

it happened that Jews obtained for a a tiny sum of properties worth between 15,000 and 20,000 francs. When the buildings were sold judicially- In fact, they made sure that no chain of events would arise. buyers to get them at a low price, and they were creditorscers of the amount of the auction.

— ee ee

The fixed sum was then calculated. this estimate, which was always lower than the value of wheat at the time of reColte. For example, if the Jew advanced 50 francs to Arab, he was forced to cede the harvest prochain eighty or one hundred measures of wheat which he valued at approximately 50 francs per moon, while the The regular exchange rate was always between 3.59 and 4 francs. on the side of this usurious loan that we do not fear not to call it a theft, he was still carrying out a profit on the estimate.

For their exploitation, the Arabs had to to make their purchases from the merchants Jews; if they had no money, these men would give them lent under the same conditions, H was still the case for small traders arabes, who, in order to pay their suppliers, had often need the Jew's purse. If the varantie did not seem sufficient to this greedy man As a lender, he bought manufactured goods at very low prices. bought by the Arabs and then resold them to our nationals, or sent them to his corcligionuaires in France.

Espionage. — In all our markets

nn APE Ne me a PR

D

Algerians, the Jew was watching closely
The Arab. As soon as he committed the slightest-
For violating regulations, the spy... approached him and threatened to carry complaint, if he did not give her a specific sum of money mined. The Arab was reduced to complying, Did the Jew know that a crime or
A crime had been committed, immediately
He approached the offender and asked him-
It was a matter of buying his silence. Other times, he served as an intermediary between the two parties, and he would get paid for his intervention.
The Jew was becoming a very formidable spy.
for PARabe, who was continually obliged to pay a very high price for this vile informer.

On Prostitution. — Among our natives,
some possess a great fortune;
all administrative and judicial officials Clear ones are generally rich. Near of these, the Jew could not practice usury, nor to employ espionage. He therefore had to find a new process for getting them to give money. Only one thing was within her reach: prostitution.
tion of his wife and daughters. The Arab is a — LR aa

- E

very luxurious and can hardly be depriving women. However, when the functions-native people were summoned to the chief town of the ar-district or canton for their service, and that they were obliged to stay for more than one
During the day, they could not satisfy their passions.
than with Jewish women, unless you go into the brothels.

The Jew who was always on the lookout
he himself came to find the Arab, and by means-setting a price that he based on the fortune of
As a civil servant, he would hand over his wife or daughter.
At other times, if the Arab did not lend himself to vo-Heeding the Jew's intentions, he sent one of her females was making the fla-serious offense. He then threatened to prosecute the Arab official who, in order not to lose
In his place, he paid a large sum of money.

The Abuse of Power. — The Jews who refused were encouraged to enlist in our regiments, solicited
On the contrary, they cited all the servile positions with French officials. They manage-easily obtain accreditation at-near our administrators, our controllers-

EE
theirs, our particular receivers, etc., who accept them as chaouchs; some even obtain these functions near our courts and our justices of the peace.

A chaouch is a private servant who,
in many circumstances, must serve as an inter-ready. It is through her that the indigeneans make their claims to our functions tionaries. This simple explanation makes pre-already see the role that the Jewish chaonch will play vis-à-vis the Arab applicants.

We will first talk about the chaouchs attareferred to the courts or justices of the peace.
Employed by the state, their role is the most important.
carrying in domesticity.

When an offense or crime is committed in a village, the sheikh must notify the magistrate French contract and send him a written report.
Most of the time, he sends the report by the plaintiff, and obliges the accused to accompany him
ner. Upon arrival, the Arab hands over the written ca-bought from the chaouch and supplied him all the necessary explanations. If the matter is of minimal importance, the Jew tries to

to get the parties to agree, by explaining to complaining that he would not be granted any in-compensation and telling the accused that, in addition to the In prison, he was sentenced to a fine and to all expenses. If the chaouch arrives at an en-He tries, deletes the report, and touches for His intervention brought him a large reward. Furthermore,
Very often, it happens that several natives at-impatiently wait their turn to speak to magistrate, sometimes they are obliged to res-It takes one or two days to get the hearing requested. In this case, the chaouch their pro-installation, subject to compensation which varies depending onto be 5 ct 20 fr., to have them pass through the priests _miers: it is by this method that the Volatile Jew I find Arabic easier to understand. It's not uncommon in the effect of seeing in the morning at the door of our tribes two or three hundreds of natives, and among them, there are always several willing to pay to avoid being forced to wait. . a

Finally, when in a preliminary instruction-min., the chaouch is responsible for translating to He judged the plaintiff's explanations, he did not fear not to deceive the good faith of the French magistrate

If the accused paid him a proportionate sum tioned to the service rendered (1).

The administrators, the receivers in particularliers and other French officials are also subject to very frequent complaints tions on the part of the Arabs, and these must or even contact the chaouch, who acts for or against the plaintiff, according to the remuneration that he touched. It's not uncommon, even, on the the Arab's refusal to give money to The Jewish chaouch, to see him refuse entry offices. We even see him taking revenge on his former master, by cowardly brutalizing him, because he knows he is protected by the authorities
French.

We cannot elaborate further-lies about this exploitation of Arabs by the Jewish, and we had to limit ourselves to acting stupid.

(1) Among the interpreters enticed today by the tria large number of them are in the courts and justices of the peace.
Jews. With such auxiliaries, the magistrate who does not comp-
Not learning Arabic often forces one to abandon it.
to give an instruction, as a result of the complicity of his interpreter with the accused.

—_——-

to give birth to the most commonly used means. We do not we have not yet reached the stage of naturalization of the native Jew of Alsace, and yet we already find him proud and arrogant with Arabic. We have frequently witnessed shocking scenes between some of the chaouchs and the Arabs. The first ones, after having made themselves paying for a service they weren't providing, striking-pay brutally and even hurt these
The unfortunate Arabs, who did not retaliate, convinced in advance that they would always wrong in the eyes of our representatives.

The situation in Parabe was becoming all the more more intolerable, that it was returned to her in such a way by this cowardly and shameless being, who He used to crawl in front of him. He couldn't-Before winning his case, he was forced to to revolt against our blind domination.

The senatus consultum of July 12, 1865 was received very favorably by our Indians.
Although placed on the same footing as the Jews,
They hoped we would do them justice.
when they had shown us their superiority Rité. Unfortunately, it was not to be.

Thus, and the hypocrisy of some has earned them rights that should only be granted to the bravery of others.

The first two articles of this senatus-consulted were thus conceived: The native Muslim is French; nevertheless he continues-will be governed by Muslim law.
The Jewish native is French; nevertheless he continues to be governed by his personal status.
— Both can be admitted to They serve in the army and navy.

may be called upon to perform functions and jobs civilians in Algeria. — They can, on their request, to be admitted to enjoy the rights of French citizen; in this case, they are governed by the civil and political laws of France.

During the vote on this senatus consultum, plu-
The Arab gentlemen were already regimented. They attributed the favor shown to them to services they had already rendered; they were However, they were surprised to see that the Jews were going to enjoy the same favor, they who had not Since the conquest, what hijacked flights have we witnessed?

and abuse.
8.

RER aaaaa em -

— ER + + ee — ee Re o

In the early years, it was not possible to re-.
to grant naturalization to Arabs, who, to their upon request, they attached their service records.
This could not satisfy the Jews who preferred saw that, if their former masters became-
If they were born French, they would inevitably fall back under their domination.

Unable to do anything on their own to stop
Given this state of affairs, they are abusing their credit.
to our civil servants. They depict -the Arab as a dangerous being, who, thanks to our civilization, will soon know how to get rid of to rid the victor of the Al-Algeria. These complaints are strongly ap-supported by their coreligionists who live

the Metropolis, and they eventually lead to desired result. Applications for naturalization-The Arabs' actions are in effect soon to be no longer welcomed, and these valiant soldiers, after having.
They shed their blood for France, they cannot no longer hoping to enjoy the rights of French citizens
çais. . |

CHAPTER VI

THE EXPANSION OF THE JEWISH RACE

While the native Jews of Algeria they plunder our settlers, exploit our resources tionaries and steal from the Arabs, those who are widespread across the European continent do not remain inactive. Like the pre-First, they enriched themselves at our expense small shopkeepers who had been taken in in their nets. Most started as secondhand dealers; they bought objects at very low prices that the owner was obliged to sell for to buy bread. These same objects, during a Usurious loans are delivered instead of cash.

— ne '0 mmné .- mt © . o omm

ringing at a very high price at the small shop
A merchant who is in urgent need of money.

Some of them are jewelry merchants;
This allows them to wear down over a longer period.
large scale. They sell on credit, often the double the value. If you apply for a loan, they never have any money. They then hire the em-borrower on whom they took all the ren-necessary information, to acquire jewelry which he will immediately resell to a jeweller indicated by cux. They then deliver for 700 or 800 francs worth of goods that we're going to resell at the aforementioned jeweler's (who is always a (companion), for 300 or 400 francs. They thus made a 100% loan, and they started to sheltered from the law.

While some exploit misery or kill small businesses, others start to the head of the wholesale houses or make the agio at.
The Stock Exchange. A few years were enough for them.
stealing considerable fortunes. In all.
major European cities, they create banking houses, and if they do not prosper
It only takes one or two bankruptcies to happen quite quickly.

to bring them up to height. They are the holders of public funds; in all national loans atlases, they become the most powerful actionnaires.

Their ambition knows no bounds.
They know that money is the driving force behind everything.
to move, etc., thanks to theft and wear and tear, they are became the holders of this money. Their fortunes will continue to increase in a con-Amazing, because they will soon be taking the course.
All European stock exchanges. Unfortunate-most of them are still just foreigners, and if their schemes are discovered, they can be chased away and forced to con-to continue their wandering and vagabond life. They have need government support and for
For this, they need to buy the high-functioning tops.
even the ministers. To partner with them

To come, they need to act secretly.
otherwise we could hold them accountable on this ill-gotten fortune. We are looking for-would do it and we would discover their origin, and then they would be reduced to complete powerlessness
session.

Although widespread in Europe, the Jews are closely linked. They all work to achieve the same goal, and everyone must contribute their part to the construction of the building for so long dreamed. [They haven't forgotten their corclivonians] natives, and they will work to make them ob-to hold the naturalization. They were informed about the methods they employed, both in from the French point of view, than from the point of view of the Arab, and they note with joy that they have not Not undeserving. All this Sonwe race, moreover.
to take revenge on the Arabs who held them so long under their domination, but its ven-
The more cruel the injustice, the more more powerful.

After stealing the money, we see them already
They dare to take on titles of nobility.
so cowardly, to take these titles once borne by them by men who, if they were despots
For the people, they were no less proud.
and courageous. Do they hope to force us?
to treat them like princes? Do they want to become the leaders of a new dynasty? It is per-placed on the one who followed them step by step of-

p—s

then a century of asking these questions.

They had so completely monopolized freedom lately, those who knew them best and hated them Moreover, they dared not reveal their conduct to their naive victims. It will no longer be like this from now on.
but we will deliver them as they are to the pu-hlicité, and we will force them to return to the shadows, from which they should never have emerged.

Their reign is ended by the mere fact that they are discovered. They can do nothing by these-memes, and we will no longer serve them to our
To the detriment, French will no longer be scicm-He comments on a commodity that sells. He comments on will take up the cause of poverty in France, and he will destroy this rodent insect. If we need to,
to regain our independence, em-to deploy the brute force of the Arabs, we do not hesitate-We will not quote. But the Jew will not wait. The
The day he sees us determined to act, he will denounce-pera and will return to his wandering life, which is the
the only possible one for him.

The Jews understood that the French people Sais was the most confident and consequently the most easy to deceive. Although powerful in the Other states, they foresee that they will not be able to They want to govern there for a long time. They then want to…

to begin by conquering France; but they know divided into two parts: France and Algeria. Therefore, they need to be strongly supported by their native coreligionists, and to make their task easier, they need to arrive to naturalization.

The power of the Jews in Algeria is not yet subordinate to the trust they inspire in our civil servants. If they lose this cor-trust, they will be nothing, for without protection tion of the French, the Arabs would annihilate ouse-this would at least be an obstacle to the realization of their dream. The Jews of the Metropolis understand; they even know that their eagerness-depends on their success. They will also benefit from our blindness, to obtain this famous naturalization decree, which, after the era of the freedom will soon bring about that of power session. . |

In accordance with their wishes, the Jews have bought some high-ranking officials who

They therefore remain at their mercy. Through them, they do not they soon obtained naturalization by-tielle; any native Jew can indeed, on his request, enjoy the rights of a French citizen Cais. | |

Numerous requests are being sent daily, and all receive so-favorable solutions. Unfortunately for the Jews, the Arab who sees with what ease they obtain naturalization, address equal-requests that, most of the time, remain locked away in the files. He he then understands that it is impossible for him to to naturalize, and he sees what a tyrannical will exert on him, those whom he considered as inferior to slaves. Although He's a savage; he has too much self-respect. so as not to revolt against a measure also illegal. It implies that a-before submitting, the Jews were exterminated: he will force the spahis and tirailleurs to return to the ranks of their brothers to fight against the despotism of a government that does not not in line with the promises contained in

Th Re ne ER RER ARE

the senatus consultum, which was so favorably received by all the natives.

The Jew had hoped to act without the knowledge of the Arab. Seeing himself discovered, he had to... bending hypocrisy to appease the legitimate the fury of his implacable enemy. He knew it.
in fact that, under the conditions in which he found himself, he had everything to fear from a revolt that would not would be directed solely against him. He understood his clumsiness; it was a loss for him time, because before making a new attempt-tive, he had to reassure the Arab about his intentions-tions. His haste forced him to work still in the shadows.

The Arab, however, less confident than the
The Frenchman had not been fooled by the hypocrisy. of the Jew. He had understood his goal, and he had to at all costs prevent him from reaching her. The Arab leaders now stood on the alert lively; knowing they had nothing to expect of our representatives, they resolved to cruelly avenge the insults of their former slave who was standing sheltered behind us.

Unfortunately, the Jew foresees what will arrive. To calm the agitation of spirits, he will be forced to come crawling in front of his former master. This news Cowardice does not frighten him, and he submits to it of his

of their own volition. In light of this reversal,
The Arab had to abandon his insurrection plans. tionals. On the one hand, he could not annihilate this an enemy unable to defend itself, and other for his part he hoped that, enlightened by this conunspeakable deed, we would not be long-
These exploiters have been duped for a long time.

Our officers, who were then the main officials in Algeria had too many reasons not to abandon the Jew, who, despite his newfound voluntary servility, not came no less than to crawl beside our bu-Arab royals. Most of them, in fact, were the debtors of this usury; the others could not-were going to renounce the possession of his wives; Finally, some knew that their quick advancement was only due to certain Jews of the Metropolis which had interceded for them,
These were sufficient reasons to protect
The Jew against his own cowardice.

In France, all these events had gone unnoticed.
perceived. Our leaders themselves had not I have absolutely no precise knowledge about Algeria.
as unknown to most of them as the most distant of our colonies. We do not seek-
I don't know the origin of this stranger.
who had established himself among us. He had not moreover, it was shown that with weapons in hand, ct
These weapons were silver; now, we must
To admit it, in France, wealth takes precedence.
Everything. The rich will always be acclaimed everywhere.
regardless of his past, while the poor,
whose integrity will be beyond question, will remain in the shadow.

The role played by the Jew was unknown.

of the Arabic; we did not know to what humities he had voluntarily submitted to before the conquest of Algeria; the conquest of Algeria was largely ignored. means used by him to exploit our settlers and to take revenge on his former Master. Who could have provided information? Lies? It wasn't our civil servants who were the first victims. Provided by The settlers? We wouldn't have added foil to that.

= Che —— - — - — — i mg pi RAR er . o

The rest is that there should have been conclusive and concrete facts. pables to dare the slightest attack against the coreligionists of these men who had acquired such great power in Europe.

The native Jews could not stay They had been inactive for a long time. They were determined. to strike a major blow, as soon as it would have The fury of the Arabs was calmed. Steps were taken. were already done in the Metropolis for to achieve this result, we no longer expected it that the opportune moment to act definitively-vement, when war broke out against Germany Magne. This was a most regrettable delay and whose consequences could not be foreseen.

CHAPTER VII

ALGERIA DURING THE WAR AGAINST GERMANY,

At the moment this war broke out, which... was going to be so terrible for France, the Jew in-Digènc had already resumed a provocative role near the Arab. [He was holding it exactly at the neckrant of what was happening to his coreligionist of the Metropolis, and he finally saw the era approaching of freedom. It is foreseen, therefore, with what To his disappointment, he learned of the declaration of war which, while causing a prejudiced delay diciable to the fulfillment of his wishes, was going the

to place again under the domination of his implacable enemy.

From the very beginning of the campaign, we have indeed recall to France and send to the border
the majority of our staff from Algeria, leaving only the bare essentials for maintenance to maintain order in our colony. Our rifle-theirs and our spahis left first;
among our natives, we even harvested names numerous recruits, ready to go and shed their blood for France. In the impossibility where one is found that they could be equipped immediately, so we had to refusing a large number of them. This act of bralove and patriotism on the part of a people wild, for which we had been so des-buddies, should have enlightened us and made us re-to regret our barbarity towards him. Woe-Fortunately, we were too blinded, and he it seemed perfectly natural that native, for whom We had been so unjust, he went and got himself killed for France.

The Jews were finally going to find an opportunity sion to show, if not their patriotism, at the less their attachment to France. Then-that they were so impatiently awaiting their natu- In realization, they should not hesitate to lend their contribution in a campaign that presented itself under very bad auspices for us. Far from it, the Jews (1) who had already obtained the status of citizens French, and who consequently had to be forced- to be included in our contingent, employed all means at their disposal see so as not to be recruited. Those who do not were able to avoid incorporation and ensured that not to leave their native land. Some even, who had not the slightest notion of e- writing, were, for protection, attached to the various military supply offices silence.

Throughout the campaign, their situation In Algeria, it was highly critical. Unable to do much count on our support following the departure from the greater part of our troops, they came once again submit to the domination of

---

(1) We only want to talk about the Jews who, contor- related to the senatus consultum of 1865, had been, on their request, naturalized French,

Arabs. They became what they had been before. the conquest, but taking care to avoid transporting their homes to the villages in the- formerly inhabited by them.

The Arabs were not vindictive enough. Criminally subjected to French laws, they knew what punishment we inflicted on the assassinssins. They therefore could not, while their brothers shed their blood for France, to revolt against our institutions. [the hopewould, moreover, say that the French government would know how to reward their bravery and that finally the senatus consultum of 1865. Lulled by this sweet hope, they did not I paid no attention to the Jews who came crawling. in their company, inspiring only contempt; they limited themselves to inflicting a few blows baton to those who had exploited them the most.

Despite their reprehensible conduct, the Jews are nonetheless considered by our functions tionnaires as superiors to the Arabs. At In the midst of general mourning, they are not abandoned. not: they are even given hope for the prochain realization of their dream.

9,

aramona mm — = — In

By a ruling of the court of Algiers dated October 21, 1870, the native Jews of Algiersrie are reputed to have claimed the status of French citizens and, consequently, subject to French law for their personal status sonnel, when they complied for certaincertain civil acts in the forms required by law French. — By this ruling, we already see some What a privilege they enjoy as natives! and we recognize the influence of Lens Corclionnaires of France.

At a certain point, they seem, however-without losing hope; they foresee the outcome of this disastrous war following our name-heavy defeats. They fear that our weakness
The blissement does not prevent us from the following to exert our dominance in memes conditions in Algeria. The Arahc could in Indeed, if some favor were not granted to him, he to revolt with a chance of success costs a exhausted people, and in this case the Jews fall back-They would suffer under its terrible power. They would suffer-they put these fears to their protectors, who include the need to prepare the large

They have, moreover, acquired such an influence, that it is in the very midst of our des-
. sastres that they will obtain this famous decree which must fulfill their wishes.

CHAPTER VIII

NATURALIZATION OF THE INDIGENOUS JEW

As soon as the Republic was proclaimed in France for the third time, on September 4th 1870, after Napoleon's capitulation at Se-Dan, the Jews of the Metropolis found the opportune time to ask for and obtain the naturalization of their coreligionists from Al-Algeria. A democratic government does not power-in their opinion, would refuse the status of citizens French to these natives who, through conquest from Algeria, had become our subjects.

Furthermore, entirely absorbed by the campaign against Germany, the government of the National Defence could not make an en- preliminary quest. He would not seek to know why, of the two indigenous races of Algeria, one was granted a favor that one refused to the other.

The Jews understood the situation; they did not they might hesitate to act. Any delay could- would be detrimental to them, because if the question was presented at a later time, where It would be studied, it would have many chances of failure. Decreed on the contrary at a moment when all minds are turned towards Prussia, where the slightest event fascinates everyone For the French, naturalization will go unnoticed. received, and the Jews will know, in due time, in to withdraw the expected benefits.

What does it matter to this despicable people, whose the thirst for money will never be quenched, that our troops be defeated, may the bodies of our unfortunate soldiers litter the fields of battle! They know, moreover, that they have more to hope if we are defeated that if we We returned victorious. We are already one prey they watch closely; like Crows, they can only devour the corpses. While each family mourns mourns a father, a son, a brother, who died in field of honor, the Jews, confined at home They give free rein to their joy.

We were too preoccupied with our misfortunes-very much to think about penetrating the secret of the race Jewish. In front of us, they seemed to share our misfortunes, and that was enough for a trusting people.
Our leaders themselves were fooled by their hypocrisy.

The Jews seemed to be our comforters.
and they only applied for naturalization to come and weep in unison. In similar dispositions, their coreligionists, who had already seized power, had not much difficulty in obtaining this decree which must have had such terrible consequences for all French people.

On the proposal of Crémieux, minister of the justice system, on October 24, 1870, it was decreed
the following: |

"The Government of National Defence-
national |

"Decrees:

"The native Israelites of the departments"
of Algeria are declared French citizens;
Consequently, their actual status and their status personnel will be, from the date of promulgationtion of this decree, regulated by French law sacaine, all rights acquired up to this day res-so many that could be violated.

“Every legislative provision, every senator-you consult, decree, regulation or order
On the contrary, they are abolished.

Done at Tours, on October 24, 1870.

"Signed: AD. CRÉMIEUX, L. GAMBETTA, AL. GLaAIs-B1z01N, L. FouRICHON. »

On the same date, a new de- appeared cret(1) on the naturalization of indigenous mu-Sultans, thus conceived:

“Article 1. — The status of French citizen-çais, demanded in accordance with articles 1 and 3 of the senatus consultum of July 14, 1865, cannot can only be obtained at the age of twenty-one accomplis.

"The native Muslims who are demanding" this quality must justify this condition tion by a birth certificate; failing that, by a affidavit of notoriety drawn up, based on the attestation of four witnesses, by the justice of the peace or the cadi of the place of residence.

“Art. 2 — Art. 10, paragraph {* of the Title III, Article 11 and Article 14, paragraph 2 of Title IV of the decree of April 21, 1866, concerning public administration regulations, are mo-classified as follows:

---

(1) Our readers will easily understand the purpose of this second decree. By naturalizing the Jew, they pretended to naturalize Arabic. If, despite the precautions taken, our brave native was aware of the decree of naturalization of Algerian Jews, immediately on he showed him the second decree, letting him believe that one placed them both in the same conditions.

"Title III, art. 10, paragraph {°°: The individual-Muslim gene, if it meets the conditions of age and aptitude determined by the rules-special French services, can to be called upon, in Algeria, to perform the functions and em-civil order officers designated in the annual table annexed to this decree.

"Title III, art. 2. — The Muslim native

em

who wants to be admitted to enjoy the rights of a citizen French citizens must appear in person before the head of the Arab bureau of the constituency in which he resides, in order to form his request to declare that he intends to be governed
by the civil and political laws of France.

"[A report of the request is drawn up]"
and the declaration,

“Art. 14, paragraph 2. — The documents are addressed by the territorial administration military department to the government
general.

“Art. 3.— The civil governor general pro-nonce on applications for naturalization, on the opinion of the advisory committee.

"Art. 4. — A bulletin will be drawn up of each naturalization in the form of lockers judicial. This bulletin will be filed with the pre-department of the region where the native resides even if he resides on military territory.

“Art. 5. — Articles 2, 4 and 5 are repealed” of the senatus consultum of July 14, 1865, the Article 13, Title IV, Section 19, Title VI, entitled: Dis-general positions of the decree of April 21, 1866.

"The other provisions of the said senatus-
The consultation and decree are maintained.

Done at Tours, in the council of government, Île
October 24, 1870.

The same signatures follow as for the previous decree.

It was a trap cleverly set for Arabs, but they mustn't let themselves be taken in. take. They understood that the promise of Naturalization for them was merely an illusion, and consequently, the purpose of the second decree was to to calm their legitimate indignation against the Jews first, and against France which pla-had been in a clearly marked inferior rank vis-à-vis their former slaves.

This privilege was illicit, granted to in-individuals who had no rights to the territory the history of Algeria, where they were not even The owners before the conquest. The Arabs only owned buildings, including our We, moreover, left them the property.
therefore paid property tax to France, and they did not refuse him the blood tax which was purely optional. Despite their rights acquired, they had been lulled with promises that were never meant to happen. They knew however, that these injustices were only due to the hypocrisy of the native Jews, strongly ap-supported by those living in the Metropolis.

Everything seemed to favor the plan of these beings. venomous. While the French, preoccut elsewhere, went unnoticed this illegal favor and which they could not anticipating the importance, the Arabs, who would have They were unable to take revenge, but they were unaware of the first decree that long after its promulæation.

This was not the time for the Jews to indigenes to make known the distinguished favor which had just been granted to them. Algeria was in cflet too insufficiently protected against an insurrection of our natives, including the the consequence would have been the annihilation of Jews and the probable loss of our colony. By applying for the naturalization decree, the Jews foresaw what might happen the consequences; although disastrous for them

And for France, they had not hesitated, because they had understood that the moment could not have been better chosen to strike the A major coup. They were hoping, moreover, with good reason. that this decree would remain in the shadows for for the entire duration of the war. The watchword had been given, and the native Jews dc-were going to grovel more than ever before the Arabs, who, thanks to this new cowardice, they could not suspect the truth.

To supplement this first decree, the Jews those in power made a second one, which, to the point From an electoral point of view, it completely assimilated the Native Jews to other French citizens. They thus obtained the suppression in the general councils and municipal councils members as Jews and the fullness of their civil rights.

We report here the decree relating to the exercisecice of the right to vote for Algerian Jews (January 25-March 24, 1871):

The government delegation from the Denational defense, — Having regard to the decree of 24 October October 1870, granting naturalization to col-

. i

aE |

peg

-e Let P re IM M aiai
FD LS LE CE 4

=

in
_ - æ

s| emna e PRE to Dé

RS = me Don

eri yL T

- -—— — ee PE Im a,
The EAA EE

baD SDF M Ra

lective to the Jewish natives of Algeria; — considering that, under this decree, he does not must no longer exist in the general councils and municipal members as Israelites;
— considering that until the lists are closed electoral, which, according to the law will
The elections must take place on March 31st.
to be done according to the lists established in 1870; — considering that it is impossible for electthat the authors are deprived of the exercise of their right electoral by virtue of a decree which has the purpose of conferring upon them the fullness of civil rights,

"Decrees:

"Artele 1". — Registered Algerian Jews
on the last electoral lists of 1870 will be allowed to compete in the elections same title as other French citizens until March 31, 1871;

“Art. 2. — For this purpose, the special list of Israeli voters for 1870 will be gathered at the List of French voters.

"From now on, the Indian Jews of Al-
Algerians are fully assimilated into the citizens

French. They enjoy the same civil rights.
questions and policies and are focused on the same electoral list. However, it remains to be established what conditions must the Jew of Aldesigned to be worn or held on the electoral lists. It would not, in fact, suffice to any Jew crossing Algeria to be, by that fact alone, declared a citizen French. "

This gap was filled by the decree of October 7-9, 1871, thus conceived:

"The President of the French Republic, on the proposal of the Minister of the Interior and _ of the civil governor-general of Algeria,

"Decrees: |

“Article 147. — Provisionally, until this that it was decided by the National Assembly . on maintaining or repealing the decree of October 24, 1870, scront considered as indigenes, and, as such, will remain registered on the electoral lists, if they fill in Moreover, the other capacity conditions civil, Jews born in Algeria before the occupation French passion or born since that time of parents established in Algeria at the time when It happened.

“Art. 2. — Consequently, any Jew who will want to be registered or kept on the lists elections will be held within twenty days of the promulgation of this decree, held to the highest standards of law. to state that he is in one of the conditions defined by concluded by art. 1®,

..._“Art. 3. — This justification will be made before the justice of the peace of the Jew's residence. She will have either through the production of a birth certificate session, either by written declaration or by theverhal testimony of seven people living-living in Algeria for at least ten years, that is by any other evidence that the justice of the peace admits-will be deemed conclusive.

"The decision of the justice of the peace will serve as title" to the Jew. As a condition for the deliverance of this title, the Jew, if he has no family name, will be required to adopt one and to make the de-declaration before the justice of the peace...

“Art. 7. — The convening of the colleges” elections will only take place for at least a month after the promulgation of this decree.

We did not think it necessary to insert into its entirety this last decree which is the corol-
The first two. All the Jews of Al-Since the people of Gérie originated from this colony, it was the collective naturalization of this tribe native. As for the formalities to be completed-Before the justice of the peace, it was quite simple. If the Jews, who did not have civil status, were unable to produce a document From birth, he was, on the contrary, very easy to obtain, among their correlation-naires, the seven indispensable witnesses.

Thus, while French and Arabs fell on the battlefields for to uphold the honor of our flag, during that the German armies were devastating the northeastern France were besieging Paris, the Jews, whom we had always duped, surprising our good faith and arrived by the hypocrisy of naturalization. It was evident-tooth that this favor, has granted to our exploits to the detriment of those who had all-days voluntarily served in our armies would incite against us those men who had

rights acquired through our recognition.
Lulled by the hope of an expected reward and deserved, the Arabs did not knowsance, throughout the campaign against Al-Lemagne, from the decree of October 24, 1870, which, Moreover, as we have already said, was kept secret by those involved.

We cannot overemphasize this point.
crucial, because the facts we have just reported-ter surpass the imagination. After the con-
In our quest for Algeria, we found each other.
in our new colony, in the presence of two different races of indigenous people: the First, proud and courageous, after having fought long to regain their independence dance, put themselves at the service of the winner with the conviction that they would be granted minus the rights of citizenship in this territory which had belonged to them; the Seronds, on the contrary, cowards and hypocrites and formerly slaves of first, used us as pawns destal to escape the domination of their first masters and satisfy their greed

First, their ambition second.

From the beginning, the Jew was showing himself to be sycophantic with our officials to obtain their confiancée and to shield themselves from their protection. There was all the more easily achieved because we we were represented then only by old people military personnel, who, knowing only the bra-

Your innocence and the franchise, they could not suspect the treachery of this creeping creature. Could one to assume, in effect, that he was already counting on our power, and that he hoped one day we would be placed cer under his yoke, using our own We have the resources to achieve this. recounted, however, that, as a first recompensates for the services he so hum- He was stealing with impunity from our unfortunate settlers and even monopolized part of the tradements of our officers.

Until 1870, the Jew was a true scourge for Alveric, and we are looking for in In vain, a single fact to his credit that could have motivated our trust. How, at that time, Was Crémieux able to wrest this decree from us? turalisation, even though we knew perfectly well that the Jews were taking advantage of our disasters to Exploiting misery? We would like to admit the blindness of the French government, so as not to be led to believe in an honesty What a compromise! Instead of crushing this snake that crawled in Algeria, we have rewarmed in our bosom, and we have not insights into the severity of the bite, which during- that we have recognized the difficulty of cica- to heal the wounds he had inflicted on us.

Before recounting the conduct of the Jews indigenous people, now French citizens, we will ex- to pose one of the first consequences of the naturalization. If we had had information- specific details about Algeria in general, and about the Jew in particular, it would still have been possible to repair the wrong committed; unfortunate- members of the government do not con- were born in our colony, which is what they were. had learned from the Jews of France.

CHAPTER IX

ARAB INSURRECTION.

*

The Arabs had served too bravely
France in the disastrous campaign of 1870-1871, so that upon their return to Alrélaughter, refusing them naturalization. They came indeed to prove to us that they could to be in the company of powerful auxiliaries.
Unfortunately, they had no one to plead their case with the government French, and at the licu of the reward, due to their bravery, so highly valued by our soil-those who fought alongside them, people came to inflict upon them the cruellest punishment.

The proclamation of the Republic had been for the Jews of the Metropolis an opportunity favorable for taking advantage of the AC power quise, we have already seen one of their own, Crémicux, to seize one of the ministries

most importantly, that of Justice.

Our vile despots don't know if the new government contains within itself the con-vital editions indispensable ct they fear that their conduct is not already too well known to outside so that we will agree to tolerate them more
These are serious questions, for a long time in France.
which rightly worry them, are moment-sadly forgotten, in the face of the facts of wars that are becoming less and less rasure. As a Jew, Crémicux doesn't think than to the benefits that his coreligionists can draw from our defeat or our victory, he also understands that he does not give them It is not enough to be at the head of the destinies of the France, and that we must also take into account Algeria; it was under such conditions that he obtained that famous naturalization decree, then that patriotic French ministers should

to have much bigger concerns.
10.

— -e + m M er 7 ,D

Cremicux was not the only Jew doing part of the new ministry; there we find Jules Simon again, and if we hadn't taken the commitment in this first work of abandonment to give the question of people, we would have a good chance of discovering at least a third one.

We are already planning, based on what we have said Previously, what the Arabs could hope for a government headed by which There were such men. The Jews of-were going to put their former master in the impossibility of harm, because they had everything to to fear from him, because he alone knows them-knows, and would not hesitate to use the only a suitable way to prevent them from becoming harmful They had to. To serve their interests, they had to therefore to keep it under our domination: it On the contrary, they needed the quality of ci-French toys, to have the right by this one title to the protection of France.

'As we said previously, the naturalization of native Jews had been kept secret in Algeria. That was no more.

ER LE TC D OS

thus when our troops had returned to our colony. They believed the moment was opportune to publicize the collective favor which They had just been the object. They hoped for this the moment their former masters bow down- would be subject to the naturalization decree and would not dare to revolt against their conqueror.

It should not have been this way and the Jews would have paid dearly for their betrayal if our indigenes had had at their head a capable leader to lead the insurrection. The news of the naturalization of indigenous Jews of Algeria was not sooner widespread among the Arabs, that they rose up en masse throughout the extent of the territory, with the intention of re- to conquer their independence, to drive out the Frenchman who had not held scs engage- and finally to exterminate every last one Jewish.

Despite their courage, the Arabs could not- would have to resist for a long time against troops possessing equally deadly weapons of war. Lacking capable leaders, they marched in disarray, having no weapon other than a few old flintlock rifles, not very formidable-tables. In the departments of Oran and Al-

The revolt was quickly quelled; the Jews had managed to escape certain death, in remaining sheltered behind our troops, while that the Arabs had seen several fall of their own.

In the south of the province of Constantine,
the insurrection was longer and more deadly Trireme. The Arahes had no choice but to give up with difficulty to an insurrection, the principal-
The main goal was to assert their rights.
They penetrated the small centers, letting-killing many of their own along the way.
to reach the Jews who had been there confined. It was on them above all that they wanted-they were satisfied with their revenge, and they were doing willingly sacrificed their lives to attack

to achieve this goal.
Some of the most powerful leaders (1)

(1) We will cite in particular the conduct of the caid of Ain-Deiva, Ali ben Larbi. In our second In part, we will report the conduct of several calds who, in many circumstances, have “their attack:
chement for France. ->

Cr teens

remained strangers to the insurrection; they tend-They even tried to stifle it. The spirits were too worked up for them to succeed before piles of corpses had proved their powerlessness to these proud natives.

It was only after bloody struggles that they returned to their huts, determined to all that remains is to seize the first opportunity to exterminate this cursed race, who had placed in such a false position. They com-acknowledged their inferiority, and did not submit.
were only faced with our undeniable strength.
Very strict orders had been given.
to our general officers, who were to stand on high alert to avoid a second revolt. The Jews, however, were not satisfied; they would have liked to see the Arabs whom they still feared. They remembered-pelaicnt their weakness in the presence of this re-dubious enemy, who, still inhabiting Algeria, would prevent them from leaving their cantonments,
This Arab revolt should have shed light on the French government and show it how-well he had been unfair in placing that little-

A victory achieved in an impossible situation!

After we established ourselves among the Arabs
We treat them as slaves by force.
What hope do we leave them of reaching a Even relative freedom? They no longer have a homeland.
and we inform them that they do not will never have! Inhabitants of a territory of-
They came to us by right of conquest, they suffer
all the burdens imposed on our citizens, and enjoy none of the advantages except by-carries with him the quality of being a French citizen.

We place them in a rank of inferiority clearly marked, not just in our presence, but also with regard to foreigners who exploit
They are harming our colony at our expense! (1)

Perhaps the response will be that under the government

Turkish government, they were nothing but a horde of savages at the mercy of a few chiefs.
In this case, it was our duty, we who

---

(1) In Algeria, Arabs are less protected by our laws that foreigners come from who knows where. Instead to defend the Arab against his exploiters, we Let's make the scapegoat.

want to be seen as the most civilized people of the world, not to maintain our natives in such ignorance, by making them con- to establish their rights by dictating their de- see! The task was all the more difficult.
It was easy for us to find ourselves in the presence of intelligent and courageous men.

Despite our despotism, the Arabs have however, a certain civilization was acquired in our contact. They understood that with our competitions they could one day be ci- citizens of which France would be proud, and to ob- To hold this competition, they have, in all circumstances- dentures, demonstrates patriotism and de- vow.

Despite all the facts that should have spoken in favor of the Arabs, it is not those who us interesting, it's not those we protect- wcons, but rather their former slaves, these Jews, who have never known a homeland,

During the conquest, the descendants Israel owned nothing in Algeria, and they They were tolerated there only at the cost of the most cruel measures. humiliations. Although cowards, they were not no less treacherous and wicked. Despite their repulsive face, those who didn't know them could not kick Jane to those vile creatures who, crawling, came lick their hands.

In the early years following the conquest, our trust in the Jews was excusable, because our frankness had to facilitate to read their hypocrisy. But what will be criticized always to our former Al- officials Gerie, it is to have fostered the development of this cursed race, which deceived them impunement. It was indeed their responsibility to study them- to describe them to the competent ministers tents. They thus avoided exploitation which was supposed to be ruincuse for Ja France.

CHAPTER X

THE JEW'S VICTORY

Thanks to our naivety and trust, The Jew has finally achieved his goal: he is a citizen French. It is not his attachment to the France, which had asked him for this favor, but well his ambition and his greed. Not having of nationality, the Jew is jealous of all the peoples, and despite his cowardice, his dream would be to place them indiscriminately under his dominion tion. Powerless on his own, he has no hope to arrive only as long as it is supported by those | even that he wants to exploit, and the day he will Discovered, he will return to a life of wandering.

The reign of the Jew can only be of short u

DD © me ue © Re e

duration, because wherever it is found, it brings with it He is suffering from the misery caused by the diverted thefts that we are agreed to call usury, and misery opens the eyes the eyes of the most blinded. To increase his fortune, he does not hesitate to snatch the last money that was supposed to be used to buy bread How many unfortunate people without work. How many people, ruined by the Jew, sought in the Death, the only remedy for their misery! This vile customRier is, moreover, heartless, and to save the He would not give life to one of his victims. the smallest coin. Not being moved _ that through selfishness, every act of his life is based solely on the benefit he can derive from it.

The Jew fears only the brutal torso and he knows that this process is no longer used in civilized countries. As for the law, it is very It's easy to turn her around; he spies on her unfortunate woman. victim, and forces him to accept his uncles conditions, when she cannot escape him. Some of our readers have already seen oprer the Jew, ct they were able to realize the value of the shameful method he used to to make it impossible for his debtor to...

me

to take legal action. As for the rest, we'll see.

Soon the highest officials will have to comply to his will and consequently indirectly favor- these diverted flights, which they become the unwitting accomplices.

Before the conquest of Alweria, the Jews They were already dreaming of breaking free from the yoke of the Arabs. but they felt too weak to try their first exploits in Europe. They had in addition to limited resources, insufficient- yours to leave their native land, and they did not hope not to enrich oneself at the expense of such a master Terrible. Lazy and incapable of the slightest thing. manual labor, however, they could not be of great use to the Arabs, who did not see in cux than servile spies.

Since that time, we have tried to follow them step by step, until the day when, by force Through hypocrisy and intrigue, they manage to obtain to obtain naturalization. At that moment, thanks With our complicity, they had already enriched themselves at to the detriment of the Arabs and the French settlers, but this ill-gotten fortune could disappear- traitors if we refuse them our protection,

However, through naturalization, they had rights They were committed to this protection. They were going to benefit. of these rights to become masters of the Algeria.

The Arab uprising, which they had all a place to fear, because it was above all directed against them, had been quickly repressed and they knew they had nothing left to feared from that direction. For the Jews, it was a first victory which was supposed to be for us terrible consequences. By becoming our They were equals, they were above the Arab, and they were not long in making him feel it this superiority.

The Jew cannot be anyone's equal; if We raise it up to ourselves, it will arrive through the hypocrisis to place his naive person under his domination:
benefactor, until he wakes up-finally emerging from his torpor, he is forced to go and exercise elsewhere his shameful trade. He falls

"generally in countries severely affected-years, and a few years are enough for him to throw the disarray everywhere and at the same time monopolizing the Private wealth and public wealth. His ambition knows no bounds, and instead of Leave this exploited and ruined country as soon as possible.

Through it, he would like to establish himself as lord and to bend everything to his will.

Just as hunger drives the wolf out of the wood, likewise misery awakens and excites the more sleepy.

In countries where the Jew manages to infiltrate
He quickly hoards the money and to place at his mercy both the executive power than the legislative power. So as not to have anything to fearing, he begins buying newspapers and anything that could become a weapon against him; we soon see him so feared that Even his victims don't dare attack him.
literally. We then understand that he is the cause of the general misery, and to cure the evil,
This harmful being must be eliminated.

At that moment, the power of the Jew was indeed finished; he doesn't wait for us to put in before leaving to carry out the threats made against him.

knows, in fact, how far the vin-

public dictation and he is not unaware that none
No punishment would be too severe for him.

is thus forced to abandon part of the stolen fortune, to leave furtively the field of his exploits.

In every country, the Jew must, in order to achieve= dro his unrealizable goal, try to capture the Confidence: that's his greatest chance of success.
Too cowardly to use violence, he didn't than to dislodge, if, from the beginning, he was unable to attract to him, by his mellifluous voice and his hypo-written, the people in the middle of whom he wanted to inhabit with the intention of exploiting them. Good He finds that his method is already very old.
Always new dupes. We hope however, his latest exploits in Europe are coming to an end and no people will be no longer naive enough to grant him the slightest credit. |

He doesn't know any friends. He doesn't hesitate to bite.

the hand that feeds him, if this bite must to bring him something. All the acts of his life is based solely on the interests he can withdraw from it. Next to the wrongdoer who has-

He murders his victim in order to rob her afterwards.

It is good that everyone knows that the Jew does not we are not thinking about the Jew, tearing down to the last penny to unfortunate fa- thousands whose leaders then seek in Suicide, a remedy for misery. What difference? What distinction can be established between the assassin who... that his life, to kill and steal, and the Jew who steals and kills, by taking shelter from the Law? In our opinion, the Jew is the most guilty. And the most dangerous thing is, if the laws cannot-wind protects us from it, it is our duty to defend ourselves.

However, it is to this individual that we wish to... no one grants naturalization! It's up to him that we said: "You are our equal, and As such, you are entitled to our protection. Those who represent us in Algeria have They've seen it in action before, and they didn't protest. against this unjust and incomprehensible favor Good heavens! Soon he'll want to dominate Algeria. thanks to our strength, and yet the protestations of the French of our colony (1) ne trou-

---

(1) The Frenchman of Algeria hates the Jew and does not fear not to tell him to his face what he thinks of him. For every answer in every discussion, this Jew, who has

The wind didn't make the slightest noise in the ministries. in Paris.

The Jews will use the quality of ci- French toys to acquire a certain power in the midst of us, and by this power- They will force us into obedience.

passive. [They received the only weapon they knew-They will maneuver, and we will teach our depends on how terrible the blows are.

They also have revenge to take on the Arabs, and they
They will not let any opportunity pass them by. All-once, knowing that this enemy does not feel con-They feel nothing but disgust and contempt, they don't will never venture alone towards the villages of our brave natives. The Jews do not strikethose who cannot defend themselves, and the Arabs are not in this state at with regard to them, that when they are with the au-French authorities. Finally, thanks to hatred that they inspired in us against the Arabs,
The Jews will plunder them all the more easily.

applied for French citizenship, but merely appeals-Our dirty French compatriot, this cry, which came from The heart clearly demonstrates the Jew's attachment to France.

JEWISH ALGERIA 189

that we will exercise no control.

The Frenchman will thus, while being deceived of his trust, to be the accomplice of the Jew con-to be the Arab, and to exercise the most despotic power absolute with regard to this man who has just to shed his blood for France.

= CHAPTER XI

AT WORK

This is not the time for the Jew to to rest on its former laurels; it possesses _ I'm the lever that makes everything move (money), and he

He will use it to his best advantage. He knows that No one will ask him where he got this fortune, to him who, a few years ago, barely, found himself without resources and without pa-sorting; thus, from the beginning, it will become the main shareholder of all the major companies! He understands, however, that, badly-Despite our terrible disasters of 1870-1871, the France is not yet impoverished enough to that he could place her under his dominion; he Therefore, to achieve his dream, working secretly towards general ruin, he hopes that the day he becomes the detainee each scra forced to bow before him and to recognize-to establish his superiority. To avoid any false maneuvering in this campaign, every Jew will have to come and get the order from the

The Croesus of the group, and there we will specify to him the role that he must play (1).

France's wealth is not enough to as-to quench the insatiable thirst of this cursed race,
He also needs to seize control of everything in Algeria.
so that our farmers and shopkeepers are ruined or manufacturers cannot find the slightest resource in this colony. While the
The richest will create [issues] in all areas

---

(1) We refer our readers to the interesting work by Mr. Kalixt de Wolski, Jewish Russia. The author has admirably treated the theory of the Jew; he speaks at length-the Kahal, a kind of occult government, to which All Jews are required to obey, in the very interest of their corporation, to fight against all peoples and to become a separate state within each state.

bank houses or will prepare the tripoStock exchange listings, others less fortunate will found trading houses of a Special type: credit sale, loan on any type of goods, purchase of recognition pawnshop sessions and objects of all kinds sort, summer. The first ones will ruin the little ones capitalists will kill high-level commerce, second will bankrupt the small businesses merchants and workers. The Jew has so well combined its plans that thousands of persounds will soon fall into his nets.

During the loan of 1871, contracted so much to pay the costs of war than to verto pay the ransom of 5 billion to Prussia, the Jews are the main financial backers. They already owned part of the government bonds: they were in outo have very powerful shareholders in each railway company. Shares and bonds gations pass so quickly between their hands that they already make the stock market prices. The time has come to report to nee dire mu ee ue E ri

|
L
has

CUT TT ea 0 aed es

their capital generates considerable income. Now also the players on the Stock Exchange, who

They are not Jewish, they are walking towards ruin Certain!

Although rich enough to do it on their own the rise and fall, the Jews believe prudently tooth, to better conceal their game and not keep away those who are not in- players veterans, to proceed by small blows struck at the mute.

The lure of profit was not long in coming to attract return to this new kind of gambling den, a a mass of naive people who were going to throw their gold into the Jew's satchel. It followed from the very first-early years an endless series of fail-lists and the downfall of our oldest bank houses.

Despite the considerable profit from their flights
The Jews, diverted from the march, found it too difficult.
slow. They wanted to devour everything, and they had the necessary elements to act in the short term.
To make up for lost time, we see them ten-to be among those formidable stock market coups which They always succeed and each time, aa aada a_n

lead to the ruin of several speculators.
What can our millions do against their Billions? Isn't that the case with these days?
stubborn people who, forgetting the insatiable jackpot,
Are they dazzled by the gold thrown on the carpet?
We see the abyss, but we are fatally drawn to it.
He lies, and we always fall for it.

Besides these vile stockbrokers, there are others
Jews, who, if they derive less benefit important, but they nonetheless work with ardor.

Let's go back to Algeria and return home to the secondhand dealer. We find ourselves here in the presence of of a dirty and disgusting being, covered in a burwe in tatters; if we examine the- From what we can see of his appearance, we recognize Its origin quickly became clear. Further on, in a corner Deep in the darkness, we glimpse her crouching an almost inert mass that eyes exert- These people can easily recognize: it's the mother or the junk dealer's wife. In the hovel as repulsive as the beings that inhabit it, You can find all sorts of objects, scattered about. and others. Some even have a cer-their value; they are placed in a fairly prominent position to attract customers.

The job of a secondhand dealer does not consist of only to buy and sell victuals; it brings in money mainly through loans to small businesses. Maine. In Algeria as in France, the bro- The singer is nothing but a usurer. He lends on pawn, With each loan, he makes sure to sell off a part of the goods of which he does not have the Speed.

This category of Jews does not exploit, in generalral, than the working class. Although the junk- The seller only ever buys at rock-bottom prices; one finds sometimes rare and unusual objects were found at his home. a certain value. In that case, then, it receives the visits from wealthy collectors or tourists foreigners who are forced to pay very high prices something they cannot obtain elsewhere.

This sad industrialist only buys objects whose sale he has almost guaranteed and we we said how he got rid of those became unsellable. The sick worker or Being without work is often a necessity in order to live.

to sell everything that can provide him with whatever-than money. He's definitely talking to the secondhand dealer.

the seller, and he knows that his seller is at his Thank you. He then makes her ridiculously low offers.
adding that he already has too much merchandise and that it will only be a burden for him unsuccessful. The unfortunate worker, driven Out of necessity, one is forced to accept the bare minimum. price offered by the Jew, and later, if he wants to redeem the aforementioned object which, in addition to its value real, has for him a certain intrinsic value-that he is obliged to pay it all the more dear that he holds it more dear.

The employee who temporarily needs of a modest sum, will also carry at the antique dealer's, a few curiosities that he possesses. To regain their possession At the end of the month, he must convert the the silver coins he received. The Arab is often forced, under the same conditions, to have to deal with the Jew.

The secondhand dealer should not be confused with France with that of Algeria. While the
The first one is proud and arrogant with his clients.
which he generally treats with contempt, the se-

PT T EART EPA PET A POTTERY MTB NN ee s-

=- +,

On the contrary, Cond is humble and hypocritical; he has he has not yet forgotten his former condition, and he knows what his arrogance could cost him in this country where the French population is in minority. He is, however, just as much a thief as the First, because theft is innate in the Jew. We We only hear about hijacked flights, otherhe said usury, since, as we have As previously stated, the Jew is incapable of flying openly.

We come to the pawnbroker who performs his exploits on a larger scale He is dressed more neatly than the previous one and speaks French a little better. He has a magazinesin and a few hangars to house the sailors goods; he finally has some of his coReligious figures as well as employees. On his door, It reads: "Loans on all kinds of merchandise- "We're making it easier to sell."

This Jew has merchants as clients and a few individuals.

When goods come from In France, it frequently happens that the destintaire is unable to pay immediately directly the exorbitant transport costs; unable, however, to leave in distress the aforementioned goods, he is obliged to emblender by providing a guarantee. He will then find the Jewish pawnbroker, and explain to him his situation. He agrees to advance the necessary sum, if given as a guarantee tie of goods worth several times the sum loaned.

Here are the conditions:

The borrower acknowledges having received... a sum 20 percent greater than the sum loaned; he must also pay interest of 10 for 100 for the recognized sum, and finally the storage, monitoring and maintenance fees the merchandise. If, at the end of the month, the sum If the loan is not repaid, the lender can do sell the merchandise, unless the loan- The lender does not renew the loan, by paying all the expenses, plus compensation. By compensating the Jewish after two months, the merchant generated -usually paid 100 to 120 for 100. If he leaves to sell the merchandise at that time, no not only does he not remove anything, but also he loses the partial sums he paid.

_—_ be

In France we have warrants which kill small businesses with their illegal taxes gales, but the interests themselves are fixed and legal; we also have the Jews pre-pawnbrokers who are a real plague for society, but they cannot collect a rate as high as those in Algeria.

The native Jew who lends on pawn is in in many circumstances a fence complicit of his failed coreligionists. Here's how He proceeds: when a Jewish merchant cannot to realize profits in line with its appe-Tits, he gets along with the pawnbroker who takes home everything he has in the store. Pen-For several months, the merchant, using his credit, has considerable quantities delivered demarcables of goods, which he transports to his accomplice's house. There is always a third thief who in turn establishes himself and is supposed to buy the goods from the depotsitaire. When these operations are completed, the merchant stops making payments and deposits its balance sheet; it is declared bankrupt, and its Creditors can do nothing against him.

three accomplices share the spoils with impunity spoils of these naive creditors.

Finally, we find the jeweler who... buying on credit. This one, who, like the previous ones teeth, only acts for sure, especially has the functions both clients and customers. This is the real usurer. Those who turn to him do not win-Not necessarily to buy, but to borrow, but the Jew always tells them: I do not I'm not a capitalist, and consequently I don't have any money.
gent. I sell my merchandise on credit, ctje give your values as payment to my suppliers sisters. [He adds, moreover, that it is very easy to resell the jewelry, and he indicates a mar-Chand, who is usually his associate.
The Jew finds it in this way, as we have
As already mentioned, the way to lend at 100 percent.

The Jews of France do not lose their time, and proceed much like their Coreligionists from Algeria. Useless believer to emphasize the differences to be established on these two swindlers, we will simply say that While the usury rate is higher in Algeria,

E
|

|.
has
t.

CN E ea n sd - to

In France, business is much more nombreuses.

Thanks to these various categories that we as we have just explained, the Jews could exploit- to indiscriminately include all classes of society society. The unfortunate people who let themselves be taken- to get caught in the gears of the Jewish machine were inevitably lost. Moreover, it was . almost impossible to escape; the rarity of money making business increasingly more difficult, the biggest traders virent themselves in the obligation to have recourses to these usurers. If companies form- _maint to fight more easily against this impetuous current, the Jews were making them fierce competition, and, thanks to their capital-* rates, they often succeeded in annihilating them.

Incapable of doing anything on their own, the Jews understood that they could not reach the power than through money; also they employ- they use all reprehensible means to achieve to be the sole holders of this money |

Both in Algeria and in Metropolitan France, the The French are marching towards certain ruin; they oo oo ne oeoo ne

they see it and can do nothing against their dana wicked enemy who holds our rulers hostage Thank you. Our ancestors made the revolution of 1789 to escape the despotism of kings and... lords; they shed their blood to con-to seek their freedom. What would they say today?

What if they were witnesses to our newfound servility?

We voluntarily gave ourselves a master who was in a very different way despotic and arbi-to milk that our former lords who, those of the less so, liked Trance and knew how to do it Respect!

If we have tolerated the Jews without condemning them
why should we tolerate them any longer?
We have known them for a long time now-sounds? Can't we do without Mayvery and govern ourselves? Is it Therefore, we need our ancestors to emerge from their a tomb to shout at us: Death to the Jews!
and revive that old Gallic blood that flows in our veins to force us to reconquer
This freedom that they paid so dearly for?

These are the questions that must be asked.
Those who love their country do not want not to witness his ruin. We are all driven by the same intentions and we we will not hesitate to revive the confidence of Those who have relinquished their freedom. We know _ all that the Jew who is neither worker, nor in-industrial, steals from us with impunity. Those among we who do not dare to attack him publicly they hate him no less, but they have for He felt a fear mixed with contempt, she, dreading

They are waiting for the right moment to act, given its power.

The Jew, by proceeding with such audacity and of perversity on the very day we had granted citizenship, knew our ca- :

character, and knew that for a long time he would not have Nothing to fear. Although proud and courageous,
The French only revolt when-that he is pushed to his limits-comments. The Jew hoped that day to have a armed to protect him against those who do not would not willingly submit to his yoke. He
This was misleading, because the army is first and foremost French.
And when the day of atonement arrives, he will be alone and will beg for mercy.

CHAPTER XII

INITIAL CONSEQUENCES

°

It is not enough for the Jews to monopolize all wealth at the expense of our nationals, he They also need to lay the foundations for their future power. To achieve this, they must begin to to run for elected office. Their task is all the easier in Algeria, since they are the largest number of voters can, by Next, choose the candidates. Over there, they are ` abhorred by both the Arabs and our na-nationals, and they would quickly be torn to shreds and vilified, if our civil servants and our officers

The officers had received very strict orders.
to protect them.

We do not allow them to ignore the protection of which they are the object, and that is what per-

They set about continuing their exploits, fearing nothing.
They seem very concerned about the blows.
few of the insults that are constantly directed at them mentally; it is true that these insults are only Harsh truths. If they support everything from Iran-
This is not the case with the Arab; for the
At the very least, they file a complaint against him, regardless of the unfounded nature of these complaints
Our authorities are cracking down very severely.

The Jews of Algeria are still too illiterate
They were far too primitive to seek the mandate.
of deputy; but if they cannot stand, they choose a candidate who is entirely unfamiliar to them-dedicated and someone they can rely on. Our na-nationals must renounce the electoral struggle;
They can only regret seeing Iran-
I would sell myself to this vile breed.

In each district, the Jews have at their head was the most miserable among them.

He is the elector. The member of parliament who...

His election is partly due to his Thank you, and our Algerian readers know how to-Well, he's demanding! This Jew receives guests at his home.
the highest officials; he is very free with them it was known in every circumstance to use of his influence. It is to him, moreover, that he
You need to apply to get a promotion.
and its protection is somewhat preferable to that of the deputy himself who will always hold better his promise to the electorate than towards the official. The Jew did not-
The site does not, on the contrary, request the relocation ment or the revocation of the one who does not recognize-will not hate his superiority or who will infringe his orders.

This account reveals the servility of the civil servant. No longer having his independence, he must comply with the requirements of the one who can, at his discretion, give him a promotion.
or obtain his dismissal. He also knows by experience that legitimate claims address-votes in his favor by our nationals either at deputies from Algeria, or to the ministers cux-memes, however, remain ineffective. In some cases

: . "7 i 7? me meamea arae kane -ne a mi re dt
. R ` CRE ge d enr dji i = - . do de i 1e. Grace cu kai |

—7
X

Under similar conditions, the civil servant is honest must inevitably become the Jew's accomplice, if he wants to keep the position that allows him to
to provide for one's family.

This is a terrible consequence of the natemporaryization, the limits of which had not been foreseen - weight. By naturalizing the Jews, they have said: By becoming voters, it is up to you alone that it will be up to the members of parliament to appoint them because you are the most numerous. However, they were not men to choose candidates willing to work in the general interest; they only appointed those who committed themselves in advance to serve their private interests. Their elected officials didn't even have the right to expose the
The sad situation of our settlers in Algeria, because

In searching for the remedy, harm would have been done to the rapacity of the Jew.

The grand elector, who would more accurately be called a gang leader, is a very influent. It was at his home that all his coreligionistsnaires vicnnent take up the watchword; it is he who receives their complaints and submits them to who is entitled to it. He is an object of horror for all French people, but he is feared, and this Fear is his strength.

d

We would be happy to present to our readers the lives of all the major electors of Algeria, but these biographies would lead us too far and would make us anticipate Plouvrage that we need to publish towards the end of the year. However, we will say a few words from one of the most prominent, that a few at least some of our readers know by name; we want to talk about Simon Kanoui {1} the Grand elector of Oran.

Physically, Kanoui is a very repulsive health: tall and slightly stooped, small eyes sunken, flattened nose, wide-open mouth. Dressed in French style, he wears a jacket and is wearing a soft hat; although relaticlean clothes, her clothes are never elegant.

Kanoui is practically illiterate: he knows at

(1) In this first work, we only recount some facts about Kanoui, reserving for us in the Jews in Algeria to write a complete biography of this great person.

He can barely read and write. He is, however, an officer. of the academy and knight of the Legion of Honour neur. [He speaks our language in a very incorrect and completely lacking in basic knowledge spelling.

He is rich; but all his fortune is in his wife's name. Although having no credit, he frequently gets himself l-sell goods that he is supposed to pay for cash, which he never pays. His dupes They have no legal recourse against him. For to show his method, we will To give a few examples:

Kanouiï has gas at his place and he finds it very economical to never settle the receipts which are presented to him monthly. For for ordinary mortals, it is customary to supto give gas to those who do not pay regularly relatively: an exception is made for our personnage. [A few years ago, his note being rising to a fairly high figure, the inspector the company looked for a way back in possession of the sum owed. He found the oc-

casino, during an evening hosted by Kanoui, 12.

3

evening to which he was, moreover, invited. As soon as the Most of the guests had arrived, the inspector is announced. Instead of taking part in the party, He requests a private meeting with the head of the household. He doesn't know what will happen to be the topic of conversation, but it is determined to pay with kind words if we he presents him with his receipt; — he was counting without the formal determination of its creditor. When they were alone, the inspector told him, by presenting him with the receipt, that if he does not pay did not do it immediately or did not do it soto acquire a value through his wife, he was going to make couthrough the gas pipes. Kanoui implored in vain the leniency from his creditor, by explaining to him his inability to pay—that same evening and in asking him until the next day; he was unwavering and the great elector had to execute. Kanoui had very close relations with a general whose name we will withhold. He made him. sometimes knows gifts, when these cawater cost him nothing. But one day, he _ presents herself at a jeweler's, and asks him for earrings with diamonds; he told her that he wanted to give it as a gift to the general's daughter, adding that if they liked them, he would pay them the that same evening. Despite his promises, the jeweler He did not want, out of caution, to entrust the children to anyone else. to the Jew, and he promised to send them himself to destination.

The earrings had been accepted. for several days now, and the buyer does not He did not show up to pay his debt. The merchant summoned him to his house and told him that he was very surprised by the delay in payment ly. Our man then replies that he is He's stuck for the moment, and he would like a an eight-day delay; he even proposed a vatheir signature. The jeweler understood that His jewelry would be lost if he didn't act not accordingly. He then told his debittheorist that if he wasn't paid immediately, he was going to write to the general to ask him for the earrings, adding that he had been Victim of a scam. Complaints Kanoui's efforts produced no effect, and,

to avoid the bloody affront he was Threatened, he paid the money.

Despite the caution of the merchants, what-some, however, were victims of the superchericde Kanoui, ct, unless an occasion exceptional circumstances meant they had to forgo recovery.
to pay the sum due. One of his creditors, Furious at having been tricked, he had promised himself to avenge. He had learned that his debtor was went on a trip to France, and he spied upon his return, that day, a bailiff carried out a seizure Sie-arrèt on all the traveler's luggage. Kaseeing no way out of this at an impasse, he went to find his creditor, and the suphe begged to grant him a delay; this was inflexible and the great elector found himself again _ forced to pay this time.

We have chosen these examples from among thousands, because we see it in all the acts of his life seeks to take advantage of its influence to exploiting our nationals. It is not unfortunate.
not the only one, and if we were to do the biography-Philosophy of all the major electors of Algeria,

We would see some of them who are still going further. There are facts that we owe to remains to be passed over in silence, for fear of being accused of exaggeration, while we remain always falling short of the truth.

Our Algerian MPs are aware of these men and protect them. We are all-however convinced that they have only the contempt; but driven by ambition, they com-_ assume that they need them to be elected.
They know that the Jews don't like them and that If they appoint them, it's only to serve themselves.
of them. They even fear that the day we will-
We will have reclaimed our rights over these vile despots, we did not ask them to account for the harm they will have done us. These considerations are not sufficient-However, they do not feel compelled to give them back their freedom.
of action, and they have come to desire that the Jew's power lasts indefinitely to always retain this mandate of which they are so proud and which they use to our detriment.

The French are the least represented in Algeria victims of the Jew; he exploits us by flattering us so much. But he hasn't forgotten that the Arab in had done his thing and he had consequently put it unable to enrich himself at the expense of others, and he uses us to exercise

a cowardly revenge. Our proud native will not surrendered only to force, and this force is now in the hands of the Jew. He-
This is inevitable for the Arab, and he hopes for to strip him of his possessions and make him his slave.

During the conquest of Algeria, we have had to leave the Arab in possession of his riches-his; now, some of them still have a considerable fortune. The Jew, on the other hand, who had nothing and who today possesses nothing that what he stole from us, would have the gou-French government stripped the Arab and the chassåt of the conquered territory. He would gain from it a double advantage: first he would be avenged for his former master and would have nothing more to fearto give him some; then it would be easier for him to agree caparercette fortune si elle était dans les mains of our nationals.

Despite our docility, we were unable to... while we comply with this order, because we we understood that the Arab would never consent

'but to leave Algeria and we know in ou-It's true that he loves France and maybe one day he will of great use.

CHAPTER XIII

ALGERIA IS JEWISH

Algeria, which cost France so dearly,
It belongs to her more than just in name; in fact, it is governed by the Jews. These individuals, half-wild ones, who, even today, come crawling before us, they know, however, that they are the masters. Their feigned submissiveness Their failure is solely due to their cowardice. Convinced in the effect that our military forces are not sufficient To protect them, they make sure not to excite their victims. They understand that the Arab a thirst for revenge, and the slightest incitement of our nationals against them would be enough to prepare-to their annihilation (1).

The French have never revolted con-to be the Jew because they knew him incapable to defend themselves. They couldn't have foreseen the dream of this servile being. What did they have to fearto speak of this false beggar who, after having stripped bare, did they always look miserable? [ls
They took him for an irresponsible thief.

Our confidence was to be the strength of this dangerous enemies, if he could bear our insults
He was taking our money. Misery was growing.

(1) We recall here a fact which proves how much the Arabs are eager to take revenge on the Jew:

Following the assassination of an Arab by Jews, in the department of Oran, several indi-Genes went to the prefecture and asked the prefect of Lcur to allow, during the day, complete freedom to avenge the death of their brother.

Fearing to provoke the anger of the petitioners by a
The official refused the call, asking for a few reflection sessions. — He took the opportunity to advise immediately dia'ement the commander of the place, and when the
The Arabs returned seeking the answer, all the me-“sure measures had been taken to prevent this revolt” against the Jews. Some of them, however, Having learned of the plot, they had already fled Oran.
abandoning their families.

always increasing by that very fact that it ac-He could do anything, and yet we dared nothing against him.

Today, we finally understood driving of the Jew, and we hate him, but we cannot to avenge this traitor, always ready to lick the
The hand that strikes him. It is also hoped that The naive will no longer fall into his clutches.
and that then he will no longer be able to enrich himself at our expense expenses. Unfortunately, it is not known that the
The Jew so skillfully laid his nets, that fate-We will always fall into it, until...
that we decide to drive him out.

He has, moreover, reached the final stage, and we will find ourselves in this alternative:
either place ourselves under its domination or exterminate it.
Our nationals are now worthless in Algeria:
It is the Jew who is everything. We said com-how he appointed the deputies, and we have explained how he used his influence at-near them. Not only does he do grant promotions or revoke the functions tionaires of Algeria, but also he is the pro-

The driving force behind the laws concerning our colony. It is

He always humbly makes a request;
But knowing his electoral strength, he knows that he has the right to demand.

Besides the Algerian deputies, the Jews have also for them some deputies of the Metropole. Thanks to their capital, their coreligion-pairs from France have monopolized everything that could-would be of some use to them. If they have For them, the Jewish press, we will create the anti-Jewish press that will wield a terrible weapon against them, because we will publish day by day day their hidden menacs.

They took advantage of the people's ignorance to

In this regard, they brought in some of their members in power. They then given important positions, either to their own, either to those who had pledged to serve them.

Today, in every mid-season reshuffle ministerial, the main portfolios are con'trusted to Jews and the cabinet is at their devotion. We fear their power, but we submits to it, and we know how easily they overthrow the ministries that do not comply At their command!

The Jews of Algeria feel the effects of this power. They have as their agents their deputies who, petitioning on behalf of Jews, obtained- They are asking for what they are asking of a ministry otherwise Jewish, or at least willing to support the interests Jews. But their interests being essential- fundamentally opposed to those of our nationals and to those of colonization, by the sole fact that they do not can exploit only those who resort to “They do not hesitate to use all their influence to prevent our settlers from reti- to retain the slightest benefit from the land for themselves transferred or sold.

If we had given the colonists the means to cultivating the land, they would not have grown need to turn to these loan sharks, who, by Consequently, they could not have stolen them with impunity. promoting colonization through the means that As we previously mentioned, the colonists would inevitably have become richer; thanks to the re- had they come and withdrawn them annually, they- would not have been forced to borrow and The Jews would not have been able to conduct their business illicit. This explains the motive that...

Algerian MPs were being criticized for doing nothing in favor of our colonists.

Without the naturalization of the fii, Algeria would be represented by men who, underheavens of his interests and those of France, would signal the problem and indicate the redoctor. The necessary work would have already been done. services to facilitate agriculture, and today revenues would be derived from this colony enormous sums that would constitute the wealth of France. But the Jews had only one goal: to work to the ruin of the French and to seize their resources Puglia. With such a program, they had to 'to use all means to harm to our prosperity. They knew that the drought was a terrible scourge for our settlers in Algiers Ric and they opposed the creation of canals which would have facilitated irrigation.

The Jew is incapable of any manual labor; He lives only by usury, and that is a comtrade is all the more lucrative because of the misery “larger. Being of no use, it is already by that alone a harmful being; being in besides being an enemy to those who live near him,

P
k `

In the general interest, it must be relegated to deserted countries. It is true that in exile he could notwould be able to obtain the things essential to the life, and to avoid starving to death, he tries-would still be able to enter a new country, where, if he were admitted, he would create new dupes.

Zoologists could have done something similar to the Jew.
very interesting studies. It's an ania very particular kind of illness, which, if it _has some resemblance to man, in dif-However, he differs on many points. The man is indeed, thanks to his intelligence, a great innovator; he knows how to procure all the choices his things that make his life sweeter; he knows how to to use everything that is of any kind to him usefulness; — the Jew, on the contrary, is not only-incapable of the slightest invention, but even he could not, if he were alone, suffice to its basic needs. It is inferior to the animals wild diseases and diseases affecting domestic animals because he has neither the courage of the first nor the willcility of the latter.

Not intending to give a course on In zoology, we leave more to our readers

nm — - -~ o% æ- - nan nn

ferrés that we on the classification of animals ailments, the care to see which category for-would belong to the Jew.

The campaign was so skillfully conducted that today Algeria belongs almost exclusively to Jews. If they are not pro-owners, it is that the land has no cu-cunc valeur; they are, moreover, the creditors of those who possess, and when following of a judicial sale, provoked by them, they become successful bidders for hypo- land Tea-stained teas are meant to be resold immediately. De-then for a few years, they spied on certain winegrowers-farmers who, thanks to the capital provided by They did not need to resort to their stock market. This is a significant loss, because they believed they alone had the right to withdraw the re-coming from all cultivated lands, while that they have nothing to hope for from those who possess sedentary, the money needed for the exploit-tation.

* If we were to witness their private conversations, we would certainly hear the Jews say that it constitutes an infringement on their property.

They were so used to exploiting our nationals, that they cannot admit that Some are shirking their responsibilities today and will not
They do not bring them the fruits of their labor.
no doubt hoped to restore to their own advantage the feudal rights of the Middle Ages over the entire territory Algerian history, and they are astonished that the newarriving calves do not pay them any rent-vance.
= Besides these wealthy and independent ownersdants, some French traders have located in major centers. Capable of They can walk without the money of usurers, they have made a considerable drop across all the Essential goods. That's where progress that we have observed with pleasure, but it is due only to private initiative, and the government is completely foreign. This improvement is, moreover, quite good insufficient, because everything is still very expensive by continuation of exorbitant transport fees.

The situation of these farmers and traders the quality leaves much to be desired; they are not that foreigners in this annex of the

France. Despite their right to vote, they sa- they claim their ballots are worthless. in those ballot boxes stuffed with Jewish rags. For: all elections, whether municipal, whether cantonal or legislative, the choice of elected officials are left at the mercy of our exploiters. Under such conditions, they cannot ask nothing of those they would have ousted. if their voices had found the slightest echo. They com- assume that no modification can be long brought about in this state of affairs, as long as the Jews still scan enough many to retain these rights cong they They understand the importance.

What our nationals would have wanted for diminishing the power of the Jew was the implementation of the decree of October 24, 1870, relating to the naturalization of Arabs. By Unfortunately, the Jews had understood the danger. which would result for them from this naturalization, and their coreligionists in France were powerful enough to oppose it.

If the Arab had been an elector, he would have naturally sided with the French, and then the Jewish electors should have to forgo nominating candidates. The new- elected officials would have received the mandate of si- to describe the situation in Algeria and to ask the necessary funds for the execution of the essential work for the development of colonization.

The Jews of France reportedly opposed These improvements, but they wouldn't have had enough influence over our provincial representatives who, understanding the usefulness of the reforms of-mandated, would not have hesitated to vote for them. The insistence of the Jewish representatives had perhaps opened their eyes, and they realized that these vile despots were working towards our ruin, they would have diminished their power and prepared their downfall.

To remain masters of Algeria, the Jews therefore had to oppose naturalization tion of the Arabs. Formal orders were given to our officials, and each de-order, even one addressed by these brave soldiers who had always valiantly done their part.

duty, remained buried in the files.
13.

THE

The same is true today, and the Arabs have understood that they will never achieve the quality of a French citizen, as long as the Jew is at power.

Our humble exploiters know that they have
They have nothing to fear from the French, and they see that PARabe alone can be a danger to their security; therefore they are not content to refuse him naturalization, they seek still to be completely enslaved. For at-
To achieve this goal, they had been the promoters of a law known as the indigénat, ct which was done exclusively against the Arabs.

The native population (1) consists of fifty to sixty articles, which we would like to enumerate- to mérer, to better show the harm done to the freedom of our unworthy. The functions- administrative and judicial authorities may

(1) All the articles of the indigénat being more absurd We, like each other, did not deem it necessary to to insert them into this work, Let it suffice for us to say that any civil servant can implement the punishment decreed by the indigeneity, without giving or hearing the slightest explanation.

-wie

"m

EE ss

-, t Pr h Tua O aa

condemn the Arab without appeal to five days of prison and a 15-franc fine. This sentencenation can be pronounced interchangeably on all points of the Algerian continent and without any formalities. By the mere fact that a Arab man elbows a law enforcement officer, he may be sentenced on the spot to the penalty specified above. These convictions are all the more unjust because those very same ones who are responsible for pronouncing them, are at the discreation of the Jews, for the reasons listed higher up. This is a revenge of which we we are indignant, and against which we do not we can do nothing, |

We are no longer in Algeria except for the executors of the will of the Jews. If we If we despise them, if we insult them, we do not we are no less subject to their orders.
It is a form of slavery that humiliates us, but from which we cannot escape. If these mistressesunacknowledged acts were being carried out openly; we... we would revolt and break the bonds that bind us embrace, while we cannot chato ticr these crawling beings, which, while com-

their principals seem willing to obey.
Their cowardice and hypocrisy are weapons that we bend easily, but that we do not we can break.

The Jew of today no longer resembles
The one from twenty or thirty years ago. Although also illiterate, although dressed in the same way, he He knows, however, that he is the sole master. Having not the necessary strength to preserve and To extend its power, it must, in order to maintain it, to cover himself with the shield of the very one he wants to enroll.

Algeria is Jewish, both through us and against us.
It is mainly in France that we have drawn the
The necessary force to achieve this result. If our first civil servants, fascinated by the hy-
The Jews were complicit in the injustice.
unconscious, this is no longer the case since the naturalization, and those who protect them act-They usually feel it against their will, but they do are forced if they don't want to lose a place which is their only source of income.

French laws being enacted by the Jews, those in Algeria know that they cannot-wind that harms the interests of our national. So that the application is If done without protest, they must appear humble and submissive to those they wish to see slow exploit.

CHAPTER XIV

JEWISH PATRIOTISM

When a foreigner asks to be na-
To localize in a country means that it already likes it his adopted country. He wants to live there, but he is ready to defend it. The quality of citizenship
It grants rights, but imposes on him... duties; if he wants to enjoy some, he must be ready to accomplish others. He knows that in each nation's inhabitants must proto protect each other. Besides the blood tax and the tax on money, he is morally obligated to work for the general well-being.

The Jew is an exception to this primary rule.
diale; he only requests naturalization

OS does not X
.

es my
In

ram.

np = pe

tt

THERE

to be able to exercise his exploits. He doesn't like or know anyone, and When he settles somewhere, it's because he's there He sees his own interests. He wants to enjoy the advantages of naturalization, without fulfilling the charges.

Despite their considerable wealth, the Jews would like to be exempt from all taxes.
As for the tax on money, they cannot... subtract entirely.

The Jews, who are nothing but merchants of money, most of the time, have a little a store designed to attract borrowers.
Their patent is therefore very low, so that they conduct significant traffic and carry out considerable profits.

Those who own pleasant properties ment, had their lands classified in the last category and are therefore only very little tax was levied. The influence of the Jews was growing.
feel everywhere and if they dared, they would ask-would likely be completely exempt from property tax. They might find one way to explain this privilege to their employees and their naive victims.

Their goal being, as we have already said, to work towards the ruin of France, they regret this money that they are forced to pay to the tax collector.

The Jews would not want to be forced to… cunc obligation. To be protected by the legislator, while they continually violate the law, That is their only desire. However, there are some charges from which they cannot be exempted without alienating those they still need, and the Paying taxes is one of the main ones.

As for the blood tax, the Jews make so as never to pay him. They use the powersession acquired to exempt from service military part of their coreligionists of France. In peacetime, they would not know to submit to this discipline which is the strength of our armies; in times of war, they refusewould risk walking into the fire and would be a hindrance our hospitals.

It's not just greed on the one hand and the cowardice of the other that prevents them from to fulfill these mandatory obligations; it is necessary to addto end their natural enmity towards the peoples at In the environment in which they live. In every act In their lives, they only see their own self-interest. sonnels, and if they find it advantageous, they will deliver to the enemy the country where they lived and which they pretended to adopt. Most recently incore, we have just witnessed a terrible crisis caused by them. In concert with their fellow believers who live in Germany And England, they have, through fake news, threw the stock market into disarray. The decline… derable of French and foreign rents allowed them to make large profits at to the detriment of the various European peoples. All these rumors of war that worried Europe For a few months, they came from them and only them they took advantage of their consequences (1).

We are returning to patriotism proper. said of the Jew in Algeria. We will not repeat what we said about them, when speaking of the

(1) We encourage our readers to look into this matter the important pamphlet: No War, — Jewish Plot-German, — published by the United Anti-Israelite Committee Versel,

Regarding the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-1871, we will limit ourselves to show how they recognized the favor of which they were the subject at that time. As French citizens, Jews were forced to... how to be enlisted in our armies. In France, It was quite easy for them to evade the law and to to exempt. It could not be so in Algeria, where they made up the majority of citizens called French. Some arrived were doing well, thanks to the protection of the high civil servants, to be reformed, but he does not. could thus be applied to everyone, for, although cowardly, the Jew is generally of a cowardly constitution fairly robust tion. Under such conditions, It was necessary to protect them by doing something a special law for Algeria. All the French-The Algerians were no longer subject to anything more than a year of military service. This law had the serious drawback of also protecting our nationals, but we could not make a distinction. It was, however, decided that this favor would only be granted to those who lived Algeria for some time now; as for the conscripts, attached to a public service, they deto enjoy this privilege, they had to take the en- commitment to remain in the colony for ten years. This exception could not apply to the Jews who, for the most part, were born in Algeria; it only targeted the French.

The Jewish soldiers were as much as possible placed, for their year of service, in the various offices of the administration; some were enlisted in the Zouaves.
_ the latter were still sufficiently protected to be exempted very often from exercising cice. They were always left in garrison in the city they lived in, so that they found- had very little change with their lives usual. i

They were very easily recognizable under the military uniform, but if we met them often in the ruts, it was rare to see them in the ranks. It was a service for them. mandatory that was imposed on them, but not having no intention of ever entering the service from France, they didn't need to app- to learn how to handle weapons.

In the various expeditions that followed

Naturalization, Jews have always found a way of not leaving their native land; it gives them

All that was needed was to change battalions. During:

from the Tunisian campaign, all the Jews registered regimented in the companies that had received the order to leave, they immediately switched places thanks to the protection of their leaders, and none of them left Algeria.

For the Tonkin expedition, which was another-
The situation in Tunisia was so terrible that we had to... see part of our staff from Algeria;
Soon, even then, we had to recruit volunteers.
While the Jewish soldiers were rotating to me-sure that their companies were embarking for this distant land, the Arabs on the contrary asked to be part of each new dispatch. At our request, these natives... were found in such large numbers that we had to fuse a part.

During this Tonkin campaign, the

The Jews showed us how far their pa-Triotism. Constantine was quite special-the theater of certain events which, although of grave importance, have not been reprimanded

-~ -o

2 io om m to

— + +

2 ap — PRE +

THERE
b ah RA

mes. During a dispatch of riflemen, among thewhich a large number of volunteeers, the The Jews had the cowardice to boo our generous soldiers, shouting to them in Arabic: to the Slaughter, death to the Arabs. These traitors, counting on our protection, they believed all permits, when they were confined in the big cities. It was not so that daythere and the Arabs, pushed to the limit, won the Jewish quarter and would have exterminated all of them inhabitants if this legitimate revolt had not been reawarded by the French authorities. The Arabs had been so swift that some Jews paid with their lives for this unspeakable provocation. They had so often insulted the Arabs in the major centers, which they believed to always be able to throw the more bloody outrages (1).

In this brawl instigated by the Jews, those-

(i) This case, which had a rather large impactThe incident in Algeria did not become public knowledge in France. It's barely a few newspapers mentioned a fight between Jews and Arabs, but without making it known pattern.

They don't even think about defending themselves; they humbly begged for mercy from those they had just insulted them. The Arabs remained deaf to their prayers, and if they had not been arrested If they had stopped in time, they certainly would have done an immense mass of all the Jews of Consauntie.

If the Jew hated the Arab, because the latter- this had once made it impossible for him to to harm, he had to momentarily forget his hatred, to see only the man who goes free- risking one's life in distant countries to Support the honor of the French flag! France's interests were of little concern the Jew, and it mattered little to him that we were vanquished, let our soldiers water with their blood this foreign land. Besides this cowardice which I was preventing him from fighting for his adopted country. one observed in him the most complete indifreference in all bloody struggles which could jeopardize Ja's future France.

=

fé Qu mn a de M `

There
PR RE e

If the authorities had a duty to prevent the massacre of the Jews, which was not in the circconsistency that a just punishment was theirs also that it was incumbent upon him to conduct an investigation serious questions about the causes of the provocation and to then take action against these despicable beings who had insulted our brave volunteers. This matter was unfortunately left unresolved. and even the press, which had received orders He only said a few words about it. We _ we are even inclined to believe that if nas tirail- their people had remained in Algeria, it was they who would have been prosecuted.

The arrival of our troops from Africa in TonKin quickly changed the course of events. They repelled the Black Flags and accumulated- victory after victory; the news, if worrying a few months earlier, deve- They were becoming more reassuring every day. Each However, the dispatch announced the death of some of our soldiers, and the skirmishers were not the most spared: During the demade of Lang-Son, who threw such great perturbulence in people's minds, the Arabs left a large number of their own on the field of battle. Our losses were so exaggerated, that for a few days it was a real Mourning for France.

While the French were mourning their brothers or their sons who died thousands of leagues away from their country, the Jews of Algeria celebrated at contrary to publicly declaring our defeat. They saknew that it had cost the lives of hundreds of riflemen, and for them this was the result more satisfactory. [They were concerned about the rest] They saw very few of our disasters, and they didn't see them. in this terrifying new story that the gratification- sowing their revenge.

Fortunately, not all Arabs left for Tonkin; enough remained in Algeria to punish the insults directed at their brothers who died on the field of honor. In enstraining out cries of joy and especially in Upon learning the cause, they did not hesitate to renew- reveal what they had done before their departure, those who could no longer take revenge. They spread-

they said in the Jewish quarter, and did very quickly stop the noisy parties of these cowardly beings and inhumane; instead of "death to the Arabs", they shouted "Death to the Jews" and did not delay

D pe Ve Se me mnnne

Oh, the one to me, the Mrs. of

i + ss siT

- ai

~ š
—
Fee (a

Ds Lie He
- -

. l rT Sei
It
~ Be anap ads ia EN aaa aaa ns NE +

no TO EE adibe 7 mhis a. ameupa pihen da ms mentuei © sm igi tt a

JEWISH ALGERIA 241

not to carry out their threats. It was yet another surprise for the Jews who do not they did not believe in such boldness on the part of the Arabs, reduced by them to a state of semi-slavery.

They were still protected by our authorities who rescued them from certain death, for the
The Arabs were determined to spare no one.
none of those who would fall under their control hand.

These events did not only occur in Cons-aunt; they resonated throughout the large cities and especially Algiers and Oran. The Algerian newspapers didn't mention it.
that very few and those from France did not report not even these infamies to public condemnation.
The best-informed organs belong-moreover, they were born to the Jews, and these had
It is in everyone's best interest to remain silent.

Our readers cannot, after such an exposition, .
to retain the slightest doubt about patriotism Jews. They are happy about our disasters.
if they derive the slightest benefit from it. They have not-France, which was their favorite group, is not lying.

to the golden eggs, and they will never love any nation. Guided by selfishness and greed, they will never hesitate to betray their protectors in the hands of an enemy who will pay for their labor
T

hison. |

|
t

í +

CHAPTER XV

IN FRANCE AND ALGERIA

In the course of this work, we have We often talk about the Jews of France, who are continually called upon to play an important role bringing to their coreligionists in AlGeria. If both are Jewish, then… However, there are some differences between them. the points we will seek to establish,

In Algeria, Jews rule by namebre; in France, they owe their power to their capital. On both sides, their strength comes from their union, for they can do nothing. Some without the others. While some, under the veil of hypocrisy, have been placed at the head of our business and direct our international policy ricure and our foreign policy, the others They alienated us from the Arab, who could be for a powerful ally for us.

Jews currently living in France we come from all islands and countries; we find therevons the German Jew, the Romanian Jew, that Jew native; in Algeria, on the contrary, we do not We hardly ever encounter anything other than the latter. It is certain however, all are from the same original community. gine, and at the beginning of the 16th century- At that time, they were almost unknown in Europe. At that time, they had almost abandoned given Asia, to spread to Africa where They were still living in a primitive state.

The first Jews who came to Europe settled in the various small states which form what is now Germany, some-Some settled in England, very few vin-they return to France. Barely arrived, they search-are keen to lay the foundations of their future power-session. They were able to act all the more freely.

that they were not asked who they were, nor Where did they come from? They were, moreover, located

m
J ag ep le e A R- ee

=. +-

qe e mn

- of
NS RON M eur T

To t+ 24 «
home 2 a -

JEWISH ALGERIA | 245

in the midst of naive and illiterate peasants whom he
It was very easy for them to exploit it.

Whatever means were used through the Jews, they were seen getting richer by the day in day to the detriment of the people, and a few
Some of them quickly made themselves noticed.
by their immense wealth. In the province from Hesse-and-Nassau, to Frankfurt am Main, a Jew, named Rothschild (1), had founded the the world's largest banking house. Our Readers know how that fortune went by thriving at the expense of all the na-

European tions.
In the last century, the Jews had understood

_ (1) The current king of finance, Alphonse Rothschild, who adds the title of baron to his name, learned with barely Ja publication of the remarkable work of Mr. Ed. Drumont, Jewish France. He was struck by the accuracy of all the stories told about him and his family. He has asked where the author had obtained all his information ments?

Rothschild refrained from responding to the harsh truths. presented by Mr. Drumont. He perhaps hoped that this an important work would not be read and consequently that the ignoble exploits of Jewish financiers would be in known | that they could do nothing in France and That's why they hadn't gone there. established. They knew, in fact, that our lords, already very harsh on their vassals, not to would not let themselves be exploited by them and would not would tolerate as much as they were able to perform certain manual tasks. The little-ple already had a lot to do to feed his lord and he did not want to be at the useless commoners.

T

--. E

When the Revolution of 1789 broke out, cer- Some Jews believed the time was right for to enter France. They were counting on without the energy and firmness of this people, who, after shedding his blood to conquer his freedom, did not seem willing to relinquish it. They understood that the French would not let themselves

In light of France's almost unparalleled success Being Jewish, the Rothschilds understood that their reign affected at its end. They saw that Mr. Drumont had only done to make public the secret thought that preoccupied everyone the French.

After Jewish Algeria, we will reveal in a second book, the new exploits of these kings of finance. We will unmask them and deliver them as they are. to advertising.

YOU

D nn re

not easily fooled and they were forced to to give up, for a while at least, conduct their business in the richest nation of Europe.

Only a small core of remained in France this cursed race, and this core remained at almost stationary until recent years born of the reign of Napoleon III. At this time- that, we already had some rich Jewish capitalists, but as they seemed not not to meddle too much in our affairs, we are concerned- They knew very little about their origin. In each national loan, they had bought the most

a large portion of the bonds and were Consequently, the state's creditors, but we do not did not distinguish them from other landlords of funds. The moment to show up is not Having just arrived, they were mainly trying to keep incognito (1).

(4) If the Jews seemed to remain foreign to our politically, they nonetheless had free rein.
ches, thanks to the complicity of the government, for exploit our nationals. In Jewish France, Mr. Drumont tells how the Rothschilds went to the

BEN En Rene ten eq os

The Jews did not expect to come to power under a monarchical government; they sawere indeed convinced that no monarch would abdicatewould have his rights in their favor. They saw with pleasure that the Empire was losing every day from the ground, while the democratic party took on a large extent. If they did not lay-They had to act, they had to prepare; also were they already seeking to ally themselves with the party leaders Republicans! They understood that it was under a Republic only that they could to prepare their future dynasty.

When it was proclaimed on September 4, 1870,
the French Third Republic, the Jews had prepared their advent so well that some had themselves appointed members of the provisional government. The opportunity was all the more favorable for them as France in mourning still didn't know the names of someone of the men who had taken charge of the reins of the state; she saw only citizens, Ministries are being informed of secret dispatches.

at least twenty-four hours before the public Wise.

who, after the emperor's betrayal at Sedan, had seized power to remove our proud nation of the terrible impasse where it had pier.

The Jews had therefore taken a first step decisive and they were determined not to lose of the field. To increase their power, they summoned all their coreligions to their side.
naires who were languishing in Europe and they obtained-in addition, naturalization for Jews

- natives of Algeria.

Immediately after the war against Germany, thousands of Jews came to settle in Paris and in all major cities in France.
We knew very little about them yet, because all those who already lived among us had ca-
They chose their game so as not to alienate the people.
This invasion somehow passed away as if unnoticed. It shouldn't be longtime thus, for they had not spread out on the entire territory so that we can act immediately and by mutual agreement.

We could have arrested the Jew from the beginning.
if we had known his goal, woe-fortunately we were fooled by his hypocrisis.

It was soon realized that agriculture was desperate, that trade was in decline so much, but the cause of the evil was only sought once when misery, which was initially attributed to disasters of 1870-1871, had become worried-aunt, and that credit was dead. We understood.
while the Jew was the sole holder of the argent and that the ruin of France was his
It was done, but it was too late to react.
The Jew was already in power and we were gu-Vernés, if not by him, at least by scs men. He had good reason to fear a revolt, but he knew that the people were too insufficient-scientifically focused on the methods of the Jews for act immediately. To avoid a reversal-He was a mind-controller, attracting to himself those he had the most to fear.

The native Jews of Algeria should not not to remain inactive; they had received orders to fight against the Arabs and to arrive to their annihilation. They had to continually-element stimulate us against them for us comes “ z= ee Se El

-C meo ae

en — Les a_r Dm te _ — =

-a -Ml - _ -— — - mm e D eoa aa _ prevent their services from being rewarded. As long as we treat the Arabs, otherwise as enemies, or at least as slaves, the Jews will have nothing to fear from them; if, on the contrary, in recognition of what they have done for the In France, we treat them as friends and their donation not the quality of French citizens, they us will initiate the maneuver of the Jews and us will force us to drive them out of our territory. The Jews of France did not have a full and complete confidence in the address of their co-religious leaders of Algeria; they knew them to be anim-of the best will, but they fear-were making some missteps in their part; also they send them as instructions some German Jews! For the Jews, it was not enough to plunder our nationals and to steal from the Arabs, it was necessary first and foremost, keep them at a distance. For this to happen, the native Jews had to have as allies, against their former masters, all French civil servants. As soon as the 1871 uprising was suppressed, the Jews acquired a security that was supposed to help prepare their strength. But if they hadn't They have nothing to fear from the brutality of the Arabs, they were forced to place themselves between them and us, to avoid a harmful rapprochement. It is for this purpose that European Jews are came to join those from Algeria.

Let's return to France and our terrible despots. and let's see how they hope to keep us under their power.

The Jews fear the people, because they know that, in order to claim his rights, he is ready to use force. At some point, the slightest incentive would be enough to bring about a a riot that would inevitably be directed against these exploiters, now recognized as the authors of our ills. To park at this event- In reality, the Jews try to attract the people to them (1).

The Rothschild family is responsible for doing alms to the unfortunate. This generosity

* (4) It is for this sole purpose that the Rothschilds do a few alms, they give such great publicity to their feigned generosity. The Frenchman will not be fooled. Having been attracted for a long time by this deceptive app,

pr

GET

me es ee me pen]

UD mo m nanam mn à te aa

[r RUE RE]
ne os ol

EE mer Gi
aan ©

SEE = 2.

Lu PSS ee EN

-oem M
DS us me er Tr +

P

-x

pppn a anat anaa <

may seem extraordinary to our readers, after what we have said about the Jews, but we will show that it is far too artificial,
and that it is not done for a disinterested purpose strained.
Every Jew bases all the actions of his life on the benefit he stands to gain from it. However, when Rothschild promises to help those who are in
The need is that he fears seeing one day a
A crowd of hungry people told him: You've hoarded everything Money, you ruined those who occupied us.
It is because of you that we are without travail and we will take our revenge. He fears sur-all of them, exciting one another, all these
The unfortunate do not revolt against him and the his own. $ Besides these alms, we see him displaying his generosity in donating varying sums between ten or twenty thousand francs, when a ca-
The catastrophe is happening in France. Every day-They speak of this gift and add a few comments in favor of the donee; but They forget to mention that it's easy to give from time to time a few thousand francs, to

|
|

the one who continually withdraws millions
from this fund that we call the Stock Exchange.

Although they lived in cities, the Jews have made their influence felt even in the countryside loincloths. They have damaged agriculture by demanding, to the detriment of the owner, laugmentation on a considerable scale property tax. Today, property is almost worthless; it is a heavy burden for those who cannot cultivate it, also pl-Are the owners obliged to leave part of their uncultivated land!

This is where our trust in this man we didn't know!

After falling asleep, we will finally wake up to put an end to this reign which has gone on for far too long.

CHAPTER XVI

The Arab loves France!

After having revealed the customs of Arabs, we believe it useful to clearly state-their conduct since the conquest of Algeria. We've already said what it was for them the Jew, before we placed them under our domination. It was a thing of nothing value, and if they hadn't exterminated it, it's that they believed him incapable of ever becoming harmful. They knew him to be such a coward that they could not have imagined that a people could ever to allow herself to be exploited by him.

Before our first expedition, the Arabs

Mie.. E — ĖS ntm
"ea ooo

lived peacefully at home, in the far-niente, not believing that anyone was trying to get involved to adorn the territory where they had settled. Good ~ that proud and courageous, they had no notion of the military profession. They were ready in under any circumstances, willing to sell their lives dearly, but being undisciplined and possessing no war machine, they were incapable of dis- to fight against such formidable warriors than the French.

The Arabs only submitted with great difficulty. under our yoke, they fought to the last. last extremity and bowed only before our strength. They tried several times to re- to conquer their independence, but they understood- they realized that their efforts would always remain infruitful. They then submitted and manifested- They extinguished the desire to serve France.

We could not initially add He had faith in the Arabs' promises, but he was from our duty to put them to the test and to to see if we should rely on their cooperation. Our nationals who were going to settle in Algeria they were called upon to live in the midst of these indigenes; therefore it was better to have them as friends, rather than treating them like slaves!

The size of our army does not allow us to
It was not necessary to leave in our new colony the troops needed to maintain the tran-quality. We therefore needed to look for new-new recruits, and we couldn't find any in France than by completely reforming our military organization. Our natives of Algeria, by addressing themselves to both Jews than Arabs. While the former the latter were distinguished by their silence, at the con-milking, they presented themselves in such great numbers that we had to refuse part of it and naa than those that could be equipped.

Regiments were formed for the Arabs special cavalry (spahis), infantry (timockers}. Apart from the men called upon to do non-commissioned officers (the cadre), these regiments were composed exclusively of Arabs.
~ When the bravery of these was called upon new soldiers, they were also willing to they left as they had been to enlist. They took part in all the campaigns of France under the reign of Napoleon III, and always did valiantly fulfilling their duty.

During the campaign against Germany,
In addition to the men already enrolled, they asked...
They were met with a few volunteer natives. He was among them.
presented more than could be taken in by This is a consequence of our poor organization.

men, to whom we had been cruel despots were happy to go and fight for France, and all those who saw them at work were able to appreciate their courage.

As we said in the course of this work, a senatus consultum of 1865 later a decree of 1870 promised the nacustomization to the Arabs who would make it the de-order. By making them this promise, we ignored their attachment to France and could not predict whether they would prove themselves worthy of this favor. When we saw them cut at the work, the men who were at the head of the

The government was legally and morally-committed to granting the quality of citizens French to these natives who had just paid their blood for us.

|

—
=.

BE r ee pe À

A nn a

-m nen —

a PER RARE

The French would have gladly rewarded the fine conduct of the Arabs, but they had already alienated part of their freedom in favor Jews. These were to use all their influence to prevent us from proving Our gratitude to our brave native people.

The Arabs considered our conduct as an infamous treason, and they revolted they silenced one last time to win back their independence. This insurrection could have have unfortunate consequences, if our timockers and our spahis had turned against us, and if some Arab leaders hadn't sought to reassure people. They had thiswhile there is reason to revolt, since, despite our promises, we refused to accept these powerful auxiliaries.

With a character as noble as ours, we cannot understand our behavior, and if the events we are recounting were not yet present in memory, one would be authorized to to question our good faith. To obey to the Jews who, since the conquest, had not iaft that we exploit, we refuse the naturealization to these men, so willing to us serve.

pe

RS

The Arab leaders certainly understood that our ingratitude was the fault of the Jews, and they opposed the revolt of their subjects, nurtured by the hope that one day we

we would recognize our mistake and drive out France, these vile exploiters. They could not to admit, in effect, that such a courageous people that the Frenchman could be fooled for a long time by Such cowardly people. They regretted it all the more.
more than our misunderstanding, they knew us too well good for punishing one day as she deserves it-silence this cursed race.

Despite our conduct, the Arabs saw that they were victims of a plot, which,

although directed against them, it would be prejudicial able to France. They wanted to reconquer their independence to take revenge freely Jews; having failed to reconquer it,
They have rallied to our side more than ever, con-vanquished whom we would soon be able to distinguish our true friends.

- The Arabs therefore enlisted again-

pet mn © Fe
` :

TA BAT wmm IMr

calves in our Algerian regiments and have thus increasing the number of these elite troops whose value we have so often appreciated.
In every expedition, they always have to-ordered to leave first.
- During the Tunisian campaign, we sa-what use they have been to France
And how much they contributed to our successes!

In the most recent Tonkin expedition, our readers remember how much their arrival has changed everything! The official newspapers-skies of that era claimed that a poi-
A large number of men would be enough to conquer and pacify Proud of this distant country. Unfortunately the news was becoming less and less reliable.
sure, and our deputies understood a little late that they had unconsciously granted their trust in a ministry that does not deserve it-
He wasn't quiet.
It was too late to back down, and unless to renounce their initial votes, our representatives many had to grant new loans, which allowed the Ministers of War and of

'navy to send a few thousand soldiers.
i8

2 + ll view

| oo Rs. > head Ru Penn try

They addressed themselves again to the Arabs and they de-
He called for volunteers. 30,000 came forward.
of which 3,000 were taken and were em-ships bound for Tonkin.

The riflemen had our French soldiers
I knew a considerable advantage; they would not fear-
They did not mind the heat, they easily tolerated it.
the heaviest fatigues and they were accustomed to deprivation.

Thanks to these advantages, their courage and their attachment to France, they were of powerful auxiliaries and contributed to a a large part, if not in the success, at least in hastening it the long-desired result.

We will not stray from our topic for to recount the history of this campaign against which we have always striven for;
we only wanted to say a few words about the role played by our native Algerians.

Many of them stumbled upon this distant land, but those who returned
They had the satisfaction of a duty fulfilled.

Some military medals were the
the only reward granted to our brave vo-

I am

"ra F ma ro >

HAS

The of,
TS ess

"LT ere =

aa
nn em a an Taai -t hi

er is n RSS Te mm —
is

lentaires. This indifference on our part has However, their enthusiasm was not dampened and they re-will always answer our call when we
We will need them.

If a war were to break out, agd hui cn Germany, we should count on the Arabs, despite our powerful reflective time of war. By being ready to equip those who would present themselves, we would form a body there a formidable army that would want to know Berlin road.

The Germans understood so well what usefulness could be for us Arabs in a war against Germany, that they seek to realize their intentions tions, by spying on every corner of our colony,

This German espionage, and us
We could say Jews, don't frighten us, because it can only incite against them those who are already very willing to serve us.

On our personal account, we are happy to see this attachment continue Arabs for France and we hope that the promised reward will no longer be given

We don't fear waiting a long time.
Tell them that by fighting for us, they are fighting also for them, for they will soon be granted this quality of French citizens which will make them our equals.

Let the Arabs know well that if he is some French people who, unconsciously, have They have been unfair to them, there are others those who know them and love them, and those-there they will know how to make them loved by those who, until-that to this day, they have been misled!

Zion has remained silent for too long on The conduct of our native Algerians, there is no will no longer be like this. We will speak and our voice will be all the more powerful because we are ready to provide proof of everything the facts we have put forward.

The French people would have long since shed light on the Jews, if they themselves had not shut the mouths of those among us who were willing to talk: for some, it would have been the ruin, for others the loss of a position which It was their livelihood. This must no longer be the case;

If we allowed ourselves to be cornered, we we are still strong enough to get back up and walk forward.

It is now necessary for each of us to re-Let those who appear-still cling to the Jews willingly sacrifice their personal interests versus the general interest Ral! Let them know that all French must be in solidarity with each other (1)

We no longer need to attach the slightest importance to the fallacious promises of Jews; all their actions prove to us that they are our cruelest enemies. If they could To achieve their goal, they would not have hesitated to

(i) Among the French who appear to support the Jews, most of them, who know them all the better because they have

Having lived near them, they will rally to our side when the word An order will be given.

As soon as the anti-Israelite committee is formed, the fight will be short-lived, because our demands, These are quite legitimate, moreover, and are the same for all the French.

Let the Rothschilds tell their employees that they don't They are not afraid of being dethroned, we do not hesitate to to assert that they do not use the same reasoning between them! . AA .

|

Pom cc EE to

9. Jewish Algeria

mm = ~ > pidr Ver = -— ~ e ——— —

ee m

to hunt down or to treat as slaves those they called their friends and those who would have served as a stepping stone. Their dream is a happy one. impossible, because they will never the energy needed to inspire fear and obey, and they will inevitably return to their point starting point.

The Jews told us to beware of Arabs, adding that we would always betrayed by them. Some French people even were naive enough to believe these lies- To respond to this cowardly slander, we will simply say that this is a proceded a Jew, the purpose of which we have explained.

It was not the Arabs who were traitors.
towards us, but we who were to their They understand, it is true, that we we were in the circumstance only lins-
We are not tools of the Jews.
less guilty.

They could have, if they hadn't loved France, leaving military service to remain in their villages. We wouldn't have had the right to them to enlist, because service is not compulsory than for the French, excepting however the majority of the Jews. They would have by that means dealt a serious blow to our power military and we could have done nothing against them.

There was no question of driving them out of Al-.
As for the geria, we weren't allowed to. Regarding to make special laws against them, we do not we could do more unjust things than those existing today and more servile than the native class.

The Arabs therefore had nothing to fear by refusing to serve France, since our Despotism had reached its ultimate limits.
If they shed their blood for us, they have always acted freely.

The Jews might say that the Arabs
they only enlist out of love for the military profession silence. We will reply that before the conquest, the Turkish government had no ar-disciplined order, because the Arab did not want not being a soldier, we will add that being at-today, essentially sedentary, he... is It's very difficult to go and fight on foreign soil.
manages.

We are therefore authorized to conclude that it is out of pure attachment to France that the Arab agrees to commit. He is-father that one day we will take back our lie-freedom and that then we will reward his services.

Since all these attacks against the Arabs are descended exclusively from Jews.
we feel we should say a few words about the
the role of each party in the case of a war with Germany.

If this war were to break out, it would have been pre-prepared by the Jews. We know in fact that these exploiters do not in fact belong to au-
They are parasitic insects.
who gradually suck their victims dry, if, at the First bite, they don't get rid of it two.

The Jews plotted the ruin of France
And if we let them, they will deliver her one day to Germany. It's a market con-
They clique between themselves and Bismarck, and they already know this.
What will their betrayal bring them?

Although the Jews of France all have their men in power, however, need to rely on their coreligionists in Algiers laughter. It is to achieve this result that the German Jews, sent to our colony, were tasked with facilitating the task of the es-Bismarck's pawns, or to be themselves these spies.

* While most French people
The metropolitan area has absolutely no idea about

Algeria and ignore what they are and what they have Made for France by our valiant natives,

The Jews, on the other hand, who held power, have the most information about them precise; all facts of some importance
They are notified of these, and they communicate them.
immediately to the German Prime Minister by through the intermediary of the Jew Bleichræder.
The Jews, already frightened by our power military, fear a Franco-Russian alliance;
They also have to fear the bravery of the Arabs, and this bravery is sharpened by a thirst for A perfectly natural revenge.

These sons of Israel understand the difficulty that they will have to deliver this mar-

what they call France, if they don't They can alienate Russia from us. They are working today, this goal is knowing, however, that Russia is our natural ally, that our Interests are the same, well, that she hates the Jews and that she expel them; — but they do not never despair, cradled by the hope of survival overcome all obstacles thanks to their hypocrisis.

On the other hand, to prevent the Arabs from marching with France in a war against Germany, we would have to put ourselves in the im-the possibility of equipping them. It's still the goal of the Jews.

Let them know, then, these cowardly despots, that, if they could do no other, the Arabs would leave with their burnouses, that they would take up the provisional arms again dis-available, which they would then seize on the battlefields of those of their brothers of weapons that fell beside them!

But in the event of war, they would not be there not in this situation, because alongside the Government Jews, we shall see, at the time of the danger, several deputies who, although in-carried along by the current, will have enough patriotism ism to ask their colleagues to vote on the funding essential to the team-the ways of our natives. We will shed light on the enough of the people remain for them to demand now from its representatives the commitment formally no longer being the employees of the Jews.

As for Algeria, we will take it.

_ try to make it known and if the members of parliament of this colony are only the agents Jews, for our part we will hand over to the pu-to justify the legitimate grievances of our colonists and the Arabs, and we do not despair of

to meet shortly in the Chamber, not one, but several French people, concerned about the interests of the people of their country will report the evil and indi-will provide the necessary remedy for the development the legacy of our colonization. They will argue this cause with all the more fervor as they com-they will take only this new and still uncultivated soil can generate considerable income and make the wealth of France.

-= For our nationals as well as for the Ara-bes, the enemy is the Jew, and consequently the cause

What one person's property becomes what another's. They are at-Today, victims are resigned because they They can do nothing against their tormentors. We we will help them prepare their revenge because Our freedom depends on her alone.

The Jews watched with sorrow as the al-universal anti-Israelite alliance. They cannot-wind only acts in the shadows, and this alliance is done with the aim of unmasking them. They com-They realize that their downfall is approaching if they delay-tooth to sacrifice France (1).

The sounds of war were not only a stock market coup, they were also the com-commencement of the implementation of the pact concluded with Germany.

We are no longer fooled by these lies.
invented at will by the Jews, and we to them

(4) Our readers have not forgotten the sounds of war which, for more than two months, preoccupied public opinion.
They also remember the terrible stock market crash.
In one week, the Bank of France has decreased by 3% million. Our pensions were those that were declining the most in Europe.

All these alarming noises were a consequence of the pact agreed between the Jews and Bismarck.

let us say to our face that in a war against Germany, we will see a war being prepared by the Jews, but that we will do it against
them. | |

And it is from this war that we want to distance ourselves.
The Arabs! They would be stopped, they who are so brave, to march against these allied enemies! For to indulge in such hope, one would have to suppose-_ to ensure that the Arab has lost all dignity of himselfeven and that he lived in the most complete ignorance rancid of what is happening around him.

The Arab knows his enemy and he is watching him.
He knows better than we do how to discern the intentions-the Jew's teachings and without us he would never have been fooled by his hypocrisy.
The day the Jews attempt to hand over the "France to Germany, the Arabs will rise up"
en masse and will fight in our ranks.
The consequence of this war will be annihilation
the destruction of the Jews by the Arabs.

CHAPTER XVII

TRADE FOR THE JEWS

The Jews are neither industrialists nor merchants neither farmers nor workers, they are speculators and usurers.

That their employees and servants, that whatever-
Even naive people claim that the Jews
They are richer because they are more intelligent.
that we, they will never find the slightest:
credit with sensible people |

To the newspapers that will try to persuade their readers that the Jews are skillful com-merchants who have managed to lower the price of goods, we will reply that far from being

The shopkeepers, they're the ones who killed the trade in France.

The Crémieux and Co. who sell. complets at 35 francs find a way to earn 15 francs per suit. The cheapness of which-German goods sold in bazaars Jews in Paris sometimes strike the shopkeepers those who quickly realize that these objects are far inferior to those manufactured in France. These merchants do indeed all their purchases in Germany and throw into the deeper misery, the majority of our workers.

The Jews want to win 100 percent, and when they cannot achieve it, they im-Punishment, bankruptcy after bankruptcy, and they succeed thus amassing considerable fortunes. If this process is accepted by some people-sounds for skill or intelligence,

For our part, we do not hesitate to qua-flight limiter.

We will point out some things again methods employed by the Jews, and we will see-Rons if they conduct honest business like me in

This was practiced in the past, before their invasion.

Did the Rothschilds were trading honestly on the Stock Exchange, when, thanks to the complicity of the government, they pre-were aware of the most serious dispatches crests, the consequence of which was to bring an increase or decrease from which they benefited always ?

Did they act more honestly when... at the time of the first conversion, they were warned by order of the Minister of Finance and were therefore able to carry out their raid before the public was made aware of this important New aunt?
- How would you describe the conduct of the Rothschild when they stripped the Belgian miners ges of the coal mining territory called Borinage which they exploited for their own personal account (2)?

---

(1) Moreau, the representative of the stockbrokers, was dispatched by the Minister of Finance, Léon Say, at Rothschild's to tell him the news.

(2) See in this regard the interesting note by Mr. Dru-Mount, in Jewish France before public opinion, page 147
and 148.

ms

ar PE 9 TT she ig '
A s ne me le nel ee mue mie Sun

peg M Re: a ae TON ~ DESE gs kd

t ` Tipae ae + mn

ckan AI v* | C++. m

b PY yp

ent AG tint a S ent thé E T.

J.

What shall we say of the Jew Erlanger who, in founding forty companies, none of which succeeded, found the way, in less than twenty years, to deduct from savings the tidy sum of 529
millions? | |

We leave it to our readers to decide.
care to answer these various questions.
In Jewish France, Mr. Ed. Drumont tells us too well initiated into the mysterious processes of Rothschilds, Erlangers, Ephrussis, and Cornelius Herz, etc., so that we may judge
It would be useful to return to this point. Besides, it would lead us astray.
ter of our title.

Upon rereading this important work, such veracity that none of the facts put forward could not be doubted, one can be convinced-believe that we are entitled to ask the departure of this cursed race and the restitution of our possessions.

Small-time loan sharks cannot also easily hide their true intentions, these rich boursiers. This is only reduced to the last extreme-

It's frustrating that we're finally deciding to contact them, because

We know in advance that we will be exploited.

nt un — me le = ne a octo Re. amer om RÉ Y

Is it the Jew who delivers on credit that... double its value, to a client offering all-your solvency guarantees, a commodity resold at a low price to an accomplice, exercises a Smart commerce?

Are we not allowed to attack?
the integrity of the one who lends on pledge for fifteen days or a month at the exorbitant rate of 150 or 200 percent?

What shall we say about the Jewish junk dealer who buys for 1 franc an item worth 15 to 20 francs, while he knows that his unfortunate seller has need this small amount to buy Bread? D

It is perfectly natural that everyone should live off their own.
work and the merchant, which is a job-their, must consequently withdraw a certain profit from the things sold. But there's a long way to go.
from this profit to the theft committed daily.
by the Jew!

We will be told that the Jew will not look for the customer and we will be asked why this one-Is this addressed to him? If the Jew doesn't go cheaply-dear to the customer, he attracts them through prospects-

= RE AND 0
ht Young AUS es

E to D] T LE T oid ct Dem out V4 not à don Gé el à

has

e nt E
danmi:

ae aa” um dt — aa

ER 1 pm ee- — ee,- ie

~ OE n EE

TISUI y eaea

SSL Do. at

_

EE,

#7 m pa Ge rer =
=>

-t4 1, de em mr ammhe

=
+ 'u

KETT. r STREET,

"ar
—# =
-E

d'à -drà
EN a

jy t;
neither fadia

-= my

you.

JEWISH ALGERIA. 979

tus and announcements, and especially with the help of short-third parties, more or less corrupt, who penetrate through-everything and always know how to find the good ones matters, to use their expression. Furthermore, the unfortunate man is inevitably forced to address himself to serve the usurer, because, despite his probity and with his small assets, he can no longer find credit that he once had.

All banks are now between the hands of the Jews, and they no longer
The discount is only available under certain conditions.
The best-positioned French merchants do not find-wind to negotiate their values as much as they have money deposited in the bank. It's a loss for them, because this money does not bring them almost nothing and is often lacking in them;
The more they have to fear the banker's flight...
and the cash register.

Since the Jews have held our capital, industrialists, owners and traders
The merchants no longer have any credit whatsoever. They find themselves-wind consequently forced them to take out a loan Usurious with guarantees. It's the ruin of the trade, because it would be necessary to make profits ee Li in Ds mms. to

PR.

- these Jews to pay such a high rate.
+ There seems to be a lot of concern today-
-today's innovation of a bankruptcy law;
-or, before doing anything, it would be good to establish
-a distinction between the French and the Jews.

While they are declaring themselves bankrupt to enrich themselves at the expense of their creditors

= or eE Aaaa LÉ

bare

cers, the first ones, on the contrary, are always ruined by the Jews and therefore cannot to meet their deadlines. The Jews com-they carry out robberies and are always ~ fraudulent bankrupts; the [French do not are generally just unfortunate victims, who are unable to pay because they were robbed by the Jews. He
It would therefore be just to severely punish the -first, to remove for the second consequences of bankruptcy.

Owners possessing 150 or 200,000 francs worth of buildings will not find
In Paris, only one banker was willing to negotiate with them.
worth 500 francs. To obtain the sum
If necessary, they are forced to consent to a “mortgage on everything they own. Or-” kad

ri REA OR a T ooa T a to « + to the usurious rate levied in advance by the ca-Jewish psychiatrist, borrower is driven to fees sometimes exceeding the amount claimed pruned. In certain circumstances, its:

The lender is content with a simple note, but then he takes a discount of 50 or 60 for 100.

We took the case of a landlord rich, needing a small sum in attending either to the payment of his income, or the sale of his crops; it is therefore a loan of a few months. Due to the conditions that he was forced to accept, it happens frequently soon as the deadline, being able to to repay the loaned sum, he does not have the funds.

necessary to pay double that amount.
The borrower must then either give the money available and renewed for the rest that he does not have -not touched, either to renew everything. The -lender, who has precise information about the solvency of its debtor, will not consent to renewal only under very onerous conditions reuses, but always accepted by the borrower-
Their aim was to avoid legal action.
16.

The owner in question fell into a vicious cycle from which he will only escape with difficulty-ment. If he does not take the precaution, from the spring-
.cipe, to sell some land to pay
What he actually owes is that he will see his debt.
increase in a frightening way, and at After a few years, he will find himself com-completely ruined, whereas often he will have reimbursed a sum greater than that paid advanced progress. B

As for the farmer who falls between the
In the hands of the Jews, it will be ruin in short order, because They are making him subject to even more onerous conditions-more complex than for the previous one, and the seizure im-
The furniture industry is closely monitoring this first loan.

This is the type of business practiced by The Jews. They are moneylenders, who only deliver base metal coins with the cer-their ability to extract gold coins. Their comp-complicity is their strength, and some must favor-to mock the fraud of others.
“If the Jewish bankers hadn’t killed or bought the French banks, if they hadn't not taken away credit from merchants and

-ra

z
AE
Sr Nu

r “+
+

+ -
>q amy a

E

M pme 4t

sn a + ur em
EXT Re es LE utu ip

“
r

= + bn ` - usb
+

v.

Ma a aA ra te sm E

OE CREATE ENS Me vana ann e ag gt nmg amay no 1

—aa

.
-me

owners, they would not be obliged to address these licensed thieves in the conditions that we have just indicated.

In all the games we play with The Jews, we have lost from the start, because they have the kings hidden up their sleeves, and at each gives, they withdraw those who owe their as-to secure the point and sometimes the flight.

We hope that when we are con-defeated by their cheating, and the proof will be Easy, we'll chase them out of this huge room of the game that we call France, or even the Eu-whole rope, and that before their expulsion we will force the return of the stolen money.

Are Jews more intelligent when they plunder our natives of Algéric? Thanks to complicity, if not unconscious-

-ciente, at least forced by our magistrates, ne

Don't they commit these acts every day, to the detriment of others?
unfortunate Arabs, guaranteed flights from Impunity? If we have retained their lands to those who owned them regularly-before the conquest, is it therefore so that The Jews seize it? However, it is up to we believe it is our responsibility to safeguard their pro-privacy. If we have the right to crack down on the Arabs when they break our laws, we we also have a duty to protect them against their plunderers.

In all of the banker's stock market deals Jewish, as well as in all the deals concluded through the other Jews, we discover a theft diverted, against which we would call the attension of justice, if we still had any upright and independent magistrates.

- To those of our readers who persevere in sub-to maintain that the wealth of the Jews is due to their inintelligence, we ask them what they think-smells of vile scoundrels who murder a An old man to seize his money? We We will then tell them that these are also intelligent if, thanks to the number of their victims Sometimes, they manage to get rich. We will establish
The only difference is that the first They rob before murdering, pushing them to 'suicide, while the latter murder
'before flying.'
Mr. Ed. Drumont made known the pro-

LE un nn Den AD ses petit ee ne nm À EEE) nn ee aff Greene: Er CA AD EL NE PA RE RSR RER RE

PS

- ceded employees by the Jews, indicating the names and specifying the facts, and to all the Harsh truths contained within Jewish France, We haven't given the slightest denial. We have responded with a few insults which are good 'little of anything in the presence of facts as well.

precise (4), 7
When Mr. Jac-'s The Jewish Question appeared The Jews of Biez understood that they per-

(1) After the immense success of Jewish France, the The fans were frightened by the publication of France Jewish public opinion. They then decided to force a of their own to pursue criminal charges against Mr. Ed. Drumont, the author of these two important works": works.

Despite the cruel revelations made by Mr. Drumont on the Rothschilds, Cornelius Herz, Ephrussi, Erlanger, etc., Marcel Deprez was appointed to- to follow the author of Jewish France before public opinion, who 'accused him of appropriating the discoveries of others.

Mr. Edouard Drumont, convicted in absentia by judge- The ninth chamber imposed a fine of 1,000 francs. and 5,000 francs in damages to Mr. Marcel

"Deprez has just filed an objection.

Mr. Drumont was only waiting for the meaning of this judgment to be served on Mr. Marcel Deprez and to the public prosecutor the articulation of the evidence that he desires to produce about. Asjorhions which he o reproaches.

—— - = —
ESO

They were on the ground. However, they went-closed in absolute silence, in the fear of attracting public attention through Evasive answers.

Their silence will not prevent their downfall.
because today there are vigilant guardians who monitor all their actions and who sign-will reveal their frauds, for which we were wrong until... today to call for business.

According to Article 35 of the Law of 29 July 1881, on the press, evidence is admissible when it comes to fundamental issues directors, managers or administrators of companies industrial, financial or commercial, but the deadline to articulate the evidence that one wants to provide is not than five days. This period being clearly insufficient-ingant to write an entire volume of scientific testimonies In terms of technical aspects, Mr. Drumont had to be absent, in order to... then an objection to the judgment.

It would be difficult for the public to understand why the liners Jews seek to exert pressure on the justice system.
to prevent Mr. Drumont from proving that he claims it can do it. Israel only has to gain from that the debate is complete and the report is to be accurate be allowed. If Mr. Drumont is not supported by

With sufficient authorities, it will be a great moral triumph for the Jews, who will have the right to argue that the au-the writer of Jewish France failed in his duty as a writer
It is futile to surround oneself with the most documents some before putting forward a fact.

CHAPTER XVIII

WITHOUT THE JEWS

'Since the arrival of the Jews, we have observed.
France is becoming impoverished on all sides;
Instead of the ease of the past, we no longer-

We are fighting against misery everywhere. 7

It is in the general interest that men truly patriotic people came to revive our courage, by showing us that this unease which we all felt the effects stemming from the exploitation of Jews.

The only remedy is to drive them out; for, what that we do, as long as they remain at

In our midst, we will always be theirs dupes. We find ourselves in the case of the owner of a pond that an otter is destroying all the fish; before restocking it, it must start by killing the otter.

If we had been masters in our own house, and if we hadn't let ourselves be kidnapped and our savings and the fruits of our labor, we se-would have long since recovered from our misfortunes-very of 1870-1871, and the public debt, instead to go on increasing, would have decreased in the notable proportions. Unfortunately limpitoyable parasite that we had tolerated at we, gradually engulfed everything this fortune which would have revived France and given well-being to a large number of French.

The destruction of our vineyards has certainly-has seriously damaged agriculture, but the blow was not fatal, and with the con- .

during a government concerned with the interests loans from his country, we could easily to prepare for this eventuality.

Agriculture, however, is of real importance.

lift, because it is what tends to increase the.

wealth of a nation. When it begins trade and industry are declining.
They feel it immediately, and the discomfort soon follows.
to become a general.

The products of the cities sold in donkeys in the countryside, cannot have a cou-easy element, as much as the farmers are, thanks to their income, able to a-buy. While the owner or settler who made profits, both from the breeding of livestock that, on the sale of crops, are bought, Besides the essentials, what can increase,

his well-being; he, on the contrary, who withdraws
He is forced to deprive himself of everything he has gained from his hard work.
We only do the bare minimum. We don't do repairs.
that when you have a little money available, and where to get this money today that the rural inhabitants are reduced to the misery ?

A remedy for this had to be found.
agricultural crisis that we have been experiencing for several years several years, to improve the situation of each one, both farmers and workers cities. The French manufacturer will not tra-to work indeed that if he has the sale of his pro-products, and, to ensure this sale, it is necessary to put-to be able to buy those that need to be its main buyers.

When we are ruled by the Jews,

we have no hope for any improvement in the current state of affairs. Their goal being to to ruin France, they will prevent us from doing so days to protect agriculture. They don't have There is nothing left to fear from this peaceful population.
possible in the countryside, and consequently they do not daj-
They don't care about her. They pretend to be con-to show interest in the fate of the workers of cities because they need them and they don't would not want to alienate them, but they know that they will not achieve any results, by this
. soul that they cannot provide them with tra-valid for the manufacture of objects of which we do not have Not the sale. It's very nice to ask for the reduction of working hours and the increase-salary adjustments for back employees large coal companies and others, but We must also consider those thousands of workers.

which are currently unoccupied for the reasons

Te +,

— a EEE Fake
+

D eee this nt same ane ae t RSS ee,
-— . L' 4 w ha T
2.

vae

sr - +
z `

- has
*

that we have just indicated. To give them work and to promote manufacturing, it is necessary
First, consider consumption.

The vine has long been the ri-the hunt of our countryside, and its disappearance has This was a significant loss for France. We have attributed the disease of our vineyards to the phylloxera, and for the last ten years we have limited ourselves to research ways to kill this insect destructive by even promising a bonus of 100,000 francs. They refused to understand. that our exhausted lands needed to repos and fertilizer; we also forgot that we planes in Algeria, new lands that could- were going to compensate for this temporary loss. Our farmers in France had to renounce to tend the vines and to take special care of the vines to worm and fatten livestock. For this, he artificial meadows had to be created; the land would have drawn on a restorative rest and this cul- The technique would have given satisfactory results. In Algeria, on the contrary, they would have created vineyards that would have temporarily replaced placed those of France. Our wine harvests are-would have quickly become just as abundant than in the past, and we would only have had to regrumble for a while our excellent wines from Bordeaux, Burgundy and Cham- loincloth (1). The rural workers who, due to a lack of work, they came to

to take refuge in the cities and increase the name-

Many of the unfortunate people would have gone to Algeria. where they would have found comfort.

To achieve this result, support was needed. of the government, and since he has been between the hands of the Jews, we have noted with sorrow that he had done everything to ruin agriculture.

First in France, we increased in significant proportions the burdens of agriculture teur, and consequently he was placed in the impossible-the ability to give the soil the indispensable fertilizer sand. The owner himself, who had not He was not forced to have sufficient capital in front of him. to sell at a very low price to avoid ruin Certain. Having no money, he could not borrowing only under certain conditions very expensive to cultivate one's land, without knowing if his income would be enough to pay the workforce. As for the farmers, they had been forced to sell their livestock and were therefore unable to cultivate their plots of land successfully lands.

(1) We have observed, however, that there already exists In Algeria, some wines are getting better every day. a well-deserved importance.

This inevitably resulted in a sale at a loss. price of part of our land to capitalists of Jews who have made them properties for pleasure. Today most of these Lands of return are now nothing more than appointments = you hunting, and those that are still cul-the investments yield only insignificant incomes fiants, due to the impossibility where the farmer to give them fertilizer sufficient. We are then forced to buy to our neighbors the crops that we had formerly in our country and, besides the ruin of countryside, it's the impoverishment of the France.

As for Algeria, we have already explained under what conditions were our settlers. Apart from the few capitalists who were able, without the Jewish purse, to make vineyards, we see them everywhere the same level of poverty as in France.

Instead of attracting all those unfortunate people there forced to leave their villages where they could not- were no longer able to live, they were put in the obligation to go and increase the misery of the cities. [ls However, they were not used to this life noisy, and despite their good intentions, they did not have the skills for this work which require some learning. They au- would, on the contrary, have been happy to resume in our colony their old habits and to contribute through their work to the development the process of colonization.

In large cities, most of these unfortunate, who came with the best intentions- tions, were driven to steal by hunger. Com- Many people come to sit here daily. on the benches of the correctional police or of the Assize Court, which are certainly... by right to blame society for the situation that is Done! Is this man really guilty?

who, despite his desire to work, finds himself penniless front, foot in the rich man's coffers The money needed to live? He only had suicide looms, and we cannot Therefore, accusing him of nothing but cowardice.

The Jews have reached such a point today. degree of power that our deputies of the cam- loincloths, which bear witness to these miseries,

-don't dare raise their voices. It is up to them, however-while this task falls to them.

We are therefore faced with a
The room was compromised so that none of our representatives do not speak on a Such an important topic! Is it really ad-
It is possible that, in such a civilized nation,
The Jews, after having ruined agriculture, pushed-sends to flight and suicide all the people who they only ask to work, without any-any Frenchman publicly takes their de-defense?

This is a servility that we do not comprehend.
Let's not take it and against which we have the our right to revolt.

We have in France all the necessary elements

-necessary to fight against poverty and us
'We don't use it because the Jews use it'
They oppose each other. We leave our lands uncultivated.
from Algeria, instead of giving work to so many Farmers are dying of hunger!
it is not for economic reasons that our -rulers act in this way because they do not
-they are not simple-minded enough not to see -that there are resources in our colony for long inexhaustible. When one sacrifices continuously hundreds of millions to insane projects or campaigns tosastreuses, one cannot honestly hesitate-

'ter to employ a few million in travassals that will bring comfort to thousands of workers, while allowing us to remove from our soil what we buy from the foreigner.

If he is not in the current Chamber a man independent enough to break the yoke Jews, we will work to enlighten those who suffer and we will ensure that the prochains elections take place between French and Jews or employees of Jews. We are shown-

-e -> : aea Maa nee E, EE _

we will be with the Rothschilds and their associates, whose for-Tune can do nothing with free men.
energetic and concerned with the interests of the France.

We had never fallen into such a state of enslavement. Various governments who have succeeded one another since 1830 have indeed wanted, for a fee, to provide Rothschild has the means to strip us of our resources.
allowing them to come to the ministries read the news reports before that they are not published, none at least has was weak enough to be overpowered by Those vile speculators. They made fortunes.
considerable, and it was with the stolen money that they attracted to themselves those men who proclaimed the Republic of 1870.

The current government is certainly more tyrannical than any monarchy. Our fathers who made the revolution of 1789 demand-the government of all French people by all the French, but they didn't want not to throw France into the hands of these des-descendants of Israel, who, under the title of republic-

- Christians, would seize all freedoms and us

The urban worker, whom the Jews seem to protect, will also understand that he is being duped by these exploiters. [They did not limit themselves to em-

Do not fish for the flow of jets manufactured in

HAS

France is ruined by the state of agriculture; they are delivering still in French commerce the German articlesmands. If they were interested in the fate of our ou-they wouldn't put them in the printers like that.

Opportunity to work.
Jews only ever make promises.
fallacious, whose sole purpose is to make people patient{er those they still need. The ou-
City workers are no longer of interest to the islands.
than the rural workers, but they have

(1) We will soon be holding anti- elections Jewish women. We will address ourselves indiscriminately to all the French voters and we will show them the necessity-city to ask their candidates for a formal commitment to fight against the despotism of the Jews.

Urban and rural workers who are all French (a Jew is never a worker) and qai represent the majority of voters, viendnout all of us, because they will see that this is about the next generation

France's situation.

"A to Z
` _

[d

Vy i *

dias SE SE t

` = -Bba

need the first ones and pretend to defend their interests.

We will no longer be complicit in their manew works and we will become masters again at home. Our lands will once again be lidedicated to culture and the Jews will no longer do so their recreational properties.

The French will soon tell them that they don't are more at home, that they have tolerated them too much

They were told it was time to leave, and that it was time to get out. He would have to...

dra then return to Palestine and renounce the realization of their impossible dreams.

It will then be understood that the true phylJoxera, that's the Jew; we'll see that this insect had not only attacked the vineyard,

but to everything that could contribute to the prosperity of our country.

France will become rich again and re-will very quickly take its place in the world that The Jew made him lose.

CITAPITRE XIX

IN TUNISIA

Before concluding this work on Algeria-laughter, we felt we should say a few words regarding Jews in Tunisia. We reserve the right to comment further.
However, to address this question later a special treaty where we will deal with the Jews spread throughout North Africa, re-
. agencies of Tunis and Tripoli, empire of the Magnificent rock, Egypt, etc.

In this fight that we are waging against the Jews, natural enemies of all peoples, we will only recount the specific facts of which we ourselves will have verified its authenticity.

To better unmask these descendants of Father Abraham, we will follow them if necessary.
In each country, we will stay at a sn

are
-+

EE Sea CAA PR Se ne 20 N TRS e an D
ern pye Airnean

-æ
nem. a an
`

D 4 ~
apaan mme a S

in their midst to study them; finally we sa-
We will criticize for years, if necessary, but when

We will return with our notes, we

we will publish the maneuvers of each of these individuals. We will thus succeed, thanks to our truth, to make it understood that the Jew is the a scourge of society.

We haven't yet covered the Jews of Tunisia, the in-depth study we are talking about, we have only limited ourselves to traversing-
We must therefore, today, in the very interest of the cause we are defending-donations, we are content to simply make our known assessment, based moreover on a few facts.

In Tunisia, as in Algeria, the Jews were placed under the rule of the Turks and the Arabs. Although living in a savage state vage, they faithfully observed the laws of the Talmud, and complied with the orders of the Kahal. Poor and illiterate, they were already dreaming -to their future power. They understood all-however they might not be able to quench their thirst money only after getting rid of an evil- to be just as despotic.

302 JEWISH ALGERIA

We have seen in the course of this ouvrage the methods used by the Jews to governing Algeria, thanks to naivety and confidence in our representatives; — their coreligious leaders in Tunisia hoped to act from the The same method was used to take revenge on the Turks. Unfortunately, while Algeria was French, Tunisia was only placed under the protectorate of France, and despite . the complicity of a Jewish government, they do not could obtain the same favors.

Unable to confer the status of citizen

French to the Jews of Tunisia, we have assimilated to Europeans. Before the arrival of Europeans in the north From Africa, the descendants of Israel were unable to become harmful, because they were in the presence of a master who, not being fooled of their hypocrisy, employed towards them the

the only means capable of preventing them from leaving their shells are being removed. This is no longer the case at-today, where, thanks to our complicity, they have not no longer fearing the legitimate brutality of these proud men indigenous people whom we help them exploit.

RTS Te DO ET AE -HRUEN RC EE CRE
RQ PRE EE

-ame a moa

The Jews of Tunisia are involved in trade under the same conditions as their coreli-Algerian legionnaires, and some have already
- usurped a certain fortune; — they cannot however, to act with the same security, and he They sometimes pay with their lives for their 'unsuccessful attempts with the Arabs.

By equating the Jews of Tunisia with the Eu-Europeans, they were allowed to remove all the advantages of civilization; but it was just,

On the other hand, they bear the costs. However,
This is not the opinion of these vile usurers who would like to have all the rights without being held accountable at the slightest obligation.

In Tunisia, Jews and Arabs had the habit-
the practice of carrying the dead on their shoulders.
However, during January, the following appeared at the Of-Tunisian official a municipal decree which intro-led the hearse and subjected the Christians to it
.<t the Jews, leaving the Arabs out.

Although this decree creates a service of funeral homes, he stipulated for the Jews the right to choose the bearers as they see fit; but he could not exempt them from the imposed obligation

= ea - =>

m —

to all other non-Muslim inhabitants to pay the fee set by the specifications
This clause did not please the descendants.
of Israel, who, assured of the protection of the government French government, refused to comply to the new regulations.

Most newspapers bearing the date of March 23 published this same dispatch (Havas):

Tunis, March 21.

“Some disturbances occurred yesterday at "the inauguration of the new regulations for fu-
"Nérailles; they continued today,
“This morning, the Israelites, driven back from the outskirts...”
"From the cemetery, they went to demonstrate in front of x the Hôtel-de-Ville shouting: "Long live Italy,

"Down with the municipality!"
"After breaking the windows of the Hôtel-de-
"In the city, the protesters went to the..."
"Mr. Dubos' house, uttering the same cries.
*“Mr. Santini, the central commissioner, assisted by "a few agents went to meet the "protesters; but, while he maintained

EP TT me ee

A ret S
PE A EEEE md M ne o me he

"The main ringleader, an Israelite, shot at him"
"a gunshot that seriously wounded"
"His fellow believer was arrested."
To a few French people who witnessed these events,

"They dismissed Mr. Santini, who will be off the hook with this."

"for a few bruises."
= "Ten arrests have been made.
“At two o’clock, the authorities proceeded to…”

-~ « to the burial of an Israelite woman; he

"No incident occurred."
~ “Measures are being taken to prevent the "Return of new disorder."

“All the Israeli shops are closed-
" my. "

After this initial note on events-
In cases of such seriousness, the order was given.
by the Jews of France, and the press has kept a prudent silence. However, Mr. Massicault, resident general in Tunis, who was at Paris at that time received a visit from the great Rabbi of France, Mr. Zaddoc-Khan.

Although some newspapers have claimed that, in this interview, the chief rabbi and the
The Jewish consistory promised to use all their influence among their coreligionists Tunisians, we strongly doubt that such was

Mr. Zaddoc-Khan's thoughts.

We were unable to transport ourselves to the scene to determine the cause and severity of the disorders disorders caused by the Jews, we let's just repeat the facts reported by the press Parisian, noting that the Jews only bear any load as much that they are forced to do so.

A response from one of the members in:
fluents from the central consistory to a writer from a major Parisian newspaper, we have particularly struck hard. "The Jews," he reportedly said, number at least 30,000 in Tunis, and
- the neighborhood in which they are grouped is composed of narrow alleyways where no hearses will never be able to penetrate. It follows from this
In fact, the Jews will be carried as precedents.
"Indeed."

We know the neighborhood well enough
Jewish in Tunis, to affirm that he is of the streets wide enough for vehicles to pass through and Consequently, it would be quite easy to transport the dead up to the fairly nearby place where The hearse would have stopped. Is it then by this The lie that Jews hope to free themselves from - price imposed on them?

The influence of the Jews is so great in France, as in an article in Gil-Blas Regarding the unrest in Tunisia, we read:

"The role of the Jews of Paris is to res-
: to respect and serve a fair government and liberal, which lifts them out of a state of inferiority Where the Muslims had relegated them; of Likewise, the government's duty is to proto cultivate industrious, intelligent citizens, and who control almost all the commerce of the country. The liberation of consciences is a fait accompli, and if the times are not more where the state protects a religion, we vi-we are entering an era of freedom where he must res-respect all—provided they do not cons-_will not be considered a danger to public peace and a threat to individual safety.

We believe it unnecessary to add anything at all.
commenting on such a naive lie. We
We have explained this work sufficiently,

how the Jew governed in France, for Let's not revisit this clearly established fact!
As for the second point, we commit our readers to read the theory of the Jew in Russia Jewish, a work that has received little press coverage.
because some of its organs are indifferent-rents and others silenced by their landlords their Jewish funds.

Mr. Zaddoc-Khan, who certainly has approved the conduct of his coreligionists Tunisians, thought they could deceive the good faith of French, by addressing the community to Gil-Blas
Next instruction: |

"As the newspapers reported, at
"during the interview that took place between which-
"that delegates of the Central Consistory of “Israelites and Mr. Massicault, Resident Minister”
"General of France in Tunis, the necessity was "recognized on both sides to give to the judge-
"Tunisian Daism, a regular organization"
"which he has completely lacked until now. In
"Indeed, it has no direction of en-
"It seems that no constituted body with the necessary qualifications"
"to serve as an intermediary between the au-the vigilance shown towards them by the ada superior administration, the Tunisian Israelites- |

"His family will bring all the necessary calm"
"in the claims they will believe themselves to be in
"right to present, and that the scenes unfold-
"affecting, which have provoked a legitimate emotional response"
"tion, will not reproduce again."

Although I don't know enough the facts to give a fair assessment, we want to repeat what the Jews did insert in their newspapers. This allows us to-will return to this point when we discuss Tunisia; thanks to information gathered on In place, we will prove that the Jews of France were not strangers to the unrest in Tunis.
We conclude with this question that he/she... will be easy to resolve later: "The Jews Will France be powerful enough to exempt their Tunisian coreligionists from '
"Charges imposed on all Europeans?"

CONCLUSION

In this first work, we have taken _the Jew before the conquest of Algeria and us
We have followed it step by step to the present day.
we saw how this primitive being had abused from our protection to exploit us. We we sought to establish the relationships that exist-were between him and his coreligionists of France, mostly German Jews, and We have shown that they needed them each other to achieve their goal.

As we said in our pre-facing, we positioned ourselves at a point of view

general and have completely abandoned the min

It's a question of people, limiting ourselves to following the Jew's march and to prove that he always worked to the ruin of France and that he is the because of this general unease which we feel- all the effects.

We would certainly have been interested in da- to enhance our readers by telling them about life of certain Algerian Jews who, for theft, did not yield in no way to those of France; but before to take care of individuals, we have re-recognized the usefulness of a general study on these.

descendants of Israel.

Besides Kanouiï, about whom we have said which- words, we would have been happy to speak several other Jews, such as Witersheim, former director of the Bank of Algeria Oran, currently director of Crédit Foncier and agricultural from Algeria to Algiers, but it will be the the goal of our second work, and we do not forget- we will not go into the details which, while interesting the reader, will show him the good faith of our characters.

For the department of Algiers, we will pass reviewing the lives of: Woltz, Alphandéry, Bloch, Benistki, Tabet, Abraham and Moses (bankers), Akiber, Eliaoul Morali, Seror, Heboth, Moha, Maklouf, Sadia, Akoune, Jais Solomon, Moses Valensin, Zermati, Seban, Dana, Chedaka, Loeb, Aboucaya, Simon, Judas, Kuhlmann, Fassina, Neugasse, Scéba, Stora, Israel, Zernatti, Abenzimra, Athon Chaloum, Adda, Boucri, Addi, Kespy, Chudaka, Lehbar, Lemann, Bram, Oualid, Sas-Haim, Cohen, and Stephanopoli gates Boranès, Bakri.

In the province of Constantine, we parLerons des: Uhry, Torchon, Krapt, Isaac Nahon, Ramy, Elias Oualid, Albrecht, Aaron, Salfati Isaac, Veil, Weiss and Guermy.

- In that of Oran, we will point out the concollection of: Bloch, Berr, Lévy dit Sichel, Hensichel (president of the commercial court), Sebaoum, Lévy, Wantiez (director of the comp-(discount store in Mascara), Perz, David, Cosman, Lévy (forest inspector in Tlemcen), Naëgelan (assistant inspector).

- We only gave these names as a guide to curiosity, and we have on each of our 18

my

ee p E pe EE i, in E OR to E
-

ipi

characters of fairly precise details that we we reserve the right to complete the rest in a Next trip to Algeria. Today, we we merely draw the attention of our readers-those on the denomination of these Jews who, at Apart from a few exceptions, it differs from that of their coreligionists in France.

All these individuals contributed to a a greater or lesser part in the ruin of our settlers and enriched themselves at their expense, by the various means we have indicated. They are gang leaders and it is to them that the other Jews must address their complaints or their demands. They receive our deputies during of their time spent in the cities they live in, and our civil servants must comply with their orders In short, they are the Kanoui of Algeria.

In this study on Algeria, we have showed how the Jews of France were arrived, when we were only thinking about our disasters, to the naturalization of Indian Jews genes, and we have mostly expanded on the terrible consequences of this nature-realization.

© - Among the Jew, not the slightest patriotism; He only thinks about exploiting the people in the middle from which he makes a living. He'll use any means necessary. and we saw that he didn't even back down faced with his wife's prostitution and his girls.
For him, the only profitable business,

. it is theft by the means that we have in-

mentioned in the course of this work.
We then saw how, with the . product of the theft, he managed to dominate by ache-

both the men who are currently in power
See. From the city councilor to the “ministers and the president of the Republic
He himself, everything operates under his law.
- Our members of parliament, some of whom have already Having been their victims, they do not dare to raise their voices;
They tremble before the power of these des-
. buddies who know they are enemies of France.
Despite the protection of their coreligionists From France, the Jews of Algeria fear the ` Arabs, and their sole aim is to alienate them from us and to force us to drive them out of the territory Algerian history. If they were to achieve this result, it would be easier for them to hand France over to Germany and to receive payment for their work

hison.

They thankfully reached the summit from the ladder and will descend faster than they They didn't go up there. What they didn't dare to do the men in charge of France's interests,
We'll take care of it. We'll follow Îles.
Jews step by step and we will report all their warnings against public outrage. It sheds light on this.
We will bring the people together and show them that it is - the Jew who prepared this misery from which he suffers
They are all French people.

Our voice will not remain without echo, because
At the word patriotism, all French people know to rally, especially when the homeland is in aanger. To all the facts put forward by us, the

The Jews will not respond, because they know that we will always remain below the truth.

If, in this struggle that we are undertaking, we: succumbed, victims of the betrayal of Jews (one can expect anything from those people), we would leave behind

French people who, driven by their love for 'their country, would continue this campaign
the result of which will soon be the departure of Jews and the recovery of France.

END

THE

JEWS IN ALGERIA

ARABIAN TALES

Do you remember, readers, these stories?
of olden times, recounted in the evening, at the
A vigil, by your elderly parents? How many times,
When you were children, it was necessary, for
To fall asleep, to repeat one of those stories to you that you preferred. Then sleep came and You were dreaming what you just heard!
Later, you were happy to remember-peel back these stories, because they depict you-were better than the stories of our best Historians, the customs of a hundred years ago. Who of you did not have a proud ancestor, in you pre-sitting on his knees, to tell you his old campaigns? Who among you hasn'ttense, repeated a hundred times by his grandmother Stories of ghosts or werewolves?

Of all these stories, some of which are still present in your memory, you have drew this conclusion: Like our ancestors They were brave! But how they were ignorant and superstitious!

Throughout history, among illiterate peoples, The elders loved to tell the young so many what they had seen, what they had learned from their ancestors.

What was done in France fifty years ago years, is done today in Algeria. The old Arabs are happy to tell their sons certain traditions that establish, better than {all that we could say, in what conditions they were formerly opposite Jews.

Among the tales that we often Having heard them, we choose those who canventdonner à nos lecteurs l’idée est justement of what the Jews were like under the government Turkish ment.

The Story of a Miracle.

There was a time when the two shores of the Mediterranean people lived in poor intelligence agency.

The Romans complained about the faithful.
believers who, they said, were abusing the right visiting by taking their ships, and pushing-know their insolent familiarity until coming to remove the men from the coasts of Europe, women and girls, to enslave, some to their needs, others to their pleasures.

These barbarians, who should have been flattered by the tribute paid to the intelligent address of their men and the beauty of their women, had the pettiness to get angry at these proceded.

To express their discontent, they had the audacity to arm ships of war, to fill them with soldiers and of deadly devices, and to come with bad-bad intentions to disturb the peace of inhabitants of the African coast.

They even dared to go ashore to to accomplish their criminal designs; but these audacious and sacrilegious acts were terribly punished.
many of them perished; the others returned to their ships, and some-
Only a few were able to land in France.

Despite these failures, they had the madness to to return! However, they deemed it prudent to stay away from the shore, and confine themselves to rob the merchants who, in passing, transported Algerian products.

Upon learning this news, the Arabs treacherously took advantage of the circumstances to raise the price of their grain and finally

so as not to bring any more.

The shops in Algiers were quickly emptied and the famine was cruelly felt;
The people revolted and the dey was forced to order bloody executions.

In order to put an end to such a situation-following the tu-
to force the rebellious to pay the tax.
delay, or to give their wheat as payment.

But the cunning Bedouins, who were expecting panua

during this visit, they resisted the order of the dey, whose soldiers, overwhelmed by numbers, were routed and brought back in disorder towards Algiers. They arrived there, closely followed by so close by the enemy, that it was necessary to close the gates yours to prevent the Arabs from looting the city.

Those of the unfortunate soldiers who remained outside the walls were massacred and the Bedouins blocked Algiers 1. |

The dey resolved to end it all in one fell swoop:
he ordered the immediate arming of all the able-bodied men aged sixteen to sixty.

To increase the numbers, the Jews were also called under arms.

These unfortunate, desperate people cried out,
They lamented. Nothing helped. The Janissaries... they tore them from their homes and pushed them-they attacked the arsenal with sticks; then After arming them, they led them towards one of the doors.

The elderly, the women and the children

---

1. Under Turkish rule, the Arabs did not resist they found it difficult to pay taxes: this was moreover the main cause of their frequent revolts.

ran to the synagogue to implore the saint-
the support of the God of Moses.

At the request of his flock, the Great Rabbi surrendered, as quickly as he could—they put his seventy-five years, at the palace beylical, and asked to see the sovereign.

Admitted into his presence, he prostrated himself.
face down.

"What do you want?" said the dey; "Speak, Jew!"

— Have mercy! Generous Lord, grace for those whom you have condemned to death!

— What are you saying, you old fool? I haven't condamned person.

"Mercy! Magnanimous Lord," the Rabbi, have mercy on these poor children of A-Brahmin, whom you sent to their death
For the salvation of the city and your own! Have Have mercy, Lord, on mothers, wives, and sisters and children who are in affliction tion and tremble for their parents.

— It is to defend them that I ordered to the men to do their duty. Your men will walk like the others.

— They marched, Lord.

— Where are they?

— Behind the Bab-el-Oued gate.

— Well then! Let them leave!

— We prevent them from doing so.

— Who?

— About fifty Turkish children, armed of stones, they don't want to let them pass.

— How many of your brave men are there?

— They're all there.

— Finally, how many °

— Nearly five thousand.

— What are you asking for?

— A troop escort to protect them against the kids, whom they don't want to do harm.

The indignant dey sent a violent blow foot to the face of the prostrate Rabbi and him He broke his last tooth. He then chased him away. saying to him:

— I will order these dogs to be disarmed, Sons of bitches! They are such cowards! that in combat they would sow disorder in the ranks. A man who would hold a whip He would chase away a thousand others before him!

The Rabbi rose, murmuring paroles of blessing and withdrew walking backwards.

Upon arriving at the synagogue, his mouth...
With his heart full of blood, the old Jew announced the
The success of his approach can be described in these terms:

— Praise God who has once again saved his little ones
Let us sing together the hymn of the des-Deliverance! Your men will return home.

Before leaving, someone suggested carefully preserve the venomous tooth Rabbi, in memory of his courage royal; which was adopted by acclamation.

Another offered to give him a reward national thought to which each head of faa thousand and each single person would contribute equally depending on his wealth and the number of his parents.

After a long discussion, it was agreed that a large barrel would receive through the bung, the contents of a bottle of Kashir wine, which Each person would contribute in the presence of a secretary.
which would list the names of the donors. Furthermore,
and so as not to humiliate anyone, because of his poverty, the bottle would be brought under the clothing and paid by the person themselves.

It was everyone's honor to map-
to carry only the best possible wine.
When all, heads of families and single people, once they had paid their contributions, the following was opened:

tap to taste this mixture composed of Wine of the poor and wine of the rich. O surCaught! Oh miracle! He only came out of the water! Every Jew, poor or rich, had apcarried a liter of water, hoping that this weak Quantity would not appear… in the number.

Turkish-style justice.

In the time when the infidels (whether they be (cursed) held the city of Algiers blockaded, basic necessities were lacking entirely.

The most daring sailors tried in vain To force the blockade, some were captured, the other sinkings; very few succeeded in deceiving vigilant surveillance of their enemies.

At that time, there was a captain in Marseille.

of merchants, named Marius Cabasson, who, knowing the road to Algiers, thought that, If he could avoid the cruise, he would make a good deal, by bringing here what he believed must miss it.

So as not to delay the progress of his naVire, he only took on things of little importance weight, but of great value. Moreover, the cunning buddy, who knew the way his fine sailboat, calculated all the chances so well wind, currents, moon and tempfarts, that under cover of night and fogLard, he landed in Algiers without having been seen.

The arrival of a ship, laden with provisions, was an event whose news spread-said immediately in town.

The final maneuvers of the anchorage They were not yet finished, when already, from the starboard side and from the port side, the ship was being attacked by boats, manned by Jews, which came to try and buy at a low price what they they were planning to resell at a very high price.

That's business, isn't it?

But the Provençal had given the instruction to his crew of scoundrels, not to leave only one man at a time, and they were numbered as they went down, after making their offers. E

These visits lasted two and a half days.

Cabasson dealt with the one who had made the best deals. It was a small A red-haired Jew with a sparse beard and a nose pointed, with red, rheumy eyes, looking slyly. He promised to pay cash, in or, after delivery.

What we got out of this over five days A ship, it's unimaginable! Everything was weighed, counted, measured, meticulously verified. When the unloading operation was completed undermined, the buyer said he was going to make his calculations, so that there would be no errors. That's-It was perfectly natural and the seller had to do it as much on his side. It was therefore agreed that they they would meet again two days later.

Meanwhile, the captain took care of

from his return cargo; then he went to the Jew to collect his money.

—Ah! my friend, my friend, I believe it that he hasn't finished planting; but, a little, Chouya, rédoua, j'y garderai moa même y toute suite per pagar drahme à toi, sidi.

The child from the Cannebière went away satisfied
He did it and came back the next day.

"Have you finished your calculations?" he said to the Jew.

— Ah! My dear friend, I found one there bidid error.

— What is it?

— He wrote on the bill, my dear handkerchiefs from Rouen, and citi handkerchiefs iti bidide, big stockings, all and cotton stockings and stockings Hey Rouen! I know it, you don't really.
trapper moa.

The seller explained what the Jew had An air of incomprehension. Bad faith of the latter fitlàcher au Provençal several bordered by Troun de Diou.

Finally, the youddi concluded the colloquium by saying:

— Buéno, buéno, rédoua, late, youn
macache drahme rédoua, rédoua à la tardi.

The following day, the raïs received at his on board the visit of all those to whom he had bought goods; they came to to get paid. They all shouted at once, as if if they had been skinned.

— What! Macache drahme! You carrot-Tier bezeff! Quick, quick, to the cadi!

Marius could not get rid of these importuns visitors than with the help of its robust sailors, who, with their fists, made them jump into their boats.

Following this unpleasant incident, the Phocéen was in a very bad mood arriving at his debtor's house, who seemed astonished to see it.

— What is it? What do you want?

— I've come to collect my money.

— Moun chir ami, je ti dit, redoua, redoua, that is to say after doua, come then domain.

— May God's ass break you!

The next day was a Friday.

Marius had difficulty getting rid of the pack of his creditors who followed him even at the home of his debtor, who was then absent from
At home, he found only women who didn't

They didn't understand a word he said to them;

but a child told him that the boss, Sa-Lomon ben Shimal was at the synagogue.
adding that, the next day, the Sabbath day, he
It was pointless to come back.

Cabasson was forced to settle for this unsatisfactory answer.

Saturday began a party which was supposed to last ten days. The Marseillais could not to extend his stay in Algiers, went to wait his debtor at the exit of the synagogue.

— Well then! Will you pay me?

— Moun chir ami, you should have come earlier.
Here we are celebrating and there is no possibility-Ability to touch money. It is a sin.
our other Israelites.

That was enough to test the patience of a saint, and certainly Marius Cabasson was not one of them.
Not one.

He went directly to the qadi who was at the djinna. After explaining this who was bringing him in, the judge said to him: |

— Yes, sir, that Jew is a scoundrel like I know all the others! But it's true that the Jews are celebrating and that the governor-the system that tolerates them allows them to ce-to loosen.

— However, Lord Qadi, I am obliged
I need to leave and I have to pay my vendors who are after me and taking advantage of the ab-Moonlight to escape the cruise.
'In short, I want my money.'

— I understand your reasons, and I will-Send and get the Jew immediately.

Fifteen minutes later, two chaouchs brought the devout man.

— Salomon ben Chimal, you know the sidi What's this?

— Yes, well, I know about that stuff.

— You acknowledge owing him seventy
A thousand sequins?

— Yes, sidi cadi.

— You have to pay him right away!

— I sold the goods and I moved there
I haven't been paid, because of our holidays.
The religion of our others, you know very well, sir, ci defended ber li boun Diou.

— Yes. Well then! Borrow and pay.
2.

m © ea

— No Israelite may touch the-
gent; cit oune gros péché.

— There are Turks and renegades who hold will lend, and the roumi alone will touch it without Let it pass through your hands. Come on! Go quickly.

— I'm going quickly, quickly.

"And you," said the cadi, "how would you like to..."
Are you paid, Turkish style or French style?

— In the French style, a sniffle!

"Write," the judge said to his kodja; "he said In the French style... Go away now. You re-
You will come tomorrow.

At the next hearing, Ben Chimal returned the sad face:

—Moun Diou! Moun Diou! li Turkish, ili worse than an Arab, he wanted to be the one who thie of the sum against the receipt di tout.
This man is a jackal!

At these words, the captain made an angry gesturegic of refusal.

The Jew continued:

— If only he would be content with ten-thirds,
You could accept, but half is too much.
I told him, "That Turk!"

To this insidious proposal, the Marseil-Lais, stamping his foot, cried out angrily:

—- Troun di Diou! I don't know what's wrong with me refrain from strangling that scoundrel of a Jew.

"You refuse," said the judge, "to the man from Marseille?"

Bagasse! If I refuse!

— You can withdraw, Solomon, and you,
Marius, do you still want to be paid by the French?
çaise? Write, kodija.

— Ah! I don't give a damn, as long as I get paid, I have my money! Chinese style or lanclay, ze mwen f... hole of good air Good heavens!

— Excellent! That's talking! If you If you had said that earlier, you would have your money It's been a long time. But you'll get it... Chaouchs, run after the youddi and rownose it.

When the Jew appeared, the qadi said to him:

— You're going to pay the roumi right now.

— But, sir, you know very well that our others, we cannot receive money during our celebrations.

— Chaouchs, seize this dog and combegin with fifty blows of the stick under the feet.

Solomon was immediately bound and thrown onto the back, and the feet together attached to a a rod fixed to two iron stakes planted in earth.

Each chaouch, a long and thin stick Olive branch in hand, he waited for the signal.

"Do you want to pay right away?" repeated the cadi.

— Moun Diou, moun Diou, have pity on Me!

— Go on! said the judge; count, Kodja!

The poor Youddi was uttering terrible cries-wounds, while the cadi chatted with his adel. |

Blood had spurted out, and the captain, moved out of pity, he was going to beg for mercy and stop the execution. cution, when the tortured man cried out that he was going Pay... tomorrow!

"Go on," said the judge coldly.

— Stop, I'll pay immediately.

They helped the Jew up and sat him down before a table, and the secretary wrote, as dictated from the cadi, a prescription for a Turkish banker from the city. The Jew signed it, the judge put his stamp and, less than an hour later, Marius Cabasson had his money.

Then, the Jew, who could no longer pose feet on the ground, returned home, mounted on a donkey, without having been able to obtain anything else expect forty blows from the stick.

The raïs thanked the judge, who gave him a an escort to accompany him and a chore to carry his gold. Then he said to him:

— Well, sir, what do you think of the justice-Turkish-style tic? In six months you wouldn't have didn't get your money, by making you pay at the French. In the French style, always paper. Stamped and worthless! And the lawyers, Solicitors, bailiffs, prosecutors!!!... With these Those people, you see, it's always like that that needs to be done. We know them better that you. They must be held securely under the stick. If we let them go free, they would...

4. If this excellent method were used in France, the Jews would not so easily use bankruptcy to steal from their creditors

—

n —— ——————

would eat and become masters at we are the owners of all our property.

They all get along like thieves in fair. They fill themselves with gold as if they were sponges; they need to be squeezed to
To get something out of it.

— Yes, that's possible, replied Marius, but the unfortunate man nonetheless received forty blows with a stick.

— Bah! bah! I advise you to pity him.
You're crazy! He'll start again Tomorrow! He's a Jew!

At the Moorish café.

— Happy days are followed by bad-
I'll be here for days.

After living in comfort, I found suddenly ruined. But the Misericor-God did not abandon me, and I regained what had been taken from me.

The one who spoke thus was wearing the suit and the unlettered turban and was called Sidi-Aggoub. He was sitting in the middle of some Arabs who seemed to bear him a certain respect.

One of them said to him:

— Tell us, then, I beg you, coment Misfortune has entered your home, you who lived in abundance and owed nothing to anyone? Also tell us how you went about it Rebuild your fortune?

— It's very simple: a Jew ruined me, the Roumis helped me up. However, I spent very bad times.

I lived happily and peacefully; my silos full, my herds in good condition, I I let myself be lulled by a gentle carefree state of mind.

I enjoyed giving guests a warm welcome. that God was sending me! I was even thinking about Marry my sons!

One of my friends, an adventure runner Since there are so many, he came to ask me for a hundred francs, telling me: "I need them immediatelydiatem=nt; I'm going on an expedition tonight in love, and, to succeed, I will need "A few douros."

— What are you asking me, Bou Zian?

I know very well that we have no money. What would we do with it, we who have all this What do we need on hand? Do you want some? Wheat, barley, sheep? Take your pick! But I don't have any money. Wait for the market. Next, I'll sell some of the harvest and you I'll lend you one hundred francs, two hundred, if you want.

— No, no, a hundred is enough for me, but it They need them today, before nightfall. You are my friend, and you wouldn't want to force me to turn to someone else.

"Well," I replied, flattered in my self-esteem, I will try to procure the twenty douros.

I left immediately to go find a Jew recently settled in a new village, created near Oran. I thought that this child of Moses, from whom I received all my provisions, would not refuse me this service vice.

Upon arriving at the village, I found Jacob crouching amidst a jumble of bags, crates, barrels and a thousand other objects parates.

He greeted me, calling me his lord and his master, and asked me what I wanted.

"It was heaven that sent me," he said. to take advantage of a good opportunity.

He had just received su- cream and top-quality coffee.

"No," I told him, "I don't need to" goods today, I need Money. Lend me one hundred francs.

"Money!" cried the Jew, raising his hand.
The head; you want money?

— Yes, Jacob, twenty douros.

— Good heavens! But I don't have them.

— Come on! Look carefully.

— But what guarantee will you give me?
YOU ?

— What guarantees do you need, don't tell me-Aren't you born? You know I have land, some flocks, grain; what are you afraid of? You know my creditworthiness.

— Yes, I know all that, I trust you completely
I'm in you, but I need your signature.
Otherwise, I would have no guarantee, if you

Misfortune should happen. Besides, I will return the favor.

your receipt when you return the money.

— That's right! Come on, give me your paper, I'll do it
I will write my name and that will be that. You are a brave man |

— Did you doubt it? Did I ever Giving one thing for another?

— No, but hurry, I'm in a rush.
Here, pass me that paper over there.

— No, not that one, I'll sell it for two cents

the sheet: I have a smaller one which is less dear and worth more. You see, we As for us, poor Jews, we are forced to save on everything; lecommercevasimal!

And he handed me a piece of paper, imprinted with tablets; then he said to me:

— Sign here, that's all it takes. With You are enough for me.

And I signed without suspicion.

Alas! I learned the hard way that it was a special paper.

When I had signed, he stretched out his hand, took the paper, examined my signature, and slipped the receipt in a wallet which he placed in a drawer, from which he removed the key.

He then gave me a speech about poverty.
time, the scarcity of money, etc. Finally, he took out of a bag nine five-franc coins, then he cried out like a desperate man:

— Oh! Lord my God! I've been robbed!
I had one hundred and ten francs in that bag! Great God! What will become of my children?

Seeing this heart-rending pain, I
I was moved for a moment, but the day was drawing to a close.
and my friend was supposed to be waiting for me. I said to Jacob:

— Let's finish, hurry up, complete the sum. |

— I'm ruined, I have nothing left.

-- Give me some change!

— Ah! The scoundrels! They took everything from me.

— Look in your counter, do it quickly or Give me back my receipt.

After searching everything, turning everything over, he re-he took out some silver coins and a few pennies.

I gathered everything together; there were seventeen of them.
douros, three francs and seven sous.

I could get no more. The hour before-It was necessary, I had to be content with that.

in me ee

I had him write in a book the mention of
I saw the difference and I left.

My friend was very disappointed when he saw
This machine gun fire. He took everything and ran away like...
He was in a madman, he was in such a hurry.

On market day, I sold a few mo-tones and then went to the village to remove My receipt.

There I learned that my creditor had gone to spend the Easter holidays with his family in, Oran.

The holiday season passed, but Jacob did not He didn't come back. Another Jew had opened his houtique. It was therefore impossible for me to to pay my small debt.

_ Jacob's successor, named Maclouf, told me that my creditor would come to deorder the money. I thought, moreover, that a Such a small sum couldn't bother him and I I stopped worrying about it.

One morning, as I sat in front of my door, I spotted a group of Romanians heading- They were geeking on my side.

I immediately called my wife and said to her:

— Here are some visitors, prepare the coffee.

These Christians, who were unknown to me, outwardly resembled those people who They spend their lives writing.

After having coffee, which they found excellent, they made me known, through the interthe intermediary of a dreadful little Jew, the goal of their visit.

One of these men took me aside, and, at with the help of that animal of a Jew, he told me:

— Jacob, the honorable merchant who lived in the neighboring village, lent you a hundred douros:

"One hundred douros!" I cried. "It's a Error! There was only the value of seventeen douros, three francs and seven sous.

— Don't deny your debt! I have proof that he lent you this sum of one hundred douros.

— No, that's not it. I asked him one hundred francs, and after having me sign on a piece of paper, he couldn't find the whole sum and only gave me what I told you.

— Yet you acknowledge that you owe to Jacob?

— Yes, but not a hundred douros. I'll add that I looked for it to pay for it. That was a month ago. that he has left.

— All of that is indifferent to me! Besides, You're all the same, you Arabs. You borrow easily, but you don't I never want to give up. I am here in good standing. bailiff's note. I have a hundred douro note... written within thirty days; he has not been paid at the deadline and I've come to inform you of the prohead.

— But I repeat, there is a mistake; I I never borrowed that amount from perrings.

— Come on! he resumed angrily and shakingsaying his cane, must we, damned arbico, you Put your ticket under your nose? Look!

And he handed me a small covered piece of paper of various scripts and bearing several Stamp imprints. On closer inspection, I They recognized my signature at the bottom.

It was indeed the one I had signed in emborrowing one hundred francs from Jacob. I understood that I was the victim of a despicable plot.

The bailiff walked away with his accomplices.

leaving me a piece of paper.

They all looked furious with me. I I grasped the motive when I saw the hideous Jew making threatening gestures at me.

"Well," I said to myself, "this is a nasty business."
First and foremost, I need to find that damned Jacob.
in order to avoid future visits of the right arm of justice t.

It was obvious that the sum of one hundred dozen-Ros had been written by someone.

— Was it, I wondered, through the Jew,
or by the bailiff?

That same evening, I left for Oran.

Oran is the preferred city of the Jews. They are there They flock in from all sides, they swarm there, they They swarm. They have their consistory there: it's from that's where the slogan originates.

Upon arriving, I headed towards their quarter-third, which is the dirtiest and most poorly built of the city. It was the boulevard of prostitution tion! All you could see was filth and vermin.

4. The Arabs considered the bailiff as the arm law of justice,

ae oaae D

By contact alone, this cursed race
It rots everything, even the earth it treads upon.

Due to the recent rainfall, the streets were filled with mud; but in The Jewish quarter was a foul, filthy place. full of all kinds of rubbish.

The Arab who crosses this anthill impure is considered prey; there is no his journey, assailed by jeers and sometimes even of projectiles.

The children of the Jews will one day be more more dangerous to us than their fathers, and the The best dressed among them will always the biggest thieves.

It really seems like anything goes. this breed and that the Christians have fear !

If we are robbed or mistreated by them, we don't can obtain justice! We must not even do anything say.

I searched every nook and cranny of this neighborhood filthy, entering all the gambling dens where They play and steal from each other. I wanted to be stubborn- How to find my rascal Jacob.

I sometimes had difficulty escaping unharmed and safe from the hands of those who frequent these gambling dens.

All my research had remained unsuccessful, until one Saturday, I spotted my youddi, strutting around the main square in gold-braided uniforms, and towing three bloated Jewish women and a dozen children dirty and unkempt.

Jacob savored the joys of family life; he smiled proudly, eyeing him up all those kids.

I stepped forward to speak to him.

Upon seeing an Arab near him, he cried out, according to Jewish custom:

— Roh, beni kelb (Back off, you son of a dog!)

— Come now, Jacob, don't get angry. It's me, the one you called your master when You were in an Arab country.

Then he recognized me.

"Ah!" he said to me respectfully, It's you, Your Grace! What a good wind you Bring! Would you be appointed chief, agha, or Bach-agha? Would you be in charge of a com-commandment?

3.

ee

— The one about paying one hundred douros doesn't My joy! I came to see you.

— What an honor you bestow upon me!

— This isn't about honor. A bailiff came to demand a hundred douros from me, or rather is to signify a protest for a ticket of this the amount I would have subscribed to you for a month due date. I only owe you what you owed me. lent, and this money, I have in my djebira, Ready to give it back to you right now. A long time ago that you would have had it, if you had stayed in the village. Take it and write it down on a piece of paper that I won't tell you about.

I don't owe anything anymore.

— I cannot receive any money today-
From today, Saturday, come back tomorrow at the same time.
time and we will settle this matter.

The next day I waited in vain for pious man; Jacob did not appear. I I thought he was ill.

I resumed my search for him and I was unable to meet him in the following days.

While I was searching in vain for my creditor, I met one of my neighbors who told me:

— What happened to you? We think you're dead _ over there. Why weren't you at home these past few daysniers?

— What extraordinary thing happened?

— The Europeans came several times bring some papers to your address, and then a One day they returned in greater numbers, have They took away your herds and had them sold.

— Mercy! Is it possible!

— That's how it is; they said that you
I owed one hundred douros to the Jew Jacob and five-
As for justice, we wanted to... oppose the abduction, and your smallest
The child was crushed in the fight.

— Oh! the wretched Jew!

— You should be complaining, the Christians are would deliver justice.

I explained to my neighbor how this fri-Jacob's son had misused my signature.
by filling out, without my knowledge, the stamped paper,
and was therefore entitled to re-to demand a hundred douros, when he hadn't lent only eighty-eight francs and seven BELOW.

I was ruined.

It was pointless to complain. I would have been forced to stay in Oran for months whole, and I would have been out of pocket.

I then returned to my village to collectread mine and make myself safe with this that I had left.

I lived miserably, without hope in the future, when I received a letter from a My wife's cousin, named Kaddour, who,
following disagreements with the Roumis, had been sent to France. He told me that at upon his return he had found a place in a hotel in Oran and that he was in charge of con-to lead travelers to visit the town and surrounding area.

"Go find him," my wife told me. He will show you how to make money.

I went to Kaddour, who welcomed me very cordially and promised to to take care of me. To begin with, he...

confided the travelers who wanted to visit the surroundings, and I was able to have some good daysborn.

During my various excursions, I made the knowledge of these men called scholars.

What good people! We'll do for them Believe whatever you want! These tourists from a a particular genre invents a name for every little thing. There are some who give a name to all the plants, others to all insects, others finally to all the stones, and each one, to returning from his explorations, he reports what he found it.

I had been in place for a few days at with difficulty, when a cara- landed in Oran vane of scholars. At their request, I them led them to the Combes tower, where they settled in They went to look at the sun in pipes.

Every day, I came to Oran to look for provisions.

Oh! Those were the good old days! I was happy.
paid, well fed, and had very little workvail. In addition, the various suppliers me they often gave the coin.

in ms

When these scholars left, they left me-were the donkey that carried the provisions.

After these, others came, too.
generous than the first ones.

One of them spent his time picking blades of grass, which it contained precious-lying in a box. Another, a hammer with his hands, he broke stones and charged me to bring back some pieces of it.

It seems that in France there is neither no grass or stones!

Another one, some kind of nutcase (I don't know him)
Don't complain, even though he made me run), no he only cared for turtles, lizards and Snakes. He gave me five francs one day.
for a chameleon that I had brought back to him.

He mistook the aloe stems for a-perges.

Ah! That one amused me!

It is certain that if the drivers of camels knew what one gains by con-to lead the scholars and the ladies of the Romani, there wouldn't be a single one left to go from Timbuktu in Greater Cairo.

THE JEWS IN ALGERIA D1

It's amazing how much I made people believe my travelers! But it was generally from Good people and very polite!

After spending fifteen days visiting They're fully committed to Algeria, and they're returning to France.

more knowledgeable than ever, reporting to them, their little creatures, and their grand ideas about our old country. They speak and we Listen; they write and we read them, and that's it. That's how we know Algeria.

Indeed, it is they who make the laws relating to tives to their colony, while those who have inhabited for ten or twenty years, they exhaust themselves in efforts superfluous to fight and destroy the false ideas spread by these explorers for fifteen days, without being able to succeed.

After all, I don't care; I've earned more money in six months, thanks to swindling of this cursed Jew and the quirks of tourists, than before in five years.

To all my customers, I sold jars of Kabylie or Morocco, Mascara carpets shawls and silks from Tunis (made in Lyon), slippers and wallets Algerian jewelry from the rue d'Austerlitz coming from Paris: necklaces, knives, yataghans, pipes, tobacco, etc... But where I made the biggest profits was on the old scrap metal, the old guns, the rusty and broken pistols, the old swords that I said had belonged to Abd-el-Kader, rings, bracelets and leg rings.

You can't imagine how much I I made them swallow swords and eggs of the ox-you idiot!

This is how, my friends, thanks to the bene-The saying of the mighty and merciful God, I was able, after being robbed by a Jew, to make a small fortune and give back to my family well-being.

These are stories that have already been told. some of our readers have been communicated, along with several others that we regret that we are unable to insert, by a Frenchman who has lived in Algeria for nearly forty years old. This courageous patriot is already published in several Algerian newspapers, under the title of Arabian Tales, stories interfeelings about the Jews and Arabs of our colony. Each of these stories, whose veracity cannot be suspected, brings a new new evidence to support the theory that we we exhibited in Jewish Algeria.

THE JEWS IN ALGERIA

—

From these various tales, we are authorizedled to the conclusion that the Jews, cowardly and rampants under the Turkish government, had quickly initiated into the laws and customs of the new - conquering calves.

While the Arabs did not have the the slightest notion of French civil law which now to be applied in Algeria, the Jews, on the contrary, had taken all their precautions to be able to fly legally the Arabs. These unfortunate people were ignorant of... The effect that their signature, affixed to a a stamped sheet of paper, authorized a a man of bad faith to demand a sum that was not owed to him.

In the following chapters, we will

to take the most prominent Jews from Algeria, and show how, thanks to the complicity of our representatives, we could even thanks to the complicity of the various governments successive events, they arrived to be the masters in our colony.

IT

THESE BRAVE YOUDDIS

In France, we only have a vague idea of the solidarity that exists between Jews and which makes them powerful and dangerous. It is even among us who admire this solidarity, which the only stimulus is the implacable hatred of Jews for the rest of humanity .

Those of our readers who still retain some illusions about the use made by Jews of the power they manage to seize, They only need to visit Algeria and they will be convinced- They will learn from their mistake.

They will see that the Jews, officials or Merchants are all usurers.

Whether they resort, for example, to Tabet Abraham, one of Al-'s principal bankers ger, and they will soon know what, in in our colony, a Jew means by "doing the bank "!

Every youddi — whether he is a money changer like Jaïs Salomon or trinket maker like Eliaoul Morali — knows only one way to get rich: exploiting people in the middle from which he lives.

We can take indiscriminately
all the Jews of Algeria, and we cannot find any of them we will not have a single one who has not committed several misappropriations to the detriment of the French people and Arabs.

From the very beginning of the conquest, these slaves of yesterday, who owned nothing or almost nothing
"Nothing," the spies of our officers declared.
to secure an initial down payment.

We could then see, throughout the entire campagne and throughout all parts of the Algerian territory nothing, a swarm of yudis who, like crows, walked in the wake of our troupes to devour the corpses.

"1

Qt

During our expedition to Tunisia, what Jews have committed even more thefts!
One of them, named Schemela, was in charge of reto requisition barley or wheat, taking advantage of it to make a big deal about jewelry and gold that the Muslims had hidden in the bags.

Later, the Arabs, indignant at the inso-
The actions of this bandit, enriched by his robberies, complained to the authorities, adding that this Jew had stolen large quantities of shovels and Pickaxes belonging to the French engineering corps. Traproceeding before the Sousse court-martial For armed robbery, Schemela was desplit by Mr. Georges Lachaud, who obtained his acquittal, despite the charges against him charges brought against him.

The native Jews then began to to apply this maxim of the Prince Jews of Constantinople:

“Make your children merchants, so that Little by little they are stripping the Christians of their possessions.

Already the Solomons, Tabet Abraham, Zermati, Jacob, Moses, in Algiers; the Isaacs, Nahon, Aaron, Oualid, Uhry, in Constantine; the David, Kanoui, Sebaoum, in Oran, founded, under the title of bankers or merchants, foul counters where the fortune of our nationals and of the Arabs.

The Jews scattered throughout Europe learn soon by their native coreligionists that there is a mine to be exploited in Algeria; plugentlemen then land in our colony and come to lend their support to the youddis illiterate.

We will not recount all their honors two exploits; we will confine ourselves to saying that those of our readers who do not know Algeria, they cannot have any idea of the Jew native. The usury that reached in France a Incredible rate, but nothing compared to wear and tear. Arab.

It is especially when misery is rampant on a country where Jews can easily exercise cer their shameful trade.

In November 1881, two villages from the Djebela tribe, near Mostaganem, affected by several bad years consecutives, had no grain for ento sow. The main members of these villages, led by their chief, resorted to a A Jew from Mostaganem. He agreed to to deliver barley to them at the exorbitant price of 36 francs per quintal. This sum was to be returned to the harvest, not in money, but in nature at the current market price. However, at In August 1882, barley was worth 7 francs. quintal, the people of Djebela had to give nearly six quintals for one, that is to say that they had borrowed at 600 0/0.

L

By tracing the history of colonization In Jewish Algeria, we passed under silence a decree of great importance because we've never actually implemented it. We want to talk about the decree of December 13th bre 1866, on the unseizability, for debts previous, lands constituted in proindividual privacy.

Several tribes, in fact, saw their terrains seized and sold for the benefit of the Jews auimmediately after the issuance of the titles, so that the property was established, not for the benefit natives, but to the benefit of the Jews, who were powerful enough to prevent the appcation of the decree.

Collectively allocated land, according to the law of 1873, to the natives of the Smélas and the Gharabas were seized and sold for profit of certain Jews of Oran, of whom we will List the names:

Moïse Amar', a Moroccan Jew, aged 30 at 35, slightly stooped, with the face of an admirable jackalremarkably successful, dressed in French style, is arrived, with the help of his wife, at making exprto pray to two or three hundred natives. After his bankruptcy, its receivables were sold by debefore the commercial court, purchased by a intermediary and accomplice, and ceded by thisthis one to Rachel Kalben, a worthy separated wife of the property of the said Amar. This one gave procuration to her husband to continue and do expropriate the Arabs. Most of them

4. Moses Amar responded to someone who was speaking to him of his dishonesty: "I am always at the gate of the prison, But, thanks to my address, I'll never get in.

were completely ruined and that without him they were allowed to protest.

Josué Gabay, also a Moroccan Jew, has purchased from several natives, mainly to those of Tenazet, lands which had been allocated, during the constitution of individual property. By dealing with Gabay had reached an amicable agreement with these sellers.

promised to pay the sale price immediately past actions. Most of the acquisitions were done at a price of 175 francs per hectare. Under the pretext of saving on registration fees Gistrement, the Jew asked the natives to declare only 125 francs per hectare in front the notary, promising to give them immediately the 50 francs per hectare, undeclaredres in the act.

The naive vendors were fooled. trapped. Once the deed was done, Gabay... fled to Aïn-Temouchent where he stayed for eight days.

The Arabs addressed complaints to the administrator, to the prefect, to the public prosecutor the Republic, to the governor. They opposerent even by force during the seizure of possessions- Despite the land acquisition, nothing helped. In five douars, the Arabs were thus stripped of their possessions.

Gabay owns five to six hundred hectares land in Ténazet, acquired from this fa- The Arabs didn't receive any money. because, they were told, the land sold were burdened with mortgages.

We are asking the appropriate authorities in this regard Why are Jews allowed to have their property seized? and sell land declared exempt from seizure affected by the decree of December 13, 1866?

Other Jews from Oran proceeded from the The same method was used to plunder the Arabs. These are the men named: Moses ben Said, Isaac

Karsenty, Mardoché Obadia, Youde Obadia, Moise ben Chétri, Messaoud ben Yamin, Chouraki *.

Still others have become rich, by de-looting those they could attract into their nets. Among these, we will mention a among the wealthiest wholesale traders in Oran,

1. All these Oran Jews, friends of Kanoui, are today of today rich and respected.

named Gabail. The number of his victims is already considerable. We will cite one for example, who will publicize the processes ge-generally employed by this individual at-near naive and defenseless people.

Gabail the Jew, a food merchant basically in Oran, owned, in Ain-Temouchent, several buildings, one of which served as a foundation douck (stable) to the Arabs and brought him 30 francs per month. He resolved to transform into These shabby shacks are a rental property. built against a wall constructed of earth and half-toyen with Mrs. Diego. To make some Economist, he plotted to make the ma-I shared part of the costs with my neighbor.

Around November 1884, the Jew came to find the widow Diego and approached her in these terms:

— Would you like to do me a favor?

— If it's possible, I'm not asking better.

— Here's what it's about: I want to do build a pretty house on the sitement of my fondouck; but as our

—

The shared wall is made of earth, I ask yourai to allow me to have it demolished for the replace with a beautiful masonry wall, with lime and sand.

— I have no money, Mr. Gabail,
You know them well, and therefore cannot cope at the cost of rebuilding the wall. Furthermore
If, on your end, it is poorly maintained, it won't help.
It's not like that at my place. The two bedrooms there adjoining ones bring me 15 francs each per months; the stable at the end is rented for 30 francs. That's a small income that I am, uh-I'm tired of receiving monthly payments. I regret it.
I cannot oblige you, but I cannot borrow money to rebuild a wall which is useful to me in its current state.

— I'm not asking you for anything. I'll do it myself.
expense. In one month your rooms will be in good condition and you can return them to your tenants. Later, if you want to do build your house, you will pay me halfcitizenship.

— If you don't ask me anything, you
You can do the work. You will tell me only-

\

— nr EE cn

D sand

the day you want to start,
so that I can warn my tenants.

The poor woman, a widow and mother of six-children, the eldest of whom was twenty years old, and the most ten-year-old, had previously contributed to the rebuilding of another party wall for a sum of 150 francs, which she had not was not obliged to pay, her sons having done They themselves transport the materials. She hoped that the Jew would act like his other neighbor, a brave French settler, and that's why that she had agreed to his remarks
tions.

Thanks to his work and that of his children,
The widow Diego lived happily. Besides the re-Having come from her rooms, she had four hectares vine defects and arable land.

The demolition and reconstruction work tions directed by Buzaowitch, architect and city road surveyors, became quite quick-demented; but Gabail, despite his promises, did not consider having the rooms repaired from its neighbor, which had been badly damaged for the execution of the work.

us
e

The widow Diego approached him at the market of Temouchent and he said:

— You promised to have my rooms in the state they were in in the-
A month's interval, and now it's been three months that I've been waiting I need my income to live.
true, and it's a loss for me to stay thus without renting, especially since my rentals silences can leave me permanently, if You are creating a new delay.

Gabail promised to give orders in consequence.

Another month passed in complaints.
Finally, Buzaowitch', the architect, undertakes-
The man came to ask the widow to sign a stamped paper, promising to do ter-undermine the works.

— So what is this piece that you
"Do you want me to sign?" Mada- asked him Diego.

— That's the authorization you gave

4. It should be noted that, in order to inspire a certain

Trust, Jews always choose officials for accomplices.

Mr. Gabail is asked to demolish your shared wall.

The unfortunate woman, completely he-literate, she scribbled her name where she was told to sign.

Some time later, the same architect presented him with a memorandum, asking him 200 francs deposit.

She refused to pay.

After a five-month wait, two bricklayers came to make the promised repairs in Mrs. Diego's house. Before leaving, They presented him with a bill for 180 francs. which she did not pay.

On the advice of some friends, she called Gabail before the justice of the peace, asking him compensation for lost rent, and the implementation in the state of its premises demolished for the consconstruction of the Gabail palace. Her case was dismissed. of his request and ordered to pay costs.

Shortly afterwards, Gabail sent a summons to the widow Diego, to claim from himsea payment for half of the shared wall, whose expense amounted, after correction of the report prepared by the compliant architect tecte, at a thousand and some francs. She was concondemned to pay the sum demanded. signing the famous play, she had condamned herself.

She appealed to the court in Oran, and M: Bagros was tasked with supporting his interests. He sought to establish that this woman, not Not knowing how to read, he had written his name without to know what she was signing. The written commitment was there; the judgment was upheld.

This woman thus found herself a victim of her own his complacency and naivety. Gabail did not could force her neighbor to demolish her wall in perfect condition without giving him any compensation for the lost rent. He knew it very well, and that's why he had done the promasses we have been talking about.

It matters little to a Jew to put a family on the brink, if he finds a little one there Profit! Gabail had taken advantage of simplicity and the stupidity of an unfortunate widow for to get reimbursed for the major part bytie of the expenses incurred for the construction of its House.

For the Jews of Algeria, prostitution is even today one of the most used to gain control of certain Arab leaders.

Every youddi is used to considering like a fortune, the beauty of his daughters.

Who in Setif didn't know the beautiful Hymouna and Some of her sisters? Her mother practices a small business with the sole purpose of attracting at her home a few clients (Arabs onall), who do not disdain the charm of its girls.

These Jewish women do not stay long in each center. When they are too They are known in one city, they leave it furiously. tively to go and settle elsewhere t.

To make her job more lucrative, this The family divides and exerts pressure on several points. at the same time. Woe to the naive Arabs who let themselves be lured into the den of these prostitutes killed! They will leave their douros there and will be

1. The Hymouna family has already traveled through Constantine, Setif, Tebessa, Biskra, Batna, Bordj-bou-Arreridj, PhiLippeville, Guelma, etc.

often even forced to sell their land and their herds to satisfy greed of these shameless businesswomen.

Depending on the locations where they are found, These Jewish women are either grocers or shopkeepers. or tobacconists. Their only business, It's prostitution; their sole purpose is to to rob their victims!

Young Mohamed from Constantine, aged sentence of eighteen years, and descendant of one of the older Arab families, attracted by Hymouno, spent all his fortune in a few months that his ancestors had bequeathed to him. Others Arab leaders were caught up in the nets of these women and left their feathers.

These Jewish women are unfortunately not the only ones who engage in this shameful trade in Algeria. We could also mention the Zermi women and girls, Moïse, Boucri, Rami, etc., among the prostitutes who have done the most victims; but we could not repeat for each one that what we have just to speak for the Hymouna family!

The descendants of Israel employ so much tricks to steal from the natives that he told us It is almost impossible to list them all to our readers. Regarding one of them, we Let us read in the Algerian Radical of July 18th

1884:

Here is one of the many commercial processes of The Jews with the natives.

If this fact were not confirmed to us by a person of justice, we could not believe it, although may we be enlightened by their loyalty, by their honesty commercial head.

A good-looking native enters a Jewish shop. Clerk to rush, boss to... to press, to flatten, naive Arab to swell.

To buy, one would have to haggle, naturally- to offer a third, a quarter of the asking price; the Arab, always proud, sometimes sees clearly and finally rebels. He wants to leave, stop right there!

Confident in his French citizenship, the Jew, disappointed by All hope of gain, dreams of revenge.

A delight for the gods, especially for a Jew facing a Arabic!

To get revenge, he takes whatever object he can find, he puts it in the hands of the bewildered native and then shouts Thief! Agents rushing in to brutalize the native who protests weakly and passively allows himself to lead to jail.

Caught red-handed: the judges quickly ruled and it's a An innocent man, yet another condemned man, who will also bear the burden of justice. the French (since he is French) in his heart.

The magistrate who provided this information

His comments were correct. He should have added however, frequently, in the presence of agents, the Arab, who foresees what is to come, consents, although innocent, to pay a certain amount that sum in the hands of the Jew, for to avoid prosecution.

These mischievous acts require no explanation whatsoever.
comment.

In the same newspaper, issue of the 15th and
On July 16, 1884, this small note was found, relating to loans granted by Jews:

Several statements have reached us. It seems-a trait that the Jews lend, with guarantee, Small sums at 100% interest — per year? No — per month.

That's typical.

This fact has been known in Algiers for a long time.

Today, we no longer demand 100 0/0 per month,

but 420 0/0.
And the Jews talk about generosity; it's grotesque!

They deserve a first-class medal for the ex-international position of all turpitudes.

Theft is a method rarely used by The Jews. However, those who are still too young people, eager to establish themselves as merchants, do not hesitate not to enter houses to soothe see this thirst for money, innate in all children of Abraham. a

Just recently, a young youddi of fifteen years, Abraham ben X., entered the Mr. Alibert's perfume shop, located Boulevard Charlemagne, in Oran, and was trying to to pick the lock on the counter. Attracted by the noise, Mr. Alibert rushed into the corridor gold, shouting "Thief!"

The other tenants of the house accou- They responded to his cries and a search began. items in the store.

The young thief is eventually discovered. Crouched under the counter. Arrested and searched, Five false keys were found on him.

This was the third time in two months.

Abraham was arrested for theft. Convicted already several times, he had always been He was released due to his young age.

It is easy to understand that young people youddis, who have the same flaws as their fathers, and who are often weaned from argent, seek to obtain them through theft.

Sometimes even this Jewish brood gives the elders an example of perversity.

Last April, young Karsenty, aged twelve, had bought from one of his coreligionists, named Sultan, a group of two dozen ties to resell retail.

Sultan was asking for 7 francs, but Karsenty

He never wanted to give more than 6. The old Jew, who didn't want to be taken for a ride by this novice, went to find him and seized himsant at the neck (a very natural gesture in a mar-(chand of ties), demanded the twenty sous from him which remained as full and final settlement. Kar-Senty grabbed a knife that was on display.
and struck Sultan twice on the arm.

The young Jewish man who didn't pay his bills was arrested right away.

We must recognize that these are these are fairly rare occurrences; however, we have I felt it was important to point them out, to clearly show our readers that all tricks are good for the Jews and that their natural cowardice alone makes you back away from theft.

Slander is a weapon frequently used quickly by the youddis for us those who resist them.

A few years ago, an honest Français, which we regret not being able to naming it was an object of horror for everyone.
the Jews, who finally decided to use the slander. A fairly good newspaper from Algiers.
informed, wrote at that time:

They were a handful of oddballs! Some Jews and two French sold.

The lowlands attract mud: the Jews had attracted the two Frenchmen. The purpose of this promiscuity vile: to get rid of an opponent.

Each person proposed their own method, but the only one to which "We stopped" was the slander.

One of the two Frenchmen would have preferred the club or the puzzle — loves of yesteryear — that one was a former informer.

But the other, adjusting his glasses, head down,

he cast a sweeping glance at his accomplices, and,
coldly, slowly, in a hissing voice, recited by highlighting it in key passages, the tirade
from Don Basile to Bartolo: |

"Slander, sir? You hardly know what that is."
'that you disdain: I have seen honest people near to be overwhelmed by it. Believe that there is no plate Malice, not horrors, not absurd tales that we make it adopted by the idle people of a large city by doing it right, and we have here people of a address...

"First, a light sound skimming the ground of the earth"
like the swallow before the storm: such a mouth the re-
He picks it and deftly slips it into your ear.
The damage is done, it germinates, it creeps, it travels, and from Mouth to mouth, he goes to the devil; then, all at Suddenly, somehow, you see the slander-denies rising, hissing, swelling, growing visibly With a glance. She takes off, spreads her wings, whirls, envelops, tears, drags, bursts and thunders, and becomes, thank heavens, a general cry, a crescendo public, a universal chorus of hatred and pro-Description. Who on earth could resist it?

The man with glasses stopped, asking questions.
his eye on those around him.

The former informer gave a grunt of satisfaction.
A Jew understood, and he began to smile basely.

And, the next day, the colony ran through the city.

paid for by the gold of the Jews.

Our readers in Algiers have not forgotten this.

mischief, which had caused quite a stir at-However; they will consequently understand the raisounds that silence us, the name of the Frenchman who had almost become a victim of the Jews.

The aim of this chapter is to make con-to be born, with supporting evidence, what the Native Jew, we will continue in another line of thought, and to speak successively-his humanity, his insolence and of his cowardice.

Easter Monday 1886, in Aïn-Temouchent, two young Spaniards, having fun with a single-shot shotgun, they did it They left by accident, and both were injured, one with a right hand, the other more seriously injured in the leg.

A crowd quickly formed and the
The police commissioner arrived, one of the pre-Miers. Seeing the blood escape with the severity of the wound inflicted on one of the Spaniards, he asked those present to transporting the injured person to the hospital. No one Having stepped forward at his call, he addressed the Jew Chouraki, and begged him to help him get up the injured man. He having replied inso-Lately, Police Commissioner Ini drew up minutes.

While a Frenchman and an Arab, improvided a stretcher and carried to the hospital Pital, the imprudent young man, the commissioner reported the rudeness to the justice of the peace. of Chouraki. This magistrate having informed the Jew that he would give following the official report from the commissioner, he replied in a tone arrogant :

— We'll see about that!

A few days later, the Little Lantern, day- Kanoui's nal, reversed the roles and de- ordered the departure of the two magistrates, who had been guilty of insults and abuse of power, etc. |

To this fantastic accusation, the Franc The speaker, in moderate language, replied, by relating the facts, and highlighting the odious of Chouraki's conduct, which, at the de- a magistrate's request to lend assistance to a The seriously injured man had responded by insults.

The Beacon did not retaliate. That did not the case of the Jewish clique, which addressed di- directly to Kanoui,

For a long time, the police commissioner of po- Mr. Philippe Albert was not in good standing. of holiness in the camp of Israel. He gave them had played such nasty tricks, just think: rummaging behind the counters to grab False weights! Forcing owners to have cabinets in the houses and keep them clean!... prevent prostitution of Unauthorized Jews!... fines against Unlicensed merchants! etc! Such a person

The official was bothering them; he had to disappear.
traitor.

Then we saw the King of the Jews, Kanoui, decorated for his brilliant actions on the battlefields of the ballot box, arriver in grand style in Ain-Temouchent.
Having gathered his fellow believers, he...
said:

— Your coumissaire di poulice, cit oune you scoundrel, you wanted to ruin everything by the trial-verbal; oune jor i li sizira vot femmes y vos children. I'm tense with Dinaigre!, li prifi, ber cassi cit mauvés Francès, y li joge

y fotira li camp di Témochent ; mi, il y becare of fire one general clamor. Cit
Mr. who was with me, went to the synagogue.
gogue ber crivi tot li cclamations of yours.
11 y besoin di voir tos ceux qui l'ont iti condamned, ber this rascal of Lagarde. A prisant, - nor make a noise, we are going to the synagogue gogue ber crivi.

Complaint after complaint was then filed.
to the judicial and administrative authorities;
Several investigations were even ordered.
against these two officials; but, badly-Despite Kanoui's omnipotence, they did not were able to succeed.

We will not dwell on this any further.
This is to Kanoui's credit, because, in the current
From this work, we will often have to revisit to speak out against this despicable character.

In Jewish Algeria, we frequently-

1. When Kanoui speaks of the highest-ranking officials,
He is always trying to assert his superiority.

ment spoke of the adjective used by the Jews towards the French. We believe having to cite facts to support what we we have said; for it seems almost unbelievable that these crawling creatures, which once bathed knew the earth, trodden by the feet of the horses Arabs dare to insult the French who freed them from slavery.

In 1884, a Jew was condemned by the tri-

Algiers correctional court three days from prison for having, in the rue de la Lyre, called the French dirty, cowards, etc. The parquet floor, and all we have to do is rent it of the decision taken in this circumstance, interjeta appeals at least to this judgment by too benign.

The case came before the court on July 17th 1884, and the Juii was sentenced to one month of 'prison.

We would have preferred that this scapegoat from all of Israel received such a severe lesson that she deserved. It would have been a salutary example for the respect that should be shown and for the French justice, and for this name of "Fran-" çais » that all the Judaizers of France and Algerians are unworthy of wearing.

5.

Last June, Jacob Nahon
presented at the police station of the 4th arrondissement-Dissidence in Oran. Driven mad by a excessive absorption of aniseed oil he was making some kind of absurd complaint to Brigadier Martinez, who could not by Therefore, accept it.

Furious, the plaintiff OSEA uttered insults:

"Bunch of ones!" he cried, "filthy ones!"
French !

Naturally, they were going to arrest him when he took to his heels.

Pursued by Agent Pozzo di Borgo and the brigadier, and seeing himself about to be Having reached him, he called the agents assassins and he stirred his dog up against them. The dog obeyed-Sant lunged at Pozzo and bit him lightly-lying on the right cheek.

Nahon was arrested before the French... witnesses to the event, did not give to this scoundrel
the punishment he deserved.

However, it sometimes happens that the Youddis pay dearly for the insults they hurl at sent to our nationals.

On the evening of April 3rd, the Jew Orphi, bribed by a man named Cazenave, the manager of a gambling den in Aumale, had dealt of "a bunch of nags and dirty Frenchmen" Corporals Brousse and Combe, and the two sol-Durieu and Mary.

Enraged, they had struck him with their He was killed with a sword and left for dead on the floor.

The investigation of this case was very labserious. We had to collect three hundred tetestimonies.

On June 17, the four soldiers compawere appearing before the Al- war council ger, as accused of having, in Aumale, killed with sword-bayonet blows, a Jew named Orphi, who had insulted them.

At the audience, the provocation of the Jew was undeniably established.

Mr. Tacconis, in charge of the defense of the inguilty, paying tribute to the loyalty of Mr. Liébert, government commissioner, who had asked for the Council's leniency, condemned the provocation and stated that the the soldiers he was defending had only done their duty by striking down their insulter.

"If a few isolated Israelites," he exclaimed Mr. Tacconis, have a sense of honor that was done to them by creating them French, it is sad to see that we seem to be to be lowered to the level of others, by raising up to us.

The honorable defender, with his great frankness and the authority of his talent, did not had difficulty proving that, in the face of the insult whose corporals and soldiers had been the object, the blades themselves had come out of the sheath.

The first court-martial in Algiers has, at Unanimously, the four defendants were sent to trial.
for the purposes of prevention directed against them.

We can only pay tribute to the impartiality of the officers who were called to make a decision in this matter.

The Jews of Algeria are insolent and provocative.

` cators, but if they are not ten against one,
They are incapable of defending themselves.

We will give one last example of their cowardice.

During the last exercise period of Thirteen days, the Jew Melka from Sidi-bel-Abbès, struck one of his classmates. Brought to the field by order of the colonel, the youddi has rerocketed to fight.

A few days after his release, the Jew Melka received, through the intermediary of the genpolice, notification of an eight-month punishment days in prison, imposed by the general comcommanding the Oran division, with this reason: a hit one of his classmates and refused to beat once on the field.

This punishment must be carried out at the 1st Foreigner ger, from July 12th to 19th.

We applauded this without reservation.
an act of justice. However, we note
It is with regret that these are too many examples.
rare, both civil and military officials silences are at the discretion of the Jews.

If the Jews do not dare to fight in large numbers equal, this is no longer the case when they are several against one. They then become true brutes and disregard the lives of their opponent.

Last June, a funeral
A Jewish man was passing on Bab-Azoun Street. A Frenchman, who was chatting with one of his friends, did not undress
He didn't see the procession passing. He continued-saw his way, escorted by a group of youddis who was getting fatter by the minute and from where insults were directed at him.

Government Square, our youddis, who were there in large numbers, and fell upon him whom they called "the corpse insulter"
and struck him brutally.

This gentleman had to take refuge in the interior laughing over a coffee.

It does not belong to us, docs.
conduct of our fellow citizen, each one being free to act as he chooses, but we observe a once again the threatening attitude of Messrs.
youddis.

Our Jews are always brave, when they are
One hundred to one!

However, one should not believe that the
The cowardice of the native Jews stems from a Weak constitution. We reproduce
In this regard, the opinion of a newspaper from Oran, reported tively to an accident that occurred to a young Jewish.

These youddis are like young cats: nimble and Life is hard. One of our children would die ten times over if he involved the incidents that enliven existence "des porlez madame and des cirez monsieur."

"

Here is what supports what We are moving forward.

Recently, an eight-year-old boy, Salam-ben-Tahar was getting off a station wagon when he slipped and fell under the wheel. The brake, which was in motionment, passed over his body at the height of the poitrine.

A car ran over an eight-year-old child!

Everyone rushed to remove the pieces of the youddi who got up all by himself to the general astonishmentral, refusing treatment because he had No harm done.

If the Jews always back down before a an opponent, sometimes weaker than them,

It's because they value their own skin above all else and that they never want to run. The risks to damage it. For the descendants In Israel, honor and courage mean nothing; Money and power are everything.

In Jewish Algeria, we said that the Jews, who could not get rich any other way- They were going bankrupt one after another.

We do not intend to tell Here, with thousands of bankruptcies, we could to say, of fraudulent bankruptcies, which have been reported to us, but it is our duty to give at least one example.

We're going to take a Jew allied with a influential senator from Algeria.

Lévy, a former banker in Oran, made deir bankrupt times: the first dates back to 1873 or 1874, the second one is very recent.

We will not discuss the number of considerable of settlers and merchants ruiborn because of the character, the list would be long- and we would reopen wounds that are far from healed! We will quote However, one of his victims, who have:

known and highly regarded by many people from Oran.

Mr. Sazie had placed almost all of his fortune, approximately 80,000 francs, in the Mayhis Lévy. Upon learning of the bankruptcy of his banker, this unfortunate man saw himself completely Menstruated. Not feeling brave, after having lived in comfort, to struggle against poverty, and, unable, moreover, to continue his business without money grains, he decided to end his life.

One day, he left Oran and headed towards a fir wood, called the Planter, and there, It blew his brains out.

The news of his death did not surprise anyone.
it rings. We knew what situation the put the loss of his money deposited in the bank-that, and we anticipated his determination.

"It is quite difficult to specify what the Jews take advantage of every bankruptcy, but we know
...that it's a way for them to get rich.

What we can say for certain is that shortly after his first bankruptcy, Lévy married his daughter to Mr. Oudas, a professor at the chair of Arabic in Paris, and a few indiscreet details claimed that he gave her 50,000 francs

dot. |
His other daughter is married to Mr. Jacques.
son of the senator from Oran.

We chose Lévy as an example because he was one of the most influential Jews of Oran, and furthermore because these two gen-
These are two prominent figures. Lesban-Jewish highwaymen are so numerous that one cannot may only have an embarrassment of riches.

Just recently in Constantine, the Sfar the Jew was gaining ground abroad, leaving behind a considerable liability.

The investigation established that Sfar had made a fraudulent bankruptcy.

Yet another one, to whom the little goumirce has successful !

We will point out, in concluding this chapter-the process used by some ban-quiers to ruin French merchants
çais. |

These discounters spy on their victims, and the day when, in order to meet a payment Importantly, they bring their values, we

They were refused the funds at the last minute.
Unable to pay, they lose their credit.
This is the beginning of their downfall.

Through all the examples we have just given to quote, our readers can convince themselves that today, Arabs and French, are completely at the discretion of the Jews of Algeria.

The Jew is a being abhorred by every Algerian.
nothing, and we all know that if they were free men, Arabs or French, would have liked quickly exterminate this cursed race.

Does this mean that our companions-Triots, established in Algeria, are less humane.
hands that we? Certainly not; but They know the Jew and we don't want not to know him.

Our indifference was explained when we were unaware of the cause of the general unrest;
but now that we are initiated

4. It frequently happens that French traders, to whom bankers refuse funds without reason, are forced to sell the goods at rock-bottom prices to Jews that they have in store, in order to avoid prosecution.

to the maneuvers of the Jews, why not mon-will we not, by our attitude, show that we Do we want to be the only masters in our own home?

What French merchant doesn't have to complain about the slowness and the difficulty business? Who is it that keeps repeating con-repeatedly that there is no more money, that the Is credit dead? And yet, if the State wants taking out a loan, we see immediate results - diatementdesmillions, we could even to say billions!

Where did this money come from?

From the Jews' coffers, for they are the Soulg holders of our gold.

All financial companies belongnent to these exploiters, and the naive French who allow themselves to be registered among the administrators ministers are there only as loan-names.

III

CRÉMIEUX AND THE DS NATURALIZATION DECREE

Under this same title, we have presented, in Jewish Algeria, the consequences of decree on the naturalization of native Jews;
we will only deal here with the sad character who was its author, by making to know the methods he used, to thwart the plans of the few French who demanded the repeal of the decree of October 24, 1870.

Of all the men who were part of the Government of National Defence, Cré-
The best was certainly the one who played the role the most harmful for France. The homeland was

For him, it was a meaningless word. He wasn't thinking than to his own interests and those of his race.

Little concerned by our defeats, Crémieux never hesitated, at a simple word from one of his German coreligionists, to hand over The Prussian officers were freed without exchange.
which had fallen into our hands.

Mr. Waddington was a powerful ally for Crémieux, who exclaimed one day in a session of the Alliance Israelite:

“My faith is great in the face of our situation.”
So beautiful today! Ah! Let me report-to attribute all this to such noble, such loyal conduct and so pure that our minister held in Berlin
"Foreign affairs, our Waddington."

Jewish or employed by Jews, Mr. Waddington spared no effort to defend his race or

4. — “As I left the Palais-Bourbon a little while ago, ra-recounted, on September 4th, Beslay senior, the member of the Com-In the offices of the French newspaper, I spotted a cab on the platform and I pushed through the crowd to grab it. But when I reached it; several people had just climbed aboard, and,
Among them, I recognized Crémieux. — Where are you going?
I asked him. — I'm going to the Town Hall to proto proclaim... » { LÉON LAVEDAN, the Frenchman, article from the Fi-(Garo, November 3, 1887.)

to earn his money. He held the hand to the clause of the Treaty of Berlin, which was the death of the Romania.

According to his doctrine, every Jew was a citizen Romanian.

Crémieux had managed to deliver this weak nation to his coreligionists. It is he who Gambetta was responding to Mr. Catardii, Envoy from Romania:

“— I urge your government to complycuter; France will not recognize the independence dependency of your country without you having recognized civil rights for all Jews without distinction.

During his reign, Crémieux attempted to seize, for the benefit of the Jews, all the defenseless nations. He, he said, even prepared the way for the arrival of descendants of Israel,

Whatever they do, they were born Jewish, they Jews will die; in two thousand years they will still be Jewish, and all the decrees of the The world will not change anything about that.

It is for them that we conquered

Algeria, of which they became the lords overlords, without question; and what lords! They, the Jews, that is to say, the most lower, more creeping, more filthy when it comes to their success; what he There are also those more ruthless, more cowardlycruelly, and hideously proud when, their coffers full, they order as masters!

Well! This is to react against this in-demoralizing influence of the Jew, which we pro-let us test with all our might against the decree naturalization, stolen from the French nation
And, to support our protest, we we have the entire population behind us Algeria, without distinction of nationality or of worship, because everyone there had to suffer from the disastrous Jewish interference in our affairs public and private matters, because we all have we felt shame rising in our faces, and that it was a matter of our honor to shake off this shameful, ignoble, unbearable yoke.

Throughout his life, Crémieux had with only one goal: to confiscate the Revolution

French for the benefit of the Jews. As president of the Alliance Israélite Universelle, he urged all his fellow believers to con-to merge with the various peoples they wanted to place under the rule of Israel. This was, at
In his opinion, the only way to destroy what they hated.

Crémieux knew that the Frenchman, proud and courageous during the attack, is still
He is fooled by those who deceive him with promises.
From 1848 to 1851, he had inspired the people a such confidence that he was already announcing the reign of the Messiah. The coup d'état of December 2nd 1851 brought to fruition plans matured in his mind a delay of several years.

In his Memoirs on the Second Empire,
Mr. de Maupas tells us about the process em-bent by Crémieux to get himself imprisoned and thus escape the naive workers, who they believed in the devotion of this Jew.

On the morning of December 2nd, wrote Mr. de Maupas, I received a visit from a very kind woman woman whose husband, a famous lawyer and mountain dweller

On occasion, he had not been arrested. It is against this an omission that Mrs. C... came to protest.

“I am in despair,” she told me; “my house is invaded by the most sinister figures. A swarm of bandits ask my husband to take charge resistance, to provoke a riot; he told them He still preaches patience, but he will be forced to give in. to their obsessions; they will lead him to the barricades and will have him killed. There's only one way for me to to find some peace and quiet, to save the days from my husband, and this means is entirely at your disposal. "Mr. Prefect." And as I seemed to be... I asked to find out what kind of service Ms. C... She wanted to appeal, adding: "Oh! That's good." Simply, Mr. Prefect, have him arrested. I I know very well that you won't hurt him and his abopathetic friends won't at least be able to go to the deardear to Mazas.

But the mountain man had done nothing yet, at that point. hour, to motivate the rigors, so ingeniously dreamed up by Mrs. C..., in an excess of devotionmarital relations. I did not want to resort to that means heroic, which was demanded of me. I only promised I advised my visitor to have her husband closely monitored. I kept my word to him, and I was able to see what I had never doubted that the most me- speeches naçants were often just a debt paid to overly demanding friends, and that in times of danger, one would leave-

He knows the tricky task for fools and scatterbrains
of the party, to those whose job it is to get themselves killed for the greater profit of a few ambitious individuals.

Our Republican lawyer remained within the bounds of reason and traditional doctrines of the revolutionary aristocracy
He enveloped himself in the dignity of party leader,
He gave strong advice, and did not back down from any challenge.
At the extreme of his words, he exhausted himself even more than before.
the platform in protest of love for freedom, for the people, for democracy, but then came a the moment when his eloquence stirred up the agents assigned to monitor him. How could I not have...
I was surprised to receive a report announcing
The arrest of the fiery mountain man! My agents Had they taken him seriously, or, more happily near my subordinates, whom she had not been near me, Had Mrs. C... finally gotten them to lend themselves to... were they succumbing to her cautious solicitude? She was able to sleep-to be at peace; she finally saw the favor she had been granted fulfilled.
she was asking: her husband was behind bars.

We wanted to repeat this anecdote of the former police prefect, already recounted by several writers, to clearly show just-How far can the cowardice of the Jews go? We Indeed, we cannot characterize the conduct of this party leader, who, at the moment of danger, had a warrant for his arrest requested, so as not to being forced to march at the head of these men always ready to sacrifice their lives to do to triumph over their ideas.

If, at the fall of the Empire, this fact had been If he had known, Crémieux might not have been able to proclaim member of the government of National defense, and the Algerians would not have not today to lament the consequences of the famous decree on the naturalization of Jews natives!

People love rousing speeches which seem to be woven from patriotism, but He wants, when circumstances require it, that the speaker be prepared to keep his promises.

Crémieux had managed to avoid the danger, without This risks losing its popularity. Moreover, he presented himself as a victim of the two De-December, and often alluded to the de-his wife's despair when they came to to take it to throw it into the bottom of a dark ca-chot.

Under the Empire, the Jewish lawyer faded into obscurity.
mentally and did not reappear on the surface until when the Republican party, led by Jules Favre, Jules Simon, Glais-Bizoin, Ernest Picard, etc., had become quite powerful,
Thus, after Sedan, he managed to become

put

admit a number of members of the government-National Defence establishment.

“Never the Jew,” wrote Mr. Drumont in Jewish France no longer asserted itself as odious.
indifferent to everything related to the Pa-sorting, more relentlessly preoccupied with himselfeven and of his race, as in the decrees rendered then by Crémieux for the emancipation-tion of Algerian Israelites. »

We explained in Jewish Algeria, how Crémieux, Minister of Justice, had managed to get the decree on naturalization signed realization, long in the making, then that all French people were in mourning, while all minds were preoccupied
the terrible consequences of our fatal crushed by Germany.

We are not afraid to say that this the decree was more likely the work of a Jew than that from a French minister.

Crémieux, who knew the hostility that reigned between the Arabs and the Jews, should to anticipate the unrest it would cause, by choosing such a moment to decree 6.

ee St a

the naturalization of native Jews; but These considerations were of a rather poor quality.
nime importance to this man who had only one goal: to betray France to serve the interests of his cursed race.

Mr. de la Sicotière explained, in his interesting report, which Crémieux had made disappear, before retiring, the main parts of the files that had been given to him trusted, and that nothing could be found of the docements with which were prepared the decrees of October 24th.

The assimilation decree was, as
As we have already said, the determining cause of the Arab uprising. "Hatreds of classes and races, bruised interests, said the Captain Villot, jealousies and resentments, Such were the consequences of this decree

"Unfortunate."

The native Muslims were disgusted.
to see raised to the dignity of French citizens their age-old enemies, people whom they considered cowardly and servile and despicable. "Why then this preference-

mt

"Reference," they said. "Did the Jews have..."
as we shed their blood in Crimea,
In Italy, in Mexico? Do they have ten
"A thousand of their prisoners in Germany?"

Here is what Mr. de Prébois, chief, wrote retired squadron member, former representative of Algeria in 1848:

At the time when a committee, called republican or of defense obtained the mass naturalization of Jews.
that is to say, the least interesting part of the Algerian population, and certainly the most insignificant
From a defense standpoint, the insurrection of Arabs and Kabyles responded to it.

When they learned of the Crémieux decree, quinatura-
The Jews read, their exasperation turned into pro-contempt for the French, who had stooped so low even going so far as to send delegates to the Jews of Bordeaux, to solicit their assimilation into a despised race.
Then the first symptoms of the uprising demonstrated. For those familiar with these indigenous races, proud and belligerent, it is quite obvious that their pride was outraged to see themselves threatened with being su-bordering on the Jews. The French, in their eyes, were-were falling to the level of the Jews.

Thus, naturalized Jews were used for maneuvers. electoral, after having caused us much trouble-Barras, since the day of the conquest, had to to endanger the colony. L'Akhbar, today sold to the Jews, it said in its issue of the 25th no-November 1872:

The naturalization of Jews was one of the causes of the main insurrection, she hurled insults at the facing the Muslim people by proclaiming the supre-the matter of the native Jew on the Arab and on the Kabyle.

What offended the Muslims the most was this was to see the Jews acting as jurors.

A former caïd, Hamoud ben Bourena, ac-actually sheikh of a douar in the commune mixed of the Bibans, often spoke to us of the conducted by his relative Mokrani, Kalifa of Medjana, tearing off her Legion cross of honor', saying that he preferred to mou-rather than tolerate Paf-front made to his race by placing the Israelites above her. When a French officer-çais sent the Crémieux decree to this nobleman

4. Sidi Mohamed hen Ahmed el Mokrani had obtained the officer's cross, by killing with his own hand, in the military from his supporters, the agitator Bou-Barghla.

From the day he learned of the Crémieux Decree, he he no longer wanted to see that Legion of Honour cross, that he was so proud to wear on his burnous during the festivities from Compiègne and Fontainebleau.

has

The Arab chief spat on him and had someone respond that he would never obey a Jew.

To rouse the indigenous populations.
Mokrani waited until peace was concluded.
with Germany. He then sent his cross to General Augereau and announced the insurrection to him
tion. |

Mokrani died a hero at Oued-Zéloum. Not wanting to serve France dishonored and unable to fight a country whom he still loved, he did not hesitate to sacrificeproud of his life, to his honor. Having met a battalion of Zouaves placed on a mame-at a fairly high altitude, he dismounted and climbed saw the coast at the head of his troop, convinced that he was running to certain death. He fell mortally wounded, thus giving a proof of his patriotism, but also of his independence. He had not obeyed the Jews.

To put an end to the insurrection, our generals French politicians had to make promises formal to the Arabs. In the Event, Mr. Aurélien Scholl recounts how he was held this commitment.

When the insurgents were convinced of the futility
In light of their efforts, they accepted the conditions imposed upon them.
posed by the French generals.

These conditions were:

Complete amnesty: aman in exchange for a Immediate submission.

The letters of amnesty signed by the generals
Bonvallet, Lallemand, Augereau and others exist
Again.

An insurgent executed at Rebeval had kept on the letter daman, signed by the French generals çais, and in dying he raised the 'letter above' his head, calling on the public to witness the disloyalty
French.

The promised, signed, and accepted man, the rebels $é-were surrendered, but when they were disarmed and at power of France, the assize courts decided that the generals had exceeded their powers.

Consequently, the surrender was viewed as nothing and the insurgents were condemned Some to death, others to deportation as if they had been captured with weapons in hand.

The journalist is speaking out against this odious Iniquity, this revolting deception, unworthy of the truly French character, and which is a causes of our disrepute in the esteem of the natives.

The Arabs of the 1871 uprising are to the penal colony, in prison or in exile, and will not be never pardoned, because most of these sheikhs, aghas, or bach-aghas, possessed in land or in herds of fortunes constituted

derables, including government agents have seized them and they still hold them at this hour. But if these stolen goods returned
In their country, thieves would be forced to ren-
To hold people accountable, not to justice, which does not exist.
no, but to the robbed owners, including the goods were distributed, the livestock sold owed, and the revenues devoured.

The Government will always oppose it, so much that he will be at the mercy of the Jews, subject to amnesty de Mokrani, Resgui, Ahmed ben Brahim, Brahim ben Chériff and their companions detention.

The decree of October 24, 1870 being only provisionally, the National Assembly was supposed to be called upon to decide on the maintenance or repeal.

On July 24, 1871, the decree of repeal was deposed by Lambrecht, Minister of the Interior exterior.

Mr. de Fourtou, in charge of the report, is circq agreed upon by Crémieux.

The head of the cosmopolitan Jewish community empethe discussion of the decree, at the session of the August 21, 1871, although the urgency had been to-Ordered and obtained.

In the explanatory memorandum (Official of 22 July 1871) we find:

Under the influence of a few useless views to pre-to clarify, the delegation from Tours, through a measure com-completely unrelated to National Defense, decided that the native Israelites of Aleria were de-declared French citizens.

The administration of Algeria not having been con-consulted, the officials responsible for implementation sought to limit and mitigate the consequences of an act they disapproved of; but the insurrection
The Arabs were quick to demonstrate the inadequacy of these palliatives and to bring out all that the
The decree of October 24th had dangerous and imposing aspects. contentious. Its repeal has been strongly demanded.
in this dual capacity, by the general government and the Minister of War.

Further :

During the Arab uprising, the Israelites did not lent themselves to the service with extreme reluctance military. Everyone knows that in Algeria, apart from with very few exceptions, temperament and the customs of the Israelites absolutely refuse to useful incorporation into the ranks of our army, Those who marched, in small numbers, did not wanted to adapt to the ordinary life of a soldier in campaign, on the grounds that their religious law is there opposed.

Their presence, as jurors, in the courts is no less impossible. Besides, the greatest many only hear and speak very little French imperfectly, one must be careful that the Arabs will never patiently suffer from seeing Israelites natives sit among the judges.

The insurrection broke out at the very moment when the Muslim populations saw, towards the end of 1870, the Israelites to act as jurors.

From the electorate's point of view, the disadvantages are no less important: they stem from analogous causes gues to those that were previously noted. On one cannot expect dictated votes from the Israelis either through political considerations, or through lap-assessment of municipal interests, considered in from the point of view of the general population of a common. As has already been said, they form and they will continue to form a separate body; to con-astonishing as if endowed with an existence of their own, and by Consequently, under the influence of 'religious leaders who Those who lead them today will always wear a [redacted].
on the side of all the forces at their disposal.

This situation may not be without serious consequences.

For example: |
The French population in Oran is 8,958.

The Israelite population is 5,653.
In Constantine the French population is PRE EE EE eee 7. 887 —

| The Israelite population is 4,396 —
In Tlemcen the French population is 3,264 —
The Israelite population is 3,185.

It is easy to see that the votes of the Israelites did not disseminating points, like those of the French, the municipal councils may not contain, in fact of advisors with French titles, than indigenous Jewsnes. Alongside these will come, it is true, foreign and Muslim advisors, since the Arabs and foreigners will retain the number of candidates which is assigned to them, and it is not imposit is possible that the French natives see themselves entirely excluded from a French municipal council.

The same result is expected for the advice generals, who control half of the Arab tax, the sole resource of departmental budgets.

BILL

SOLE ARTICLE. — The decree is hereby repealed delivered on October 21, 1870 by the delegation of Tours for the purpose of declaring French citizens çais the indigenous Israelites of Algeria.

As a result of the delay in the discussionSion, Lambrecht had to submit for signature decrees from the President of the Republic from October 7-9, 1871, whose aim was to disappear from the naturalization decree this that there was something abnormal about it.

Article 1 was worded as follows:

The President of the Republic, on the proposition of the Minister of the Interior and of The Civil Governor of Algeria decrees:

ARTICLE 1. — Provisionally and until that it was decided by the National Assemblynational on the maintenance or repeal of the dedecrees of October 24, 1870, will be considered as indigenous people and as such will remain registered on the electoral lists, if they meet the requirements the conditions of civil capacity, the Israelislites born in Algeria before the French occupation Cause or born since that time of parents established in Algeria, at the time when she had produced.

In the October 1871 elections, Crémieux, of which not a single French electoral college had He was elected by his fellow Indian-genes, which he had just made French citizens: We still needed him for the fight. between the draft repeal presented by the minister Minister of the Interior.

A few days before the discussion, LamBrecht died suddenly and was replaced by Mr. Victor Lefranc. The news of this death was a pleasant surprise for the desdescendants of Israel: they were rid of the the only man, having enough prestige at the Chamber, to have the decree of October 24.

When the deliberation came on the agenda, Mr. de Fourtou, rapporteur of the commission, announced that, in the interval of the holidays which had just taken place, the Government had significantly modified the decree of October 24th In October, the commission would examine the new a decree which seemed to him to put a That puts an end to all kinds of discussion.

The matter was therefore definitively closed. and Algeria was abandoned to its unfortunate Spell.

In 1834, several Algerians sent a petition to the Chamber of Deputies, for to demand the repeal of the Crémieux decree. Solidarity, Mr. Marteau's newspaper, which counts, among its collaborators, half-dozen Jews, of whom Henri Tubiana is the the most beautiful ornament, it seemed to say that the city Algiers could no longer rehabilitate itself eyes of the Chamber of Deputies which was going to get a good laugh (sic) while reading of this petition.

In response to the article in Solidarity, we read in the Algerian Radical:

We have no doubt whatsoever about the welcome that will be done in accordance with Algeria's wishes; the decree will not be Reported, that's obvious; but France will know that the Algerian Jews have amassed a dose of hatred which, sooner or later, will explode.

Our MPs will consider this, and we don't think not that there's enough there to pay for some bumps in the road laugh.

We know that the ruling class, which exploits Our beautiful France is endowed with Jews; let them hold in their hands, regardless of the banks, a significant portion of public authorities, and that, as in Algiers, the LR entire press it belongs to them

But it doesn't matter; if we don't succeed Today, the future will prove us right. It's a It's a matter of time.

When the cup is full, when, by their arTheir wickedness and their villainy will have made us furious, when the nation one day feels—what cannot be long in coming — that it has not destroyed the old regime that in order to fall under Jewish oppression, she reVoltera and this revolution will leave far behind She described the demonstration as more noisy than dangerous. Algerians.

Thanks to the naturalization decree, the Jews drown the French element under a flood of water Israelites from all parts of the Amoney.

In 1871, they were the only ones to oppose the amnesty for the Arabs, which had been granted to them put in place by our generals.

Every time this question has been raised Having been elected to the House, the government has the spokesman for the Jews.

During the amnesty debate in 1886, Mr. Thomson declared that it was not possible to free the Arabs, because we were in the impossiability to return the property that one had confiscated,

aa

Mr. Camille Dreyfus, who is nevertheless seeking to position himself as one of the leaders of the Extreme-Left, spoke out forcefully: against the proposal.

The amnesty was rejected, once again. because we couldn't share it The Arabs. 2.

By naturalizing the Piiga Jews, Crébetter knew that alongside Jewish France, he He was going to prepare Jewish Algeria. He was happy. to alienate these brave Arabs, who were fully prepared to serve France.

Then we see the Jews, pulled by us of slavery, where they were kept under Arab domination, a gradual invasion our society, not to assimilate into it, but to remain a separate caste, who wants to dominate. They penetrate everywhere boldly and arrogant; public wealth is spent in their usurious hands, and, as if it were not They're already too numerous, they're vying for elected office. with a threatening success.

Such is the master that our policy sentimentale gave us and for the sole benefit from whom, until now, French blood has sunk on African soil.

Crémieux's two greatest works are undoubtedly, the naturalization decreetion of native Jews, and the constitution of The Universal Israelite Alliance in 1800.

Any Jew can be part of the Covenant in paying an annual membership fee of six francs. It is governed by a central committee, composed of sixty members', and whose The headquarters are in Paris. This committee corresponds directly to... tement with regional or local committees.

The committee members are appointed to

1. The two kings of France and Algeria, Rothschild and Kanoui, are not part of the central committee.

Among the foreign Jews who were part of the committee, we find the Germans Adler, Baerwald, FeilChenfel, Neumann, Gratz, Fuld; the Dutchmen Dunner, Daniels; the Englishman Goldsmith, etc. All nations there are represented.

It was with the help of this universal committee that the Jews... Mr. Kalixt de Wolski has explained in Jewish Russia the Kahal of the Jews of the East;

the Universal Israelite Association ost the Kahal of the Jews of the West, the civilized organization alongside the organization wild and brutal, painted with such vivid detail by the writer Polish, nn DRE | nine years, renewable by thirds every three years, and indefinitely eligible for re-election. Chathat year, they elect a board, composed of a president, two vice-presidents, and a treasurer and a secretary general.

Ten members are all that's needed to form a local committee; regional committees fewwind can be formed wherever there are several local committees.

The local or regional committees transmittent at the central committee and receive the communications on anything that might be of interest to strengthen society.

They generate and collect subscriptions tions and deposit the proceeds into the cash register of the central committee.

The number of members is currently of 30,000. The association's resources are unlimited, although there is only one thousand The lion was brought to the budget. The Alliance, he said- Even Crémieux is not a Franco- alliance Whether she is German or English, she is Jewish; It is universal. That's why it is- That's why she succeeds.

"1

The Israelite Alliance is a power in amidst the other powers; it deals on an equal footing with all states; it poses his ultimatums to the sovereigns who are su-forced to endure the wind.

Before dying, Crémieux, who played a such a harmful role for France, dictated the ins-inscription to be engraved on his tomb, located at Montparnasse cemetery.

A. Isaac Crémieux

PRESIDENT OF THE ISRAELITE ALLIANCE UNIVERSAL

We could have added below:

To the man who handed Algeria over to the Jews.

In his will, Crémieux bequeathed
10,000 francs to the Alliance Israélite Universelle.
He was happy to feed, even after his death, the coffers of the society that wants to govern to conquer the world.

If we do not revolt against the tyranny of the Jews, we will soon see the disciples of Crémieux, affirm loudly

that only the Jews are at home in France and Algeria.

E IV

THE TROULS OF ALGERIA

Our readers have not forgotten the troubles which took place in Algiers in June 1884, but most, misled by the reports fanciful newspapers ignored the true cause.

The French revolted against the Jewish despotism. They proved that they no longer wanted to be fooled by hypocrisy of our leaders, and that on occasion, they would know how to take back by force what had taken it from them by trickery.

These frequent protests from the Arabs and the French are showing what these are Jews naturalized by Crémieux.

THE JEWS IN ALGERIA 491

We demonstrated against the anti-democratic which enlists the almost una- The hatred of the Jews of Algeria.

They shouted, "Down with the Jews!" They published- how well the interested friends of these Jewish memes.

These demonstrations inevitably erupted. spontaneously, and like a cove the poi- French trines had been containing too much for too long a long time.

Everyone felt that they needed to let it all out. that cry. It burst forth, and we are firm-convinced that the unfortunate, absolutely sworn by high-ranking schemers whom we savedRons unmasked, they will remember for a long time of the explosion that forever condemns the systemtheme that tries to relegate us to the role of outcasts.

At their meeting on June 20, some young men of the class of 1883 had appointed the following commission, tasked with organizing a party that was supposed to have taken place before their departure part:

Ch. Belvert, president; Léopold Elie, vice-president

President, Ch. Margeret; Secretary; David Lalouch, treasurer; Douniac, Henry, Cellerié, Natal, Bossan, Stora, Petit and Zermati, associate members.

The commission had summoned them to the town hall all the young men of the class of 1883, on the 27th June at 8:12 a.m., to set the date of the festival and agree on the details.

The French, unhappy with the way whose commission had been formed (the Christianselected by a majority of one or two votes, the Jews (with twenty or thirty votes), supported the split requested by a member, and whatSome proposed that only the Franks French soldiers doing their service in Algeria, were admitted to the committee.

Heated words were exchanged.

The French are cowards! Pigs! French people!

— No Jew as treasurer! Death to the Jews!

These exclamations brought things to a head.
irritation on both sides and a fight began in the town hall itself
where everything was smashed and ransacked.

The Jews, almost all of whom carried walking sticks, some of them, weighed down, threatened the Frenchmen who stood on guard. The battles
Those engaged inside continued outside.

A Christian, MLC, who was asked details, he abruptly turned away from these words: "Dirty French!" and administered a energetic rap to the author of these words.

The fight, however, was unequal. No longer named The Israelites, carrying walking sticks, were... were wearing, when the police, that we had gone to seek, arrived on the scene.

Messrs. S. and B., from the balcony of the club, above the Bordeaux café, seeing three Jews attacking a Frenchman, descended-They rushed back and managed to stop the aggressors and to hand them over to the officers who escorted them to the station.

Several French people, informed of this which was happening, they then got involved, and A hunt began on both sides.

It is worth noting that the Jews, who had were the aggressors, even though they were the most They were numerous, retreated, and-they saw the most influential among them, they asked-to provide aid and protection to the authorities.

Some fighters having taken refuge at At the Bourse café, the struggle continued in the in-inside the establishment; punches and blows of the cane from raining down heavily like Hail, glasses and carafes flying everywhere! The situation was about to become serious. The Arabs, Having been warned of what was happening, they arrived from all points of the city, showing dis-threatening positions. The presence of agents aided by a few willing soldiers, prevented this skirmish from escalating into bloody brawl.

In the fight, there were some young people people seriously injured.

A Frenchman, ML, had his right hand at half cut off; another, MD, received a cast with a weighted rod.

The excitement continued for more for an hour, and discussions, always lively events took place in the groups on the Government Square and along the boulevard var of the Republic.

= At one point, it was possible to estimate at more than two a thousand the number of actors and spectators of this skirmish.

A very honorable citizen proposed to ter-to undermine these street demonstrations and summon all independent French citizens to large public meetings in the-what measures would be taken so that satisfaction might be given.

These words were applauded, and as the crowd, as it withdrew, carried in triumph the one who had just spoken them, she was suddenly and cowardly charged by a a troop that emerged from Juba Street.

Several people were affected by bayonet wounds, others mistreated, brutalized.

From the crowd, there was no
had provoked, and, on the side of the troupe, None of the legally required summonses had been done.

This is how the authorities, in order to give satisfaction to the Jews, have, through intervention-assembly of the armed forces and the deployment of joys

er

the almost grotesque nature of the public force, prolonged agitation rather than surface agitation
It was a serious matter at its core. But the prefect needed it.
Firbach's little production, and to Mr. Tirman his days in June.

The next day, several French people, who had not taken part in the fight of the the day before, they went to Government Square to protest against the provocative attitude of the administration. They walked through the streets from the Prefecture district, singing the
They sang the Marseillaise and shouted, "Down with the Jews!"

Having arrived on Bab-el-Oued street, they... they stopped in front of the shop of the Jew Cohen, Hardware store owner by trade, usurer by nature,
and, after exchanging some violent words

In other words, they invaded the shop and smashed the storefront. Some damage was also done.
ment committed in Michel's store
Fassina. |

Around 4 o'clock, the band, growing larger by each-that instant, he went to Traversière Street near the prefecture. As she passed by-in front of the small Synagogue, located in this street, a few Jews, from the top of a terrace, they rained hail down on the demonstrators of stones, bricks and all sorts of ustensiles. It was thanks to the energetic attitude misfortunes were inflicted by certain agents avoided. The police hired the Jewish shopkeepers to close their shops; she also invited them-they were told not to leave their homes.

At the request of the members of the Consis-Tirman summoned the prefect to his home.
Aaron Firbach, and the Attorney General Pompeii, to reach an agreement with them on the orderly measures to be taken to protect the Jews. He also asked the advisors natives to use their influence to calm the spirits.

The troops, who had been confined to barracks,
received orders to leave their quarters.
Everywhere they went, cries of: "Long live "France! Long live the Army!" are mingled with those of: "Down with the Jews!" Despite the pa-fears, despite the cavalry charges, the
The crowd continued to flock around throughout the evening Government Square; a few brawls clashes broke out, arrests were made, but were not maintained.

Finally, around midnight, Pelletier, the commissioner of the police of the 3rd arrondissement, arrived, thanks to his energy and intelligent vigor, to put an end to the riot.

The higher authority, which alone contributed fog to foment unrest, accused the rare independent newspapers in Algiers, to have sought to provoke citizens into each other against the others.

The Little Colonist and the Algerian Radical They were simply doing their duty. They were outraged. outrageous remarks made against French citizens have requested a retraction, and In this they were the echo of all the true Fran- They couldn't, they shouldn't not to hide the truth from their fellow citizens.

Moreover, seeing that the demonstrations took on an alarming character, they rained down early efforts were made to alleviate the causes of irritation latent rather than provoking them.

Everything was about to be over, and then everything The situation worsened as a result of the provocative attitude.

unprecedented, military authorities and certain-certain civil authorities, encroaching, despite the law, on the rights of the municipal authority, and disregarding all the orders she had given and that she alone had power to give.

The most serious incident, as we are told by The Algerian Radical.

On June 30, 1881, at 11:50 PM, a colonel of the French gendarmerie, in defiance of the rights of the-municipal gate, solely responsible for security and public order, a gendarmerie colonel French, commanding soldiers, drunk or mad (we we appeal to Mr. Guillemin, mayor of Algiers, to our advisors, to the magistrates grouped around them), a gave the order to his soldiers to charge, without there being provocation and without warning, directed at the elite of the popu-

French representation in Algiers, gathered around its only rePresenters!

Blood has been shed.

Harmless, middle-aged citizens and hodecent people were jostled and mistreated. struck with bayonets. The representatives-representatives of the authority, mayor, municipal councilors chiefs, police commissioners, wearing their belts their scarves, by chance, escaped these hideous and nameless charges.

---

[1] The deputies and senators of Algeria, telegraphicmentally warned, imitated Conrart's cautious silence.

“It is necessary,” added the Algerian Radical, “that Let the light come to light and let us be told to whom infalls under the responsibility for such orders, if it is up to the prefect, a former official of the Emworse, to the divisional general or the governor Algerian civilian, Tirman? We must finally...

tell us, if, for three days, Algeria is it illegal?

"Let's remain within the law, and if we If we want to, let's protest. "Calmly, moderately, wisely."

This is the language of an independent Frenchman. dant, presenting the facts clearly and without emphasis.

As for the order given to the colonel of gendarmerie, it emanated from the Jews and had followed the regular channel.

Where was the Governor General during the A fight?

"To Mustapha," some said, "at the palace." Bruce, the others asserted. What each

He noted that the Governor had given orders, but he did not appear.

His dignity, his prestige, forbade him to show himself, his supporters said.

Dignity, prestige! Come on! Words hollow, idiotic words that mean nothing, while tranquility and se- security of a city, while the population Annoyed, she is about to come to blows with the troupe.

By not coming to the position that was assigned to him Assigned, Tirman failed in all his duties.

He is also guilty of not having, when the members of the Consistory are went to address their complaint to him, demanded of them, before hearing them, a protest energetic was signed against the Jews who had insulted the French.

Also guilty are the prefect and the prosecutor General anger, all authorities guilty civilians!

Men who have neither courage nor blood-cold, nor energy at the moment of danger, the men who, without protest, allow im-

men
who, safe from bayonets, protect lin-
The insulter against the insulted is unworthy of to preside over the destinies of a city. May these men withdraw of their own accord, before that they not be forced to withdraw!

We are happy, however, to congratulate-to quote the mayor of Algiers regarding energy, which he has demonstrated this during the night of June 29-30.

While the gendarmerie colonel, at the
at the head of his squadron or squadrons, charged the
In the midst of the population, Mr. Guillemin stepped forward and, at in the name of the law, protested against this abuse of military authority.

The colonel then took the liberty of replying to the chief magistrate of Algiers:

— Mayor of Algiers that you are, I I will charge you.

"Well, charge!" replied the mayor.
Load! And at the same time he was discovering Her breasts.

The crowd protested vigorously against this regime of the sword.

"It's not legal," people were saying from all sides.

and we want to know who donated to this colony-
What about similar orders?

Why this officer, about whom we know nothing?
Let's describe the conduct, hasn't it been revoked?

The most devoted protector of the Jews pen-during the riot, it was, without question, the gentleman Allaman, known as Allan, editor of La Vigie Algerian woman, known in Algiers by the pseudonym-name of the man with the bellows.

He experienced it himself, during the troubles, the effect of the advice he gave and insults that he wrongfully and deliberately distributed verses in his journal.

He came to the square after publishing an aran article as treacherous as it is insulting against a a large number of young people who had expressed their sympathy for the Radi-Mr. Allan was recognized and questioned.
booed and called an insulter, a coward, and sold to the Jews.

Surrounded by a crowd in which there is he certainly didn't have the thugs he had wanted to qualify, he pulled out a revolver

his pocket. This gesture was the signal for an attack-Sion, from which a brave officer saved him from the consequences.

by defending him, and by throwing himself into the fray before blows.

It is regrettable that the officer was assaulted.
by doing his duty.

As for Allan, who makes a profession of insult-to slander and defame all his opponents and all his colleagues without ever granting a reparation loyal man-to-man ration and which con-in his journal, he said he was going to "beat the "Insulters," didn't he get what he deserved?

In concert with some of his con-brothers sold to the Jews, the editor of the Vigie tried to insinuate that the disturbances were due to the religious question. It was necessary really have no other argument in his bag to try and use That one.

They knew perfectly well, those vile scribblers of paper, that of this question, our popu-
The French state was mocking at least as much than their long and insulting tirades,
They knew it, but since they hadn't

Nothing more to say, they mounted this Dada and filled their columns.

If they had been less dishonest, they would have-
as they would have said with independent publicists:

The arrogance, the pride of the Jews to our
In this regard, their gradual invasion of all jobs at our law firm, in our trading houses, in our administrations and, in short, in all the places where wages are at the mercy of a boss, these are the grievances that, for a long time

The contents, analyzed, have finally burst forth.

If they hadn't been sold, they would have added that the Jew, playing in all the companies the role of rodent worm, it was necessary to remove it.

The lesson Allan received had undoubtedly was insufficient, because, the very next day, the Algerian Watchdog boldly returned to the "beating", and the stick, while mounting very moderate towards those who had beaten, he tried a clumsy diversion insulting towards several people and no-especially against Mr. Legrand Jr., of whom he stated that he had received the witnesses… in the putting them out.

At six o'clock, in the middle of Governor Square-nement, the certified insulter, counting on the protection of the police, had come prome-to tone down his provocative cynicism.

He was approached by Mr. Legrand de Prébois, father - of the young Legrand, targeted by the article of the Lookout, who gave him a pair of bellows by challenging him to accept a duel.

Allaman, said Allan, having replied that he "He wouldn't fight," Mr. Legrand exclaimed.

"I know that you are only acting for the sake of the-gent; well! I offer a thousand francs for "Pay the right to have your skin pierced."

The gathering and the excitement caused by this the incident had not yet been resolved Mr. Legrand Jr., who had responded to the insultes de la Vigie by sending witnesses, which remained unsuccessful, he in turn intervened to slap Allan. He wanted to defend himself with blows from his cane, but his aggression-Sister seized the cane and struck him with it.

several times, | |

A few moments later, a protester from two days prior came and slapped Allan, in him
saying: | | |

— That's all for the insults you've been hurling at us have thrown into your journal. It will be every day like this as long as you don't will not have withdrawn.

It was then that the entire population, gathered in the square, they booed the director of the Watchtower, driven, pushed by a few people, protected by Messrs. de Fonvielle and Lindekaert, commissioners of police, who pushed him towards a cab, where-He went up alone to escape this news beating that threatened to become more worse than the first one.

However, here is a protégé of Mr. Tirman.

This popular execution was an act of sovereign justice.

Allan was both one of the promoters of the unrest, and the insulter of our young compatriots; also the anger of the crowd did they calm down almost suddenly in the city?

she regained her usual calm, as soon as the 8.

A Jewish employee would have been thrown into the cab!

The evening ended with jokes. about the Vigie and its director.

In the square, one hundred and fifty young people gathered around a basin, already named the named after Allan Basin, and they dove into it a few issues of La Vigie, with a goodpaper man depicted grotesquely the character. Some, having displayed on the algae of the bay, an issue of Radical, he was immediately covered by flowers amidst applause the crowd.

The group was so joyful and harmlesssif, which the police deemed unnecessary to intervene.

This cheerfulness became contagious and the ma- The celebration ended with an immense conguaranteed bursts of laughter.

It is worth noting that the Arabs — including the enduring hatred against Jews has always was obvious — have generally retained, during the period of the disturbances, an attitude reserved and kept themselves apart from all demonstration.

In a speech delivered to the mosquays of the rue de la Marine, the Muphtis Maleki and Hanefi rites engaged their coreligionists to be retained, throughout the duration of the disorder, a correct attitude.

One of them ended with this sentence, reproled by the Little Colonist.

— Besides, the day hasn't arrived yet.

From the very beginning of the riot, the Jews of Oran, known for their fanaticism, excited by Kanoui, they sent a delegation tion in Algiers, with the aim, it was said, of engaging the Jews of this city in the resistance against the movement.

The delegates provoked, at the Consistory Israelite, a meeting which was attended the prominent Jewish figures of Algiers, and who was chaired by Kanoui.

The meeting decided that the Jews of Algiers would send their families, old men and women and children, inside, after which the able-bodied men would meet alone in a district that would be designated laterment. |

Some newspapers, including Le Petit Colon, they claimed at the time that the panic was such in the Israeli camp, that, during the session, one of the meeting members proposed to "place themselves under the protection" English !"

Kanouiï denied this in the newspapers.
Jews, but we know what the Denials from this Rothschild of Oran!

Although he arrived in Algiers before the unrest, in order to save the Jews of Oran, tofollowed up for issuing counterfeit currency, Kanoui was certainly the instigator of the orders given by the authorities.

We cannot blame too severely the conduct of certain newspapers, such as Akhbar, the Algerian Monitor, which, for supporting the Jews, claimed that Messrs. MarChal and Pressecq-Rolland, directors of the Petit Colon and Radical, alone had prepared this attempted revolt of the French against the Jews. It was, for these men sold to Firbach, Kanoui and C", an inexcusable crime to unmask the Jews.

cm E

Here is what Akhbar said, in its issue number of July 1, 1884: oo

The persistent insinuations of the Little Colonist and The Radicals have finally produced their results; it was It was impossible for it to be otherwise.

These two newspapers did not act with impunity. have insulted and slandered the Jews, and that they hear them subjected to public animadversion.

By constantly talking, always in the same way, they have overexcited a few crazy heads and at the first An inevitable conflict was bound to arise produce. If anything is going to surprise us, this It is not that any disorder occurred; it is at On the contrary, they may not have been more serious, because the The groundwork had been laid long ago.

Fortunately, the Radical and the Little Colonist did not no credit is given to the healthy segment of the population. We were able to see in recent days who their followers were, And this is not to their credit: apart from what-young people, imprudent and frivolous, the crowd of: The troublemakers consisted only of foreigners and of Arabs belonging to the least enlightened classes company representatives. There were also, in the crowd, disreputable individuals, pimps, outcasts of all kinds, in the midst of which the drafting of the Radical was naturally positioned. She was She felt right at home there, and she wasn't wrong. We can So to say that it is thanks to them that we had the pain at seeing the ridiculous spectacle continue and a lamentable situation that has unfolded before our eyes since forty-eight hours.

As we were saying earlier, the field was so well prepared that it only took a spark to to set the powder keg alight.

The recklessness of some young conscripts was that spark.

They wanted to exclude Jews from a committee where they had the right to appear just like the other citizens; a heated discussion ensued, she This was followed by a minor scuffle. That's the starting point.

According to you, de Fonvielle, these are These French people, who don't find themselves disruptive, are the ones who don't find...
It's not natural to see Jews insulting and stealing French people?

You do not admit that publicists retain their independence, while the Jews want to buy them with the gold stolen from your nationals and to the Arabs?

It matters little to you that all the fortune, private or public, passes between the
The hands of the Jews, if you are paid!

And you claim to be honest, you pre-
Tend to love your country!

Come on!

You are more Jewish than the Jews!

Instead of making such long speeches, you should have simply said, as your friend Allan, whom all the protesters-
They were thugs.

Messrs. Pressecq-Rolland and Marchal had reason not to treat as colleagues, men vile enough to become accomplices of our enemies. We thank them, at the name of all the French people of Algeria, for this campaign they waged against the Jews and we ask them for continuity to dance together.

It is now necessary that societies, free of their choice of admission, eliminate all their Jewish members and refuse any ad-Jewish mission, because it is through these societies that the disciples of one hundred percent have implanted in our affairs and that they are par-came, — the height of shame! — to us im-to impose their laws in our elected assemblies, by pleasantly embellishing them with the Abrahams, Jacob, Mordecai, Solomon, Leo, and others

Prominent Jews who make it the most beautiful ornament-
ment.

Therefore, we must exclude them from our societies.

vile so that they are no longer a market foot to honors, to fortune, to good jobs, as they have become fromthen that Jews had slipped into their breasts, Jews who demoralized them; they they will then become what they were, this that they must be: de- institutions democratic relief, schools of fraternity nity.

To achieve this goal, it is necessary that the days-independent nationalists are working towards the union of all French people. Their task will be all the more easier than all our nationals are animated they share the same feelings and that they are all willing to follow the advice of those who have already given them proof of their de-
vow. 0 |

As for the Jewish newspapers and their directors-We have recounted how we have done it.
had done justice!

While we were throwing into the basin, what-what numbers from the Watchtower, the simple reflection from one of the assistants, "Stop, you're going to annoy me!"

"poisoning the fish" clearly illustrates the case that was being done with Allan and his prose.

In France, and especially in Paris, it is not a newspaper that dared to report in what circumstances under which the disturbances had occurred!

Why this silence, when most
Had they been informed of what was happening?

The following telegram was sent to a major Parisian newspaper:

1% July 1884, 2 a.m., No. 682. Paid Response,

Anti-Semitic movement. Franco- demonstration General crisis. Considerable troop deployment. The gendarmerie charged the defenseless French people. bayonets fixed, without legal warnings. Let's ask for support from the Parisian press. Let's count on YOU.

This dispatch went unanswered, and has not never been published.

_ French newspapers, which are the property almost exclusively Jewish, were more heuhappy to give certain passages from the Akhbar or of the Vigie, such as this one:

_“The Jews know they are French and They are not trying to evade the obligations. the obligations that this title imposes on them.” (Akhbar, July 4, 1884.)

They even recited certain lines and in were almost able to conclude that the AlgeriansRiens were wrong not to obey the Jews.

Mr. Laisant, a Republican deputy, had without doubt he himself was deceived by the Jews; because, in an article relating to the troubles of AlGer, he said:

What just happened in Algiers, what happened thereIt might still be abominable tomorrow. Such scenes are unworthy of a civilized, dishonored country. Norantes for the authorities who don't know how to put it a term, dishonorable for France itself, in whose name these acts of barbarie.

The presentation of the facts, in all their truth, will suffice.
as soon as they are sufficiently known, to raise the unanimous disapproval of the French public.

If we are going to start the Saint-Bar- again Thélemy or the Sicilian Vespers, if we do not know not to free ourselves from these vile religious hatreds or of race, if French people can with impunity threatening and hitting innocent people in broad daylight street, we descend into a savage state and we can walk hand in hand with the Kanaks of New-

New Caledonia.

As for the victims of these abominable attacks,
As for the Israelites of Algeria, they have, it seems to us,
ble, a very clear attitude to adopt, in case the attacks that occurred against them, come-
They should happen again. Let them organize themselves, let them Sarment and that they defend themselves, since we doesn't defend them. Let them beat like plaster or Slaughtering like chickens is not an effective way to cace.

If the Zaches who attack them risk their lives,
They might think twice about it.

We are saddened to see some of our colleagues Algerians, in the immediate aftermath of this violence, to address what they call the "Jewish question", etc.
strive to give a political slant to such abominations.

The real question is whether Crémieux has was it right or wrong to grant Jews naturalization?
station!

The question is whether they are worth more or less than their coreligionists in France, more or less than the Catholics of Algeria!

Mr. Laisant concludes as follows:

We therefore engage those who deal with so much of concern for the "Jewish question" to be shown above all and first of all their good advice to Catholics or to the Protestants who behave as they come to behave like the cowardly aggressors of Algiers.

This article from the Radical Republic of July 13, 1884, of which we only quote a few-
These passages prove that the publicists had received orders to deceive the maid trust in their readers. We were supposed to let it be ignored.
to the inhabitants of the Metropolis the true because of the unrest in Algiers!

It is regrettable that we did not have con-birth, in France, of the letter of protest tation, addressed by several Algerians to MP Laisant, in response to his article.

Here is the gist of it:

How could we not have shouted from the top of our lungs?
forces of our consciences that it was not in the name of a religious dogma or even a political principle that the latest demonstrations had taken place; that he

1. We would like to know which instruction
Mr. Laisant obeyed in writing these lines, which have earned the hatred of all Algerians and many others
French ?

We will simply note about this the expression "cowards" repeated several times, which she is aimed primarily at those who sell their pens excessively raise their country.

it was absolutely necessary to see in it only the expression of a righteous indignation and patriotic sentiments of all good French people, offended and irritated by the insulting remarks jokes of all kinds, launched on every occasion, against France, by these French people against their will.

And yet, despite everything, and just when it all seemed over Laisant has long been asserting the entire opposite.

It might be interesting and, above all, not very difficult- It is difficult to find out where the slogan originated and to which emanate from these correspondences, much more Jewish and particular, which are cynically displayed in the columns of certain Parisian newspapers.

And even, without looking too far, perhaps could one in the offices of La Vigie, the newspaper newspapers, finding similar correspondence Dances! A word to the wise!

Without going into the substance of the debate on the issue As Jewish people, we are content today to simply protest. strongly opposed to Laisant's article.

The good faith of the independent Republican deputy was surprised (unless it was bought), this does not There is no doubt about it, otherwise he would have spoken to me, nor to Saint Bartholomew, nor of the Sicilian Vespers.

We tell him loudly and clearly that the population

French, Algerian, and liberal, generous, patriotic tick, is above all free from all belief religious.

These French people, freethinkers above all, have to fight with all their might against these two elements which are essentially the same, sacristy clericalism and synagogue clericalism.

The moon-bound cultists and the other sect are also formidable for the progress of the colony.

How, the French who take their word order in the Vatican, are fought by all the liberators the French, and the radicals, the French rather from Algeria, would be reviled, scorned, by the great independent press, for having wanted to protest with outrage against French smugglers who They openly display their contempt for France to everyone they meet!
Come now! If Citizen Laisant had lived six
Just a month in Algeria, instead of writing this article based on bad-faith correspondence, he was indignant with us all and would have been among the first to protest and demand a review of this act of na-mass turalization of Israelites, which, for the total-
They have acquired nothing from our contact, neither the feeling, neither patriotism nor the dignity of those who are sin-Definitely French!

There you have it, citizen Laisant, a protest.
Quite significant! All the French Algeriansnothing would repeat to you what they wrote to you the protesters.

The unrest in Algiers is the starting point of...

4. This letter of protest was filed in the offices

The Algerian Radical's proposal was approved the very next day.
by more than three hundred French signatories.

THE JEWS IN ALGERIA 451

part of this social revolution which will extend not only to Algeria, but to all France.

Arabs and French from Algeria have re-revolted against the Jews; the future teaches us-
.dra what the French will later do

France!

TIRMAN, FIRBACH, KANOUI AND C'F

By naturalizing the native Israelite, Cre-
He better enthroned the Jew, nothing but the Jew.
that is to say, usury, plunder, corruption tion, the monopoly.

Thanks to the cooperation of our representatives,
The Jew impoverished Algeria through usury, and if An insurrection breaks out, he will know quickly to leave the country and track its safe money for a long time.

How many peoples, ruined by the sectarians of Moses, were forced to revolt to to drive away from them this terrible leech which He always took it and never gave it back!

THE JEWS IN ALGERIA 453

The capital fell into Jewish hands has become a source of intangible wealth. It disappears or only serves to increase this flesh lively, lacking both vitality and noble sentiments, no homeland; this monstrous parasite swells with it. which becomes all the more voracious the more it has grown.

The Jew is today the safe of world.

In France, he dominates us; in Algeria, he It absorbs us. Everywhere it reigns and governs. Russia, Germany, and Austria have seen the danger and have striven to avert it. The people rose up to resist the common enemy, too late! The anti-semiIslam strikes the weak, but cannot atto dye the almighty.

If we are united, if we have consscience of the danger that threatens us, it is perhaps there is still time, in Algeria, to extirby this enormous polyp, which threatens to exhaust to extract all the sap from the colony.

The Arab is now being sucked dry.

marrow, and we do not hesitate to attribute to the 9.

4. THE JEWS IN ALGERIA

Jew, that is to say, to the usurer, most of the crimes committed by the native, both against the people who are against the property.

Hunger is a poor advisor, and the ARabe is hungry. He is hungry, and when our duty He orders us to protect him, we hand him over. bound hand and foot to its plunderers, the Jews, his former slaves, whom he hates and whom he misunderstanding.

The English killed the Indian by dousing him with water.
Fire, we kill the Arab with the Jew, without us to notice that the Jew, his appetite whetted, to-would very well devour us in turn.

This is what they don't want to understand the men charged with defending our interests Rests in Algeria!

All civil servants, since the governorfrom the governor general down to the rural constable, must be the faithful servants of the Jews, and each one is warned, at the time of their nomination nation, whose servility will determine its advancement.

The real leaders of Algeria are Ka-
They are in Oran and the Isaacs in Constantine.

proudly respond to their fellow believers who come to file complaints or their to make complaints: "I will give or-"Dress accordingly in Tirman."

The Algerian press (we are not talking about (from the press sold) often discloses monstrous atrocities committed by the Governor-General, in collusion with the Jews.

To ruin the Arabs more quickly,
They are burdened with taxes, in order to force them to borrowing from the Jews, who thus plunder them from their lands.

In the mixed commune of Guergour, the natives had to pay a sum of 60,000 francs on the war tax of 1871.

The governor-general gave the order to
to bring that money into the coffers of the Treasury. Administrator Chavel decided that, without taking into account the sums previously paid, each indigenous family would pay proportionally to his income. Which What was said was done. But the natives who had

Those who had been released earlier refused to pay.
a second time.

The administrator, armed with the famous pou-disciplinary measures, voted on by the Chamber for a period of six years, had the arrest of When they resisted, he had them beaten with sticks and throw in prison. Then he distributed con-sentenced to five days in prison and fifteen francs fine (native status).

Arabs are not the only victims of the bias of the Governor General; this power-a civil servant is always happy to to give the Jews new evidence of his devotion, and this to the detriment of
French. |

We recommend to the public's attention-that, the following document, the flavor of which will appear all the more bitter to the governor Tirman, that he casts a strange light on his way of governing Algeria.

In the commune of Barral, the distribution-
The land allocation was carried out by the sub-prefect.
Dunaigre, former executioner of Mr. Carreja of Morris, former creature of lempiret, as the independent newspapers call himpendants of Algeria.

This distribution was made in violation of the wishes from the municipality and the councillor General of the canton, Mr. Quintenne. Addresses, Protests, deliberations, nothing worked.
Mr. Dunaigre was right, Tirman agreed.
and the commune of Barral was blacklisted.

The municipality having discovered that of many plots of land still remained at domain, demanded, to redress the injustices-The acts committed, the abandonment for his benefit of four hundred hectares of state-owned rocks which cut its communal land in two, and the
in fact eliminate them, if they are detached from them,

The bigwigs in the government took-
They are giving the fly a hard time to this legitimate claim.
and make Tirman sign eight pages of amabi-lists worthy of the bureaucracy that makes up his farmyard°. In short, the brief concludes that there is little almost like this:

“We are looking for fifty million equals”

4. Dunaigre, Kanoui's protégé, is currently pre-fet d'Oran.
2. The Chamber had just refused the credit of 50 million

res. So it is not at the moment when our shallow-minded when it comes to procedure, immense when it comes to devouring — not finds nothing more, which we will give you-land to accommodate your complaints tions, instead of selling them to you for

"Recover your money."

In an extraordinary meeting chaired by Mr. Merle, mayor, on June 29, 1884, the municipal council of Barral protested energetically legally opposed to the sale of said lands.

He said: "That the government's assessments general manager, with regard to the settlers of Barral, were tainted by malice and resfeeling;

"That the governor general, the prefect and the sub-prefects were disrespectful towards of the population of Barral and of the council municipal council of the commune, all of whom have, indiindividually and collectively, took part in protests against the distribution of which he is charged, which protests have had lions requested by Tirman, for the sole purpose of expropray to the Arabs.

the great mistake of irritating the nerves of the upper class administration, more concerned about its rest and of his tranquility than to fill laboriouslysows his task;

"That this attitude of the senior administrationtranslation is essentially a retrograde work and anti-colonial;

"That the senior administration demonstrates from a profound ignorance, by tracing back in 1857 the creation of Barral, which is effectivemovement of 1848, and wishes, in the interest public, that the colony be governed in the future by men somewhat less inclined to anachronism and the sweet idleness.

The Barral municipal council has work, in this circumstance, of justi-Algerian cer and masterfully avenged the former centers of criminal abandonment to which the senior administration has con-damned.

This deliberation, reproduced by the newspapers... independent states of Algeria, had a importance of which we do not realize readers in France. We encourage them to re-see in Jewish Algeria, the chapter relating to to colonization. They will see how we had to proceed with the distribution of land state-owned properties in the centers created by the Europeans.

Mr. Tirman's sole purpose is to deliver... to give Algeria entirely to the Jews, in the hope no doubt as a reward; also not to re-Does he back down from anything when it comes to his-
to satisfy the greed of his protégés!

Our readers have not forgotten the Tir- project man-Waldeck-Kanouï, which aimed at nothing less than the outright expropriation of Arabs for the benefit of the Jews.

Tirman made the trip from Paris to support the vote for the fifty million requested.

The Jews could not plunder the Ara-bes without allocating each person a small amount of compensation nity. Now, if the governor had obtained the fifty million requested, the major part of it would have been used to replenish the coffers of the secret funds. With the rest, we would have compensatednisé les expropriés.

This calculator was very skillful because, after having

The Arabs were ruined; they would have been merciless.
'They were expelled from Algeria'. Unfortunately the Chamber, before understanding the consequences by his vote, refused the credit requested by Mr. Tirman.

We hadn't waited for the discussion of the project to begin expropriations.
In the departments of Oran and Cons-Auntie, we had already expropriated 7,896 hectares tares, having a value of 477,164 francs.

To give his constituents a false impression, Tirman needed strong support through the press. But it was with the money itself victims for whom the services of certain journalists.

In France, we complain about the funds secrets, we protest vigorously con-between this maintenance of certain leaves, which, ac-receiving monthly dividends from the government

4. The Arabs, being frugal by nature, live as well as unhappy on their land. Once expropriated, they would leave in a year or two, into the hands of the Jews, who hold all the cabarets and all the disreputable places in the colony, the a small sum of money that had been given to them, and of which he-
It would be absolutely impossible to make it useful.

government, can claim the title of submitted sheets; what would we then say if

This shameful trafficking was practiced on such a On a much larger scale than in Algeria?

Let's listen to what the Radical has to say on this subject. Algerian: |

"There are notorious men in Algeria- harmful individuals who have trafficked in their honor nerds, who have trafficked in human life, who played, after the appalling events. from 1871, roles that should have to make disappear forever and which, currently- supported by secret government funds nement, snatch the upper hand and r- tooth every day at Tirman's where they are the official penholders.

Who in Paris is unfamiliar with the conduct of Plan- former provisional administrator of the 20th arrondissement dissement, the one who provided so many victims to the vengeance of Versailles, — and that one in New Caledonia, he called the flesh seller human, — that the sinister bomber of Paris was disgusted by it, as recalled recently our colleague from L'Intransigeant.

"This is the man who is today the Benjamin de Tirman and directs under the name Arthur de Fonvielle's principal organ of this governor-general, bribed, and with large fresh; this lunatic, this withered, this former policeman of the Bloody Week, as our valiant colleague, is today an oil defender through which the government obtains its support.

Mr. Arthur de Fonvielle has not forgotten his role of informer. During the Al- troubles to take a young man, indignant at his conduct, stepped forward and, looking him straight in the face, said:

— You scoundrel, you deserve that I Spit in the face!

The editor-in-chief of Akhbar, instinct- He turned sharply towards a police officer, and, pointing to the young man:

— Stop him.

To properly portray this defender of Jews, we are reproducing an article from Mr. Lapeyre, of the Algerian Radical Party.

Together with his friend Allan, from the Lookout _ Algerian, de Fonvielle accused the Radical Algerian for improperly possessing 200 francs, from a subscription made in favor miners from Anzin. We believe it is useless to say that all subscribers have protested vigorously against this slander.

Dumpster

Mr. Lapeyre replied:

"The filthy thing that displays its in the Akhbar salaried prose, has "drunk with shame" and resumes its vomitorium — we have named the che- industry leader who goes by the name of de Fonvielle.

"This despicable man, whose entire existence..." It was a long-running scam, and he swindled even the name he bears — this handsome gentleman They call us... swindlers! This pearl has curled up close to the Poissy power plant, with friends and accomplices, Clément Duvernois and Caperon, and the memory of the subscriptions pocketed and other Constantine delights is not Not yet erased!

"He likes the word, he licks it and the chews, like a ruminant does its food.

"The police officer of the bloody week, the informer of 1871, crushed, despised under this shame, has the cynicism — the stupidity — of to talk about "relations with the lower police"! Would he have more of a taste for the high life?

"Ugh!!!1"

"The abject, both public and private, so well known by his brothel and pornography shop, we made swim in its waters and collaborate in the Bavarde, an organ in her image and according to her heart — vile cynic!

"That lout, that glutton, who feasts on secret funds, gorging itself on the largesse of traffickers and electoral schemers, we He calls it a drunkard... old joker! The funny guy, who retreats and flees under the threat of the shūti- - ment, like a whipped dog, takes its He poses and grimaces, but no longer fights: — “He "a burden of souls!" He thus becomes a belt and safety shell... So it's the houssine that you need, wretch, to reject you to the kennel?

"We'll take it."

"Well, that's the stick that's right for this."
- valet. With a funny fellow who lives only by experimenting decent, shameful wages, selling his pen

Who pays for it, with this resident of the funds secrets, now sold to the insulters of French name, that is to say to the Jews, with the informer, the vile scoundrel, organizing the sub-rice fields of 1871, delivering and having the shot Defeated... we're not fighting anymore!

"We'll give it a good thrashing!"

This article gives an idea of the contempt one has for it.
professed for these individuals, who had served as a stepping stone for the Jews.

Despite his cowardice, which is proverbial in Algeria, Arthur de Fonvielle' had to, in order not to be denied, send, his witnesses to the author of the ar-Article. The editor of Akhbar, who does not continue-the Jew's trick in a duel, was wounded by his opponent.

The minutes of the meeting ended...

4. Since that time, Arthur de Fonvielle has refused to respond to the numerous provocations that he has addressed to certain French people from Algeria.

Most recently, Mr. Voinot, fire captain at Algiers, having given this fellow the lesson he deserved, has was prosecuted in correctional court for assault and battery on the person of the director of Akhbar.

a —— ——e

was born with these words, relating to the two adverssaires: "who touched hands."

Mr. Lapeyre wrote on this subject:

"To put an end to the ambiguity that they could-would give rise to, I owe to our poli- friends ticks to say that by giving in on this point, to at the request and insistence of the witnesses, It's simply a matter of dealing with a wounded opponent.
as I stated on the field, that I touched the hand, while keeping in-third, after as before the meeting, my feelings and my opinions about the man policy and its actions.

Mr. Lapeyre wanted to warn himself against the baseness of his opponent, who-would have come crawling back to the one who had depicted it so clearly. He wanted that The Algerians remained firmly convinced, as he had written, that de Fonvielle ap-belonged to this category of deranged individuals who, condemned by honest people, does not They live only for exploits. He wanted people to know
In which class of society did Tirman choose?
he left his servants.

As for Allan, said Allaman, we have I've already explained what this vile scoundrel was.
of which the entire population of Algiers had made justice during the unrest. Executed, blown to bits, beaten to the applause of everyone, he no longer had the right to speak.

Slander is his only weapon, but during-that the Algerian Radical would talk to him about his flights at customs, from its small detwisting of intimate letters and blackmail towards one of his victims, MH Legoff, and many other skills of the same ca-Free, he shines by his silence. To the attacks

Mr. Lapeyre had simply replied to Allan:
“We will continue to let honest, in-
The chief director of the Algerian Watchtower is... baller until the day we can the meet on this public road where he doesn't dare no longer circulating, probably for fear of re-to receive one of those kicks somewhere, which he accepts without a murmur.

Alongside these two publicists, who are a Shame on the corporation, we will place the managing director of Le Petit Algérien, Waille Marial, to whom his colleagues gave the title of "La Chicanette". Its name indicates sufficiently its origin so that we we need not insist on the role that it plays, both in relation to his coreligionists than with the authorities. This Jew who sees the-animosity that exists between the French and his vile race, keeps repeating that the league Algerians against loan sharks will not succeed nothing but a contrived agitation.

Perhaps — but even a factice, if we did not have to deplore and condemn certain-certain acts of violence are sometimes welcomed to remain silent, if only to lower the arrogance insolent behavior from our new compatriots!

The Gazette of Algeria is also a a powerful organ for the Jews. Its director, Henri Tubiana wrote in 1884: "If you Drive the Israelites out of Algiers, you will drive-Experience the life of the city. Algiers would become a A dead city. Let's not forget that everywhere where He had Israelites, and the cities prospered.
Let's be a little tolerant, for goodness' sake!

A simple passage shows what the newspaper is.
10

ES EE a

Anne, me SR nt

me ms

However, there would be a curious connection
The best thing to do would be to simply publish the nomenclature of all bankruptcies, prononcreated in recent years by the tribestrade figures of Algeria.

Among the other Jewish newspapers of our colony, we will mention Solidarity, the Depeche, the Monitor of Algeria, the Fanal of Oran, Kanoui's organ, the Independent of Constantinetine, organ of the Isaac family.

The purpose of all these sheets is to supportto identify senior officials whose task consists of promoting the exploitation of Jews.
To the various attacks by independent newspapers In response, they issue a denial, in order to to leave a certain doubt in the estaken from their readers.

We ask them to no longer to be duped by the accomplices of our enemies, they must understand that specific facts
something other than a simple opposition is needed. negation.

Regarding Firbach transfers, by for example, which has received a lot of attention, the Jewish newspapers have generally kept a prudent silence.

Mr. Aaron Firbach, Prefect of Algiers, in the in order to increase its secret funds, refused to pay several assistants who had tra-stayed in his offices for ten months.

Around the same time, various correspondents posed some questions to the authorities barrassantes, regarding certain funds including Messrs. Tirman or Firbach were holders of:
What became of the fifteen hundred thousand francs allocated to teachers in Algeria, by the Minister of Public Instruction?

Were they deposited into the municipal coffers?
pale? Were they diverted from their intended destination?
tion to be used in a more Were they useful? Or have they been lost?

- Due to the silence imposed by the day-
Jewish nationals to these specific questions, the Radi-Algerian cal a, Under the title Transfers Fir-Bach, renewed in several issues request from those concerned:

1° "When January of La Motte d'Algérie,
In other words, Prefect Aaron Firbach is dis-

will he decide to order the few hundred tens of francs that have been owed for a long time months to unfortunate auxiliaries and who have is subject to Transfers in favor of the privileged

"Legii, circumcised, and others?"

“Let’s tell Aaron that if Tirman, as we are told, approves the vire-the prefect of Algiers' officers, the auxiliaries who have been struggling for many months after - their treatment will go over their heads from the Civil Governor of all Algerias.

"We'll see a little while later, if a prefect, s-Aaron will persist, will stubbornly refuse
. not paying his debts.

"His insane methods will be exposed."
at the highest level, much to the chagrin of all the self-Algerian rites.

"That the prefect makes slanderous reports" nieux or others, to exonerate himself from his administrative leniency; at the highest levels, we will value them as they deserve; we will will put it in the cabinet and we will rid Algiers of its harmful presence.

3° "You will dance, To my good friend, not like in your early days, when you were doing the pretty heart in the salons of Compiègne, to have Your Incompetence appointed sub-prefect.

"Today, you will dance, but in the vulgar courtroom of a justice of the peace, — and you you will be ordered to pay the costs and expenses again | f
"Aaron, you will dance."

If your employees have not responded, Firbach, that this time it was difficult to deny.
You don't like these brutal truths to-which you cannot retaliate against without fear that your opponents do not throw at certain creates a light that is too dazzling.

If you had been honest, Aaron, you would have would exclaim: "[There are so many Schloumo, of Moses and others like Abraham to satisfy the Pre-"Invoice! Let's make some transfers!"

Moreover, that's where your entire administrative capacity lies.
administrative.

Yes, as Mr. Mar- recently said teau, in the Dépêche, the misery is great in Algiers, the fault lies with MM. Tirman and Fir-

Bach.
10.

Instead of pointing out the problem, Mr. Marteau would It's better to indicate the remedy. He needs to know that all these starving beggars whom we ren-against in Algeria, were attracted there by the false publications by the governor.
Some of our readers were able to see the unofficial statements published, in order of Mr. Tirman, in the Petit Journal and the Bul-Latin for commercial information; it these are large construction sites in operation or up for auction in the three departments.
Nothing is overlooked in this list.
problematic work; the salaries of workers there are fixed at the most fanciful rate-siste and the most enticing.

How to refuse offers from the company

coach Tirman, who promises 8-hour days 9 francs? Unemployed workers are ac-run from all points of the Metropolis, confident in the promises of the governor
neur.

There were indeed a number of chana third were open, but they were already insufficient sants to absorb [local labor] unoccupied. Also, most of the workers ve-naked people of France, lured by the advertisements of The government general has left Algeria.

quickly disillusioned; those who are resvictims of unemployment and poverty, victims, mostly of Mr. Tirman, have become the soldiers of the mobile army.

By trying to make people believe that there was major works to be carried out in Algeria, in voudemonstrating administrative activity,
Mr. Tirman hoped to restore his popularity somewhat tarnished since the Fonta- market
No. He went astray, because not only he was unable to demonstrate his exceptional services, but also he contributed to increasing the midsere. .

This observation by Mr. Marteau has put in light, yet another foolish act — or a trick
— of which Mr. Tirman is the author.

You're laughing, Kanoui, you're laughing too, Isaac, as you read these lines, you laugh yellow. You are happy to see us cons-to test the degree of your power, since we acts only on your orders, but you do not-

5 sr to

you cannot ignore what the effect of this constation.

The Algerians first, then the French-
They will soon prove to you that they are not not puppets that we make dance with a strand of thread.

You, you vile fools, are trying to make people believe to the French people of Metropolitan France that you are devoted to the government of the Republic, while, in your every action, you...
Provide proof to the contrary. You are arrived to defend to your coreligionists to decorate or illuminate for the national holiday
nale.

LeCharivari oranais recounted in this regard,
in a humorous, but true, form:

"The Jews neither displayed flags nor lit up their lights."

"Good heavens! It costs a lot and it pays off!"
So little!

"Ah! If it had been a question of building" a synagogue or to celebrate a Hebrew holiday-
Well, then!... |

"But what about the national holiday?"

"Who is M'sio? I don't know him."

THE JEWS IN ALGERIA 177
qui li fite di nos ôtres. Li Franci y ziti maboles, nos sont pas franci por fire li fite di la France.

» Citi bon por riciboir di bons dipain et di Kashir meat, mi por fire di drapeaus et deg aluminations, quisqui Ci Ça?

"M'sio Crémio y pouis Kénoui y dire rien"
"Do to por ça."

Le Charivari accurately depicts the charactertère of these Frenchified Jews, for whom Ka-Noui is almost a god.

Kanoui, about whom we have quite a long-spoken in Jewish Algeria, is also Coward, he is powerful.

Unable to defend himself against the most a weak opponent, he would thank them if necessary the one who would spit in his face. But he becomes terrible when he can bring his ad-Versaire on the benches of the police correctionnelle. |

Less than a year ago, a journalist d'Oran, named Djian, had, by letter, death threats in Kanoui, in response to an article published in L'Oranais véritable.

Too cowardly to send his witnesses, the
"The grand elector continued Mr. Djian in front of..."
the Oran correctional court, and made him consentenced to six days in prison.

Mr. Djian having appealed this judgment, the case came before the court of Algiers, in the last February.

Mr. Chéronnet, Kanoui's lawyer, after having endowed his client with every virtue, has much has been said about letters written to the latter by certain Ministers, of its uni-Verselle, and concluded by calling on Mr. Djian
The full severity of the Court.

That is precisely the method of the Jews: to abuse of their influence with the magistrates.

Mr. Tacconis, Mr. Djian's lawyer, has given to Kanoui, who is considered very intelligent-gent in business affairs, the lesson of di-the dignity he deserved and which he will not benefit from.
In this regard, we quote the words of the ho-notable lawyer: "By arguing here that he is completely unfamiliar with the writing and the circulation of the newspaper l'Oranais véritable, then that Mr. Perrier has stated twice

a — +

different, and under his legalized signature.
that he is the financial backer, that two other highly honorable Europeans claim also the fact, Kanoui, president of the con-Jewish history of Oran, knight of the Legion Legion of Honour, he lied shamelessly.
"LY!" (Sensation and deep silence).

"Kanoui," added the defender, "calls this affair, his trial, when he would have been
It is fitting for him to let justice take its course.
course, without intervening in this debate which It removes all seriousness by the introduction.
a truly grotesque mission of his res-_ personal feelings and the banality of his:
grudges brought to the stand.

"Death threat! Was there a possibility" execution? Upon receipt of the letter itself, Kanoui locked himself in, padlocked himself, and he se-would have rendered it impalpable if he could have. If one had to measure the damages claimed to the terrors of Kanoui, it would be necessary to con-damn Djian to several hundred thousand francs; if one were to also proportion- to impose the penalty on the president's trances consistory, he should be condemned to the labors "Forced labor for life."

Despite the prosecution's indictment, While ruling in favor of Kanouiï, the Court dismissed the six days in prison imposed on Mr. Djian by the first judges.

Kanoui had a hard time accepting this decision. He would have liked to be able to revoke it immediately- lying to all these advisors, who had not bent over to his orders. Unfortunately, he is requirements, before which a government- The agreement, even if severely compromised, must be reversed.

When an accusation is made against A Jew, Kanoui, is immediately charged to take the necessary steps to stifle f- to do the matter. The president of the consistory is not very concerned about the seriousness of the crime or the offense; he sees only one thing: obedience passive of all French civil servants çais.

Two Jewish merchants from Oran, the brothers Touboul, bought at rock-bottom prices from the Spanish counterfeit coins, which they then passed on to the customers who, in order to pay their acquisitions, were forced to change gold or banknotes.

They had been engaged in this trade for some time. It had been a while since a complaint was filed. to the prosecutor's office by one of their victims.

A search was carried out at the home of the Tou- brothers boul led to the discovery of a quantity con- . An astounding amount of counterfeit money.

Kanoui took numerous steps to prevent prosecution. He surrendered several times near the Attorney General at In Algiers, he wrote to the Minister of Justice, But this was to no avail. Finally, he sought to influence the jurors, and asked some people to come and drop off favor of the accused.

In Jewish Algeria, we had quoted Among the Jews, Mr. Hentschell, president of the Oran Commercial Court. We we knew, however, that he was not of Jewish origin. gine, but he had played such a role in the- to make the Touboul brothers, whom we believed to have to publicly blame him for it.

Why did Mr. Hentschell have it signed?

by all the judges of the commercial court a certificate attesting to the good character of Touboul brothers?

Why, in his deposition before the Assize court, he proclaimed the honorability of people he knew to be despicable?

These are compromises of which a An independent Frenchman must never reguilty!

To the two letters of protest that we we received from Mr. Hentschell, president of the commercial court, and his nephew, we can only reply: "it wap-
They argue that it is up to you to break with the Jews.
and to frankly return to our side.

The transition will be very easy, if we refer to this end of the sentence, all in his honor, moreover, noted in Mr. Hentschell's letter: "To my eyes as in yours, the word "Jew" is the ultimate insult.

At Kanoui's request, Mr. Devès,

4. Jules Ferry, then president of the council, was intercame directly near Devès to persuade him to to fulfill Kanoui's desire.

-e me mem ee D

senator, came to defend the Touboul brothers who, despite his influential plea, were sentenced to forced labor.

Next to Kanoui, another Jew wore a serious harm to French traders of Oran. Witersheim, former director of the
The Bank of Algeria in Oran was opening lines of credit.
unlimited to his coreligionists, while he rarely accepted the values of French traders.

These, unable, due to lack of credit, to do Faced with their deadlines, they were forced, to to obtain the necessary money, to apply to the Jewish moneylenders who demanded mar-Goods under warranty.

There are very few Algerians who have had to complain about this vile individual who was taking advantage of his situation to ruin our nationals.

Thanks to the many services rendered to Jews, his advancement was very rapid.
Initially appointed deputy director of Grédit land and agricultural property of Algeria, in Algiers, Witer-Sheim is now its director.

His successor in Oran, Caménich, was Jewish.

SERRE eo CR a

He also follows in his footsteps. People say so.
even more trouble than Witersheim.
Some rather serious events have come to light to our knowledge, but the traders who victims of this begged us not to to report them for fear of reprisals.

The Isaacs are to Constantine what Kanoui is in Oran. These Jews are both bankers and novelty merchants, but They mainly trade in money.
One of them is married to a Jewish woman.
his own, who currently runs the house.
She is the one who receives the civil servants from the de-department, and dictates to them what they have to do.

At election time, it's at her home
that we will take the watchword.

Seeking to imitate, in Constantine, the
The Rothschild ladies of Paris, she is proud and haughty, and doesn't want anyone to ignore that she is very powerful.

During the 1885 elections, it was Mrs. Isaac, in conjunction with Thomson, who considered doing vote manipulation, which we will discuss later far.

However, Ms. Isaac does not neglect the questions of interest. It is understood to be generally-lying to the administrators to plunder The Arabs.

Upon receipt of the order for these functions-naires, she sells the burnouses for double and three times their value to our unfortunate natives who are forced to pay, and in In compensation, she delivers to her accomplices the uniform (we were going to say the livery) for half or a third of its value.

Isaac unfortunately has a competitor who disputes the title of Grand Elector is Uhry, the general councillor. Between the latter and the Isaac family, there is a certain enmity, which always disappears as soon as the The Jewish question is raised.

Among other influential Jews, we cite-Rons Samuel Aaron, jeweller, who, after Having become wealthy through Jewish methods, he thinks of

4. Administrators frequently make commands They had quite a large number of burnouses for their villages.

then take a profit and never hesitate to do the application of the indigénat to recalcitrant Arabs for pay.

E -

to take the place of the Isaacs. He claims to have sufficiently stripped the French and the Arabs to aspire to the title of Grand Elec- head of the department.

We'll take one example among thousands:

In March 1884, a lady whose Let's not mention the name, as it is currently...
Embarrassed, she gave him the gold watch to clean.
from her husband, and begged the Jew to advance him 50 francs for a few days, considering the guarantee as sufficient. To move forward
For this sum, Aaron demanded the chain and the watch, worth at least three or four hundred francs. The lady, not anticipating the intentions- the Jew's tions, left him the jewels as collateral tie. Since that time, she has never been able to them withdraw, against reimbursement of the sum advances and interests.

Our readers should not be surprised that by employing such methods, this individual Vidu quickly became wealthy.

Wealth not being enough for the Jews, they now aspire to honors.

They think they're so much above the French people that they would all like to wear a a sign of distinction

A fairly recent example will show how far can drive their ambition.

A young Yugoslavian man, Elie Léopold, very known in Algiers for his ridiculous actions that he did to obtain the academic palmsmiques, having been unable to obtain this reward that he deserved so little, wanted to pay himself off even a small compensation.

Having completed his year of service in the 2nd Zouaves as a simple private second class and finding the job as hard as the bed of From the police station, he granted himself his first reserve period, done in Alger Last March, a superb pair corporal's stripes.

A small addition to the booklet and the trick was done. played. For 28 days, the glorious corporal, in his finest voice, commanded heads right, head left, and to affirm again

4. Elie had tried to become a columnist, but his His incapacity had led to his being banned from all newspapers.

He boasted of having killed a large, rabid dog during the night. hoping to receive a decoration.

In addition to his rank, he inflicted it on some of his buddies. the punishments at his disposal.

Everything would have been for the best if certain comrades from his regiment would not have issued doubts about the authenticity of his rank.

Upon verification, the forgery was confirmed.

Although under the threat of four charges of acaccusation (usurpation of titles, functions, forgery and theft from the State), the ConsisToire did everything he could to prevent prosecution.

against the reservist.

In its session of May 20, 1887, the 1st Con-
The war council, based in Algiers, condemned Elie received a 6-month prison sentence. This lesson has been taught. for this Israelite from a good family, will not suffice not to serve as an example to those who wish-would follow him down this path, to wearing insignia they could not know procure it another way.

The Jews, furious at this condemnation, insisted to the electors that that from now on French justice no longer has the right to take action against them.

We now consider it as a duty to exercise active surveillance on the actions of the Jews, who, in order to achieve their dream, will employ indirect means.

Having failed in their request for a fifty million loan, they have just to hatch a new plan to ruin the Arabs. Just recently, Mr. Tirman was sent to France by Kanoui, Isaac and C", to obtain separation from the government
Algeria from a budgetary point of view

The governor of Algeria, accompanied of certain representatives of this colony, went to see Mr. Rouvier, then president-tooth of the Council, and submitted to it some modifications. | |

In the state of affairs existing until this day, all the recipes come from Algeria-nothing is paid into the French treasury, and the the metropolis, for its part, pays all the colony expenses.

Tirman and the representatives of Algeria propose to henceforth leave him the produit of all taxes collected there.

The colony would in turn provide for all
| i 11.

its expenses, except those relating to the maintenance of the army and the guarantees of ininterest of railways.

Algeria, the missionary added, costs Every year, several million [dollars] go to France. whereas, if we directly touched the taxes, we would more than cover our expenses.

What you forgot to mention, Mr. TirMan, who would pay these taxes?

We will try to fill this gap. gap.

The colonists being mostly in the impossibility of cultivating fruitfully their lands, you cannot even think of augto lie about their already excessive burdens, because that they would protest and that their voices would not be heard. would not go unanswered. It is therefore on the Arabs that you count on to fill the deficit. To force them to pay sums undue, you would have them expropriated, and you you would thus achieve the goal you set for yourselfyou posed when asking for a loan in the past fifty million.

But you're probably forgetting that there is In Algeria, an independent press; you forget that there are French people who have made the defenders of the Arabs.

Please be aware that the Chamber, having been notified at time, will never agree to deliver you men who shed their blood for the France.

So that Kanoui forced you to do
Such a demand requires rapacity.
Jews from Algeria no longer know of terminals.

In France, the quagmire of Judaism
It was methodical, progressive, almost timid.
It was a quagmire. In Algeria, it's a engulfment.

In France, Shylock is a man of the world, harsh but disguised, rapacious but polite in its executions. In Algeria, it is the fierce, brutal, insolent and boastful pirate.
One operates through persuasion, the other through violence.
lence. |

However, the result is the same.

The highway robber said: "the

"Your money or your life!" The Jew said, "Your money."
and life! For after having ruined it through wear and tear plundering, it kills through misery and despair-pear.

VI

REMOVAL OF A JUDGE

We have frequently spoken, in Al-
Jewish community, the role imposed on the civil servants French people by the great elector; we will cite an example to support what we have made progress, and to publicize the processes employed by the circumcised and their employees to get rid of those who bother them.

Of all civil servants, the magistrate is certainly the one who is called upon to render the greater services to the Jews, also have-we chose the biography of a young magistrate anti-Jewish treaty!

In June 1883, X. was appointed sup-paid substitute for the justice of the peace of Bordj-bou-Arreridj, district of Sétif, at the ap-salary points of 2,080 francs per year.

Bordj-bou-Arreridj' is one of the cantons largest and most populated in Algeria.
Its extent is much greater than that of our largest departments of France, and it has about 200,000 inhabitants.
so much.

At the time of X.'s appointment, Mr. Orsini* was a justice of the peace.
The magistrate was so despised by all his litigants, that these made a real
The new substitute received a standing ovation. We didn't know... nor who he was nor where he came from, but each was convinced that he could not be so

Unjust and authoritarian, that dirty Corsican.

On the very evening of his arrival, X. learned by his superior officer that he was going to find himself-
Mr. Orsini was the only one to provide the service.

1. In the canton of Bordj-bou-Arreridj, there are two administrators (Bordj-bou-Arreridj and Bibans), twenty-four sheikhs and four qadis.

2. Corsican civil servants, who are very numerous in Algeria, are generally authoritarian and devoted to the Jews.

feeling very tired, and probably in a hurry to return to France, had already requested leave.

The new deputy was notified, during his oath-
Tut Ravisy, temporarily in charge of the functionsprosecutor's actions, that, the justice of the peace being very busy, there was too much work for a single magistrate, but he was promised,
upon a simple request, to send him a auxiliary.

Upon his return from Sétif, X. took possession from his post and Mr. Orsini went on leave without giving his colleague the slightest indication comments on the service. He only thought about it. to recommend his chaouch, the Jew Torchon, by engaging him to employ him very so-wind as interpreter, allocating to it each once or several times.

It is good to say a few words about the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in Algeria,
In civil matters, they have primary jurisdiction.
springs up to a thousand francs, as a last resort-

sort, up to five hundred francs; they are judges for summary proceedings; they can sign sai-six arrests for undetermined sums.

Criminally, they have the right to launch summonses, arrest warrants and arrest warrants; they are responsible for criminal cases and they send the file complete in the chamber of indictments-tion through the public prosecutor's office of Ar-roundabout; finally, they can, in certain-
In certain cases, judged in correctional court*,

In cities where there is a court, the the jurisdiction of justices of the peace is the same than in France.

That said, let's get back to our young magistrate.

and let's follow him step by step in his new attributions.
_ The Chaouch Torchon and his friend the com-
The clerk Appietto had been charged by Orsini to exercise active surveillance on
X. and to dictate the procedure to him.

Unfortunately, we hadn't counted on the firmness of the new substitute. Having noticed

1. When the penalty prescribed by the article they are referring to The application does not exceed 6 months in prison.

a ——————— ne er met E aa

of the role they wanted to impose on him, he made himself felt to each of his subordinates that in the absence He intended to remain the sole master of the holder.

At the time of his appointment, X. did not know Not Algeria. Like most French people He was unaware of the role played by the Jews in our African colony; he knew that, among their coreligionists in France, a large number openly practiced the profession of usurer, but he did not suppose that these despots were also powerful. He must not delay- however, to feel the effect of their influence.

In a justice of the peace court that is already overburdened for two magistrates, X., from its very beginning, found himself alone to provide the service. Besides the numerous routine matters, he had to to take care of those that had been left aside holder'. Finally, the justice of the peace was located at that moment without an interpreter, the former being suffering and the new one, Sagnes, is not hurrying

---

1. Orsini had completely neglected re-amounting to several months, so as not to transport oneself in villages, 100 to 150 kilometers apart.

not yet ready to take possession of his post,

X. had been ordered to seek assistance temporarily by his chaouch, the Jew Torchon; unfortunately, this worthy descendant of Israel, who could neither read nor write, could not- was to be used only for instructions verbal.

For the written reports of the sheikhs and the other documents to be translated, X. was to ask the participation of unsworn persons.

The young magistrate, unable to continue his work under similar conditions, sent letters and dispatches daily ches to the prosecutor's office in Setif to request a auxiliary interpreter pending the arrival of Mr. Sagnes. Did Mr. Ravisy fear, in satisfaction-responding to this legitimate request, to contra-laugh at the Jew Torchon who could not have done so as a result How to make small profits? That's one of the questions... tion to which it is not our place to answer.

After a fifteen-day wait, the substitute finally arrived in Bordj-bou-Arreridj, bringing With him was Mr. Déjouani, the court interpreter.

from Setif, and the young Arab Ali ben Mohamed, who was going to be in charge of the interim replacement near the new deputy.

However, X. had been advised to em-
Fold the dishcloth as often as possible.
His emoluments, it was said, were insufficient.

X. did not delay in noticing the processes employed by his chaouch to rob those subject to the law.

Every day hundreds of Arabs wait-were at the door of the justice of the peace court, either carrying a report from the sheikh, or equipped
. from a letter written by the business agents Pagès, Moreau and others; the chaouch inspected meticulously, and with his eyes Like a lynx, he quickly recognized those who were able to pay for his services. Jl their he said then:

— I can have the judge speak immediatelytement si…

This little trick worked quite well for him.
and some indiscreet people even claimed that he made some pretty good recipes.

When the judge asked him why he let in the first ones who were the last to arrive, Torchon invented-There was always a pattern. Everything wears out, however.

and X. soon discovered the trick of Jewish.

Faced with the impossibility in which he found himself
Having witnessed the flagrant offense, he had to limit himself to prevent this abuse. To that end, X. was doing to register, each in his place, the Arabs who had to talk to him.

Torchon was quite surprised to see that a
The French magistrate did not lend himself to the tri-Jewish soups; therefore he did not hesitate to signa-to report this to his most ardent coreligionists fluent.

The chaouch did not give up; he had
He thought he had other strings to his bow besides the
The judge didn't know.

Since he was employed from time to time
as an interpreter, could he not, besides His vacation time, getting paid for certain services?

4. We emphasize this point, in order to clearly establish the
The causes of Torchon's animosity towards the young magistrate. It is -indeed, at the request of the chaouch, some personnages have prepared the revocation of X.

It would be so easy for him to deceive good faith. of a magistrate who did not understand the lan-Arabic language.

But X. had very limited confidence in his chaouch; knowing what he was capable of, he had to refuse his participation in all criminal cases.

Torchon, furious at having been so quick Unmasked by his leader, he had to limit himself to He was waiting for the day of revenge. He knew... The fact remains that Judge Orsini would soon return. And then he would resume his old role. No being able to deceive the He would beat the Arabs brutally, certain that They would not dare to defend themselves, under the eyes of the authorities.

Despite all the obstacles he encountered In his new role, X. does not uncover himself-He didn't rage. A month after its installation, he had finished all the files, both business-new ones than those left behind by Mr. Orsini and he sent them to the prosecutor's office from Setif.

Surprised by this vigilance, the deputy

Ravisy summoned the young magistrate to Setif and he offered him well-deserved praise. He added even if we continue in this way until the end-the incumbent's advancement would not take place Don't wait.

During this interview, Mr. Ravisy was unaware again the conduct of his subordinate towardsviews of the Jews. He did not suppose that a man-My intelligent self might not have understood that he We had to take their protection into account for to reach a high position in the judiciary! Any civil servant arriving in Algeria must have known that his situation was subordinate to his complicity with the descendants dante 7 i ël.

The Algerian Koscis had cause to complain dre uv 1a probity of the new substitute, the The French, on the contrary, were happy to finally finding a man who didn't lend himself not to the compromises of our exploiters. Whatsome foresaw the consequences of this loyalty to X., but we couldn't suppose what kind of accusation one would dare to bring charges against this upright magistrate.

X. had his subordinates against him who exercised surveillance over all the insall; only Mr. Sermet, the clerk-notary, approved of the conduct of his direct superior, Unfortunately, he had too much work to do. his study in order to be able to take care of the transplant, left to Appietto's care. The latter trouhad a big change since the start of his compatriot Orsini; he complained continually from X., that he was obliged to assister in all her instructions.

The substitute was loved by the French, the holder of which was hated. numerous complaints had been addressed to the Chancellery against the latter, but, sou-

held by the Jews, he knew he had nothing to to dread.

A waiter, employed at Magnin, was incarcerated in the Bordj-bou-Arre prison ridj, for having delayed bringing to at home, to Judge Orsini, a cup of coffee that the chaouch had gone to order.

According to Torchon, the boy reportedly said:

— I'll only go to your filthy Corsican's place when I will have served the customers who are at the cafe.

Several residents protested against this abuse of power and addressed by name-numerous petitions to the prosecutor's office and the Chancellorlerie, but what could they do against the pro-Tege of the Jews?

This fact had only preceded it by a few days to the appointment of X.

We explained how, after a month
In his service, he had earned the praise of his hierarchical superiors and the esteem of their justi-These people believed the moment favorable to request replacement d'Orsini by the paid substitute who came to prove himself.

Several letters were sent to Mr.
Treille, the constituency's representative, spoke authorities of Bordj-bou-Arreridj. Some
The Algerian deputy's responses even left

1. No consumer had heard this response; but assuming that the boy had used this

In his words, Orsini had no right to have him imprisoned. to prison. We must also add that the Fran-
The Italians were accustomed to appointing the justice of the peace only with those two words: dirty Corsica.

ne me az= — -y ie ai

hoping for Orsini's next trip.

On the other hand, X., who had no reason to prefer Bordj-bou-Arreridj to another post, on the advice of the people who are were addressed to Mr. Treille, wrote to Mr. Duclaud, deputy for the district of Confolens (Charente), and asked him to use his influence to have him appointed as a principal of the position for which he was only a retired substitute-fog. na

X. would have been wrong to act in this way, if Orsini, Although absent, he had not been given a reason for his absence. The justice of the peace, upon leaving, had refused to inform the substitute of their address, who, in the very interest of the service, would have had often need to ask him a few questions information.

Moreover, since his departure, Orsini had written several times to Chaouch Torchon and X. had indirectly learned of it. This lack of tact made it clear what The situation was going to involve the substitute for return of the holder.

The notes transmitted to Orsini by Tor-

The signs were probably not reassuring. since they motivated his return before the ex-aspiration of his leave. Instead of returning directly, he stayed a few days in Cons-Auntie, hoping that the substitute wouldn't save him-would not have been so close. Unfortunately, one indiscreet (there are always some) had warned Mr. Dardillac, mayor and general councillor of Bordj-bou-Arreridj, that Orsini was in Cons-auntie.

So we had to hurry if we wanted to obtain-to stop the transfer of this shameless judge. Instead of letters, telegrams were sent. sent to Mr. Treille, on the one hand, by the others authorities, and to Mr. Duclaud, on the other hand, by the alternate.

Among these dispatches, we note the following one-a copy of which was given to us.

Treille, Member of Parliament for Paris

Population of the Bordj-bou-Arreridj Canton sends petitions to the Minister of Justice against | Orsini, justice of the peace, for abuse of power and Illegal arrest. See Duclaud, Member of Parliament.

so that X., the substitute, can be appointed as the full member. Signed: Fulgoux, Deputy.

Mr. Treille had absolutely no influence personal; if he had a service to request-lastly, he was to speak to Mr. Thomson, who was, in a way, his mentor. Now, that what could he hope for from a Jewish deputy, when he requested a service for a Frenchman and to the detriment of the exploitation of Jews?

However, it was necessary to resign oneself to the fact that the system had to be maintained.
silence for longer with his elect-the most influential French authors, could have to be detrimental to him.

He informed Mr. Thomson of all the approaches attempted with him by habit-tantsde Bordj-bou-Arreridj, and he asked him to dictate his answer to him.

As it is often necessary to contempt everyone and his... clan, this one engaged Mr. Treille to give evasive answers sives, without ever committing to anything. This gives them would give time and then we would tend to adrienset a trap for the substitute, and the day he ee ee e ee — 7

If he were to fall there, we could chase him out of Bordjbou-Arreridj, sans tropiaire crierles habitants.
For his part, Mr. Duclaud was concerned very few X., who thought he was his protégé.
Although enjoying a very low in-influence, he belonged to the majority gou-government and was therefore entitled to to ask for some favor from the Ferry cabinet.
But they knew that this ministry was at the mercy circumcised men, and he did not want to be discredited.
said by recommending an official who refused to participate in the maneuvers of the Jews.
This old deputy from Charente, who seemed always so busy with his constituents, born-

neglected his political duties a little too much to take care of his private relationships.
Always vote blindly for the mini-
The earth was the sole purpose of the man who administer currently the department of Dear Sir/Madam, our impartiality compels us to a duty. to say that if Mr. Duclaud, in order to to raise their profile with his voters, made them often promises he knew he couldn't-to see hold, he at least always remained honest clean and never got involved in shady dealings which are the sole objective of the majority of our members of parliament.

Under such conditions, one can anticipate that the steps taken, both with Mr. Treille only with Mr. Duclaud, has-had no chance of succeeding. X. didn't believe not that anyone could ever commit a crime against him to prevent the exploitation of the French and the Arabs by the Jews: he was counting without the in-influence of these and without the complicity of government.

Bordj-bou-Arrerid is, by its location,
one of the most unpleasant centers in Al-vegetation; as a result of the drought, the vegetation tion is almost zero. It is very rare to to encounter a tree, to find greenery;
All one can see on either side are marshes very unhealthy and completely bare lands.
In the summer, it's swelteringly hot, the sirocco blows almost continuously; in winter, the cold is very intense and the snows are generally very abundant.

X. did not dislike it, however; of a 12,

On the other hand, his many occupations did not... didn't leave time to get bored, other he had made several friends among the civil and military officials.

Messrs. Prunier and Henry, administrators, Bernard, a colonization doctor, from Dardillac, Mayor and General Councillor, Sermet, Clerk-notary, Reybaud', deputy administrator, they spent a lot of time with the young magistrate.

Police Commissioner, Mr. Pelluet, currently in Djidjelli, was more particularly-closely attached to X; it was not a suBound, but a friend and confidant.

They found themselves isolated on this African soil, in the midst of people they didn't know still enough to distinguish the exploited by exploiters.

They had admitted in private the Sermet, the clerk-notary, who initiated them little to a little to the role played by each character who made up the size of our population Algerian.

4. We are giving the names of these officials, because

We cannot praise this enough. civil servant whose integrity and probity protected them from any attack.

The Jews, who knew what was being thought of them the deputy and the commissioner of The police did not admit to such a liaison.

marked between the two magistrates, who, pre-were they plotting against them?
Their complaints reached the ears of the substitute Ravisy, who blamed X. telling him that a judge should limit himself to to summon a police commissioner to his office clear, when he had to speak to her. X. was very Offended by this observation, he foresaw where
The blow came and he understood that the spies
Jews had been ordered to keep an eye on him.

Upon his arrival in Bordj-bou-Arreridi,
X. sometimes went to the café run by the Jew
Bachmayer, brewer, |

This one, flattering like all his coreligionnaires, hoped to use his client that they were hated by the Jews and that they approved highly the conduct of the substitute.

to freely exploit a few settlers.

Bachmayer owned a small property he had some difficulty renting it out, because he was asking an exorbitant price.

A naive colonist once fell under his spell.
He did his best to conclude the... market, session on the spot, before the tenant he realized the value of the land rented... According to the Jew, the market had An agreement had been concluded, and private agreements had been signed.
even been prepared to be signed the next-tomorrow, each of the contracting parties having kept a copy.

After seeing the property, the settler refused to conclude. That didn't suit Bachmayer, who pursued the colonist before the justice of the peace to force him to accept the walk.

The prosecutor had used the clerk Appietto to try to capture trust of X. Unfortunately, the young magistrate received no advice from anyone for the pronouncement of his judgments.

At the hearing, an insolent response from

se)

THE JEWS IN ALGERIA 21:

colon gave Bachmayer hope that the suppléant would not hesitate to render a judgment in accordance with its conclusions.

However, it will not happen. After having addressed-gave a green warning to the defendant, X. ren-He stated in his judgment: the plaintiff's claim was dismissed. of his request and ordered to pay costs.

We will not attempt to describe the fury Bachmayer, who had been unable to force a a simple substitute to help him deceive a colonist French. r

Refusing assistance to a Jew was… a magistrate's actions constitute an unforgivable crime.

A second crime was committed by X. in a criminal case.

A Corsican, named Starcelli, was housed and raised by an old woman, his companion-

Triote, who had taken him into her home out of pity. A The day she was absent, the boarding school-Naire had broken the lock on a trunk, and had seized a sum of 100 francs and of various objects. Complaint having been brought to the the police commissioner, who had them arrested Starcelli, and sent him before the justice of the peace.

The plaintiff, not knowing how to speak French... But Appietto had to act as interpreter. e Starceli, the clerk-clerk affirmed, was not guilty; in the deposition of the old woman woman, he had not raised any serious charges laughing at him. » Confident in the words from his subordinate, X. handed the accused over to liberté, by making him promise not to move away from Bordj-bou-Arrerid]j.

The day after this interrogation, the named Legac, employee of Baisse, receiver various contributions, deposited with the police commissioner a revolver which had been sold by Starcelli, and which was reconnaked by the plaintiff. Other objects, making part of those stolen from the trunk were brought to the police station by various people those who had bought them from Starcelli.

'When all these facts had been reported to X., he had Starcelli sought out; but the Corsica hadn't waited: upon leaving pri-His son, he had left Bordj-bou-Arreridj. One An arrest warrant was then issued against him. him, and after three days of searching, Starcelli was arrested near Teniet-el-Merd)j.

The investigation was conducted quickly, and despite the denials of the accused, who had already served fourteen convictions, none
There could be no doubt about his guilt.
Besides the stolen goods he sold, the judge noted that Starcelli, who was penniless
the day before the flight, had some in his possession at the time of his arrest, after having done many expenses in a house of prostitution.
Upon Orsini's arrival, the file was completed-
The completed file was going to be sent to the prosecutor's office of Setif. The presiding judge, no doubt about the Appietto's observations, wanted to oppose this shipment. X. took the aforementioned back home with him.
sier, and sent it himself to the prosecutor's office.
Brought before the criminal court, Starcelli was sentenced to five years in prison for theft.
After the verdict was pronounced, he insulted roughly the court, which earned him, a new conviction was handed down immediately.
to five years in prison.

Starcelli appealed.

We have never read the court ruling.
from Algiers, but we were assured that, thanks to the protection of his compatriot, Pompéi 1, then Attorney General in Algiers, the five years of imprisonment for theft would have been lifted.
However, we believe we must do everything reservations regarding this last point.

During the absence of the incumbent, the judge the substitute had been called several times to provide information on some of his litigants who were requesting a place; Among them was a young Arab, the son of one of the cadis of the canton, wished to be appointed adel.

This applicant was going to serve as a tool for... Jews to arrive at the revocation of the suppliant.

After staying a few days in Constantine and Setif, Orsini advised Torchon of his arrival. He informed Apietto, who could not hide his joy. The

4. We would be curious to know if it's like compatriot that Starcelli was the protégé of Pompeii and OrSini or for another reason...?

two employees went together to the station to receive their master, and after the After their first embraces, they brought him back in triumph. phalement to the Justice of the Peace.

Orsini was very cold towards his deputy which he only knew through the cor-Torchon's responses. This welcome left-knows how to predict what the relationships should be subsequent actions of the two magistrates.

To prepare for any eventuality, X. wrote to attorney general and asked him for his changegement. In support of his request, he invoked the notes his superiors had given him hierarchical, also making known the impossibility in which he found himself to work under the orders of the incumbent.

The inhabitants of Bordj-bou - Arreridj had learned with sorrow of Orsini's return.

They hoped that, thanks to these steps if done by the authorities, we would obtain the

The relocation of the justice of the peace. Their hope had been disappointed, and they saw that their complaints
The minations had no weight against this protected from the Jews.

13

Bn e ———_———_— a O

A few people were, however, happy to keep Orsini. Besides Torchon and Appietto, about whom we have spoken several times times during this chapter, Messrs. Bi-Gonnet, former mayor, Bachmayer, café owner, Pagès and Moreau, business agents', and all the Jews of the canton desired, for reasons different sounds, the retention of a magistrate who did not refuse to oblige them.

The new interpreter, Mr. Sagnes, had not taken possession of his position for only a short time before Orsini's return.

On Appietto's advice, he had not hesitated to part ways with the substitute, in order to part of the clan we just mentioned. He had retained Ali ben Moha- as an auxiliary med, sent by the prosecutor, at the request of X. o

The task of an interpreter being very delicate,
It was Ravisy's duty not to send,
even temporarily, near a magistrate

4. There were two clearly divided camps: the camp the Jewish camp, presided over by Orsini and Bigonnet, and the anti-Jewish camp which included the friends of the substitute, of which we have mentioned previously.

that he was a man of unquestionable integrity.
It was not so. Ali ben Mohamed +t, of complicity with Torchon, committed certain indiscretions that would later resurface on the substitute, in charge of the service.

After Orsini's return, dispatches were also addressed to Mr. Treille and to Mr. Duclaud. On the advice of some friends,
X. sent the following telegram:

Duclaud, Member of Parliament, Paris.

Please telegraph my nomination immediately.
tion. Incompatibility with holder. Complaints against him chancellery. At the request of the residents will accept being appointed as a holder Bordj-bou-Arreridj. Excellent nals four-denied by the prosecutor. See Treille, deputy. Re-telegraphic reply.

Assi

On the same day, Mr. Treille received from the ad-Fulgoux joined a dispatch that was almost identical.
Mr. Fulgoux made this request,

4. Ali used to receive money by the litigants. He called himself the substitute's friend on which he claimed to wield some influence, then that he was merely his debtor.

both in his own name, and on behalf of the majority of the babitants.

Not receiving a response, and unable to to tolerate Orsini's vulgarities any longer, X. thought it prudent to request leave from a few days to go to Algiers. There, he willwould be the Attorney General and would know what to do about it to keep track of its progress.

The day after his arrival in Algiers, X. attended a party given by the Governor neur in honor of his daughter's marriage with Mr. Comolet, sub-prefect of Aix.

The young magistrate was presented to parelatives and friends of Mr. Comolet, who came to Algiers to attend the wedding. We will quote among them the three Bousquet brothers and Mr. Estier of Marseille, who became quite close intimately with X.

An Arab from the province of Constantine, Cherif ben Ali ben Larbi, knight of the Legion Legion of Honour, sheikh of a village in the canton d'Aiïn-Beïda, joins the group and takes part of the various parties organized by the young tourists.

A young Algerian, Geille, a student at the school of Fine Arts, of which X. had made acquaintancesession during the crossing from Marseille to Algiers, willingly agreed to be, in the various excursions, the guide of the group of which we we just spoke.

The substitute's new friends did not did not make people forget the purpose of his trip to Alger. [l saw the Attorney General several times, who promised him, if the information was favorable, to help him obtain a short time position of justice of the peace.

Young Mohamed, son of the qadi of ManSurah, which we mentioned earlier as applying for Adel's place, followed at Algiers, the courses of the Arabic school.

Having spotted the substitute from Bordj-bou-Arreridj, he asked him to support verbalment his request. X., seeing no insuitable, from the moment the notes collection- The lies about the said Arab were good, the present to the Attorney General. He was given even hoping that his appointment will not be... wouldn't have to wait long.

1. We support all these facts because we have alleged, in the investigation, that the substitute was rocking promasses to young Mohamed in order to get paid its services.

We must add that there was a little right, first as the son of one of the oldest ciens cadis', and furthermore because he had passed successfully passed the exam required to ento enter the Arab judiciary.

During his stay in Algiers, X., who was continuously with Mr. Bousquet the elder, Estier, Geille and Chérif ben Ali ben Larbi, The son of the qadi of Mansou- often saw Ah. He even came from time to time. join the group at the cafe, in the company of his cousin and brother-in-law Messaoud, who lived- Blidah was a popular destination. These acquaintances were pleasing. especially to X.'s new friends, that This allowed them to do some studies about the Arabs, completely unknown to the

the majority of French people.

It was decided between the young substitute and his friends, we would go on a trip to Blida

1. This Arab judge had tried to calm the tempers of its constituents, during the insurrection of 18714, and that Messaoud would show them around the city and the surrounding area.

Blida is undoubtedly one of the cities the most pleasant in Algeria. Located at a a short distance from Algiers, it is a goal of a stroll, both for Algerians and for foreigners. Its public garden is very cu-fun to visit; the Garden of Olives, where one finding ancient trees is no less Interesting. Its streets are lined with orange trees.
Gers. From Blida, one travels by car to Monkey stream, at the entrance to the gorges verdant Chiffa.

The journey took place in excellent conditions.
editions. On the day of their arrival, the tourists drove around the area
town and returned to dinner at the Hotel d'Orient, where They had gone downstairs. The next day, they went-have lunch at the Monkey Stream in com-company of Messaoud and Mohamed, that they
They had invited guests. In the evening they returned to Algiers.

We provide all these details to ensure...
to establish that Messaoud was only a guide complacent, both towards the magistrate and towards the friends and relatives of the Governor's son-in-law from Algeria*.

During his stay in Algiers, X. had the idea, after having his picture taken in Arabic, Keep this costume in the evening to go to the theatre. Being far from Bordj-bou-Arreridi, he does not not considered a magistrate during his leave and consequently did not believe that one could later, he will commit a crime in this disguise It's perfectly natural in this country.

The young substitute left Algiers on October 23rd. bre by the coastal boat which was sailing for Candle. From there he took the car to Setif which trapours down the terrifying Chabet gorges*. The Deputy Ravisy urged him to stay until the

1. Messrs. Estier and Bousquet had invited Messaoud to come see them in Marseille,

2. The road that crosses these gorges was carved into a mountain with a sheer drop of fifteen to sixteen hundred meters. This overly narrow road is protected by a parapet of 0.60 centimeters high. At the slightest turn, the head horses advance into the void, above the parapet and the slightest shock could send the rig careening into the The road is empty and 7 kilometers long and elevated. seven to eight hundred meters.

the next day to talk to him about a letter he had received from Pompeii.

In accordance with his promise, the prosecutor The general was asking for information about X. to find out if he could give her some advancement cement. Ravisy, who had always made praise for the substitute on his service, could not that they give excellent grades.

His letter, which was official, must very probably have
She could easily stray from the file later.
essentially said that, during the absence d'Orsini, X. had shown zeal and in-intelligence and that he was in the conditions intended to make an excellent justice of the peace.

Mr. Mauguin, deputy for Algiers, who was unaware the conduct of the deputy with the Jews, had promised to take an interest in him.

Furthermore, the inhabitants of Bordj-bou-Arreridj, who knew the promises of the procurator general and the notes of the deputy Setif, took new steps with of Mr. Treille for the appointment or sup-filling in as a full member.

For his part, Orsini did not remain in | 13.

inaction. He sent letters and dispatches to all those who could be of any kind to him usefulness, adding no doubt that, if he had committed wrongs and abused his power,
At least he had always protected the Jews.
It was indeed the best grade for a Algerian magistrate.

We do not know the content of the correspondence exchanged between Orsini and his protectors. However, three written dispatches items from the beggar's hand have fallen to us-we give them text-
utopia: |

Coggio,

Telegraph Paris, if you intend intervene. The letter would arrive too late.

Arena, Member of Parliament

If your intervention is not immediate,
It will be late.

Forcioli, senator,

Extreme urgency in the matter that you
You know. Incredible actions.

The situation, already very tense between the titu-
The situation, both the former and the substitute, became untenable at the following another insult from Orsini. A In the evening, X. sent for Tor- by the chaouch chon the annotated codes of Rivière of which he needed for instruction. Get work being in the office of the justice of the peace, it is at him whom the chaouch had to address for the take. Orsini was at the café and had the key to his office. When Torchon told him He asked for the key to get the book, he replied:

"Go tell the substitute that he's annoying me...!"
X., fearing he may not have heard correctly, made the cha- repeat this answer three times Ouch. He then wrote a provocative letter.
one to Orsini and a second to the substitute from Setif to tell him that in similar circumstances under these conditions he could not continue the service.
At that same time, Orsini received the Next dispatch from the Attorney General:
Orsini, Justice of the Peace of Bordj-bou-Arrerijd, Ask the substitute if they would be willing to be appointed head of department in Laghouat or Biskra. Only available positions. His refusal will force him to attender.

———/“—m——

X. immediately replied:

Attorney General of Algiers.
The alternate accepts to be appointed as the main candidate

Biskra.
Orsini.

This official dispatch from the Attorney Generalral proves that the substitute's notes were excellent, since after less than three months
She was offered a permanent position; but she
It also had to be removed from the file.
However, it would be easy to find a copy of it at the telegraph office in Algiers, while searching in the first days of November 1883.

After having reviewed the complaint
The prosecutor summoned Orsini.
the deputy in Setif and blamed the conduct of justice of the peace, while urging X. to continue his service up until his appointment.

Meanwhile, an incident occurred-tooth which the Jews took advantage of to prepare their revenge.

Mohamed wrote to X. to ask him if, thanks to its protection, we wouldn't do well-early, right on his request.

This letter, opened by Orsini, and which X. never received communication, was sent immediately to the Attorney General.

The actions of Orsini and certain Jews influential people had already had their effect.

Orders had been given, both to Attorney General, as well as the Deputy Prosecutor of Setif, to prepare for an investigation that was expected to lead to
to the dismissal of the substitute.

To achieve this result, it was necessary to invent,
because it was quite difficult to revoke a ma-(gistrat against whom no complaint had been filed) Jas but was worn.

Following a letter from the public prosecutor General, Mr. Ravisy summoned the judge from so to Setif.

We don't know what plot they hatched. together! The next day, Orsini returned in company of Messrs. Ravisy and Déjouani, inter-court loan.

At first glance, everyone believed that, making right to legitimate claims of the inhabitants, an investigation had finally been ordered against Orsini. The illusion was short-lived. The fi-

Orsini's joyful face proved that he had Nothing to worry about.

That same evening, Mr. Ravisy warned the replacing the accused, who was accused of very serious acts ves and that he was going to conduct a comprehensive investigation complete. X.'s astonishment was so great that he wanted to resign immediately;

If he did not do so, it was because he wished to see until-
Where did the perversity of the Jewish employees lead?

The qadi of Mansourah was summoned. He did not
He couldn't say anything against the substitute. Perhaps...
This is what later led to his dismissal.

The qadi of Rapta, the one from Bordj-bou-Arreridj had no reason to complain about X; ilen
The same was true of several sheikhs called for the purposes of the cause.

The Arab leaders did not want to be accomplices in a base revenge against a French magistrate, they looked to see if, among the natives, some of whom would not have to complaining about X. Appietto and Torchon pouwere expected to be of great use in the circ-consistency, and it was to them that we turned.

- We open a parenthesis here to say that some criminal cases are not instructed when the magistrate can arrive-towards an arrangement between the plaintiff and the accused.

It is not uncommon to find in Algeria justices of the peace who receive monthly between 150 and 200 Decheicks reports, relating to offenses or crimes. However, it is material-It is impossible to carry out all these instructions.
tions.

For this reason, it is customary to hire in some cases the accused to disinterest the the plaintiff, who, for his part, withdraws his complaint.

During his stay in Bordj-bou-Arrerid), X. had made three arrangements in these coneditions; only two are known to us And we will quote them:

Unindigène had taken three sheep from one from his neighbors, who, after filing a complaint, was sent before the substitute in comparison the accused's gnie. The two neighbors seemed They were such good friends that the magistrate hired the thief to give the plaintiff a sum equivalent to the value of the sheep.

The money was paid immediately and the- The plan had no follow-up.

Another time, following a discussion, an Arab having bitten one of his co- Both were religious, and were sent before the French magistrate. He engaged the accused to hand over a small sum to his victim, and then dismissed both parties.

In both cases, the payment was made killed at the door of the justice of the peace court, in the presence of several Arabs. Torchon had served of an interpreter.

Mr. Ravisy, who was actively searching for witnesses to the prosecution, brought in the plaintiffs and defendants the matters we just discussed. For that they would not be caught off guard, the Chaouch was tasked with hearing their confessions. He encouraged them to repeat it if they wanted to depart of the substitute, who, they said, was mis- The lesson is unfair and unjust for the Arabs. that he was going to teach them.

After the hearing of witnesses, which lasted Three days later, X. was summoned by the deputy prosecutor.

instead of reading to the substitute, as it was his duty, the testimony of the witnesses heard,

Mr. Ravisy implied that he had not re-Nothing serious was raised in the investigation, which might lead to a relocation. He said However, in X., Arabs had claimed that on three separate occasions, sums, varying between 5 and 8 francs, had been kept by him, during arrangements also or-given by him.

The substitute, who knew that these accusations the instructions had been dictated to the Arabs by Torchon, protested vigorously and asked to be confronted with the witnesses; Mr. Ravisy, who feared seeing the Arabs back down their false allegations, refused the confrontation.

X., enraged by this refusal, described the conduct of the investigating magistrates; he su-held before the deputy that this investigation was the result of the maneuvers of certain per-ringing.

Ravisy finally asked the substitute for-:

what he had been refusing to do for the past few days his service.

"Because," replied X., "I don't want to"
to endure the insults of a for much longer I'm a cad; I respect my superiors, but I want to be respected by them.

— You're becoming quite impertinent, Mon-Mr. Deputy, to speak in this way to your superior!

— I know what course of action I must take from-before a magistrate who is involved in a case a role such as the one you have taken on.
Having nothing to say against me, which you were doing the praise just recently, you call witnesses who have confessed beforehand, and you refuse-I'm afraid to confront them to see them retract what they were made to say.

— Who do you think I am?

— For who you are.

— If you repeat what you just
To put it simply, I'll have you arrested immediately:
you are in the presence of a leader who gives orders and does not receive them.

I no longer recognize any leaders, because I
I am submitting my resignation.

At the mention of resignation, the deputy calmed down.

If the substitute resigned, the goal was not not reached, since his enemies had requested his dismissal.

Mr. Ravisy therefore encouraged X. to continue his department, telling him that he had nothing to He even added that the revealed facts by the Arabs had no impact, and that it was for this reason that he had judged the A pointless confrontation. Thanks to this hypocriticalsie, he had the documents signed by the substitute and withdrew, satisfied to have given a new proof of his devotion to the Jews.

A few months after the investigation, Mr. Ravisy was appointed deputy in Constantine.

When he reads this book, he will be amazed precise information that we provide on this matter; he will wonder why We unmask him, the protégé of Mr. Mauguin, the protector of the Jews? He fearsdra perhaps to see us unveil other Facts! That would be easy for us indeed, but we believe it unnecessary to elaborate on a character that this simple story is enough to make to know.

The investigation had taken place in the early days of December 1883. Encouraged by the Substitute X. had continued his service.
most of the instructions had were handed over by Orsini's orders, and he had made them completely finished for him.

The substitute, having gone to Setif, towards the end in December, received further praise from substitute.

He saw Mr. Philippoteaux, president of the tribunal, Mr. Terrier, judge, and a few others magistrates, and none of them alluded to Fenquest, which, in general opinion, should not to have unfortunate consequences. Mr. Ravisy stated even in X. that he would remain in Bordj-bou-Arreridj and that the incumbent would leave before him.

Confident in this promise, the substitute,
who had always hesitated to buy furniture, fearing a displacement, surrendered same day at Mairesebile Régis and Milano's, furniture dealers in Setif, and bought at the first one for 700 francs, at the second one-cond for 1000 francs. He gave to each

4. These details are of great importance. He was,

200 francs as a deposit, committing to pay the surplus at specified times.

Back in Bordj-bou-Arreridj, X. began to se-laughing at work, convinced, according to the words from the deputy, that he no longer had to fearto make a trip.

On January 10th, he was notified confidentially.
ment by a friend, that several deputies of-were demanding his dismissal and that Mr. Martin Feuillée wouldn't refuse them. They lenga-were, in his interest, to resign
sion. |

X. understood, a little late, that it was real-he was the victim of a plot, prepared by the Jews, and led by Mr. Ravisy.

Having nothing to hope for from Messrs. Ferry, Martin-Feuillée, Raynal, Waldeck, etc., the sup-Plérant sent his resignation to the minister of justice. No longer considering himself as
As a civil servant, he wrote a second letter to Mr. Martin-Feuillée to make him aware

It is obvious that X. would not have bought furniture without the affirmation-Ravisy expressly assured him that he had nothing to fear.

4. In this second letter he said: “We must con-to be born in Algeria to realize the influence of

——— nn En

what he thought of the men who held in hand the reins of government.

A letter can easily get lost when it is addressed to an unscrupulous man, who, for the needs of his cause, must not have received. That's what happened with the letter from resignation that X. had had the. mistake of not recommend.

Having left on January 10th, she must have arrived at Destination: the 14th or the 15th. Mr. Martin-Feuillée he might argue that he never had one knowledge. Our readers know, moreover,
What confidence could one have in these men from Tonkin, who deceived the public, by falsifying official dispatches.

As for the second letter, which arrived two or three days after the first, the former minister will perhaps remember it better. The effect of the rest had not been long in coming, because, the
On January 18th, X. received the following telegram:

Jews thanks to the complicity of the government. I gave my resignation, because I didn't want to be under the orders from this band of gluttons and jumpers who compose the Ferry cabinet, etc. » |

X. substitute Bordj-bou-Arreridi.

Instead of advancement, you are revoked.
Duclaud.

The deputy from Charente then wrote to X. to express his regret at not having been warned in time, in order to intervene his favor with the minister.

X… was very surprised by this audacity. Mr. Duclaud, to whom he had addressed several times, had never done anything for him and he offered his services when he was too Late. That gives a good idea. exact good faith of the major partytie of our deputies, who lull their voters promises to ensure their re-election, and who, when it comes time to act, are always impowerful!

What a disgrace for independent French people! darlings to be represented in the Chamber by this horde of individuals who formed the The majority of the Ferry cabinet! The promise of a place in case of non-re-election pushed them to become accomplices of men that the country has judged since. That is how

—

Mr. Duclaud is the prefect of Cher, Mr. Labuze, treasurer-paymaster general of Bouches-du-Rhône, etc.

What independent civil servants!

To the letter from Mr. Duclaud, which we have just received to speak, X. responded immediately to ask for the reasons for his dismissal?

The question was undoubtedly very embarrassingreassuring, since the opportunistic MP does not

I could give a categorical answer.

“Facts have been revealed about you,” he wrote.
They are so serious that I cannot tell you them.
to make known.

We have in our possession this letter from Mr. Duclaud. We are not publishing it, con-defeated, that the author will not disavow it.
but we believe we are entitled to ask to the prefect of Cher why he could not repeating facts that the minister had given him knowledge? Why, moreover, does he respond-referred to a new letter from X. that the midthe minister could not grant the counter-Investigation requested.

He himself acknowledged that in

ae

a counter-investigation, X., who was standing in gar-of, could easily reduce to nothing all the accusations against him! He knew, or at least he should have known that a mi-An upright minister could not refuse a counter-investigation, while the official
The person attacked had been misled, and did not con-only a small part of the accusations were arising directed against him.

A substitute was reportedly sent to the scene.
Mr. Eon, for example, who was to be appointed prosecutor of the Republic-
He was allegedly given orders in the Setif republic.
very strict so that the outcome of the investigation remained the same.

But X. would have liked to get acquainted with the case file, and for each fact he haswould have demanded a confrontation.

What would have happened then if a few Arabs who were overheard had said: "We we recited the lesson we had been taught
"The Jew, that rag!"

The wick would have been sold; the affair would have been... would have been leaked and everyone would have been informed about the maneuvers of which they are continually victims thousands of French people.

That was what had to be avoided at all costs.
and it is for this sole reason that the counter-
The investigation had been refused.

The news of the deputy's dismissal it spread very quickly to Bordj-bou-Arreridj;
it gave rise to a large number of comments comments.

The Jews were happy to finally be deincensed by this magistrate who had refused to to lend themselves to their maneuvers.

The furniture merchants of Setif wrote rent to X. to pay them immediately if wanted to avoid prosecution. Being in the impossibility of carrying out the task, the former alternate offered to take over the furniture sold, which, in fifteen days, could not have been damaged, and to keep one hundred francs for the rental.

Mairesebile went to the scene and accepted ta the proposal of his debtor.

This was not the case in Milan.

Get an individual, of Maltese origin, who had

m-—

enriched by employing Jewish methods, never missed an opportunity to exexploit his debtors. He refused any transactiontion, and brought legal action. The furniture sold by Milano and those belonging to X., were seized, sold, and redeemed by the creditorstubborn steel. A few objects, sent from France, and those in storage at the station, were equally were seized and sold.

Throughout this whole affair, the bailiff Rousbucket played a rather nasty role. In what What were the conditions under which the sale took place? At what price was it sold? Will they lift the fees? These are questions to which we cannot respond. Ge What is surprising is that X. remained dedebtor of a sum greater than that claimed mée before the prosecution t.

Milano took out a mortgage on the buildings of his debtor, and the latter had to, in order to obtain discharge, pay nearly a thousand francs more.

4. Orsini lent his support to all these maneuvers. It was not enough for the Jews to drive out their enemy, They were trying to rob him. In six months, X. left behind Algeria, nearly 10,000 francs.

Our readers in France are not aware probably the Maltese only by hearsay. These islanders, along with the Jews, are the most dangerous. a gereuse plague. of Algeria. They land in our colony, barefoot and covered in rags; a few years later, we see them finds millionaires. Most of them They can neither read nor write, but they conthe first three are born admirably rules of arithmetic, and primarily the multiplication. They do not hesitate to lend to two or three hundred percent, and do not tolerate not the slightest delay in the reimbursement. When they possess a sufficiently large fortune, they leave Algeria to return to their country.

Since we are in Bordj-bou-Arreridj, we will mention the two Bohadjar brothers, who, in twenty-five years, have stolen from our nations approximately two million; Vigliano, HauWell, Cormi, although less wealthy, seethat day increase their loot in conditions exorbitant prices!

This revocation should give an idea

The exact extent of Jewish influence in Algeria. If, as we have repeated several times In Jewish Algeria, they are more illiterate. and more groveling than their coreligionists From France, we see, by this example, that they are also hypocritical and also powerful. He It seems almost unbelievable, indeed, that in In less than six months, they managed to do to dismiss a magistrate who had deserved the praise from his superiors and the esteem of all his officials French ticables.
Torchon already possesses a certain fortune coming from so many of its farms, such as Chaouch, what usurious loans! In what-

In the coming years, we will see him found a may-his bank, which, thanks to his talents, pros-will operate in proportions similar to those of our kings of finance. His brothers Guermi and Ra-mine were less skillful: the first is chaouch of the town hall; the second, complete-devoid of intelligence, has not yet in terms of employment, they are both instructors comments from which Torchon knows how to profit.
Mesguiche is the richest Jew in Bordj-

Bou-Arreridj. Although a merchant of new-
In addition to loans, it mainly deals with loans;
he finds this trade more lucrative than the first. He is the Great Elector of the canton, and all his fellow believers, the Suffar, Chemla, Nadjar, etc., come to address
I'm involved in every shady deal.

All these Jews, who, in order to exploit our co-Lons and the Arabs need the help of the justice of the peace, should naturally haveanander the departure of a magistrate who considers would treat usury as theft. There is a such solidarity among the descendants of Israel, that the requests, coming from the humblest of them quickly reach the mid-ministry, either through the Rothschild, either through the members of parliament
Jews.

As for you, French civil servants, who
You are thus submitting to the orders of this horde,
We ask you, if there is still some left a few drops of that old Gallic blood in your veins, to examine the consequences of your conduct! Your complicity is the

The strength of the Jews! Remain neutral, if you will.
you want, but never go and make yourself instruments of a plot woven against a of your colleagues whose only fault was to be More frank than you! You must be blushing!
the progress achieved for such services!

What would you have been accused of?
Mr. Pompeii, if you had limited yourself to writing Mr. Ravisy is to conduct an investigation against the deputy of Bordj-bou-Arreridj, without donation-to give secret orders that were not in Your honor? But perhaps you were too compromise with the Jews to back down, and it was even this compromise that you had earned you the high position you held in the judiciary.

As for you, Mr. Ravisv, who led
The investigation, you were only thinking about your advance-Cement! You hoped, you often said,

4. Pompeii had received formal orders from the minister of justice. He had informed Ravisy and Orsini. The Mohamed's letter served as a starting point; but the promises made by Pompeii to the substitute of Setif if The investigation was successful, giving an accurate idea of the zeal that the Algerian chief magistrate put into serving the Jews.

to be appointed prosecutor in Setif. To achieve

To that end, you have failed in your duties, because you were aware that the facts noted against X. in Your investigation was flawed, and you did not wanted to hear his explanation. Had you the right to refuse the confrontation of the sup-fitting with those who had carried accu-Stations against him? You will recognize that No, and yet you refused it! You you didn't want to, even though you had been charged to conduct an investigation, to be forced to recon-to be born that there was nothing to reproach the en-Enemy of the Jews! You were afraid that we would... said: "From the moment we ask you-dion of serious facts against X., it was necessary to find! It's your clumsiness that we prevents the desired result from being achieved. You did not deserve such reproaches. From your leaders! You gave more than was required of you! You have preferred the protection of Jews to the esteem of your fellow citizens! If all the civil servants Algerians should not often have mouths close, some of your colleagues would have

aa.

I blamed your conduct! Do you believe that Mr. Terrier, judge in Sétif, Mr. France, judge of Peace to Bougie, and to some others besides you. know and that we do not name, at-would have accepted the mission you were given "Charged"? These upright magistrates cannot not to answer; but we are not afraid to assert that they will never lend their Contributing to a plot hatched by the Jews!

As for Orsini, currently a justice of the peace In Mostaganem, we won't say a word about it. because we would have too much to say. We commit-

even, in his interest, not to us forcing people to talk about certain success stories sion, which was much talked about in Bordjbou-Arrerid]j. This would bring us back to certain facts that the judge of Rapta may not have known Only the secret.

However, in concluding this chapter, to be told to the justice of the peace, friend of Tor-no matter what we've done, never an Arab will not maintain the facts presented in the face of X.
in his deposition before Mr. Ravisy.

This revocation that we have just Storytelling is not an isolated event. Since when-

In recent years, the Jews have become so powerful sants in Algeria, whom they no longer consider civil servants treated like machines.
that they alone have the right to move.

VII

+

THE REPRESENTATIVES OF ALGERIA

We have spoken too often, in PAL-Jewish community, relations existing between the voters and elected officials, so as not to build our readers on the role played by senators and the deputies of our colony. It is, in fact, to our representatives who are responsible for the task of to defend our interests. Unfortunately, in In Algeria, elected officials are forced to alienate their freedom in the hands of the Jews, if they want it retain their mandate.

During the election campaign, each Youddi receives the order to vote for such and such candidate, and on election day, all the votes

focus on the one who has been designated for them speaks the Great Elector. Little concern is given to... in the Israeli camp, to know the ideas
The candidate's policies: above all, we want that the deputy comply with the demands of the Jews.

If the same understanding existed among our nationals nationals, they could in each election to fight, with some chance of success, against their vile adversaries; but, besides the differences of opinion, we must not count on the votes of the majority of the functionsnaires, which are generally protected by the outgoing MPs are happy to find an opportunity to show them their appreciation
session. |

In the province of Algiers, the former deputy Mauguin, currently a senator, has always
He was the devoted servant of the native Jews.
His political past earned him hatred and contempt for all his compatriots, also not he-Does he ever use the site to retain the mandate?
of which he is so proud, blindly obeying the Orders of Israel!

When, in his department, a functiontionnaire refuses to become an accomplice of J'uifs, he's the one we're asking.

his transfer or his dismissal. He knows that This request is an order, and so we... sees him running from ministry to ministry, until-that he had won his case. He enjoys even, it is said, of a certain influence, thanks to his servility, to a government if not Jewish, at least at the discretion of Jews.

If Mr. Mauguin has a knack for getting people revoked some officials, he also has the power to help others obtain advancement. Indeed, there are some who, driven Driven by a thirst for power, they become slaves The Jews. They need positions. raised, because they will render all the more service vices that they will be more powerful.

Such is the case of Mr. Ravisy, the protégé of Mr. Mauguin, whom we have already mentioned!

The former MP from Algiers was so loathed by all French people for his election seemed highly compromised. The Jews themselves— same, fearing to lose such a powerful sant complicit, deemed it prudent to send him to sit in the Senate.

Mr. Mauguin is one of those men who They have no sense of their dignity. To satisfy his ambition, he was not afraid to hand his country over to the Jews; he would even have did more, if his constituents had required.

This man is not an agent, but well, a broker in charge of handling business between the Kanoui and Rothschild houses.

The two deputies from Algiers, Messrs. Letellier and Bourlier, were also elected by the Jews. Their competitors, Messrs. Marchal and Samary, who had clearly positioned themselves as anti-Jews, had received the votes of all the Independent French people.

Mr. Letellier is already a veteran. He has walked alongside Mr. Mauguin, whom he often followed the advice. He seems to regret having gone in he is pursuing this path, but he is committed to his mandate.
and he knows that he came to power thanks to Jews, and that he will only maintain himself there by them. Although he doesn't like them, he must...

following, do not show them your aversion:

Mr. Bourlier is younger in his life.
litigious. To get elected he did abnegathe application of its principles, and sought the suf-Jews' issues. Knowing Algeria at In the past, Mr. Bourlier often spoke to his friends of reforms to be made to fashion current forms of colonization, and we do not fear not to say that we shared his ideas
In many respects. Why then?
Is he remaining silent today?

We ask him, on behalf of all the French Algerians, to abandon this path winding path into which he threw himself and listened to the Islands noble sentiments that once animated him.

It is not yet so advanced that it cannot retreating to return to those he had abandoned given. |

We dare to hope, Mr. Bourlier, that You will not remain deaf to our call!
You will no longer sacrifice your

4. Mr. Letellier intervened directly to get the vote
The Chamber requested a credit of fifty million.

by Tirman.

French homework for a foolish ambition!
What do you care about the discontent of these youddis who use you, but who do not They don't like you! If you're no longer their elected in the next elections, won't you be Not proud to be the one for the French?

You might say you're afraid of failure?
But if that were the case, wouldn't you be happy to be able to say: I didn't have enough of voices, but I only got those of the hon-Good people. As for the rest, have no worries.
in this regard, because, between now and that time, we will be working will strive in the general interest to restore the understanding between all French people, and our the task will be all the easier if we we will address to men determined to com-defeat the enemy.

This appeal we are making to you, Mr. Bour-
We are also sending it to you, Mr. Letel-to bind! If we come to you, it is because, badly-Despite your compromises, we have acquired the conviction, based on our investigation, that you haven't yet fallen into the mire where are floundering among some of your colleagues.

However, we cannot say that you you are blameless, but we believe that it wouldn't require a great effort from you to regain your independence.

In a few days, you will be ap-Pelés to give their opinion on two projects laws that are of most interest to Algeria
At the most important point, we want to talk about the project
Michelin-Gaulier and budgetary modifications Genetically presented by Mr. Tirman. We

- we will judge by your vote, whether our voice is or not left without a response.

Mr. Jacques, senator from Oran, is, like
As we said above, allied with the Jews;
his son married Miss Lévy, daughter of the banker of Oran, twice declared bankrupt. This man is the servant of the descendants of Israel.
He receives it directly from Kanoui and from what-that other influential Jews of the orders to-which it conforms to without the slightest restriction
tion.

Mr. Jacques is even more influential than

4. The main goal of the Jewish representatives of Algeria

2. The Jews in Algeria

~AI

Mr. Mauguin. He belongs to the Jewish clan, which, outside of parliamentary sessions, decides the code of conduct that everyone must follow

of its members in such and such circumstances
tance. |

We have received, against this senator, little scrupulous, several complaints from settlers French people who were his victims. All the officials in his department know this what would their refusal to obey cost them
Jews!

How many times have some settlers told us:

— Such an official has been unfair towards we, but we knew he wasn't acting freely and we don't hold it against him!

The dysfunctional ones themselves (whether they are (without fear, we will keep their names silent) we

is to send officials to our colony laid to serve the Israeli camp.

With each movement, Kanoui and Isaac give the names of their protégés to Messrs. Manguin, Jacques or Thomson, and they intervene directly with the Relevant minister.

We were presented with a list prepared by Mrs. Isaac (at Thomson's address), comprising 5 administers and 8 magistrates.

i.e.

sent some letters to us expo-to understand the situation they were in vis-à-vis the youddis, and reveal to us the works of Mr. Jacques. It is in the interest even of these unfortunate employees, more to

We do not publish complaints or blame.
not certain facts that would lead to their revocation.

Messrs. Étienne and Sabatier, the two deputies from Oran, are more loved by their voters
French than their colleagues from Algeria.

Mr. Étienne is not only a member of parliament of Oran, he is also a member of the government
ly. For these two reasons, we believe we must to recount the laborious life of this man, by-young core, which seems animated by the best intentions.

Mr. Eugène Étienne was born in Oran on December 15th.
December 1844; his father was originally from Charente, his mother was Corsican.

After finishing his studies at high school From Algiers and Marseille, he embarked on the political movement. He contributed to the founding of donation from various republican groups and was one of those who worked with the most a-fierce resistance to the overthrow of the Empire.

In 1868, he founded a trading house who soon had very close relations with our African colony, but, despite the import-increasing strain on household affairs, it He did not neglect politics. He was one of the the People's most ardent collaborators and Equality, who dared, after fifteen years of compression, raising the voice in favor of Freedom, democracy, the Republic!

When in 1869 Gambetta put forward his candidacy dature in Marseille against Thierset M. de Les-

September, Mr. Étienne contributed to a large part of the success of the one who was supposed to be more late, his friend. The Republicans of the previous day have not forgotten the applause
The results were met with enthusiasm.
of this struggle which had captivated the attention of France.

The proclamation of the Republic, after Sedan did not put an end to the sustained fighting.
by these young democrats who had pre-prepared for the fall of the Empire.

Mr. Etienne has kept in Marseille, among those who fought alongside him in the ranks of democracy, many friends surprised to find so much energy in the days danger in this young man of a natural-
He was so sweet and had such a cheerful disposition!

When in 1878, as a reward for services
Having rendered defects, he was appointed commercial agent of the state railways, he left with He missed this city where he had married and where he had cut his teeth.

In his new role, Mr. Étienne quickly won the esteem of all those who were in contact with him. Thanks to the capa-examples he demonstrated, two years after his Upon entering the administration, he was appointed Inspector General of Commercial Affairs, and, a year later, in 1881, general inspector-operational level.

In August of that same year, the Oran voters, rightly proud of their his compatriots offered him the nomination; he accepted and was elected by 2,242 votes.

Mr. Étienne was not yet thirty-seven years old.
15.

Upon his arrival in power, the young leader-puté was part of the major commissions parliamentarians, railways, waterways gables, etc.; during the years 1884, 1885, and in 1886, he was a member of the commission of the budget.

He remained secretary of the Chamber of 1881 to 1885.

However, there is one point on which we
We cannot say: Is he for or against the Jews?

As we said at the beginning
This chapter is quite difficult, not to mention to say impossible, to an Algerian deputy who aspires to his re-election, to retain his independence Pendance. What we can affirm,
The point is that, if Mr. Étienne is not against the Jews, he is certainly not against French. It is never in vain that one of his compatriots addressed him; also did he during the last legislative elections obtained almost unanimous support.
(10,570 votes out of 11,883 voters).

If all the Algerian MPs had done

Like him, we wouldn't have so much in-deplorable injustices. It is certainly to those who do not receive orders from the Jews, because these vile exploiters would never tell him- but to force the French.

In the campaign we are undertaking, if we succeed, as we hope, in to appoint French deputies in Algeria independent states, we are convinced that Mr. Étienne will work with them on the development development of colonization.

For two consecutive years, Mr. Étienne was the rapporteur for the AI budget. geria, and in 1886 rapporteur of the budget of colonies.

These various reports, clearly elucidated, proved that the young man from Oran knew admirably the department of colonies; also, during the formation of the last minitère, was he the obvious choice as undersecretary-state official, and only his refusal could authorize to find another holder.

Mr. Étienne is in power today; We will see him in action,

9GA THE JEWS IN ALGERIA

A young publicist, ML Bourne, gave in the illustrated Parliament biography of the Oran deputy, shortly after his first election, and we have noted with joy that his predictions came true.

Like any man starting out in this active life which we call Parliament- Mr. Étienne made mistakes. He made the mistake, upon Gambetta's death, of to follow the harmful policies of Mr. Jules Ferry. This is a criticism we could level at... It has been useful to many MPs, who have since separated from this man so disastrous for the

France.

We will frequently have to talk about
Mr. Étienne before the general elections from 1889, and we hope that at that time, independent candidates like himself will carry out in the other departments of Algeria, and that then, by common agreement, they will take care of the reforms that we
We have already spoken about Jewish Algeria, but which we will specify in more detail at the time where the struggle will begin.

The second deputy from Oran, Mr. Sabatier, is a hardworking man, who, upon his arrival in the House, prepared a report on the Algerie, of which we are not a supporter and which we will discuss later when we talk about the Michelin-Gaulier proposal.

Former administrator. Mr. Sabatier con-is reborn in his department. He is a supporter of the reforms, because he knows the causes of the problem general in Algeria.

He doesn't like Jews, but, according to his
In this report, he is far from agreeing with us.
on the weapons to be used for the combeat.

Mr. Sabatier is, as is his colleague from Oran, one of the Algerian deputies in whom We have confidence.

We will talk more about the goal later.
that he continues, when we discuss the naturalization of native Muslims.

It is from the rest of the discussion that the following emerged the light; let's hope he'll fall in line with our opinion. | |

We ask him to always keep

this independence, which earned him his election tion against his Jewish competitor, Mr. Desso-to bind. |

Mr. Forcioli, senator for the department of Constantine, is a former magistrate from Algiers laughter. In 1883, at the time of his election, he was a lawyer in Constantine.

He cannot be faulted for having so-openly championed the cause of the Jews. If he had was elected in the last legislative elections, while he was campaigning against Mr. Thomson, would he have been bold enough to plead the case of our unfortunate colonists? It would be difficult for us-It's difficult to answer that question, but we Let's acknowledge that this is already a lot of a-see made an election campaign against the Jews.

The two deputies from Constantine, Mr. Thomhis and his sidekick, Doctor Treille, are literally sold to the Jews. He is few of French people who had no reason to complain of these two representatives who, at the time elections, they came, in a honeyed voice and in a hypocritical tone, to tell their voters promises that they were determined to not to hold.

Mr. Thomson, Crémieux's great-nephew, is a man who is truly dangerous to our settlers, and they have every interest in getting rid of them

As soon as possible.

Mr. Treille is certainly less Jewish his colleague, but he is forced to em-He must limp if he wants to keep his mandate of a member of parliament. He will sacrifice everything to avoid being sacrificed himself!

In the October 1885 elections, the French, wanting to finally shake off the yoke of the Jews, offered the candidacy to Mr. Forcioli and Mr. Fawtier. The two outgoing members of parliament, Messrs. Thomson and Treille understood that the
The struggle would be fierce and their success was far from certain.

The Jewish bigwigs opened themselves up-ment of the part, and it was decided that we would buy-would silence the voices of the undecided.

The Jews employed such methods to get their candidates elected, only pro-Testimonies were sent from all points

—

from the department to the Ministry of the Interior, and brought a request for invalidation of Messrs. Thomson and Treille!
Despite the shameful trafficking of Jews, Mr. Thom-
His song only received 6,213 votes and Treille 6,077.
while 5,698 votes had been freely cast

4. Mr. Andrieux was only able to obtain the file relating to the elections in Constantine.

“I knew,” Mr. Andrieux said from the podium to support his request to postpone the discussion regarding electoral operations in the department of Constantine, that The file had arrived at the ministry. I asked the midnister, what had become of him, I was informed that he was in the hands of Mr. Duvaux, rapporteur of the 11th bureau.

"After writing to the honorable Mr. Duvaux, without having Having received a reply, I went to the home of our esteemed colleague who informed me that the parts were not in his hands; he assumed they had were addressed to Mr. Versigny, president of the {1st bureau. I went on, continuing my fruitless search, (Smiles) at the home of the Honorable Mr. Versigny. He was absent, and he was kind enough to do me the honor of to warn in the evening, by telegram, that he had not I did not receive the parts in question.

"This morning, a request was made to the presidency of the Chamber, where the announced file had not arrived. Where was this file, which was supposedly released yesterday morning, from the Ministry of the Interior, and which was neither in the hands from the President of the 11th Bureau, nor in the hands of the quaestorship? D

"Gentlemen, we had to assume that he had passed the day in happier and more pri- hands "Viliécs (smiles to the right)."

mm US Ce

carried on Mr. Forcioliet 5.221 on Mr. Fawtier.

The most numerous and the most serious protests tended to establish that, penduring the week preceding the vote and in on October 4th, the supporters of Messrs. Thomson and Treille allegedly organized and engaged in the trafficking of electoral cards delivered to Jewish voters.

We are reporting this part of the Official Mr. Andrieux's speech, which asked invalidation:

"As soon as the town hall distributed the voter registration cardsrales, that is to say five or six days before the election, a carefully established census of the Israelites is taken. lists that appear on the electoral lists; we give them address of the brokers who come to find them and reThey proclaim their cards. The Jews hand over their cards. and receive a deposit on the agreed price. broker takes the cards and stacks them in a store; on voting day, the Jews come search; they are given to them; they are formed groups of four to five people that we make escorted by guards to the door from the town hall and it was only upon their departure that they were The additional cost is taken into account. That's how they almost all the Jewish voters of Constantine voted tine, I'm not just talking about the city of Cons"Auntie, but from the entire province."

Among the many protests that were sent, there is one that the adversMessrs. Thomson and Treille noted with care, because it emanates from an honest native, the Spahi lieutenant Soliman Ben Slimar, who had been knighted of the Legion of Honour following brilliant military services.

We provide it verbatim:

“I, the undersigned, Soliman ben Slimar, placeretired spahi commander, knight of the Legion of Honour, declares having seen me-even (which outraged me) buying in name-many Jewish votes on election day October 4th.

While Mr. Andrieux was reading From this piece, Raoul Duval brought out, a Once again, the injustice of the Crémieux decree:

— And this man is not a voter, while "That the Jews are!" exclaimed the future creator of the republican right.

An election broker, named Guédy, and Mr. Puech's banker employees, con- The general seillers were responsible for paying the Jews at a rate of 5 francs, 10 francs, 15 francs, and even 30 francs each, to get them to vote for Messrs. Thomson and Treille. They even brought in by horse-drawn carriage to the polls, an old Jew and gave him 20 francs.

For the Algerian Jew, the ballot paper is nothing more than a commodity like any other and more easily negotiated- more suitable than another during an election period.

Mr. Andrieux also gives the reading a protest from Mr. Gaudry, former magistrate, head of the bar association at Constantine.

“I was passing through Caraman Street,” said Mr. Gaudry, when some people came to me and they told me: |

"—An office has been set up in Dar-el-Bey" to buy voter registration cards; we we wanted to prevent this shameful trafficking by

Our surveillance, the police chased us away and struck one of us.

"I went to the central police commissioner's office."

and I told him what I had seen. He restated that he knew the state of affairs that I pointed out to him that he had placed an agent at the outskirts of Dar-el-Bey, but which he did not see not how he could intervene directlyment. |

"I must add that Dar-el-Bey was not not the only place where one bought and distributed I was playing cards. From my apartments, I have I was able to see, at seven o'clock in the morning, groups eight to nine native Jews, led by Mr. Martin's chaouch, the notary, and Pinas Attali, former court clerk "civilian, park on Mr. Sfar's door", member of the Israelite consistory, and to leave it with money in hand (two to three francs) on average).

"The man named Jacob Chamat, residing on rue Grand, summoned the Israelites to his home natives, who, for five francs, him handed in their voter cards. The day of the vote, the said Chamat brought to the hall of votes the individuals who own these cards with a ballot that he handed to them.

4. On June 20th, the commercial court proannounced the bankruptcy of the Jew Sfar, who left for abroad.

"This event took place publicly and"
Many voters can attest to that.

Lesieur Colin had addressed the protest next:

"I, the undersigned, Colin Théodore, surveyor" from the retired topographic service, declares having seen, on the morning of October 4th, in the corridor leading to the polling station, a native Israelites hand in their e- cards
"read to seven of his fellow believers."

We would never finish if we had to to recount all the Jewish trafficking during this election campaign. We are not content-It wasn't about buying the votes of the Jews, we proceeded by intimidation against certain certain settlers, and by the threats against a few officials. However, the Chambre did not vote for the invalidation!

We are no longer elected as members of parliament for Constantine.
we buy the mandate for four years, like we rent a shop at the Narboni bazaar for three, six or nine years.

Mr. Thomson is already thinking about the elections from 1889; he anticipates the difficulties he will have to get re-elected, so he seems willing to sacrifice Mr. Treille and to support Mr. Forcioli!

We hope that Mr. Forcioli will not accept not such a compromise. If we desire the to see someone sitting in the Chamber of Deputies, that is to the condition that he enters it free of any commitment gement.

When we publish the anti- elections

Jewish, we will indicate the candidates who, to In our opinion, they will be willing to keep their independence and we will ask our compatriots to vote without hesitation for

h

French people willing to support their interests nets.

VIII

THE COMPLICIT MINISTRIES

The Jews of France have benefited from their disastrous influence their coreligionists from Algeria: yesterday's slaves, they made lords of today.

What Baron Rothschild wants, the The French government wants it, and Mr. Baron Rothschild wanted that, in our colon-African, French and Arabs be the vassals of the Jewish usurers!

So that their power cannot be contested, the highest functions in the army, the judiciary, the administration administrative tasks were entrusted to men who were completely devoted to them.

Currently in the press, in the business, commerce, the native Jew is king, absolute king, king by virtue of his gold; he does the rise and fall, exhausting, ruining everything

He exploited all the branches for his own benefit, enriching himself. always, without scruple, without shame, by all means.

Gold from theft, gold from prostitution, gold from no matter what impure source it comes from, it has No smell: it's gold, that's all.

The Rothschild royalty exists so much In fact, there is no minister who dares to disobey his orders. Those who, like Mr. de Freycinet, tried from the beginning to resto operate within the law, they quickly understood that, If they didn't want to sink completely, they had to let themselves be carried away by the current, — and they surrendered.

To prepare for their advent, the Jews have placed at the head of the revolutionary movement-two of their own, Crémieux and Gambetta, who, taking advantage of the terrible situation where sej

e. $ France found, they made a fool of us confidence. They even succeeded, thanks to their hypocrisy, seeking acclaim from those who were destined to become their victims.

= Crémieux and Gambetta, to whom it had Jules Simon (Simon Suisse) was his deputy.
took advantage of their influence to attract to They, J. Favre, Picard, Ferry, Grévy, Brisson, Duclerc, Goblet, etc., who, driven driven by foolish ambition, they accepted all the proposals of the Jews.

Gambetta was all the more able to hide his game, which was still unknown in France this who the Jews were. The future dictator had made his breakthrough as a lawyer in the Baudin trial. He had presented himself as a republican under the Empire. and that was a sufficient title, in the eyes of a little-confident, to come to power.

No one had any specific information. about Gambetty; all that was known was that he was the son of a small shopkeeper from Cahors. Since then we've done some research and we quickly learned the origin of the great orator.

During the Continental Blockade, a Jew A Württemberg native named Gamberlé settled in Genoa and traded in coffee and counterband. He later married a Jewish woman from the country one of whose parents had been hanged, and he ita- He changed his name to Gambetta. {they or the grandson came to settle in Cahors and gave France the great man who was to to make the cause of the Jews triumph.

> PP Pme ED nm a Ge

Gambetta enjoyed for a long time a popularity that is difficult to explain those who have studied it closely.

He always took care to efface himself in order to to steer the ship of government.

Some fanatics have claimed that in In 1877, Gambetta had saved the Republic. This was a very serious mistake; the Republic triumphed because of the nation's verdict was in his favor.

In his many speeches, Gambetta has took advantage of his oratorical talent to dazzle his audience, and when, speaking of Mac-Mahon
The President of the Republic said: "We must
"Whether he submits or resigns," he has no
He wasn't a great fortune teller. It was obvious. that having attempted a coup d'état, the president would be forced to withdraw in case of failure.

It was not out of patriotism that the great
The speaker sought to revive confidence Republicans, but rather to make triumph-to pher the Jews. A monarchy would not have The encroachment of these parasites was then tolerated.

The Jewish ayocat had played its role so well that, until 1882, it was considered almost like the savior of France. We ask-He did well, quietly, how this man, who had started penniless, had been able to cons-to possess a fortune of several million
But we didn't go any further.

Unfortunately, everything here on earth comes to an end.
Gambetta had to come out from behind the scenes to to stage. He then revealed himself as he was there, and when the curtain fell, the audience Tavait juge.

The voters of Belleville, who had given, in 1877, the almost unanimous their votes proved to him that they did not want
They can no longer be represented by a dictator.
they now knew what the pros were worth masses of a Jew.

With the fall of the large ministry, in January

In 1882, Gambetta deemed it prudent to withdraw. temporarily. He was not to appear again. on the stage. The drama of Ville-d'Avray is it remained a mystery.

If Gambetta had died three years earlier, one could not have expressed some doubts about his dedication to the democratic cause. In just a few months, he had unmasked himself and had clearly shown his true purpose.

The one who dared will always be criticized. to call upon the great patriot for having, after the afto do Tunisian, ruinous for the country, betweentaken this disastrous Tonkin campaign which almilk continue Mr. Jules Ferry, the affiliate of the Jews.

Regarding the Jewish question in Algeriarie, we will confine ourselves to saying that Gambetta, who had been Crémieux's accomplice for the famous naturalization decree of Indigenous Jews, the work continued later of the president of the Alliance Israélite Universelle saddle. He was, on the advice of Kanoui and Isaac, the powerful author of all decrees relating to the Muslim natives, of which we We spoke in Jewish Algeria.

He was so uninhibited with the men of his continued to express his opinion on the Algeriansnothing, that one of them, Mr. Charles Ferry, has not afraid to repeat, within a commission of which he was a member, that apart from the civil servants, in fact, there weren't any in Algeria. French people, nothing but flaws and drinkers absinthe.

This gratuitous insult, directed at our national, clearly shows how far the me-taken from a large part of our representatives for all those who are not Jewish.

Upon Gambetta's death, the Jews offered the power to the Vosges native Jules Ferry who had them.
already given proof of his dedication.

Mr. de Freycinet, who has already been called upon several times at the presidency of the council, had been overthrown by the Jews, whom he had refused to serve me.
interests. Later, driven by ambition, he agreed to join our camp enemies, but we must recognize that he never derived the slightest benefit from any of them the shady dealings for which the Jews demanded his cooperation.

The former foreign minister is certainly one of our best diplomats mates. If he had tried to maintain his independence-hanging, he would have been called one day by the French, once again masters in their own house, to pre-to side with the destinies of France.

Unfortunately, what dominates in Mr. de Freycinet, that is, according to the expression of Mr. Drumont, intellectual and mo- cowardice rale; It is this lowering of character that has put everything that was honest in France at the mercy of the Jews.

Mr. de Freycinet remained honest at heart.
Every time he was called upon to support-before the Chambers this or that bill, presented by the Jews, we have seen hesitant-ter, and often he was even on the verge of to withdraw. But Eugène Mayer was there, and when the prime minister did not comply not immediately under the orders of the Jews, he he was saying, putting the knife to his throat: "You must comply, we want you to-lons.

Who doesn't see, in every stock market move,

a veritable coup d'état, prepared, thanks to the complicity of the ministry, for the benefit of the Jewish bank against a capital association-French lists? Who doesn't know that our men
The state always takes a share of the money Stolen from shareholders? But what we don't ex-Don't explain, it's just that a man protects the thieves, without accepting the slightest compensation
tion!

However, that's what you've always had Done, Mr. de Freycinet! You hate the Jews, and you serve them!..... If you do not don't feel strong enough to govern, for-
What do you accept power for?

To obey the Jews, you are acting against your ideas. When they told you, "you have to "Expel the princes!" you protested.
Mayer insisted; you yourself have-ordered the expulsion in the House, and have obtained.

Why didn't you imitate Mr. Baihaut?
Minister of Public Works, who preferred withdraw, rather than accept a certain mar-
Which one did you know about?

To replace him, the Rothschilds... imposed the Jew Millaud, senator of Rhône, and you bowed before the the will of these financial kings.

Will you say in your defense that your
Was your good faith taken by surprise? You should have... while knowing from experience how many are
All these cries of "Long live the!" are rather insincere.
France! Long live the Republic! so frequent-pushed by the Jews in the entourage of Mr. Ferry? These individuals are throwing these cries into their newspapers and in their speeches, as They're shouting a stock market price. You know what?
what to think of this patriotism of Paco-tille, whose net profits translate into hotels are being built in Parc Monceau the German Jews of Paris!”

Since Gambetta's death, we have saw the Ferrys, de Frey- succeed one another in power cinet, Brisson, Goblet and finally Rouvier, of whom the influence has been so harmful to France and for Algeria.

4. See on the role of the Jewish-German bank, Francors LoyaL, German espionage in France.

Under the ministry of Mr. Jules Ferry, we let's find:

At the public works department, the Jew Raynal, commissionary in Bordeaux, trading in goods.
who succeeded in getting the conventions voted on the railways.

Inside, the Waldeck-Rous- pomade bucket, which has been placed in the prefectures and the sub-prefectures, all the Jews who remained still out of work.

To the justice system, Mr. Martin-Feuillée, who has done, in Algeria especially, a complete purge magistrates. This man has always been... held a private correspondence with Kanoui, who, in concert with Mr. Pompeii, was preparing the nominations.

At that time, the Yuddis were such insolence towards the officials res, which they highly threatened to revolt those who did not comply with their orders.

MM. Waldeck-Rousseau and Martin-Feuil-
They approved of Mr. Tirman's conduct and of Mr. Firbach, during the unrest in Algiers.

They did not deign to respond to the protests.
'actions of the indignant French.'

At the same time and still on the de-Kanoui's order, they tried to stifle the Touboul brothers case (broadcast of counterfeit money). Having failed to succeed, they charged-manage their friend Devès to go and defend the ac-excused.

These two ministers, of whom we will retain
For a long time the memory in Algeria, they tried to expropriate the Arabs for the benefit of the Jews.
The Chamber having refused the 50 million of-commissioned by Mr. Tirman, they approved the expropriations carried out illegally by order of the governor.

We will publish later, in the Ælecanti-Jewish actions in France and Algeria, the biography of Mr. Jules Ferry's associates.

Messrs. Brisson, de Freycinet and Goblet, well that strongly compromised with the Jews, went

4. Several dispatches, addressed to the Minister of the Interior Internally, they remained unanswered. We had in hands some of these dispatches where it was reported to minister responsible for the conduct of administrators
from Algiers.

less far than Mr. Ferry. It is, moreover, for This is the reason they were forced to withdraw.

They were probably frightened by the impor-
the question that was being raised each day Jewish, stirred up by Mr. Drumont, and without a-They did not dare to serve the Jews.
too openly.

After the 1885 elections, the Jews have
They were so happy to see that one of their own, Simon, known as Lockroy, was the first elected official of the department of the Seine, which they immediately designated to Mr. Grévy as holder of a portefeuille.

The former trade minister quickly informs its voters, who, to the pro-legislative election chains, don't give him-will no longer cast their votes. This man of a notorious incapacity, on the advice of his co-religious figures and with the support of Eiffel and Ollendorif, got his colleagues to admit the project to build this famous

1. Edmond-Étienne-Antoine Simon, known as Lockroy, has shown, as soon as he was in power; proud and arrogant with those whom he used to call his friends.

tower 300 meters high, compared with reason for the Tower of Babel.

“The 1859 exhibition,” said Mr. Lockroy,
"will be our exhibition." He probably hoped so.
to decorate all Jews by a collective decree, as Crémieux had naturalized all the Indigenous Jews.

Senator Millaud of the Rhône, called to replace Mr. Baïhaut under the ministry Freycinet, had been kept by Mr. Goblet
At the request of the Rothschilds.

The Goblet ministry, which was only the mid-Freycinet's ministry, without Freycinet, has fallen under the coalition of Jews from all nuances, for the sole reason that he refused to to continue the policies of Jules Ferry.

From the moment the association came to power Rouvier, Barbe, Hérédia, etc., the Jews of Al-management is overwhelming the new president with demands.
council member.

They obtain the decree of June 27th which is nothing other than an intrusion into Algeria.
from the tax office and the customs officers or cellar rats,
for the purpose of property tax

vineyards, distilling their wines, in other words
"Home distillers".

All vineyard owners have protested against this decree, which was illegal.

since one can neither create nor perceive a a new tax, by virtue of a simple decree, does he disguise himself under the lying title of rèpublic administration regulations.

It is customary, moreover, with regard to Algeria, to use and abuse this means convenient, to circumvent the law and to subvert to engage in public discussion in Parliament
ment. | `

Having achieved this first result, our brave Youddis dispatch Mr. Tirman to Paris for make the liberal government understandtag that they would withdraw from the autonomous budget from Algeria.

How happy that brave Tirman would be!
to have his special Algerian budget, his little independent budget, kind, charming, something
A clean thing, 50 to 60 million tons...

What a find! And especially what a char-

A preface to his royal elevation! What

An attractive frontispiece for the Palace! A budget of 60 million to fiddle with loyalists and friends...
O laughing mirage!

But it's a much more difficult piece.
to make people swallow, that the stupidity of the decrees on the practice in Algeria and the small-scale distillers.
Despite all the trial balloons launched by Havas gossips, puffed up and bloated by their buddies, the "autonomous budget" and, with it, the "Algerian government" will arrive ma-

easily in the long run, far from being, alas!
Things conquered and victory won.

Everything was ready, yet admirably so.
prepared, and nothing was as easy as the installation lation of the Tirman royalty.

Didn't it have its own charter/constitution?
nelle, in the code of the /Indigénat or of the A truncheon? Three million submissive men to his empire, herded like a flock, subject to arbitrary taxation and forced labor, and, with this enslaved people, the great chiefs and feudal barons-docile daux, lords of the tent, otherwise dungeon?

What an inexhaustible source for the future

em ee me M ee o,

Special budget and slush fund! What a windfall!
where to draw endlessly and always!

The organization is already fully staffed:

Prefects, sub-prefects, chiefs and commanders military officers, administrators and offices Arabs: a whole military and civilian world, ready to obey Mr. Tirman's order.

His vigilantes, from the justices of the peace phenomena, with broad competence, up to its first court presidents, steeped in devotion, even to its chief prosecutors, devoted nonetheless and always to the learned authority; from the one who condemns, to The executioner: that's all there is to it.

obsequious, obedient, ready to bow down before his law, under his royal injunction!

For his army? Cedant armatogæ, quand
He speaks; the opposite, if the toga feigned resistance.

His press — is it necessary to remind you?
— calls, hopes for the day and the hour, to to celebrate the virtues of the new monarchy, and to carry its immense glory far and wide!

The only thing the viceroy would need now is a

=

"Legion of Honour", an order of chivalry any.

To those of our friends who were asking for the
the elimination of the governor general, the friends of the house, that is to say the Jews, tried to demonstrate that evil provesborn, not from the governor general himself, but.
of the inadequacy of his power!

The Jews of Algeria control this colony under the regime of the Caprice and the Decree, tobastard tonomy that delivers our three departures-Algerian comments regarding the personal government, and deprives them of the general guarantee of the law.
The general government is incompatible with the law; the decree regime is necessary for itsare, that's its very essence. From the day the A general law would protect Algeria, likewise that it protects the other departments of mainland France, the Governor-General would be nothing more than a mailbox, a a simple supervisor of the three prefects, a sort of commissioner or political agent. He does not

It would be useless, that's true; but it wouldn't do
No more harm!

Mr. Tirman is perfectly convinced that this truth. But he nonetheless cherishes it.
the hope of preserving its plantu-Pachaliki, even to extend his power, and to establish a kind of viceroyalty,
with its own independent and special budget.

He thought that with his comrades Thomson, Kanoui, Mauguin and Jacques, we could anything was possible under the Rouvier ministry. From there, the famous Algerian budget project, this pivot
This foundation, which he considered unshakeable, was necessary.
of the extension of his power.

All these Jewish projects, so grotesque
Be that as they may, they were caressed by these men at doing everything, who surround the rastaquouères from the Rouvier-Ferry ministry, of complicity with Governor Tirman.

It was with them that the "bad" thing happened.
coup » of the intrusion into Algeria, of excise on distilleries and rat-o-cace.

It is with them again that preparations are underway, the famous Algerian special budget is being tossed about nothing, — while waiting for Mr. Tirman and his accomplices can grope him all the time at ease, in his Algerian viceroyalty!

But there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip! And we firmly hope that this will be the case

illusions of Tirman and the Jews, as well as Perrette's milk pot, and that with the disappearancetion of the Rouvier ministry, the governor Tirman, pursued by the clamor of the crowd, will soon exclaim like Perrette de la Fontaine:

"Goodbye, calf, cow, pig, brood!"

All these facts clearly establish that the Jews of Algeria, represented by Mr. Tirman, can do nothing without the complicity of the government.

Let's now see what benefits they have has been able to withdraw until now from the presence at power of their accomplices.

At the fall of Mac-Mahon, the Jew Gambetta used all his influence to get appointed Mr. Jules Grévy, President of the Republic. The latter had consequently made commitmentsments, which he has never failed to keep and which took him far.

The news of this election was welcomed with joy in Berlin: she was the signal of the acacceptance of the pact that Mr. Bismarck dreamed of, the signal of Algeria's delivery to Jews, to the coreligionists of Beichrôder.

To comply with its commitments, Gambetta sent officials to Algeria Jewish employees or employees of Jews.

That's when the exploitation began. Arabs by Jews.

The Jews are watching for the Arab like

The spider stalks the fly. They call it, try to lend him a hundred sous against a bill-that he will sign. The native senses the danger.
hesitates, doesn't want to; but the desire to drink and Other desires also tormented him: a hundred sous represent so many pleasures for him.
finally gives in, takes the silver coin and signs the greasy paper. After two months, it owes ten francs, twenty francs after four one hundred francs per month after eight months, or one year. Then the Jew sells his land, if he has any one, or else, his camel, his horse, his Donkey, that's all he has left.

Mr. Bismarck, unable to believe so much of naivety, on the part of the French, sent directly spies in Algeria to ass-to ensure that his orders were faithfully executed cut.

The Grand Chancellor hopes that the Arabs
Those expropriated will leave their native land, or revolt-will play one last time against the French who will exterminate them.

It might have taken several years to to achieve this result. Then, the idea of experiments was considered. distant editions. We began with that one from Tunisia, to continue later with that from Tonkin.

The Jews, moreover, were demanding the Tu-nisie in compensation for their services.

But Mr. Jules Ferry, author of the policy Gambetta supporter, he did not forget Algeria. After having sent several thousand to Tonkin of riflemen, among whom was a great name-
With a shortage of volunteers, he considered expropriation.

natives.

Crémieux had taken advantage of the campaign against Germany to decree the naturalization collective sation of native Jews; Mr. Ferry wanted to take advantage of the Tonkin expedition, to achieve the collective expropriation of Arabs.

Mr. Bismarck had approved this procedure, which had been submitted to him by the Jews, and he Mr. Ferry had informed him of this. He was, moreover, eager to do so. to arrive at the denouement of the so audacious plot-a plot was hatched. He also feared seeing the majority refuse to cooperate with the one who served his projects so well.

Mr. Tirman himself went to Paris to to support the vote of the fifty million. We have already said that the credit had been denied.

Mr. Ferry did not understand that his majority abandoned milk. But he was not a man to back down. The Chamber had not wanted to expur-prayer of the Arabs, well! he would make the expr-Prayer without the Chamber!

He then gave full power to Mr. Tirman, whom he knew to be devoted to the Jews, by hiring him However, it's important to proceed gradually.

The Jews were so confident in the government complicity, which they become-were displaying the utmost insolence with the Ara-best t.

It was then that their insults, directed to the brave riflemen who were about to shed their blood for France, at the time of their departure for Tonkin, brought the emus-tes which we have spoken of in Jewish Algeria.

Not content with simply running into the Arabs, they are also addressing our nationals that they call "dirty French". It was Moreover, there, L4, caused the unrest in Algiers.
June 1884.

All these events took place under the minis-Tère Ferry, who was lending a hand.

1. The following anecdote can give an accurate idea of what Jews were once seen by Arabs:

"In a murder case, the presiding judge of the assizes court"
He questions an Arab man called as a witness:

— Who were the people present at the time?
of the crime?

The witness pointed out all the natives and two Europeans.

— Were there no other witnesses?

— No, Mr. President.

— However, someone was assigned to me (and he named a Jew).

The Arab, bewildered, cannot understand how one could invoke the testimony of a Jew and he responds in a completely natufel:

— But, Mr. President, there were also dogs, and

They were not summoned as witnesses.

Mr. Bismarck could finally see the approaching the day France was to be handed over to him, feet and with their hands tied, by Ferry and his accomplices!

Unfortunately for the great chancellor, the increasingly alarming news, which people were arriving from Tonkin, and were beginning to to seriously concern public opinion.
The MPs could not provide any explanation, as long as Mr. Ferry doesn't give them gave knowledge of no official dispatches ciely and merely repeated to them: "Have con-
"Fiancée in me."

In every department, people knew that Our soldiers were dying by the thousands under the bullets, typhus, cholera, climate; that The hospitals were full of sick people and empty.
of medicines!

Finally, Lang-Song's dispatch overturned the Ferry ministry.

The role of the ministry was entirely different in which General Boulanger sat.

In less than a year, he had acquired a Well-deserved popularity.

War, which was feared a few days ago months, no longer frightened us. The minister of the war had said we were ready to defend ourselves if our neighbors across the Rhine

They were attacking us and we knew that this soldier He wasn't lying.

In Algeria, the Jews had lost some of their prestige. The government, of which it was a part-General Boulanger had not consented to lend a hand to their maneuvers. We don't renaturalization of Arabs was no longer the priority. they requested it, and these were ready to provide evidence of their recognition session. |

Bismarck, warned by his spies, saw with difficulty the considerable increase of our forces. Instead of the exhausted nation that he he had hoped for, he saw rising up before him a formidable power.

He then asked the Jews for support. France and the Goblet-Boulanger ministry fell.

ARABS AND JEWS

Mr. Drumont often alludes, in the France juire, to the recognition that awakens in the heart of a Muslim every honorable act neat and straight. We who have studied A-Upon closer examination, we do not hesitate to affirm sea that, for those who are interested in him, he would not hesitate to sacrifice his life.

Captain Villot, recounting the scenes which took place in Constantine at the new of the disaster of Sedan, he said: (They had thrown on the paving stones, the bust of the Emperor. Some in-Digeneans gathered the debris and the emcarried.

These unfortunate illiterate people, who had not the slightest notions of the various forms of government, had remembered that the vain- The stump of Sedan! had visited them then that he was in all the splendor of his power, that he had prevented their dispossession and preprepared their assimilation.

Just recently, a brave native, Taieb Ben Kahal, lieutenant in the 3rd Spahis, told us- repeated the praise that the Emperor had bestowed upon him father, when he was a child.

"Under the Empire," he told us, "the Arabs" were admitted to high schools free of charge French. One day, Napoleon, -who was visiting the Constantine high school, made me go to tablueau and charged me with writing a few sentences his in French. Satisfied with me, who him had been reported by Professor Com- I was one of the best students, the Emperor told me he gave me forty francs, saying:

4. Napoleon III was very interested in the Arabs. The Rothschilds, who were already considering handing over this colony to their native coreligionists, understood that they would only have a chance of succeeding with the fall of the Em- worse.

"I want Arabs to be educated" to be able to defend their rights. We we will receive all those who request the qua- French citizens and we will protect you all indifferently.

"I have never forgotten those words," he added. Taieb, and I will always remember the Empereur.

This simple story shows how far the recognition of our Muslim natives
mans. |

Their attachment to the Emperor reur, they were determined to continue it to our rulers, if they had not tra-worked to bring about their downfall.

The Arabs, moreover, have such a sympathetic nature.
thie for France, than those themselves, who do not are not under our control, we don-
They give daily proof of their devotion
ment. |

In this regard, we reproduce an address-tion of the Sharif of Ouazzan t (Morocco), to the indigeneans placed under his command:

1. Our great French protégé.

"I took shelter in the shade of the flag"
French because of envious and jealous people
They wanted to harm me. The sultan, our maitre, listened to perverse mouths: my life, who is dear to you, was in danger;
Also, to keep it for you, I asked the protection of this great country: France!
who watches over me like a mother watches over his beloved child. God commands us to have-sea those who oblige us, you must therefore To love this country because it also obliges you.

"By lending him your strong arms, he will..."
pays generously, and he treats you like He treats his own people. Be fair, be just.
towards all your Algerian coreligionists, and,

If these are causing you harm, contact us.
to the French magistrates.

"The French are your friends, since they feed you, your wives and your children, through your work; you must have them sea because they are your fathers and your protectors authors. Also, the day when France will need You must be ready to pay your "Blood for her!"

p

What is the difference between this language and that one? Jews whom we have raised up to ourselves.

— You are not French to serve the France, Kanoui continually repeats to his coreligionists, but to strip those who are not of your religion.

One of our correspondents from Oran, Mr. Belint, currently based in Tangier for studying the Moroccan Jew, we are informed a note that gives an idea of the contempt what do the Indian chiefs still have today? genes for Jews enriched at our expense.

Mr. Benchimol, Moroccan Jew, knight of the Legion of Honour, interpreter at the Chancellary of France, with the rank of honorary consulraire, still from France, banker, arch-millionman, trader, company agent navigation the Transatlantic, Paquet and others, a major producer of rain and sun at the Tangier customs post, had gone to Fez,

---

1. Mr. Belin spares neither his time nor his money to unmask the Jews. We can only approve.

highly the energy he has shown, in many cjrconfactions,

near the Emperor of Morocco, sent, he said-Yes, for a purely diplomatic mission.

After making inquiries, we learned that the mission he was entrusted with consisted of in magnificent gifts that he had just given frir to the Sultan. He hastened to give them refuge-to serve while saying to the Jew:

— Keep that for your government which You've made yourself quite rich; I give, it's my duty, and I have retained enough dignity to I will accept nothing from my previous topic. For
To introduce yourself to me, do you have a letter of credence?
of your government, conferring upon you the title Ambassador of the French Republic?

— But Her Majesty knows full well that...

— Yes, I know you ended up acc-to protect half of Tangier, which you expel my subjects, whether you pressure them or not pressured by your factors, that your life has gone from begging, and now you're richer.
that I know this. So pleasesir, to rid me of your presence too much bulky.

— Allow me, Sire, to present to you this note, to which I ask you to give due consideration welcome.

And our protégé handed him a request, tending to make it pleasing the master of the universe towards making him pay compensation one hundred thousand francs to compensate him for the loss he had suffered on tobacco, apporcontrary to the firman' which forbids them dait usage.

— Tell me, did you consult me before doing your supplies of this poison which Is it making my people stupid? No, it isn't, because that you knew very well that I would have made you put
At the door? Then get out of here immediately!
Me, and never set foot there again.

So, in summary, here's the jacket won by our overqualified official. Refusal of present. Refusal to pay compensation to kif and tobacco merchant.

In fact, this is not a diplomatic mission.
deserves the prize.

This lesson should serve as an example to French people who become accomplices of the Jews.

We cannot characterize the conduct of the the French government's stance towards all these Arabs who have given us so much evidence of their devotion. Among all these brave men
We are pleased to quote the lieutenants riflemen Amar ben Ahmed, Kaddour Ben Tahar, Ameur Ben Mustapha, Mamin
ben Turkman, Mohamed ben Bocktach,

---

4. A firman is understood to be an order or a permit issued by... nant of the sultan. |

Atman ben Abderahin, Lakdar ben el Arbi, Tahar ben D'Zitouch, Mohamed ben M'Ha-Med, Ahmed ben Taieb, Mohamed ben Mes-Sadour, Said ben el Mansour, Mohamed ben Aliman, Said ben Lamara, Sim'ain ben Abd-drackman, Taieb ben Kahal, Rahal ben Ah-med ', whose brilliant feats of arms we were recounted by their senior officers. It was not through favoritism that they obtained-naked these decorations of which they have the right to be Proud: they deserved them.

We regret not being able to tell

4. All these native officers made several ` cam-loincloths, among which we will cite that of 1870-71 against Germany, and the more recent ones from Tunisia and from Tonkin,

Here are the campaigns of each of these officers, But we lack space, and we must we will limit ourselves to offering them our praise at name of all true French people'.

The Jews, on the other hand, who cannot to inspire us only with contempt, they all enjoy days of a few privileges. Not only when they are incorporated they obtain con-regularly granting permissions, for their numerous holidays: Easter, New Year's Day, Yom-Kipour, etc., but they also make exempt from exercises.

1. Under the ministries of Freycinet and Goblet, the general Boulanger had requested and obtained the application of the decree of October 24, 180, relating to the naturalization of the Indians Muslim genes.

The former Minister of War who, in the eyes of the Jews, had the wrong thing to do was to put his country on a state of defense, comp-was targeting the Arabs to increase our military numbers silence.

Knowing how badly these brave soldiers had been hurt
'to see their applications for naturalization refused under the Under the Ferry ministry, he had believed it his duty to oppose to what he considered an illegality.

The Arab leaders retained excellent memories of General Boulanger, and they are not afraid to repeat, that in the event of war with Germany, their subjects would... will be seen by the thousands in all parts of the Algerian territory nothing to fight for in our ranks.

The order of each regimenent, as the AXachir festival approaches, and we will read there:

“Permissions will be granted, of
On such and such a day, to the soldiers (active and re- army) (servants) of the Israelite faith.

There is a very recent fact that shows us well the indirect means employed by our rulers, to force the Jews.

We read in the Algerian Radical of September 26, 1887:

“Yesterday, at the 2nd Zouaves, in Oran, according to the ins-
The colonel asked for instructions from the minister.
who were the volunteers for the major maneuvers.

His appeal was warmly received.
by all French reservists; but not one
The Jew did not register; and that makes sense, one gets tired and there are no bedside matters to

to engage in major maneuvers.

Not good, Mr. Minister! Unable to to collectively exempt Jewish reservists, you rightly thought that, thanks to your instructions stipulated that only Jews would be exempt.

the French having too much patriotism and dignity in refusing to march.

But we would be curious to know why what reasons the Minister of War did not have requested volunteers for the gran-maneuvers?

The Jews are not content with the privileges-the privileges granted to them; they try to corto break their leaders. The Little Colonist tells to
In this regard:

“Jews, reservists in the 1st Zouaves, to the-
would have been daring enough to offer to officers sums ranging between 25 and 60 francs in order to be exempted from the exercises.
Of course, they refused.
indignation. That's not enough: this attempt-
This act of corruption deserved to be reported.
immediately to the attention of the heads of the re-"Giment, which would then have ruled."

But it is not necessary, it seems, that these degenerate remains of the Ancient Testament strive to find a way exemption from exercises or maneuvers.
Isn't it all figured out, and isn't it the favoritism that will protect them completely and everywhere, won't he shoot them? Not out of this bad situation yet? That's bad- It's easy to say, but it's true: Messrs. Youddis were, in order of superiority, paid largely in companies that do not are not subject to maneuvers.

If it were necessary to cite other facts in support of In our statement, we would only have to mention what happened on Friday, September 30th last (the day after Yom Kippur) to shooting exercises in Hussein-Dey, where the Jews remained lying down in the tent, while that our compatriots were exhausting themselves fighting in all directions, and this under the pretext that the circumcised gentlemen did not have hit by cartridges, as a result of the permission which had been granted to them the day before for observance of Yom Kippur.

Although these papier-mâché soldiers did not take part in the maneuvers, three-quarters of the way back in, not to mention the all of them stayed behind and formed a band of stragglers who were very remarkable que.

What would it be like if they had to do camloincloth?

We were pleased to learn that, during the last training period, the Algerians, furious to see the methods used by the Jews to evade the necessities of the military life, spared neither them nor the neither vexations nor persecutions.

The Tlemcen Courier of October 28 and The Petit Fanal of the 21st requested an enquest related to mistreatment including Jewish reservists had been the subject of... during the last 28-day period.

We believe that not all investigations will change nothing, as long as we haven't sup- the privilege enjoyed by the Youddis. We will never be able to admit that the Jews obtain permits, under pre- festive text, while the French of blood and origin remain locked up in the ca- Serna. |

This is what equality looks like under the Rouvier ministry. and people will say that Judaism does not infiltrate

Everywhere, even in the army?
18

D -_-

It would be very difficult to prove the con- milking.

If there are French people cowardly enough to pro- to protect the Jews, there are others to the contrary who avoid any close contact with the des- descendants of Israel:

On July 14th, the school battalion Oran was to be reviewed at the same time time as the army. These future soldiers had, as flag bearer, a young Frenchman, named R., very well-liked by his classmates.

The Jews asked the commander of the battalion, Mr. de Lestoc, captain in retirement, to replace, during the review, the French flag bearer, one of their own named Toledano.

Mr. de Lestoc granted this request and the Young R. was immediately replaced by the youddi.

Without the insistence of several instructors of the French, all French people would be immediate- they stepped out of the ranks.

After the review, half of the battalion, R. At the top, he sent in his resignation: he didn't stay than Jews in the school battalion. The game-

- has

The resigning members considered as an outrage the handing over of the flag to a Jew, that is to say, to the very insulter of this flag.

Mr. Belin frequently sends messages from Tangier to independent newspapers in Algiers some Details on the exploits of Moroccan Jews.

In a recent correspondence, he- sant the executioner of Frenchmen sold to the Jews Moroccans, he said, after having told their shameful exploits:

"This is how things happen at Morocco! And not a single journalist had the guts to- the rage of dragging these men to the pillory of the public awareness and to say to everyone: the There they are in all their horror; let us drive them out and that it be done quickly.

"We who want to be useful to our country" and to our fellow citizens; we, who want that French interests prosper and grow

They say instead of falling with these sad people individuals who loiter in the filth of the Lhon-
We, the owners of the national flag in Morocco, Let's unmask them, and we will unmask them all.

ee — me

without forgetting a single one and without sparing any of them Just one.

We no longer see them in the courts
. of commerce than Jewish magistrates. The vice-president of the chamber of commerce Salfati Isaac, from Constantine, is Jewish; the judge the most influential member of the commercial court Bône, Achille Weill, is also Jewish. Good that he was a fierce opponent of Mr. Fawlier, he had not the tact to be rejected in The Cadet-Fawtier affair. His friend and coreligionnaire, Mr. Ephraim Narbonne, defense attorney-sister, claims to be running the court', and if the French magistrates do not comply with
He insults his orders. In 1885, the Petit Bônois put the Attorney General in a difficult position.
time to comment on the attacks diritreacherously orchestrated by the Jewish lawyer against some judges.
4. This Jewish lawyer had, and still has, the pretension of pre-to counter the court's decisions. In each case, He told his clients that the magistrates had their reasons to comply with its conclusions.

However, Mr. Ephraim must remember the lesson that one of his colleagues gave it to him, right before his eyes.

judges.

EEE EEE

The court had been wrong, he said, to pursue the French (smugglers), who had voted in the legislative elections, while they were removed from the electoral listsrales. |

The Independent of Constantine, organ Isaac, for his part, spoke of the condemnationtion to one month in prison of a Jew who had voted without right, being bankrupt, and facing prosecution. exercised against fourteen others. He hoped Mr. Thomson would probably succeed in to pardon these individuals, who had committed promised for him.

This is a surprising admission. From the Independent. Here are fifteen Jews, who took part in the vote, not having the Right! And how many others we don't have pursued! And the dead! 1! For we have consnoted that individuals who have died since the closure- The electoral lists were pointed out the voting lists.

Justice is, as we have said, in the hands of the Jews who use it against the 'French and the Arabs. Since a few years, thousands of Muslims were robbed and ruined by the Jews and never The thieves were not pursued.

15.

That the general councillors Alphandéry, Woltz, Uhry, Krapt, David, Bloch and Ulhmann, supported by Rabbi Bloch, preparedrent these famous decrees, and send them to the competent minister, through the intermediary of Mr. Tirman, that's an insult thrown in the face Of our own citizens! But only magistrates The French refuse to prosecute the Tabet Abraham, Jais Solomon, Isaac, Simon Elijah, Lévy, Perz, David, Cosman, etc., who, under the title of bankers or money changers, lending tent at 100p. 0/0 per week, while the The facts are established and usury is punishable. by our laws, that's what we call in France, the land of corruption!

The commercial court of Algiers was seized of a matter which appears to us to be confined very closely to the correctional police:

A brave Youddi, Messaoud-Cohen-Solal, installed, a few years ago, a bitit goufabric mirce, garments and other items

eese seca e Mrs. One due M ne em trinkets, special to the coreli- bazaars Aaron Firbach's legionnaires.

There were Rossi- in Solal's shop fantastic gnols, worthless of any kind, but than compliant experts, tris counus sour the place of Algiers, complacently assessed to a few hundred thousand francs.

Armed with his fictitious inventory, — everything is fictif in cedrame commercial, except for the boil-lons swallowed by the manufacturers of the metropole, — sheltered by the honor of its lanhearts, Cohen-Solal was able to bring from France of long-term goods, the to sell off cheaply; but... that's where it comes in erects a but terrible... the Mane, Thecel, Beacons of this orgy of the Balthazars of the bitit Algerian Goumirce.

Cohen-Solal, a straw man, according to his expression, in his distressing letter to the trustee, had to pay the Company every month Mantout enormous sums, beyond proportion with the profits he could realizeser. |

As long as the manufacturers' goods French have lasted, the Cohen establishment Solal was like a small change, where currency was being produced clandestinely which we needed.

Then one fine day, the straw man, tiredhaving forsaken the role assigned to him, he withdraws to the campaign, leaving to Mr. Eugène Mantout the The sad task of liquidating an association whose assets amounted to millions business, to the paltry sum of 960 francs, the amount of the store shelves! It is true that we had acquired another victim, to whom the nightingales of the store Solal had been re-examined with a surcharge, Of course. Hence, new credit; new fictitious paper factory and circulation... And naturally, another disaster...

There can be no doubt about the guilt of Eugène Mantout, who, Cohen-Solal's presence and, without being associated, Neither sponsor nor employee, led the shadowy operations of this... strange commercial house.

Unimaginable feats of strength have been accomplished

eme

complied with by Mantout and his associates. There are especially a story of bribes the modest sum of 200,000 francs each, of which at least half a dozen, put into circulation, would be the original cause-new to the current trial.

In summary, an important material fact is exonerated from the Mantout-Cohen-Solal trial.

Abusing their commercial position and of an excessive loan granted by the Bank from Algeria, credit fueled by fictitious paper, a group of Jewish merchants, headed by a character with an unlimited ban-that, could, under the cover of one or more straw men, exploiting the Algiers square and extract hundreds of thousands of francs to the merchants of the Metropolis, misled by honorability and commercial surface area, ap-relatives, of these so-called notable Israelites.

The case will be curious for more than one reason: and the Jewish bank, its skills, its cunning and His stuff will be spread throughout their bear. This it is no longer just the "bitit goumirce", it's mainly the exploitation, on a large scale, of art, so familiar to the Is- family .rael, to make money with the money of others.

This case is connected, in more ways than one, to the one we have already spoken of (Witersheim), regarding the excessive credit granted by the bank to certain privileged individuals, and of the fictitious paper and circulation that formed it the main food source.

Serious, honest commerce has the most great interest in these obscure undercurrents of the Jewish bank, more or less shady, be illuminated. It is necessary that the lu-work is being done on this unusual farm public credit.

After such events, one finds it astonishing-noting that French and Arabs, ruined by the Jews are revolting against their exploiters!

But it is the gallows that the Jews need for make them atone for the harm they have done to us do. ;

Everyone who knows Algeria recognizes will be born with us that the Arabs are real-element of a good dough, to continue to

to serve France, after all the injustices committed against them.

We have, for informational purposes, took the names of all the native officers, (wearing the brave's cross) whose parents were ruined by the Jews. We have:

In the province of Algiers:

Lieutenants Kaddour ben Tahar, Omar Ben Ali and Mohamed Ben Sliman, and the sub-Lieutenants M'Hammed ben Messaoud, Kouiby ben Ahmed, Ali ben Rahbia, Mohamed ben el Kassem and Zagour ben Slimar; — in Constantine, the lieutenants Mohamed ben Kouan and Rahal ben Ahmed, and Second Lieutenants Larby ben Ahmed, Ali ben Abd el Ouad and Mohamed ben Ahmel; — in the province of Oran, the lieutenants | Mohamed ben Messaoud and Ahmed ben Taieb, and the sub-lieutenants Resgui ben Mohamed and Embark ben Aiech.

When the parents of these officers, who However, they have acquired rights to our protection, came to protest against the exploitation tion of which they had been victims on the part

Jews, our officials responded famous balech or traditional roh accom- often accompanied by a few blows of mahunt.

If the Algerian MPs do not want to represent to feel that the Jews, we will find in France representatives who will defend the Algerians and Arabs.

MICHELIN-GAULIER PROJECT

The question has often been raised as to whether it is interesting- resentment of the emancipation of the Arabs, but The Jews have prevented, until this day, that this question should be brought before public opinion public.

In July 1884, Messaoud ben Djebari
in fact, at the hall on rue Daunou, a conference rence on Algeria. After summarizing the history-the speaker concluded by
. the granting of French citizenship to our Muslim compatriots.

This question is of some importance.

from the point of view of Arab taxation.
19

Until 1878, the prefectural councils from Algeria judged that all the natives from Algeria indiscriminately should have been subject to the payment of ara- contributions bes, which struck, prior to the conquest, all the inhabitants of the country con-
who: Muslims and Jews t. |

The Council of State has not always been this opinion, and, since 1878 in particular, it has rendered a large number of decrees under the terms of which the native Jews naturalized French by the reckless decree of the government of the National Defence of October 24, 1870 (decree) Crémieux), as well as the Muslims equipped

4. Our legislators seem to care very little about colonial budget. It was especially in Tunisia that the administration financial management leaves much to be desired.

If we compare the Tunisian budget of 1875 to that of 1887; it is noticed that the collection costs, at the time of the financial commission, amounted to 60% of the revenue, while the current financial management, which realizes 400,000 francs in capital gains just from the tax rents, increased its management fees from 6 to 16%. Hence This enormous gap between two eras, the pre-Mière wasn't considered a role model? The sole cause is the development of the scourge of bureaucracy.

Mr. Cambon fought against this tide as long as he could.
rising and he was criticized for doing nothing.

denaturalization orders were to be exempt from paying Arab taxes.

Prefectural advisors of Algeria had to bow to these rulings of a jursuperior diction, and consequently they have modified their case law in this regard.

We cannot help but say that this immense amount of taxes, from which the beneficiaries benefit individuals who have remained the same than in the past, and that our civilization has not to still be affected is excessive and impolitic.

The mass of the native Muslims is very unhappy about these exemptions, and, at his eyes, the condescension of the advice of prefecture, in the application of a principle Narrow rights are perceived as weakness.
Indeed, the Arab proletarian cannot admit that a native Jew, once bowed under the båton of the Turks, may be treated as equal to a French citizen.

The immunity in question can, in Pave-to be dangerous to our safety, and,
From now on, she breaks off, in a way unfortunate for our finances, the balance of our colonial budget. It is therefore high time that we are concerned in an effective way-tive to look for resources elsewhere intended not to hinder the development of the departs municipalities and communes of Algeria.

This, in our opinion, must be one of the consequences consequences of the Michelin-Gaulier project, including the but is to give to all the natives of Al-manages the rights and duties of citizens French.

In short, what we did for the Jews, Why wouldn't we do the same for the Arabs?

An Arab is worth as much as a Jew, it seems to us-blue! |

If we listen to the interested newspapers, it's-that is to say, the Jewish newspapers, the idea seems impraTickable and even dangerous.

They shout at us: "You are going to become citizens!" and French soldiers of fanatical Arabs or ignorant people, who will arm themselves against us rifle and ballot paper on occasion.

Well! Let's suppose the law is passed and that thirty thousand Arabs be incorporated within the ranks of the French Army. That could, in the event of a revolt, do this contin-relatively weak and scattered in a large number of garrisons? Wouldn't it be-This is not a basic precaution to isolate the various factions of natives and the dis-penetrate into the detachments where they would be in smaller numbers, either in Algeria, or in France?

That's what we would do eagerly.

So, no danger of insurrection.' That's it.

for the military peril; as for the political dangertic, it exists mainly for the deputies Jewish communities in Algeria, who would see their elect-Kashir fighters crushed under the mass of the electrnative peoples, their hereditary enemies.

Therefore, it is not in the recriminations
Jews, the real ones, must be sought out.
disadvantages of the bill.
= According to the proposal of Messrs. Michelin and Gaulier, all the political laws of France would be applicable to the Arabs, but they

1. We will point out that in the various insur"rections" of the Arabs, we have never seen a spahis or a riflemantheir native son broke ranks to betray France.

would remain at the point of killing civilians in Scumis their personal laws, unless they declassify, in accordance with the decree of the 27th October 1870, which they intend to be governed by French civil laws.

While the project is beautiful and just in principle,
We must not deny that it is current-Completely impractical.

Assimilation can only occur Gradually, competent people, like the general councilors of Algeria, would have could deal with partial emancipation and to express a wish on this subject which would have been trans-put in parliament'.

Jewish influence must be eliminated because; the Jews alone, we believe, have interest in obstructing a decision of this kind.
Emancipated too soon, they hope that the Arabs will never be. It remains to be seen whether

1. The authors of the project will find in the Chamber a a large number of MPs unable to give their opinion in a matter that is completely foreign to them.

The Arabs are also unknown to most French people, more so than the natives of our colonies distant,

They themselves should have been, or if the Arabs should not be considered before them as worthy of bearing the title of citizens
French !

We want the bill to be taken into consideration, but with no name-numerous modifications.

If the few natives who came to us and living with us, are considered worthy of being French, why all those who own either land or an industrial sorting, paying taxes or licenses, having taken possession of French land, does not merit-Wouldn't they be better off being French?

Attract as many native people as possible to the area from our centers, forcing them to concentrate and to establish themselves on a territory which Property will be guaranteed by our laws, and their will give the right to be naturalized, that's it certainly what should be the subject of studies those who are interested in indigenous people.

The animosity of the Arabs that persists against us as a result of such a serious fault that impolitic, to fall on her own and will not have

332 THE JEWS IN ALGERIA

DETE eke o Dae oo SEC CE ES RS

no reason to exist when they finally know that these vile and despised Jews will have sort of reckoning with them. Maintaining the predo-the Jewish minority and leave hanging the
the question of Arab emancipation is not
No longer possible today.

The key point of the proposal
The Michelin and Gaulier grammar is to know how to…
would Muslims accept this nature?
collective achievement.

They would certainly ask for it if they knew the advantages they could remove them. But out of the three million individualsgenes that inhabit Algeria, two million at least, nestled in the mountains or on the edges of the desert, do not seem to doubt that they are under our control.

These unfortunate people, who live in a savage state vage, do not have the slightest notion of civilisation. Their animal life is not interrupted that through their frequent invocations to Maho-they blindly obey their marabout end, without worrying about what's happening around them.

THE JEWS IN ALGERIA 333

For them, it would currently be inept.

to apply for naturalization.

But alongside these savages, we find many Arabs who lived in our contact and service in our armies. Among them, Some have even already asked for naturalization.

Those people certainly welcomed them: with joy the bill of the two MPs of Paris.

However, one question inevitably arises: these

Would Arabs renounce their privileged status? sonnel? |
The authors of the proposal would leave to the natives, who had become French citizens, the choice between French civil law and the law Muslim.

In Jewish Algeria, we said that the personal status of Arabs is regulated by the Quran which contains all their religious and social laws.

We must recognize that the new The French would find it difficult to give up their polygamous habits and that many even would protest against our D a ism.

But that would be, in our opinion, a very weak thing. obstacle.

What Mr. Michelin wants above all

And Gaulier, it's that the Arabs have a state civil, whether they are voters, whether they are soledates!

After forty years of Arab bureaus and of mixed communes, — which is hardly worth better, — after a hundred attempts at reconnectionments, autonomy and other swings Official, hasn't the time finally come? to wrest the Arab people from feudalism and to the arbitrary decisions of civil servants and military?

A self-interested but honest, valiant communist The Arab, in his view, despises the selfish Jew, speculating... He was a coward and a traitor. The Crémieux Decree made him... a wound that is still bleeding and that he will be It's difficult to heal...

But it's good to see if the project in question Would this be an effective remedy?

If the naturalized Arabs vomit to fix

In France, one could not have, in their favor, double standards; but of the moment when they would not leave the ground native, why not preserve them Their personal status?

To achieve the desired result two deputies from Paris, we must not go abruptly, but gradually.

Indeed, one could not consider making immediatedirectly from each village a new municipality, administered like those of France, but one can, without any problem, require sheikhs to keep records of the civil registry where births would be recorded sessions and deaths.

Our citizens would be very little concerned.
of the marriage of naturalized Arabs; they do not would see in them only new French citizens, having the same rights and the same obligations.

As we have already said, we do not would not be able to currently consider naturalization collective tion.

Mr. Sabatier, deputy from Oran, who studied the question, he told us that he was not par-

RER. © + of

herbalist of the naturalization of Arabs, because that the new French would vote with
the Jews.

In each village, he claimed, the Arabes will comply with the will of their chief, and this chief will be sold to the Jews.

We are far from sharing that opinion from Mr. Sabatier, and we do not think that The representative from Oran finds a lot of supporters in the House.

The Arabs profess too deep a mistaken for the Jews, never to ally themselves with them.
There are even many who ask for the naturalization for the sole purpose of fighting their age-old enemies.

Despite Mr. Sa-'s contrary claims Batier, we are convinced that we do not we will triumph over the Jews only by granting to Arabs have the status of French citizens.

The MP from Oran, however, is asking for naturalization of the Kabyles: "Their customs, he said, they are getting closer to ours; they are

14. See in Jewish Algeria what we have said about Kabyles.

intelligent and hardworking, and if they become voters, they will know the value of their bul- voting instructions.

While the Kabyles are, in general, more intelligent lients than the Arabs, it is not a ra- its sufficient nature to warrant exclusion from to the detriment of those to whom we have a duty to educate and to civilize.

Mr. Michelin, who went to visit Algeria to study the customs of the Arabs, to rendra in our opinion.

He now sees that naturalization collective action by Muslims is something impossible, as a result of the very refusal of those who would be expected to benefit from it.

It is a favor, admittedly, that one is requesting. for them, but a favor of which they do not know- They don't have the importance.

Sila's cause of the Arabs is of real interest. Messrs. Michelin and Gaulier, as we have seen- Let us consider, which they seek first to improve the situation of our natives! That they ask- education is essential for them, if not compulsory. At least it's free!

As for their proposal, it will be very-easy to remove, to put on a new one-a wish that all Algerians will approve.

Instead of collective naturalization, that they are requesting partial naturalization
and that their new project be designed as follows:

"They will be declared citizens by right French, all the native Muslims who
They will request it!

There would not be, as Mr. Sa- requests building, to establish a difference between the Ka-Byles and the Arabs.

It would no longer be a forced card; the indigenes would not be French against their will.
But they would have the right to be.

The number of applications would perhaps not be
It may not be considerable from the start, but, thanks to education, he would go every day to increasing.

The addition of indigenous capabilities does not would not be able to exert any harmful influence on the Algerian electorate. Moreover, Zion

4. It would then be pointless to complete all the formalities.
required today to obtain naturalization.

appreciates our electoral system in its re-
Based on current results, it couldn't be any worse.

But what is currently beyond all controversy, observed across all fields of battle, as proclaimed by all, affirmed by its own history, this is the value military, very real, of the indigenous people Arab and Kabyle, that is to say, followers of Muhammad.

General Ferron said he was taking soldiers wherever he found them: profound words and true, although smelling a little too much of the caSerne and the mercenary soldier.

While it is very courageous to concoct such elaborate theories-chauvinistic tines in the columns of the newspapers In short, it's very unhealthy to pull the stunt of fire against William's grenadiers.

The Arabs have demonstrated, in a hundred basizes, their ardor, we will even say their belligerent savagery. In case of conflict with Germany, their battalions would be a A valuable aid, on which we must to count and that the duty of the administration The goal of war is to prepare.

If Israel's cowardice is proverbial, the The valor of Islam is certain.

The patriarchs must remember the poiA group of Turcos, caught half-naked, came to die on the Prussian pieces, whose bronze still bears the imprint of their formidable jaws.

Soldiers of this caliber are not a negligible amount, and the weather would be nice to see, on the day of the battle, a regiment of Arabs grappling with Von Bis-'s reservists Mark!

Perhaps that day will come!

In any case, we need to prepare for it!

As we were saying at the beginning of this chapter, that the abolition of the Arab tax, which is a heavy burden for the natives, would be one of the consequences of naturalization. But the project cannot be voted on as it stands. has been presented, we hope that Messrs. Mi-Chelin and Gaulier will demand equality from Taxation for all, indiscriminately, French people, Arabs and Jews.

(1) There is one point on which we call particular-

If then, agreeing with our opinion, they manage to obtain partial naturalization and progressive among native Muslims, They will have done a lot for Algeria, they will have done a lot for France.

drawing the attention of Messrs. Michelin and Gaulier, we we want to talk about public works, both in Algeria than in Tunisia.

For Tunisia, wrote Mr. Hugonnet, out of two million assigned to road and bridge works, the staff absorbs 500,000 francs, that is to say 95,000. Even if these The work was undeniably useful! Mr. deLanessan was right to criticize them, because the Arab paths were enough things are going well for the moment, with transport becoming principally on camelback. It would have been easy to to improve, by means of indigenous services, and dc to dedicate the sums, wasted on construction of unnecessary roads, to the guarantee @ interest ts for the railways.

"Isn't it incomprehensible," added Mr. Hugonnet, that French taxpayers continue to pay the interest guarantee to the Bone-Guelma Company, while the Tunisian budget provides each year surpluses that are wasted on work that is useless Why bother maintaining useless civil servants? Mr. Pelletan has explained once before from the podium the kind of speculation that done to the detriment of the Metropolis on this guarantee of in-interests. It seems to us that he could intervene in the the budget committee and the House to prevent that our money continues to be distributed, without need-"cited, to the shareholders of this company."

Colonization must no longer be an enterprise directed against the savings of the Metropolis, and serves only to to provide a living for civil servants or to enrich speculators.

CONCLUSION

In this second work, we have tried to provide facts in support of the thesis that we supported in Jewish Algeria. It is not enough, in fact, to simply say we are being robbed, The thieves must be identified. The Fran- The Spanish, too trusting by nature, want... irrefutable evidence to believe in the guilt-bility of its exploiters.

While in some cases it is not permitted to to describe the actions of a particular character, At least we have the right to specify them. That's then it is up to the reader to draw The conclusion.

We had said in Jewish Algeria: it is in the upper echelons of government that we must look for the causes of the problem general; — we have just demonstrated it in this new book.

The Jews had to, in order to realize their dream, attracting some French people, whose thirst Greatness would be a powerful incentive. This is how the Picards, Léon Say, SteenaKers, Tirard, Rouvier, Dautresme, Duclerc, Barbe, Sarrien, Ferron, etc., embraced the because of the Jews to satisfy their ambition.

We explained how Gambetta, on the advice of his fellow believers, had elevated Mr. Jules Grévy to the position of President of the Republic. It was, he himself said, a good, very malleable paste, of which its Friends would know how to use it.

Having the first one in their camp magistrates of the Republic, they could to choose the ministers; they were authorized toseized the right to appoint the highest functionsnaires.

From the beginning, the Jews sought to exploit to establish colonies, and, to that end, they have decided to gné of the officials who were entirely devoted to them devoted.

Algeria was their first target; they wanted to conquer this for themselves alone country where they had been slaves.

“The French,” wrote Mr. Hugonnet, “have the reputation of not knowing how to colonize, and they owe it solely to the ineptitude of officials who can do nothing betweentake without unnecessarily wasting the depublic funds. These people without general ideas, devoid of colonial and socio- science gic, naively imagine that all this The one that exists in France is perfect, even this that good minds strive to reform. They believe they are making real progress in introdirecting outwards the institutions of which we "We have the most to complain about at home."

Mr. Hugonnet knows Algeria inside and out, which he frequently discusses in his articles of France. He demonstrated that the mode current colonization was ruinous for our settlers. He sees the favoritism with pain. which the native Jews enjoy, but he belongs to the Parisian press and cannot To tell you everything... |

During the Michelin-Gaulier proposal, Mr. Hugonnet clearly declared himself in favor of without the naturalization of Arabs. "The application- "We will give to the natives," he said, "police laws" tics, while leaving them their personal status nel, is an easy thing.

"This system is practiced without drawbacks- They live in French India. It's the best a way to put an end to abuses that make French domination was odious, and the putwill be in danger as soon as we are at war with great power. It is absolutely necessary- "How to know Algeria."

Whatever the influence of the Jews of France, we believe, along with Mr. Hugonnet, that the Yuddis would perform their exploits with less cynicism, if they didn't form the majority of the electorate.

The day Algeria is represented by the elected representatives of the French and the Arabs, the officials officials will hesitate to favor theft or u-

Sure. Kanoui won't dare tell them again: Con-"Train yourself to my orders, or I'll have you broken."

What independent MPs would no longer do during this period, the Rothschilds and other financiers Jewish cens would then try to do it, by intervening directly with the government birth; but they might find themselves facing a less docile majority than the one prepared by Gambetta and Mr. Ferry.

Among the elected officials who lent their support to the Jews, many were unaware of the maneuversworks that we have presented in this work
vrage. |
We are even convinced that the Most were unwitting accomplices.
who could not believe such perversity.
Every member of parliament now needs to know the role played by our ministers. If they can-smells with both hands in the safe of Jews, the latter have, as compensation-tion, the right to plunder us with impunity-
ment. | |
Gold, of which the Jews are now the only ones holders, does not belong to them, and we we will force them to return it, when the men those in power will have enough dignity so as not to sell out. We've already seen that.

Some withdrew in order not to accept a shameful deal, but they were wrong not to give in to the proposals of the big Financials: a welcome form of publicity.

We have seen magistrates in Algeria

Frenchman who, in order to obtain a quick advancement, were directly involved in shady dealings.

It is obvious that, without the complicity of certain senior officials, facts, such that the one we are about to tell, no less-would go unpunished:

“Two Jews from Oran had bought, from French merchants from Rouen, for several hundreds of thousands of francs worth of goods.
A few days before the deadline, they wrote-rent to their sellers only as a result of name-heavy losses they were unable to the ability to pay, but that, to avoid a failureruinous situation for some and for others, they had found a person, MB, a man very honorable, who vouched for them and would pay 50% in interest-free annual installments.

"MB was a former civil servant."

"The creditors had to accept the proposals"
sites of their sellers.

"It had been agreed with both negotiators-" Jewish citizens, that MB's son would be associated from the trading house and would affect the half of the 50% profit.

"The house still exists and the new as-Socié is one of the key figures in the Jewish quarter of Oran.

"It's thanks to the information provided"
by certain officials... that the credthe managers accepted the proposal of their de-"biters."

When concluding a deal, the Jew immediately thinks about the means he will use to steal from his debtors. We give a Last example:

A man named Stuyk had bought a batch of cotton to the Jewish Shabbat. The deal concluded. The buyer deemed it prudent to take the key from the store where the merchandise was deposited. In the evening, Chabat, who was thinking of doing After a few substitutions, he asked for the key. but the buyer refused it.

The next day, the merchandise was weighed in the seller's shop was then transported the buyer was very surprised. to note that the weight, declared by Chabat, was far inferior to what he found at him.

During the last weigh-in, Stuyk... said to his seller to find out the cause from this error: the seesaw, which was prepared for the shopping, she hadn't been bothered and he had thus taken advantage of the flight planned by Shabbat.

Stuyk recounted the incident in a meeting of the central committee, while Chabat was posing his candidacy for the municipal council.

All these events are taking place right before the eyes of our compatriots, who don't even have the right to protest.

Our readers should not be surprised to see Algerian officials at the mercy government Jews, while he is demonstrated that the highest in France are the servants of those who appoint them.

If the commission of inquiry, appointed on 20

the proposal of Mr. Cunéo d’Ornano, made shedding light on the shameful manipulations of our French voters understand the government and the electorate.
would finally know what the concerns are men in power, but the Jews are still powerful enough to hinder a an investigation whose aim is to unmask their accomplices.

The Wilson-d'Andlau affair, etc., is not badly-Fortunately, not an isolated case. In a a work entitled Ministers and Financiers, which we will be publishing very soon, we we propose to show that the only concern ministers of the Republic were to tri-to rub shoulders with the kings of finance.

We ask the journalists Charles Laurent, Portalis, Rochefort, who protested vigorously against Wil-'s meddling son, d'Andlau et C'e, we ask the MPs Michelin and Gaulier, the authors of Arab naturalization project, of us to help in this campaign that we are conducting against these men without a country, who have established here!

The contempt they seem to profess for the exploiters must be for them a power-stimulating health.

Although the Jews had bought all the departmental newspapers, the voters of rural areas are not initiated into their manew works. They still have faith in these men who sell to the highest bidder the honor the nation and its fortunes.

We have just unmasked the main ones characters. In the Anti-Jewish Elections, we will make known those who played a secondary role.

It is necessary that in the legislative elections of 1889, every voter knows the candidates of his department.

The nation's verdict will be terrible for the Jews will be required to make the application words spoken by Crémieux, few Time before his death:

“We overdid it, it cost ustera expensive.

{in the state and the state already a single large ""Zubdenfhule."

I find such activity rather amusing than I am forgotten, because one cannot hear that “maufchelnnen- howl of rage fine specific komtfche side not fire off and I benne glad that I still have much to do in my »Judenfspiegel« I painted Karben.

3I hope at least, one will be taken to the simple, dag Concerns, rudeness, fanaticism bounce off me, and that one will reflect in me a conviction, report be shaken by nothing, except genetic reasons, and which truly will not intimidate fi to retract, most of all least impressed by the stern shouts of the filthy mob.

My friends among the Jews have mid Tängft ver: found and did not feel offended by my writing. The

Be ve. ee

Those affected, however, have screamed, and they must be well hit fine, because they screamed excellently!

There are currently two technical criticisms against this Scripture, in the “Freihüß” and in the “Reform.-

The experienced critic B. is asked how early he had the Work has become my Schıift, which ad regas from the standpoint About tradition and the stories at all important points: moments of the Zutenthums darthat: 1) that the Zuren no racenpure primal volt, 2) that they never became a truly consolidated nation were, 8) that they lived in the false Zoee, both to find, to contradict: Because three points form the premise of my writing and nothing else follows from this premise, al8 that the Jubilee, fo lange ed auf biefen drei Orunppfeilern fi flows, a foreign element in the state ift and remain must. — B. feels this, if, internally, of the impossibility Convinced to refute me, he drags the accused, in loving Excitement never-forgotten “Bremen letter in the criticism with and uses formal coarseness as a Deus ex machina where the critical light in the »Zudenfspiegel« The standpoint of “modern natural sciences” He only grants me his services conditionally if namely “to adhere to the long-term schedule of the measures,” d. $. when I throw physiology and chemistry out of voluminous re-run, flatt, as it is not materially possible in a brofihare otherwise possible, but the results of those scientific activities. peißt selber den Magen var halten with oily claims

The most honest Then the criticism must be dishonest and bona fide suspects me of believing in miracles, that “baptism made the Jew a different person.” I but I asked, if the Jew with a literal state
If he wants to make a "Befhäft", he must complete the pre-

x

lung leiften and fann es, wenn er Indifferentift in religtöfen Things if. Through baptism he will not change, but dur) the necessary consequences of baptism, which consist in dapihn das FZudentypumponfich Kößt, Dap er zwang will, to affiliate with the non-Jewish element.

With this “written state” I want, where possible, have even less to fear than the orthoborefle Jew, and it
This is truly a compliment that I pay to the written state make, fine reflection, which I testify before baptism, when I see their theologifhen Wunderfräfte an dem Inbifferentismug zer:
fohbellen Taffe. The critical procedure B'E. is therefore dishonest, and calculated, the Sanatites of freedom of conscience, the latest Priesthood, and to feud at the neck.

More honest and worthy is the following statement by V'S., that the free state should not wait “until the Jews please,” with their municipal association no longer in the state mechanism to reach across, so that I therefore turn to the "false Infstanz" by calling on the Jews to “liquidate the ZTempeld- demanded. Because this was the case with the unfree status of the hay:
tious states but impossible ft, fo remains But only the baptism left and only "over baptized Jew finds grace in the eyes of the Lord Marr.« Too bad! The beginning was so honest and
. Conclusion fo echt theologifeh fpißfindig!

Sf denn 8. fo aller Logif baar, um den von felbft in bie Eyes to overlook the springing conclusion, which again cannot be Tann as: if our present states are not yet free find, fo tönnen fie nicht den Zupden flaatsbürgerli gleichfstellen ;
But since our state no longer controls the Zuufen,
Th do not need to baptize the Zuden either, and endiid, because our state, if it is, must be the subordinates to do what this state makes possible for them, db. d. from

x

I

State, which forces fine Menfih to enter a new religious community.

That I, in my opinion, am "back to the same subject":
forming, refapitulizing - not "modifying," as B. fagt — fharf and Har claimed and proved that five communities, the “nationality” in the nationality, true state within the state, this community within the community, as in a Chinese wall confervirt, bass this about Grundge:
thanked my writing ifl, to which I refer every third page:
come, the ignorance B. complete. He just has to refute, as whether he was willing to do so. And I don't know what I want!

I don't even turn to the "false court." In Staate lives a number of Menfhen, welde fih for a befonbere
"Ration" is issued, the contents of which are in accordance with the bourgeois Orp:
tion collidiren, whose dogmas are of a politically reliant nature.
These people are in a large minority and Until a few years ago, they were only built by the state.
long over state on the ground of toleration flanders, went to him the interiors of the Zudenthum nothing. According to Herın DB. bat fi Now the state of filthy soil is not yet emancipated.
Benn bem fo wären, fo the Zuden still didn't concern him.
But they claim equality. With whom? With the other citizens? Then they have the same obligations to fulfill, they cannot demand, equally and incidentally;
noh Something special for fih in Anfwach wollen.
About the «free state?

But Mr. B. thinks that the “free state- “does not wait until it pleases the Jews to liquidate.- Oh, oh! B. forgets, that Jewish religion and Jewish politics are identical find, he gives fogar velbft the religiög:politiihe meaning of the Zudentpump to and in him {ft in fact the temple bie Are of all worldly life. Now the "free state" shall begin
- to petroglyphs?! The contradiction! Where is the "Be:

FE,

freedom of knowledge"? — Purely, my dear sir, into the Ge:
During the liquidation, wiffen must not be violently influenced by external forces

Jewish Community Association only found a self-feit des JZudenthHums fein and the state has fi Merely from any harm that may come to him from Judaism could have grown up.

The state lets the Jews take care of themselves.
asks: what do you want? — Equally fine. — Well, here you find the conditions. CMeets or does not meet, as Your choice, your conscience will not be touched by me will be; I have to wait until you like the conditions to be met. So the question is, fine hair is different!

I concentrated on the religious and political significance of the Jewish tbums in the Spmbolif ver Purim celebration. — Let's see with which petitio prineipii fih Mr. B. helps here. The Archbishop of Touloufe and a fine invitation to celebrate St. Bartholomew’s Day celebrate, a brain-burned priest who has an Infalen stupid streak and was duly punished for it, {fl
DE. Argument for a fifth national celebration (ven "18.
December" of Judaism!) Where in the world
What were Mr. B.'s thoughts when he wrote this down?
Didn't he mean that he gave me the cutting weapon? In In Rome, St. Bartholomew's Eve is no longer officially celebrated celebrated; in Germany the celebration of the “18th Dectobers« Tein Bierteljahrhunvert can hold without being criticized to be mocked as inhuman; only in Judaism continued the Barbaret in its symbolism.
Hand on heart, Mr. B., was that an honest argument from Them? - -

B. prove to me that the “Aderban” in Paletine in Bloome fland that Sichem and Samarla were cultivated by Jews

u BE were! — 83. I doubt the cultural process, the - Anglogy of Protestantism and Catholicism. Between 38 - rael and Zuda, which “states” of their own Trabi:

tion of the Jews (Sef., Jerem., Hefel.) all over the same brush:
“The tolerance of the Jews in pre-baptism earlier time"? If Mr. B. had not discovered any palm oil bat, which the biblifhe story lies firafft, then Taffen we quietly lay the Bolfers strangled by Jews on the bench of the Witnesses. — The “apostasy.” — Yes, there are “Apostates everywhere,” but we make the Jews a greater Borwurf from it, because fle a wefen of the majority

-to the Jew less than to the non-Jew the apostasy of the flag of the general Waplredht, under which he has achieved a better position, or we would have to stop, to think and feel with the pride of a free man, and I don't think I can give those men greater respect to be able to, as by revealing it to non-Jews. Will va-against protest, I simply answer: If you alfo, despite your martyrdom, your temple association, your füpdifhe8 - political-religious - Consciousness flees higher than a free humanity, fo feld Ipr Nüplichleits- and possible:
powers of feit and prohibits the unconditional belief in Your conviction and morality are not.

But I accept an argument from Mr. B. Why, he asks he, Marr allows the Jews to participate in the general BVahlrecht to? You would be right, Mr. B., if our States would sooner be as free as you and I wish. Then Could we offer the Fuden more, and consequently demand more?
Sch Habe alfy hier möglich ven Fehler gemacht, prattifch gewelen too fine and the Jews a participation in the grant of 'Taxes 2c. added. But how the circumstances find, how bas Zudentfum vor Allen if, I believed, unbefchapet the 'freedom of Jews participating in the one council member element

- the EControl exercised by the general public - nit
The state has a jubilee besides fih anerfannt and id had to Iogifherweife also the Kon» accept frequencies. But you haven't finished my Sab gelefen, five you would have been so honest to see how you e8 called a "dilemma" into which our state has fallen
I have warned and protested against this evil element to advertise too powerfully and I have - the fact recognizing - demands from the Jews, which indirect through universal suffrage to appointed state offices
I learned that the Zudenthum lann folde guarantees not give, because it places the Jewish state higher than any other and because the obeyed official, like the Soldier - - serve only one flag. Fanı. They know
3. B., that I respect Dr. Volkfon as a person and as a talent, but you will admit the absurdity that he is at the same Time Prefect of the Hamburg Citizenship and the Jewish GemeindesBorftandes if, troßpem WB. poisonous perhaps just thinks as freely as we both do. And yet not completely! For five he would be awarded one of the two honorary positions “Tiquidiren. Ober the Jews would choose a Rihtiuden as prefect of their community: Representation? No, because the Jewish state ifl the State of absolute unfreedom. Wer alfo diefe In: freedom falls higher than anything else, but the critic will probably fine, to be viewed with suspicion and offer will, as long as he has not broken off the brothers behind him.

In the Prapis the question refumirt on majority and Min ority; in principle if fie to judge banad, whether the Zudenthyum als foldhes ein dem moderne weltlihen Staats» property hostile element ift or not.

=. 40:

States are formed through practical experiences.
disfe experiences not too expensive for the good of the state advertise, every element in the state submitted to the whole:
The Zudenthum flees by means of his staring find until loves to come to us on a purely dangerous note and I want Sunen prove this by the second critique of my writing by $., which from a professional Jewish everyone flowed iR.
The author of this document demands (Ro. 84 on "Reform") in a "written state of Sarantien for the economic the Zuden in the Staatspienfle" and rightly denies the possibility Upfeit verfelben. If there is still need for stronger proof, than die?

In the free state, F. thinks: 1) If the whole Jewish Gemeinde fihtwerkich entfihkießen, their Gemeindeftaat zu Kiquibiren.
Well, answer, then what you have left remains, but requires no more of us than we of you, without prejudice to our own safety, give hairdryer.

2) The government of our state would not provide any “advantage (!!)
have it because they are through the five poor and sick "increased loads (1) would have. We answer when Citizens fulfill their duties towards the state; must the state fulfills the hostile acts against its citizens and weifen mit Sndignation biefes feilfhende jüdifhe Ar:
argument zuräd.

3) If the Jewish community is private with everything
If we add an appendage, everything would stay the same.
Not Do, only those would stay the same, which the old to the new Horzogen. We grant them the old sollfommen, nur follen fie anf dem Standpunkt des Alter not pretend to the pleasure of being named,

Mr. 8. has received a dangerous ally here. A Alltirten, who "talks about school." — 8. "acts." —

Tax, entitlement: and money wefien" and "to the strength Tung des Vertranend" "zeltweiler "Richterfilellen" and Positions in »Regterungsevullegium.. — In a word:
Give us everything, we will even give you Mt as a friend.
Kehen Dant! — A rabbi who was concerned about his position,
Couldn't have said it more emphatically.

It remains strange that the same "reform" is "Bofaunen von Zeriho" from the "Demofratie" bfafen cursed, the 8th geftatted, me once over the other the Compliment of a democrat de pur sang zu maden!

Zeh wieberbole. es, because one can face the narrow-mindedness
I cannot repeat often enough, I have no hatred against beef or those Jews, for all the world knows that I am among the Jews.
I have intimate friends. But I have the privilege.

Lock up ten generations in the “rough heap, and fle advertise the head “Apes hang down to the feet.” — The “rough House," if e8 is attacked, takes revenge by pressing proceedings.
The Jewish people take revenge by cruelties, from which they
For some time the beffern elements fih to an honest fachs Leagues opponents are being ravaged. Sahlih, benevolent and on the whole worthy if bie Kritil 5s., if fle on, as I have shown, the spertfihe of the Zudenthbum is not completely fleifen Tonnte. Factual if, notiifcher side, au the criticism.
B'8. gemweien, but he did not fight with honest weapons;
he asked the simple, concise bantent course of my writing deliberately ignored and judged incoherently E8 seems to annoy him that over “Zudenfpiegel” an “ore eignisse“ advertised if and with the aim of refuting {fl gar too clear. — He reminds me of some of my examples, uses examples and finally refumes in the foreground near — “pension.”

Yes, justice.

For years we have fought against the unemployment of
The state is paralyzed, we no longer bow our heads before the cross. We succeeded in bifen hrifilihen To force the state to be humane.

And they dare to mow us down when we are at the gates of the Jewish Temple Hops to fhmähen us, when we

we the Urf rung and practice many Eigenthümtichleiten prove?!

“The conceit of five endures no criticism; it if more fanatical than the rabble at a keer; Burning was if. But that non-unified earthquakes entire bredgen for diefen tüdifhen Dünkel it — Tomifh and verbactig.

We also demand “righteousness” from the Jubilee, if one of and justice for the Zudenthum forbert.

We no longer show reverence to the "rod of Aaron", than the "cross."

®. M.

Tr abftrahiren, as irrelevant, Yon everyone in all Specid-
Its in-depth criticism of the historical Sudenthum, as 3 8. Spinoza and others have provided, ba ung bie Trabitionen bes alten Teftaments vollfommen sufficient to show, bafı ihir e8 mit einem Wefen zu doun haben, du beffen ganze Sefchichte (myth like wisdom) the perceptional being as a principle of life driven to the extreme, like a reder Haben drags on, nature and reason, fitting and Humanity, dignity and education on the head ftelt and fidh iur baburch was able to obtain, bass es, fih in fein hiftoenclosing a rifhes ghetto, alien to everything, what other peoples, mas bie humanity at all times in he and kept holy.

The current tradition, report unflugerweife in the shot about the written church is still being pampered, begins immediately
(1. Mofes' 1, 27,) with a blasphemy: "God created “Menfhen him in the image, in the image of God fhuf he him." — This "image of God" was, however, a bungling work, because the "snake" led the people from the tree about knowledge of the forbidden fruit, and nad when people committed a crime, they fell God testifies (1 Mofes 3, 22): “Behold the men not advertised like ours and knows what is good and "böfe if": So that he - erft jebt truly God equal — “do not speak out, but speak out of
"bem tree bes life and eff, and live forever",
God made him the paraptef binaus — out of envy of competition.

rn

u en =
x

= yı e

ift according to the current tradition, the first appearance bes erften five men who immediately bring God into the business and is now subject to the law of the strongest.

After the expulsion from Parabiefe we find Sons of Adam, Rain as “Veinman”, Habel as a feudal “shepherd.” Both sacrificed to the Lord... But these, faithfully about parabiififhen Sartenorbuung, fab mwohlgefalig on ses Saullenzer Habels Dpfer and igaoeirte bie ürlichte he Sweat of Cain, which took this retreat badly and as a result of an exchange of words, his brother was killed.

tourbe for that in the first moment de vivacite son dem Herrn gu permanent volatility of the land, but after many requests

under God's special protection. He finds a woman,

God knows where it may have come from, he builds a "staff"

and about Brubermörber was about Stammunter yon Natienen.

Adam later fathered another son, ben Seth, by bem bie anbere Tinte bie Suben par excelleuce abjtammte bis auf Noch, at beffen times God fehr bäfe mar, that bie Manfden fc “took wives and begot children”, also “their bosses God hid the flood and brought down the whole human race, he reported with great effort create every day's work, buy miserably, with exception vpn Noah, and Fam, after the misfortune once happened was and (1. Mofes 8, 21,) his name the “Heblidden Gerug” son Nochs burnt offering fpürke (a little late for sinen God), gu about knowledge, baß “bag Dihten und Trornten des ... Herzens böfe ift sou Jugend auf" ud
bie Menfchen "binfost nik mehr fhlagen" wolle, mie
#7 getbanned.
This if the fleeting Nbrdge bes ae to ur Siünbflutb.

Bott Indian fih in perfon with him gun Kflen a uub verfprict fine ractommen the whole country “from over weapons “Egypt? to the Euphrut.” Leaders have never befeift over biefen fertile line, because “ver fpeochen uud halten find zineierlei," and which terrain km Serufalem Yerum to find ift, where to eat between hunger and May oem promised land böckkens dream Tanıı, illuminates ats old and new descriptions of the nekfe.

Let us now look at the blessed Abraham little alfder on. Eigenibiimbich find the Manvempres that offer him ZTrabition with fine ordination Sahrab lets you perform. Amı Hufe
He gives them to Phataos for his swords, so that the Egyptians not to "strangle" him, to get his brew (1. Mofes 41 — 13), and Sahrah finds such an Onabe in the king’s Eyes that this Frank was bare. (Genesis 12:17). Later, Abraham, who had fled to King Abimeledh son of Berar, also this monarch had ceded his wife, one Sahrah fei however besides fine woman, aud) fine Schiwehter from the father's side (Öenefls 20, 12). To the faithful tülichen Marriage, oo the brother married his sister al, Ifaac was conceived, but he was. Sahrah Schon BO Zah was old, report delay probability phyfological urih which is a little too close. Blood» privilege over spouses. gt explain ff At the court 3. 3. Mofefläten of Egypt and Berar hat alfe Abwahnet. Fine sulfur woman, always utdr the Yarogeite fine “Säwefles” company-wide colportirt and baflk beillante Gefhente von ben vefp. Soveränen receive what important. non jealousy. biefes grumpy patelarchs. zengt.
Breilich showed fih andy Sahrah toferat, benn befanntlich war es Jömnel, from which the Arabs abflanimen, Fsmael, a rests over love Abrabams with fine Rödhin Hager, the will be violated, so that Jfaac will remain the heir of the line,

Sfaae then fläter unit finer fchönen rau Neben eben fo gute and makes profitable business, how fine Be Bater Ubres bam with the Sahrab.

The current type occurs after two shifted fleshy preparations in the sons of Jfaac are even more evident ven day. Ifau, a brave but somewhat predatory hunter, about Erftborn, ftanb with fine mother Rebetta not in fo bober Grace, as the holy Jacob. The stories, as Wife and mother, in company with the mother chicken, ben deceive the blind Sfane to obtain blessings for JZaFob hen, after these fine brothers Ifau before, as berfelbe hungry from the same family, with a scoop of Linfen that The inter-

Attribute of Jubilation, entered the scene when Satob returned of Laban and, long before his brother's revenge came to seduce a gift in precious compartments (Genefis 30.) hoped to buy the transfer as cheaply as possible. Ifau but was a noble character. — noble characters remain in the Sjubenthbum always outside the family tree,*) benz Satob became chief patriarch and forgave without Jacob, after he had betrayed father and brother, went on the wanderings to follow his thieving ways tens to escape, takes Dienfte at Zaban, preikt biefen at the sheep's breed is characterized by white and colorful sheep burdy: a foal-like method of misapprehension in black Animals, is used by Laban, welder: Repreffaien ‘to bie. Nobel cheated, but marries Rachel after Lea bo (contrary to the later Gefeb Mofes), she had her father-in-law bie. goldenen. Oögenbilber,. "wrestling with God," Fam with an aud« rented hip bavon, was declared victorious: and as a reward — for fine fairy tales ‘Aniffe and NRänfe?’ — with the title Sörael, about true regulars. About Zuben, rewarded! — .—

- This is — according to tradition — at the root of the stem-Tree of Israel, in which one believes, worships, and

el

---

*) Bergl. Page 21.

ans pious men beftebt, which alternate Suppler, Swindlers, swindlers, fraudsters and thieves were called.

The Desceendbenz; — nad der Trabition — left little wish left. Sofeph, about "show-offs" among fine brothers, a kind of spy, recruited by his own brothers, by envious each in turn patriarch of an entire tribe means "outside" chosen people" was sold as a slave in Egypt. The father was told a silly hunting story.

And Sofepht He will minister to many adventures with King Pharaoh, and what he does is a woblorgantfirter Rornmwuder, bie Ereirung eines ©e-treivemangeld. Er fog Egypt and surrounding countries He forced the poor Egyptians to dig their veins and feels like it's going to waste; to make grain from Ben Föniglicyen magazines. He made the whole country — with wise exception of the priests — (Genefis I. 47. 27.)

but not with the tithes, but with the “sinths.” (Cbend. 47. 24.) With what refinement over brave Sofepb goes to work, as he attacks people nad and after and plundered, as he befchauf and durd, hunger zivingt, erft their cattle, then their land, banın fich fellbt to sell, bas ift a role model, a beat, — Schylof not excluded. — that no fine usurer of posterity has ever achieved. This does not prevent him from being a pious man, a prophet fterbenz; bas binbert not that fine memories still today nad more than 4000 years ago by Ina Bolfe beilig and in en is advertising.

%* = * zi

Bir EPRFERR jebt to ken politifen ae esp Subdenthbums. Mofes: It understands here, as everywhere' of felb, that we e3 "Dabin gefellt fein Inffen ob biefe Perfüntich-teit before ber. Critit biftorifch active If, above nit. The Tradition bient bier wie überall dem Aubentkum a Grote

Inge nub as a tradition we have its moral value to investigate.

According to Egyptian and other traditions, the South of ben Megyptern expelled mworben fein, ımb zwar their uncleanliness, bad diseases and bad Because of his own abilities. According to the Bible, Sade behaves on the first picture of another and ift circumscribed db. b. to be turning damn.

The new tradition makes you fart incredibly Beittum of two hundred and fifteen Sahren from a Family of fifty people a ration arise, in welder man fe times Hundredthousands of rideable men counted, which is approximately a population of two Millions of souls. These more than Tanindyen-fertility is remarkable; but it is even more so, like a folded crowd of people a forty-year-old procession burch bie Wüfte unternehmen Tonnte. Glüdllichermweife reduced fich changes the number considerably.

The current tradition tells us that a later Dharao, "who knew of Zofeph's niece" and perhaps also such a fine ministerial program for the sake of nothing 'wanted, looked with concern at the subordinates, whom he was in the a Srieges Richie lesser ald Lanbesperrath zutrante zam Dinf for the benefits received. (Erobus I. 10.) Pharaoh feared that he could not help himself other than by first bie AQuben to work, ımb when he -nidht succeeded, their hereditary sons and weapons throw eg. A man, Ramens by putting the little one in a tarred basket and putting it N binabtreiben Fieß, unconcerned about the Srofobille and bie fifth accidents that can be avoided on a tire in a proper way celebrated if. Mofes is seduced by an Egyptian princess Ficht md educated, fchlacht — not without reason — a Wegypter rages, who mistreated a sub and must flee. Ms Hirt On Mount Horeb he had a meeting with God, he ordered the Jews to be brought out of Egypt and with miracles and plagues to help with the fine promise. Hußerbem gave him "Bott" and a detailed lintering, wie bie Suben ed maden follten, um ben Wegyptern beim Take out their golden and silk vessels and their To lack clothes. (Erobus 3:22.)

Then Mofes went to Pharaoh and Vegitimizte fh dur a lot of miracles as divinely discovered. The Egyptian magicians were also not bad at folding things, by the walking dead turned into snakes, but “Warons Staff,” who was recruited to the snake mid-mile, “verfhlang bie Schlangenftäbe” about Egyptians, which is strangewhich resulted in Pharaoh becoming even more unbelieving. (Exodus 7:13.) Mophes turned all the weapons into blood, The Egyptian magicians performed the miracle. He had Sröfche rain, the Egyptian magicians also, but look Famen the main miracles! Mofes conjured Maffen of Läufe The fonts - or wanted - to him at the Egyptian not imitate, as little as they imitated him with the invention of other were disputed. Enblih nachben God in favor about Jews became Bravo and about sons about Egyptians murdered at night, Pharan admitted that he had been brought too much trouble on his neck and he let them go, what we would have had in finer places long ago: Borher "borrowed * bie Suben from their Radybarn "Silver and golden vessels and clothes” and “stole Cfablen) fie den Hegpptern.” (&robus 18, 386) Cs Scheint It follows from this that the much-maligned Egyptians against SJuben benevolent and pleasant gewerfen find that bie bamaligen Zuben, on the other hand, would be unsuitable. But you can _ sight wonder, bap Pharaoh fuck to their pursuit, jeber moberne Polizeibeamte würbe baffelbe gethan hakes.

Having arrived here, one must admit that tradition granted privileges to the “elected Bolfe”, for which in civilized states, gallows and penitentiaries are established, and remains very unclear whether it is not more beneficial for morality

South could have driven out, as it is with two authors according to the case, fine fol.

The train through the desert is an unbroken chain of Abtrännigwerben, Heimmeh nad) Aegypten, Murren, Gößen-serves uf mw. As soon as Mofes turned the dog, above God a Heine Paufe in the WBunbertbun, Sjörael degenerated Yes, Mofes himself, after the Ten Commandments were given and everything was ready, freed at God's prompting a Art Göpenbilderbienft (4. Mofes 21, 8) and built “Evil snakes,” which one only had to attack in order to to be protected from the blows of real snakes remain. Lewdness, rebellion, and uncleanliness were on the rise on the day order. Troß bed Berbotes, fih with other Mofes, a “Negro woman,” had not wanted to miss Böffern. as his wife,” about which Miriam and Aaron made bitter bortolirfe. (4. Mofes 12, 1.)

Without grace and mercy, the work-shy South over the Heinen BVölferfschaften ber, bie fie on their Bandings hit, strangled everything except the living man and were called only women alive, women to Sclaninnen 'made. So they seduced with the Amaletites, ben Mebianitern, and as bie walls of Sericho yor their trumpets unb burd) treason, everything had to be put to the sword except for the traitor Rahab. All The poor people had not done anything to save the children. — But Jericho ift Faum taken, as fie among each other in: bie Hiare and took the whole tribe of Benjamin kill, so that only one hundred men remain.

=

If the Benfamin tribe does not die out, they fall over a City of the tribe Manaffa ber, all men raged, Gretfe and children, all married women and widows, rob Six hundred tongue women who were alive for the sixteenth give them to the remaining Benjaminites as wives. (Judges 20 and Chapter 21)
It is known that according to tradition, the celebration in Egypt began from the moment when They were asked to work. This workfheu ift an essential clement of the Jewish tradition. So Would that be the case — which is actually incredibly fterile — Land of Promise, the “promised land”, “a land where Milk and honey flow”, fine. Anbuftrie, vein construction remained alien to them. War and riots coexisted with worship and idolatry their main occupation, and fo Tonn it not agreed to quell the intruders. Seven times who were subjugated over the course of 200 years, and where ban ber human Wih, the human. Energy ceased with them, Yehovah had to intern. He fought their battles, he blinded their enemies, he handed them over to them; fte felber ver-Flanders only to fight, to murder. Sedes crime, febes Trampling of international law was justified to them, especially

They were careful not to turn away from Sehovah.
At the same price Jarael would have a godly Volf with Fynn remains with little effort. But that was not the case. Sebes Sheet of the Jewish tradition tells and of their apostasy Teit, from their addiction to Oöbendienft, and felten, how
In deserts, individuals emerge that have a Exception to the prevailing rule. The Prophets find from A to 3 a thunderous catalogue of sins of the Jews and one searches wildly for some Bolfe. in various fehichte, which only approximates a foldhe halsfiarrifche Auffepigleit against all “divine” and human commandments bocuwould have mentioned, like the others, their own traditions zufsige.

We wish you a happy birthday and cross the vineyard throw in the writings about prophets.

Sefaias 3, 12, 14. “Children, find drivers of my bolfe
- and women talk about them.” — “Because Zhr has the Beinberg verberbet and about robbery of arms if in Your bunch.”

Daniel 9:11. “All Israel has transgressed Your commandments,” Yeastkiel 20, 30. Then the Lord says: “You are uniting You in the way of your fathers and play the whore with their Abominations. And unite you to your greatness, report Your Cure gifts and your sons and daughters burns by fire.” “You have to give it to us, “We want to worship the heathens, wood and stone.”

— Ephesians 22:7. “Father and mother despise them, Sremblingen do the ©ewalt and injustice, the supplicants and Waifen fhinden fie.” 11. “And drove among themselves with friend and friend's wife abominations; they hold their hands own Schuur with all the willpower, which needy their own sisters, their father's daughters.” 12. “They roam and sweep over one another, and drive out their covetousness their navals. .

Seremias 9, 3. “They fluttered with their tongues Trains and fine truth, and drive it with violence in the land, and give from one evil to another.! 5. "A friend berauf, how one ben anbern deceives, umb tft them sorry that

fie. e8 cannot cause trouble.! 8. "With their mouths
They are friendly towards the right-wingers, but in their hearts lie in wait for the same."

Hofin. 4, 414. "And I will not defend it, even if

—— – –. For the foolish people want to feel fine."

Midha 7.2. "The pious people find their way in filial Land. – All of you Inuers are hunting for blood. Zeglicer is hunting him Others, that he may bequeath it." – 4. "The best among them eats like a thorn, and over vine fruits like a heath."

Zadharja 3 41. "Woe to those who are vile, filthy
City!" (Gerufalem.)

Maleacdhi 3. 7. "You hate the time of your fathers always away from my messengers, and babt fie not kept."

ufw Uf w.

Seder "scribes" will give us the testimony that we have copied the most leniently. One reads the 59th Ca-chapter in Sefains nad, where the sins of Jews of that time advertise counted.

Mofes was raging for some thirty years when Mrs. Mia from the tribe of Benjamin Eleven lost a hundred pieces of silver, which her son brought back to her. Where did she get it from,
We don't miss it. The good woman immediately builds an ambulance.
lante chapel and erected Göben images from the silver.
A Xepit agreed to offer for a cheap fee
Söten to serve. What happens next? A tribe (Dan), who went out to plunder, fam an Midyn's Crowd passed by and confultirte ben Leviten, whether about exit about Erpebition would have a happy success, and bie Ninber Dan's, as ber Leit beinbenb answered, fangen bamik that the chapel, Gögen and Xeriten with the near-men. To thank them for this, they built the Filberne Göber a joke, which soon became so popular that a new priest was necessary. Kin folder found her in a certain Jonathan, son of Gerfon, son of Mofie and about daughter of Jethro, aljo in the grandson Mofie.

(Judge XVII) Strange family! Mofe's brother aged hundred years make a golden calf and worship it; fine Grandson becomes a priest for money. That Mofes himself has bronze
We have already reported that snakes were constructed.

After the sacrifice which Zephta made to her own daughter — Sehovab did not think it was good to intervene, as he did with Abraham, when he wanted to slaughter the phantom, e3 was to fulfill a human-slaying vow! —
We notice a certain Abimeled, a son of the pious Gideon, whom this hero fathered with a vagrant woman
This Abimeleh slaughtered one fine day fine Fifteen brothers on one stone. — ®ibeon had
They—despite Mofe's commandment—"many wives." (Judges 8:30)
Was Gideon, as it is said, a brother Lieberlich, fo was Abimeled, a rather poor relative. Three years later he was given a gift. |

After the Yuben had caused enough mischief of all kinds, riethen fie zulebt on the idea of wanting to have a king, like the other nations. Umfonft riety Samuel, the under ber Monarchy also around his priestly influence a little anxious to woo, refrained from doing so. (Samuel, a Zeinb ber Kings, later king Agag, to whom Saul had given life had saved, in taufend GStude) The tradition designs A touching account of both kings throughout. David morbet ben Mephibofeth, son of a fine friend J0-nathan, ben he still more tenderly loved than a woman;
has Uriah murdered in order to kill his wife, Bethfaben, for ji to get; morbet man and mouse in ben Ser-allied villages, his commander Adhis, and commands no on the bed of death, that Joab, his lord, and Semei, his council, murdered. Solomon murdered his own brother Abonai at the altar. The Gränelieenen

ee

RKheabenm and Zersbeam are known. "Living airily mb “Felig getorben” is the slogan of the true kings. — .Dasib wrote in fine old days berrlihe Pfalmen, in reporting mostly the opposite of what is preached about singers was. Scälomon, hadbem he blafirt and blunted against all sensuality, entwined in misleading images bie chafing.

How far bieberungen biefes, in freter aberration br-attacked, Bolfes had to give, is clear from SJefaias V. 5.:

the children in the trees under the rocky cliffs.” Wieber Idolatry and child murder at the same time! — And Hefetiel 20. 31. It is said that the Jews give their “Sons and daughters burd'8 fire burn”.

% %*
%

Near the death of Solomon, the wicked man of simpotence, The empire fell into two parts, Juba and Zsrael, which fih made a war of life and death. They had fogar different sons. In Samaria and Siem they prayed Baal, in Zerufalem Adonai. There was one in Shehem Pair of sacred calves, in Serufalem two cherubim, two double-headed winged eagles. This party had its Kings, their God, their cult, their prophets.

The kings of Affyria used these provisions, led bie Nine and 7 Tribes of Sihem and Samaria imeg, about this life, without having to deal with hippocampal Unigfeit fagert Fat, was aus fuhrten werben. — Serufafe was attacked again, was brought to Sönigen Hazael and Kaziıt, came into slavery under Teglat-pfael-Affer, was taken three times by Nebufabnezzar and ertbliih zeeflärt. Sederias, ber ald Onuverneur eingefebt was, was with the whole of the Babylonian Geimprisoned, and that of all the Jews in Palestine only few Selaven families remained to cultivate the land. Samaria and Sihem were colonized by foreigners, which the affyrifchen kings found there and the names Samaritans accepted.

Sn the Babylonian captivity, from which a large part to the Uerger Seremias' again to ben Zleifchpots of Egypt, civilized the supplies of somemeasured and forgot almost all Hebrews. Sofepbus, ber Gefichtfchierer, gefecht sellbft ein, baß das Chalbäifche bie Spradhe fine country free. By the way, it seems as if they have au in Babylon more of the bargaining, ala the Wiffenfchaften, because their profit fete fle flater in the state, fidy frei» and rebuild Serufalem under Cyrus. But when When it came to emigrating, the wealthy wanted to Land is not to be confused with the barren “promised land* baptism, and only about the poorest part of the nation Tehrte with Borobabel back to his homeland. The Jews in Babylon satisfied fi), yellow contributions to the reconstruction of Stabt and

and Esbra reports that no more than about 80,000
We had to bring Thaler together to restore the temple.
fill, over over temples all over the world fine follte.

The Jews remained subjects of Perfer and recruited Alexander's subjects. When this king and conqueror Alesanbria founded, fie fchnarenweife there to
To pursue and trade business, because sense of vein building and Snönftrie ift bei dem Volfe nie vorberrfchenb mefefen.

After Aerander'3 death, the Jews remained in Serufalem ben fyrifchen, in Merandria the Egyptian kings under» thrown, and in the stairs the thieves were fie ftetd bie Beute of the respective winner.

Under Antiohus Epiphanes, fie fic revolted.
The city of Mwurbe was plundered once again and the walls destroyed.
After a series of similar accidents, they (approx. 150 Sabre before the common era) by Antiohus Sidetes the permission to mint money. At that time they had again chiefs who bore the title of kings.

In those times the Romans began to gen, ben bamaligen Oberherren über Juden, dangerous to recruit.
The Jews bought a kind of independence from the Roman Senate. The Roman wars in Kleinaflen seemed to be the re-to encourage the revival of the unhappy people; but Faum Serufalem felt a sense of freedom when it was made the wars far more unhappy than ever before had been in slavery. When the Romans began to judges in their inner turmoil, fam Pompeus near Syria. Betrayed by Ariftobul, he advised took Serufalem, and sent some of the priests and Pharisees, Prussians and condemned the king over Jews,
Ariftobul, to death.

Always unlucky, always slaves, always penniless,
They still drew their weapons against the Romans.
Eaffins and Eraffus chastised them, and Metellus Scipto lie Alerander, son of Ariftobul, founder of all Confused, joyful. |

Under the big saber they were completely full and under«

Crown of Judah, but Serufalem wanted to be the new king not anertennen, because he — yon Efan abfiamute, bem being his deceived son, oracle, and not of Jacob, bem swindler and fraudster. The Romans undermined bem King with an army, and Serufalem once again recruited robbed, plundered and destroyed.

=

Herobes rebuilt Serufalem and rebuilt the works, which surrounded the temple of Sjuben, again on and the temple as well, but could not finish his workbigen. 3hm lacked money and labor. The Jews, report their temple lived, killed their yellow even more.

After Herobes' death, Zubaea became a Roman province ruled by a forifchen Procenful, although one can say from time
At the time the royal title was sometimes given to a young man, sometimes to a Strangers for yellow. This is how Agrippa advertised King under Emperor Ehaubius.

Agrippa's daughter, Berenice, lover of the best Roman emperor, obese and insulted by their Jewish Zandsleuten, z0g bie revenge of the Romans on Serufalem.
They demanded reparation. Retribution and retribution.
ftan and Zitus Teiteten the siege, bie mit ber benk
The destruction of Serufalem ended in the capital. What Sword of the victors escaped, was sold in the open market as Slaves sold.

From this furthest historical outline,
the Zuben from the beginning wandering, robbers, subjugated or renegades were found. Srieben, Hube, culture, civilie They have never found a nation like this. The tradition, bie own tradition, fehilbert fie as arrogant, incompatible, fi alone filr the only legitimate Volt in the world and Obligated to destroy all other nations with fire and sword Higer. Babel, her little Friegerifs, furious and cowardly, Yerzunt' ih feber Wlperwärtigfeit, without natural aids

Over exaggeration, only courageous in attack when Sehonah with a battery miracle. on its spike marched,*) all the larders rejoicing, As soon as the Slammblid of their captors and erfiheint #3 faß räthfelhaft, wie ein foldjes mit allem religiöfen, feordal and political filth bewaftes Volt in the position white it, fi as a type among all peoples up to the Needed day to receive, a riddle, mweldes only bie voll-'Impartiality in assessing the circumstances of fen wermag.

” % * e

Let us turn to the anniversary celebration. Rightly so font fehon Baltaire in fine Dickionaire of it: „si elle D'etaR pas divine, elle paraitreit une lai de sauvages.” The Commandments about the slaughter of clean and unclean animals*
so that one begins to doubt whether one can be a victim for wise or for simple-minded fol. — “What Hoofs not split and mowed, is unclean.” The swirl le motive, and among other things about hemp as a re-Yöyer and Wicht-Stlauenfspalter regiftrirt -unb_ declared unclean 8, Mefes 11, ©. In the natural history, fi behaves ade of course something else. Terner ift da von Vögel mit four sweet ones at Mebe, which are found unclean, and if at Juben wich have counted about the number of beavers under the bracket, fo We misunderstand what banlit meant fine Fanı. The anniversary women are forbidden in some places to — — — with horses and ivories, from which oehnung man fdlirben muss, Bass bie Damen in Mofes Zeiten, subjected to various personal hobbies mäffen. The victims of the menace advertise equally feftgeftellt *) Cparalterififg 4R, that one at the lake of the Supisd, the Mettabösr, nie Lornigen Rules of the Arjas Gira vn. I in the series of apoceryppifchen books filled.

= 0 -

(3 Mofes 27, 29). “Even the finest should be banished Menfhen löfen, fondern er foll des Todes flerben.” This Tannibalic commandment finds fine, practising interpretation in erft Book of Samuel, Chapter 15: Samuel commands Saul to wage war against the Amalekites because their drive away the Jews in front of several hundred vehicles Egypt. "Thus speaks of Lord Zebanth*: “Do not spare them, kill man and woman, children and “Infants, sheep and goats, camels and oxen.”
After Saul had strangled the whole of the Amalefites, he felt pity for their king Agag and for the un« fhulbigen Vieh, weldyes beffer benutztwerben Tonnte, als zum Plaiftr of a Jewish priest slaughtered. But since Samuel laments and cries out: “I regret that you have as king." And Samuel "rejected and “felt sorry for Saul,” because he was not a complete Cannibal was as he felt.

The other effective example is Sephta's, fine daughter as a result of a vow. And she "wooed" a custom in Zerael". If foldhe cases at ven both Greeks and Romans, fo fann man bas on account of their mythology, but if bas “aus-chosen Bolt" such fashions with, fo brings us that on bie Verschhung, fine tradition fet bier a clumsy plagiarism bes paganism or complete barbarism.

Another vessel, meldhes unfere Beber fi flraubt,
- to write over, one finds 3. Mofes 18, 24, and it meansbies again on very unusual habits among the-
I am a Yuden. |

It seems to us that one thing is certain. Far beyond Epoch bifphorifcher Prächkion,- fi) into the mists of prehistory ver=

Here, we were touched by ancient cultures
a human gap, in relation to which both then be= Fannte Menfchheit -einen, we would like to ask, ftilfchschweigenben Chordb seems to have closed, all the pariahs to consider and treat. From fog to legend out, which should be aired as usual in the time about the Roman Triumsirate attacked, advertised, barf, felllt biefe Menfchenklaffe als Subenthum fidh bar.

But who were the Jews, where did they come from,
What was their origin? Were they even a tribe, or were they descendants and members of another Bolles? Or were they a compiler of inbisidia extinct tribes?

The 'biblifhe ZTrabition asked beer until the exodus about Seraelites from Egypt, more valuable to us. This Event ift dns erfte, mwelhes au von anderen Autoren (u. A. by Diodorus). Nevertheless, we tend not to the belief that the Jews are only capable Egyptians erblicen, fonbern consider another berfion more likely,
after which by the Sontact of many Sremben in Egypt a whip ausbrady; a phenomenon that will still be seen in our days vorfommt, more serflichlebene Völkerracen through great world-events suddenly come into contact with each other. And fo fiheint in the times of a pftilential calamity under ben Egyptians a Renchon against bie numerous fi) bort, in those entflanben too fine, which a pushing back berfelben to the solution Because about Fan man bie immigration from Kabrmos and Danaos in Greece in bie Zeit bes Austrain via Juben from Egypt. What we have in our Bermutbung still beflamed, baß bie fogenannten uben a Gemifh von Wblämmlingen. verfihlebener Bölker were, ifl bie Legend of 42 tribes. It only seems to tremble, at any time. A bunch of Bolkes, their stay in Hegyoten the wayptern in fanitätlicher,: yolitifcher, Rafional-öfonomifcher and focioler relationship hereditary War, that land gave, Herein fits biblifche tradition agree with the secular historians. That Bolfebaufe the country voluntarily or forced, if a A controversial issue that can be addressed by political or religious parties. fanbpunfte nad Beliebt answer may.

Bon diefem Bollahaufen has fidy a part to Hellas turned and bort a Reidy founded, beflen Sagen bie ibealflen Models of the in many respects analogue but clumsy jübifchen Herventhbums and unfold. (We only remember Noah and Badhus, Simfon and Hercules.) The nad Hellas wanbered Theil rose to an eminent cultural height. Poelle, Arts and weapons firahlten, where in the other part but from Wegyten migrated with clumsy brutality eiued verfoprobenen theofratifhen Sanatismus predominated, Aud Hellas had fine wars with the Perfers, like bie uben, but the Hellins began to dot, to die and to fly well. To the Gerfen bes other Stromeß about emigration, hatle But a curse is imposed on him. Why? Your roughness-Because of fear? Unrecognized people were also conquerors, feared, but not despised. Because of their religion? According to tradition, religion is too fanatical, too barbaric to despised to advertise. Because of their customs? The Borfhriften bes jübifchen Grfehes contain a Unzapl Monftruofitäten and Solvable, but deserve a bad feeling. Consideration The contempt was common among primitive Germans, such as even today about Ball if, GB. at German Dubignern Amprifa's) to have its basis in external appearances. He is only

: *) "And also went with them two Vabelwolis. (Erobus il.12.88.)

the regulation of Mofes with regard to the provisions of No« lichfeit bei ben Juden reads, biefes minutefehte Regul, wie e3 Fine Volf der Welt Fennt, if you consider cleanliness as a divine feeling bingefteilt fieht and ban bie majority ber Suden in nasura neben beuft, banı fdjeint fi) das Mäthfel in a rather profane and natural way,

Let us be open and look at ben Juben in fine
General public in our days. Can it fi deny, baf troß Over frequent writings, uncleanliness is a dominant element but majority among them if? And does not recognize jeben Doif nodh heute ben wahr Zuben auf ben erften Blid in feinem Gait, posture, manners; that half-melancholy, half-formal je ne sais quoi, which strikes us without us looking at him
The assumption that it is in the start with a Bolfshnufen to do, which phyfifsh frank an ber "incurably large Brüberfrancheit ober verswahrloft war, Kiegt um fo nearer, wenn man bie heroifchen Means bebentt, weile Mofes had to use to ben Zuben to take a cure in ber Wüfte, when mon bebenkt, what a people bas fein muss, bem fein Gefepgeber folhe truly brilliant cleaning instructions!

Are we exaggerating? — No; in the hot zones
About heritage One can also meet in our days begenerated Europeans enough on, welde in Schmuß, Nusfap and Syphilis fall yer«- tommen, and beuen bie will energy about cleanliness lost ifl.

Those stomachs are Ausinges Eamen at the Zuden, nadhbem
He fiy jet Jahrhunderthunderken in Paläftiina als “Nation” conflituizt had - to appear to have been somewhat confected - again brought to Borfchein, as “divine punishments” for their apostasy keit von bey Brbolen unb 08 mag ber Begenbe, baß fie fschon etc.

the Egyptians with “runs” felt, at least a typical Meaning äu round lie.

We therefore accept without magic the assumption, ba bie Outside there was originally a crowd, but under Egyptians, initially nomadic from the persecuted
Countries berflammenb fidh naturalized bat, which a befon-Beres Department (Gofend zum Wohnfib angewiefen mwurbe and which Bol through ferual emifcations and forial be-touching fine own stem shifts with other

Menfchenftamm. And in truth, 'we find still today among the Sjuben bie fehön and ebel formed Gefirhtözüge of the Arab, the Funen Aolerbpyfionomien ber Drufen, ben wulfligen type of Negro, bas gefchlibte Characteristics of the Tartar, in short a lot of races and tribes eigenthimlichfeiten inbisibuell represent that one blind fine would have to, if one wanted to return to a pure, unadulterated primal world
- flow. Furthermore, it can be assumed that their numerous voluntary and forced migrations, the Jews Tradition about the Bible has not lied about on distant digressions, so little Mofes es in the mouth disdained to have fun with a Moor.

The peculiar Volfscharafter of the Suben formed gradually disappears. For what we know from pre-Egyptian times tells Tefen, ift Probuft flaterer invention, which ver Mythe ben to bes author's time hüberfhden character bes Subenthums imposed on God, Adam, Abraham, Sfanc, Jakob and Fofeph find five types of men and if it is true that Eshra has true experts Pentateuhs if, fo he has bie patriarchs in time" gendffifhen originals copied.

It is a great disgrace for our celebrations today, ba - "Hieh ei, ge

fo it, fo little it for and Germanic people a misfortune if, pa our ancestors were wild, unfeeling fools. One just don't want to do this stupidity permanently and Neither does Audenthum.

It is no wonder that a Bol, meldes urfpränglid converged, generated, and required a new theology.
foftematifch in this degeneration was preserved, about Ber-
And it is not only possible, it is
It is quite likely that degeneration occurs with the onset of the Jewish tbum also reached its end among the Jews.

We will present the proof briefly and concisely.

deliver away.
e In the time of their prime, in the days of Solomon were not half so numerous, ala fie jebt find, wo They, scattered all over the world, at least in part, their tional position, forced to give up their privileged status gen find.

But it is not easy to find a thousand-year-old of the Audenthbum. The evil fear of the ecclesiastic festert beut zu Tag no longer fo ftarf, ala earlier, but e3 supplements itself in a fruitful way in maintaining a "Thbums," on which fine only somewhat educated Jude Urfadhe asked to imagine something with over education, about specific education, receives fi about common character of necessary ways. With about ways of life, ben ®ebräuchen, ben fpecififch jübifchen Gebräucen, pflanzt fich The physiologists of the Zudentbum continue. Against both react with our physical and emotional feelings.

€3 This is a natural phenomenon which we must all recycle.
tions cannot be megbisputiren. We have for the damn,- to attack the phrase, we have everything at GEpodhe-

_– HK –

bee Emaneipation nit burchgemact und reblich für biefelbe mit fought, but we have ung felbft Fifth in a general Lying into sympathy that we did not receive, nad ben Nature's feelings only for the individual feel Fonts, fo long in Xeußerlihen and Junern a on Sinn and Getft concisely throwing Öegenfab zwifdhen Zube ynd Nidtjude erifirt.

The intelligent part of the Sjuben feels bies mod) fäfer ale wir. It is fatal for him to fine “Sube” He remains e8, but one out of habit, the other out of piety against fine parents, but Britte from Esprit de Corps, a fourth from Caprice ufw The self-irony if an Attribub bes intelligent Jews. Not those wiberli boastful Vanity, bie in reftaurationen with Oftentation Wurft mb Scinten demands, no, from bief caricatures, bief “reforms”
We do not recite “fuben”, but rather from the small number of true made of free men, who are completely indifferent to everything Sectenthbum walk their own path and uugefucht, indely, unobtrusively, felten, but at the right time bocumentiren, that fie fine Jews find.

But have the Jews in their totality already had a Stanbpunft erreicht, ber fie ber Emanripation reif madıt, ber who is specifically qualified to exercise political authority?

Without hesitation we answer: No.

One should not object that this is free at school about Christians.
The Jewish state has overtaken the Jews in a

had to react quickly, it was not our fault, bie Juden in Paläftina serfommene Subjecte werbeben find. The “ubenbaß” of the past was everywhere in the evening only in appearance of religious nature, in truth he was one in the Natnz founded aversion to bee ben Suben anklebenden Eigenthümltchfeiten, welde eine nes negative element to the unfree. Religion was always only on the hypocritical pretext of a misplaced Afthetifchen Feelings, roughly like about American planters in slavery about Negroes from Christianity. One burned in frames at the baptized Yuben as well as at the unbaptized, yes, even more so with even greater preference. As long as If you do not find your own characteristics elevated, if you have a sympathy for bas udenthum naturally impossible. Where it is eriftirt, ift fie anfifthed, fan and woo not permanently fine, must and will a reaction via Fury or long infallible nad fidh.

Hiftorifch the Jews are right and have a precedent The "chosen Bolf of God" has in a Sabre fines fantlichen Bestehens as folhes Baptismal Mark more insensitive people who had done him absolutely no harm, sacrificed, as in a thousand years Suben were sacrificed, if you bas richest DOpferjahr der Snquifition al® Mapftab for over a thousand years. The Jews have Atrocities committed en gros against other peoples; the honors Atrocities in detail on Suben. This speech may at least biftorifch be considered as acknowledged.

Politically they have so little right, so long who decided not to give up their nationality. E3 Sounds like a trivial Poffenreißeret, a Sjuben, but today in fine temple 3. B. the Purim festival helps celebrate – bas Beneffeft of the great slaughter of Herın Morbadai to 75,000 Perfers and Meders!! – tomorrow in a club or in a meeting of the estates of the rights of the To hear Bolfes speak! The religion of Yubendhuns ft to fpeeififh -nattonal=jübifch created and recognized by Jews to grant equal rights to Jews au bürfen.

But, one might object, are you really horny received in Zubetdum? – Antiworieh on with Rein, bann we ask, what is the purpose of the Menfhlid-feitögefühl beleidigende Symbolit nod aufredt er-Baltics?!

Dob er bat fi bekommen, fo weit es ihm materially möglidy war, fih bekommen zu Fönnen.

It is notorious that Jews, especially in their Majority before emancipation, after berfelben fchaarenmeife in'3 camps about reaction or bes boctrinary juftenmilieu over-run find that a saying and pushing for state offices among them that they became willing tools over the ruling mediocrity. — The erelufive Wefen asked fi to receive it completely. When in Hamburg a Aude was elected to the Supreme Court, said a A friend of ours said very aptly: “You see, all of Zerael is mbefoffen, not because a man of talent took the position “Baltic, especially because the man is a Jew.” The accessory was bie main subjects and Serael does not concern the most ordinary Beat of free human and citizenship, Submissiveness of religion as self-confident li to recognize. The mob may make noise and Epreeffe drive when he comes out of prison, the poisonous free Man acts unworthy to take the freedom he is promised cheer.

It is a fact that the Jews in the vast majority let us down in all our efforts to after they had achieved their emancipation. It is still today pursuing the exclusively personal in-tereffes, the only conditional connection to one thing, exploiting every situation for yourself, which characterizes the subenthyum. Vanity brings they in the foreground, the church pushes them back at Mineften danger, the Intereffe determines their persistence, their endurance with more cocks. That's the rule.

In civil life, things are different for Fein Hasr.

za |

one has any complicated business with a Jew, fo fann One can be sure that relatives and friends will be there Hand find to indirectly receive a share of it.

Sm foctalen Leben friendly and courteous in Beginning of the naming, the patron a bon marche pie» Vend, fi with celebrities pußend and sloping, when bie Curiosity or thirst for knowledge satisfied if. DSuperficial in judgment, Contradiction any authority behind jih, on bie he was called upon. Plagued by the difficulty of setting the tone admit in future matters, without ben purified Geichmad bavor To befit. To all evil, to deeper studium, to every Birtuofenthbum entgegenjauchzgend — bas ift bie Stufe, auf About the majority of modern Yuben. Neidifc, Hateful among themselves, the feeling of their Minosity and reminiscence about the past fletd to a The gang gathered together as soon as one of “their people” is offended by a non-Jew, free in .,polideeper or in a focal relationship. ft the supposed needlittle bit about Cotterte, then it goes apart and The inner turmoil comes to the fore again. How five Fofettiren fie individually nod with all Srembartigen, and wie funft ballen fi fi zusammen, fobalb fie ihr erceptionelle8 ubentbum threatened mwähnen. Die Gorm ift nad both sides are more lenient because they have material Strength not more than nation befigen, the Wefen ift baifelbe remained as in the times of Efther's and Morbadhai'e.

Different times, different customs. In tradition, it was a Vital necessity about things, everywhere in them foreign= like elements to invade violently, ibiefelben au zerto make them floren or useful. This drive is them also remained in a state of distraction. In every club, in every Affection fuchen fie to bring in. Initially individually; fobalb

==.

but individuals have gained a firm foothold, the teachings gen en masse nad and penetrate ben whole body with "Your spectacularity. It is a striking and interesting experiencefheinung that purely Jewish reunions and elubbs, nad organized according to the existing statutes, as before EmancipaHon little or not at all beftanben, so little as ber jübifhe State ber Trabition fih ever viable has shown. And it is not the need to feel bes Menfchen, weldhes file in fociale und politifche Vereinigungen Anderer, Nicjtjuden, bineindrückt, benn biefes rein menfhlihe Anfschlußberufnig eriftirt bei ben Suben not among each other, where e3 bie “Stammvermwanbifchaft” bod, facilitate folltes it ift rather about innate drive, To infect strangers. The current human connection is rooted Yorzugsmeife in the family, as the snfstitution, which of bem Partifularismus fi) am menigften removed. The fa- _ Milte was the Jew in the mobern times of his suffering and Drangfale about place of rerdation, therefore e3 Fine Miracle if, if bie spouse and parental love with them Froftallifirter occurred, as with ben Chriften, when fie and fogar in biefer

Now it is a fact that every forial union, fin which the Suden besides the Chrifts a kind of preponberanz received, without Beftand if. The Urfadye ift Fein religiöfer Jubenhaß on the part of bed a part, a folder eriftirt in finely educated people; but it is the Gremdartige bes Wefens felber, weldhes, wir wollen follow “hemifch”, fich nicht: tolerates and the dissolution bes body by one, we would like to call it “inorganic”, Process brought about. The customs, traditions, manners Be8 True Jews do not harmonize with the unfrigen in the long run. Our boss is reluctant to listen to the “Maufhelns”, The eyes around you turn away from the strange things above us.

=

felnung, our senses rebel against our Gerz, and we Gave only choice, other senses ben Quben .for love to Fafteten, or, leaving our abfitracted heart behind them, to remove ourselves with our senses. — ft biefes Gefihl perhaps not right, dam followed from this that an un. honorable majority: of men would be obliged to "their “&igentbümlichfeiten® — that’s how we want it call — peculiarities of a small minority to sacrifice. But that is simply not enough. firafs wiber die männer nature, and we may bie Turn things around and advertise as we want, always form we are back to the point where we have to admit, not this or that Jew, fondern the Zubenthbum it ung between.

It is striking how bas Sjubenthbum with ben years fpeeififher will. We have known young people who absolutely had nothing youthful in their appearance and manners. They verbeitheten fidh, famen less in contact with non-Jews, were more influenced by “their people”, and Gang, Posture, manners changed; the language itself fell with ben adren into the unpleasant "muffling". The people fhen were not wieberguerfennen.

Compare the Yuben in the individual countries. Ar Pores have the most extreme southern culture, the young “export” barrel*, but — at Rigonreufer Orthoborie — all reinlichfeitögefeben fpottet. There ift the Jubenthum as folhes at Felbfiänbigfien. Cs it Paläfina in rufffthe duchten integrated. |

Dagegei occurs: 8 in Norbamerifa, where the enormous praftifch pulfirende Leben ANes with fortreift, worth less, and Air comparison with Poland Fafk ger not fehnrf stands out. Because in State citizens. The northern official state as a joker recognizes Jews. Further emancipation is a hypocritical lerifche lie. We recognize bad Qubentyum without reciproity.

How can one want to emancipate what one considers Dbjert recognizes! One can emancipate the people, not Jews. - The emancipation of Jews lies in him felbf; e8 if the — GSelftemancipation from Andenthbum. The written state therefore asked the Jews actually not even emancipated, he has only liberated tirt that an element which is not inherent in our nature is right to bother us. Laffen fi feelings, Anfidyten, Borurtbeile durch Defrete pick up? Never. The Dislike, which one feels against the South, asked her Urfade in dem Wefen bed Tubenthbumd. The aversion ift only one effect. To cancel the effect, the Originally raised and fine.

Why is it that we also have to deal with people every day communicate, who received the authorization through baptism have? That people have business dealings with us connection? That our friends, our dupes brothers find? — Because we see in them the little people, Gentleman Tennen have learned without any special eiality drew a baptismal ditch around our acquaintance. Because biefe Menfhen Niece Züdifhes an fi hatte.

Well then; the Sranzofe will not take it amiss, if we see him as ambitious, ambitious to the point of vanity, ficklecall it love.

The Englishman doesn't have the courage when we tell him
rn. the eccentricity of fine beings.

The Spaniard does not lose his politeness when we imitate his fine affected orange.

The German sheds fine tears when one bas impractical philosopher calls, and with rough truths ities which a baptized Zube, Lubwig Börne, asked us, u I

We have been to the Klafficities, we are proud to report find. These Börne'fhen writings find and a gospel

And we didn’t even hear about the propriety feats of a “nation” from which all peoples without exception, advertise unpleasantly?! Of course, on a current standpoint, on the standpoint of the DVolfes, which fpeciel and dDireft with Sehovah Hanbelstractate and concludes political agreements, which the whole world despises and only the chosen people will - that is a bredyen.. The Jewish Dünfel endures fine criticism. He, about temporary goods, nadfommenfhaft and lands willingly if, in Abraham ben Tobtfchlag of his own son, ald an a conto payment bes to close with God-ben business, to curse; he, over the Egyptians commands with God's permission; he, before whom the moon prays,
Sea retreats, over Jordan fine waves become chauffee he, who through pimps and blood-thirsty Abraham a Patriarch, who has an authority over the bloodthirsty fugitive David, the Tieberlihe Solomon a model of virtue and wisdom
ift; he, over all peoples who bathed differently than he himself, was ready to die and the mercy of Saul to the blasphemy of the Lord — he must curse us and He wore and cursed when we saw his creatures and his properties thümlichfeiten as foldhe, or he would be have bört, accessories too fine.

Diefe Eigenthümlidykeiten Taffen fih nicht mwegbisputiren.
They also occur among the rich, materially independent Zuben to light. The “rich Zübinnen” find in Babeorten
The current order is brought up ly, oftentieus, colorful, tastefully overloaded. The eble Plaftifche simplicity is alien to him. The toilet is a Berth- Bazar; a young Mobebame leads her Zumelen fpazieren. — For the male part it is be-Fanned sufficiency, the affected nanalierwefen, in which, however,

The oriental type emanates from every seam.
and presumptuous, as long as he wants to achieve something, arrogant and repulsive when he asked to demand a right, fold and zarädhaltend, wenn ji eine Speculation zerfihlagen bat.

In the trade, banknotes and government bonds are available in nummer One, then follows the Yadı of the Mannfacturen. Ju Speeulation and Dispofition ift er Meifter, in actual Work a bungler. As a stud seller he excels. It is fine Exaggeration, if we ask, in every “SKarrenjuben” lies on the material to become a millionaire. But even in the bargain He implores Jehovah's Witnesses. He must the miles to bank. The time he wasted, To save even a fraction of a penny would be at the Schadher. He gets it through deprivation. The poor Zube Tennt Fine enjoyment of life; him ift Fine relaxation granted, meil er felbft fie fi nicht gönnt. Er leads a jam-. mervulles, pathetic Dafein, fo lange Zehovah nicht with the bait into the bay. Where the conditions, in where the Sjube lives, is shaped differently, then he is also different. Sn Paris, Vienna, Berlin, Hamburg ufw find bie reichflen People Jews. In North America, where work, bag an« strenuous struggle for acquisition alone creates wealth, The actual "Jewish yellow-bargain community"* is created. There asked Sehovah for his lost power.

Jehovah's Witnesses on Tubes, bb The Hope of dns Wunder, über Zufall finds Teinen beffern evidence, as — in Zotteriewefen. The Eollecteur is about Compagnon of the Coincidences. With true ant-like activity, See in this bath, where he is courting over the goddess Zorkuna make Tann, where fine activity is the capital, meldyes him incalculable encumbrances Fann. Zebovah must him. also called beer. His name advertises in ben Devifen about refp. Gollecten called. The exciting excitement of the chances of luck if with him, tie at the junk shop available, but at the spa-Go and decorate your old rags and many rags again Anfepen brings. The cycle of life of an old paletot to: combine, which includes sharpness, cunning and devi« nakiensgabe, umb wir werden es piycholegifch vollflommen, baf This business is a favorite of poor Yuben if. The Goneurrenz in biefem Wrtifel if a free; where does it come from now that the people of the evening origins in Quben fogar Teine Conenrrenz in biefem Yace maden, ba bach gewiß for the mere pleasure of nidytjübifche workers I do not physically Ylagt and torments? Es ifk bas mobemnifirte Nomabenthum bes tribe, which fi has received in another form. Cs if a typical characteristic of the Jew. It is an advantage, ben he gives the chance before about methobifhen activity.

That bie Zuden einem anderen Menfcheuftamm eniweber belong to, or to a fold advertised, advertise Nobody denies it.

We tend to overlive and know Jewish legend about the creation of the world and about Cannon hike from Wegypien to the area above Mytbe, because the Jewish myth is analogous to the myth of other Bolfer about real matter. We therefore arcentuir ben body-Building materials are not a tribal property. The “wammy sett fabric”, which is “incorrectly attached to the hip” “swept thighs”, the “deep ankles”, the “flat foot”, Urfadhe of the unpleasant movements “of many Zuben” not necessarily away, *) but we explain it as a throw of a

---

*) Bergl.: “The Jews and the German State of Berlin, Nieolat'fhe bookstore.

Overwhelming all sorts of, currently about Pharaohs befannten, Egypt-inhabiting Bolferflamme, of benen the fübifhe tradition alone twelve for fi in Anfpruh nimmt.*) Even if you are from Moravia ben twelve sons of Safob are considered to be laffen and alfo accept wanted that biefes Gefgelcht fih centuries long burdy bie own blood relationship continued babe, (in weldem In case, however, the descent would have to be physically deformed) felbft then the tradition tells us how the children of Terael Later, Mofes included, towards Nechts and Lints in all Eouleurs undertook the mating process. From opposite current partial dynamology about Jews therefore on a abfolut fpectfifhes Jubenthbum als Urftamm fließen to want, ift wiffenfchaftli invalid.

There is only the following left: The Jews find a mixed volt with a flat predominant flight fhem Type The word “Jew* was a swear word long before there was a Jewish nation. E& was supposedly Born name of one of Sakob's sons. The promised land was called Kanann. After the separation of tribes, Geographical terms Zuda and Fsrael. Man barf alfo - assume that the Jews accepted the name “Zuden” tirten, approximately in the same way as the name “Geufen® was accepted by the Nieverländers. A purebred Zudenthum Täßt fih meber biftorifch nadhmweifen, no traditionally maintained. Judaism has become The destruction of Serufalem was only preserved unaltered than other Baelfer. The prophet Hefefiel tells in the 23rd chapter chapter in great detail, by referring to the kings Yuda and Föræl calls two whores, who are Bublichaft

---

*) One sees 3. B. on the other hand, Juben in Italy, where he, us doubtfully mixed with Romanic blood, really physically beautiful can be called.

1. in Egypt Cfhon “in their youth*, alfo before bem extracts),

2. with the Affirians,

8. with the Egyptians (ald Fortfehung),

4. with the Babylonians,

5. with ben Chalbäern Cin melde bie Fübinnen fi at the sight in love with the “red-painted picture on the wall”)

partly had done, partly were still doing.

That these slanders about ordinary women have no consequences “remained, is not claimed, but it is told Hefetiel Ders 37: that bie Zübinnen their own jübifchen Children burned for the love of strangers, presumably because they felt like mothers from their foreign lovers.
'Hefefiel tells biefe stories two Dal, the first time, faft just as detailed in Chapter 16.

He cast doubt on the traditional belief that the people who Rich later called “Zubden”, a mischief rage find, fhtwinbet,
If one wants to be so good, it is good to remember that Jofepb is a Egyptian woman, Asnatb, the daughter of Potipherag Egyptian priest Ch) as his wife, gave him two sons, Manaffe and Ephraim. This marriage of a young Saints dispels any doubt, and tradition and Wiffenfhaft reach each other seduced by hand over
The fact is that our jubilees are neither a volt par excellence, no eine Nation find.

These crosses naturally had to advertise less from the moment when ber. Reit ber Juden nad) der lepten Destruction of Serufalem, completely scattered throughout the world and so that they were evenly distributed everywhere. Ward bad Through Ariftlih-möndifhem Banatismus the Coltus of a Chriften nit: a female servant, often punished with burning at the stake. Sn

In these troubled situations, however, fine wounds were base Allgemeine des Zuben fi ziemlih auf bem Stanbpunfte received, ben e3 in Titus and Bespafian's time had, and what feither fh am AJuben troß des Subenthums changed and modified, ift Flimatifchen and losalen Verbältniffen zuzufehschreiben.

böchftens modificiren. A mdinner is enjoyed by all generations:
not deny the sinner type, a Negro not be Negro-Iypus. Just as little the “variant” of morning-old Bölfer, which is called “Inden”, are theirs. The ebelung, d. bh. bie Emancipation muss the abftrafte Feld serlaffen and into a concrete, flexible mixture pass over. Sehonah does more fine miracles.

* 4
%

We now pray along these lines.

The supply in the modern state is relatively low remained what he had in the ancient state of finer own tradition
He is unprofessional in everything that lies beyond the horizon narrow-minded particularism, as long as it is in and adheres to the surplus. Those Jews who belong baptize without gaining any benefits or hope, do not do e3. out of religious conviction, but out of a vein — Jobenswertben — aesthetic feeling. Religious would be about Zube with every change of faith only in the needle axe fine, because not Teicht finds a God fo fpeeififch jübifcher Nature, so partial to the Jews, vindictive against their enemies, fo egulant and tractable in business, like Jehonah. The Önttesider bes Juden wob bei jebemecfel abge-Thwädt, beperfonalifirt, Der Materialisuns Zehonah's Tann only in the human Mazerialigınus. find a disempowerment.
Now in this human-like material we find some bees.
gungen gefnäpft, bie ber Zube, als. Zube wicht erfüllt Fanaız ba3 Entry and absorption into the form and the weaving

the majority in the state.

We therefore declare e3 to be unlucky and disgraced probuft of the Phrafe of the Speologists, the Grundbfag ver Sletihberehigung bes ZJuben zu Stantsoffices to have been brought to bear. An orthoborer Aube, indeed a Zube in general as a plenipotentiary minister asked, after forty years in office, to expel us
The government could have brought not other than erceptionell and erclufio werden, ed müste ben"
But Mr. Minifter should start by discussing customs, habits, Brews, manners of the Jew to give up, consequently gang Serael ih gum make enemies, consequently stop being a Jew departments. Weber in the Yuftiz, nor in the Abminiftration the current element is suitable, as a decisive influence, Turin Finely appointed state office, where bas Gelb as The equivalent is paid for services which are within the meaning of to procure a Mafority, with all its Befen, bem Wefen des Yuben biametrically opposed, Teine feels the most natural sympathy with the Jew. The The state does not need to examine publicly to what extent One or the other quantitatively still in the jubilee--thums jledden, er bat bas Net und bie Pflicht, von feinen Officials quite succinctly normal pronounced entities in In the sense of needs, the Majesty over citizens long, fine double-layered sheets.

“That the Jews find as they find, if a consequence over long Rashtihaft," we hear again object. Benn bas But Gall would be, so we want, but we fine Jews find, wit for "the sins of fathers!" atone. Bir but give them the means to help them: fir) zw

4

change, and hopefully advertise bie Sjuben bie go far to claim that their past: ee fipb's times up to the present day passed fei. eg The Zuben are right as humans, no To be heard — by participating in the MVoting right. You have a right, it fm to enjoy the little senses and may you fommen. Bill the majority indirectly, mil my right to vote, cheers in the Erecihin Administration prove, so we must. and declare, because the right to vote is about Dr five of the nations. (But there are which this universal suffrage Oründen banished.) But — in a the state, on the other hand, the NRedt, Baranlı! bass about employees not in the Zubenthi The Jubilee as a folhes Faun biefe & and there remains only the model Nori to solve this dilemma.

right, through and burd Humanes ur have Eud) haher those men in Hamburg ı demand your special partitulaı Citizens' bum next to the state
give, baffle in favor of bes Iek
Temple to liquidate and your Eu
Private matter to be discussed.

Hereby ift a humane Prifett es a Qubentbum — vo Men are considered all over the world as “
With the dissolution of yours meant

u

civil judgment against your entire tribe; with over Abolition of your Eultus as a “state firdhe” in miniature
In principle, you step out of your receptive position, and not the usual municipal association — benn biefer.
it erflufio — Members ift full citizens. The Approach to how to affiliation with your evening Fellow citizens are inevitably recruited and e8 fans are not missing, that the crossing process, mweldher before the Jubenthum in Egypt already eriftirte, resumed, both times to strengthen, to ebb your Bolfe, which remains untouched of Copts, Moors, Chaldeans, Babylonians, Affirians and Negroes will remain. (Because there is also Negro blood in your tribe, you will not deny it.)
And it is a folide, a scientifically based and natural according to feftftehente emancipation, which we offer Eud.
A noble emancipation, Fine Tarmoyanter Subenfihmerz, Finely powering deborathum. —

And your own feeling tells us that I am right.
No baptized Zube likes to remember that he was Yube;
Even every Jew is afraid to hide among non-Jewish people, that he is an accessory. That is fine, false shame, that is a in the poor part of your human life remained unconsecrated beneg ©erechtigfeitsgefühl, meldhes warns you loudly that ed, if aud) Fine crime, but a seer ift, in ber Ei« Vilifation and culture in the nineteenth century still Jew too fine. The Kritif Fommenber times may like it Yorbekeep fine, us Germans, Romans :c. ıc. in a to bring a very similar situation! — —

* %*
*

. And now? i
We have held up a mirror to you by bem;:

— BB —

mas hr wart and of what Zhr feid. hr Eünnt nit fagen that we painted with 3u bright sardines, beun we have the most stupid of your own traditions, bem moralifhen Foundation of your Aubenthumsd beuußt and have Showed you that you, as Zuben, are an incompetent, persecuting and persecuted, plagued and afflicted& despised and despised Belt was, feid and it will remain mwerbet, fo lange Ahr eben "Jews" bleikt.

About Shr hopes perhaps nodh on the

"Meffias?"

How would you recognize him? That he committed murder and Brand preaches, like your High Priest in Canaan? That he our birth strikes and plagues the land & ia Mofes?.

Our governments are no longer simple, we have Pharaohs. They would have a following Mofes Secundus just hang around, instead of discussing it with IBM whether he would devastate the land in the name of Sehovah or not.

Near Palestine you would hardly emigrate to bort to found a Mufterflant, aud if you Eudy completely Syria fired. And you're right.

Should e8 be peaceful propaganda of a possible future
' meffias possible) make Eucd to help to rule? Well, besu mat ihm Feine Schade, ftoßt bie Emancipation rofh of you and demands that he be a well-wisher
"may find no host of Orthodox Jews!

' About what beun fonft?

The miracle?

Run then we will arrive at e8, whether Sjehovah in nineteenth century still does a miracle for you, you interact with the "unclean" on a daily basis, which you Saponifications where your God is everything, not even completely ,halten Fönnt, andy if Zhr fie wanted to hold.

We believe in truth in your antegedentien not what Eud) nor do Tann condemn the indefinable Prisoner, Jew too fine. Does Judaism perhaps even more brilliant immortality than that of Chriftenthun? €3 promises you fine ones. This dogma has you out Babylon brought to Serufalem.

E83 has given you the Jews a Canaan, a Tanb ferocdhen, where “mildy and honey flow,” and ‘has baptized you.

It has given you world domination for day and hour. and put you in a prisoner of war after another fehleppen Taffen.

E38 promised you) a “Meffias* and gave you subbrothers and “Reform Juben.”*

Nod) once, what is it that makes you hold on to the Sudentum?

A God, as he has promised you, Tann höchitene a barbarian Tieben. He is the god of the Burdt, the race. You have no primal influence on your history, your past. Fadhe flolz too fine. Even less so on your original. Shr hast Feine Flaffifche Vergangenheit, Feine Helben, und Your scholars emancipated themselves from themselves. You only have martyrs who are not for a bee farben, fondern ald Repreffaien, welhe Radhfudht ımb Stupid people of other nations used against you.

We are far from inviting you to the Webertritt in the But you demand “rights” and these will recruit you as soon as you have fulfilled your duties. Shr wolt Menfhenrehte and thereby children of Jebovah remain par excellence. Dear people, that's not possible.

Volt hr really in all hours equal Citizens of a fine state, so you must in all hours learn to affiliate with the right state. You may State should not be regarded as a criminal act in which Shr forms a branch stock company, and should not believe with a few thalers of taxes that you pay, nature over The majority of citizens have bought you. Your backgift to the association of people in which you live, must not "optional,* but "mandatory. *) The other finds fih from felbft. Who without Eultus cannot live Tann, under You, he may join privately with oil eichgefinnten and Build temples, so much air he asked; whoever, on the other hand, is content, only citizens who in fine formal Beziehbung zum Sjubdenthum, in which bie Form Alles ift, ftebt, will welcome us fine. The substitution between the Germanic tribes and Drientalen ift still too big in ber Race to ben Ueberrunner without security to take in with us, Erft if he bie Brüde behind fi) and in optima forma passes over, instead of overflowing, if the trust is justified, fepwindet the natural aversion that we all jebt not

Mr. fein Fönnen, berer but only wenfge ben open courage have, not even wanting to advertise Mr.

The Zudenthbum must stop when the human fhenthbum begin foll.

It is no longer possible to express sympathy in writing
thien for the Zudenthum to display, without ber Hypocrisy is too fine. Nevertheless, we made ourselves be prepared for fanatical attacks, as the daily press large part in the hands of Jews. From bief An-
We are probably advertising new evidence for phychoIogifhe truth of our presentation fchöpfen Fönnen.

---

*) The opposition, which Dr. Rieffer against the obligatortfhe Evililehe in the hamburger Bürgerfhaft made, day one A genuinely "Jewish" motive! A philanthropist?
Not your body! Where was Zaracl? — —

And so finally the questions:

Who should emancipate?! — The legal state"?
— Er emancipire fi erft felber!

Who should be emancipated? — The Zuben! —
And from what? — Bom Zubenthbum? — E83 emancipire fidh felber.

A “hriftlider” state Fann fein Sjuben a state-a non-written one may not do so because he that, as he denies at fi), not at the Sudenmay; — bie Confeffion, und no bazu a Confefiion, report directly to the VBertigung everything non-Jü. bifhen orders, in melder the Befuntniß ibentifh with a current municipal law and police order.

But how the confessional element of the “written”

State made, jo madht the confeflionelle element the Sjubenthum the enemy of every non-Jewish state. It receives bie Zuben erelufiv, makes it difficult for them to merge into the general unity.

Denying what we call their “ownthümlichfeiten call, so may they attend, whether and how they Believers find under and. — Do they want these propertiesthümlichfeiten conferviren, not make efforts, in bie General public, if our position towards them is a pure consideration of the Nubens or Nadıtheils, ben fie uns bringen, we consider fie ala ein und fremde Bol and treat them as a group, bie wir "zulaffen", build, but not ung fstaatlich equal rights anernen Tünnen. In this case, we are on their side.

Under the state we meet the demand to be eipiren, underferm Volfe we fille bie Sorberung, fih zu bumanifest; we truly advertise to the “Jubenthum” not referred to as the “Chriftentbum”, the third talen not treat more sparingly than the Decidentals, bem "the chosen people of Yehovah" do not show greater nefpeft, than our own beautiful people.

The Auben fünnen ung alfo bürgerlih vollfommen equally fine.

We refiimiren baber ben Sjninhalt biefer Schrift to folliving confequences.

The Jews do not want to be bourgeois alone, fonbern andy politically equal with their fellow human beings. specifically want the right to permanent positions in over Erecutige, the courts and in the administration.

Do you meet this requirement? Are you in a “written” State, the Jews have a right to claim that long who maintain their religious beliefs, but Confession of each “state religion” recognizes in the state fine other religious Clement than theirs. Consequently, all serious things spoken about — about fg “enlightened” Sube, about fih makes little of his religion, that he is a jübifcher Zıtdifferentift if, Fine reasonable reason, before bem zurückzusfchreden, which must also be a mere formula for him, in order to keep him in good civic condition, nämlid “Chrift” to advertise when he is in a “hriftliden”

In a city without a state religion?
folder Emm and may, like Feine Gonfefilon, also recognize Judaism. — In the first state of Stantöfirhe have therefore the Suden — all Ernfted gefprodden — their temple and their Gementbeserbmidb, fo weht berfelbe in ben general Staatsmechamiemus hintertübergreifen, to liquidate and transfer it by private means, a ettvaiges religidfes Band mieberherzufstellen, which with bem State to bring into fine connection if. Bor bem ift e3 Wiberfinn, to speak of emanripation.

we

This question is decisive if the flowering plant is to to find out whether the Suben in their totality, ala dns not "chosen people" fih with the evening fear of Volfs-
'element affimiliren Fönnen. Whether their "peculiarities", burch which fie fi from ever, as Nobody can deny, of all peoples have been exterminated?
According to the views, we offer 3. B. in Norbamerifa ge-power, we do not despair about the possibility of such a Afftmilirung.

But that in consequence of the persecutions woben find, as fie find, ift a lie; fie were persecuted, because they were as they found. In the Middle Ages, burdy bie brute force, in the presence of burdy objective criticism.

In a word: the Jew is a citizen, every citizen drive, acquire every wish, enjoy everything that bas civil life grant him Fanı, but deny me him bag Necht the right to civil offices, fo lange er Sjude if. And indeed

4) because its confession is the outgrowth of the religion of a very fimmten prescribed and special rationality and everything else, only Tein fosmopolitifchen character carries on itself;

2) because the external form in which this epiphany appears,
fully and decisively the ©epräge of an apparten nationality to fi;

3) because the habits, the way of life, the language, the reflerion, the monkey, because all the pushing is practiced ttonell occurs,

Mohlverftanden "national? in the sense that bas Subenthum, mweldes im Örunde taken never a nation ge-

Therefore we ask: How we know from every Frangoofen, from every Englishman, every Stalinist, that he, if he wants in our state citizen in the sense that the path to any state office is open, fi fully gu germanifiren babe, fo aud ber Qube.

Be

Seber Sjube, who said this, honestly and seriously strives, ift unfer Freund.

The dissolution of fine foctal-Pirchlich national Ge - my association if about first step towards equality about Siuben.

Whoever does not want to free himself from fine anniversary National Association — benn ein folder ift the jubilee Gemeinbewefen — we grant full freedom of association, full civil rights, but — Fine civil rights, which E8 would be a mistake among all Circumstances.

As good as the beutfchen Elfaffer in France Sranzofen find,
so gut müffen the Jews in Germany Germans fine,

Obtaining citizenship in North America wii, asked for his permission to take an oath in advance, in weldyem er fein vorangehenden Behörden besavonirt.

This is responsive and honest. The sub may not Aube fein, der Sranzofe not Sranzofe, ber Britte not Britte.
He must give up in general.

©p long the access in fine majority ben befränkten takes the standpoint of a gypsy, if he is not capable to flat equality.

Drud yon Pont & y. Döhren.

—

Y
W
I

.M 4
= s
–
[4

+

ee

"2
– ii
who

De |
to

STANFORD UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

(NEAR SAINT-SULPICE)

1913

|
|

Morality and Social Principles of the Jews

according to their holy book: the Talmud u — HEDGE wu —

FOREWORD

DON | No ethnic or religious problem has arisen @> Dose, Throughout History, in a more them At the time when the Roman armies inflicted this on them which was called "the dispersion" - we find the Jews fighting with all the peoples who have received them into their midst. The convulsions of this eternal conflict fill a part of Antiquity and the entire Middle Ages. In modern times, if the struggle between the Jewish element and the Christian elements and musirtmans- has a lesser character, it is that-ra&la had the skill to hide his aggression, Formerly almost toUdirect days, under a thousand skillfully crafted masks. But that one of these masks is lifted at random, and, under the peril which threatens each people in its national security, in his material prosperity, in his religious freedom or in his social peace, almost always we will find the Jew.

It is the Jew, in fact, who has modified the conditions of existence.
economic strength of nations, by creating a financial system

> u sun ae EA in Are

—

financial which allows him to accumulate, at pleasure, the Pu- ruins

, anti-Christian persecution, To satisfy secular hatred-, latre of his race against the servants of Christ. It is the Jew who set fire to the social building by sowing the collectivist idea in the world by means of these agitators and theorists Hebrews who were called Karl Marx, Lassalle and Singer in Germany; Neumayer, Adler and Aaron Libermann in Aucheat; Fribourg, Leon Frankel and Haltınayer, in France: James Cohen, in Denmark; Dobrojanu Gherea, in Romanianie; Kahn, Lion and Samuel Gompers, in the United States (1).

It is the Jew who is, in the whole world, behind all moral depravity enterprises in the artistic fieldtic or literary. It is the Jew, finally, who has successively served as a spy against all the powers that be imprudent enough to welcome him.

This tremendous work of corruption and destruction, constantly pursued through the centuries, poses a point of questioning that could not be erased until now. What force mysterious Iransforms the Jewish race into this "scourge of God" whose role we have just sketched in broad strokes? .., There you go the question that inevitably arises in the mind when one has studies the disastrous work of Israel for more than two thousand years.

Indeed, these Jews, whom current circumstances, like their past history reveals itself to us as completely foreign to the ideal that we honor, these Jews, who do not know how to be great only in hatred, bold only in plunder and satisfacts that in the filth spread in waves around them, these Jews are <however the authentic descendants of the Hemany of the earliest ages, of those whom divine Providence chooses among all men to make them “the people of God." This religion of the Messiah, which they persecute todaytoday the faithful, after having crucified the Messiah himself, it is the same one who nourished their first hopes with her ancestors: alone of all peoples, they received the deposit,

---

(t) It cannot be too often recalled that]'Humanite, the official organ of The United Socialist Party in France was founded with the aid of a sum of 780,000 francs provided by twelve Jews: Levy Brulh, Levy Brahm,

\ A. Dreyfus, Louis Dreyfus, Herr, Eiy Rodriguds, Leon Picard, Blum,

, Rouff, Casewitz, Salomon Reinach and Sachs. Most newspapers The world's socialists were also founded with Jewish money, and Their editors, almost half of them, are Jews.

in

2 > Zu a ne nd nn

and "Abraham leaped for joy at the thought that he would see the day of the Redeemer” (2).

How did pure gold turn into lead? How Have "God's people" become the accursed nation? Comment the Jews, who had lived for so many centuries in the attent of the Just, did they crucify him when he showed himself to them? How those whose fathers had received, on Sinai, the Decalogue of justice and love, have they replaced it with the law of hatred, murder and theft that governs them today and is called re Taımup?... This is what seemed to us neces- It is necessary to explain before approaching, according to the most recent sources sure, the examination of the Talmud itself and the consequences that the adoption of its morality entails.

We will therefore, in a supported historical study on facts that we believe to be irrefutable, indicate how the corruption of Israel took place, what fertile ground this corcorruption encountered in particular ethnic defects to the Jewish race, and what political factors made the Jew unfaithful to his mission, leading him to Deicide first, and the traditional and secular struggle against Christianity incontinued. We will thus have the key to an Enigma around which World politics has been going on for two thousand years.

---

(2) John, IX, 56. To be compared with the text of David: “God has not "shows so much predilection for other nations and has not taken advantage of them “thus manifests his judgments. Non felicit taliter omni nationi et “judicia sua non manifestavit eis. »

»
[}
born

|

has 1
|
f

i hr

d F FD
%%
Ro

Yin DEN j
“N LIIA”:

[FI N 1 6 oz
) ENDE IE a N an
"ru nn y ur .
a A
”.

PART ONE

CHAPTER ONE

The Ancient Apostasies of Israel

fd OUS told you that the religious corruption of the Jews was favored by ethnic defects which gave them &were particular. It seems, in fact, that
- 4 the descendants of Jacob did not wait long-
It is time to define divine promises.
the very hour when their national existence began, and when the E-
The Lord, through the voice of Moses, called them to the possession of the
In the Holy Land, the Hebrews felt deep in their souls an inclination invincible nation for the worship of the false gods of the East. This cult had such attractions for them (that they took advantage of the leastdre ,favorable opportunity, such as the momentary absence of legislation-the lator that Providence had given them, to raise up the idols proscribed and give them the forbidden honors. The descendants Jacob's stories make this state of mind clear from the first pages of 'ExXoDE, ol J&hova however accumulates miracles in favor of the people he 'chose for himself.

A well-known episode makes this apostasy of the heart palpable. Hebrews who came out of Egypt, who hasten to deny the God above- to which they owe their liberation. Israel camped at the foot of the mountain Sinai, resounded with thunder and surrounded by lightning, on which Moses receives the tablets of the Law with trembling. The legislator comes back down to his compatriots and brings them the testimony of divine protection. He finds them dancing around the Golden Calf, that they claimed that Moses was absent, and that they did- burnt Aaron, his own brother... Before this nameless denial.

ER -

m aM
m..o

\

AA Ve

TEE

Scripture makes the Lord pronounce these bitter words: "I see that this people is a stiff-necked people... (3).

This is a word that will come up again and again in the sequel. of the holy book, as Israel multiplies its apostlestasies and will tirelessly return to the cults of the peoples of the Orient, who deified Lust and Cruelty. Also, when Samuel, aged, will complain of the ingratitude of the Hebrews towards him, the Eternalnel, to console him, will address these melancholic words to him:
"...It is not you they reject; it is me they reject, in order "that I no longer reign over those. They act in your regard like me
"they have always acted, since I made them rise up out of Egypt
"until this day; they have abandoned me to serve others “gods...” (4).

As we see, if the divine Election rewarded in the descendants of Abraham and Jacob the merits of their fathers, she This already clashed, in the heart of the same cases! descendants, with resistances of which few other peoples would have given an example. Frightened by the mission entrusted to them, the Hebrews did not worse than to free themselves from it. And if the Bible offers us, during the first part of their History - the one that goes from the exit of Egypt to the establishment of the Monarchy (1625 to 1006 before Jesus Christ) — great figures of prophets and righteous people, the idolatrous tendencies of their compatriots.

Two circumstances further strengthened, among the Israelites, this natural propensity to apostasy. The first was the melanguage of ethnic elements, which will early alter the unity of race in most tribes. The second was the backlash of the internal political struggles of the Hebrew state. Let us examine one and the other of these causes of evolution.

The children of Israel did not conquer and occupy the whole landritory of the Promised Land. To the south, the Philistines, a warlike people- of Crötoisc origin, could never be enslaved; in the North, the cities of the powerful Phoenician empire arose, which was limited to To admit the tribes of Asher, Naphtali and Dan into their countryside; in the interior of the country itself, the CanaThe Neapolitans resisted for a long time, in isolation, the efforts of the Hebrews and finally concluded, with the tribes that occupied their territorytory, vassalage contracts; Jerusalem, capital of the Canaanites, was to remain independent for almost six centuries: it did not was taken only in 1042 BC, by King David, who üt its capital (5). This set of resistances resulted in a

(3) Exope, ZÄXXII, 9.
(4) I Samuer, VIII, 7 and 8.
(5) Iuces, I, 17 & 36; II, 1A 5; Ill, ı has 6.
li SamuEL, V,4& ı0. i See also: Maspero, Ancient History of the Peoples of the Orient,

an -

Close contact between newcomers and those of the old inhabitants from the soil that they had not been able to expel or destroy; despite the defense mixed marriages formulated by Moses, on many points, the blood mingled, the morals and religion of the Canaanites became familiar to the Israelites, and the worship of the gods of Canaan made them forget that of J&hova.

These Canaanite gods were the same as those of the Phoenician cie, whose bold sailors of Tyre and Sidon established the altars wherever they entered, that is to say not only P\ Carthage, but on the entire coast of the Mediterranean, on the coast Western and Northern Europe, on the west coast of Africa, and Even into the Red Sea. It was Moloch, the bull-god, (elsewhere honored under the names of Melkarth and Baal), with his gigantic cast iron statue, hollow and reddened by fire, in which human victims were thrown; Moloch, whose golden calf was not than the emblematic figure, and which demanded from its faithful the sacrimost painful bond: that of their first-born child (6).

sacred courtesans, with its obligatory prostitution of all Fennes, On certain holidays of the year. The day after the conquest as when they were masters of the land, under their Judges as under their Kings, the Hebrews devoted themselves in great numbers- to the cult of Moloch and Astarte, raised "high places" and made their children "pass through the fire." The Prophets- They keep reproaching them for these human sacrifices which are not point, even today, so disappeared among the Jews that we cannot find any trace in the practice of the "crime ritual » (7).

A political cause came, in 976 BC, to establish definitively these impure cults in the greatest number of tribes. The government of the Hebrew people had first been a mixture of theocracy and democratic anarchy. "In this time "There was no king in Israel; everyone did what was right

(6) This atrocious cult has left traces even in our language. When the Romans established themselves in Sardinia, which had long been- once a Phoenician possession, they found it covered with burning statues- your @elevees to Moloch. The cries and complaints of the human victims thrown into the terrible machine melted, outside, into a kind of frightening sneer, which the Romans called “Sar’s laughter.”

"deigns" or "sardonic." We still use the word without thinking to the memories it evokes.

(7) This is not the place to deal with this serious question, which has, many times, raises the populations against the Jews, made responsible- of the crime of some of them, which the others covered up by solidarity. It is enough for us to recall that the Martyrology consecrates the memory of a large number of children tortured and put to death by Molochist Jews. Only a quarter of a century, and although the judiciary of all countries is today more or less favorable to the Jews, around ten "ritual crimes" were legally note.

"it seemed to him" is a phrase that often recurs in Scripture. ture (8). This mode of government had the serious disadvantage to weaken the country in the face of the pagan states that surrounded it and that their monarchical status made them military. Also, it is in order guertes" (0) that the Hebrews ended up demanding a king. These kings, whose power dated from the day before, were coldly received by the priestly body, from which they came to take away part of his material power; and they themselves envied the moral authority which the priests of the True God preserved, an authority which held in _ bridal fantasies of the sovereign. From 1A a dull struggle which appears-would with Saul, calms down for a moment with David, the prophet-king, then reborn under Solomon, (who sacrificed to Moloch in the last-last times of his life), and finally bursts with the schism of the ten tribes.

In 976, when Solomon died, the northern tribes, whom he had levied heavy taxes to beautify Jerusalem, remembering rose up against his son Rehoboam, stoned the treasurer Adoram who was sent to them to raise new sums, and gave as king a former officer of Solomon, Jeroboam, who had to take refuge in Egypt to escape the disgrace of the fire king. The ensuing schism separated the Hebrews into two nations, which no longer interfered: the kingdom of Israel, to the North, which covered was born for king Jeroboam; and, to the South, the kingdom of Judah (from the noii of the most important Jewish tribe), which remained faithful to the descent dance of David and kept Jerusalem as capital (10).

The fact that this city, where the Ark of the Covenant had been transported-This side where Solomon had built a temple to shelter him, was remained in the hands of Rehoboam, deeply hindered the usurper. Religious law prescribed, in fact, that the sacrifices should be celebrated within the temple where the ark of the Lord resided: everywhere else they were not valid. The people were rising therefore every year to Jerusalem to sacrifice there. But, by going there-As the Hebrews of the kingdom of Israel entered into territory,

---

(8) In particular: Juces, XXI, 25.

{g) I Samuer, VII, 20.

(10) We adopt the established division, which admits that the kingdom of Israel consisted of ten tribes, and that of Judah of the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin. However, from a territorial point of view throughout At least, this delimitation is finally correct. The entire territory of the tribe of Simeon, which was enclosed within that of the tribe of Judah, made part of the kingdom of Rehoboam, and it seems from then on that the latter had reign over three tribes and not two. On the other hand, the northern half of the The territory of Benjamin, with Bethel, became part of the kingdom of Israel. say that the southern half of the territory of Dan remained loyal to Rehoboam. [The Kingdom of Israel was found to be three times larger and twice as large populated than that of Judah; but its rivalry with the powerful Phœnician states The Italian and Syrian, which limited it to the North, did not allow it to take advantage of this advantage.

. = \ nn us ' gr 3 > rc De er
Zt 7 Du nn RE DAN GE NUMEENN DEN

placed under the legitimate sovereign, were in the framework where £Eclat the better his power, and in contact with the Levites, who were remained closely attached to the lineage of the prophet-king. There There was a great temptation for Jeroboam's subjects to re-announce the schism; and Jeroboam thought he could not better com-beat this danger only by striving to extinguish, in his kingdom, the religion of Moses, and by generalizing the worship of false gods, that Solomon had only practiced in a private way. This is what took place, as the following passage testifies:

“Jeroboam said in his heart, The kingdom might well, now-(“holding, return to the house of David. If this people go up to “Jerusalem, to offer sacrifices in the house of the Lord,
"The heart of this people will return to their lord, to Rehoboam, king
"of Judah, and they will kill me and return to Rehoboam king of "Judah. After consulting, the king made two golden calves and he "said to the people: You have gone up to Jerusalem long enough; “O Israel, this is your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt! He
"He placed one of these calves in Bethel and the other in Dan. This was the "an occasion for sin. The people went before one of the calves
"until Dan. Jeroboam made a house of high places, and he created "priests taken from among all the people and not belonging to the “son of Levi...” (11).

Jeroboam thus began the series of these impious kings of Israel. by calculation, persecutors of the orthodox Hebrews, of whom Ahab is remains the most well-known type. In vain, many of their subjects did they refuse to follow them in this way, as they had refusal to follow the example of the Hebrews already conquered by the idol-latrie; in vain, In the absence of the Levites, all refugees in the kingdom-soul of Judah, did Prophets arise from the ranks of the people to to make the word of the True God heard: the kings of Israel persevere-entered into a policy which freed them from priestly tutelage. tale and made their power absolute. There was hardly a courti orthodox reaction during the reign of the usurper Jehu, that-had raised up the prophet Elisha; the descendants of Jehu returned quickly To the policy of previous monarchs and sent the servants of the Lord to torture. So that in 721 BC (two and a half centuries after the schism of the tribes), half apostasy voluntary and half-constrained by royal power, the law of Moses was only followed secretly and by a small minority in the kingdom of Israel.

That year, Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, who had just imposed. a tribute to Osee, king of Israel, learned that the latter was hunting for to free themselves from it and negotiated with Egypt. The Assyrians ravage-besieged its capital, Samaria, which succumbed after a siege of (11) I Kings, XII, 26 & 31.

The Talmud

u
.

three years. The ten tribes suffered the fate that the Assyrians reserved-went to most "peoples defeated by their weapons: all >e who had survived from the population was gathered, transported to hundreds of leagues, beyond the Euphrates, and "denationalis@". We mixed the sons of Israel with other races; and, as they a-were more concerned with the preservation of traditional religion to remain united despite exile and dispersion, as their gods were, almost the same as those of their conquerors, they do not did not take long to merge into these and disappear forever (Lan

In the kingdom of Judah, the religion of Jehovah had become more easily maintained, Rehoboam not having to reign there until the press-religious stem of his grandfather, King David and to the protection of the L£- speeds. But the same causes which had brought, to Samaria, the struggle of royalty against the Mosaic law, also exist in Jerusalem Salem: The kings of Judah grew tired of sharing authority with the

(12) Fugitives, who had managed to avoid exile by hiding in the places separated, the past torment reappeared. They had to share the soil of their country with the Assyrian colonists from beyond the Euphrates, that the king of Assyria had sent to repopulate it. There too, the mixture of races was carried out by favor of idolatry. However, a small name.
The Israelites continued, without priests or organized worship, to worship the God of their fathers. Some copies of the Pentateuch were the the only link that bound them to their religious tradition, and the old hosti-the division of the kingdom of Israel against that of Judah prevented them from uniting to the worship celebrated in Jerusalem. They thought of sacrificing to the Eternal on Mount Gerizim, which overlooks Samaria, and which is the highest mountain from which Joshua blessed the people and their entry into Canaan and shared it with them the Holy Land. This dissident cult was asserting itself when Jerusalem fell. fought before the Chaldeans. When the inhabitants of Judah came from the captivity of Babylon, in 536 BC. the Samaritans had converted many of the pagan settlers who populated the Earth Holy,; but they saw with jealousy the reconstruction of the temple of Je.
Russia and tried to prevent it, which excited between them and the Jews a hatred that has been perpetuated from century to century. In 331 BC.

Manasseh, brother of the High Priest of Jerusalem, was banished for having married a Samaritan woman. He withdrew to Samaria, with a Large number of Levites who espoused his cause. He obtained from Alexander permission to build a temple on Mount Gerizim, and organized the Samaritan priesthood. All the banished from Jerusalem found there one safe refuge; therefore the Jews had a horror of the Samaritans and did they forbid having commerce with them, "even for necessities urgent matters of life." It was one of the grievances made against Christ that he had welcomed the Samaritans, which have continued to this day and still exist in Palestine and in certain cities of Egypt and Türkiye; their hatred for the Jews and that of the Jews for them remained the same as before the Christian era. They do not admit me as a sacred book than the Pentateuch, to which they added a Chronicle called Book of Joshua, who tells the Holy History in a fanciful manner and focuses on task To demonstrate the preeminence and anteriority of the temple of the mount (Gerizim on the temple of Jerusa'em. This Book of Josud, which the Sama. Italians claim to describe the time when this prophet lived, contains u which allow to fix the drafting in the V® siöc'e of our era.

—

priests of JShova; they envied the absolute power of the kings of Israel; following their example, they ended up establishing the cult of falsehoods

gods, in order to weaken the law of Moses.
There was, in this evolution, more political ambition than of religious preoccupation: a well-known example, the episode of Athaliah and Joash, proves it. Joash had been saved by the Levi- of the cruelty of Athaliah; he owed his crown to them. Hardly re- Does he mind that he nevertheless feels the desire to escape from them? guardianship. He therefore enters into struggle with them, takes up the policy of A- Thalia had the High Priest stoned in the temple courts. Apart from a few details, this story is that of a great many of his successors.

However, despite the hostility of most of the kings of Judah, the worship of the True God was never completely interrupted in c: kingdom; it was still that of the greatest number of Jews (13) when Jerusalem toınba, in the year 606 BC, in power of the Chald@ens of Nebuchadnezzar (14), Jequel took King Jehoiakinu and part of the population in captivity in Babylon and gave to the rest of the people of the kings of his choice. The latter having aspired to shake off the yoke, Nebuchadnezzar returned sixteen years later, ruining had saved a first time and who could not search in time a refuge in Egypt.

This was the beginning of the great Babylonian Captivity, which was to have a harmful influence on religious destinies of the Jewish nation.

NN

(13) The name of Isradlites belongs to all the children of Jacob, who was called Israel, that is to say: he who fights against God (GENESIS, xxx, 28). That of Jews (Judzi) is particular to the Israelites making part of the tribe (and by extension the kingdom) of Judah. As a result of the fusion of the ten tribes with the Assyrians, there is no more. today, other Israelites than the Jews, for the Samaritans are a race of proselytes and have almost no Hebrew blood. 2

(14) Nebuchadnezzar (also called Nebuchadnezzar) was the son of Nabopolassar, king of the Chaldeans, whose capital was Babylon. After having been subjected for a long time to the Assyrians, whose capital was Nirive, the Chaldeans had succeeded, under the reign of Nabopolassar, in to free and even to enslave their former masters. This victory of the Chaldea on Assyria was the revenge of an ancient civilization, refine and sclectic, on the police empire, but purely military, of the Assyrians.

——

ARE BEL EI °

vn

Eee

\

has -

ErFAREERIE SI

The Captivity of Babylon and the Pharisees

ı. Was in the tradition of the Hebrews, after each from their national apostasies, to be brought back to worship ll of the True God by the bitterness of the domination &tran| gere. This time, the decline suffered was greater even though at the time when Moabites, Ammonites and Syrians came-pay their masters on the hills of the Holy Land: it was the homeland itself that it was necessary to leave, to go, under the surveillance of the victor, to colonize a distant land. Scripture attests that the heartbreak was terrible for the Jews taken into captivitytiveness. But, as the religion of Moses had not disappeared in Judah, his captive people in Chaldea found there a source of e-energy that the people of Israel had lacked for a long time Pagans when they had been transported to the plains of As-Syria. Instead of "denationalizing" themselves as they had done their brothers separated, the Jews gathered around their prophotes. I, the suffering &pura the religion of the people and brought them back entirely to the faith of his fathers.

Alongside this renewal of mass orthodoxy, the captivity of Babylon unfortunately had a less happy consequence-reuse: she corrupted the intellectual elite of the Jewish people.
favor of the contact of ideas which is established between victors and vanquished.

The Chaldeans were not, like the Assyrians, a people only dominating and warlike; without being very gentle, their morals were less inhuman than those of their ancestors rivals. When they transported to one of their provinces, according to ancient custom, the remains of a defeated nation, they do not did not reduce her to slavery, as the Assyrians did not fail-didn't want to do it, but they sort of incorporated it in their own population. The soklats were thus called, as before their defeat, to carry the sword; the farmers and the craftsmen entered the trade bodies of the victors; the priests were received in these colleges of sages, astrologers and of soothsayers who had brought scientific fame to the Chaldea and where all intellectual knowledge was cultivated-of the time, from pure philosophy and history to astronomy and theurgy (15). Such was the fate of the trans- Jews

(15) See: Oppert, History of the empires of Chaldea and Assyria; Lenormant, The First

Peoples of the East

res civilizations, Maspero, Ancient History, of gates to Babylon; and we see Nebuchadnezzar, from the first taking of Jerusalem, surround yourself with: young pages borrowed from noble families of Judah. Later, the prophet Daniel would become even the head of the cell of the Chaldean priests (16).

This intimate mixture between transported Jews and Chaldeans did not succeedsit not, we said, To determine the fusion of the elements Hebrews; it does not soften the resentment of the vanquished conto be their conquerors, whom they always passionately hatedment (17). But it brought about a reciprocal penetration between the Chaldean priests and the Juiis Levites, called to share the same life and to engage in the same work. Two intellectual worlds, who had been unaware of each other until then, found themselves in the presence of each ot

Now, the philosophical doctrine which dominated among the scholars Chaldeans, above the superstitious simplifications which sufficewere to rock the religious feeling of the nıasses, it was the The most absolute pantheism. In this vast temple that is the Universe, the Chaldean scholar suppressed the Creator, who built it for his glory. Cause and effect together, the world was uncreated and became his own God. The very idea of Divinity merged with the universal Harmony which governs all things, and with each of the things that it governs. God was therefore & be, in turn and all together, the Earth whose breast nourishes men, the rose that fertilizes it, I shine that illuminates and that warms, the wind which carries the pollen fertilizing the plantsrate; God, it was the principle of life which perpetuates the cspecgs human and animal; which makes plants germinate, grow, die and rise again; which manifests itself even in the bodies apparently inanimate. Identified with a kind of breathing from inert and eternal Nature, God resulted from the World, and not God's World (18).

We understand that such a system, which is imbued with a bizarre but undeniable poetry, has had, at all times, something to seduce the human soul. It seduced her all the more because this system had as an immediate consequence 'flourishing of human pride' in the cult of the deified Man.

(16) DANIEL, v, 11 and 12.

(17) The delightful psalm cxxxvii, full of charm and poetry: “By the rivers of Babylon we sat and weptlet's laugh"...., ends with this lesser-known ending! "Daughter of Babylon, Happy is he who seizes your children and crushes them on the rock!

(18) Those of our readers who are familiar with the works of Hermetic Fıanc-Maconnerie will immediately recognize the ideas alchemical traditions of the Middle Ages, who themselves held them from the Jews Kabbalists. The same observation applies to the cult of the deified Man, which etzit the basis of Chaldean Pantheism, and which remained that of Oceulancient and modernism.

4
3 n / A re di ne

Bi be

-
In

ER Tan PP

N

ee

In fact, if no Being supreme and distinct from Nature imposed to it by right of creation, if everything had, in some sort of intelligence or soul, and if God were only the sum of all conscious or unconscious souls of the Universe, a hierarchy necessarily existed between these souls, each of which was a part of God, but who could not reclose God only in an unequal way. we divine principle must have been found to be distributed in less abundance in a gierre than in a tree, which lives, breathes, grows and dies; in a tree transformed into an animal, which can, discerns and acts; in an animal than in a man, who meditates on the past and the future nir, probes the problems of Nature, corrects imperfections of it by his labor and his ingenuity, and perfects himself himself indefinitely. At the summit of this ladder of beings, 'Man, much more perfect and more intelligent than all the others, absorbed @videmnicnt the largest sum of the essence divine which composes the Urävers. Having emptied the sky of all superborn to himself, he was truly the God of this world, where torıt appeared to him inferior and subordinate.

From then on, all the moral data on which are based tabie God of Nature, no longer had to bend the knee before empty and deaf skies; on the contrary, it was in himself, in questioning his desires and his institutions, that he should seek the divinity. The free wills of the human being became the wills burdens of a God; to resist them, to chain them, to discipline them, These were all impieties; true religion consisted in honoring and to satisfy all the appetites of Man (19).

This religion of human pride, of which the Chaldean scholars had formulated the dogmas, 3,000 years ago, as clearly that they could have been made in the 18th century by Claude de Saint Martin, was going to meet, among the Levites, with a doctrine of origin completely different, but which presented singular affinities with the one we have just exposed: the cult of ethnic pride.
We must speak here of a singular deformation which had

(19) The wise men of Chaldea were perhaps not the only ones deposites of this doctrine, which seems to have been that of all the mysteries of Antiquity, and which was hidden, in the eyes of the people, by means of a allegorical theogony. By doing in turn the analysis and the synthesis of this theogony, we will easily see that the Fropose Gods A l'aderation of the crowds were only the personification, grandiose or depravee, of the different human instincts, and that the whole of religion paganism was dominated by the cult of Mature Nature. It is this cult which we will then find at the bottom of most of the opposing doctrines to Christianity, since the Manichaeism and Mihraicism of the prefirst centuries of our era, up to Martinism and modern Theosophydernes, passing through the Kabbalah and Alchemy of the Middle Ages. The Vulgar materialism, which leads to the same practical conclusions as This doctrine is only the translation for primary works.

mm nn

introduced, nöme among Orthodox Jews, atı subject of the predesdestination of Israel and the deposit of the true Faith that he had received.

The Prophets had not ceased to repeat this truth to the Jews that God had chosen the Hebrew people, above all others, to to make them "his people"; that he led them and watched over them with a particular predilection; and that other peoples had neverbut was the object of the same eternal promises. This thought had not always kept the Jews on the slope of apostasy, but she did not fail to have penetrated them with the conscience of their ethnic superiority. By dint of thinking that the Divinity had on these particular views, many of them believed their race. They considered the "covenant" between Jehovah and the sons of Israel as a trait@ of power A power assuring to the Jews, in exchange for their loyalty, material primacy over all men; a contempt mixed with hatred &t..t the feeling that other nations inspired them; as for theirs, it was magnifi-made in their thoughts until they became the "God-people" more than the “people of God.”

This was the state of mind of a large part of the inhabitants of Judah when the Captivity revealed to them Chaldec and its wise men. at this time Assyria, Urartu, Medina and Persia: n'e-were populated only by warriors, where trade absorbed all the faculties of the Phoenicians, the two most intellectual peoples of Asia were the Chaldeans and the Jews. Different In many ways, they found themselves brought together by the culture of their @lites: the cult of human Pride, which shepherded 'one, ie cult of ethnic pride, (which exalted the other, made them con-take and penetrate each other.

It is not our place to seek what philo-Chaldean sophie first, and Persian then, borrowed from the Levites. Let it suffice for us to recall that a constant tradition gives Zoroaster as his master a Jewish prophet, who was Daniel or Ezra, and that it is undoubtedly there that we must seek the origin of certain high principles, coming from Jewish monotheism, which we encounter in the teaching of the Asian philosopher. Inverse-ment, Chaldean thought acts powerfully on Judaism orthodox, and determined the birth, in its bosom, of a sect Gui was to transform Israel and restore in the name of the latter the meaning that its Etymology includes: "the one who fights con-to be God." This sect was that of the "Pharisees" - in a word Hebrew which means: "separated" and which, in itself, makes one think of A Hercelia and schism (20).

---

(20) This meaning is probably that which the “Pharisees” gave in the name of their sect; but they explained this differently name to the people of Israel, saying that they were "distinguished" from the others.

&BLIOTE
\

.
bi Be

Ze

Jewish historians, before the Babylonian Captivity; and, since the Munck's works, it is no longer disputed that this sect is ı reeisement born at the time of this captivity, as a result of the influency that Chaldean philosophy exerted on a certain name- of Hebrew intellectuals, Levites for the most part. But, if the thesis of this author is demonstrated on this point, he appreciates less exactly, we believe, the importance of the loans that these letters- Jewish people did to the doctrines of their masters. What they asked them to do rent, in fact, it was not only a lot of superstitions on the souls of things, their transmigration, and the geniuses of the e&lements; this was also the very essence of the pantheistic doctrine – that they dressed, it is true, in Jewish style, and that they tried to harmonize with their pride as "Chosen People." It was then that was formed, from these Chaldean contributions in Jewish thought, this Kabbalah (or Tradition) of the Pharisees, which, long transmitted orally from the teachers to the disciples, was to inspire, eight hundred years later, the writing of the TALMUD, and finding its expression the most complete in the Sepher ha Zohar (21).

Before bursting out proudly like the expression of the aspir- Jewish rations, the "Tradition" of the Plenary had & overcome serious difficulties. The main one came from the revival of madness Orthodoxy provoked in the Jewish people by the Captivity. Expose to the exiles, who groaned over the collapse of the temple of Jerusalem salein, who implored Jehovah to put an end to the misfortunes of their homeland, that Jehovah was only a vain phantom, it was not only going facing certain failure, but still exposing oneself to perils serious, the least of which was to lose all authority forever in Israel. The Pharisees judged it wiser to capture, on the contrary, the confidence of their compatriots by taking the lead of the movement- religiously, affecting a serupulous observation of the least- dres prescriptions of the Law, by instituting practices of devo- careful and complicated operation. But, at the same time, they cultivate- were carrying the new doctrine in their closed circles, true very Jewish and as if "set apart" by their piety. – At the very moment or Chaldean philosophy gave birth to Phariseeism, it also provided his dogmas & Pythagoras, who, according to the testimony of Iamblichus studied for twelve years in Babylon towards the beginning of the great Captivity.

(21) Or Book of Splendor. It is a kabbalistic work kept held in high esteem by the Jews, and also, alas | by the Kabbalists of Christian origin – Its author supposes "st Rabbi Simson ben Jochai, who was born in Galilee, in the year of the Christian era. But there there is reason to believe that this rabbi never existed and that the Zohar was never composed only around the 10th century AD. Authors' assumptions and falsifications of all kinds are commonplace in matters of Kabbalistic works.

groups of followers at the time 6,000 members at the eyoque of prosperity.

This group of pantheist intellectuals was soon to acto seek a leading influence on the Jewish nation. -When the
The Persians left Babylon in 538 BC.
Jews had hoped for the end of their captivity. It ended, in in fact, two years later, by an edict of Cyrus which authorized those of them who wanted to return (to their patrician. A pre-
The first convoy of 50,000 Jews left soon after, under the direction of of Zerubbabel, and was later increased by new migrations, which Ezra and Nehemiah led (22). But, with the prophets who came to rebuild the temple, returned, alas!
Pharisees who were going to pollute me with their heroism.

Nothing, moreover, which directly clashes with national sentiment in what they let transpire of their doctrine: so penetrated that they were of Chaldean Pantheism, the Pharisees had conserve intact their ethnic pride. This religion of Man divinized with which they had imbibed in Babylon, they do not con-were only exercising themselves for the benefit of the Jew, to be superior and pre-tin. The promises of universal domination that the Orthodox Jew-doxe found in the Law, the Pharisee did not hear them in the meaning of the reign of the God of Noise over the nations, but in the scenes of a material domination that would be imposed on the Universe by the Jews. The expected Messiah was no longer the Redeemer of original sin, triumphant all spiritual which would put away the world under his leadership; he was a mortal king and all bloody with ba-sizes, which made Israel master of the world and "would trample all the peoples under the wheels of his chariot" 25). And enslavement of the nations, finally, the Pharisees did not ask it of a Jehovah non-existent, that they continued to worship in public only for secret society, strong with a few c of the Captivity, and which did not exceed of Flavius Josephus, time of his greatest

(22) It is generally imagined that all Judah was taken captive saw and then returned. Neither fact is correct. Nobuchadnezzar took only part of the people to Babylon; the rest had sought a refuge in Egypt and settled there. On the other hand, the king of Chaldea left in Judah "some of the poorest of the people, who had nothing" (JErkmiE, XL, 10). Finally, when Cyrus authorized the re (Espras, 1, 5); the largest number remained in Chaldea, without losing the of his Jewish nationality. These are the Jews, from the Persians "in all the provinces of the kingdom" (Estner, IV, 8), which were going to provide to the king of the Persians his minister Mordecai. The dispersion of the Jews, who had begun under Solomon) was therefore already very advanced 500 years before Jesus Christ.

(23) We read in the Targums of Jonathan on Isaiah: “The peoples crushed by the King-Messiah... How beautiful he is, the King-Messiah who must arise from the house of Judah!... He engages in combat against his enemies-put and puts & kills the kings! » (Dictionary of the Bible, Paris, 1908; IV, col. 1034).

x

z

flatter popular sentiment; they only hoped for it: from the--pa-Israel's secular tradition of the use of human resources.
monstrously different from the old Law that such were Principles, they had nothing, as we see, which would make them unpopular.
those who let them filter drop by drop among the Jews.

The learned sceeräte organization of the Pharisees did the rest and soon assured their entire political power in Judea. I was can better define their action in the midst of Jewish society of a-before Jesus Christ that by comparing it to the Freemasonerie in modern society. Few in number, but closely solidarisös, and imposing on their members the religion of secrecy, the
The Pharisees tirelessly pursued a double goal: 1. to get to adorn with political power, by the possession of high offices religious (whose influence was immense in the Jewish nation reconstituted) and by the conquest of the Sanhedrin (24); 2° to make Gvogradually read the people's conceptions in the direction of their serete doctrine. They were fully successful in the pursuit of this dual purpose.

Flavius Josephus shows them to us, in fact, enjoying a power-without counterweight thanks to their close solidarity, which made them-Knows how to treat as profane all the Jews who had not been initiated
To their secret doctrine, but made them look at those who had received this initiation as very superior to the rest of "human species. They populated the Courts of Justice, dominated very themselves, who formed the aristocracy of the Nation, were obliged to embrace their Jarti to preserve some authority, The Sadducees, reports Flavius Josephus, although separated in all of the Pharisaic opinions, were constrained, when they occupied-pay charges, "to conform to the conduct of the Phari-

(24) After the restoration of the people to Jerusalem, the government was for some time assured by Jewish governors appointed by the king of the Persians; the prophets Ezra and Nehemiah are the most famous ,these governors. Then, power belonged to the Sanhedrin, a sort of as-sovereign appearance whose authority was at once doctrinal, judicial and administrative, because he interpreted the law, judged major causes, raised taxes and represented the nation. This Supreme Council was com-Pos€ of 71 members who provided for the vacancies themselves in their bosom; the president, or nasi, to whom princely honors were rendered, he was ordinarily the High Priest of the temple of Jerusalem. The vi) members were divided into three categories: the Priests, or sacrifi-tors; the Scribes, or doctors of the Law, chosen for their exact con-birth of sacred texts; the Ancients, or heads of the Principal families-them. From Van 130 BC, under the pontificate of John Hyican, son of Simon Machabbee, the custom was established of striking the mon-Jewish nation in the name of "the High Priest and the Sanhedrin." We will see more far how the Sanhedrin survived the final ruin: Jerusalem by Adrian, (135 of the Christian era) and to the total dispersion of the Jews.

has - - -

'

u

his own, because the people would not tolerate them resisting it.
"sent" (25).

On the other hand, they managed without too much difficulty to develop the faith of a large number of Jews on many essential points-tiels. The possession of most of the major religious offices and the majority of the Sanhedrin gave them the right to interpret sovereignly the Law. They interpreted it by distorting its meaning, using for this business of falsification the "method allegorical", the same one which made the foundation of their Kabbalah, the name which was then used by the hermits of all times to tackle the sacred texts, and which constitutes, today still, the main resource of Modernism. By this method, Scripture is stripped of all literal meaning, and the texts that it contains, instead of being the exposition of an objective truthgaire. The apparent simplicity of the stories and precepts is designed astonished as a skill of the sacred Writer who wanted that readers who have not received the initiation of the Masters take precepts and stories at face value, while they do not are intended, according to the Pharisaic Kabbalah, only to initiate oral developments, most often unrelated to the text or in contradiction with it.

Free to conduct these developments at their own discretion, the Pharis- his own people thus managed to get the Jews to accept him, in the centuries preceding the coming of Christ, a great number of their secret theories. This is contrary to the Law of Moses, who ordered the Hebrews to love and respect The Pharisees succeeded in inspiring the people with a instinctive horror of the non-Jew, which was expressed among other things in his by the morbid fear of the slightest contact, assimilates Ar a defilement. This is also how their conception of the Messiah hu- hand, temporal king and exterminator of non-Jews, arrived A rem- place that of the supernatural Mcssie, whose divinity David saluted

(25) The Sadducees, who owe their name to a Jewish philosopher named Saddok, did not form an organized sect comparable to that of the Phar:sians: they began to appear only around the 11th century century BC. They are sometimes confused with the "Greek party", name given to Jews who, under the influence of Greco-Syrian domination Seleucids had adopted the Moors, the Langwe and certain con- certainties of the Greek philosophers. The Sadducees worshipped in a God unique, indifferent to the good and evil that is done on earth; they denied the immortality of the soul and considered virtue to be a good thing To the soul as health to the body and that it must be practiced for the sa- personal satisfaction it provides. Recruited mainly from the aristocracy- secular tie, the Sadducdens never grouped together to assert their ideal among their fellow citizens, and Flavius Josephus reports that "in- "as much as the Pharisees live in union with one another, so much do the "Sadducdens are of an independent temper; they do not live "less coldly among themselves than they would with strangers."

—p gg er
. 7° r
»

and whose pure glory the Prophets announced together and extreme lowering. This is how finally the notion orthodox of Paradise and Genesis was abandoned for that of the transnigration of souls, which the Pharisees had borrowed In Chaldea (26). On the eve of the birth of the Savior, this The evolution of the Jews had become almost general, except that those who were victims realize that they were deserting

However, not all brains were conquered, in Juaee, by the learned Pharisaic tactic. A fairly large noun-of Jews, more enlightened than the others, or guided by intelligence-divine agency, had understood that the Pharisees were training Israel to heresy and had tried to react. Paralyzed by the power-political power held by their adversaries, these O-tho- Jews doxes had been reduced to giving up the open struggle and had almost expatriates. On the banks of the Dead Sea, in fact, in wild and deserted places, they were built cl sc monasteries preserved until the time of Christ the deposit of the true Faith. They lived it, according to an imonastic role of which Flavius Josephus and Pliny left us the description, although 4.cuo Jews who worked and prayed to the God of Moses while waiting for the ac-fulfillment of prophecies; the high virtue of their life deserved the respect of all. The "Essenians." That's how they were called called, showed no weakness towards those who were trying to make Israel unfaithful to its mission. Thus, while fulfilling all the requirements of the Law, they abstainto go up to Jerusalem to sacrifice there; not that they were proved the sacrifice made in the temple, which they honored on the contrary infinitely, but because this sacrifice was famous by heretic Jews (27)

The religious hierarchy of the Essenes, very absolute, does not limit-was not, moreover, his influence on the walls of their convents.
They had many secular supporters, in Jerusalem and in the cities of Judea, which formed a people of faithful followers of the monks from the shores of the Dead Sea and accepted their leadership. In In each important locality, an adept was responsible for providing to the charges of solidarity which united the believers of the True God,

(26) Wlavius Josöephe (Antiquites Juives, XVIIL, 2) reports that the , Pharisees had acquired, by this belief in the transınigration of souls, "such great authority among the people that they follow their "sentiment in all that concerns the worship of God and the priests so-"lennelles which are made for him."

(27) The Essenes "honored the cult famous in the temple of "Jerusalem, but they did not participate in it, for the reason that the mass
"In their eyes, those who sacrificed were composed only of Israelites “degenerates”. — Neander, Kirchengeschichte, I, 20.

ED u) r

“ er . u af
Dir her un ae Ve An hen NEE 2

Ps U im air « Bh 4
A a 2 A ._ ae u

whose morality, inspired by the old 1.01, was in advance in complete agreement with the requirements of the new one (28).

This was the religious state of the Inif people. | Our was born

Lord Jesus Christ.

(28) Flavius Josephus (II, 12, Jewish War) agrees that the Essenians were the most perfect of all Jewish sects. This is what said of the monks of the Mer Merte

«u
"
"

"They live in a very close union and consider the pleasures as vices that one must flee, centinence and victory over his passions as virtues that cannot be overestimated. They reject marriage, not that they believe in destroying the race men, but to avoid the intemperance of women... They do not nevertheless do not allow them to receive the young children who are given to them donn®, to instruct them and raise them in virtue, with as much care and charity as if they were their fathers, and they dress them all of the same kind.

"They despise riches; all things are common to ; them with such admirable equality that, when someone kisses

their sect, he strips himself of the property he possesses, to avoid by this means the vanity of riches, to spare others shame of the poor:6, and, by such a happy mixture, live all together as brothers

"...They think they are clean enough and pretty enough as long as their clothes are always very white...

"I am very religious towards God, speaking only of holy things before sunrise, and then making prayers, which they received by tradition, to ask God to make it shine on earth. They
They go to work, each to his work, as it is ordered,
At (11 o'clock) they gather and, covered with linen, wash themselves with cold water. They then withdraw into their cells, the entree is not allowed to anyone who is not of their sect, and,
Being thus purified, they go to the refectory, as to a saint temp!e, ol, when they are seated in great silence, we put in front of each-each of them bread and some food in a small dish. A »u-The critic blesses the meats and no one would dare touch them until he has finishes his prayer. He says another one after the meal, to finish as he began, with the praises of God, so that they would recognize-are all born that it is from his liberality alone that they draw their nourishment-
They then take off their clothes, which they consider sacres, and return to their work. They do the same in the evening, at supper, thing and make their guests eat with them if some have arrived ones.

"You never hear any noise in these factories; you never see anything the slightest disturbance; everyone speaks only in their rank and their silence

. gives respect to foreigners. Such great moderation is a effect of their continual sobriety, for they neither eat nor drink as much as they need to feed themselves.

"They are not allowed to do anything except with the advice of their superiors.
laughing, if not to assist the poor, without any other reason only their compassion for the afflicted is brought to them; for, as for them parents, they wouldn't dare give them anything if they weren't allowed to. They take extreme care to repress their anger; they love peace and keep so inviolably what they promise that one can add-have more faith in their own words than in the oaths of others.
They even consider oaths as perjury, because they

= FA

"cannot persuade themselves that a man is not a liar when-
"that he needs, in order to be believed, to take God as witness.

"They do not receive at the same time those who want to embrace
"their way of life, but they make them stay for a year in "outside, where they each have, with the same regime, a pickaxe, the laundry

"food that conforms to their needs and allows them to wash
"like them in Cold Skin in order to purify themselves; but they do not make them
"not eat in the refectory before they have again, for two " years, Test their morals. Then we receive them Because we judge them "worthy; but, before sitting down at table with the others, they commit-“solemnly honor and serve God with all their heart;
"to observe justice toward men; never to do willfully-
"silently do harm to anyone even if they are ordered to do so;
"to have distance from the wicked and to assist with all their might
"to be able to be good; to keep faith with everyone and especially "to the princes, because they hold their power from God. To which they "add that if ever they are raised in charge, they will not abuse
"of their power to mistreat their inferiors, that they will have nothing "more than these, neither in dress nor in what concerns their persons...

"These are the promises to which those who want to "embrace their way of life in order to strengthen them against the .'ces.
"(That if they contravene it by notabile faults, they are expelled from "their company...

"They live so long that many reach the age of one hundred, O2 that "I attribute to the simplicity of their way of life and to what they are so rules in all things. They despise the evils of the earth, triumph
"torments by their constancy and prefer death to life Irs-
"that the subject is honorable.

"These same Essenes believe that souls are created immortal-
"them, to bring themselves to virtue and turn away from life; that the good
"are made better in this life by the hope of being happy
"after their death; and that the wicked, who imagine they can hide
"in this world their bad actions are punished in the other by “eternal torments.”

This last trait connects the Essenes both to the law of Moses and Christianity. We already know that the Sadducees do not believe to the immortality of the soul. The Pharisees, like the Spiritists and Theosophists of our day believed in his reincarnation.

Alongside these monks, following their doctrine and relating to their au-Torite, Flavius Joserhe reports the existence of followers who continued A hatiter in the Judean towns. They practiced the same abstinences “u2 the monks, except in matters of marriage, in which they do not would see, moreover, "that a means of perpetuating the species is not the vo-iuptd ». Flavius Josephus remarks: “When they make some journey,
"They carry nothing but weapons to defend themselves from the thieves."
"theirs. They have in each city someone from them to receive and "to accommodate those of their sect who come there and give them clothes and “something else they may need.... They don't sell or have-"buy nothing among themselves; but they communicate with each other,
"without any exchange, all they have n.

an ar

0 Eee
=

_

CHAPTER II

Christ and the Pharisees

he was very close to the triumph of the Pharisees complete when the voice of the Righteous One came. to make them stagger the building of lies and Pa ar the deep hypocrisy of the masked sectarians. I1. The Gospel tells us In Tiisse the trace of the &ego which seized the Pharisees when the
The first miracles of Jesus made it clear that he was the Messiah.
Already the Son of God had, on the occasion of the Sabbath observancesticks, withered the deceit of the Pharisees, who exaggerated the rigor practices of external devotion At the present time when they cons-secretly hacked the ruin of the Law. The crowds that followed Jesus, and who were inflamed at the sight of his immaculate figures, seemed announce the end of the reign of the "temple vendors". Also the
The Pharisees sent an embassy from Jerusalem to Jesus.

This embassy met him on the shores of Lake GEene&zareth. Choosing the pretext of one of these purification practices that the Pharisees had instituted, she blamed him for the fact that his disciples did not observe him, and said to him: "Why do you say-
Do not the ciples observe the kabbalalı (tı..dition) of the ancients?... » Jesus answered them, “And you, why do you transgress the covenant?
command of God by your tradition?" And reproaching them to nullify the word of his Father, He added: “Hypocrites! Isaiah
"He prophesied well about you when he said: This people honors me "lips, but his heart is far from me. It is in vain
"Let them honor me by giving precepts which are com“mandments of homies” (20).

Already, the sect had only one thought: to put to death Ison of Mary, as so many pro-had been placed in Niart before him phctes who had tried to bring Israel back to the faith of Abraham.
The Gospel story is full of the plots of the Tharisians, the traps they set for him, the violence they committed to get rid of him. Their fury redoubled as I Christ went from city to city, from synagogue to synagogue, rev-

made to their fathers and of the old faith in which they had eru. She knew no bounds when Jesus was welcomed with jolc in Jerusalem attentive to his words. There, surrounded by their ambushes and feeling the breath of their hatred, the apostropha amerenent the Phasisiers:

(29) Marıneu, xv, ı A 9.

—— IH, one

“Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because you resemble whitewashed sepulchres that appear beautiful outside, and inside are full of dead men's bones and from every kind of impurity. You, likewise, outside you appear righteous to men, but inside you are full of hypocrisy and iniquity. Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees hypocrites!... You testify against yourselves that you You are the sons of those who killed the prophets. Fill the measure of your fathers! Serpents, brood of vipers! how will you escape the punishment of hell? Therefore, Behold, I send unto you prophets, wise men, and scribes. You will kill and crucify the children, you will beat them with rods the others in your synagogues, and you will persecute them from the city in the city, so that all the innocent blood may fall on you. spread on the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel to the blood of Zechariah, son of Barachiah, whom you heard between the temple and the altar. Truly I tell you, all these things will come back on this people. Jerusalem! Jerusalem! you who kill the prophets and who stones those who are sent to you, how often have I wanted gather your children, like a hen gathering her chicks under his wings, and you would not! Behold, your house will be made deserted... » (30).

The warning that the times have come, that patience divine is tired of Israel's crimes, that God will withdraw his hand from this one, take away his Mission and share it among the nations, Jesus also formulates it, in powerful words, where he announces the Deicide and the punishment of the Jews:

we
=

“Listen to another parable. There came a man, Master of house, who planted a vineyard. He surrounded it with a hedge, winegrowers and left the country. When the time of harvest was arrived, he sent his servants to the tenants to receive the product of his vineyard. The vinedressers, having seized his servants-

They beat one, killed another, and stoned the third.
He sent other servants, more than the first; and the vinedressers did the same to them.
Finally, he sent his son to them, saying: They will have respect for my son. But, when the winemakers saw the son,
They said to each other: This is the heir; come, let us kill him and imprison him.
will we inherit his inheritance. And they seized him, threw him out of the vineyard and killed him. Now when the owner of the vineyard will come, what will he do to these vinedressers?

They answered him: He will destroy these wretched people, and he will settle-will sell the vineyard to other winegrowers, who will give him the pro-produced at harvest time.

(30) Matıueu, XXIII, 27 A 30.

Jesus said to them, “Have you never read in the Scriptures:
"The stone that those who were living rejected has become the prin"principal of the corner... Therefore I tell you, the kingdom of “God will be taken from you and given to a people who will give back
"the fruits. Whoever falls on this stone will be broken and whoever
"on whomever it falls will be crushed" (31).

And the Gospel adds:

“When the chief priests and the
“The Pharisees understood that Jesus was speaking about them, and they "sought to seize him; but they feared the crowd, because
"that she considered him a prophet" (32).

Alas! the day came when the crime that the Pharisees had been meditating for three years, when the Just Man was brought bound before the Sanhedrin composed of their leaders, given the Jewish rabble, overcited by "the Chief Priests and Elders," (that is to say by the Sect, whose members monopolized these functions), claimed Pilate's freedom, Barabbas's freedom, and the crucifixion of Christ.

These wide open arms, which the Savior of the World stretched out
The Pharisees cloaked all the sinners on the tree of the Cross. And while at the foot of the divine gallows the apostles sobbed and the holy women, the deicide Jews, röp@aient sneering the inexpiable word: "Let his blood fall on us and on ours

children ! "

(3:) Marrıneu, NNIl, 33 A 34.
(32) Marttıneu, XX11, 45 and 46.

The Talmud

= in

|

CHAPTER IV

The Jewish origin of anti-Christian persecutions

Fall The Pharisees believed that, through the torture of Jesus, they had Removed the danger that had worried them for three years; gj also they are not moved, at the beginning, by the preaching J; of the apostles. When this one began & multiplied the

In Jerusalem, they were content to bring Peter and John in the Sanhedrin compound, and they were menaged; puls, after a second arrest of all the apostles, these were beaten with rods. Finally, anxiety increased their cruelty, and the deacon Stephen was stoned, after having been recalled to his judges what blood line united them to the ancient Irons & Cutters «'Isra@l (33).

endlessly followed in their footsteps. Soon, the Pharisees could no longer doubt that the hegmony exercised by their sect over the Jewish world, and which she aspired to exercise over all peoples, was in danger.
resolved to engage in a fight to the death against the doctrine of Christ.
and to hunt down those who spread it worldwide.
To achieve this, they did not lack means of action: the
The dispersion of Israel among the nations had long been a fait accompli and assured the Sanhedrin, in all countries, Correspondents, agents and faithful executors, Now the Sanh6-nism, and some Sadkhtosens, violently anti-Christians) was composed only of Pharisees.

To get an accurate idea of the state of the Jewish people,
"In the year 35 of our era, it must be remembered that no other etc., for centuries, also dispersed conserve the feeling of this unity,

This dispersion had begun in the reign of Solomon, who sent as far as Spain (Tarshish) and as far as Ethiopia (Ophir) colonies of Hebrews responsible for supplying it ivory and precious wood (34). Then came the captivity of towards had not than him and had as well

in gold, in and Babylon,

(33) "Man with a stiff cunt, incirooneis of “YOU always oppose the Holy Spirit! What your fathers were,
"You are too. Did not your fathers persecute the prophets?
ter 3Esront "killed those who foretold the coming of the Righteous One, that you

"you have now delivered up and whose murderers you have been, you who "have received the law according to the commandments of heart and ears! you

ges and who do not have “point guardde 1…” (Acızs, VII, sı A 53).
(34) I Kings, IX, 26 & 28; and X, 22.

The – – – –_ – – – in |
I BE

W

u ge mm

which created a vacuum in the Judean countryside: all the exiles eu-rent, it is true, the permission to see their homeland again. after the triumph-father of Cyrus, but many did not use it, alongside the book of Esther we have them spread throughout all the provinces subject to A the Persian empire. Meanwhile, a large number of fugitives had won Egypt, to escape Chal- domination deenne, and had settled down in Pantica, land of the Pharaohs. Alexander's triumph further encouraged the dispersion Jews, who had, by their prompt submission, obtained the favor of the Macedonian conqueror: he established many & Alexandria; others flowed back to Greece, others accompanied-generated his army, in which Quintus Curtius signals their presence. In Rome, we find them, from the last times of the Republic, established in large numbers, following the Roman arineas in their conquests to provide them with supplies and to raise war contributions, and at the same time powerful time to disturb the Forum with their threats (35). In short, nothing seems more justified than this passage from the Historical Memoirs of Strabo, who, writing precisely in the 1st century AD, erc, observed: "the Jews are widespread in all the cities, and
"It would be difficult to find a single place on earth that does not
"has received and where they are not powerfully established" (36).
Powerful establishments, indeed, those of the Jews, who form-sometimes, as in Alexandria, a third of the population, and who had, almost everywhere, obtained the right: to live in special district (the ghettos, about which we have moaned so much, come from there, and were originally a privilege); 2, to be discharged from certain taxes; 3° to be administered and judged by magistrates of their nation, which they read freely themselves. Each of these Jewish colonies, with which the world was covered at the time of Jesus-Christ and his first apostles, formed a kind of rep-blique, of which the synagogue was the religious and administrative center-

---

(35) The proconsul Flaccus had confiscated the tribute of the "didrachm", that the expatriate Jews paid for the maintenance of the temple of Jerusalemlem. He was accused before the people by the Jews of Rome and defended by Cicero. During the proceedings, the Forum was invaded by a crowd of Jews threatened both the lawyer and his client. Cicero, addressing the scusator, cried "... Ah! I understand you, Lelius: vorla pour-
"Why is this cause pleaded near the Aurelian steps! It is for this "that you chose this place and surrounded yourself with this mob! You
"I know what the multitude of these Jews is, what their union and their "dominate over the crowd of assemblies. But I will lower my tone to
"to be heard only by the judges; for I cannot ignore that in the middle
"From them stand their leaders, always ready to direct them or cun-
"be against my person or against the elite of the citizens, do not think do not lend me and make this task easier for them." (Cicero, Pro Flacc>, . (36) Quoted by Flavius Josephus; Antiquities Judaigies, XIV, 2; And

Ei nen 5' A tan u in ie

1

E

=

h TS

But this local synagogue was only a reflection of the place sacred place on which the gaze of the expatriate Jews remained fixed, this temple of Jerusalem where the sacrifice offered to Jeehova was valid, sacrifice prohibited in any other city. Also, contributions were they collected every hour in all the colonies for the maintenance of the temple, and sent to Jerusalem: the payment, for this purpose, two drachmas per head was a tribute that the Jews willingly consented, because he affirmed the persistence of their nationality at the same time as it satisfied their feeling religious (37).

Grace & the organization We have just described, the nine In 35 AD, the Jew offered the contradictory aspect of a extreme dispersion and absolute political and religious unity.
Hundreds and hundreds of Roman, Asian, or even barbarians, received in their ghettos three quarters of the population of the ancient kingdom of Judah; but the Sanlıödrin er the temple of Jerusalem kept, for these exiles, as many pres-stem and authority than for their brothers who lived in Palestine.
Paying the same tax to the temple, uniting in thought with the same sacrifices, they were for the Sanhödrin subjects with with whom it was more difficult to communicate than with others, but to whom we did not fail to frequently send messengers. If we consider that the Sanhedrin was then, and since long time, in the hands of the Pharisaic sect, we understand that the latter had the power, by a notice sent in the name of the Supreme Council of the Jewish nation, to rise up against the Chrehold the hostility of this immense network of Hebrew colonists who enveloped the world. This is what happened as soon as the extension
The rapid spread of Christianity was an obvious fact, that is to say in the year r%

This very important point cannot be called into doubt when we examine it in the light of the irrefutable texts that we provide-are the Fathers of the Church, depositories of the Christian tradition-hold of the first centuries.

Here is the formal testimony of Saint Justin the Philosopher, a of the most illustrious martyrs of the 2nd century, who, speaking of facts notorious Jans d'Eglise, and which his adversary did not contest sary, said in his Dialogue with the Jew Tryphon (which appears being Rabbi Tarphon, famous in the books of Kabbalah): "In
"the outrages that we do to Jesus Christ and to us, the others
"The nations are less guilty than you, Jews. It is you too
"They are the authors of their prejudices towards us, of the bad-
"good opinion they have of us and of this Just One. You, in fact,
"after having crucified him, after having known with certainty his resurrection-

(37) The drachma, Greek currency, was worth 0.70. This tax of the two drachmas is the one that is claimed from Jesus and his entry into Capernaum (Matrineu, XVII, 24 & an):

—— nn nn – –
>
has ;

nn ——

in > > 5
nn 2 2 el -_ R y art

"rection and his ascension into Heaven, not only do you not have "not done penance, but, at that very moment, you have
"sends carefully chosen emissaries around the world.
"These insinuators have told everywhere how it was born
"an impious sect, called Christians, and have spread against us
"these things, which, in fact, are still repeated today against
"we by all those who do not know us" (paragiaphe XVI).

In paragraph CVIII, Saint Justin the Philosopher returns to this accusation and specifies it again: "As I have already told you "said, you have chosen men capable of carrying out your des-
"sein, you sent them to all countries and you made
"to know to all, by their knowledge, that one Jesus, from Galilee,
"had founded an illegal and impious sect... And you added
"that Jesus Christ had taught his disciples to commit all "these abominable crimes that, even now, you "go and tell all sorts of people, saying that they "are usual to those who look at Jesus as the Messiah, the

"hatred neither against you, nor against those who received this from you
"the bad opinion they have of us. And mönıe us
“Let us pray that God will grant them and others His mercy.”

What were these "abominable crimes" of which the envoys of the The Sanhedrin of Jerusalem came to charge the Christians with the Jewish colonies scattered throughout the world and among the peoples who surrounded them? It is enough to leaf through the pagan writers of time to realize it. "Christians," they say, "have a secret and infamous cult; they worship an anx's head, and sharefeels, in their sacred meal, the body of a child covered in dough (deformation of the worship of the Eucharist); they practice incest and all kinds of crimes; finally, they are sadists, enemies of any society and who refuse obedience to Caesar." We know how-Well, for three centuries, these accusations led to miassacres, and how many Christian martyrs died in the torments-ments, under the jeers of the crowd overexcited by such slander-nies. It is not useless to show from where these calumnies came, and that the same hand that had crucified the Master was martyring the disciples again.

Identical to that of Saint Justin is the testimony of Tertullink, which applies to the Jews the words of Scripture: "It is by your fault that the name of the Lord is blasphemed among you nations,” and who adds: “Indeed, it is through the Jews that a com-
"Leads to this state of infamy in which we are presently "reduced" (38). Elsewhere, he reports the outrages suffered by the Christians hold, in his time still, are abzcuated by the Jews, & Carthage: "And the populace," he said, "believed the Jew; for what
"another race there is] in the world that pours infamy on us
"like the Jewish race?" (30). Finally, in chapter X of the Scor-Piaque, he finds this admirable expression which sums up the truth historical in a striking form: “The synagogues of the "Jews are the source of our persecutions. Synagoge Jud@orum
"fontes persecutionem".

Origen, for his part, reports: "Celsus wanted, through his book,
"to inspire in his readers, who do not know us, the will
"to fight us as blasphemers of God. In this,
"he resembles the Jews: These, from the beginning of the religion of the “Christians, spread slander against them. They sacrifice
"a child," they said; "they feed on his flesh, and, you see, x do their works of darkness, they extinguish all the lights
"in their assemblies and each of them unites with the first that he
"meeting. These calumnies, however absurd they may be, have
"took a lot of authority against us with many

---

(38) Against Martion, 7% 23:

Eusebius Pamphile says, on the other hand, in his Commentaries on "Isaiah: "We find in the writings of our ancestors that the "priests and elders of the Jewish nation, in Jerusalem, addressing-"letters are sent everywhere to all the Jews, ordering them to ac-
"to accuse the doctrine of Jesus Christ as new and hostile to "God and commanding them not to receive it... These apostles of the "Jews, carrying these letters, crossing the river and crisscrossing the "earth, spread infamy everywhere about our Savior by their
"slander."

Twenty other texts from the same period, reporting the same facts, could be cited. We will be content with the summary what Mosheim gives in his book De rebus Christianorum ante Constantinum magnum (page 06 of the Helmstadt Edition, 1753): “The High Priest and the elders of the Jewish nation sent"@missaries are sent to all the provinces to excite all
"their fellow citizens, not only to flee and hate the Chre-
"Well, but even to make them suffer all the vexations Dossi-
"bles and to accuse them before the magistrates. The Jews of all
"The universe obeyed these orders of their leaders and strove
"to stir up against the Christians the prefects, the judges and the crowds,
"by means of various slanders and criminal plots, Parıni
"these slanders, the main one was, and it is still repeated in this “ moment, that Christians are a dangerous sect to the State and "enemy of the Imperial Majesty, since they hold for God
"and for King a nonım evildoer& Jesus Christ, erıcih& for "very just motives by Pontius Pilate. This conduct provoked the (39) Book to the Gentiles, 1, 14.

(40) Against Celsus, v3 nn Mi A — — s 22 —..———————: &

—

"complaints of the first Christians against the hatred and cruelty of the "Jews, whom they found more burdensome and more dangerous for "them than those of the pagans themselves.

The type of these "apostles of the Sanhedrin", missionaries in-travel with letters of introduction to raise the people against Christianity, isn't it Saul of Tarsus, this young scholar?
Pharisee, at whose feet those who stoned Saint Stephen had laid down their clothes, and who, later, miraculously-

"ravaged the Church," say the Acts; "penetrated into the houses-
"sons, he tore men and women from them and had them thrown into "prison... Breathing threats and murder against the disciples
"of the Lord, he went to the High Priest, and asked him
"letters for the synagogues of Damascus, so that, if there
"'found supporters of the doctrine of Jesus, men or women-
"ms, he brought them bound to Jerusalem."

Later, Saul of Tarsus, who became Saint Paul, will be the target, like other apostles, to the incessant persecutions of the Jews, who will plot his evil. And the Acts will repeat about him:

"...Almost the whole city gathered to hear the word "of God. The Jews, seeing the multitude, were filled with ja-
"lousie, and they opposed what Paul said by contradicting him
"and by insulting him... They excited the devout women of condi"tion and the principals of the city; they provoked a persecution-
" tion against Paul and Barnabas and they drove them out of their territory-“story” (41).

And after the miracles of Saint Paul, A-Lystra”:

“Then there came from Antioch and Iconium Jews who ga-
"annoyed the crowd, and who, after having stoned Paul, dragged him “outside the city, thinking he was dead” (42).

During his preaching in Thessalonica:

"...But the Jews took with them certain wicked men
"of the populace, provoked crowds and spread "The commotion in the city... They dragged some brothers in front and the magistrates of the city, saying: These men who have bou-
"The world also came here and Jason received them. They "all act against the Edicts of Caesar, saying that there is another "king, Jesus. With these words, they injure the crowd and the magi-«-trats...2u(43).

Saint Paul would later complain to the elders of 'Church of Ephesus, from this relentlessness of the Jews, whose apostles were also suffering. Back in Jerusalem, he will see the Sanhedrin. raise the crowd against him, and will only be saved by his title

---

(41) Acts, XIII, 44 & 5o.
(42) Acızs, XIV, 19 and 20.
(4a) Acıns, XVII, 5A 9.

>.

of Roman citizen, who will oblige the governor to protect his life;
These assassination attempts will subsequently multiply during his captivity.

Finally, in 64, the Jews, fanaticized by the Pharisaic sect, crea-will come the hour of the triumph: a monster reigns in Rome, and this monster, Nron, has just launched an order against the Christians Persecution which condemns them all to death by torture.
We have sometimes wondered why Saint Clement of Alexandria drie, speaking of this persecution, formally attributes it to hatred of Jews. This allegation is, however, easy to explain.
The fire of Rome, which served as a pretext for Nero to unleashtorment his executioners, had trade in the shops of the Circus, which belonged to the merchants; this was therefore the population Jewish people who were first threatened with prohibition. But the Jews had powerful protections in the imperial palace, and Poppaea, the favorite of Nero, was a Jewish proselyte. Not only-
Only she managed to persuade A Cö&sar to spare the Jews, but she brought down on the Christians the persecution which had me-was swimming; and the Jewish colony of Rome was able to get drunk, for three years, of the spectacle of thousands of servants of Christ dying under the teeth of wild animals or transformed into burning torches. In June 67, the Jews had a long-desired Joy: the martyrdom of Saint Peter and Saint Paul (44).

---

(44) These persecutions unleashed by the Jews established good hour, in the primitive Church, this doctrine that the Jews. in cessanı from being the people of God, have become the people of the Devil.
found expressed in the Didascalia; or Catholic Teaching of Xlf apostles and disciples of the Lord, composed on the occasion of Council of Jerusalem. The Greek original of the Disdascalia was lost, and only a Syriac translation was available when Hauler discovered in a palimpsest of Verona considerable fragments of an an-old Latin translation, which is quite barbaric. Here is a translation-literal statement: “Because he abandoned his people and deserted his "Temple desolate, tearing its veil and taking away its Holy Spirit for
"to send down to those who have believed from among the Gentiles (as he “Pa said by Jo: I will pour out my spirit on all flesh), he did “to disappear, in fact, from this people its Holy Spirit, the virtue of its "Word and all priesthood and transferred them to his Church. And likewise, "Satan the tempter has left this people to attack the Church, and
"From now on Satan will no longer tempt this people, because, through his mu-“bad words, he fell into his hands, he too tried
"The Church and to stir up against it afflictions, persecutions, "biasphömes, les heräsies et las Schismes." These last words are prophetic. The Church of the 1st century had not yet had, in fact, any heresy; but those which arose later were almost all due to the perfidious intrigues of the Jews.

—

GHAPITREIW

The Sanhedrin restores and the Talmud

esı in the year 70,,.in the aftermath of this persecution, that the announced punishments descended on Jerusalem | by Christ. However masters they were of the Sanhedrin and | | of the Jewish opinion, the Pharisees could not: emp&dear multiplication (sects, mainly in classes inferior, and some were formed which claimed independence-immediate dance of the nation. A sedition which broke out against the Romans was violent, and the governor of Jerusalem perished; the proconsul of Syria, who had rushed to his aid, was defeated in turn and lost an eagle. This revolt led to the dispatch against the Jews of Vespahis and his son Titus, with a considerable army. Titus assi6gen Jerusalem at Passover time, where a large part of the nation was gathered in the holy city for the sacrifices-annual fices. He seized it after a painful siege, full of Epiatrocious sodes, which cost the city 600,000 Jews of all ages and tot sex, that is to say to a third of the population of Judea. Then, 1 had the city set on fire and the Temple demolished, of which nothing remained stone upon stone, according to the prediction of Jesus. All the besieged who did not perish during the siege were sold at auction as slaves; their compatriots from Judea and other provinces-These of the Empire promptly redeemed them, it is true, but the The dispersion of the people was also increased.

[the Pharisees had played only a minor role in this r&about, which they judged premature. They aimed above all to take advantage of its consequences to increase their influence on the colonies Jews, and succeeded without difficulty, because the Romans, having conquered the open revolt and destroyed Terusalem, cared little for a sect Barely known to them, in correspondence with the debris of a nation scattered in so many places. The Pharisees were therefore able to constitute themselves the heirs of the regular power of Israel, of which they &were for so long the inspirers. The Jewish colonies, who had learned with dismay of the ruin of the holy city, the destruction of the Temple, the massacre of a large part of the population and the abolition of the Sanhe@drin, soon knew that the latternier was reorganized in Japhine, near the Mediterranean coast, and that in the absence of the Sacrifice, which could no longer be celebrated in tale disappeared in the disaster, an Academy preserved the traditions of Israel and a Patriarch governed the people. This Patriarche, this Sanhe&drin, this Academy, which were going to become the center

IM

hs

political and religious of the Jewish people, they were the Chief, the Council and the Doctors of the Pharisaic sect, remaining alone grouped in among the bodies of the dissolved state. A sleight of hand delivered to a secret society the government of Israel; but lowered it- The sudden feeling of the nation made it considered as benefit this usurpation, which, at least, left the Jews the apparrence of an As government"

The Patriarch and the Sanhedrin Pharisees put about thirty of years to have their authority recognized and strengthened, little connaked Romans, who believed all governmental organization to be dead memeniale of Israel, they did not stop sending messengers to the Jewish colonies and to collect the didrachma tax, which paid them quite generally, although the miners, at the letomorrow of the queen of the Temple, they demanded payment to the prefect of the Treasury. At the same time, the Pharisaic Kabbalah, with its fables and its superstitions, with its refractive distortions and the transınigration of the änıes, to the human character of the Messiah, To the Kaine Coritre the non-Jews and especially against the Christians, finished to penetrate the most distant Hebrew aeolonies: (46). @mis-

---

(45) The considerable role that we assign to the Pharisees in The political and religious evolution of Israel has been, until now, barely noticeable. sounds like Christian writers; but he is, on the contrary, perfectly known to Rabbinic historians, who glorify this secıon of the survivance and unity of Israel. Everything attests, in their derits, that the Pharisees had, before Pre-Christian, an organization and a internal hierarchy distinct from the constitutional powers of the nation. This The organization was first centered in Babylon, where many of the Jews remained established after the Captivity? It is possible. In any case, It was from Babylon, according to the Talmud, that Hillel, the first Patarch recognized by the sect, which established itself in Jerusalem in Pan 30 BC Jesus Christ, under the reign of Herod the Great, and who died in the year 13, of our era after having formed a large number of disciples. His son, Simdon, succeeded him; but Rabbi David Ganz, in his Chronology, admits that almost nothing is known about his Patriarchate. Si-'s successor meon was Rabbi Jochanan, who lived at the time of the capture of Jerusalem and The Pharisaic Academy of Japhne; he reconstituted the Sanhedrin in this

This Phariseeism thus absorbed the Jewish State. Johanan died in the year 76 and was replaced by Gamaliel, said of Japhnd, of whom David Ganz reports that "The authority was very great over the Jews of the whole Universe and that the kings foreigners recognized its jurisdiction over the Jews of their states.
The story of Vacad&ämie of Japhne, see Lightfoot: Academie Jafnensis History.

(46) This progressive adherence of the Jews to the Pharisaic tradition was, however, not; unarime. Those who, without being dezenus Christians Were shocked by the contradiction between the law of Moses and the Kabbalah, ended up grouping together to resist this innovation. They took the nem de Caraites, that is to say attached to the written law (Cara). Few name-numerous at first, they increased in number as the yoke Pharisee made themselves felt more, and they formed a powerful sect mysterious sairs traveled the Jewish world, announcing the coming of messianic times, like this rabbi Akiba ben Joseph, who claimed to be descended from Sisara, the Canadian general killed by Jael at the time of the Judges, next to a Jewish mother. Departed from Japhne, Akiba visited Spain, Gaul, Italy, stopped for a long time in Rome, then went to Greece and, from there, to Asia Minor and Babylonia; he finally visited Egypt. Having thus reviewed the Jewish forces,

“he returned to Palestine, where he directed the Sanhedriı and the Academy

Pharisee with such success that he is regarded as one of the fathers of the Talmudic tradition, the other being this Rabbi Samuel the Little One, who, around the same time, composed the solemn curse-against Christians, Yaguelle has always been pious since-recited every day in the prayers of the Synagogue.

Soon, the agitation of the Jews announced that the work of resur-
The repression of their nationality continued. A par-
The territory of Judea, in the year 115, was only subdued with difficulty by Trajan's generals, and had repercussions in Egypt and In Cyrenaica, where the Jews massacred, at the time-sage of Dion Cassius, 200,000 Christians or pagans, and could not to be defeated only after three years of war. At the same time, the Jews from Cyprus seized the island, ruined the city of Sala-inine and slaughtered 240,000 Cypriots, mostly Christians; those of Mesopotamia held in check for several months, the Roman arn&es; less serious disorders occur-were in various other places still formidable. In 134, Akiba ben Joseph anointed him as king of Israel, a man named Barcochebas (the Son of the Star) in which he claimed to recognize the signs announcing the Messiah. The im-

The commander was quickly surrounded by an army of 200,000 Jews, including many from abroad; he won a series of successes on the Romans of Tinnius Rufus, governor of Judea, and took advantage of its momentary domination to exercise, in the regions which He was subjected to terrible cruelties against Christians (47)- in the year 600 of our era, that is to say when the Pharisees completed the writing of the Talmud. In 775, Ananus, brother of the prince die la Captiquickly, in Babylon, declared himself for them and greatly strengthened their party, which, on the other hand, has constantly declined after the 11th century. Today

Today the Caraites are only a few thousand, having left between the Russia, Austrian Poland and the Turkish Empire. The hatred they have for the Talmudic Jews, who persecuted them severely, is well known. Having only the Bible as their religious code, they are quite favorablement disposed towards Christians, and their honesty does not give rise to no complaints.

(47) See the Chronicle of Eusebius, 17th year of the reign of Adrian, and &solement Saint Justin the Philosopher. Modern Jewish historians, Groetz, the first to be careful not to report these facts. Basnage, favorable to the Jews, makes only a slight allusion to it.

WIDER TE

Erz Er var

But Adrian having opposed him with his best general, Julius Severus, that he recalled from Great Britain, Barchochebas succumbed after two years of struggle. He fell with Akiba, and his son, Pappus, into the hands of Julius Sev&rus, who had them flayed alive, Jerusalem, which had not been the center of resistance, was taken a second time; the plow was passed over the place where it had been Temple and salt was sown there; finally Judea was almost entirely depopulated of Jews, those who had not perished having been sold as slaves or transported to Egypt.

This disaster was a terrible blow to the Pharisaic hopes nes. The Sanhedrin of Japhne was dispersed and decimated like Va-had Romans ceased to resound in Judea, that the Sanhedrin Pharisee was reconstituted in Tiberias, where he was also transferred Adrian found there a trace of the visit of the Patriarch of the Jews (who was then Simon III), came to inspect the Synagogues of this country This time again the Romans disdained to search this mysterious authority, which disappeared only to be reborn from its ashes, whose Prestige remained intact in the colonies Jews. Not considering it as a danger, they even had to, later, to arrive at recognizing an official existence for him, analogous- than that of the pontiffs of an ordinary cult.

We do not know for sure the time of this recognition. session, and no doubt the Patriarchs of Tiberias proceeded By cautious attempts; but it seems that one must take in serious consideration the rabbinical tradition which wants that Emperor Antoninus, after having been hostile to the Jews, should be decame very favourably (48). In any case, from Alexander Sever= (in 252), Syrian emperor, and half-Jewish through his mother Mamma, the existence of the Patriarch of Tiberias, and his authority over all Jews, are recognized by the Imperial Edicts. Constantine, although Christian, did not think of abolishing this dignity, and even consented "to exempt the Jewish Patriarchs from certain charges, such as that of "decurion", little envied because absorbing and expensive- (49). Julian, who so fiercely persisted in Christianity, and who had been initiated into Kabbalah by Maximus of Ephasus, given to the Patriarch of the Jews the name of F rere in his message to the people Jewish, and it was at the prayer of the Patriarchy that he ordered to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem, a work that a miracle made impossible-

---

(48) David Ganz reports that the Jews kept a pleasant memory- Antoninus Pius, not only "because they lived happily under "his empire and under that of his two successors Marcus Aurelius and "Commodus, while they were persecuting the Christians, but still "because he had received Circumcision."

(49) See Theodosian Code, book 16, title &.

ia Ba+ 2 Zn EZ Fe In ar RETTEN 5“ TEEN has EN

m –

FEIN,

b

bie (50). Tiodosius the Great, Emperor of the East, forbade, by conbe, to the patriarch of Tiberias to raise the didrachıne tax on the synagogues. This Edict was confirmed by his son Honorius, in 390; but, five years later, the Patriarch obtained that this deThe ban was lifted. Finally, Theodosius the Younger, after having restricted the power of the Patriarchs in 415 (51) abolished the Patriarchate in 429, in circumstances to which we will return. As we see, the Pharisaic sect had fully achieved its aim, which was: first to reconstitute for the Jews a kind of spiritual homeland, of which it was the government; then of to have the existence of this Jewish government recognized by the powerimperial sarcophagus.

The "Jewish government" notations will not sound too strong when we know that the imperial sayings which speak of the Patriarch of Tiberias give him the titles of Illustris and Clarissimus, reserved for the great dignitaries of the time. Its attributions appear appear as important as those of the High Priest before the fall of the Temple. He has, in fact, control of the synagogues of the the whole world; he levies the didrachma tax on them; he decides to any doctrinal question, taking the advice of the Sanhedrin; he appointsme or revoke the Rosch Abot or Chiefs of the Fathers who govern the Synagogues of the same province; he supervises them by means of his "apostles", or officers in charge of missions, who travel cortinually the East, the West, Roman Africa and Asia minor, to carry orders or raise contributions. His judicial powers are important: not only does it have the right to judge, by himself or by his magistrates, the civil proceedings which arise among Jews, but still it has criminal jurisdiction which allows him to condemn to a fine, & prison and & all other corporal punishment than that of death (52). Finally, while the office of Head of the Sanhedrin, subordinate to the Patriarchate, remains the Younger forbade the then reigning Patriarch Gamaliel from extending his jurisdiction by calling a Jew and a Christian to trial in his court » against each other, which proves that this abuse had to happen. To punish him for this abuse, Theodosius stripped this Gamaliel of various honorary positions with which he had invested him.

---

(50) See the story of this miracle, and in particular of the globes of fire which consumed the workers, not only in Christian authors, Socrates, Theodoret and Sozomen, but also in the pagan historian Ammien Marcellin, whose duties with Julian make him little suspect. The fact is also recognized by Rabbi Gedaliah, in his treatise Schalschelet hg kabbalah. See also the letter of Saint CyJerusalem Rille To Constantine the Younger.

(51) 'Theodosian Code. Law XXII, of Judeis.

(532) Origen incidentally says that the Patriarch of Tiberias concondemned to the death penalty, but the fact appears contrary to all the Roman lo's. Palladius, in his Life of Saint Chrysostom, mentionsnot, it is true, the abuses of power of the Patriarch over the Jewish people,

— ee
7

=.»

AR

NET:

absolutely elective, that of Patriarch seems to have been, of good hour, made hereditary, as if to inherit a character-royal land this first magistracy of the Jewish nation.

This power was naturally not the work of a day, and The Patriarchs slowly strengthened themselves between the second destruction tion of Jerusalem, in the year 135, and the reign of Alexander Severus, in 252. However, they already appear to be firmly established CD I90, at the Beginning of the Patriarchate of Judas the Saiut, the greatest figure of all their glenology. This learned Pharisee (nE, say the rabbinical authors, the very day when Akiba was taken to the torture, and in whom the latter's groin was reincarnated) understood that Israe]l had to give up for a long time, perhaps forever, A to reconquer Judea by force of arms and to give a center national to the dispersed members of the Jewish people. This thought made him fear that the Pharisaic doctrine, which had conquered only with barely the Jewish colonies, could not maintain itself there if some persecution occurred, dissolved: the Sanhedrin pharisaized, or prevented it to stay in touch with the Jews scattered throughout the world. He resolved so to add to the verbal propaganda of the "apostles" of the Sanhedrin, a written monument which codified the sacred Phari doctrine his and hers repercussions on moral, religious and civil law of the ration. Judas the Saint himself laid the foundations of this work immense, in writing the Mischna, or “second law,” which is became the essential part of the TalmMUuD OF JERUSALEM.

This prolix, confused work, full of contradictions and diaggressions, synthesizes quite well the manner of the Jewish doctors forın&s by the Pharaisınc. It is divided into six parts: the first traiof seeds and crops, and on this subject of questions of property, diines, etc.; the second relates to the observation of Feasts and matrimonial; the fourth deals with lawsuits, commerce, as well than heresy; the fifth and sixth parts examine the obligations and purifications. It is all at once a Civil Code, a treatise on religion, a collection of sentences and anecdotes, and a book of morality - we will see later what morality!

Judas the Saint, who devoted thirty years of his life to writing it Patriarchate, and who spread it, treaty by treaty, in the Synagogues, could not csperc: contain the solution of all the eventualities of human life, the goal towards which the doc- Pharisees. Also, during his lifetime and after his death, the Sanhedrin Drin of Tiberias undertook to complete his work, which has an infinite number of commentators. 12 räuni:2 of I; Mischna and of 205 comments (iu=* !- pius Iimnr=*z.\ cst la Gri>mara, due Rabbi Jochanan, a rabbi of the 4th century) forms the TAr.MUD OF T£rvSALEM, whose 1. writing lasted as long as the presence, In Tiberias, of the Patriarch and the Sanhedrin, and which was received and accepted in the Synagogues of the outside world, with no other resistance than the de-

nn

—

Protection of a few thousand malcontents, who went to swell the number of Karaite Jews (33).

However, the favor enjoyed by the Patriarchs under Ile reign of the Syrian emperors had become very uncertain since that Christianity had ascended to the throne in the person of Constantine; and we have seen that after the reign of Julian the Apostate, the emperors no longer took much notice of them except to restrict- their prerogatives. In 429, Theodore the Younger decided to depose Gamaliel IV, which appears to have continued, after his deposition- tion, & obscurely practicing medicine in Judah (54) and abolished at the same time the Patriarchate. It does not seem that this measure has caused great confusion in Israel, and one can well understand Well, why? The father of Gamaliel IV, Hillel III, had, in fact, discredited his race among the Jews by converting at the last minute to Christianity, which he had studied extensively for the fight- three (55); the deposition of his son was therefore almost as desired by the Sanhedrin rather than by the imperial power. On the other hand, the previous edicts and the strengthening of the Christian emperors left- have little hope of being able to exercise government in peace of Israel if the seat remained in a province subject to the em- worse. For all these reasons, the Sanhedrin turned its gaze towards the East, where the Jews living in the midst of the Sassanid Persians They were then in full prosperity, and he decided to move

(53) See above note 46.

(54) Sextus Empiricus praises him on this subject in his book XAXIM.

(55) This Hillel III knew Origen, who corresponded with him. Saint Epiphanius says he heard from the mouth of Joseph, a converted Jew who became Bishop of Tiberias, whom Hillel III summoned and asked for baptism, to me at the time of monurir.

(56) Babylon, which in Genesis times was the theater of the conoath of the sons of the 'Earth seeking to conquer Heaven (curious preface to the cult of the deified Man of which we have spoken), Babylonn? has always exerted a great attraction on the Jews. It is a city of his territory (Ur, in Chaldea) that their ancestor Abraham came; It was to Babylon that the inhabitants of Judah were taken captive; It was the Babylonian philosophy that corrupted their religion; it was from Babylone that comes, 30 years before Christ, the first phari- patriarch s:en, Hille! the Old; it is to Babylon that the government is transported. Secret of the Jewish people, after the edict of "Theodosius the Younger; he remained there until the year 1005. Let us add that from the Captivity the language of the Jews had ceased to be classical Hebrew, becoming a learned language. It was broken by Aramaic, a Syriac-Chaldean dialect. It's in lanAramaic gur which is Written the Talmud of Jerusalem; as for the Talınud of Babylon, it is written in pure Chaldden. Let us point out that it results from a communication made in August ıg9rı, at the Academ:e des Inscriptions and Belles Lettres, by M. Pognon, which the Jews adopted, after the Captivite, the Babylonian calendar, as demonstrated by the papyri ofcovered at Elephantine.

W
FROM IE u

% ®
a . Bi 1 —— [oo

-
—— m 2 Me

“yon en

#

This establishment in Babylon of the government of the nation Jewish would date back to the second century of our Church, if we believe it some authors, and notably Mr. Abbot Chabeauty daus - »n work The Jews Our Masters. They cite as proof a sentence from the Conclusions of the Ghemara (Babylonian Talmud) which affirms that Judas the Saint recognized, At the end of the 2nd century, suzerainty of Huna, Prince of the Captivity and head of all soul, then reigning in Babylon. After a thorough examination of the question, and for reasons that we consider decisive, we believe that- see €discard this version (57). The Sanhedrin of Tiberias, gvi disappears from History in 429, after the edict of Theodosius, found himself reconstituted in Babylon some twenty years later, with Ja m&nıe composition, the same attributions and the same authorities as before- ravanıt; his power was again recognized by the colonies Jewish; and, above him, reigned a "Prince of the Captivity" hereditary, who claimed to be descended from the royal race of Judah as the ancient Patriarchs of Judea. By this apparent dissolution and this transfer, the government of the Jewish nation had alone- ment escapes the surveillance of the Roman emperors, who were now without action on him.

1. 'History of the "Prince of the Captivity" and the Sanhe&drin of Babylon is known to us mainly through the Jewish annalists, who mix of exaggerations and fables of all kinds. The dynasty Sassanid, who then ruled over the Persians, first granted them

---

(57) The only proof of the existence, before the 5th century, of "Princes of the Captivity & Babylon, resides in the sentence of the Conclusions of the Ghemara that we quote. Now, it is the part of the Tarmup that is teeming the most anachronisms, fables and absurdities. It is obvious that the The commentator to whom we owe this sentence wanted to flatter the "Prince of the Captivity" under which he lived, increasing the antiquity of his race;, not being able to suppress the "Patriarchs of Judea", who had existed before her, he transformed them into vassals. Moreover, we do not knows nothing of the ancestors of ve Huna, nor of his descendants, and the first "Prince of the Captivity" mentioned in History, lived in the 5th century. key, after the deposition of Patriarch Gamaliel IV and the dissolution of the Sanhedrin of Tiberias; it appears at the same time as the Sanhedrin of Babylon, who will resume the writing of the TALMuD which has remained interrupted- stinks. This indicates a simple change of residence, perhaps made more laborious by a change of dynasty. It seems that there is no had, since the fall of the Temple, only one Jewish person, sitting successively & Japhnd, in Tiberias and in Babylon and that we believe having been transported later to Constantinople, then to Salonika. (He will without saying that we do not attach any authority to the Sepher Olanı Zuta, fanciful book which gives the complete genealogy of the “Princes of the Captivity" since the time of the capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar come to reinforce our thesis; this is how he indicates as father of Huna Rabbi Nathan, the author of Massechett Avod. Now this Rabbi Nathan, author of Massecheit Avod, is well known: he was the head of the Sanhedrin of Tibcriades under the patriarchate of Judas the Saint at the beginning of the 3rd centur — Everything else is the same.)

I have re

his protection and surrounded their functions with a certain Radiance (58); 2

but no doubt she noted that the action of the Jewish government \ was fatal to him, because she ended up taking measures against him violent: several “Princes of the Captivity” were successively immediately put to death, the Sanhedrin dispersed and the Jewish schools

| fermö&es. Also the Jews favored with all their power the Arab conquest, which, by putting an end to the Persian empire, allowed their recovery. Having become more prosperous than ever, the "nasi" of Israel remained under the government of the Caliphs until the year 105s - time when the Kalife Kader-Billah, taken from the same | fears that the ancient Sassanid kings, had the "Prince of

(58) The investiture ceremony is reported as follows: The new Prit;oe being seated on a throne, the head of the Sanhedrin "exorted him & not
"not to abuse his power and represented to him that he was rather called
"There is slavery as well as the Empire, and because of the sad condition of the people-
"ple. The following Thursday, the directors of the Academies imposed on him the “hands in the synagogue, to the sound of trumpets and cheers.
"The people, after having brought him home in force, sent him
"Big presents. On Saturday morning, all the people of interest were present.
"went to his house; he put himself at their head and left his house
"his face covered with a silk sheet; he went in this crew following-| "saw of the multitude, up to the synagogue, and the chairs of the Academies
"and the choirs sang hymns of blessing around his "pulpit. There the Book of the Law was brought to him, and there he recited the first "first line; then, he spoke to the people, before his eyes closed by.
"respect, and, in his absence, the head of the Syrian Academy did the "sermon. The ceremony ended with acclamations to the Prince and "by prayers to God so that he would deliver the Nation under his reign.

"each Province, so that God may protect it from plague or war.
I ended with a low prayer, for fear that someone might "tendered and went to report to the other Princes that he wished their R this ruin, because in fact the reign of the Jews was only to be established on "the debris of other Monarchies. Leaving the Synagogue, one con- 4

"the Prince was pompously taken to his Palace, where he was having a Ba feast.
"superb to the principals of the Nation. It was his last outing;

"for after that he was no longer allowed to leave his house, if “it was not to go to the Academy (and then everyone stood up

"and stood until he was asked to sit down or go to
"to visit the King of Babylon, which was done after his ins-"stallization, with great pomp. The King, being informed of his des-"breast, sent him his charlot. The Chief of the Captivity "did not dare accept-
"take this offer; but made this cart move in front of him, to
"to show his respect and dependence. He then dressed in a sheet "of magnificent gold; fifty guards marched before him; all those "whom he met on his way made a devotion to follow him #
"to the King's palace. There, the Eunuchs came to receive him and "led to the throne, while one of his officers, who was archbishop "before him, distributed gold and silver. Approaching the King, He prostrated himself on the ground to show that he was his vassal and his "subject. The Funuchi lifted him up to place him on a seat & the "left. After the first compliments, the Trince exposed the 2 "complaints and the affairs of his Nation, which the King decided." (History .
"of the Jews; Paris, Louis Roulland, 1710).

The Talmua

er.

BEAUTIFUL

zZ“

tation is isolated, and it seems that this report

BLEI Ge FT

the Captivity of Hezekiah, and ruined the Jewish Power in its States, Since then, the dignity of Prince of the Captivity has not been officelestially restored, nor the assembled Sanhedrin; but I have everything reason to believe that the Jewish people have not remained deprived of an organcentralism] ensuring the perpetuation of its national unity (50).

(59) After the dissolution of Jewish power, in the year 1005, by order of the Caliph Kader-Billah, we no longer find any trace of the "Pritices of the Captivity. Benjamin of Tudela, the great Jewish traveler of the 12th century. key, claims to have found one reigning in Babylon, but this attest-

bbin has not visited all the countries he deer. Assuming that one still exists, and that Benjamin of Tude'e actually visited him, his existence was it not Not hidden from the Caliphs and known only to Jewish initiates as that of the Patriarch and the Sanhedrin of Japhne had been, at the beginning, hidden from the Romans?... That would explain everything, and especially what follows-vr2. Indeed, various documents reveal the Permanence, in the following of; centuries, of a supreme power of the Jewish nation, no longer "parent and refractory easy to reach, as it had been in the past, but on the contrary carefully conceals itself, revealing itself neither to non-Jews, nor the mass of the Hebrew colonies, but only to the di-Unitarians of the rabbinical order, heads of the communities of Israel, (A tei power, true Secret Directory, could perfectly saı authority over the Jewish people by acting of leading individuals, and we have in with the "Union and Progress Committee", a Ion can reach in this order of ideas).

The documents we are using are:

1° The Royal Crown of the Kings of Arles, published in Avignon, in "640, by J. Bouis, priest. In this work are found the reproduction. tion of two letters, already a century and a half old, copied in the archives of a Provengal abbey. One of these letters is addressed to see, on the 13th of Sabbath 14809, by Rabbi Chamor, head of the community-Jewish naut of Arles, A ja Jewish communant of Constantinople. II inform this one that the king of France, new sovereign of Provence, wants to force the Jews to convert or to expatriate, and he asks what conduct should be observed. The second letter is dated the 2nd of Kasleu of the same year. It contains the response of the "great salrapes and rabbis of the Jewish nation" and it is signed by the "Prince Jews of Constantinople"; THEY advise the Jews of Arles a simulated conversion, and indicate various things to them

Ant dl means to ensure then supremacy over Christians and harming them in their lives, their religion and their property.

When the Almanach Provengal published these letters in 1380, the Jews of The press cried "Maliciousness!" They were then objected to the publication made in 1640, in the work of the abbot Beuis, at a time when he was not There was no question of anti-Semitism, and they were left with it. that the false was ancient. But their system collapsed when it was known that two letters addressed to Jews in Spain had been found towards the end of the 16th century, in the archives of Toledo, and published in Peris, in 1583, by a Navarrese gentleman, Julien de Medrano, in a Spanish work entitled: Silva curiosa, It therefore seems certain that the Sanhedrin and the Prince of the Captivity resided secretly Constantinople, in 1489, the time of this correspondence.

exercise
on a limited number this moment in Türkiye, example of the results that

2° The History of the Jews of Great Britain, by Rabbi Moses little suspicious, reports that a

Margoliouth, London, 1851. Laute

When he disappeared, the Sanhedrin of Babylon had longtime completed and the work begins in Tiberias, in Igo, by Judas the Saint: THE TALMUD, this written expression of the doctrine secret of the Pharisees, was finished. Rabbi Aschi and his collaboratorrator Rabbi Abina, had been the immediate successors of work of the Sanhedrin of Tiberias: from 440 to 470, they composed rent, In Babylon, the Conclusions of the Ghemara which accentuated again the antisocial character of the Talınud by exalting pride ethnicity and the hopes of universal domination of the Jews.

Jew of Ferrara, Emmanuel Tremelli, having converted" (in appearance) to the Reformation, had become professor of Hebrew at Cambridge; intimate with the rulers of the time, and violently hostile, like them, to the Catholicism, he was the master of the Hebrew Hugh Braughton, whom he initiated into Kabbalah and who became the favorite theologian of Queen Elisa-Beth. Hugh Broughton once delivered to the Queen an official letter from Rabbi Reuben, leader of the Jews of Constantinople, who offered a truth-ble alliance between English power and Jewish power, Rabbi Reu.
well declaring that the Assembly over which he presided was the center of the Jews of worldwide. He requested that representatives be sent to Constantinople
I, the queen, charged with negotiating an agreement, and offered in exchange for Jewish letters for the publication of English translations of the Bible.
Queen Elizabeth showed little "eagerness to accept this

Hugh Broughton returned to the charge and was more successful. He obtained no- especially that the Jews, banished from England for centuries, were authorized to enter.

This page of history, taken from a Jewish writer, proves that the Sanhe- dri-ı was still in Constantinople around the year 1600, more than a century after the time when the letters to the Jews of Arles were written.

7° History of the Jews. Paris, Louis Roulland, 1710. The author points out incidentally (IV, 51) that the didrachma tax is still paid from its time, and said: "We have retained this ancient custom, because the money that "this nation rises in Holland, and in the other places where it enjoys "of some prosperity are sent to Venice and to Thessaloniki. We buy the things necessary to dress the doctors of the "Holy Land, and then we put them in the hands of the Masters of "the Academy of Tiberias, who distribute it according to their number "dence, at the beginning of the year. But the vessel which carries them "does not always escape the vigilance of the Corsairs."

The author, who never thought of the existence of a secret power of the Jewish nation in modern times, reproduces the explanation which has to be given to him of a fact which had surprised him: the raising of the didrachma wu beginning of the 18th century. It attributes to a charitable purpose, without denying which Jewish power had the right to levy this tax, that it had charity as its purpose or not. Let us also note that the funds thus gathered in Venice were sent to Salonika (Thessaloniki), that is to say say in a city almost entirely Jewish and close to Constantinople, and the Sanhedıfn could therefore very well have been transported. The itinerary funds beyond Salonika then appears purely fanciful, and indicated to park our author, because why this trip to Salona is a joke? if the funds were intended for the Holy Land, which is not on the same navigation route?

Note that Jewish Salonika is still an inquietante, from where the Young Turk revolution came out, and where it was born

the "Committee of Union and Progress".
on the Jews of all countries,
'intermediary of each synagogue: one: in 2 seen a thousand proofs at the Dreyfus Affair Foundation,

Rabbi Oschi, who published his work in the year said Mai.nonides, who also lived in the 11th century; and finally Rabbi Jos'el author of the 16th century, which closes I

The work continued after them. Gathered and spread throughout all the Synagogues of the world, Colossal building. to which more than two hundred authors and commentators had tra
a new force in Pharisaic thought (60).
Such were the origins of the TaLmun.
Jewish SC2 since. nearly 2,000 years ago, and 'Gospel of censorship, of: fraud... say
It is in this book that all Jewish generations have studied Until today. and he is the one who must be known if one wants understand the strange being that is the Jew.

END OF PART ONE

5 also that the levies of money:
always do, obligatorily and by

(60) Among the most recent commentators of the Talmud we must mention

155 Moses ben Maimoun, vaille, y perp&tua with:

Lg

born

% > = — BR 3 N LTR Een ua

PART TWO

CHAPTER .Y.ıl

m ly those of the Babylonian Talmud, the most esteemed v2 S of the Jews, because expressing with fewer voices have the aspirations and thoughts of the race. The most an-

I |

mr ge Ks editions of the Talmud are numerous, particularly-

Da own urn Bee ar Det a = r

Dr. Cienne Edition is almost contemporary with the beginnings of the printing: made in Venice, in 1520, by Bomberg, it comprises twelve folio volumes. Marc Antoine Giustiniani reprinted it, in 1550, and Venice again, without edifications. But these successive editions were soon to put the Jewish world in great embarrassment. Until 1A, in fact, when a Christian scholar, or a converted rabbi, denounced morality of Israel as scandalous and produced in support of his claims extracts from the holy book of the Jews, the latter were free of them I to cry out against the ignorance of the translator or the malice of the copyist author of the incriminating manuscript (61). With a printed delivery, definitive and given an official character, this tactic became impracticable, and the anti-Semites of the 17th century immediately had a K solid basis to support their accusations before the powers published. Also the third edition of the Talmud (that of Basel, in 1581) Was it expurgated by the censorship of the Holy Empire?

= se ca A 3

Yard

nn nn

(61) The Jews were so little anxious to put their sacred book before the eyes of non-Jews that it is said in Tractate Sanhedrin, folio 59, a: "A non-
A Jew who studies the Law (the Talmud) deserves death.

Den

me Ze u To en —

HAS
er h

of certain Passages particularly venomous against Christ and the Church. The Jews, moreover, limited themselves to reprinting part the blas;h&mes Deleted and To insert them in the volumesmy in their possession (62)

New complaints having arisen following the editions (complete those-]A) of Amsterdam, in 1600, and of Krakow, in 1605, the rabbis judged it prudent not to provide longertime of arms against Israel. Also the General Synod gathered in Poland, in 1631, ordered the removal of the passages inscribed mines, in all the forthcoming Editions: but he did it in territories which deserve to be noted, because they are a monumentment of Jewish perfidy: “Therefore we command,
"Under penalty of major excommunication (Herem) to do nothing
"print in the upcoming Editions of the Mischna or the "Ghemara which relates, for good or bad, to the acts of Jesus the "Nazar&en. We therefore order you to leave blank
"the places which relate to Jesus the Nazarene. A circle like "This one, O, put in place will warn the rabbis and schoolmasters
"to teach these Passages to the youth only orally.
"By means of this precaution, the scholars among the Naza-
"eens (Christians) n'auren: no more pretext to attack us
"Ace subject" (63).

This decision was implemented, more or less completely, in the later editions of Vienna, the most intact, of Ammsterdam (1644), Frankfurt on the Oder (1697, and 1715-1721), Sulzbach (1769), Prague (1830), and Warsaw (1863). HoweverHowever, despite the frills used, these editions are still teeming texts of revolting cynicism. It is by stripping them that a Hebrew scholar, Mr. Pabh& Auguste Rohling, doctor of the&oology and professor at the University of Prague, composed around 1878 a small work, the Jewish Talmudist, which was first published in Mlinster in Westphalia. Criticisms have been made about The accuracy of certain quotations, Mr. P'abb & Maximilien de La-completely the work, and published it again, in 1888, in Brussels, at the publisher. Alfned) Vromant, WHO OFFERED A RIE:COM- THINK OF 10,000 FRANCS TO ANYONE WHO PROVES ONLY ONE OF THE QUOTES CONTAINED IN THE VOLUME WAS WRONG.

It is now twenty-five years since the work was completed; distributed by tens of thousands of copies in Belgium, in France and Germany; a large number of rabbis have had it in the hands: gold, MALGRK THE SPIRIT OF LUCK SO WIDESPREAD IN

(62) See (Action Française revue, July 15, 1911) the article by Count by Lafont de Savines on the Talmud.

(63) Drach, Harmony between the Church and the Synagogue, 167:

!

[uj

ISRAEL, NO ONE EVER TRIED TO TRY TO WIN THE BONUS BY DISCOVERING THE FALSENESS OF A SINGLE QUOTE. Such a experience proves to the skeptical. It is therefore the opening work of the Rohling abbots and Laimarque that we are going to borrow-to a certain number of texts from the Talmud. But, first of all, we must insist on the character that revöt, for the Jews, this Talmud which we recounted in our first part, the slow @development.

The Pharisees, who wrote it, must have had as their first concern to exalt the dogmatic value of the book that their sect had been meditating for nearly a thousand years. They did not fail to that, and they placed their work above this Bible which does not inspired them with only distance, because it reminded them '&period of the orthodoxy of Israel. Also the 'Talmud ati] care of proclaim in many places his own superiority over the Bible. The following quotes prove this beyond any doubt:

"The Bible is like water, the Mishnah like wine, aa Ghemara "to aromatic wine. As the world cannot exist without water, "wine and aromatic wine, so the world cannot be without it "Bible, without the Mishna and without the Gemara. The Law resembles the "salt, the Mischna with pepper and the Ghemara with aroma, and the world “cannot subsist without salt, etc. (64).

"virtue or not a virtue; those who study the Mishna
"practice a virtue and will be rewarded; but those who "&study Ghemara practice the highest virtue, (65).

"If a man passes from the sentences of the Talmud to the Bible, he "will no longer have happiness (66).

The Talmud constantly repeats this idea of the supremacy priority of the work of the rabbis over the inspired work of God: "The
"The words of the writers of the Talmud are sweeter than those of "the Law" (67), he says, so that "sins against the Talmud
"are more serious than those against the Bible" (68). And all the Commentators agree to add: "We must not have
"of commerce with the one who has in his hands the Bible and not the Tal-
"mud" (69). "My son, pay more attention to the words of the rabbis
"than to the words of the Law" (70). "Whoever reads the Bible without it
"Mischna and without the Ghemära is like someone who has "no God" (71). This idea of the superiority of the Talmud over

---

(64) Masech. Sepharim, folio 13 b.

(65) Treatise Baba Mezia, fol. 33 a.

(66) Treats Chag. folio ı0 b.

(67) Talmud of Jerusalem, treatise Berachoth, Perek 1.
(68) Treatise Sanhedrin, folio 88 b.

(60) Sepher Cad ha Kemach, folio 77, €3.

(0) Treatise Erübin, folio 2ı b. Cf treatise Gittin, folio sg b.
(71) Sepher Chafare Zedek, folio 9.

The Bible has so well entered the Jewish minds that the Archives Israelites themselves, the organ of the reforming Jews, declare without hesitation: "As for the Talımud, we recognize its sup-absolute riorit@ on the Bible of Moses » (Fan

To explain this superiority, traditional teaching of the Jews affirms "that God, on Mount Sinai, gave to Moses, not only the Bible, but also the Talmud; but he put this difference-relation between the two works that the Taalmud, the most precious, would be preserved orally, so that idolatrous peoples could not-feel to be aware of it in case they make Israel tribu-silent (73); and also because if God had wanted to write the Talmud,

Having thus divinized the Talmud, the teaching of the Synagothat could do no less than to magnify the body strangely rabbinic, to whom Israel was indebted for the writing and preservation of such a sublime work. Also the rabbis are the object, not of human veneration, but of true adoration ration, as the following texts testify: "He (75) He who despises the words of the rabbis is worthy of death. —« 1 must (76) know that the words of the rabbis are sweeter than those of the prophets." — "The ordinary speeches (77) of the rabbins must be considered as the whole of Joy." — "He (78) who contradicts his rabbi, who disputes with him or murmurs against him, does nothing other than contradict the divine majesty, argue with her and whisper at her." — "The words (70) of the rabbis are the words of the living God n. And Masimonidds of confirm (80): “The fear of the rabbi is the fear of God”; while Rabbi Raschi declares (81): “If a rabbi tells you that your right hand is your left, and your left is your right, you must add faith Ace that he says.

Having uttered such words, the Talmudic authors have nothad no reason to stop on such a beautiful path; also the traitd Sanhedrin (fol. 92 a) says that the deceased rabbis are charged, in Heaven, from the instruction of the &lus; and Rabbi M&nachem (82) affirms that every time a serious question has been debated in Heaven in-

---

(72) Israelite Archives, 1864, 25. 150.

(73) Trait & Berachoth |. c., and Midrasch Chemott rabba, par. 47
(74) Jalkut Sinveoni, 22,

(75) Treatise Erübin, folio 2ı b.

(76) Sepher Caphthor U-Perach, 1590: fol. ı21.

(77) Midrash Mischle, fol. ı.

(78) Treatise Sanhedrin, folio ı10 a.

(79) Bachai, ad Pent., folio a0ı, col. 4.

(80) Jade. Chaz. hilch. Talm. Thöra, Perek Rt N
(81) Ad Deuter, XVII, ir.

(82) Ad Pent., para. 28, fol. 120. col. 2.

wu. W.A.

gi

holding the Law, God came down to earth to consult the:

rabbis...
But, it may be observed, the 'almud contains many op-contradictory statements made on the same fact and in the same time by these rabbis so renowned as learned. ''You cannot have reason, since both contradict each other, and how then discern the truth? It is still Rabbi Menachem who will we answer (83): "All the words of the rabbis, of no im-

"whatever time or generation, are the words of God,
"as well as the words of the prophets, even though they are Ü would contradict; he—1A therefore who contradicts the rabbis, who dis-
"whore with them or whisper against them, argue and whisper
"against God himself."

This doctrine which claims for the
and in all circumstances, even when they disagree, an infallibility that the Catholic Church grants only to its chieftain.
and in clearly defined cases, this doctrine is found in all the commentators of the "Kalmud. It practically ends
A the abolition of any precise rule of morality, In fact, is there disagreement on any point between the school of Hillel and the School of Shammai, whose discussions are recounted in the Talmud: “The two opinions are the word of God, that of Shammai and that of Hillel,” says the sacred book of the Synagogue. So that it does not All that remains is for him to conclude: "Since every word is divine, do what your heart desires, as far as it is possible to do it” (84).
Indifference of human actions well in conformity with the phari— ideal his own, and which immediately completes this other prescription—tion: "It is forbidden to sin provided that one consents to sin in secret” (85).

s rabbis of all time,

(83) Ad Exod. XX, 1, folio 08.

Rabbi Raschi, Jebam., folio 33 a; and Tosaphot, treatise Chebäolh, folio 26

has.
(85) Treatise Chag. folio 16 a; and treatise Kiddüchin, folio 40 a.

CHAPTER VI

God, Angels and Demons according to the Talmud

'Being thus in some way divinized themselves, he @j remained with the authors and commentators of the Talmud A 2a he makes, on the contrary, of God a being of pu- conception ee] Tempient and basely human, lending itself to laughter Jews and erasing in them even the memory of the great Jehovah that their drills had adored. Thus found himself satisfied, under the only effective and prudent form, the old pharisaical feeling his own which denied all divinity and distinctness of Nature - but which could not expose this theory crudely in Israel without provoking to create dangerous resistances. Since it was necessary, for the masmaintain the principle of a creator God, the Pharisees resigned to keep the integrity of the pantheistic system for the intimite of their books and their circles of High Kabbalah, and they put Jehovah on stage in the Talınud. But a diminished Jehovah, dull, grotesque, and like Escape from an Offenbach operetta — so much so that this Jewish musician had, without doubt, only A interroger the book of his race to find there the model of the Gods Orpheus in the Underworld. Let us browse the Talmud and pick at random some of the antics with which the name is mixed of the almighty God.

The day, it is said there (Abod-Zar., for. 3 b) has twelve hours. PenDuring the first three hours, God sits and studies the Law;
during the next three hours he judges the world; for three hours more, he feeds him; then, satisfied with his nine hours of work, he sits down, calls Leviathan, the king of fish, and plays with him. Now this L&viathan (Baba Bathra, fol. 74 a and b) is a monsvery formidable, because the T'almud states that he could swallow, without to put his throat in danger, a 300-kilometer-long fish.
Also, in fear that the offspring of this colossus will invade I world and devastation, God castrated Leviathan and killed his female;
he salted the flesh of this one and it is this salted flesh that they eat the elect in Paradise. What does God do next, once night falls?
Rabbi Menachem (86) assures us that he first studied the Talmud with the Angels; but they are not alone in discussing with then to Heaven to take part in the interview (87). Then, God dances with Eve, helps her wash and braids her hair (88).

(86) Ad Pent., folio 97, 3. Cf Targüm, ad cant. V, ıo0.
ei Traite Gittin, folio 68 a.

(88) Trait& Berachoth, folio 61 a,

=;

However, this timetable has undergone some changes. since the ruin of the Temple of Jerusalem (89): God no longer plays with Leviathan and no longer frolics with Eve, for he is sad, having grave sin. This sin weighs so heavily on his conscience that according to the Talmud (90), he sits for three parts of the night and roars like a lion, crying out: "Woe to me, since I allowed my house to be devastated, my temple to be burned, and that my children be taken away." In vain, to console him, singone praises him; he is obliged to shake his head and say: “Blessed is the king who is praised in his house! But what punishment is due to a father who allows his children to be dragged into the misere? » This desolation has reduced him to such a state of consumption that it has become very small: once it filled the world and nowholding it now occupies hardly more than four ells of land (91). It cries and her tears fall from the sky with such a crash that-the noise resounds in the distance and that earthquakes are born- -

sent (92).

When God's desolation makes him cry thus, he imitates the voice of the lion of the forest of Elai, who had, according to the Talmud, a throat very remarkable. One day, the Roman emperor wanted to see this lion. They sent for him; and when he was no longer far from the emperor than 400 miles, it roars with such force that all the women-my pregnant women had miscarriages and all these walls of Rome collapsed when it was only 300 mil-them, he roared again with such force that people lost their teeth and that the emperor, falling from his throne, asked that the lion was brought back (93).

We understand that a God who presents himself in such aspects does not hardly imposes on men; also the Talımud shows us this assailed by recriminations. The Moon herself reproaches him-because he created it smaller than the Sun and God con-humbly accepts his clumsiness (94). God, moreover, is a &dizzy | who makes inconsiderate statements. As he needs to be heaven and earth, and commits to God the commitments that he takes & light it (95). But it happens to this angel not to be A sch post, and then God finds himself in great embarrassment, as the day when a wise man in Israel heard him cry out: "Woe to me!

(89) Baba Bathra, folio 74 a and b.

(go) Treatise Berachoth, folio 3 a.

(91) Do not forget that the Talmudic writers are masters in allegory: this gigantic Jehovah become very small, it is the conception of divinity in the Bible replaced by that of the Talmud.

(92) Treatise Berachott, folio 59 a, and treatise Chag. folio 5 b.
(93) Chüllin Treatise, folio 59 b.

(0) Treatise Chüllin, folio 60 b., and treatise Chebüoth, folio g a.
95) Treatise Chüllin, folio 60 b., and treatise Chebüoth, folio 9 a.

'who will release me from my oath!' I ran to tell this to his colleagues the rabbis, who called him a donkey because he had no himself delights God as all rabbis have the power to do (06).
| Let us add, to complete the moral portrait of God, according to the ' Talmud, that it generously attributes to him the responsibility of all the sins that are committed on earth. It is he, they say the rabbinical Geriyains, who gave to men a nature ofprave; he cannot therefore blame them for falling into sin, 'since they are predestined (97). And this is why Dayid in comcommitting adultery, the sons of Eli, by committing sexual immorality, did not truly sin; God alone was guilty of their sins.
faults (98).

If God is thus treated by the Talmud, one must think that the Angels are hardly better. The holy book of the Synagogue We show them busy, for half the day, preparing sleep for men (99). To thank them for their good offices that they draw from it, men owe to the Angels actions of thanks; but that does not mean that we cannot sc

, to pass ('cux in V'occasion. Indeed, the Angels, all knowing that they are, do not know the Chaldean language; so gie when the Jews want to ask for something & God in cachette of the Angels, they only have to say their prayer in Chaldean The whole army of heaven remains speechless and Jehovah alone has comtaken (100).

The Angels are very unequal among themselves, only a small number-
It also participates in 'Eternity', which is the prerogative of human souls.
These rare privileges were created at the beginning of the world,

Jehovah, moreover, creates new troops of Angels every day: but these live only for a moment: they sing a canticle had his honor and disappear (101). By every word that God pronounces, an angel is created (102). Twenty-one thousand angels are proposes mux twenty-one thousand species of plants which are on the teric; there are angels for the wild beasts, for the birds, for the fish, and even for medicines; and the Talmud teaches us that the glorious archangel Gabriel, the angel of the Annunciation, is in charge of watching over ripe fruit (103)

(96) Feature € Baba Bathra, folio 742.

(97) Trait& Aboda Zara, folio 4b.

(98) Traite Sab., folios 55 bet 56a.

(99) Jalkät Chad., folio 118.

(100) Tosaphat, treatise Berachoth, folio 3 a. We will note this characland of excellence granted to the Chaldeans, reminiscent of the Babylonian originnian of Pharisaic traditions.

(101) Bachai, folio 37, col, 4; and Traite Chag., folio 11 m.

(102) Treatise Chag. |]. c.

(103) Treatise Pesachim, folio 118; line€ Sanhedrin, folis 95 (Raschi): Sepher Ammüde Schibkab, folio 49.

It was a very late Friday that God created the Demons; and, as the Sabbath was about to begin, he didn't cut me off time to finish them off and give them a body. They have a soul, made of a substance found in the moon and of no use, a material form, made of water and fire for the uus, of earth K and atr for others, but no body (104).

Many demons descend from Adain, say the writers. | rabbinical: when the first man was driven out of the terrest, he first refused to approach Eve so as not to give || f the day A beings cursed by God. Two female demons to him appeared then and conjure up from him. For one hundred and thirty years, one of these female demons, called Lilith, engendered from Adam demons, evil spirits and nocturnal specters. But } Lilith having acted badly towards Adam, God condemned her to see her perish every day a hundred of her children; and her gift was so great that since then, accompanied by four hundred and eighty spirits of

| sant (Tos5).

While Adam was behaving like this, Eve did not have a better conduct: she was the wife of male demons who produced similar offspring (106). Since then, beau- Many men and women joined forces with the demons. so we should not be surprised if the number of the latter is very considerable (all the more so since they also procreate among themselves), and it would be much more so if these wicked spirits did not have a taste marked for drunkenness and gluttony, which means that beau- suddenly die of indigestion (107). Solomon, who was a great magician, knew these particularities well, and, in addition to his 700 wives and 300 concubines, he had chosen four among the female demons (108). One of them was this Lilith, who had already been Adam's wife and who has since led then such a big noise. Another danced without stopping and had In his wake were 479 evil spirits who imitated all his contortions. But it could not be compared to the third one that was chosen. by Solomon: she was the wife of the powerful denion Sammadl, and, In honor of her infernal epoch, she is accompanied by 180,000 very evil spirits.

in
..

(104) Jalküt Chad, folio 107, 115 and 116; Sepher Nischmath Chaim, folio 117, col. 2; Sepher Tüb ha — arez, folioo b. (We will notice this decomposition into änıc, form and body, which is borrowed from the ancients Chaldean beliefs; the Kabbalist Jews received it through the channel of the Pharisees and transmitted it to our occultists, spiritualists and theosophists modern: the “form” has become the “astral body”.

(105) Jalklt Reübeni, III; treatise & Erübin, folio 18 b.; Sepher Bensira, foliog act b.

4) Bachai, folw 16 a; and Sepher Nichmath Chaijm, folio 114 b., f 107) Traite Chag., folio ı6 a.

(108) Sepher ha-Ivechamä, folio 28 a; tr..it& Pesachim, folio ıı2 b.

ua

.

— has

The only way for men to kill demons is to do bake Easter cakes, the smell of which is unpleasant to themble (109); but we would have gotten rid of it since the Flood if No& hadn't been simple enough to take a few couples in the ark (110). Since then, they have multiplied and we find some everywhere.. They like to come and dance between the horns of an ox which returns from the watering hole, or in the middle of a troop of women has ı returning from a funeral. Envy also draws them around the rabbins. Finally, the walnut trees are a place of refuge for them and each of their leaves are occupied by a demon; that is why it is necessary take care not to fall asleep under their shade; for the demons would play the nastiest tricks on you 117):

The Talmud is inexhaustible on this question of demons, and all the fables he tells have become the basis of the books of witchcraft and magic, so popular in the Middle Ages, and which are, for twenty years, the object of a new public favor. It is Eliphas Levi (defrocked Louis Constant) was rightly able to to say that the Talmud was the fundamental book of Magic; demons, charms, enchantments intervene there. At each , page. One should not venture into solitary places, because that the lemons make their home there; one must not find oneself alone at the times when the growth and decline of the moon, because these are moments abandoned to the demons; he You should not greet someone at night, because that person that we greet could well be a demon; etc.

The most foolish superstitions, which were then propagatedgees by low-class pythonesses and rogue magicians (a cross encountered, sign of coming misfortune; Friday, day of bad luck; many other things) began by being recorded in the Talmud and were part of the teaching of the rabbis. Besides the advantage of degrading, at Jews, like non-Jews, the notion of the supernatural, The Pharisaic authors of the Talmud attached a symbolic meaning to these superstitious beliefs; and the rabbis are having a great time todayeven today, seeing many Christians, otherwise good believers, adopt the teaching of the Synagogue by considering the cross and Friday {(the instrument and the day of Redemption) as being of dire presage...

The rabbis, who had made such a good point by putting their wisdom above that of God, could not fail to at-

This power is limitless and they use it for the most &amazing magic tricks.

(109) Zohar, par. Vajchlach.

(110) Sepher Nischmath Chaijm, folio 115, col. 3.

(rır) Trait€ Pesachim, folio rı2 b.; Joe Dea, para. 359; treats Berachoth, folio 6 a; Jalküt Chad,, folio 108 b.

Here, it is one of the editors of the Talmud of whom it is reported that he had]: secret of resurrecting a man after having killed him; See you later strong reason why he could restore life to an animal; so he imagined, to feed oneself cheaply, to kill a calf every evening three years, where he dined with a good appetite with one of his colleagues-

Br res, then that he would resurrect the next morning, to kill him again and eat it again in the evening (112). Preferring venison, another famous rabbi changed pumpkins with his magical secrets in deer and melons in fallow deer (113). It was still necessary to have @ eitrouilles; but, if Rabbi Eliezer was present, we didn't have A to fear of missing it: a few mysterious words are enough knew enough to fill a whole field (114). Rabbi Jannai, no less fickle, could change water into scorpions, and one day when he lacked a mount to go to the market, he changed a wife in Änc, and gave him back his fortune once the race was over (15). All

Your famous rabbis had, moreover, says the Talmud, a stone magic which served them to perform wonders: one of them a-

He enjoyed touching dirty birds, which immediately returned to the ,life and took their flight (116).

r

| Sanhcdrin, 1. c.

| (113) Jerusalem Talmud. Treatise Sanhedrin, Perek VII.

| (114) Treatise Sanhedrin, folio 68 a.
has. (115) Treatise Sanhedrin, folio 67 b.; Massech, Sapharim, 13.
I (116) Baba Bathra, folio 74 b.

DR
.
>
”

gen

CHAPTER VII

Through the Talmud

775 | 'IS in the same way that the Bible is transformed Berl by the Talmudic Writers, who tell it a GrScH| second time, mixing it with absurdities in the kind of those we have just reported.

This is how the Talmud tells us that God first created man-hermaphrodite, Adam and Eve forming only one body; but, later he changed his mind and separated their two natures MIT). Adam was then so tall that his head touched the firmament, and that when he lay down, his feet were at the extreme west-tooth and his head in the far east. But when Adam had sinned, God made him smaller than ordinary men (118).

Almost as great was Og, the king of Bashan mentioned in the Bible. and that the Talinud frequently stages. The rabbis assure that he owed it to his size not to be drowned by the Flood, while the highest mountains were submerged; its head dominated always the waves. However, he was in great danger of being boiled, for the waters that covered the earth were burning; but he had the subtlety of noticing that the wave remained cold around the Ark and he did not deviate from it an inch. At most, he was forced to fast during this time, which must have bothered him a lot, because he normally ate two thousand oxen every day and as many piccc s of game, which he washed down with a thousand measures of wine.

When the Hebrews came to Bashan, Og wanted to get rid of them in one fell swoop: knowing that their camp covered three miles of land, he went to tear from a mountain a rock of the same tendue and put it on his head, with the intention of placing it on the comMeise loincloths. But JChova noticed his maneuver sidesaw ants gnawing at the rock; this work went so quickly that the rock was pierced over Og's head, and, descending on his shoulders, vi took the neck as in a collar. While he worked a to get rid of it, Moisc ran up, with an axe whose handle he was ten ells long; he made a leap of ten ells in Vair high, and thus managed to reach Oz at the ankle of the foot, making himfelt a bad cut from which the giant died. Later, Rabbi One day, in the desert, Johanan found a gigantic bone; he ran more than three miles along this bone before seeing the end of it: It was a tibia of Og (119).

One day when Og lost a tooth, Abraham took it in and took care of it. cut a bed. And yet Abraham was tall and very cunning seventy-four ordinary men, for he had taken the habit to eat as much as seventy-four men. It is true that the Talmud tells, in turn, that this tooth of Og was used to make a bed, or to make an armchair, so that the question remained pending (120).

It would be a mistake to believe, however, that the Talmud does not contains only fables of this kind. The Pharisees who wrote it took care, after having ridiculed Jehovah and the Bible with these stories, to record in the new holy book all the essential points of their doctrine. This is how we find, formally mentionednge in more than twenty places in the Talmud (121), this old croyance To the transmigration of souls that the Pharisaic sect nahealth borrowed from Chaldea, during the captivity of Babylon, and which she then succeeded in having adopted by the Jewish nation whileTiere, then To spread nowadays among Christians, under the

(117) Hermaphroditism occupies a large place in Tralmud, and the Kabbalist Jews transmitted this concern to most of the occultist celebs. Even today, we see hermetic writers devote important comments to the characteristics of hermaphroditism of certain paintings reputed to contain them, such as the Precursor of Ieona-d da Vinci, at the Louvre.

(118) Treatise Sanhedrin 1. c.; Treatise Chag., folio ı2 a.

Bee

The Talınud affirms, in fact, that God, after having created the Donkeys of the Jews from his own substance, from the same soul that a son is created of the substance of his father, predestined them all to eternal life and to Paradise. But he only admits them there when these souls have purifications by passing through different bodies, so that the souls of dead games come back to incarnate in the children who are born until God calls these souls back to Himself. But it happens that Jews are impious, kill another Jew or deny their race; that will God make of these revolts?... He will not condemn them to hell &eternal: at most he will send them there for a year. After what, these Jewish souls will be sent into plants, then into bodies of animals, then into bodies of non-Jewish men; finally, they will become worthy of reappearing in the body of a Jewish and will be able to merit eternal life again.

One cannot fail to be struck by the similarity that exists center these Pharisaic doctrines, twenty-five centuries old, and those professed today by the disciples of Allan Kardec or of Mrs. Blavatsky. The most important difference is that the ba-finality is reserved by the Talmud for Jews only, while that spiritualists and teleosophers affirm that all beings achieve it-

(119) Treatise Zebachim, folio 113 b.; N.asech. Sopharim, ı4; Tra'te Berachoth, folio 54 b.; Trait€ Nidda, folio 24 b.

(120) Maseph. Sopharim, 1. c.

(121) In particular: Sepher Nischmath Chaijm, folio ı59 a; Jaigat Reübeni, 17; Jalküt Chad. folios 5 b and 121 2; Baba Bathra folio 16 b; Sepher Emek ha-Melech, folio 16a; etc.

Io
pe entered
- . - in . Re. Be nes een het
- ei ae 2 ne 3, eP u =

"
+ _

of

Bw ne

2 ih 2 er

5
* nd el ea a Fe

AND

PYsezser: Mr

er ir: et ae Br

EAST LE ag

-

Pr

es ee
-

It is

+

will. Yet there is no formal contradiction, since the Talmud admet that some non-Jews can perfect themselves in reborn in the bodies of Jews; the chain of beings, that the theosophists begin with inanimate things to arrive at being human, thus counts, according to the Talmud, one more ring: the Jew, or superman. Theosophists and spiritualists can provisionally not to admit this additional ring: they are not less intellectually dependent on a philosophical system
Jew and they prepare the brains of their followers for proselytism

Judaic, which will one day absorb the most intelligent among them EUKX.

generalizes the doctrine of the transmigration of souls. It gives specific examples. This is how he reports that the soul of Japheth passed into Samson, that of Thaler into Job, that of Eve into Isaac, that of the courtesan Rahab in Heber the Hatian (122), daughter of Saal in Heli. Cain, better divided, had three souls: one passed into Jethro,

-the other in Core, and the third inhabited the body of this @Egyptian whom Moses killed. As for Esau, whom the Talmud represents as a murderer and an adulterer, his soul passed into the body of Jesus the Nazarene, founder of the execrable sect of Christians, which Jesus, according to the rabbis, is forever plunged into Hell, within a boiling exercise tank (123).

It is also to hell that the souls of non-Jews go (let him not should not be confused with the Souls of Guilty Jews, provisional-are reincarnated in the bodies of non-Jews). While, more or less less quickly, all Jews will end up having Paradise to share, all other men, but especially Christians and Muslims-mans, will be damned and plunged eternally into vats of gall and mud (124) the only way for them to be saved being,
during their lifetime, to be circumcised and to become proselytes Jews. And this damnation (the non-Jews) is deserved, because if the Jews are of the substance of God, as we have seen above

(122) We will notice these reincarnations of women in bodies of men. This is how the rabbinical authors explain the morals against nature of certain depraved people: these feel, they say, awakeningto bring into them their Soul, which is feminine, Also the Kabbalists of all
At times they were full of indulgence for this crime, or the ancients
The laws of Christianity, in accordance with the law of Moses, punished with burning at th

(123) Treatise Sanhedrin, folios 67 and 107. This passage, one of the most odious of the Talmud, had it destroyed-On several occasions; he always and reestablished by the rabbis. See above, note 121, the main references.
references relating to these transmigrations of Souls.

(124) Reschith Choklmä, folio 37 b; Sepher Zeror ha-Mar, folio 27 b;

Bachai, 34 and 1715 Maschmia Jeschüa, fol. 19, col 4; Rosch ha Chann, folio 17 a.

Suiten ne ee ni en - above, the non-Jews, themselves, are of the substance of the demon and their Soul is similar to that of the basest animals (125).

Here we touch on another side of the Pharisaic doctrine, borrows no longer from the philosophical conceptions of Chaldea, but to the old Hebrew national pride. The Pharisees, having adopted the Chaldean theories on the invisible, had accompanied them-Mocd&es In the Jewish manner, retaining for Israel its role of chosen people and the promises of universal domination. These great atheists had only humanized the role assigned to the Hebrews by Providence, transforming the Messiah into a triumphant temporal, and substituting the primacy given to Israel by the knowledge of the true religion, a supposed ethnic superiority than on other peoples. Now, if religious primacy imposed Israel has the obligation to be just to non-Jews (called & later know, they too, the God of Moisc), the belief A an ethnic superiority excited, on the other hand, the Jews. Not to see in other men only inferior beings, tolerable when-that they humbly served the nation, criminals when they claimed to be equal to it. By giving the Jews the Talmud, the The Harisians put in their hearts, not only the will to do the conquest of the world, materially and by human means, still felt that they were predestined to his domination by their superior origin, the bestial origin of other men predestining them only to servitude.

The Talmud abounds in predictions about what will happen in the end times, when the King-Messiah will come who will "crush the non-Jews under the wheels of his chariot." There will then be a great war during which two-thirds of the peoples perished. The Jews, victors will take seven years to burn the weapons of the vanquished. These will submit to the Jews and make great promises to them. sents, but King Messiah will not accept the tribute of the Christians, which must be completely exterminated. All the treasures of the peoples will pass into the hands of the Jews, whose wealth will be without measure: the treasures of the King-Messiah will be so vast that keys which will be used to lock him up will form the charge of three hundred packhorses; as for the simple Jews, the least of them will receive two thousand eight hundred slaves. After the extermination of the Christians, the eyes of other peoples will be opened: they will ask-will wear conciseness and the dress of proselytes, and the whole world will will be more populated than Jews. Then the earth will produce without labor honey cakes, woolen clothes, and such fine wheat that each grain will be as large as the two kidneys of the largest big bull (126).

(125) Schefa Tal, folio 4; Schefa ha-Nechammä, folio 221, col, 4; Jalgüt Chad., folio 154 b.

|
1
I)
4
3
|
|
E,

m of the in

We wanted to report these fables and predictions - which

Er 5 bear in the Tahnud the name of Aggades (stories) ———— because R\ that they serve to measure the intellectual decline that the con—ı 'Pharisee qu@te inflicted on the Jewish nation, and also because they Allow us to understand the atmosphere of delirious pride and thirst for domination in which Israel has lived for centuries. We

2 we will now approach the Hallakhoths, or “sentences” of the 1% Taimud, who formulate in short sentences precepts and 'The teachings which have been and still are those of the Synagogue
I in all countries, and which explain how the Jewish soul is—.
came a compound of burning hatred and atrocious perfidy against everything that is hereditary is foreign, and particularly against the Christians.

' tions,

In. - Bachai, folio 168; Sanhedrin, folio 101 a and b; Maschmia Jeschüa, folios
Er 49 a and 65 b.; Pesachim, folios 118 b and 119 a; Bachai, folio 72 a; Jebam—moth, folio 24 b; Aboda Zarah, folio 3 b. Etc. etc.

|

ie

u

CHAPTER IX

Some precepts of Jewish morality

OUR designate the non-Jew, the Talımud uses the word goi (plural: goim), and the Jews are never lacking, & when we criticize them for the advice they give & rö]| 1'Cgard des goim, to say that they designate by these words the pagans, and not at all the Christians or the Muslims. But this explanation cannot be accepted, since the TalMud himself takes care to presume: "the one who is not

.« cjrconeis is a foreigner, and foreigner and pagan are syno"nyms" (127). It is therefore understood that what follows applies to all non-Jews in general; we will see later that Christians are the object of special curses.

The Talimud, having established as a law that the Jews came out of the substance of God, while non-Jews are from that of the demon, precise as follows this distinction: "The Jews are more more pleasing to God than the Angels" (128), so that if someone comes to slap one, "the crime is as great as if one blows"flaced the divine Majesty"; this is why "a goi who strikes a "Jew deserves death" (120). This sanction is just, explains the "'Talınud, because there is certainly a difference between all "things; plants and animals could not exist without "the care of man, and, just as men are sup"Laughing at animals, the Jews are superior to all peoples "of the earth" (130). "Those are only of the seed of "Detail" (131); so that, "if the Jews did not exist, there would not be "would have no blessing on earth, no ray of sunshine, nor “rain, and the people could not subsist” (132).

All rabbis agree to recognize non-Jews a purely animal nature. Rabbi Moisc ben Nachman, Rabbi Raschi, Rabbi Abravanel, Rabbi Jalqfit, Rabbi Menachem, the comparent in turn to dogs, donkeys and pigs, not by manner of insults, but by studied comments and with the intention scientist: "The Jewish people are worthy of eternal life, but "other peoples are like donkeys," concludes Abrawanel (133); "You Jews are men, but the

(127) Traite Berach., folio 47 b.; treatise Gittin, folio 7o a; Abodka Zaralı, folio 26 b.

128) Chällin Treatise, folio 91 b.

in Trait & Sanhedrin, folio 58 b.

(130) Sepher Zeror ha Mar, folio 107 b.

(131) Trait@ Jebammoth, folio 98 a; treatise Kethub., folio 3 b.

(132) Jebammoth, folio 63 a; Bachai, folio 153 b; etc.

(133) How. of Hos. IV, folio 230, col. 4.

"other peoples are not men, since their souls
"come from the unclean spirit, while the souls of the Jews pro-
"come from the holy spirit of God," explains Rabbi M&nachem (134); this is also the conclusion of Rabbi Jalgät, who says: "The "Only Jews should be called men, but the goyim, coming "of the unclean spirit, have the right only to the name of pigs" (135).

To illustrate this rule with an anecdote, the Talmud tells us tells the story of the adventure of the famous Rabbi Ben-Sira, who, at the time of the Captivity of Babylon, was taken in great friendship by Nebicadnct-
The king gave him a thousand proofs of his favor and believed that he was the king.
To be nice to him by proposing his own daughter to him; but Ben Sira, standing up proudly, said to him: "Learn, king, that I am "a child of men, and not an animal" (136). The daughter of a king is, in fact, from the Talmudic point of view, only a female dog or a sow a little more remarkable than the others; a Jew degrade by accepting her as his wife.

On this capital difference between the Jew, who is a man, and the non-Jew, who is an animal, rests tort morality on EE
The Pharisees, who wrote it, could not abolish everything remembered the law of Moses and the formal precepts by which the Hebrew legislator ordered justice to his people and kindness towards one's neighbor. But, thanks to the distinction made higher. The Pharisees were able to say that the Moses' thought when he understood by "the neighbor" non-Jews,
The charitable precepts of Moses therefore retained their value when it was about being fair to a Jew or helping him;
but they could not apply to a goi, towards life or good of which the Jew has no more duties than if this goi had the appearance of a dog or a donkey. Yet the wrath of God does not weigh-she neither on donkeys nor on dogs, while "the hatred of Jehovah has spread among the goyim” (137).

all cruelties; for why love what Jehovah hates?...
It is therefore to the Goim in general that the Talmud applies the first following cepts: “You shall show them no favor” (138);
"It is forbidden to have pity on those who have no reason-his" (139); "It is not fitting for a just man to be merciful-gods to the wicked" (140); "You will be pure with the pure and perverts with perverts" (141). Let no one say that the goim

(134) Commentary on the Pentat., folio In72%

(135) Jalgüt Reübeni, folio ı0 b.

(136) Sepher Ben Sira, folio 8

(137) Aboda Zarab, folio 4a; treatise Sab., folio 89 a.

(138) Trait& Jebammoth, folio 23 a; ct Piske Tosaphot a. I.
(139) Trait€ Sanhedrin, folio 92 a.

(140) Commentary on the 1st Book of Kings XVII, 14.

(141) Baba Bathra, folio 123 a; Bechorath, ı3 b.

ER 2

E57

Donkey

may not be perverse, and even be benevolent: it does not They are not allowed to be righteous, explains the Talmud. And even,
"if they do good, if they give alms, if they practice
"Mercy, we must hate them more and blame them for this “To sin, because they do it out of vanity” (142).

However, experience had already taught the editors of these sentences that it was imprudent to apply them in a manner too open, the goim sometimes showing some bad hudying to see themselves treated like this... So the Talınud takes care to com-supplement this teaching with a recommendation of hypocrisy.
"Man must always be cunning in the fear of God," says he (143); "let us therefore greet the goi to be at peace with him, to become agreeable to him and avoid annoyances" (144). And Rabbi Bachai adds (145): "Hypocrisy is permitted in this sense
"Let the Jew be polite to the wicked, let him honor the latter "and tell him: I love you." But Bachai is careful to specify: "This-

"to fear; otherwise, it is sin" (146). To better deceive the gossips the Jew can even visit their sick, bury their dead, to do good to their poor; but it must be "to have peace and so that the impious do not harm the Jews" TA.

It would be a mistake to imagine that the Talmud is limited to these general indications on how Jews should act with those who do not belong to me To their race. A host of cases are provided, a series of commandments are given, which, byboth of the fundamental distinction between the Jew-man and the Goi-animal, authorize the Jew to use life as he sees fit and property of the gci, which belongs to him in the same way as a dog, good & to be sold, beaten or killed at will.

Is it, for example, the goods of the Earth?... These goods have &t& give, To man, says the Scripture. Yes, but man is the Jew alone, explains the Talmud. Therefore, the non-Jew cannot possess validly, no more than a wild beast is in pos legitimate session of the forest where she withdraws. As far as one can, in safety of conscience, kill the wild beast and appropriate the foret, from mönıc one can tucr or chase the goi and appropriate his good. "The integrity of a non-Jew is like a thing abandoned-

(142) Baba Bathra, folio 10 b. (This teaching of the Talmud expliwhat could be the atrocious hatred with which the Jews have always pursued Benevolent beings, to whom the human soul is naturally inclined and respectter, the Sisters of Charity for example.)

.(143) Treatise Berachoth, folio 17 a.

(144) Ibid, and treatise Gittin, folio 61 a.

(145) Sepher Cad ha-kemach, folio 30 a.

(146) Tbid.

(147) Tra:ts Gittin, folio Gr a. (This passage of the Talmud must always Be present in mind when we hear talk of relief, of foundations of legitimacy or of liberality from Jewish billionaires).

pe

"ade; its true possessor is the Jew who will seize it “first” (148).

This is justice, say Rabbi Albo and some others, "for God "gave the Jews power over the wealth and lives of all "the peoples" (140); so that "if a goi steals, even less

Jew to take at will the goods of the goi, because, where it is written: "You shall not wrong your neighbor," we do not read: "You shall not harm a Jew" (151). This is why a Jew can only be accused of theft if he robs another Jew; if he he robs a goi, he only takes his own property. It is that the Talmud expresses when it shows Rabbi Aschi saying To his serquicker: "bring me these grapes if they belong to a goi, but don't touch them if they are the property of a Jew" (152).

This sovereign power of what is Jewish over what is not extends even to the animals of the Jew. The Talmud says, in fact: "If a Jew's ox strikes a Jew's ox, the Jew will be free; "but if a Jew's beef harms a Jew's beef, the Jew "will have to pay the Jew all the damage, because God has measured the earth "and he delivered the goim to Israel" (158)%

This precept of public law would perhaps be quite difficult to do. admit by the goim if it were brutally exposed to them. Also Does the Talmud advise a number of devious means? to reach the final goal that he assigns to the sons of Israel: the dispossessionsession of goim worldwide. The most recommended of these means is usury. Moses had admitted (DEUTERONOMY, XXIII, 30) the principle of the interest-bearing loan. The Talinud seizes this autoand he interprets it in such a way as to make it a weapon of war against non-Jews: "God has commanded usury to be practiced against “a guy is supposed to lend him money that has interest, "that instead of giving him help we must do him "wrong, even if he is useful to us; while towards a Jew we do not "we must not act in this way" (154). The famous Rabbi Bachai recognizes It is clear that this interpretation of the Scripture is new, but it does not hesitate to rally to the Talmud in preference to the Bible, and he said of the wicked: "His life is in your hand, Jew, A greater reason his money” (155).

It is this doctrine of obligatory usury towards non-Jews which began the enrichment of Israel, and earned it, by con-

---

(148) Baba Bathra, folio 54 b. Choschen Mischpat, 156, ı.
(149) Sepher Haikarim, III, 25; Jalgat Simeoni, folio 8x, col. 3.
(150) Trait€ Jebammoth, folio 47 b.

(151) Treatise Sanhedrin, folio 57 a.

(152) Treatise Baba Kamma, folio 1L13."D.

(153) Treatise Baba Kamma, folio 37 b.

(154) Maimonides, Sepher Mizv., folio 73, 4.

(155) Explanation. of the Pentat., folio 213, 4:

—
' &

tre, so many storms, from the Middle Ages to the present day. Ä cer- N

In recent times, Jewish usury reached proportions which would be improbable if they were not attested by formal documents- mels. We find in particular in the History of the Reformation in Al- Germany, by Janssen, the deliberations of the Diet of Germany of forcing Jews to lend at more than 43% per year, while they here, thanks to the monthly and weekly loan, they arrived at lending at 300, 400 and even 600% per year. Nowadays, these fantastic interests are almost affected by Jewish usury in Russia, Romania, in Austrian Poland. The treaty Baba Mezia insists a lot on this necessity of usury, and he recommends to the Jew to do, in his family, usurious loans to his children, so that they may "enjoy the taste of usury" (156) and get used to good time to practice it.

"At the time when Philip III of Spain was about to to free his country from the Jews by driving them out en masse, the famous Rabbi Abravanel, the kingdom's finance minister, tried to to reconcile to his brothers the indulgence of the king, by enriching the Talmud of comments in the taste of this one: "Among the Foreigners "towards whom it is permissible for us to practice usury, it is not necessary "not understand Christians, because they are not foreigners- "gers in the eyes of our heavenly Perc" (157). But this hypocrisis having had no success, Abravanel, taking refuge in Venice, de- declared that he had given a deliberately false interpretation of the Almud excepting the Christians from the law of usury, which he had only proposed to allow the Jews to remain in peace in Spain, and that he rallied deep down to teaching traditional of the Synagogue (158). The learned rabbi had, it was sees, uses & widely of the permission of bypocrisy that the Talmud gave him.

Besides usury, the Talmud also recommends, against non-Jews, all the varieties of fraud and theft. Has a goi lost an object or a purse? The Jew must seize it, because it is &writes: "It is forbidden to give back to the goi what he has lost; he who "give back to the god what he has lost will not find favor with God (159). Rabbi Raschi believes that “returning to a god what he has lost "it is to esteem the impious as equal to the Israelite" (160), it is to sin by consequent. "Whoever returns to a non-Jew something lost commits "a sin, since it strengthens the power of the impious" (161), says Maimonides. And Rabbi Jerucham adds: "If a goi possesses a

(156) Baba Mezia, folio 75 a.

(157) Abravanel, Commentary on Deuteronomy, folio 72 a.

(158) Abravanel, Maschmia Jeschna.

(159) Treatise Sanhedrin, folio 76 b.; Baba kanıma, folio 113 b; Sepher Mizvot Gaddol, folio 132, col. 3.

(160) Tractate Sanhedrin, 1. c.

(161) Jad Chaz. hil Gez.

From Per h

"note from a Jew, attesting that he lent money to this Jew, "t
"Let the Jew who finds his ticket lose his ticket.
"must not return it to the g0i, because his brother's obligation in "Israel stopped the moment he himself found the note. If this-"while the Jew who found the note wanted to return it to the goi, he
"You have to stop him by saying to him: If you want to sanctify the name “God’s, do it with what belongs to Him!” (162).

Advice in perfect harmony with all the morals of the Talmud, Since the goi has no right to property, which does not belong only to Jews. A Jew who borrows money from a Jew therefore only receives one's own good, and there is abuse when the goi then demands restitution from him. Now, to provide the goi with the means of obto hold restitution is to steal from the Jew, since he, in the name of his morality, owes nothing. Rabbi Jerucham is therefore right, to the point of Talmudic view, when he says that the one who found the note must to repay the amount himself, if he insists that the goi touthat his belief... But what clarity this rabbinical exegesis throws on the morality of the Jews in matters of borrowing, and as one exadds the fruitful raids to which the @missions, dear to the Jewish High Bank!

Same precepts in commercial matters: "It is permitted",

"to deceive by fraud, but if you sell something to your "neighbor (i.e. To a Jew) or if you buy something "you are not allowed to deceive him" (163). And it is Offers several examples, borrowed from the lives of the greatest Talmudic doctors. Thus the famous Rabbi Samuel, having met a man who possessed a fine gold nacon, convinced him that it was only in yellow copper and bought it from him for four drachmas

(2 ir. 80); he still took care to steal a drachma from him by paying (164). My proceeds with Rabbi Cahana, who, having bought one hundred and twenty barrels of wine a goi, made him believe that he did not had received only a hundred, and paid only that amount. No less subtle, another rabbi had sold palm trees to a goi, and this one-he had carefully counted them; the Jew sent his servant at night-tick trim the trunk of the palm trees saying: "the goi knows
"He knows the number, but he doesn't know its length."

Now let's talk about the mistakes that the goi can make.
his own disadvantage in closing a deal, Rabbi Moses expressly says: "If, in making an account, the goi has "deceived, let the Jew say: I know nothing about it! But I do not advise "not to mislead the goi, for he might well commit.

(162) Nethib, IV,
(163) Trait€ Baba Mezia, folio 61 a; Treatise Bechoroth, folio 13 b.
(164) Feature € Baba kamma, folio 11322.

—— drank.

——
.

|

"to be mistaken on purpose, in order to test the Jew" (165). Impossible to be more careful in dishonesty. As we understand, after that, let old Rabbi Brentz write: "If Jews have "traveled a whole week, and that they deceived the Christians “Let them assemble on the right hand and on the left on the Sabbath and boast-
"proud of their skill in saying: We must tear the heart from the
"goim and knock out the best of Christians" (166).

to exercise some authority over the goim, this authority must be ınise in the service of Israel. This is how Jewish magistrates must to make sure that their brothers win their case, whatever the bad situation in which they would have put themselves. This is what the The Talmud expresses this passage: "If a Jew has a lawsuit against "a non-Jew, you will give victory to your brother, and you "You will say to the foreigner: This is what our law wants! If the laws of the country "are favorable to the Jews, you will still give A the advantage your brother and you will say to the stranger: Thus wills your law | "But, when neither of these cases exists, it is necessary to turn- "lie the stranger with intrigues until the Jew has "wins his cause" (167). Rabbi Akiba, to whom we owe this precept, added that care must be taken not to make public the denial of justice, so that the Jews are not discredited.

If this were the only reason for access to functions- judicial and administrative tions or, in all countries, refuses for the Jews, it would be more than enough.

(165) Sepher Mizvoth Gaddol.
(166) Judenbalg, 21.
(167) Treatise Baba Kamnmıa, folio 113 a.

CHAPTER X

Other precepts of Jewish morality

the same fundamental distinction between the Jew-man and the Goi-animal, which has already been used to put the property of non-Jews at the disposal of Israel, serves equally-ie lies to give the Jew the right of life and death over the goi. This is what Maimonides professes, in the following terms- vans: "The defense: You shall not kill!" means that it does not

"You must not kill a son of Israel; now, the goyim and the heretics "are not sons of Israel" (168). Therefore, they can be killed with Serenit® as long as you want it. Micux again, It is a duty to do so when it can be done without danger, because it It is said: "The most honest among the idolaters must be killed" (169) and again: "If one pulls a goi out of the pit in which he is "fallen, one keeps a man in idolatry" (170). Maimonides specifies: "It is forbidden to have pity on an idolater when one "must not save him" (171).

Similar is the teaching of all the doctors of the Talmud and notably Abravanel. The latter expressly ordered "to hate, to despise and annihilate" (172) anyone who does not belong to the Synagogue or separates from it. "If a heretic falls into a "pit," it is said elsewhere, "we do not remove it; if a staircase
"is in the pit, we take it out and say: I do it so that my
"Don't go down there! If a stone was on the hole, we
"I do this again, so that my beast
"cannot pass through it" (173). Finally, the Talmud finds this formula, in which the barbaric thrill of the ancients revives Molochist Jews, and which perfectly explains ritual crimes,

, so frequent in the history of Israel: "He who makes blood flow

"the goim offer a sacrifice to God" (174).

The merit of wanting to kill a goi is great enough to Let us excuse anyone who makes a mistake and kills a Jew out of inadvertence.
In fact: "He who wants to kill an animal and who, by mistake, kills

(168) Jad Chag., hilch Rozeach and hilch Melachim.

(169) Aboda Zara, folio 26 b; Masech, Sopharim, Perelc ı5.

(170) Aboda Zara, folio 20 a.

\171) Jad Chaz., hilch Aboda Zara. (This prescription is so exact-applied by the Jews that one would be hard pressed to cite a single one case of Christian rescue operated by a son of Israel.)

(172) Rosch Emmünnä, folio 9 a.

(173) Aboda Zara, folio 26 b.

(174) Jalküt Simeoni, ad Pentat. folio 245, col, 3; Midderach Bami-

.debar rabbä, p. 21. (The blood of thousands of tortured Christian children ritually by the Jews illustrated this sentence of the Talmud, since (the ritual crime of Blois, in 1071, up to the recent crime of Kieff).

n
E

"a man, or one who wants to kill a goyet who, by mistake, kills

1: "A Jew is not guilty and does not deserve to be punished" (175).

But the goi who voluntarily kills a Jew is "also guilty that if he had killed the whole world" (176). A goy who blasphemes,

| abuses a woman, or kills another man, must be considered com- .
innocent as long as he becomes a Jewish prosecuting attorney. But if he has killed

“shall not covet thy neighbor’s wife,” but the wife of the next one is the wife of the Jewish scholar. The most learned doctors,

Rabbi Raschi, Rabbi Bachai, Rabbi L&vy ben Gerson, agree
| to proclaim that there is no adultery 1A or there is no ma-
|

1 a Jew, it matters little whether he be circumcised: he must be put &
-f death (177).

j If the goods and life of the Jew are at the disposal of the Jew, one
"You can be sure that the latter is not required to be more reserved in this which concerns the wives of non-Jews. Indeed, Moses said: "You
I

'

riage; but the goim, a simple variety of animals, could not be valid-to practice marriage, which is of divine institution. It is also The opinion of Rabbi Maimonides, who concludes: "It is permissible to abuse "of a non-Jewish woman" (178). Thus the Talmud is full of the most licentious, and even the most repugnant, stories in the-which "illustrious rabbis (Rabbi Eliezer, Rabbi Nachman, Rabbi Akiba, Rabbi Meir, Rabbi Tarphon) play an impossible role A “app-wear here, but which earns them the @gaillards lodges of the Synagogue (179).

There is better, and the Talmud formally authorizes the practices against nature. "A man," he said, "can make his wife do anything
"whatever he pleases, as with a piece of flesh from the "butcher, which can be eaten roasted or boiled, depending on how it is prepared- _ "fere". And he cites in support the sentence of a rabbi to whom a - wife complained about her husband's sodomitical habits: "My “Daughter, I cannot help you, for the Law has sacrificed you- y mud that sc finds this doctrine; it still appears in the Edition of Warsaw, in 1864 (trait C Nedariın, folio 20 b.), and still made | part of the teaching of the Synagogue. Finally, the Talmud con- ! ; contains passages of such obscenity and such an odious character that we cannot reproduce them here other than in Latin (180).

——..,

(175) Treatise Sanhedrin, folio 78 b.

(176) Treatise Sanhedrin, folio 37 a.

(177) Treatise Sanhedrin, folio 71 b.

(178) Jad Chaz, hilch Melachim.

(179) See in particular: Treatise Jommä, folio 18 b; treatise Aboda Zara,

+ folio 17a; treatise Quiddüschin, folio 8ı a; trait & Sanhedrin, folio 22 b; treatise Nazir, folio 223; treatise Sotä, folio 10; treatise Mocd Kattän, folio 18; etc.

| (180) Treatise Niddä, folio 47 b: Filia 3 annorum et diei unıus, des« ponsatur per coitum; si autem infra 3 annos sit, $erinde est, ac si quis digitum inderet in oculum (ie non est reus laesae virginitatis, guia Si-

This morality obviously gives Jews the right to show themselves- very severe towards Christians, whose religion honors nothing as long as purity. Also, from the first ages of the Talinud, those who wrote it took care to specify that the crimes of murder, sodomy and bestiality were common in the Christian hold and formed the basis of their teaching (181). The Christians They are, moreover, according to the Talmud, simple idolaters (182), to which all the texts which strike must be rigorously applied idolatry. They are even more guilty than other idolaters, because they worship as God an impious and renegade Jew, who has practiced spells (183), and which should be replaced by the name, when we speak of him, by the words: "He whose memory be andantie" (184). This is why Rabbi Raschi cries out, after so many others: "We must slaughter the best among the Christians" (185).

This accusation of idolatry against Christians comes back constantly in the Talmud and applies especially to the Eucharist. If it is a question of renting a house to Christians, the Talmud allows it the Jew to do so, because, he says, "they do not keep their "only carry when one of their own is about to move-

"laugh" (186). Is it Sunday, it is "the feast of idolaters" (187) Rabbi Maimonides, Rabbi Kimchi, and others, improbable genealogies to demonstrate that Christians are doubly idolaters, because worshippers of Jesus of Nazareth and because they are descendants of the idolatrous Canaanites. For example-ple: "The inhabitants of Germany are Canaanites; when "The Canandians fled before Joshua, they retreated into the "country now called Germany" (188).

As for Jesus Christ, we saw above, page 60, com-
How is he spoken of in the Talmud and what place is given to him in it? assigns to hell. The Blessed Virgin Mary is not natural-not treated any better and rabbinical writers do not designate it than by the Epithete ignominieusce of “Charja” (189). The quantity of blasphemies, insults, injurious stories against Christ, the graculum recrescere, sicut oculos tactu digitu ad momentum tantum lacrimatur.)

(181) Aboda Zara, folios 25 bet 26 a; Toosaphot, folios 2a, 4b, 21a; Etc., etc. See also the accusations spread by the messengers of the Sanhedrin, Chapter IV above,

(182) Aboda Zara, folio 2 a.

(182) Aboda Zara, folio 27 b.

er: Aboda Zara, folio 17 a.

185) Commentary on Exodus (Amsterdam edition).

(186) Aboda Zara, folio 2ı a.

(187) Trait& Aboda Zara, folios 6 a, 7b; Raschi: Commentary on this treatise foljio 6 a; Mainnids: Jad Chaz. hilch Aboda Zara;sEtc.

(188) Commentary on Obadj, I, zo.
(189) In Latin, “Stercus”.

Virgin and the Saints, which is found in the Talmud, is, moreover, prodigious. An infamous arsenal was constituted by the writings of the rabbis of the first centuries after Jesus Christ, and then increases from age to age. It is from this arsenal that all the enemies of Christianity, as a famous Jew observes, Bernard Lazare, the organizer of the Dreyfus Affair, in the pas-following wise:

"In the terrible anti-Christianity of the eighteenth century, "but of the Jewish spirit. It should not be forgotten that in the seventeenth " sitcle the scholars, the Erudites, as Wagenseil, as Bartolocci, like Buxtorf, like Wolf, brought out of oblivion the x "old books of Hebrew polemics, those who attacked the "Trinity, the Incarnation, all dogmas and all symbols, with "The Jewish character and the subtlety possessed by these incomparabilities "logicians that the Talımnud trained. Not only did they publish the "doginatic and critical treatises, but they also translated the "slanderous libels, the lives of Jesus, like the Toledot Jeschu, "and the disrespectful legends of the Pharisees of the second century-"key, which we find both in Voltaire and in Parny" (100).

It was after having approved these outrages against Christians that Rabbi Maimonides, the eagle of the Synagogue, concluded: "It is ordained& "to assassinate and throw into the pit of perdition the traitors in of Israel and the heretics, such as Jesus of Nazareth and his followers-"rents" (tor). Before him, the traii&E Aboda Zara had already @dict& (192), that a Jew is always entitled to run after Christians and to kill them with armed hands. As for the Jews who would have the power, because of the functions they hold, they have the imperative duty to make all the Christians To death, under any pretext (193). It is without doubt in the name of these precepts that Israel worked and made himself accepted. know, in Christian countries, political rights and accession To all public functions...

Far from opening these functions to them, prudence would even require that Jews were deprived of a large part of their civil rights. in fact, the training that the Pharisees gave, through the Talmud, to the Jewish people, is such that it is impossible to recognize the Jew equality in many matters. From a judicial point of view, by For example, a Jew's oath should never be taken into consideration deration in a case in which a non-Jew is involved. The reason in is: first, that the Talmud authorizes to consider the goods and the life of the goi as being at the disposal of the Jew; then, that he

um Bu u er Ei

ps Ya ja REUTLINGEN

u 24
d .

---

(100) Bernard Lazare: Anti-Semitism, p. 337-

(192) Folio 4 b.

(193) Jore Deä, 158; Choschen Mi'schpat, 425.

gives the Jew every license to perjure himself, in court or otherwise, to harm the goi.

This Jewish peculiarity was once so well known that the tri-Bunanx only admitted the Jewish oath when it was pro nonce more judaico, that is to say with accompaniment of male-terrible diets which the Synagogue surrounds the performance of a oath between Jews. The intention which dictated this legal prescription It was excellent, but we believe it was not enough. to ensure the sincerity of the oath taken by a Jew. Indeed, the Talmud contains advice and examples such as a son of Israel may, in security of conscience, and after having sworn more Judaico, to convict an innocent Christian or acquit a Jew guilty.

First of all, the Talmud actually states that there is no perjury when the Jew completes his oath with an ultimate restriction, which can completely change its meaning. And he cites the example-next place. Rabbi Jochanan received the confidence of a noble lady of a secret, but he first had to swear not to reveal it. "To the God of Israel, I will not reveal it!" declared the rabbi. Danie believed that he was committing himself to revealing nothing even to God of Israel; or, Rabbi Jochanan had mentally added: "but I I will reveal it to the people of Israel." So that he could reveal the Secret without perjury, an address for which the Talmud highly praises him (194).,, Even simpler was the process of Rabbi Akiba, the second Moses, of whom it is said that he took an oath, while thinking deep down of himself: "this oath is not valid!", <which is enough & to put one's conscience at rest (195). The Talınud authorizes A to act likewise whenever any authority among the goinn, forces a Jew to take an oath. Is a Jew charged with a crime? capital? If another Jew is forced to testify about what he knows about the matter, he has the right to make a false oath, using mental restriction, in order to exonerate his brother (196). A prince Does goi ask a Jew to swear that he will not leave the country? The Jew must think: "Today I will not leave!" The prince Does he demand that the Jew swear never to run away? The Jew says mentally add: "yes, but on such condition!" "t choose an impossible condition (197). In this way, he will be able to leave-to leave the country without perjury.

(194) Trait Aboda Zara, folio 28 a; and treatise € Jommä, folio 84 a. I It is not wrong to point out that Jewish writers 04 Judaizers have always accused the Jesuits of having imagined the use of the restric-after the writing of these two tractates of the Talmud).

(195) CallA Treaty, 2.

(196) Jore Deä, CCXXXII, ı2 and 14.

(197) Hagahoth Aschari.

—

u =

The Talınud takes care, moreover, to add: "All this must not "to be done only in the event that one can fail to keep one's oath without "Let the goim suspect it; if the goim can learn it, It is forbidden, so that the name of JShova is not profane. We understand that such an attenuation is not of a nature to us greatly reassure on the value of the oath taken by a Jew, in court or elsewhere...

As for the precaution of preceding the oath with the maritual prophecies in use In the synagogue, she does not utter any security. Indeed, we must not lose sight of the fact that the Jew is profundamentally convinced that the goi is only an animal, which usurps the appearance and rights of true men. That a goi has been killed, and the Jew can always swear that human blood was not widespread; that a Jew has been robbed, and the Jew can affirm that he has not is nothing – since the Jew alone has the right to enjoy his property and that the goi is only the monetary depository of his own good The only truly effective prescription would therefore be the banlegal obligation to attach the same value to the testimony of the Jew as to the testimony of a Christian, a Muslim, or even a Payen. i

This precaution is all the more necessary since the Synagogue established an annual holiday, Yom Kippur, or Great Atonement, to release in advance all Jews from the oaths they may take to do in the year, even with the intention of keeping them and without res mental tension. On that day, in all countries where there are established the Jews, that is to say, throughout the world, the Hebrew populationthat gathers around the Synagogue; and, at the hour when it appears in heaven the first Star, the Grand Rabbi, or the one who presides the party In its place, proclaims with a resounding voice the following: "That all the values and all the obligations, all the pains "and all the oaths that we vow and swear, since this "Day of Atonement until the same day next year, a be handed over, annihilated, that they be without force and without value. "We want our valleys not to be valleys and our

It is impossible to say more clearly than the Jew's oath is worthless in its own eyes. Why would it have any value?
in the eyes of non-Jews?...

(198) See the Jewish Talmudist, Brussels, 1888, p. 49.

|
N
E
fi

Fe

> u Bahn

D

CHAPTER XI
Current Value of the Talmud

'It is a difficult task to expose to our friends
the Pharisaic doctrine of the Talmud and to show them the dangers that this doctrine poses to our civilization-rn sation. Indeed, even those of us who are ticde and indifferent Christians are, without their knowledge, so penätrös of the teachings of the Church of Christ, that he cannot-to conceive of a religion based on exact moral foundations completely contrary to those which Christianity has consecrated.
religious doctrine, it seems to them, must have as its aim the culture of the good instincts of the ass and personal salvation through the practicetique of virtues. Human fantasy may well have, according to the clmats, embroider variations on this divine theme; she has none modify the essence. This is what, by instinct, many of our compatriots are willing to believe; and their erroneous opinion is an involuntary homage paid to Christianity, since it is he who taught them to believe that a religion might not have Good as its goal.

Yet there are in ancient civilizations, like us
As we recalled at the beginning of this work, religions having as their but Evil, honored notably in the form of Cruelty and Lust. There are even, even today, a certain number of these dark religions, practiced especially in Africa and in the most remote parts of Asia. But what we are available to admit when it comes to humans from three thousand years ago years, or savages from the Congo and Polynesia, we hesitate.
believe possible Jews — Jews camped among us, mixed with our public and private life, existing in our civili-modernization of professions such as magistrate, of officer, civil servant, lawyer, doctor, or even conınergant and industrial, professions that our traditional conceptions-tional do not allow us to separate from an ideal of devotionment to the public good, or at least of honor and probity.

It takes an effort of will to understand that this people, which penetrates us and externally assimilates itself to us, to a law moral and religious which is not only foreign to that of Christian peoples, but which is their negation, their contradiction permanent, which says "&zorze!" JA where the Christian law says "you you shall not kill," "steal!" 1A where she says "you shall steal!"

point," "lie!" JA ol she says "you will not make false t£- testimonies".
Conviction is all the more difficult to lose when an equi-evokes exists. The law of Christ is only the complement of the law of Moisc, and the Jews, from the Deicide until our days, have not

Van ee ua AN 9 4

does not cease to publicly claim to have moldy teachingsques. If they do it rightly, how can we admit the perversity fundamental to their beliefs, since the source is indisputable-ment pure?... This reasoning has often troubled even the anti-Jews most indignant at the doctrines contained in the Talmud (190).

It is to definitively remove this ambiguity that We
We have preceded our reproduction of the Talmudic texts by a historical summary of the Pharisaic sect, which wrote the Talmud. Those who have done us the honor of reading us now know-holding that there is nothing in common between the law of Moses, religion ancient religion of the Jewish people, and Talmudic law, modern religion of this same people. To the law of justice and love that the prophets-secular times of the secret Pharisaic society substituted little A little a doctrine of hatred and iniquity. And, since the Deicide, It is this law of iniquity alone which is preached, taught and revered in the Synagogues of the ancient people of God.

We do not, however, hide from ourselves that our task is not not yet completed, because there are still two objections that can be raised make us.

The first objection is that the 'Talmud, for abominable whatever it is, is an ancient monument, which can no longer be surrounded by the Synagogue than a traditional veneration, exempt of any concern for the application of its doctrines; in this case, the people Tuif would not necessarily be perverted by the Talmud, nor conestablished by him as this permanent and bitter enemy of all nations.

The second objection is that, even if the modern Synagogue adopts all the teachings of the Talmud and subordinates to it the moral formation of the Jewish people, it is always possible & invirtuous individuals to correct the teaching received, and, without breaking with Judaism, to conform their conpublic and private conduct to the rules of probity and honor.

In this last chapter we will examine the one and the other three of these objections.

(199) The Jews excel, moreover, in playing on this ambiguity. It is as Mr. Salon:on Reinach, in his study on ritual crime, says that it is impossible for the Jews to commit it, "because the law of Moses forbade them to eat blood, even that of animals. Salomon Reinach is a learned Talmudist: he knows, therefore, that Ja Synagogue subordinates the Bible to the Talmud, by virtue of the text "the The Bible resembles water, the Mishnah resembles wine, and the Gemara resembles aromatic v matic." Now the Talmud, as we saw in the previous chapter, allows and even recommends ritual crime. Mr. Salomon Reinach is not embarrassed for so little. It is said that the vast majority of his readers will not consult the Talmudic text which destroys his thesis, and he speaks only the law of Moses, which is known to all. Once again, '&quivoque will have done its job.

"

rm
>
7
you
w
€

rs

B

That the Talmud is, for modern Jews, something venerated because it is ancient, but worm-eaten and outdated, it is which cannot be seriously supported. The testimonies abound, on the contrary, which prove that contemporary Jews have for the Talmud, its morals and its teachings, the same res- absolute respect than the Jews of the Middle Ages. We have already mentioned (chapter v1) the organ of reform Judaism, the Archives Is- Raelites, declaring: "As for the Talmud, we recognize its "absolute superiority over the Bible of Moses" (200). We could also quote the organ of conservative Judaism, Univers Is- Raelite, declaring, through the voice of the great rabbi R. Trenel, direc- Director of the Rabbinical Seminary (201): “The Talmud had everything "time of violent detractors and passionate apologists. “For two thousand years it has been, and still is, an object "of vendration for the Israelites, OF WHOSE RELIGIOUS CODE IT IS. "On the other hand, it has often served as a text for renegades and others "slanderers of our cult, who have drawn from this arsenal of “areas to fight us”, The two major trends that Dartagent Judaism are therefore agreed to Elevate on a pie- destal the Talmud and its doctrine. As for the Zionists, who pre- seek the restoration of a Jewish state, preferably in Palestine, They are frenetic Talmudists who pride themselves on being so.

Here then is the first objection dismissed: the Talmud, which ri- Dieulise the traditional God of Israel; the Talmud, which restores to us the occultist and pantheistic thought of the Pharisees; the Talmud, which preaches hatred of non-Jews and permits fraud, theft, Murder and perjury: the Talmud is still the religious code of the Jews; it is he who is taught in the Hebrew seminaries and that we comment on the saniedi At the Synagogue, it is he whose molds the souls of Jewish children. This explains many things...

The second objection remains: an honest Jew can always, leaning on his conscience, resisting the perfidious suggestions of the Talmud and act only according to the laws of probity and honor.

We do not absolutely deny this possibility. But we know that such independence from the law re- religious of Israel would be of a nature to create the most serious Jew difficulties and put him in real danger.

It should not be forgotten, in fact, that the Jewish people, within each of the countries he inhabits is grouped into a certain number of communities, much more homogeneous and more strongly organized-like him, the advantage of being doubled by a nationality. These communities undoubtedly have a religious purpose; but they assume also the task of maintaining, despite dispersion, national unity

(200) See above note 72
(201) Univers Isradlite, June 1867, P. 452.

ee

Or URN EL LT Ei a ir ae

EEE in enge

FE rn u ui in

- has
nn

Jewish nationality, and their administration consequently has a character-exceptionally strong authority. The Jew who shirks or-This authority is considered both as an aposstate from a religious point of view and as a traitor from a religious point of view national. The Synagogue immediately excommunicated him Jewish, which is the most severe that has ever been dictated by a religious sect.

The Talmud (202) has regulated the cases where this excommunication must be pronounced and the consequences it entails. A tif may be excommunicated for resisting the orders of his rabbi, for contempt for religious observances, for pursuing your actions against another Jew before a non-Jewish court, for testimony, even scrupulously truthful, brought against a coreligionist, etc. Excommunication has three degrees. The third and last involved death by stoning, inflicted by the entire Jewish community; but we understand that this custom-me, the application of which is not without examples. At the time of the Princes of the Captivity, has fallen into desuetude in the current state-of Christian and Muslim legislation. It is therefore not Today, there is no question of anything other than the first degree of excommunic-tion, or Niddui, and of the second, or H£rem.

The Niddui has the effect of separating from the world the one who is | struck; no one can approach him within four ells|

if he dies without being reconciled with the Synagogue, a stone must be placed on his coffin to indicate that he deserved to be lapid&; in this case, no one, even his parents, has the right to accompany him-loincloth At his grave or to wear his mourning. The Niddui is pronounced. for a period of thirty days, and may be extended for two equal periods. After the ninetieth day, the H&rem (or great excommunication) is pronounced against the rebel, amidst the sound of trumpets and the smoke of candles extinct (203).

(202) Jore D£a, 334, 43, and Sepher Reschith Chokhmä.

(203) Here is the formula of the Herem: “That X., son of X., be excommunicated-
"denied according to the judgment of the Lord of lords in the two tribu"nals, in the superior court and in the inferior court; let it be "in the excommunication of the holy superiors and in that of the Sera-"phins and Ophanines, and in the excommunication of the great and the small-
"your communities! What great misfortunes, great and terrible ma-
"Ladies swoop down on him! Let his house be the abode of dragons |
"Let her star be darkened in the storms and let her be furious,
"cruel and terrible against him! Let his corpse be thrown to the ferocious beasts-
"These and to the serpents! (Let his enemies and his adversaries rejoice
"of him! Let his gold and his silver be given to others and let his "sons be delivered into the power of his enemies! May his descendants have "his day in horror! Let him be cursed by the mouth of Adirion and “of Achtaricl. by the mouth of Saidalphon and of Hadraniel, by the mouth

JAR

The H£rem forbids all communication with the excommunicated;

'no one can render him a service or accept one from him; his wife and her children must be separated from him; his property must-wind be taken away from him; his partner, upon his death, must be abandoned® as fodder for the wild beasts. The entire Jewish community must to work to ensure the Herem's full effectiveness.

Simple formulas, one might be tempted to say, and that it is hardly possible, in the current state of the legislation, to transform into realities.

Well! one would be mistaken in saying that. The Herem is not nac&, not only of a rigorous quarantine, but also to be stripped of his possessions and separated from his wife and children children. This is true not only in Eastern countries and in some Russian and Austrian provinces (where the population Jewish is very dense and where the power, Christian or Muslim, is poorly equipped to intervene), but also in Western Europe, in France itself. Those who doubt it need only study the case of the rabbi of Tours, Henri Brauer, to whom Mr. Abbe Vial has devoted an interesting 120-page brochure (204).

Born in Poland in 1866, brought to Alsace at a young age, raised from the rabbinical seminary of Metz, Henri Brauer went to France and held various positions as rabbi, in Rougemont-le-Château (near Belfort), Lamarche (Vosges), Dunkirk and Clermont-Ferrand. Naturalized French in 1898, he became rabbi of Tours, where there is a large Jewish community. Certificates of all the rabbinical luminaries of France and abroad cer-
They praised his exceptional Talmudic knowledge.

This science had undoubtedly not succeeded in making Henri Brauer a dishonest man. Indeed, at the end of 1000, he had the opportunity to win a large sum and to render a service to someonecoreligionist luster, and he did neither because his conscience forbade him.

"from Antifiel and Patchiel, through the mouth of Seraphia and Saganzael,
"through the mouths of Michadl and Gabriel, through the mouths of Raphael and "Mecharetiel! May he be excommunicated by the mouth of Zafzavif and by "that of Hafhavif, who is the great God, and by the mouth of Yortak the "Great Chancellor! May he be devoured like Kore and his gang! Qufil "be strangled like Ahithophel! Let his soul depart from him with fear "and terror! May his leprosy be like Ghiesi's leprosy! May he fall and "Do not rise again! Let him not be buried in the tomb of Israel."
"Let his wife be delivered to others and that after his death other vi-
"wind with her! Let X., son of X. remain in this excommunication, "Let her be his inheritance! On me, however, and on all Israel “Peace and blessing from the Lord descend! Amen.”

(204) The Betrayal of the Grand Rabbi of France, Paris, 1904, at Sa-waete.

a nn ie nn ———

Pr

)
|
i

ul

The incident occurred under these conditions. An ar-Quebusier from Tours, Mr. Jules Meunier, had invented a rifle war offering exceptional advantages in lightness, range, in initial speed of the bullet and in speed of the shot. He had imagined to sell this rifle for 200,000 francs to the traitor Dreyfus, whose pro4 c&s, then under revision, fascinated the country. Dreyfus would have gave this rifle to France and, by this fine gesture, dona valuable argument to the supporters of his innocence. On the 200,000 francs to receive, the inventor offered to Rabbi Brauer 50,000 francs, on condition of putting him in touch with Dreyfus and to support the negotiation (205).

"Unbelievable fact! This Rabbi Brauer was anti-Dreyfusard, (206):
he flatly refused the requested intervention and the fifty thousand francs offered and manifested to Mr. Meunier, in two successive letters,
The opinion that Dreyfus was a traitor was justly condemned.

Furious at this setback, the gunsmith filed a complaint with the pres-tooth of the Jewish Community of Tours, Mr. L&on Levy, who seized of the affair of the Grand Rabbi of France, who was then the celebrates Zadoc Kalın, who played the role in the Dreyfus Affair of a first-rate director. On January 2, 1948, the Rabbi Braiter received notification of the "strong displeasure" of the Chief Rabbi of France. On the 26th of the same month, the president of the Jewish community of Tours warned Brauer that his treatment would no longer be guaranteed from the following month. The rabbi en-He remained at his post despite the war declared on him by everyone.
the rabbinical hierarchy.

However, the Herem had struck Brauer's guilty head, and his formidable formula had to be followed by effect: Bauer had to
to be stripped of his office and his private property, driven from his home and separated from his wife and children.

In the book of Abbot Vial we will find all the proofs of-sirables on what followed. A troop of Jews, led by a well-known Hebrew bankrupt in Tours, invaded one night the that Brauer was held at gunpoint, took possession on his small fortune: 14,500 francs in securities, cash and ar-gentry. He was left with 80 cents in all.

Brauer filed a complaint: but it was then in the middle of the ministry Dreyfus, and the thieves, all known, were not even worried-yours by the Public Prosecutor's Office.

(205) See in the work of Abbé Vial the reproduction of all the letters and official documents exchanged during this negotiation. The do-
The author's overabundant cumentation has not allowed Jewish luminaries called into question no kind of rectification.

(206) This consistency is perhaps explained by the fact that these parents, merchants in Alsace during the war of 1870, had been shot by the Prussians.

WET BESEE WER

Be u ne

|

= — mn ne

Eat

A few days later fell the holiday of Yom Kippur, or Grand Pardon: at the moment where the rabbi officiated, one of the assistants-tants accused him in front of the whole synagogue of having eaten pork in a hotel in Tours. Brauer had no choice but to appeal to the the hotelier's testimony (who has since attested that he had never seen): they threw themselves on the rabbi, they beat him and they stripped him half naked at the door of the Synagogue.

A second result was obtained: the excommunicated was stripped-of his charge. Three days later, he received notification official.

All that remained was to separate him from his wife and children. There, the ma-Talmudic china failed, because M”* Brauer refused to abandon-give her husband, despite all the requests made to her.
To overcome her resistance, they brought from Jerusalem, where she ha-was biting, the mother of Ms. Braucr, who used all her main vain, and on this point the Islamic authority remained in failure.

The Brauer family, forced to leave Tours, ended up stranded in Paris in dire poverty. Since 1902, the former rabbi had filed a lawsuit legal action before the Council of State against his persecutors and obtained legal aid for this. But influences mysterious exercises are carried out, which indefinitely delay the march of the trial. However, after nine years, At the end of IgII, when it was realized that Brauer and his people, SCCOU-by Catholic charity, would not perish of hunger, we are cida & let the case be judged. The facts were so obvious that the Israelite Consistory of France, presided over by Baron Gustave Rothschild, was condemned; but the influence of the Jews on the ma-French registries are such that the ex-rabbi had to be content with a few thousand francs as damages.

Should we at least conclude that Brauer's tribulations finished? We wouldn't dare believe it. Continuing in front of the Council of State its superiors in the rabbinical hierarchy, the an-former rabbi committed a new crime more serious than that of having refused to collaborate in the rehabilitation of a traitor
now falls under the provisions of the treaty& Aboda Zara: "The Jew who pursues another Jew, or who only has "The intention of having him brought before a Christian tribuna], com-
"commits a mortal sin. He must, without any judgment, be stoned.
"The head of the Synagogue of the country will cast the first "stone on his head. He will be cut off from among the people, because he "has despised the judgment of the Torah, the word of the One God. His "Iniquity shall be upon him, and all Israel shall stone him with stones.
"Let him die! He will see, and he will fear the judgment of the T'hora and "from the Talımud (207)".

---

(207) The Betrayal of the Grand Rabbi of France, Paris, 1004, Savatte.
P. 106 and 107.

ut De

Bi
r

The above suggests that these words are perhaps not & not just empty threats...

We have reported at length on the Rabbi Brauer incident because it is material proof that in France itself, at the beginning of the 20th century, the most odious Talmudic prescriptions are religiously observed by the Jews and that the rabbinical authority has lost none of its power. We see from this incident what dangers a Jew is exposed to remains honest enough to refuse commit an infamy imposed on him by Talmudic law. Should one to be astonished, therefore, at the work of moral corruption and desmaterial construction that the Jewish race is accomplishing around us?

By devoting this study to the sect of the Pharisees and its moral code, the Talmud, we did not aim to preach a savage hatred against the Jewish race; NOTHING IS MORE REMOVED FROM OUR THOUGHT. We wanted, noting the harmful-fundamental nature of the Jewish element, to seek the cause, and we We have come to the conclusion that the Jew, before being a criminal, was a victim: poisoned by the secret society Pharisee, he has saturated himself with her poison, and for twenty centuries already, he disgorges it on the world.

It is therefore not to the Jewish race itself, to this race who gave to the living God patriarchs, apostles and martyrs, that we attack: it is the Jew as the Talınud, this supreme expression of Pharisaic thought, Jew of murder, deceit, thief and murderer.

May this short work make him known as he is and judge as he deserves.

FLAVIEN BRENIER.

RT E = pP Ft Wr De Bar Are NE 6 EEE ee

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Pages

j FOREWORD = . N . . D . . . . . . [} . . . . D . 3

PART ONE

| 1. — THE ANCIENT APOSTASY OF ISRAEL :. » x vv ee. . 7

| II. — The Captivity of Babylon and the Pharisees!. 0. 14
II. — CHRIST AND THE PHARISEES:. . - REN A Ze
IV. — THE JEWISH ORIGIN OF THE ECHTEN PERSECUTIONS
V. — THE RESTORED SANH£DRIN AND THE TALMUD: . oo ee 00.35

Full text of " Rohling's Talmudjude illuminated "

See other formats

I

3 1761 04014 1780

Delitzsch, Franz Julius Rohling's Talmud Jew

illuminated

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2008 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

http://www.archive.org/details/rohlingstalmudju00deliuoft

i illuminated

from i 25

* *
Franz Delitzsch.
*
N g Wrong scale is not good.
. 2 a Ä S̊pr. 20, 23.
N * * >
RR > a 35 3
FI 3 “=

e by N En of the Gegenſchriſt Nobüing≈s
au expanded edition.

+ − * ie

% IU a
Be Dörffling & Franke.
% ' Be

4 % u * 0 N 2 *
* 6 *
− 7 "

5 i ö *
. * *
a2
* 4 " *
3 95
N
. 1 * A
* n Wr ' *

re

5

All rights reserved

* 8

. —.A

Foreword.

After Profeſſor Rohling's counter-writing appeared is, my illumination of his Talmudjuden now as a three-part whole. That he would reply, was ſatvſeſt, and almost as ſatvſeſt, that he ſowed from his incompetence to impartial assessment of the Talmud will not be convinced.

The first part of this paper is devoted to notes to Rohling's retorts. The manner in which which he also glosses over his most blatant mistakes, has my Exceeded expectations.

The second part could be known to him before he counter-writing, but he has no notice of it taken. His counter-writing repeats from the Talmud-Jews not a little, which one in this second part will be refuted.

The third part, which has now been added, leads the dispute-ſt matter in question, from the fragmentation into Details on three general aspects. I show that Rohling is incapable of appreciating the Talmud, because he recognized the national character of the Mosaſic law misunderstands; secondly, that it is a pure fiction if he, the confessor of the infallibility dogma, the Talmud the caricature of the same, that every Rabbi as such infallible, and thirdly, that he is unjustified Know the Talmudic norms for the behavior of the Jews against Gentiles as well as today the Verhold against the Christians beſt decisive. —

When the Vatican Council met in 1869/70, The Abbé's brothers Léman from Lyon built 506 subfcripts of the assembled bishops for a loving greeting to the Israelites, who expressed the wish that after the political divide has fallen, now also the religious May the partition that separates them from the Church fall. The Pope called the brothers when they introduced themselves to him, welcome: “Behold the two priests, who have much Be zealous for the welfare of their people! Yes, my children, You are sons of Abraham, and so am I.” And they entfaying he said: “Yes, it is fitting, yes, it is good, to think of the Israelites some words of admonition and encouragement to judge. Your nation has in the Holy Scriptures wiſe promises of return. When the time of winelese is not there yet, may heaven at least give me some grapes!”

Oh, that Prof. Rohling, when he was discussing the Jewish question, took the word, to the impression of this beautiful episode of Vaticanum would have assumed! The dragon seed of hate, which he has spread, the more abundantly it grows, the more he will close itly fear themselves, because that his “Talmud Jew” is a onefideal, erroneous book, he can, even if before the World but cannot be denied before God in the long run.

Leipzig, Invocavit 1881.
TN

First part:

Illumination of the “Talmud Jew”.

Away you haters, Christ's meaning is to love!
Let Israel, you Christians, love merten!
Precede him, in words and in words
To practice the greatest commandment of the Lord.

If Satan wants to sift you in the sieve of evil,
To strengthen the hand of hatred through passion:
O beware in words and in deeds

To grieve the love of the faithful Savior.

But woe to him who does not let holy anger be felt,
When the mocking brood rises
From nominal Jews, as from nominal Christians.

Their intention is that you should lose your salvation;
Therefore, keep what you have in faithful duty,
That Satan's disciples do not deceive you.

(From the Rheinisch≠Westfälisches Miſſions≠Blatt 1881 No. 3.)

Introduction.

That a book like Rohling's “Talmudjude” (Ed. 6. 1878), which resulted in the renewal of the suspicion and almost amounts to the accusation that the Jews of To save Christian blood gained year after year through murder religious purposes, no fair and equitable representation ſtituſon and assessment of Judaism is to be expected, ſhould, I think, be clear to all those from the outset, which racial hatred has not turned into blind rage.

The Talmud has been in use since Buxtorf the Elder and Wagenſeil of jo fundamentally learned reſearchers like Lightfoot and Schöttgen as a treasure trove for Jewish antiquity and for explanation of the New Testament writings from≠ been dented. For blanks, however, the works of these Men are nonexistent. He merely adheres to Eisenmenger and condenses everything that is annoying, this, compiled from the Talmud, to a fire ſcript which describes the Jews as a detestable nation of–nunced, which in the Talmud a license for murder, perjury, fraud and bestial lewdness. His own church was in great error after this, as ſie the one by Marcus Morinus of all Christianity≠ hostile in the sense of the Council of Trent purified

Talmud text with the remark that he now

*

not only without religious offense, but also with benefit * (non modo eitra impietatem, verum etiam cum fructu) could be read. The passages to which he ſublated his accusations have mostly remained here undisturbed.

Jewish literary history is documented by Zunz, Rapoport, Luzzatto, stone cutter with the assistance of Christian people—teachers, to whom I may count myself, to the science of to the requirements of modern times. This There is no progress for the blank.
non-Talmudic quotations, through which he created his caricature of Talmud Jews completed and increased, are all from Eisenmenger, who spent twenty years of his life to remove dirt and poison from Jewish books, no matter from which period and which author, to er≠
to gather and pile up.

Rohling does not act as one would expect from should expect from a believing Christian. Because apart that he uses a loveless, arrogant, mocking language which does not convince the opponent, but only leads to is capable of causing outrage, he almost completely ignores the fact that Old Testament law, although with all the defects of a Preliminary stage, but equally from divine revelation≠ goes like the New Testament Gospel. That the Jews≠ tum insists on this preliminary stage and ſits itself on it by means of the Talmud is a religious-historical fact-thing which, if we believe the word of prophecy, will not remain so forever, but at the moment it is inevitable cannot be changed. So if we put the Talmud before the Forum of our criticism, we must not forget, that it is based on the Old Testament and that the traditional law, which in it legal history

* codified, in itself 5 5 creation of arbitrariness, but a necessary natural consequence of the interpretation—poverty of the often only too scarce and, on top of that, in the course the Mosaſic law book, which had become incomprehensible at the time—ſtabens ist. If there in the Talmud the awareness of the Israel's special position among the nations is far beyond—ſtreat and the ceremonial law to the point of overgrowth of the mind is trained in the letter of the law, In considering this, we do not ignore that God

ſelf his people towards the time of the unbridled Bonds and barriers had been made and that those special—ſtituſe a by God's choice and calling this people We, on our Christian standpoint ſure are convinced that these statutes have outlived their usefulness and that the nationality principle of religion is not a right of Beſt has more, but the Jew now denies the Christianity the recognition as a religion of the fulfilled Prophecy and essential salvation — we lament that, but to judge him fairly, we must but put yourself in his ſtpoint. From this in-go to the opposing point of view is in Rohling's
There is no trace of “Talmudic Jews” to be found.

It is true that the Talmud originates from the considered prerogative of Israel as the people of the law Legal principles which are used to determine the duty and of criminality between Jews and non-Jews make a difference that is in line with the Christian or, as also allows hunting, with the modern principle of humanity in unbearable contradictions. The exposure of these Legal propositions which are included in the post-Talmudic legal compendia are included, is the real sting of the writing

Rohling's. But 1. is already given to them in the Talmud itself through various counter-statements from outstanding teachers the tip broken off; 2. ſhe ſt are long gone, ſince with Moſes Mendelssohn began a new era for Judaism has been condemned as unjust sentences, and not merely from the point of view of reform; 3. but is not There is reason to suspect that the Emancipation granted legal equality to Jews in ſhed ingratitude with the maintenance of those legal inequalities—ity sentences will be answered.! If after this page
If the Talmud is broken, then also that Jewish fanaticism, which still not infrequently proselytes of the Church from Judaism threatened, but hopefully also that unchristian race⸗ hatred, which embitters the life of even the baptized Jew.
The founder of Christianity was a Jew and if not Jews had become Christians who believed in Meſſiah, ſhe would be no Christianity in the world at all.
But I protest most decisively against the context, in which brute those vampires, which drain our peasantry, those stock market players who through earning without work, those money⸗

aſtocrats who used Christian girls for their orgies those obscenity dealers who are driven by lust– tickle enrich, with the Talmud brings – the moral of Talmud is pure and strict enough to prevent the activities of these to condemn the wretched, they do not desecrate Judaism less than human society and it is merely

---

1) R. (counter-reply p. 73) entangles No. 3 in contradiction with
No. 2, but here is the theory, there the action with their mostly uncontrollable motives.

the connivance of the state, which makes this brood of snakes large drawn and tolerated. Can the gospel be defended ly responsible for the horrors of the Inquiſition? Paul the Apostles for the abominations of the Nicolaitans? The German Refor– information about the horrors of the Peasants' War? And what would Brute say, if one sees the abominations of fornication and of murder, which took place under the reign of Alexander VI.
and his daughter Lucretia flourished, from the Canons and Decretals deduced?!! –

I must also declare it wrong that everywhere
The Talmud speaks of idolaters, meaning Christians.
However, the Christian cult is considered by the Talmud as foreign cult like all non–legal–Jewish, but the “Star⸗ and planet worshippers” in the Talmud are only the Heiden, the characterization allows no other interpretation.
In general, the Talmud contains only a tiny number of direct relationships to Christians and even the few ſt all are safe. In the Middle Ages, however, the different. But had the Mary and saints and religion⸗ quien⸗ and image worship not really deceptive ancestry⸗ ity with pagan cult? An essential difference ſich remained for those who look deeper and judge more fairly still recognizable, but now came the ever–evolving renewed bloody persecution, which the persecuted had to strengthen the belief that Christian Rome (Edom) is not beſtter than the heathen.

---

1) R. ibid. p. 66 says with reference to this passage: “D. makes the Decretals and Canons the Church in grossest ignorance for atrocities and murders that flourished under Alexander– responsible.” But it says the exact opposite.

The crying injustice which nominal Christians not only in deeds but also in sins of omission against the Jews, synagogue and church beyond the already existing contradiction—fissured, and in more recent times, where emancipation has has bridged the gap, is within the Church itself, unfortunately the Protestant, a theology native, not to ſay: become dominant, which the wonderful ſind⸗ denies the beginning of Jesus' life and denies him the divine Glory, which in his person with the human Highness is agreed, stripped. Is it strange then, if Judaism thereby creates a prejudice against Christianity⸗ tum confirmed and the God—man like an idol into the realm of myth? I have ſince about ten years with indignation and deep pain the—taking the reckless boldness with which on the Jewish side, Christianity as a pagan degenerate Reviled as a degrader of Judaism, and Jeſus Christ as an insignificant and not even original phenomenon degraded and Judaism as the world religion of The future was proclaimed. The relationship between the former ſeemed to have really reversed itself: Christianity was in a state of defense against Judaism—ſive verſt. In my magazine “Seeds of Hope”
I have predicted from year to year which This arrogance provokes a setback. The Nemesis is now here and evil finds its punishment through evil.
It is coming true what true friends of Israel have long realized that unconditional political equality, which cannot be achieved without the self—Christianization of the state—was feasible, so also for the Jews no lasting happiness

ift.! The racial hatred is becoming more and more threatening and he is in a dead end, from which he can only escape by illiberal crab walk, he always behaves tragicomic. Conſerservatives and believers also stir up the fire, and only a small number of those in which Love for Jesus and love for the people from whom he was born—ſproſſen, ſinterpenetrate. The Jewish question is in its ultimately a religious question. It is ultimately a matter of ly about the position towards Christ, the stone which carries but also shattered. To present it to the Jews in the right light show is the task of the Church, but she has given Him this even more than the Talmud obscures — because it For the Jew, this is not only about the Old Testament Words of the prophecy of the veils of Moſe, but also about the Perſon Jeſu des Meſſias, the partly with inquiſitoriſm Blood, partly soaked with modern scientific poison Veil of the Church.

Yes, the Church must accuse itself of being through un-Christian behavior and unbelieving science Savior of the world has veiled the Jews, but from This self-accusation is reported in Rohling's Talmudjuden nothing. And it is indeed good and right that from the Talmud, which is also evident from the Moſaic Gešt law shows that Judaism cannot possibly have theſolute religion ſt can be. But Rohling's—

1) Because, even apart from immoral Abuse, which allows the Jewish element to prevail, which, given the unfortunately ineradicable antipathy to the race, is a reaction that balances happiness with unhappiness. A Contradiction of this view of mine with page 6 no. 3 (Rohling, Gegenſcription p. 25) is not available. -

Eisenmenger's recent polemics convince only gullible Christians and embitters the Jews, because it is aſide, excessive, passionate, blind. I have good reason to assume that Rohling, if he is in the same tendentious How he wanted to excerpt Luther's works, to prove might think that Lutheranism is a religion based on lübdebruch built and the sanctuaries of the church profanatical, foul and completely demonized heresy.

A Roman Catholic theologian would have reason to not to rush into his criticism of rabbinism. Because the Tridentine tradition principle does not offer the rabbinic a striking parallel, and has this before that not in addition the fact that it is not to such a disastrous consequence as the Roman ban on the Bible for lay people? — But I does not want to address the retorſions with which the Judaism from the history of Roman dogmas, the Celibacy, the Inquiſition, the Jesuit morality, which e.g. against Rom. 13:1 f. Revolution and tyrannicide ſanctioned!, to the stigmatization of the Talmud antwords could.

The Talmud is a speaking hall in which the voices of five centuries. That there is Sense and nonsense, alongside wit and madness, alongside people-friendliness but also severe intolerance, besides faith also ridiculous superstition is voiced, one can imagine, especially if we take into account the character of the time, whose Product he is. Nasty words and profound, neuteſta⸗

---

1) ſ. Johannes Delitzſch, Doctrinal System of the Roman Church (1875)
p. 286 f.

Mental words are jumbled together.
but has the most disgusting blowflies and dung flies ſkewers that he could find in Eisenmenger — from the He knows nothing about butterflies that fly in the Talmud and he doesn't want to know anything.

I have already read his “Talmudjuden” in “Seed on Hope“ 1877 p. 183 f. as one not from the spirit Christ and not born of the Spirit of truth
Scripture, and have generally stated this there—
The following pages justify it, for example in detail. Hopefully they are sufficient for learners to the proof that those who have shown their knowledge of the Jew thums from this writing, a puddle for a spring
The racial hatred will, of course, continue to affect Marr and brute to swear. The beast thrives, it days People's assemblies that raise them, and it is a prospect present that one can soon get rid of the plague of human Society through medieval radical remedies will seek to create.

P. 49: A rabbi, the Talmud tells us, bit a snake’s Head off etc.

It is a joke by Rabbi Judah the Hindu, a sea⸗
adventure which is told there in Baba bathra 74.
A snake encircles a gem and an Amorous (probably: a diver) leaves the ship into the water to get him - there comes the snake and wants to devour the ship. Now Eisenmenger crosses I 409 continues: “Then a raven came and bit the snake the head off” etc. Quite right, because puschkanza means the female raven, a raveness. But Rohling has made a Rabbi out of the Rabin! “But the Rabbis were not deprived of the prospect to make a deal in the affair — he says
P. 26 — I gladly undertake to do the same for the sixth Obligation to pay a thousand bright thalers if Judah of the German Oriental Society that judgment that my quotations are fictitious, untrue, he—found.” Not all of them, of course, but quite a few. Here so we see a female rabbi transformed into a male rabbi.

The fairy tales that are told there in Baba bathra, ſare ſenseless nonsense – Rohling has succeeded in making the nonsense ſense to real nonsense. The German tomorrow– ländische Geſellschaft will confirm it.!

P. 62: An Israelite, says the Talmud, is permitted to
To do injustice to God, because it is written: Your neighbor
You shall not do injustice (Lev. 19:13).

3 It is Christianity that has taught that man as such without distinction of ethnicity the neighbor of man. There in Leviticus is how 19, 18 shows, the next ſ. va Volksgenoſſe. Altteſta⸗ Mental morality is not yet Christian, although the Hu– principle of majority also to break through the barrier begins. The legal doctrine of the Talmud is based on the differences of Israel and the peoples and measures the behavior of the Israelite against his fellow countrymen and his deeds– treat strangers with different standards.
The above statement is from Tosafoth zu Sanhedrin 57.
But the translation: a non-Jew may not "To do wrong" is wrong. To do wrong is called hereca', but aschak means “to oppress” and the meaning is,
that the Jew in commercial and service relationships is harder against the non-Jew may be as against the people– noſſen. However, the formulated law explains this hardness against the non-Jew is just as forbidden as against the

1) But Rohling replies on p. 35 that he only wanted to say, that “the whole affair took place in the Rabbi’s imagination, that not a real Rabin, but a fictitious one, so the The feigning Rabbi bit off the snake’s head.” One can see from this, which tricks of interpretation he knows how to use to
To either justify or condemn at will.

2

–

Jews (Maimuni's! Hilchoth gezela and Joſeph Karo's Choshen ha-Mishpat Cap. 359 $ 1). And now completely any injustice through deception and rapetigung! This is legally and ethically rejected. You

You shall love the Lord your God - we read in Jalkut

Shimoni to Deut. 6, 5 ($ 837) -, make sure that you-

Be loved by people and stay away from Ueber⸗ trespass and robbery against Jews, against foreigners, yes all people; for whoever is a thief against the Goy will also be a thief against the Israelite; whoever robbed, swears falsely, denies him something, sheds his blood sheds, he also becomes a robber, perjurer, liar,

Murderer of his fellow countryman.

P. 75: Rabbi Elias explains in the Talmud that he wanted, despite the-Day of Atonement many virgins defile, since sin outside the door of the heart, the inside of the soul remain untouched by the wickedness of men.

From this godless, immoral, sin-provoking-
There is no mention of such madness in the Talmud.
Wiſſenheit and hate have come together here and as happened during the persecution of Jews, that the Torah scrolls serve as a base for rapists had to, so here it is the Talmud leaf Joma 19, about to whom those two powers of darkness this slander have conceived.

“Rabbi Elias”! What ignorance! In the many Folios of the Talmud comes from beginning to end

1) Latinized, the name is Maimonides; Rohling calls him mockingly "the eagle." To call him that is by no means a Jewish custom.

no Rabbi Elijah. This name as a person and insbeſpecial rabbinic name is un-
The alleged “Rabbi Elias” is no other when the prophet Elijah ascended to heaven. It was like countless legends prove, Jewish folk belief, that this Elia still observing and in certain cases with Word and deed intervening in the midst of his people—8 ways. When our Lord on the cross cried out in lamentation: Eli 5 Aa eli lemä ſchebaktani broke out, the people thought of this Presupposition that he is the miracle prophet fer, call for help.

- Live And this Prophet, whose life was a constant repentance and , as the embodied curse of the law was, this great »Ascet, who has his counterpart in John the Baptist, both of which, according to their present history, never woman, is said to have touched there in the Talmud in advance announce that he married many virgins, despite the Day of Atonement, shameful!? In truth, this monster, Rabbi Elios, as an heirloom of Eisenmenger only in Rohling's head.
The facts are this: The night before the
The High Priest brought days of atonement in the abbey cell of the temple and arrangements had been made—to keep him awake. If sleep approached — chases the Miſhna Yoma I, 7 — ſh ſniptten
the young priests with him with their fingers and called to him, My Lord, High Priest, arise and Cool off a little on the mosaic floor! And so They kept him busy all the time until the time of battle—the sacrifice of the morning sacrificial lamb approached. >
The Gemara notes the following: He was held EN:

awake not with harp and zither, but by oral shout, and what was shouted to him? “If the Lord does not builds the house, they who build it build in vain.” And In Jeruſalem too, the nobles of the city left the Not sleep at night, but they brought them away—visibly noisily, so that the reverberation reaches the ears of the High Priest and that sleep Abba Shaul says that later, in Er—memory of the time of the Temple, outside Jeruſa—lems in the province the night of 9 to 10 Tiſchri ſo noisily, but it was not without sin.
This “in the province” is then explained as meaning that es beſpecially one in the Babylonian city of Nehardea was cunning abuse. Now it is reported that Elijah testified against this morally corrupt custom.
Rab Jehuda, brother of Rab Sala the Pious, appeared
He said to him: You still ask why the Messiah still not come, and behold, today is the Day of Atonement and yet many virgins are dishonored in Nehardea! Then Jehuda: What does the Holy One say, blessed be He, to this? Elijah answered, "Sin lies at the door." Then Judah said: And what does Satan say to this? Elijah replied: Satan has no power on the Day of Atonement To attack power.

The meaning is clear. The Day of Atonement atones Israel's sins, so that the accuser must be silenced, but the evil desire remains and how this God for mercy beſt, man has thereby committed himself to strictness against to be determined by himself. So Elijah (the also Berachoth 299 and Sanhedrin 94 as with that Rab Jehuda appears) that nightly custom, because ſit promotes the temptation to carnal sins. Rohling, however, has with Eisenmenger ſinstead of the paſſive ibbe'ül! active eb'ol (I will dishonor) read without consider that this reading may be inconsistent and results in impossible absurdity in every respect.?

1) Equally formed ſind ibbe süm ſie were intoxicated Megilla 7 b and ischtekür ſie were punished for lying Maccoth 5b.

2) In the counter-writing on p. 59 he notes: “In Eisenmenger you will hardly find this place.” But you only need to open the register at Eisenmenger. There you will find Elijah the Prophet: How unchaste he was and what God is said to have said about this unchastity. has the passage from Eisenmenger I p. 433 along with that of her hair-taken from the reluctant translation and only added this, that he made Rabbi Elijah out of the prophet Elijah. And he defends this nonsense in the counter-writing and mocks on top of that, my indignation. Isn't that desperately evil self-lie?

II. Knkſkellke © erke.

P. 36: Therefore, “sins against the Talmud are more serious than those against the Bible.”

The meaning of Sanhedrin XI, 3 is as follows: Whoever disregards a commandment of the Torah in order to Violating it will not result in legal punishment, but but he who follows the words of the scribes deliberately contrary to legally valid traditional practice⸗ which, as Rosh Hashanah 19a says, the Fastening (chizzuk) di support and securing be⸗

The case where someone disobeys a commandment of the Torah Obligation is disregarded: he is according to other legal principles a heretic, who is no less the death penalty as the one who oppošition against traditional practice. Incidentally, es ſich with overestimation of tradition in Judaism similar to the papacy, where they are even more important than there—Many have become guilty of blood debts. Read there in the Trak⸗ Sanhedrin made the following Mishna, according to which such a the tradition of opponents executed on a great festivals where the whole people gathered at the sanctuary⸗ ſträmt, should be executed. The demand is ſcrit⸗ according to, it is based on Deut. 17, 12 — but it has Resulted in a judicial murder, which the self—murder of the Torah. The Old Covenant has the Mediator of the New Covenant and thus himself—kills.

P. 38: If the Rabbi tells you that the right hand is your left, ſo ſhould thou not deviate from ſhis word.

In the note the place of discovery is Rashi to Deut. 17, 11
Rashi repeats words of the Midrash Sifre (1054 of the Friedmann edition). Further details found in the first section of the tractate Horajoth. Rohling's: “if the Rabbi chases you . .” is the substitution of a false subject. The subject is not the rabbi, but but the supreme authority established by the Deuteronomic law Court, for which submission is required but, as tractate Horajoth teaches there, not un⸗ dingte: who consciously after a erroneous spit the authority is liable to a sin offering, and Incidentally, the authority itself is to blame if it erroneously judges; because it is all the more responsible, the more obligatory which gives them authority (cf. Nachmanides on Deut. a.a. O.).
P. 57: The nations of the world could not exist if the Jews would not be.

The source of the saying is a Pentateuch—mentar from 1522. On the other hand, the Talmud Chullin says 92, that there are righteous people among the world’s people, which form the basis of their existence. For according to a conclusion from Sanhedrin IX, 1 it is Jewish Teaching that there are pious people among the nations of the world and that these have a share in the blessedness beyond

1) Also in counter-statement p. 34.

(Maimuni, Hilchoth teshuba III, 5 etc.). In Yalkut Shimoni to Jeſ. 26 § 296 are called these non-Israeli Righteous “Priest of the Holy, blessed be He, in this world”.

P. 75: Then the Talmud tells us that some of its first masters, Rabbi Rab and Nachman, publicly proclaimed when ſhey came into a strange city, whether there was a woman on wanted to be her wife for a few days.

The passage is Joma 180 and it is to be noted, 1. that one teacher is Abba Arika, who also lived in Babylonia ſbadly called Rab, like Jehuda ha-Naſi in Palestine ſhort Rabbi; the designation “Rabbi Rab” is just as ignorant as the one elsewhere at Rohling⸗ future designation “Rabbi Rashi”!; 2. that the narrated happened when one of them went to a certain city (Darshish)
and the other came to a certain city (Shechanzib);
3. that the story of the Gemara itself appears apoſryphal?
and as a motive not lust of the flesh, but self⸗ custody, however, is taken by means of a sham marriage. Whether—Even though the Torah does not explicitly prohibit polygamy, we find that the Talmudic teachers in chaste monogamen relationship; even unhappily married people (like Rab and Chijja) bear their fate with resignation and without Breach of faith. If his first wife dies, a saying goes word — which is like one in whose days the temple been destroyed.

1) According to the counter-writing on page 58, others also write in this way in order to say that Rab and Rashi are simply Rabbis. But even these
They are therefore characterized as poorly educated.

2) R. asks ibid. p. 60: Why? — Because the Gemara ſtrôing to bring sense and understanding into it.

0) 2 —1

: Because the best of the Goyim, among others, hunted is, one should kill him oneself (if one could), ſo
we know that Christians belong entirely to it;
Raſchi also calls a spade a spade without hesitation:
The best of Christians must be strangled.

The situation is this. In Ex. 14, 7, the chariot teams of the pursuing pharaonic army Speech and Raschi asks where the animals came from,
According to Ex. 9:6, all the Egyptian livestock had died.
It could not have been Israelite animals either, since Moses Ex. 10, 26 insists that the departing people also take all the livestock it owns. So it remains nothing was left but that there were Egyptians whose cattle, because ſhey feared the God of Israel, was spared. Therefore — adds Raschi — that R. Simeon said: “The fittest among the Egyptians, the best among Smash the snakes’ brains!” This is the text in Heidenheim's (1841) and in Berliner's Raſchi edition (1866); the latter notes as variants: The most suitable under the panthers (so the Venetian print) and: the fittest among the Goyim. R. Simeon ſchlechtweg iſt Simeon ben≈Jochai. How fine a statement is to be judged, shows the form in which the Jerusalem Talmud Kiddushin IV Halacha 11 states: The best among the Snakes smash her brain, the most capable of women is a witch, blessed is he who does the will of God! And in Sofrim XV, 10 the first half reads: “The most capable among the Gentiles killed in time of war,” to which Joel Müller remarks: “R. Simeon, living in the time of Hadrian, saw the cruel warfare of the Romans and recommended as Represal, the heathens captured in battle also not to spare”. In no way is the statement directed at the Christians And that Rashi said: “The best among The Christian must be strangled” is a lie.! There is Intolerant statements enough, but one like this does not exist. And the Talmudic teachers were so little eager to kill that Maccoth 7° the Sanhedrin, which passes a death sentence every 7 years, a pernicious—rish is called; R. Eliezer b. Azariah says: no, even if it falls every TO years, and two of the most famous authorities, R. Tarphon and R. Akiba, know openly: If we had sat in the Sanhedrin, ſo no human being would ever have been killed. Then nor the judicial murder of Jeſus the Christ happened.

P. 88: The Talmud explicitly states: The Christians are idols—servant, but it is permitted on their holiday, the first days of the week to trade with them.
However, the Talmud understands the Christian cult, but of which vanishingly little is spoken, under the generic term of the foreign cult (aboda zara). But the medieval explanations of the Talmud, which Tosa.
foth are called, say to the first Miſhna of the tractate Aboda zara, that Jewish practice in general is based on the conviction assumes that Christians are not idolaters?, as in just

1) R. but p. 46 insists: the passage was later only Fear omitted. Perhaps out of fear of the twisters of words or ignorant censors who, wherever Goyim appeared, Christians sensed.

2) The Jewish apologist JB Levinsohn in his Zerubbabel (Warsaw 1875) II p. 76 lists a whole series of great Talmuds≠ leger and deciſors who make this same declaration.

This tractate 65 tells us that Rab Judah gave the Abidarna, a non-Jew, a gift on a pagan holiday sent, saying: I am convinced by him that he is not an idolater! How much, by the way, the next

The ſpheric field of view of the Talmud Palestine iſt, shows Chullin 13 , where it is noted that the people outside Palestine

Non-Jews are not really idol worshippers; you pagans

tum is only something inherited, it is not in their hearts ſache. And Christianity is mentioned everywhere in the Talmud only as digressive and fleetingly touching on the speech. Immediately according to that Mishnah, to which the question is linked, how one should behave in trade and commerce with those which celebrate the first day of the week, it is in the

Miſhna continues: The following are the feasts of the Gentiles:

Calends, Saturnalia, etc.; already the third festival is a linguistic and archaeological riddle.

P. 90 fg.: While the Talmud speaks of the most abominable vices such as murder, fornication, pederaſty and bestiality, he throws these and indeed generally undeniably also the Christians.

Horrible slander — which appears under the text—
All the passages listed speak of real pagans. No these passages such as Aboda zara II, 1 contains accusations, which, as regards Christians, the Christian consciousness

1) Rohling's question (counter-writing p. 47): “What should the Worship of Israel for this treatise in the midst of Christian lands, if the Nazarenes were not counted among the idolaters?"
proves nothing. More than twenty Talmudic tractates—deal with themes which have been relevant since the fall of Jerusalem and the disintegrati ſtrouble of the people merely has past historical significance have.

28 II. Distorted texts.

can injure. In Aboda zara 17°, where a certain Jacob from Kephar Sichnin, undoubtedly a Jewish Christian, in conversation with the famous Eliezer b. Hyrcanus presented becomes, the disciple of Jeſu speaks about proſtitution so seriously and fitting that Eliezer later considered it a sin—expects to have listened attentively and approvingly. The
The gap that separated Judaism and Christianity was a completely different one than that between Judaism and Roman, Greek, Persian paganism.

III. Fukſtstellungen through Perſhſiche.

P. 75 ff.: The Talmud tells us of Rabbi Eliezer that there are no 9... in the world that he did not need; when he but heard of someone who asked for a chest of gold, took he took the chest and traveled over seven rivers for her sake (the rest is too nasty). This passage is so more terrible because at the end it says that God has Eliezer's death was called from heaven, he was to the eternal life.

This is also a false testimony. It is in Aboda zara 174 is not one of the Talmudic authorities of this name, but rather an obscure Elazar b. Durdaja, whom the Barajtha, i.e. extra-Mishnian overdelivery as unbridled voluptuary. Finally He was a courtesan famous for her beauty abroad, travelled to her with the purse (not “chest”) full of denarii and did not allow himself, as Demoſthenes when he visited the Thais, was put off by the high price. What follows is dirty, but terrible. She tells him, when he begins to revel in lust, that, like a wind does not return to where he came from, so now ſhis soul had passed away without the possibility of return. Then the story continues: “Then he went and sat down between two ranges of mountains and hills. You mountains and Hills, he cried, grant me mercy! They antsaid: Before we can beg mercy for you, we have to implore mercy for ourselves, because It is said: Mountains will depart and hills will pass awayfall. Then he cried out: Heaven and earth, give me Have mercy! They answered: Before we have mercy on you can ask for, we have mercy for ourselves to implore, for it is said: The heavens will be like a smoke will vanish, and the earth will grow old like a garment. Then he cried out: Sun and moon, grant me mercy! They replied: Before we ask for mercy for you can, we have to implore mercy for ourselves, for it is said: The moon will be ashamed and the Sun with shame. Then he cried: You stars and planets, have mercy on me! They answered: Before we can beg mercy for you, we must beg mercy for ourselves, for it is said: And all the host of heaven will rot. Then he cried out: So I am dependent on myself – he lowered ſhis head betwſeen his knees and cried out while crying long, until his soul went out and a heavenly voice heſcholl: Rabbi Elazar b. Durdaja is destined for the future ty life.” This solemn declaration is addressed to the deceased, who is now honored as a penitent of the Rabbi's name How messed up and distorted this story is at Brute! One cannot accuse the Talmud of that in this story he is Elazar b. Durdaja with the Sin jokes. It is a hard and long penance until into death, through which the slave of sin finally ly obtained forgiveness.!

---

1) R. in his reply p. 61 remarks: “D. conceals

the addition: The heretics will not convert and if they

I resist going into more detail about the dirty Things which Rohling continues in the section “The Woman” from Eisenmenger. The Talmud is not a Christian—ly book and is, what to consider, a oriental Palestinian—Babylonian soil
Book. But nowhere does he grant lust a license
He sharpens the rigorous rules for intercourse with women—most ruſt demands of chaste self-discipline (3. B. Kid—duschin 80 —81. Baba bathra 570); he condemns all ex—marital and also all marital, not the purpose of Waste of manhood serving marriage (ſ. Maimuni, Hilchoth issure biah Cap. XXI) and if he in some Things ſhameless, he ſitures e.g.
Nidda 13 demands of modesty, against which our common Western custom disgusting Shamelessness is.

Whether Rohling is right when he says on page 78 that the scoundrels of our big cities the Jewesses that largest contingent, I do not know - he may have this—complain to God the All—Knowing, the best statistician, But the Talmud has in this respect the spirit of the Old Testament, that he branded the whore—market and brothels were despised as pagan. As, as Gittin 57b is told, after the catastrophe of Jeruſalem 400 captured boys and girls realized that they were Roman shame houses were to be delivered, then collapsed fie ſich into the sea, the Pſalmwort (Bi. 68, 23) ſich ge⸗ convert, they will not find the path of life, that is, despite their repentance they remain excluded from eternal bliss.”
But that is not the point, but that they still die, in—God hurries with them out of this life.

comforting: The Lord has said: From Bashan shall the lions Teeth I bring back, bring back from the depths of the sea.

In the area of sexuality, in which Rohling ſuccessful, he also makes other false fundamental assumptions—ſts against the Talmud. It is untrue, what he claims on p. 74 and repeats elsewhere, that According to the Talmud, non—Jews have no marriage — untrue, because adultery is considered a common human sin, against which is one of the seven Noahide commandments (Sanhedrin 57b etc.), which is why Ahron of Barcelona in Sefer ha- chinnuch about the 7th (6th) commandment says: “Ver⸗ Assault on another man’s wife is a sin, which is forbidden to all people, Israel and the Gentiles, whether– equal in the manner of marriage between there is a difference between them.” What he Page 77 claims that the desecration of a Goya is for the Jews is not adultery. The marriage of a non-Jew is considered inviolable, and apart from the laws of war, the carnal intercourse with the wife of the non-Jew as a punishable before divine and human forum Sin. For what he claims on page 25 is also untrue, that Sanhedrin 52b did not count the Jew Although the punishment of strangulation will not relied on it, but without prejudice to its reprehensibility and Criminality, as it appears from the legal compendium Ebenezer XVI, 1. 2 (cf. the foundations Sanhedrin 824.

Erubin 192). Samson's end was Sota 9a the punishment of fine prostitutes and in Aboda zara 204 will also be the staring of a beautiful woman, even of a unmarried, and a married woman, also a ugly, whether she was Jewish or non-Jewish, and generally the lewd look condemned as a sin. And Sanhedrin 82° is on the “desecration of the non-Jewish woman” which, according to Rohling, is not punishabl Mal. 2, 11 f. applied: “May the Lord cut off the Man who does such things to those who are awake and responding the tents of Jacob, and offerings to the Lord Zebaoth”, adding: “Is he a God taught, he will have no watchers among the wise and no respondents among the students; if he is a priest, he will have no son who can serve the Lord to offer a grain offering to Sabaoth.”

If it really is as Rohling p. 107 and Profeſſor Lazar in ſine echo-writing of the Talmud Jew (Berlin 1880) say that the rich Jews in Vienna and Budapeſt formal hunt for beautiful girls and their victims were particularly from the poorer Christian ſtand fetch, ſo ſt are also these merciless inſnocence– corrupter not only according to biblical, but also according to tal– accursed sinners who bore the name God's ſord, and it is valid from them what Beza 32” of the Jewish money aſtocrats of Babylon are told: the
The rich of Babylon will go to hell, for, as the Midrash (Bamidbar c. 20) hunts, history shows that sin fornication is punished even more severely than the sin of golden calf.

P. 117: The Talmud passage says: There is no worse Hanti– than farming. If someone has 100 silver coins in the action, he can eat meat every day and enjoy wine; but if he has 100 silver coins for
If he practices agriculture, he can only eat salt and bread.

This is the Talmud passage which Bestmann had in his mind– and knowledgeable book “History of Christian Customs”
3

1880 p. 287 as a corrective to my writing about Jewish craftsman life at the time of Jesus (3rd edition).
1879). It is a statement by Raba Jebamoth 634.
It does not change the fact that the Talmud– mainly recommends crafts and agriculture and various about the advantage, but nothing in honor of the trade.
Besides agriculture, livestock farming and in agriculture the sale of the products, i.e. connection lation of agriculture with trade. About the everything speaks the Talmud or rather speaks the confused voices within him. But the market price is standardized in such a way that the seller only one-sixth of the production price is allowed as benefit and so that food prices do not become more expensive,
the producer should bring his profits to market himself, Purchases by intermediaries are prohibited.! The Trade as a business is nowhere praised. The series of Talmudic sayings about trade begin Hillel, who– cher ſays that he will not become whiſe who ſets on trade (Aboth II, 6), and accordingly the question: What must man do to become wise, answered:
he would not engage in trade, and the question of what he must do to become rich: he must lie down on the Trade and conduct it with honesty, but note is that many have done this and yet achieved nothing because it is due to God’s mercy (Nidda 70ʃ).
The saying noted by Rohling is found in the treatise Jebamoth among others, which say that agriculture which will one day become the main occupation of people and

---

1) ſ. Bloch, Moſaſh-talmudic Police Law (1879) p. 38.

that every man should have enough arable land to To produce household needs yourself and not on the market to buy. For, as Menachoth 103' and others- Anyone who has to buy fine bread from the baker is chased away, cannot find peace. — How much could be achieved here Contemporary, meaningful, profound and whimsical from the Talmud literature! All kinds of things grow there Plants — but also a lot of weeds and not a little Poisonous plants for the Jew-eaters.

IV. Jalſian interpretations.

P. 37 f.: Rabbi Menachem teaches us with A. that God is the Lord even ask the Rabbis on earth, when in heaven a difficult question about the law occur.

This sounds as if God were asking for his own sake. but is only a haggadic form of highest honor earthly teacher, as the heavenly questioners ask them be wiesen. So in Baba mezia 86° an Rabba b. Nachmani. In a little story, which after this talMudish modeled, draws Menachem from Recanate in ſhis Pentateuch commentary by R. Simeon b. Jochai, the supposed author of the Zohar. The idea a heavenly council in which questions are made and decisions are taken, relies on theſelben Menachem to Dan. 4, 14.

P. 42: Since the destruction of the temple, God weeps, for he has sinned gravely .. and when one praises him, ſhe must shake his head and say: Happy is the King, who is praised in his house, but what is due a father who lets his children go into misery?

1) Through Rohling's counter-writing on p. 36 I am informed that the passage of Menachem quoted by him is not the one in Eisenmenger 1 p. 9. He means the one to be read there on p. 11.

He weeps over finely destroyed sanctuary and over Israel that it was taken into exile, but not “because he sinned gravely in it“! ſt because it was about the sins

Israel's will has had to be done, and he weeps, as there Chagiga 8” is being hunted, also about completely different things, e.g. about a community leader who is proud and fupons the whole. Also disfiguring are the Words: “what is due to a father” – a tendentious wrong translation of ma lo leäb in Berachoth 34. The
The passage reads: “At the time when the Israelites enter into the prayer houses and the study houses and begin: Ge– Blessed be his great name, shakes the saint, blessed He is his head and says: Blessed is the king whom man so praises in his house – what remains for the father, who drove his children into exile, and woe
the children who are banished from their father’s table!”
It is true: the Talmud transcends in fine anthropo– pomorphisms the limits of what is worthy of God, but the Thought that God considers it a sin that he is above the Temple destruction and exile imposed on Israel has been entered by a blank. Everywhere only ge– says it is a pity to God that he had to do it, and he wished he hadn't had to do it.

P. 49: The patriarch Abraham himself practiced sorcery and taught them to others; around his neck he wore a precious– ftone with which he could heal all the sick.

What a mess of superstitions stored up in the Talmud is, a Jewish doctor Dr. Gideon Brecher in his

1) In the counter–document ©. 38 this is described as a statement by the mud is repeated, but the Talmud does not say that.

38 IV. False interpretations.

Writing: The Transcendental, Magic and Magical Healing shown in the Talmud in 1850. The demonology of the new– testamental writings is, according to this side, a true Miracles of measured purity and independence, but The Apocrypha are on the same level as the Talmud from the Book of Enoch and onwards. Blank throws into the abyss fcutters of the angels, devils and mysteries without Distinction of times and without distinction of ideas Individual folk ideas, all of this shape through each other– that he even rejected the medieval Aristotelian view of the heavenly bodies as soulful beings.
the above two statements about Abraham are wrong and un≠ accurately reproduced. For Abraham practiced sorcery, The Talmud Sanhedrin 91 does not chase, but it is the statement of an individual that he

from his descended Arab offspring the secret of the demon world, so that they therefore know how the Synedrists (Sanhedrin 17?) wiſſen müſſen. So the five words there are to be verſtehnen ſein. The other place Baba bathra 10“ but, one of the most beautiful in the Talmud, reads: “A gem hung on Abraham's our father's neck, on whose sight every sick person was healed, and when Abraham our father came out this world, the saint, blessed be he, hanged him He, to the sun ball.“ It is the proclamation of the A true living God meant. After Abraham ſit, we hear every day and everywhere the Heaven the glory of God and the vſeſte of his hands proclaim.

P. 58: Yes, dogs are the non-Jews according to the Talmud, as he Ex. 12, 16 writes of the holy festivals that they are for Israel, not for the strangers, not for the dogs. R. Moſe b. Nachman repeats this with the variant: For you, not for the Goyim; for you, not for the Dogs are the feasts. Likewise, Rashi on Ex. 12 in the Venice edition, while in the Amsterdam Pentateuch the commentary of Rashi adds the phrase: “not for the dogs”.

The poisonous arrow falls to the ground without hitting, because Fanaticism is here on the side of the accuser, whom he blinds you.! The dogs there are real dogs, for which the Talmudic law no less than our animal welfare associations has a feeling heart. The biblical precept reads: “on On the high holiday, only what a soul needs to eat, only this will be prepared for you”, and the question arises, whether in “any soul” what is other than the Festivists need, such as those in Iſraelitıc service standing strangers, or what the pets, for example the dogs, need, included. The main places for the discussion of this question, according to which the Talmudſtelle Megilla 7“ is to be understood, Mechilta are to Ex. 12, 16 and the Jerusalem Talmud Beza J Halacha 11. With gojim and nochrim the inſinnocent acherim (others) and with kelabim (dogs) alternate behema (Domestic livestock). From the parallel in the Jerusalem Talmud it can be seen that it is really animal feed (barley etc.). Raschi takes the side of those which the fodder for the livestock is included, but through the “you (vobis)” food for the Gentiles as fromconsidered closed; Moſe b. Nachman, on the other hand, also concludes

1) But RS 52 still finds my following apology

"failed." Against such stubborn turning a blind eye no herb has grown.

the fodder for the livestock. It is a word– Controversy brought about by the law Ex. 12, 16.
That in mood words, where the affect is involved, the Gentiles call them “dogs”; our Lord ſt ſeſt himself in front of the Canaanite woman this national-religious standpoint, although not without Mitigation of the harsh expression Matt. 15, 26. Bad– But such a naming of the heathens in the calm terminological language of the interpretation of the Law.

P. 59 f.: The name Sinai, says the Talmud, means that the Hatred has descended upon the peoples of the world.

The meaning of the passage Shabbath 89a (cf. Eisenmenger I
p. 589) is not, at least not only, that since the law⸗ Israel hates the nations, but that these, because they Law not taken upon itself, Israel, the people of the law, hate. The passage is explanatory of Eph. 2, 14: “He is our peace, which comes from both (Israel and the nations)
One made and tore down the fence that was there– was between, in that he through his flesh (which was on sacrificed on the cross) took away the enmity, namely the law” etc. How can a Christian who has the Apostle⸗ word knows, in that Talmudic attempt to find the name of Sinai etymologically, something annoying find!

P. 69: Rab Jehuda says that the Rab said that it was People (Jews) are allowed to give their children and household ſen to lend at usury, so that they could taste of usury ... a perfidious calculated Education for growth.

Why this malicious “Menſch di Jew” — could Shouldn't Lev. 1:2 also be glossed? Within the lawdition, whose object is Israel, is called man, however the individual of this people. Man as an object of Law of Sinai is the Israelite, but the man, what is the ultimate purpose and end of creation, man as such without distinction of ethnicity. In this In the Talmud Jer. Nedarim IX Hal. 4 this sense is Reference to Gen. 5:1: “This is the book of the generations Adams" testifies that all people come from one and from this the commandment of love for humanity as the main-and basic commandment. — Incidentally, the whole of the above Quote from Baba mezia 754 with the conclusion that-understood. For that lending at interest to close According to Rab Jehuda, they should not have a taste for interest-take, but rather make them uncomfortable: “so that ſhey find out how the interest-bearing person is tormented and fears and so that they understand why the
The punishment is so great if you take usurious interest.
is Rashi's explanation. And why does he keep silent Brute because the view of Rab Jehuda, after communicated, ſomediately also by the Gemara as a verreprehensible measure because it easily leads to sin-is thrown? On the same page he makes 100 pepper-grains, which are refunded with 20 over, 100 pounds Pepper, which is lent for 20 percent. Expressly Such remuneration, which is usually not in excess of

1) R. in his counter-writing p. 58 knows it beſer: he still finds always in Jehuda's method “perfidious education of the young generation to sin”.

than a fifth above, only in small cases lazy (bedabar mo'et) geſtstattet (ſ. Rabbenu Aſher to Mezia 754 and Jore deah 170 § 17).

P. 75: ... non est reus laesae virginitatis

This gloss on the Latin quotation from Nidda V. 4 will say that carnal assault on a girl from under three years is not considered a punishable sin by the Talmud. Is the correctness of such a horrific assumption even conceivable? The passage for whose understanding in general
I am referring to Leopold Löw's (the late Szeged Rabbi)

Book “The Ages of Life in Jewish Literature” (1875)
pp. 169 — 175, is completely misunderstood; the
The concluding sentence of the Miſhna refers to its beginning, not to to refer back to what immediately preceded it.! Boys≠ ſhame threatens the Mſaſaſic law with death, and Talmudic criminal law with stoning; however,
Is fornication with children a crime, the fear of which not even the regulation that no unmarried person can be Children's teacher is to be employed, is based on (ſ. the Gemara to Kiddushin IV, 13). The nowadays not rare Case that those entrusted with the care of innocence is, to misuse them for secret crimes, is unheard of,
and only the malice of a brute reads such things as punishment≠ freely into the Talmud.

1) R. ibid. p. 61 says that this is my personal opinion.
But it is a legally valid marriage, another contract—
ſtandns of the words is juriſtically impossible.

V. Fall Confequengen.

P. 39: The Talmud reports in detail about the eternal disputes
ities of the houses of Hillel and Shammai .. the views both schools are always contrary to the opposite; nevertheless ſays the Talmud: it is both God's word what Shammai teaches and what Hillel teaches .. That means without flower: there all God's Word, so do what your heart desires, depending on whether the execution is possible.

Wrong conclusion from distorted facts; because
1. refers to that legendary divine instruction Erubin 13 not on the differences between Hillel and Shammai, because these only resulted in three or four legal questions—each other; 2. it refers to the, although not eternal, but many differences between the schools of Hillel and Shammai ſuch that it is by no means left to the discretion of whether ſe in practice after the decision of one or the other school, but the one from Rohling
The final sentence, which was disregarded, is: “but the Halacha
(the normative law) is based on the school of Hillel.
Traditional jurisprudence also follows this principle.
If the words of both schools are the words of God be explained, this cannot mean that yes and No are equally true, but only that both schools ſt on God’s Word and, in themselves, their substantiate this view in a noteworthy manner. It is without all meaning for the practice, for which everywhere the Legal decisions of the school of Hillel are authoritative, unless these are also overruled by the law– knowledgeable beſt removed, because as the Miſhna Edijoth I, 4 says: it is expressly emphasized that neither the Neither the view of Shammai nor the view of Hillel penetrated ſe, “to teach future generations that a human should not stubbornly insist on his claims: Even those fathers of old (Shammai and Hillel) had to ſubject to the beſter insight of others.”

P. 40: The Talmud states bluntly and straightforwardly that to sin≈

gen ſe be permitted, but one should do it secretly.

No, the infamous si non caste tamen caute (if not chaste, but cautious) is not from the Talmudic brain born. It is a Talmudic principle that what is not ſinful is, becomes a sin when it is profanation of the
In the name of God (chillul ha-shem), and that the Condemnation of the inherently sinful thereby by much is increased; for it would be better for man not to to have come into the world, than to have the honor of his Creator. Accordingly, Chagiga 164 says a R. Ela the old man: “When a man sees that he has ſeen his evil
If he cannot control his urge, he should go into a Place where nobody knows him and dress in black and muffle himself in black, and do what his heart desires desires—only let him not profane God’s name publicly.”
It is the saying of an individual in the Talmud and is also mentioned everywhere with reference to this individual.
opposite is the statement of another: “Whoever haunts ſince he sins, it is as if he had touched the feet of the Shechinah (divine present) to renounce these two statements—agreeing does not work there, but that what is inherently sinful is, in that it is without public annoyance happens, sinful behavior does not stop, the Talmud in all possible forms, e.g. when a person enters≈ secretly sins, but God proclaims it openly Sota 3 and: Everything that the whites forbid for the sake of appearance have, is forbidden to do even in the most secret corner Beza 9a and others. How strictly the suspects of Rohling were, shows for example the story told in Sanhedrin 75 Story: Someone had his eyes on a woman—and impure love had made him sick.

asked the doctors and they said there was no rescue here– tion, than that he may approach her carnally. The Wise men decided: He may rather die than give her close. Then the doctors said: May she at least once reveal their charms. And the wise: May he rather ſt die rather than expose herself to him. Then the doctors said:
Well let them at least cross a wall with speak to each other. And the wise men: Let him rather die, than that she spoke to him from behind the wall. The
The Talmud's position agrees with the words of Ecclesiastes Matth. 5, 27 f. For Berachoth 61" read we: Whoever gives a woman money from his hand to ſtarſing them, he will, even if he has knowledge of the law and good works like Moses, yet the judgment cannot escape hell.

P. 60: According to the Talmud, it is permissible to punish the godless– deceive, because it is written: against the pure you show you purify yourself and show yourself against the wrongdoers wrong.

46 V. False consequences.

The quoted Talmud passages do not intend to be a general rule, they only tell how Jacob ſowed and declared it justified to use Laban's deceitful ruse deceptive cunning. Besides, it is Talmudic Principle that it is forbidden to deceive the non-Jew, and one must not speak to him, even to the idolater, Lie, even conventional one, hunt Baba kamma 113 BC.
Chullin 944. Maimonides summarizes the relevant Talmudi≠ ſche Vorſchürgen Hilchoth d&oth II, 6: “It is forbidden to man, flattering and tempting
To speak; he should not speak otherwise with his mouth ſh be, as he is in his heart; he shall be in his inner and external appearances – what he thinks is also what he says. And it is forbidden to deceive people; Nor shall one do this to the Gentiles. One shall e.g. the heathen does not eat the meat of fallen animals as sell properly slaughtered animals, not leather goods from Creeped as such from slaughtered. One should not force the other to eat with him, as he assumes that it will not happen; ſhall also do not want to give him much, while he is ahead≠ ſupons that he will not accept it; ſhould not give him barrels open, which he would have to open anyway for sales purposes, with the preſeſt sealing that it was done in his honor etc.
Even a single tempting or deceptive word is forbidden. True lips, certain spirit, pure

Heart, free from nuisance and harm –
ſo ſt ſhould ſe ſt.”

P. 61: The Talmud teaches: It is permissible to speak against the wicked in to pretend in this world.

The context in which this statement of a

Rabbi Jehuda or Simeon appears in the Talmud, Sota 41” bears decisive witness against hypocrisy.
It begins with the statement of R. Nathan that Israel by flattering behavior towards King Agrippa the had forfeited its doom, and further R. Elazar says, that the hypocrite even the embryos in the body of their Mothers curse. In between stands the saying with the Reason from Isaiah 32:5: “One day a wicked man no longer be called a prince, nor a miser be called a nobleman
In the Tosaphoth the saying is Nedarim 194 under the white lie in mortal danger ſubſumired, but even in this case, the permission of a Untruth not unchallenged (as can be seen from the discussion the passage Sota 41 in Bechai's Pentateuch commentary on Paraſhe Wajischlach, according to which Rabbi Pedäth also out of fear of telling an untruth, declared sinful), and the statement that Rohling picks out wants to ſhis reasoning should be understood: the currently only frequent nobility without conviction is in the world in the future – meanwhile it is unavoidable, that we address high-ranking people with words of respect ſpeak, of which they are fundamentally not worthy. That but also towards the highest ranking person where it is Profession entails the strictest truthfulness shows, besides that story of servility towards King Agrippa, for whose sake according to Jer. Sota VII, 7 Many slain on that unfortunate day fell, also another story told in Sanhedrin 194. A Servant of King Alexander Jannai had a man killed. Then Simeon b. Shetach said to the wise men: Take him in the eye so that we can judge him! It was reported to the king and he sent him. Then they sent word to him: Come yourself, for the Torah demands it. He came and sat down. No, King Jannai – said Simeon

b. Shetach – arise, for you (since you are the servant

Lord) the legal transaction applies, and you do not stand before us, but before him, by whose call the world came into being.
The king replied: I will do it, if not you alone, but also your colleagues say so. So for Simeon stood aside to the right, and they lowered their faces to the ground. He stepped to the left, and they lowered their faces to Ground. You are worried, cried Simeon, but the Lord over the thoughts will come and punish you! As– Soon Gabriel came and struck them to the ground so that they died.

P. 67: Moses allowed the non-Jew (of course not unreasonably)
To take interest: You may take interest from the stranger Deut. 23, 20. On the other hand, a whole series of “un-fallible“ Rabbi, Moses said: You shall Take foreign interest.

The text considered authentic by the Roman Church recognized Vulgate translated: Non foenerabis fratri tuo ad usuram pecuniam nec fruges nec quamlibet aliam rem, sed alieno. Punctum! So she doesn't make any sub⸗ feſt betwſeen "you ſhall" and "you may". By the way
The old Jewish interpretation vacillates between the up– feſſung as a commandment and as a permission. The "thou shalt" is motivated by the fact that in this way tempting intimate communion with the Gentiles should be prevented Baba mezia 702. And the “you should” is not a “you must”, because often enough in the Talmud the one according to Pf. 15, 5 praised, who also lends to heathens without interest, e.g. Baba bathra 24a, and the word which means “taking interest”– interprets, is even transformed into the meaning “to give interest”– bent Baba mezia 70. But what the conditions

As far as interest is concerned, it is expressly required that the Measure of the lender's living expenses should not exceed (Baba mezia 714 cf. Maimunt Hilchoth malwe V, 2).

P. 69: Moses has ſhecked the interest for mere consumption among Jews–
there, also under fake titles, in short also the hidden Usury (sining secretly) is forbidden.

So it is, and yet beyond the cited tal–

mudſical circumvention of the absolute ban on interest no to raise such outcry. Even the absolute interest rate⸗
The ban on canon law could not be upheld.
Theologians and jurists sought to understand him through subtle under—divorces to break off the practical tip, and countless Surrogates of the interest—bearing loan were used to ſyſtemati—invented to circumvent the law or from the time of its validity of imperial Roman law. Whether utilitatem publicam was geſtwilligt, that cerſtain beſpecially active classes of capitalists, especially the Italian—ſhed money dealers who were limited to movable property Jews and the clergy themselves openly distance themselves from the commandment and completely emancipated (Schober, The Federal Law from 14 November 1867. A study. Leipzig 1872). In the Church has spoken of the canonical prohibition of interest—taking from usury the same story as from the Mosaic prohibition in the Jewish people. The ideal
The law proved to be inappropriate in the face of complex reality—executable (ſ. Tosaphoth to Baba mezia 70, similar how the community of goods within the Jerusalem origins community only lasted a short time. However, it is irresistible—

It is clearly established that the Talmud defines usury as most decisively rejects and the declaration of the German—Israeli—ſch Community Association of 1879: “Judaism laments the usury as something foreign and hostile to him—ical phenomenon and can those who deal with such business, not as his true sons—recognize” is not against the spirit of the Talmud, which Even in dealings with non—Jews, taking interest is only reluctantly and only, as already noted, with limitation to the necessities of life (cf. Kimchi to Pf. 15, 5).
P. 81 f.: Does the Christian authority hold the Talmud Jews to oath
, one can, in view of the principles discussed, cannot help thinking that the Jew considers himself not obliged to tell the truth.

It is true: regarding the extracted oath and
The Talmud contains the permissible reservatio mentalis Rules and examples which are just as reprehensible as which are at least equally reprehensible and much less exculpatory principles of caſuiſtic morality of Jesuit Order. But what Rohling made of those rules and Exemples are malicious insinuation. Expres⸗ ly, it is taught in the Jalkut to Prov. 11, 21 that the not He who swears with his mouth will go unpunished and in the heart the conjured thing is annulled, and in Ne-In 25° the swearing party is required to perform the oath in sense of the authorities who demand it, with the exclusion of his Subjectivity, made a duty. And no rabbinic

The law and moral code allows a judicial or otherwise to take an oath which is to ruin and

1) ſ. Duſchak, Mosaic Talmudic Criminal Law (1869) pp. 46-50
(the usury law and its repeal).

V. False Consequences. 51

Harm to one's neighbor. In general, the Oath as something to be avoided as much as possible. The Midrash (Bamidbar c. 22) tells: “Two thousand cities of the king-nigs Jannai were because of true oaths ie such whereby one destroys the truth. I swear

– they said – that I should go there, that I should that will eat and drink; one also did as one-ſworn, but nevertheless these villages fell into disuse-redemption court, how much harsher the punishment will be for the wrong swearing!” Accordingly, the Sefer chasidim

F. 418 the principle that man prefers to renounce a good right than to obtain it by taking an oath-long search ſhould.

P. 83: Furthermore, a number of Jewish books teach that the Jew firmly believe that on the Day of Atonement all sins forgive, even the most serious ones, and among them the wrong onesſworn oaths, without any obligation restitution is being discussed; even the Christian believes in the Forgiveness of sins, but he knows that the indispensable Condition the restitution of property and the re-restoring the damaged honor of one's neighbor.

The Christ! If his pride consisted in the fact that forgiveness is bound to this condition, then that is a stupid pride rooted in ignorance –

For the sake of such moral platitudes, it was necessary not the sacrifice on Golgotha. The Mishnah Yoma VIII, 9 says: “Whoever sins because, after he has— ſin, repent and escape punishment, the the possibility of effective penance is taken away. The same applies to the one who relies on atonement of the Day of Atonement — the Day of Atonement ſatiſes indeed the sins that man commits against God—gone, but those sins that man commits against ſuch a sin against his neighbor, he does not atone if he does not fine neighbor satisfied” An interpreter (Raphael Fürſtenthal) remarks: “Reconciliation is only possible when bar, if restoration of the violated right is required— gone; otherwise it would be at the expense of the injured party happen and be an injustice against them. Often but is a violation of such a nature that it in no way can be remedied, such as defamation — In this case, the injured person must be calmed down instead— find, and the Talmud makes the latter conciliation to duty.” But what about undoing what has been done Oaths which the Jew in the Kol nidre on the pre-evening of the Day of Atonement, this un— make it happen by adding da-asarna al-nafschatana (ie through which we relate to our own personſworn) is expressly limited to such oaths, which one has voluntarily laid aside from oneself, aſo on oaths and subsequently as sinful or self-commitments that are deemed unfeasible, with conclusion of judicial oaths and with the knowledge of the neighbor assumed obligations against this. The Jews— Christian Helmstadt Professor Carl Anton in his The Jewish oath (Braunſchweig 1756) states § 65 ff.: Mr. Eisenmenger argues that the Jews were Formula Kol nidre of the judicial oaths against a Christians would be absolved and thus led to to swear falsely, the book of Johannis Schmidt, which he directed against the Jews and called “Fiery Dragon Poison and the gall of furious vipers.” The mere title sends a cold shiver through my body...

I will not argue against the fact that malicious minds

among the Jews who use this formula not only against Christians, but even against their own brothers
But the ultimate purpose of the formula is not is, can always an impartial mind, if it is otherwise not deliberately attacked by another nation out of bitterness-wants to spread dangerous untruths. – This I recommend Carl Anton's book to Mr. Rohling. "Iſtay – says the author in the preface – that I
I love Jews because I was born and raised among them
I have been, and I love you even more because my Jesus, the salvation of the world, from them has come; yes, so heartfelt I love her with a holy Paulo, that I daily wish, ſhe to the covenant of the righteous and saints to see incorporated. This and the truth
I have written this refutation because I
Mr. Eisenmenger's report in consideration of certain Times that may come, for the Jews ſo dangerous ſeemed that they were thereby exposed to the utmost danger of life and can be subjected to the most cruel tortures if his accusations would be accepted as true.” The Proſelytes, according to a Talmudic proverb, are like the Leſe for Iſrael. Brute draws ivory with his handmenger's from the writings of such proselytes, who like have become a leprosy to the Church!

1) The counter-document on page 27 states: “D. makes Drach .. the horrible gloſſe, he ſt like leprosy.” But the Roman Catholic Jewish Christian Dragon is nowhere mentioned by me-
I mean such as the above Joh. Schmidt. About Drach
I judge differently. See also the article Kol Nidre in the Protest. Real≠Encyclopedia VIII (1880) pp. 127-130.

VI. Appropriate remarks.

G
or
r

5: When the Meſſias comes, says the Talmud, he will bring the earth produces cakes and woolen garments, and wheat, whose grain is as thick as two kidneys of the largest oxen.

Such chiliſtical depictions of the Meſſiah period, which ſelſtverſtlich not want to be understood literally, are also considered as statements of Papias, Bishop of Hierapolis, reports that they even rely on tradition and-indirect disciple of the Lord: “Then

Vines will arise, each with 10,000 branches, each branch 10,000 branches, each branch 10,000 shoots, each shoot
10,000 grapes; each grape will produce 25 meters Give wine and if someone wants to take a grape, another will call out to him: I am a beſſere, take me” etc. How this change is to be understood is shown Gamaliel, Paul the Apostle's Teacher Shabbat 30. It
It is unjust and unfair to condemn the Talmud because of such fan—to ridicule tasie images of the end times.

P. 58: The Talmud says, the seed of a foreigner who is not a Jew ist, be Viehseame.
The ancient peoples used to be so nationally proud that ſhe ſimply called themselves human beings. This National pride is ſelf among the peoples of the present time and ſo even among the Christians not without example. The Dutch Boers of South Africa call themselves people,

The black man is only considered a creature by them and unworthy of the name of man. The Mosaſic Law also raises Israel to a higher level than the other peoples, but the conclusion that the traditional legislature—interpretation from passages such as Lev. 1, 2 in conjunction with Ezek. 34:31 is an overstretching of this precedent—ſuch, which the heathen in general the human name and the exaltation over the animals—world by no means denies, but Israel is so special and preferably considered as human beings (adam), that the Peoples, however, are on the same level as cattle (behema) ſt stand. That sounds more horrible than it is meant, because for us “cattle” sounds like a swear word, which in this relationship determination should not be. Because in With regard to passages such as John 4:11, it is readily admitted, that the Gentiles also adam in distinction from behema
ſe, people in the sense in which man
The goal and crown of creation is—also known as—ſeſt betwſeen the heathens, those who forget God and those not godforsaken find Sanhedrin 105, such as such Heide from Askalon Kidduschin 31? and others as a model of Childlike love is praised. But it is also one of the Old Testament.
From the point of view of the reprehensible premise of the traditional Ritual law that the Gentiles should be like behema to Adam, and it is undeniable that these Premiſſe their shadows extend into the sphere of law and of morality. That of Eisenmenger I, ©. 596

not from the Talmud itself, but from Tosafoth-stolen sentence, although tendentiously translated, is and remains unbearable, but it is untrue that Judaism Self-aggrandizement and especially against Christians-about what was already recorded by medieval authorities dismissed as being in conflict with the Talmudic law itself

The Proßnitz Rabbi Faſſel says of the-
the same harshness in his Talmudic virtue and Legal Theory 1848: “If such statements against idols-servants as such, I reject them with Indignation.” And Samuel Holdheim, the conſequente
Champion of the reform, goes in his memorable writing:
The ceremonial law in the Meſſiah Kingdom in 1845 was still unequal continues and puts the axe to the root: “What in the Mosaic legislation on the relationship of Israelliten as humans to God, as a child to his heavenly Father is abſolutely religious, therefore eternal; but this refers to the relationship of the Israelite as one special chosen people to their God and Lord ſit refers to, is relatively religious and must, as soon as the Israelite has returned to the general human relationship, for him to stop." That is also our view. The old-testamental religion is the revealed religion on its national preſtage. But Holdheim hopes the meſſianiſche Religion that breaks through the barrier of nationality, of the future; for us, Christianity is the meſſia≠ Niſical religion. Since this came into the world, the people as such, what Malachi 2, 10 in the name Israel says: Do we not all have one Father?

P. 65: The Talmud hunts: Whoever restores a Goy’s lost
God will not forgive anyone who gives.

The passage Sanhedrin 76b reads: “Whoever has his daughter married to an old man and whoever is less-year-old son takes a wife and whoever gives what is lost to Gentiles, what Deut. 25, 19 f. applies to this.

ſcribed ſtstand: he mates in a before God unansweredlich way the full with the thirsty.” The opinion is that with this return he does something that not required. For it is concluded from Deut. 22:3, that only the brother, not the Gentile, should be forgiven the lost to be reproduced, so as not to increase the power of the heathens to strengthen. But on the other hand, the reproduction will be em—committed and vowed wherever they are used to the glory of God—and the non-reproduction is frowned upon if it violates God’s Name would be desecrated. This is where the beautiful story of Simeon b. Shetach, who made his living from flax combing and to whom his pupils were given a donkey by a Saracen buy, on whose neck they find a pearl hanging. They bring him the donkey, and the pearl, holding out to him they shout: Now you don’t need to torment yourself so much anymore!

He asked: Does the Lord know about this? No, they answered.
ſhe, whereupon he said: Go and give him back (Jer. Mezia II, 5). The Jew who was among Christians according to the Talmudic maxim of the lost pagan If one wanted to act well, one would also be from the Talmudic standpoint—point is considered as profaning the name of God, from—considering that his actions were contrary to state law, which the Talmud recognizes as binding (dina demal-chütha dina). Incidentally, the non-Reform Jews—thum is touched by the spirit of Christianity to the extent that it from Talmudic legal propositions such as those concerning lost pagan goods as being of “reprehensible injustice—geſetzen“ (Faſſel aa OS 195) ſays away.

58 VI. Unfair disposals.

P. 86: It is also reported of the old Rabbi Zevi, that he tries to convince the Christians that Goy is not swear word; this attempt was soon eliminated by that the first Israelite was addressed as Goy:
The Israelite understood this and forbade himself with the greatest Unwillingness to use such a designation.

It is also not really a swear word.
Does not the New Testament Scripture also separate between Israel and the Gentiles (ethns — goyim ?). Does not Paul speak to the Gentile Christians as goy, by quoting Rom. 11:17 f.: “Whether Although some of the branches [of the good Delbaum]— brochen ſare and you, when you were a wild olive tree, are grafted in and partook of the root and the Sap in the olive tree: so do not boast against the branches!
The Christian Israelite does not cease to be an Israelite and The Gentile Scripture does not stop a Gentile (ethnikos or Hebrew goj) to fine, but also Israel itself is called in the Old
The Testament sometimes calls it Goj, “your Goj” in Pf. 106, 5 the one praying to God. The “old Zevi” (the brute in a Winkel Eisenmenger's aufstöbert) is right: Goj means ſhich the people and ſlanguſe the non-Israeliſtical people and the one who belongs to such a person, it is not a swear word. The Jew can certainly make it so, as in the mouth the Jew-baiter “Jew” becomes a swear word.

P. 88: Some pages of the tract Aboda zara] continue of the Christian worship, the priests (as rasi), Candles and chalices mention and everything becomes idolsservice called.

That this is not to be read in the Talmud itself, recognizes the Talmud scholar immediately concludes that the usual Jewish Designation of the Christian priest according to his tonsure and thus as shorn (galüach) according to the Talmud entirelyly foreign. What Rohling means can be found in the Toſafoth zu Aboda zara 14”, where it is asked whether the Jew to Christian during the festive season incense, wax, etc. which is denied because he would thereby be allowed to sell would promote Christian worship. Not the Talmud says that, but rather his medieval interpreter. We We don't want to cover this up. Talmudic law is untolerant and in the Middle Ages the Talmud nurtured proud self-isolation against the Church. In Talmud itself, this lies almost entirely outside the Periphery of his caſuiſtics. He never speaks of Christian But consider what impression the Jew in Roman and Greek Catholic environments from the Christian cult and from there from Christianity must get! — That is why I have been representing since 1863 in a own magazine the cause of the Miſſion, which has the purpose has, to the Jew, Christianity in its documentary true being, and I mean: if that People whom we love with the love with which Jesus loved themloved, had open eyes, it would recognize which side his most sincere, loyal friends are condition.

P. 101: The Jew A. spoke to M., a Christian, among four Eyes the word: The Christian religion is noble, because it commands to love even the enemy, but the Jewish religion is more practical because it allows me to them and even if it were years later, because she stepped on my foot today.

The person who said this was, although a noble and rich, but an ignorant and impudent fellow. No, ſo Judaism and Christianity are not different. All—

However, Christianity has overcome the hostile world with the weapons of prayer and tears as well as no other religion to his ſoſe, namely the urkundChristianism, Christianity according to the model and the demand of Christ, but also the Talmud says Yoma 23a and others: Those who let themselves be offended and do not offend those who let themselves be scolded and do not scold again, who act out of love and rejoice in suffering, of whom the Scripture says (Judges 5:31): Those who love him ſare like the sun when it rises in its power. And Baba kamma 93°: Man always prefers to to belong to the persecuted and not to the persecutors, for there are none among birds more persecuted than turtles and doves, and these are a dear sacrifice to God on his altar. There we read with reference to Abimelech in relation to Sarah: “Do not despise the curse that an (idiot) (deep⸗ and distant) cast upon “speaks out” by showing that even such a A curse, if caused, is not without effect. And a Maxim to be read and often repeated in Sanhedrin 49a is: “Let yourself be cursed, but do not curse.” How can that statement of a malicious fool mean something prove!

[7 A 2

A —

VI. Monſkroſikäken from distant Finkeln.

P. 43 f.: A wise man of Israel once heard God cry: Woe is me, Who will release me from my oath? And when the ravenbiner this told his comrades, they scolded him a donkey, that he did not release God from his oath Meanwhile, between heaven and earth stands a mightytiger angel named Mi, who represents the holy God of all release and complete his oaths and vows can. — How God swears badly. Yes, he has after the Talmud also lied to distinguish between Abraham and Sarah

To make peace, which is why for the sake of peace, as the Talmud adds, may lie.

We take the manifold offensive Judaization of the concept of God in the Talmud, but 1) the Donkey story Baba bathra 743 is one of the burlesque Münchhausiads of the enigmatic fantasy pieces fallen Bar-bar-Channa, 2) the angel Mi, whom the older Kabbalah does not know!, is the creation of a J. 1603 deceased Krakow Kabbalist, and 3) that According to the Talmud, God lied, and peace The idea that one can lie for the sake of it is itself a lie.

1) ſ. Joel, Religious Philosophy of the Zohar (1849) p. 231. 235 f.

2) The Jewish-German Women's Chummaſch from 1693, on which R. refers to in the counter-writing p. 37, cannot be the counter-prove part.

Place Baba mezia 874, which this immoral maxim is burdened, contains an innocuous decency and moral rule in a subtle witty reference to Gen. 18, 12 f., where he- is counted: “Sarah laughed in her heart at this announc- impending motherhood]! and thought: After I I have grown old, should I still feel love, while but my lord (husband) is old! And the Lord said to Abraham: Why did Sarah laugh and think, Should I will indeed give birth, while I am old.” The Lord repeats Sara's comment in a way that for Abraham, perhaps, the vulnerable were eliminated by the old man- old Sara's ſelf in place of the old age Abraham's ſet. In this regard, the Talmud quoted there Commentator: Great is the peace, so that the Holy One himself, Blessed be He, for whose sake the expression changed (shinnah). The Lord reproduces Sarah's thoughts in a modified form, which is no less true, than the one reported in the previous verse. Is it not malicious, this harmless connection is a blasphemous contradiction to the Words of God 1 Samuel 15:29: “The Rock of Israel does not lie” to read into it?! As the New Testament Scripture says (2 Tim. 2:19): “The sure foundation of God stands, and hath this seal: The Lord knows his own, and: Let whoever names the name of Christ departs from unrighteousness,” ſays the Talmud: Lies and injustice are a hostile couple, false witnesses are even those despised, who hired them — the seal of God is the Truth, its name is truth (Jer. Sanhedrin I, 1).

1) Equally, in the view which Sanhedrin 110b is a Individual pronounces, with blank according to Eisenmenger the blowphemie to find that God has sworn falsely — Retraction an oath or release from a vow is not perjury.

P. 53: After death, the soul of the Jews wanders into a other bodies etc.

This too is a monstrosity from a remote corner; The doctrine of transmigration of souls is an exclusively kabbalistic; the source evidence which Rohling in the Note, all date from around 1650. The very hateful against Christianity Spaniard Abrabanel — let us not forget that he Grand Inquisitor Thomas de Torquemada as representative of the Christianity had towards itself — searched in vain for the doctrine of transmigration of souls, which was his private opinion, according to ancient testimonies. In both Talmudas we find not a syllable of this kabbalistic and even in the Kabbalah itself is not an unchallenged dogma, which hebRaeſic word for the transmigration of souls gilgul ist im Talmud unheard of in this meaning. The Talmud Jew as ſuch aſo knows nothing about transmigration of souls.

P. 56: It is a great deal that an Israelite in Christian lands Redeemer publicly as an idol, born in fornication, born in adultery, may slander.

Rohling refers here to a sermon by the French Rabbi Auguſt Fabius of 5 Sept. 1842 (printed in Lyon) and Offrande au dien de l'Univers, which in blasphemy against Christianity and the person of Christ Extremely efficient (see my magazine Seed of Hope Year 1879, pp. 124-127). If this madman, who boasts of the mark of Cain and the blood of the unblasphemes the guilty Abel, would be the spokesman of the Jewish people, then, however, a cohabitation of Christians and Jews impossible. Rohling, however, makes this Fabius the Reſentants, by describing the tales about Jesus-mudſtstellen beiſcharbt to which Fabius could ſely refer. But what does the Talmud say about Jeſus in the Censorship suppressed passages? Jesus was born out of wedlock-boren, be the disciple of Joſua b. Perachja, be with this in Egypt, from where he brought magic arts was excommunicated by his teacher at home and later hanged in Lydda on a preparation day for Passover That is all, at least the main point. There will also be a women's hair braider Maria called, but it is really uncertain whether the mother Jeſu or ſoſer a Mary is meant. Now consider that Joſua b. Perachja at the time of the Hasmonean King Alexander Jannai, who died in 79 BC, after Egypt, and so between him and Jeſus almost a whole century, this one is enough, to conſtate that the person of Jesus is important for Judaism the Talmud into the fog of dark hearsay disappeared. One reads that he was hanged in Lydda ſei (hanging is not in itself yet ſ. va crucify), ſo lets really doubt that our Jeſus is meant - he but is meant, however, that what is said about him confused madness. The Jew of the 19th century≠ hundred, which from these Talmud passages a picture of Jeſus would not be worth it, Air and light of German or French civilisation to enjoy. But in truth, even the educated Israelites of the present day of the Jeſus of the Gospels in so far known that he thinks of him in a more historic and respectful way.

VII. Monstrosities from remote corners. 65

We refer Rohling to the novellas of Ludwig Kompert and Emil Franzos - there he will convince himself, that even a Jew in Roman surroundings, where the images-service repels him, inoffensive, even lovingly incoming from Christ and Christianity can be spoken of.

P. 52: According to “all Jewish teachers” God created 600,000 souls of the Jews, because every verse in the Bible has 600,000 ex-interpretations and every interpretation concerns a soul.

Rohling's source is Bodenſchatz's constitution of the today's Jews, Erlangen 1748. As a teaching of all wise men Israel is rightly stated in a passage cited there the pre-existence of souls. The other passage is from a section of the Jalkut chadasch, and soil-ſchatz adds on his own initiative: “which also all Jewish Teachers applauded”. But this Jalkut chadasch is from an obscure author from the medieval Zohar—literature compiled. It is unconscionable to condemn the Jewish religion for an otherwise unprovable nonsense, which is in a 1648 in Lublin published book, responsible to do, just as unscrupulous as if one were to read the writings of Theophraſtus Paracelſus as well as confessional writings of the Christian Church to its detriment.

P. 93 f.: The ban formula of the Cherem is thus: According to the original theil u. ſ. w.

This is not the synagogal excommunication formula, but those of Buxtorf in his Talmudic lexicon a gruesome stylistic exercise of a verſcrazy Kabbalists. We have had a mono— since 186? graphy of the Nachoder district rabbi Wiesner about the Ban in its historical development on the ground of Judaism. There, among other things, the formula communicated, with which Spinoza on 6. Ab 5416 (1656) was excommunicated in Amſterdam. Such writings ignoriert blank and tischt ſits lērs a never in use a work of art which even an over-rehearsed Polish Chaſid will appear as a ridiculous curiosum.

Epilogue.

My criticism of Rohling's Talmud Jew has not exhausted here; I could make this reprimanding remark— easily follow a second row of the same circumference and will do so under certain circumstances. But I hope that accessible readers will already have this one series suffiſam will show that this Talmud Jew is a partisan and tendentious caricature. Ignorance has the palette held and rass hatred has the brightest colors to a A horrible image smeared together, in view of which one must ask how the honest Germany of 1848 and in 1871 could be so stupid as to fundamentally destroy such a peopleſentious vice with oneself on the same level.

There is a Talmudic book, Aboth di Sayings of the Fathers, which contains the mottos and moral teachings of the greatest Jewish authorities since about 300 BC to about 200 AD. It is a component of the Miſhna and has been a part of it for a millennium of the Jewish ritual, one in the Jewish prayer books—taken compendium of Jewish ethics. This book Rohling has not mentioned a single word. It contains the Contrary to all maxims of his Talmud Jew and Therefore he passes by silently, because we our neighbour “not to make a bad reputation, but excuse him, speak well of him and everything to Beſt best“ ſhall, this Lutheran declaration of the eighth Commandment is not in his catechism.

5 *

68 Afterword.

The Christian Middle Ages were not suited to Jews to be Christian-friendly.
no change in older inhumane principles can be expected.
And yet, let us hear what voices are and not only in philosophical works, but in traditionalist.

Judah b. Samuel from Regensburg around 1190 in Sefer chasidim (Book of the Pious):

Do not intentionally deceive anyone through your actions, nor any non-Jew; do not be quarrelsome with the people, nor against those who believe differently. Act honestly in your business; do not tell them that you have been given a product wanted to buy for this or that price, if it is not true; do not pretend to sell if you are not serious — such things are of an Israelite unworthy. If a Jew or a non-Jew comes and wants borrowed money from you, and you don't like it because you
If you doubt repayment, do not say that you have no money.

If a contract is made between Jews and non-Jews mutual assistance, those Provide assistance if they fulfill their obligation.
If a Jew wants to kill a non-Jew, but the non-Jew does not those, we must assist the non-Jew. One should Do no injustice to anyone, not even to those who believe differently⸗ the . .. In dealing with non-Jews, be diligent the same honesty as with Jews; make the non-Jew be aware of his error, and better live from alms than that you to the shame of the Jewish name running away with other people's money. Do you see someone else?

believers commit a sin, then thwart them if you have the power to do so — the prophet Jonah in Nineveh Be your example. If a murderer flees to you, grant no protection for him, even if he is a Jew;

you on a narrow, bad path a burden-bearer, jo
Make way for him, even if he is not a Jew.
Noachian basic commandments keep non-Jews give back what he has lost, hold him in more honor than the gods—
Israelites who neglected the teachings.

On the money of people who mint the coins—cut, make usury deals, dishonest measure and have weight and are not honest in trade, is no Blessing; their children and helpers must emigrate and come to the begging stick . . Have you been with un—correct weight cheated, stolen, false witness against you, do not be tempted to take revenge
To do the same. Be silent when you are insulted, and endure nor that your pupils and housemates should curse and blows to those who insult you. Envy and Hate be done away with. Have you been asked to write about your Wealth is taxed so that richer people pay less, not cause you and others quarrels and annoyances by ſpeak — keep silent and concern yourself with the divine teaching!

Bechaji b. Joſeph from Saragoſſa (around 1050 - 1100) in fine Arabic works “Duties of the Heart”:

The fourth rule that the one who bows before God has observed is this: He must do good to people do, speak well of them, use them to their advantage—judge, do not give them a bad reputation, if Forgive those who speak evil of him, even if they have no Deserve leniency. This is what God's Word demands (Ecclesiastes 10:20).

Pi. 50, 19 and elsewhere . . . A pious man once went, as they say, from the stinking carrion of a dog past. Oh, how this carrion stinks! they said to him his pupils. Oh, how white his teeth are! he—he retorted and the students regretted having been so dismissive—to have spoken. If it deserves censure that one speaks negatively of a dead dog, in order to It is much more reprehensible if we do it to a person— That pious man of the Arabic legend is Iſa ibn Marjama di Jeſus Mary's son.]

Elazar b. Judah from Worms (d. 1238) in his book

Rokeach:

Maintain peace in and outside the city, for All who advocate peace are doing well. Be onright, deceive no one through pretense, smooth words and untruth. Because man lies, he dies before the Time; God the Lord is a God of truth, the truthity is the alpha of his creation. Be silent in Fear of God, because much of what is spoken is not without sin. But when you speak, speak the truth, do not praise yourself and Be humble. The humble man holds honors from ſt away. If one speaks of his mistakes, he thanks God, that in this shame he was given the means to his Beſſhing is required; but he is ſelf with good qualities conscious, he regards it only as an imperfect against what is demanded of him and forgives the who speaks ill of him.

Moſe b. Jacob of Couey in his Sefer mitzwoth (Book of Commandments) from 1245:

You should also, in your business dealings with the Gentiles,

Avoid deceit and deception. Robbery of the heathen is, even if it causes significant damage to Israel, Talmudic decision forbidden, even deprivation of a Gentiles is an even more serious sin than robbery of a Jew, because they also give rise to blasphemy gives (J, 152, and II, 74:) I have long since told those in Spain and preached to those under Roman rule that now, where the exile lasts so long, the Israelites are concerned ſo more dilifently separate oneself from the vanities of the world and to be sure of the seal of God, which is truth— have kept; they shall not lie to the Israelites nor the non-Israelites, and deceive no one in any way, and also sanctify themselves in lawful things, so that when the Holy One, blessed be He, comes to redeem us, the Pagans say: It is right so, for they are true People who speak truth in their mouths. Be— If we act deceitfully against them, they will say:

Afterword. 71

How did He ſuffer such thieves and deceivers to His People can choose!

Toſafoth (from 1250 and onwards) on Ex. 22, 25:

If you do not give the poor man his pledge back in the evening, ſo you do not earn your pledge, the soul, in the morning, to receive back from God.

The Sefer ha-chinnuch (Book of Instruction) by Ahron from Barcelona between 1274 and 1310:

Every exploitation of a person is not only a offense against this, but at the same time a sin against God .. Every craft is honorable, even the outwardly befildingſt; but there is a filth which disgraces — the dirt of the soul.

Anyone who has granted a loan and knows that the

If the debtor cannot pay, avoid him in order to not to shame him.

A poor person who accepts a necessary gift refuses, offer a loan, which you then not demanded.

Dishonesty and robbery, whether against Israelites or practiced by people of other faiths is prohibited by law and is subject to the penalties of the law.

Aſher b. Jechiel (d. 1327), a German, in his testament:

Do not look at him who rises above you in wealth, risen, but on those left behind you. But in the service and fear of God, look to the Greater, never on the lesser .. Remain grateful to everyone who helped you to your bread; be sincere and true against everyone, even against non-Jews; greet everyone first without distinction of faith; do not anger those who belong to another religious community.

David Abudarham, the Spaniard, in his commentary on the Ritual (around 1340):

We are accustomed to bless the king and to the Lord to pray for him, that he will support him and take charge of fay his enemies, for Jeremiah (29, 7) has said messengers: Seek the best for the city, where I have taken you—and pray to the Lord for them; for if it If you are well, you will be well too. And in the valley—mud we read that if there is no awe-inspiring state≠ regiment existed, people would live together devour, so pray for the good of the government! The
The blessing of the King takes precedence over the blessing of the Community.

The Sefer hamiddoth (Book of Morals) from the 15th century:

Be merciful to your non-Jewish slaves, he—
Do not make their work difficult, do not treat them lightly—fentiously through contemptuous words or even blows; felf
When you quarrel with your servant, speak calmly and listen fhis arguments. Our old teachers have told the slave from each court and for his needs rather than cared for one's own.

These are the moral laws of famous medieval Teachers in those centuries in which the Christian State and the Christian Church as those created by God—executioners and executioners summoned against the Jews—beards and truly no reciprocal affection and gratitude fpecial claim. Of course, there are also Voices in multitude, which in more or less exclusive—five way to hold on to the idea that “there is no salvation outside Israel”.
If Rohling pillories these rigorous wanted, he would have read Zunz, “On History and Literature” (1845) p. 373 ff. found a rich yield. But with The voices are highlighted there with preference, in whose Testimony despite hatred and suffering the victory of love—
If he really wanted to prove what to prove he brings together all the skarteks of past centuries, fo he would have called upon the latest Jewish literature to witness But he'll probably leave it at that. The Jews—ity of the present is at least insofar influenced by the light of Christianity seemed to be the exclusivity of past dark times. Or should there really still be such among the Jews, who in the present, where state and Church of their human and Christian duty against the Jews have been reminded of those intolerant statements of the Talmud, which from the outset is not for Christians, ſon—which were applied to the Romans and Persians, to the Christians apply and make it the guideline for their actions? I I know many Jews, but none who does not shudder at this.

And yet the Berlin speakers in the Reichshallen on 17 Dec. 1880 and in Fiebig's Salon on 13 Jan. 1881 not ashamed to speak to the “Talmud Jew” Rohling's before those who are not capable of controlling this incendiary writing crowd and convince them that in the valley—mud be praised as a godly act, the Christians to cheat and exploit! Ju of the fact, if ſhe there p. 99 (ed. 6) had read out, according to which the ſpur≈ loose disappearance of men, women, children in ges wiſſen major cities of Europe in connection with the cannibalistic bloodlust of Rabbinism, ſuch easily from one of those meetings a crusade against the Jews. Around 1181, Vienna, three Christian boys were trapped in the ice and drowned. Immediately Witnesses were found, one of whom said that they had been taken to Jews≈ see him go to his house; the other said that a Jew had brought a host pierced; the third knew exactly how the Jews had secret sacrifices to gain Christian blood.
The result was that three hundred Jews were burned. When happened, the bodies of the three children were found in the river

It is the same brute who in a writing “The Anti≈ Christ and the End of the World” (St. Louis 1875) the doctrine Luther's, in which according to Revelation 9:1 ff. the fountain of the Ab≈ grunds sich aufdeckte, p. 58 in the following way charac-riſirt: “God’s commandments are, according to Luther, for man all equally impossible (tom. 2 f. 4. de lib. Chr.); sins

According to him, they cannot condemn anyone (t. 2 f. 171 de capt. bab.). God is just according to Luther, although he damned who do not deserve it (t. 2 f. 434. 466);
the good as well as the evil in us is God's work (t. 2 f. 444);
Faith without repentance brings forgiveness of sins, even repentance makes man sinful, a hypocrite (art. 11 c.
Leon.) etc."! It is unnecessary - he continues - the ſoſt shameful teachings of Luther, Calvin and all these to present to society, they are well known.

We Lutherans and generally we Evangelicals are ſomit for brute with the Talmud Jews in one condemnation—niß, which is why in 1877 he published a catechism “for Jews and Protestants.” How much do they disgrace themselves all evangelical Christians who are behind this fanatic march against the Jews! It is the spirit of the Inquisition tribunal, which speaks through him. After the auto-da-fés with the Jews had cleared up, began on May 25 and October 8, 1559 in Valladolid the auto dafé's, to which the Evan⸗ Spanish Spain. The Jews may not think that in Spain alone they were persecuted to the point of blood Since those first days in Valladolid, thous–

send our evangelical fellow believers there alive burned, or strangled and then burned, and God
All that is known is the number of those who died in the dungeons.

1) I have added the previously omitted citations because
R. in the counter-statement p. 135 complains about the omission: “ſo the good Protestant people are misled, I have Luther was fabricated.” As if Luther's theology consisted of these five or six places could be conſtruirt! A single song by Luther like “Out of deep need I cry to you” proves the deception of that Register of Heresies.

The Jewish question is here. How it can be solved, to show this is not the task of these papers. They just want to add something contribute to ensuring that we do not become brutalized over the Jewish question.
An example of this brutalization was recently given by the “Deutsche Landes– newspaper” by criticizing my actions against the writing Rohling's by means of a cheeky sniffing of my blood to a partisan one.! But in truth it determines ſt not according to flesh and blood, but follow the example Bernard of Clairvaux against the Jew-murder preacher Rudolph.

1) Rohling (counter-writing p. 154) continues to do this to me.
He also makes Gutzkow a Jew on page 70, which he himself in his writing “From Boyhood” 1852 knows nothing.
Dühring in his work “The Overestimation of Leſſing” 1881
P. 83: “The main thing remains that the overwhelming majority racial Jewish character in the writings of Leſſing recognized and that nothing stands in the way of this character in a naturally by assuming Jewish descent to make it sufficiently understandable.”

Second part:

Continued illumination of the “Talmud Jew”.

Leſer who still want to think something, those people who Reformers called, had any personal morality beſeſſen or expressed only halfway tolerable teachings, the Reformation history of Mr. v. Döllinger browse: Red⸗ ity-loving Protestants, of which there are in this country [North⸗ America] are not a few, are rejected with disgust by their previous ſocalled churches turn away when they find out what for villains were those who brought Protestantism into being shouted.

Rohling, The Antichrist, St. Louis 1875 p. 59.

Why — one will say — does this counterſcritique against Rohling's “Talmudjuden” only after this already experienced the sixth edition and in several foreign languages? In fact, I therefore a sin of omission. Only the exploitation of the “Talmud Jew” in the Berlin public assemblies reminded me irresistibly of my profession and my duty to break my silence.

I am in the evangelical church, which Rohling as a foundation of villains insulted, born into, in you were baptized and confirmed in it, but in a time when Rationalism reigned in Saxony. While During my school days, the person of Jesus remained a mystery to me—
But since I was a student, through the incessant Efforts of a friend who was on the way to America died and buried in the depths of the ocean has been found to be more than a great prophet in Jesus—
I knew, and since I have been in contact with the unforgettable Miſionaries Goldberg and Becker the Jewish people, from from whom the Savior sprang, love and his confession—
tion to the misunderstood Christ with to implore, Since then, under the direction of Profeſſor Julius Fürſt, who loved me warmly and faithfully, Jewish literature my favorite study, and since hardly any Christian scholar the present has been concerned with it for the same length of time, is probably no one is as qualified as me to draw false conclusions which takes us back to the time of the massacres of the Jews—threaten to oppose.

The superstitious

Curiosa, which serves up raw material from the Talmud. They reflect in Jewish coloring the educational level and pre—ſtituſon of their time. The New Testament Scripture is how the Old Testament is miraculously exalted above these The faces of their parasites. The Epistle of Barnabas does not remain free from it, and if the exegeses of Papias, how much would we have with the indulgent love, which without proudly pointing at the position far behind us—point of education!

But if Rohling really ſuch grotesque stories and phantasms, it was still a Duty of scientific and moral conscientiousness, at least to accurately reproduce what he said in Eisenmenger found, and not to interpret this in a tendentious or careless manner—
If, as he says on page 49, two rabbis all Evenings a three-year-old calf ſhoofed and devoured, ſo they would have to use the miraculous power of practical Kabbalah in have abused the services of an immense voracity.
But the situation is different. Equally wrong is it, what he says on p. 49, that a Rabbi Waſſer in Skor⸗ pionen. And just as wrong what he wrote on page 54 in botched, muddled rendering of a meaningful fable says: that Elijah covered Rabba's mantle with leaves of the trees of heaven. The stories sound different, as he ſes when he sees the von Raſſen⸗

>

hate-clouded eyes, from Eisenmenger over—can testify. 8

In other cases he shows himself incapable of Eisenmenger's
To see through translation errors. That, as stated on page 42
According to the Talmud, God has been since the destruction of the Temple in the world that he otherwise filled, no longer has room than only a hand wide is based on a misunderstanding—Eisenmenger's understanding, which “four ells wide space to go.” In the opinion that the Talmud a saying (a very nice one, by the way) as a “Pearl” in Abaji's mouth, he uses p. 60 this pearl maliciously, but the word which Eisenmenger
a “pearl” does not have this meaning at all.
The Talmud says, as p. 38 states, that the Rabbi—my chatter should be considered equal to the whole law, is a clumsy distortion. The words mean something

Other things and the Talmud does not even talk about Rabbis, but by disciples of the Wise Men and thus—learned and pious men. In Rohling's head teeming with rabbis. What of the Deuteronomy—nomium appointed supreme court is said to be—he falsely refers to the Rabbi on page 38. The Sanhedrin, the wise men, the youth educators — all are rabbis.
Even a female raven is a rabbi in his eyes.

And ſo unlimited ſhis concept of the rabbi is, ſo his concept of the Talmud also becomes blurred. He calls ſo not only the Talmud text, but also the Middle Ages—ly glosses and discussions surrounding it. On page 42 is that God with Eve, when he saw her like a bride leader Adam, danced, Berachoth 613 quoted.
But in truth it is in a Jewish-German people—

book from 1602, where it is said what one should give the bride
It is similar to singing to Augustin de eivitate Dei citirte and a passage from the ſchonen Meluſine had in mind.

And since he himself is not well-read in the Talmud, conden—
He only follows the information provided by Eisenmenger ſinn. So he indulges in the bizarreries on pages 40 — 41 of the Leviathan meal beyond. If one compares with the “since the Six Days’ Work for the Pious in fine grapes preserved wine” (Berachoth 34), jo it is obvious to regard these bizarreries as images of spiritual things to grasp what later literature also does. The fourth Food in heaven — he says on p. 54 — consists, according to the Talmud in incredibly fat geese. But it is not of the world beyond, but of the time of the Messiah, and this place belongs to the fairytale Münchhausen Rabba bar⸗bar⸗Channa's, intereſſant through their pure folk⸗ Aramaic and has always challenged the ingenuity by excluding the literal interpretation (cf.
Symbolism of the Goose (Berachoth 574). In any case, it is un⸗ turns a purely individual fantasy piece into a folk⸗ idea or even a teaching component.
against belong Leviathan feast and Leviathan tents of all But it was not allowed to be concealed that the Talmud also contains sayings of a different kind like Berachoth 17°: “Not like this world the world to come; in the world to come there is no Eating and no drinking, and no procreation and childbirth, and no trade and dealing, no envy and hatred and dispute, but the righteous sit there with crowns on their heads and enjoy the splendor of the Shechinah (God's presence), for it is said (Ex. 24, 11): They looked God and ate and drank.” So: the blessed one replaced the beholding of God, eating and drinking, yes it is their food and drink.

And when he registers the poſſes on page 49, that a Rabbi from pumpkins and melons deer and roe deer to make sense and the like, it was also to be registered, that where this is told (Jer. Sanhedrin VII, 13) also the saying goes: “If all who come into this world (ie all people) would ſt together, they would be unable to create and kill even a mosquito beſelieve.“ And Sanhedrin 67“ Rabbi Papa exclaims: At God! The magician cannot create a creature (neither a big one nor a small one). If you take the unreasonable in the Talmud, such words may also be used in where reason breaks through, cannot be ignored.

I would have to fear to bore the reader if I all the omissions, misinterpretations, consequences⸗ wanted to note down the machinaries where the Rohling's picture of the Talmud; perhaps another Place. Even in the chapter about Christ and the Christians, in which, however, from the Talmud and completely from the post-Talmudic writings only anger- There was nothing meaningful to report, but forgeries are taking place. That the Nazarene — he says p. 86 fg. — in the Talmud “the carpenter’s son” is called, ſts with the name, which the Lord according to Mt. 13, 55 during his lifetime of the Jews.! But nowhere is our Lord called so in Talmud. The word naggar, which means carpenter (not the carpenter) and then generally the master, is also figurative designation of the scholar, the master in his Fache. Jun this sense is hunted in Aboda zara 50”: “There is no master (naggär), son of a master, who who rebel against this extra-mural tradition—which could eliminate objections.” Rabbi Scheſheth says to it: “I am neither a master nor the son of a Master, and can this tradition nevertheless rightly to ſt.” How could in this context Jeſus the speech! Through whom has here ruffian be duped?

1) See also counter-script p. 75: “Son of the carpenter”.

Where are the 1000 shiny thalers that he had with proud self-confidence for the inviolability of his citations Does he really still have the courage to come with me to the German Oriental Society? — —

However, he will insist on one thing, namely, to have shown that the moral teachings of the Talmud are “a coherent whole in which lies and deception, Theft, murder and adultery as closely related links daſtstehen” (p. 30). But this claim is also based on falsification of the facts. It is, of course, true, that the moral doctrine or, more aptly, the legal doctrine of the Talmud before the forum of Christian morality can exist — Judaism is within the the new era created by Christianity, unable to to hold on and has long since established it in principle given — but Rohling forgets that the morals or legal doctrine of the Moſaſic law before this forum cannot exist and that fine criticism of the Talmudic Right with this at the same time the Old Testament roots The conflict in which Judaism as a religion

gion of the pure mosaſic law with the modern state would be no less than the one in which it is transposed by the Talmudic ſpecialiſed law, yes The contrast would be even greater in the former case. the Mosaſic law sanctifies the war of extermination, sanctifies blood feud, sanctifies slavery, sanctifies polygamy, sanctifies the levirate — in these and other points the traditional law to the letter of the moſažic, and anyway, the uprooting of Israel from its Land a large part of the Moſai law incomplete—made drawable and objectless.

In December last year, the Sample issue of a “Patriotic Newspaper”, which is in the meanest invectives against “Moſche” the legislator and "the Jewish God Jehovah." This was not new: The antiſemiſic writings have been vying for a long time in Degradation of the Old Testament God. The Old Testament

Religion — we read in Reymond and Waldegg — was a business contract between the Jews and their God, based on gross selfishness on both sides. "Jehovah — says one of the fires that appeared near Niendorf (Berlin)— ſcritures — calls the son of Abraham only the Ver—because of Abraham, rewarded by the promise
1 Mos. 22, 17, proves himself to be a prompt businessman."
In the same spirit and tone, Berlin Volks—verſemblies Shem and Abraham ridiculed
These are the consequences into which the “Talmud—Jew" runs out. This is the bird that builds its own nest dirty.

Far from wanting to justify the Talmud,
In this polemic I merely carry out the modern criminal proceedings to compensate for the misconduct—intervening in the relationship between the accuser and the defendant

The activity of the defense attorney. In the following I will continued to translate some of Rohling's excessive accusations into the right to shed light.

I. Accusations concerning the fifth Gebok.

P. 72: It is right, says the Talmud, to chase the Minäer di heretics with to kill with your hands.
P. 73: The commandment, you shall not kill, says the “eagle,” be—indicates that no one from Israel should be killed.

But on the other hand, Joſua b. Levi brought to Aboda zara 4b learned that it was already a sin to give the Minaean to swear. According to page 73, Rohling's approach—ſeem as if Talmudic Judaism even had the commandment:
Thou shalt not kill, exclusively on the relationship of the Israelite to his fellow countrymen. Now the fifth commandment was formulated as a national fundamental law, but but only as a specialization of the Noachian commandment, which forbids murder as crimen laesae majestatis divinae, for man as such bears God’s image on himself
(cf. Maimonides, Hilchoth rozeach II, 1 with 3). All—However, the killing of the apostate is considered a criminal offense—ly permitted. The terrible demands of the Deuteronomium in chapters 13 and 17 continue to have an impact here. And If one looks at those bloodthirsty sayings of the Talmud, which blank puts together, without distinguishing between criminal law to distinguish between determinations and mood words, ſo

one would think that the teachers who taught the Talmud shows us something of that inhuman fanaticism through which Peter Arbues, who was born of the Roman Church, who have been beatified and canonized, blood-soaked name. But the very opposite—part takes place. Eisenmenger (1 p. 434) has all Efforts have been made to find among the Talmudic rabbis some murder—

The result of his scouting is worth taking a closer look at. The first ge—
The story is as follows: Rabba and Rabbi Zera commit—together in a joyful celebration of Purim, the Jewish Faſching, and when they were in a drunken state—find, Rabba gives Rabbi Zera a deadly But disillusioned, the next morning he prays to God for mercy and calls him wonderfully to life—back (Megillah 7). That from this passage it cannot be proved It is clear that Rabba was a murderer. But Eisenmenger (I p. 434) claims: “Some Talmudic Teachers were murderers” and tischt two other Stories from Shabbath 30b. Before Rabbi (Judah, the Editor of the Miſhna) a cheeky man comes and says:
"Your wife is my wife and your children are my Children." What does Rabbi answer? His behavior is described as Example of why one should not judge the fool by his He tells us that he should answer foolishness (Prov. 26:4). He offers, as if he hadn't heard anything, this person a glass of wine He drinks and bursts. The same is said by R. Chijja told, to whom a man said: Your mother is my wife and you are my son. He, too, dies suddenly. "It must also — adds Eisenmenger — these two gave their invited guests poison to drink, because their bodies were burst.” The Talmud but sees in this sudden death of those impudent an answer to prayer and gracious protection from God. The

The charge of poisoning is nonsensical, but characteristic of Eisenmenger's method.

The Mosaic law commands Deut. 21:18— 21 Stei—nigung of the stubborn and disrespectful son and Deut. 13, 13 ff. ſparless suppression of all—inhabitants of an idolatrous city and burning of the—themselves and all their possessions. Of course, the law—provisions incorporated into Talmudic law and are specialized in the execution. But are they ever been implemented? The Talmud Sanhedrin 712 fays: “It has not happened and will not happen, and Why is it written? Consider it and receive Wage!” So: it is written to preserve the Princips, written to deter, written to the underlying and the teaching to be derived from it. It is also hardly conceivable that mercy towards animals, which is expressed in the Talmud, mercilessness against people should have had as its reverse side. The commandment not to hurt animals unnecessarily, is considered a divine commandment from Sinai. A Bei⸗ fhow high this duty was held, provides the Narration Baba mezia 85%. Rabbi (Jehuda) suffered from torture full stone complaints, and why - is there - asks — did he experience such pain? A calf that slaughter, hid himself with his head under Rabbi's skirts and moaned. But he said: Away with you, for this you are created! Then decided above that pain should befall him, because he had no mercy (on God's creatures). Later, when he was given the opportunity to show mercy, The pain vanished. Rabbi's maid swept the House, in one corner lay the young of a weasel and fhe swept them away. Then he said to her, Let her lie, for it is said: the Lord is good to all and have mercy on all his works!

A mood word, which raw to a the the fifth commandment charge could have been used, Sanhedrin 594 is found. But he takes another Means to devalue it.

P. 88: When some Rabbis object that the Talmud says also, a Goy who studies the law shall be before the High Priest the Talmud itself explains that here the law of feven commandments of Noah are understood.

This declaration wants to make two extremifc and sharply contradictory judgments (“a fuch is guilty of death” and: “such a person is equal the High Priest”); Maimonides is based on this agreement and creates a legal or rather an unjust sentence, as he, the “eagle”, also while going astray. In Aboda zara 3% stands the beautiful far— Rabbi Meir’s kind words without the softening which is also a falsification of its meaning, because “where do we know we — says Rabbi Meir — that even a heathen, if he studied the law, is he as good as a high priest? Ant⸗ word: It says Lev. 18, 5: You shall keep my statutes and keep rights, for whoever does these, He will live by it. It does not say: which priest, Levite, Israelite, but: which man. From this — ſo concludes Rabbi Meir — it follows that even the Gentile, who studies the law is esteemed equal to the high priest. This word of one of the greatest Talmudic authorities was always considered by non-exclusive Israelites as one of the most costly—most brilliant jewels of the Talmud. It certainly goes beyond the Spirit of the Talmud, it is more prophetic than geſetical, more New Testament than Old Testament. Similar things can be found in Tanna de-be Elijahu: “I take away heaven and earth to witness that, be it a Gentile (goy) or an Israelite, a Servant or maid, the Holy Spirit without distinction rests on the one whose works are corresponding.” And in the Jalkut (Par. lech lecha) God chases to Moses: “Sit for before me respect of person? May it be a heathen (goj) or Israelite, male or female, male or female servant — Whoever keeps my commandment will also receive the promised reward, for it is said: Your righteousness is like the mountains of God.” In the Weberian system of ancient synagogal theology P. 66 ff. have such statements, which the exclusive break the basic tone of the Talmud, not the due received attention.

II. Accusations, denouncing the Sixth Commandment.

P. 24: But first of all we must note that it is a strange moral is to teach — and this has Maimonides also taught according to Bloch — that a Jew, whom passion overcomes, in war it satisfies may.

This is one of Rohling's missteps on the Talmud or on legal scholars like Maimonides, who—immediately and above all the Old Testament law. ſuch examples clearly show the recklessness and

The excessiveness of his polemics. It is a piece of martial law, which Maimonides in Hilchoth melachim VIII, 2 before⸗ Blank gives the legal provision p. 74 of the following⸗ again: “No one may marry a woman in her state of unbelief (i.e., a non-Jewish woman).” Shudder⸗ haft! There is no such thing anywhere. The relevant law— beſtimung ıs not a general, but an exceptional martial law, and it does not permit this abuse, ſt, on the contrary, it wants to prevent it; ſorthermore, it is nor to the Jewish soldier in general, but in the event that the Jewish people as such were to become war— leading the enemy country across its borders — the whole martial law is only on paper, as in general a large, perhaps the largest part of the Talmudic law, which is reflected in legal reasoning and spin-out of Mſaſa laws, for whose— filling in the state of exile and outside Palestine all preconditions are missing, or even those that never came to practical practice. “The Warrior may in the enemy country - says that legal provision in Maimonides — when passion overcomes him, approach a heathen woman carnally, but he may, after this has happened, not to be abandoned, but must ſhe takes her into his house and is allowed to give her a second not approach without actually having married her.” The is what Rohling reproduces in falsified abbreviations and which is such a great offense to his chastity. But that paragraph of the law is based on Deut. 21, 10 —14 and not by means of false interpretation.

P. 44: Thus one understands that David's adultery and the outrages of Eli's sons were not sinful according to the Talmud.! No, that is not the case, but Rabbi Samuel bar Nachmani narrates Shabbath 55 as a view of his teacher Rabbi Jonathan, that men who went to war in the time of David took away their wives' certificates of divorce— and that the sons of Eli only thereby ſerrected that they could help the postpartum women through delayed dar— bringing their pigeon sacrifice to timely return to their men. It is thus prevented by means of a admittedly eccentric fiction both times the fact of adultery and precisely in the presupposition that it is a mortal sin, but not one in reality

2
p. 31.

1) This false testimony is repeated in the counter-writing 43.

The sin of adultery as such is not belittles, but artificially evaporates the fact. The blood⸗
The guilt of Uriah remains with David, but his marriage—
He is exonerated from the breach.

P. 76: Just remain stubbornly a Jew, and everything will be forgiven you.
The Talmud reports of Akiba: since Akiba was once a woman on a palm tree ſaw etc.

According to Rohling, it should appear as if what Akiba that would not be considered a sin. But in fact The Talmud wants to show that even great men do not for being above the accessibility for temptations to sin. Akiba and Meir! were to their Shame by divine providence of another be—teaches. If God had not protected them, they would have succumbed to Satan, who wanted to bring them down, and despite their legal knowledge, they fell into mortal sin. but wants to create the impression that the Talmud is fornication not consider it a sin. And yet he also condemns ſensual looking and imagining: the spell hits the one who arouses pleasure in his thoughts and: He who ſews himself un⸗ Anyone who presents chaste images will never come close to God and: The hand that touches the genitals—serves to be cut off. Such sayings can be found in abundance — you are handling the wrong scales if you unconsidered and with faunistic pleasure only such communicates what, taken out of context, the ent⸗ capable of producing the opposite impression.

1) Not also Tarphon, as R. hunts; here too he has iron⸗ menger I ©. 431 only read superficially.

76: But what causes the Jewish woman to do this, when her husband under one's own roof to another? She has According to the Talmud there is no right to say anything.

This is a slanderous untruth. The Talmud condemns adulterous and fornicating intercourse in the faintest, most distant movements and efectives with utmost rigor (the summary in Ebenezer, Hilchoth ischuth XXI, 1). Only the case would the woman

no objection if her husband legitimately married a second woman. But as is well known, the Polygamy, which was still permitted under the Mosaic law, a recognized decree of Rabbi Gerſon of Metz

(d. 1028) abolished.

N

III. Accusations, the fiehente Gebok concerning.

(N
&
(3%)

The commandment “thou shalt not steal” means according to the “Eagle” Maimonides, that one cannot blame a person, namely no Jew, and elsewhere he adds that one may steal from a non-Jew.

This “one” is probably a misprint, but a more fatal – Maimonides says (Hilchoth genéba I, 5) ſelbstverſtlich the exact opposite: “It is the same Transgression if one harms a non-Israelite or if he steals from an Israelite." So Rohling will think, that according to the “Eagle” one can call a non-Jew, not but could steal a Jew. Again the distorting "may". It is not about ſtaſtment, but legally about the death penalty, namely strangulation, which It is true that it is true that he who kills an Israelite, but not that he who kills Steals from heathens and makes them slaves. The traditional The decalogue “You shall not ſteel“ primarily refers to theft of human beings or souls—buyer. And what the “eagle” says, the brute with feristic horror of the moral judge, this ſays
the Old Testament law – the blow against Maimonides
This is also true. For while the Book of the Covenant Ex. 21:16 whoever steals a person is threatened with death, ſet the legislation itself in Deuteronomy 24, 7 ſelf from this initial ideality by ſhe death penalty is imposed only on those who “have committed a Soul (perſon) steals from his brothers, the children Israel." The "eagle" has thus the written law on his side. We know well that Christ is the God- ſet end is, but the law is and remains a pedagogical revelation of God and an integrating link of salvation history. Blaspheming Christ with blaspheming Jehovah reply would be like driving out the devil by the devil want.

P. 63: The Talmud says: “You may deceive a Goy and take usury from him.”

No, the latter says the Mſaſic law and the former neither this nor the Talmud says; nor does the Toſafoth passage, which Rohling translates according to Eisenmenger II p. 577, Allows interest and price increases, but not Fraud.! Actual fraud is considered to be sinful towards people, and it is forbidden to rob or to print even the very least, be it to the Israelite or the non-Israelite (Choschen mishpat 259 $ 1). Eisenmenger II p. 574 - 576 presents several such testimonies together, but he doesn't let them make an impression on him, but crushes them through others, to whom he opposes In fact, however, the Jewish Law books all kinds of fraud against the non-Jew as well than towards the Jew. And one of the most famous

---

1) Just as aschak does not mean “to do wrong” (ſ. above p. 17) ſo hönah does not mean “to deceive”; the terms border on each other, but do not coincide.

The teacher of the law, Meiri, says: “All the peoples who are in Conformity to a particular religion somehow the God- worship, even if their faith differs from ours no matter how different they are, they are not included in those heathens, to which the Talmud makes exceptions, but ſhe ſare in reproducing what was lost, in non-exploitation of error and in every respect without any difference to be treated as completely equal to the Israelite (Schitta mekubbezeth to Kamma 1134).

Third part:

The three falſa of Rohling's writing
"Franz Delitzsch and the Jewish Question".

"What my rabbinic opponents have to say about the election cried – says Rohling in his counter-writing p. 64 – is easy to understand. I know what motivated Mr. Delitzsch not." I want to tell him. The facts are as follows.

In 1841 I held a lecture in the orphanage church in Dresden in front of a large congregation a missionary lecture on "three Main obstacles to the conversion of Israel on the part of the Christians"!, in which I, among other things, pronunciation:

The common hatred of Jews has in the emancipation dispute many of the most hateful libels, which the Christian name will be shamed the more, the more the authors of the same insist on this name. He has from time immemorial, not without the busy co-operation of lying Proſelytes who take revenge on their former co-religionists and wanted to make them popular with their new ones, all sorts of unjust Accusations against the Jews, which they attributed to the Christianity became more and more alienated and lost in love, those who preach it are misled. This is where the accusation belongs, that the Jews put Christian blood under their unleavened bread mix – an accusation whose lies have long been Luther? and other orthodox teachers of our Church– have claimed and proven, but as if by a dark

---

1) It appeared as a leaflet and is in seed of hope Reprinted in 1863, 3.
2) Works (Walch's edition) Vol. XX

(N

. 2473.

Power transplanted from the West to the Levant, in Damascus and Rhodes new bloody persecutions over the there without the oppressed people. The stories of Damascus and Rhodes, all those who fear the continuation of the missionary work among Israel is dear to his heart, to holy Anger and pain are right. If Israel, according to God's just threat of violence and injustice should suffer under the peoples whither it is scattered, God alone makes the revenge is, but only the godless are to be scourged by his Anger, violence and injustice remain a sin that He will haunt his time.

Rohling not only has the medieval accusation that the Jews slaughter Christians as supposedly irrefuted renewed, but also the terrible suspicion= added that even now the ſurſt disappearance of some People in larger cities are associated with the “cannibalistic bloodlust of Rabbinism.” It was so the consequence of my ſince 1841 and further back unchanged the same conviction and mood that I against this Rohling immersion of the Jewish question in Christian blood, against this transfer of the same to the supreme court area custody.

In 1878 I gave a concert in the Gewandhaus Concert Hall in Leipzig gave a lecture on “the Talmud and the Colors“! I said among other things:

If I were to draw a character portrait of the Talmud from religious ſtrative side, I would not do this in the direction of Emanuel Deutſch, whose 10 years ago widely read article published in the Quarterly Review on the Talmud amounts to bringing the Talmud to the Ocean to raise and to read the holy scripture of the New Testament a lake fed from it, nor in

---

1) Published in Paul Lindau's “Nord und Süd”, May 1878.

the direction of Auguſt Rohling, who has the silliest and

The dirtiest thing that Talmudic excerpts from older Poles—

miker boten, swept together and used this rubbish for a picture of the Talmud — I would, to build a bridge between synagogue and church, with preference and without falsifying the chronology that is connected with Christianity turned to highlight what the Talmud contains, as ſich, to speak with Reuchlin against Pfefferkorn, from a “book written by Christ’s closest relative”

makes you wait.

This is the point of view from which I cannot was allowed to remain silent when Rohling's book was published in new editions experienced and the speakers in Berlin public assemblies filled their fists with that rubbish to kill the Jews and sometimes the horror, sometimes the laughter of the
to excite those gathered.

Now that Rohling's counter—writing has appeared, it is
I have encountered even more clearly than before that his Polemics, apart from the one—sidedness and distortions in detail, on the whole and in general, on three Falſa ſupports, with which it ſtstands and falls.

1) He claims that the elements of the Talmud, which contradict social morality, not in the Old Testament—ical literature, but exclusively in Phariſäismns or Rabbinism, in the traditional law—omission of those Pharisaic scribes who told the world—
Savior the brood of vipers and adders and whitewashed Graves. It is overlooked: a) that the same also said: On the chair of Moses sit the scribes—taught and Pharisees; everything therefore whatsoever they say unto you, that you should keep, keep and do it, but according to their You shall not do works (Matthew 23:2—3). Then

b) that Christianity is indeed subject to the Pharisaic super—ſtension and de—intelligibility of the letter of the law—entered, but incidentally not in Judaism in its ſadducäiſischen or esſſäiſischen, ſbut in ſhis pharisaiſischen Geſhigt has been linked. I have been a Phariſe — chases Paul before King Agrippa Apoſtg. 26, 5 — which is the strictest sect of our worship, and in the midst of the Jerusalem Sanhedrin he presents himself in the same way. 23, 6 to the side of the Pharisees, exclaiming: “You Men, dear brothers, I am a Phariſe and one Pharisee's son, I am accused of the hope and resurrection for the sake of the dead.” The Talmud itself, lists five kinds of Pharisees whom he despises and not the Pharisee who gives up the law from slavish fear, but out of love for God, legislator is considered to be the true one. But what the

The main thing is: c) the Old Testament law is the people's law and indeed a law for a people who are against the idolatrous World of nations penned and protected by all kinds of cautions from the Danger of kinship and entanglement with this ſure—had to be made in order to spread his true knowledge of God and the initiation of salvation to retain the professions. That this law Behavior towards fellow citizens and towards foreigners not measured by the same standard and that he still not man as such without distinction of people—tum, but the Volkscomſe is considered as “neighbor”, iſt Self-consequence of its purpose and the temporal relations—niſſen ſich beſtenden means to achieve thſe purpose.
Only Christianity has not without this already within the literature of wisdom (Chofma) and prophecy

in the middle of the OT, the religion denationalizes and with the removal of educational barriers to a Relationship of man as such to God and thence—raised according to a relationship of man to man.
If one considers this, one will be over the tal—Mudic legal inequality sentences judge more cheaply: they go from the national sanctioned by the Mosaſic law Contrasts between Israel and the Goyim (Gentiles), a contradiction which, on the part of the Goyim, denies—nization of the One God and idolatrous being.
In addition, there are also other incongruities in the Law with the moral ideal. The Torah of Jehovah is indeed perfect, as the Psalmist 19:8 says, but—ſolut completely their innermost motives and ultimate goals but it is only relatively perfect according to its letter after, because even apart from the fact that they are an order of life—
The formation of a people should not be subject to externality and independence—ity, which afflicts nationality and state ſt, they accommodate themselves to established institutions and Customs such as blood feuds, slavery, poly—gamy, the levirate, by dealing with mitigating, be—restrictive, regulatory intervention. And here and there, as for example in the grounds for divorce Deut. 24, 1, leaves considerable gaps by limiting the achievements to limited to what can be achieved at present (Matt. 19:8).

Compared to other legislations of the old world—it establishes its divine origin, but on the other hand it is ſit is no less human than divine, ſit is national, the intellectual and moral level of their time and precisely for the new created by Christianity World a vanished standpoint. From this sub—

Rohling wants to distinguish between the Old and New Testament religions know nothing. With reference to my claim that Christianity first applied the concept of neighbor to the Humans as such, he says on page 44 of his Counterſcription: “I ask Mr. Delitzſch whether he might a secret Manichaean is; for the Manichaeans said be—know, the OT is inſpirirt by the devil, the NT from the Holy Spirit.” He overlooks the essential Unity of the two Testaments the different open—barungsſtages, which they reſpoſt. He ſeſtiſes little between law and gospel, that he from Deut.
17, 813 together with the infallibility of the High Priest that of the Pope. In the same way, the Mosaic laws the right and duty to condemn heretics to execute. "God has already through Moses — Rohling also says in his Catechism for Jews and Protestants p. 218 — clearly shown how He, the Most High, in this regard. Why should the Church be less be worried, as the Old Testament community, their children from from error? Is heresy in the eyes of the Apostle (Gal. 5, 19 f.) a lesser evil than Che—burglary and murder?“ But are we still under the Disciplinarian? Is the Torah of Sinai still valid after another Torah came from Zion? Is Christ not the end of the law? — Strange! What the Talmud from that law which is binding for the Jew lich is, as long as he is not from the area of preparing—the revelation entered into that of the perfected, the ſhall be wrong and the same ſhall be right if it is the Church derives from it. This leveling of the difference Old and New Testament is the first great falsification

Rohling's. It has as its consequence the falsification of Christianity and unjust assessment of Talmudic Judaism.

2) A second falſum of Rohling is his claim, that the Talmud considers every Rabbi as such to be infallible
When on 27 April 1870 the victory of the Infallibility dogma enforced and at the same time with the ab– ſolutism of the Pope the victory of the Papal Church and the rule of the Jesuit order was decided, then told my magazine “Seeds of Hope” the simultaneous Cu– rioſum that Rabbi Hillel in Omsk, a chafi– Daeſich Zaddik, who as such is considered a divine oracle is declared infallible and by the communities
ſhis diocese has received appropriſate adresses.
This foolish side–piece to the Roman Deeret er– seemed like a strange sign of the times. And now about– Rohling surprises us with the discovery that the infallibi– lity, which Rabbi Hillel in Omsk claims, after the Talmud belongs to every Rabb. In vain one will Weber's system of old synagogal theology, which ſvery detailed about the status and the diverse Violence of the Wise (Chakamim) acts, after confirmation This Rohling find. Every connoisseur of the valley– mud will see it as a tendentious invention. Some Talmudic sayings, which ruff to an important– ity that does not belong to them, do not prove what he wants to prove with it. If for the words of Scripture– scholars even more attentive than for the words of the Torah is required, this will be Erubin 21“ thereby justified that transgression of the words of the scribes di their legally binding decisions, which the Torah against transgression, the death penalty entails, while not every violation of the law– ſtitſe letter ſtitſe punishable by death. An addi–

There is no reversion of the Torah in this, because the book of Torah is considered so holy that it is considered a mis– respect of the same is seen when one prophets and hagiographers, let alone Mishnah or Talmud, above– on it, and a declaration of infallibility of the words of the Scribes do not lie in it either, because it is That statement is not about beliefs and customs– teach, but merely ritual and legal norms.
Nor is there a declaration of infallibility of the law– ſentence of the schools of Shammai and Hillel in the Aus⸗ ſaying Chagiga 3, that both legal propositions, although one– contradictory to others, are the words of God; for he only wants ſay that they both have God's law as their basis and his Holiness as a goal and (ſ. Rashi on Kethuboth 57a) have their well–considered and noteworthy reasons, it will but added that the practice is based on the legal provisions the school of Hillel has to judge — it is a rough Rohling's untruth that in cases of such contradiction the practice of arbitrarily referring to this or that authority ſupport. And the legal propositions of Hillel's school, because they are repeatedly ſubsequent legal decisions are eliminated. Even the decision—ſuperſt Court rulings apply, although for ſpoor—binding, but not infallible, because the Mišhna Horajoth (cf. Rosh Hashanah 254) explicitly presupposes that he too may be wrong in his decisions

The conclusion which Rohling draws from Deut. 17:8-13 that the High Priest and accordingly the Pope un⸗ fallible judge of faith is a false one, and if

Based on this conclusion he says on page 66: “God’s position—representative on earth, the High Priest of the Old Covenant and the High Priest in Rome, calls the world to an error in matters of faith and ethics convict": yes, that is the case in view of some of the Sylla's sentences—bus and in view of the dogmas of the Immaculate Conception of Mary and the infallibility of the Pope a boldness which a connoisseur of the holy Scripture and Church history almost brought blood to Veins frozen. According to Talmudic principles, even Miracles that happen in favor of the dissident, not revoke the legal force of what the majority of competent judge finds the law (jer. Mod katon III (Anf.). And wherever a dispute of opinions takes place—finds and the Talmud itself does not say which of them the legally valid, there are usually fixed rules according to which ſeſt whose authority is the decisive one, and It is the task assigned to the post-Talmudic teachers (the so-called Poskim) is placed, from the tangle of different views to find out what the practice has to be guided. It also happens that a teacher of high renown in the morning and evening otherwise (Beza 24%, and not infrequently confess nam—worthy teachers that they have presented their ideas so far—fight were mistaken (Chullin 56°. Erubin 16.
104 and more often). Rohling's claim that where conflicting views arise, each of them equally God's Word is therefore untrue. Outside of the right—lichen Discuſion in the area of the so-called Haggada is directed everything in the mind, heart, conscience of the listener, without to oblige them by law; in the area of Halacha but it is either explicitly stated what is legal, or it is to be determined by means of consideration and examination— The main thing that is important here in the heated ſocial question Everything comes out, is the behavior of the Jews to non-Jews according to Talmudic law. the relevant legal provisions if one ſtaking the standpoint of the Moſaic law, from from which they are derived, a different face than in Rohling. The Moſai law imposes on the Israelite higher obligation towards the brother (comrade)- obligations than towards the stranger. This includes also what Rohling ſo both in the Talmudjuden and in the Counterſcription from Baba kamma 1134 not without distortion and brings translation errors to light. If an Israelite and a Gentile proceſſiren and another Israelite the Brother neither according to Iſraeliſtic nor according to pagan law able to bring free (whereby the context presupposed that he is unjustly raped are in danger), he should free him by means of tricks to bring. It is the view of R. Eliezer, which is rejected by R. Akiba: he explains ſuche, tricks always as the sanctification of divine Namely contradictory. The offensive nature of this negotiation, which is also characterized by two (easily supplemented and therefore pointless) censorship gaps are noticeable, is undeniable. On the same page of the Talmud, repeatedly declared that the state law for the Jew has legal force, and that robbing the heathen is forbidden is, but it is declared permissible in itself to give the heathens to be confused (or at least: to take advantage of one's error) make) and to avoid his debt claim (cf. Choschen mishpat 348 $ 1 f.), and regarding the return of the lost one a wavering answer is given, which only makes the return mandatory under certain circumstances Elsewhere (Chullin 943 and others) the Prohibition, any man, including the Gentiles, to deceive, but it is difficult to do this with the other Legal provisions must be agreed upon. However, these are in irreconcilable contradiction with the social morality of the newer state, which Alex. Vinet in fine price publication on religious freedom (1826) under the main terms la süreté, la proprieté and la pudeur summarized. Um to participate in the rights of the newer state, which this social morality as the basis and its upholding—attitude to the task, the Jews must necessarily—know those legal inequality propositions of the Talmud and further back of the Moſai law. How they approached them wrest, whether by directly rejecting them as a antiquated pre-stage or at least by means of the assumption, that they do not apply to Christians, because these, religiously speaking, are not pagans, that can State indifferent, but after this the Jews granted equal civil rights with Christians and they as equal members in the association of nation, he may and must also accept the grateful

In return, they expect that they will respect the national differences drop and become stricter against us Christians and delicate conscientiousness as against their religious comrades are obliged to recognize.

3) But have I really said too much when I claimed that those Talmudic statutes which are in Deſtment of duty and criminality a sub⸗

ſeſt betwſeen Jews and non-Jews, ſeſt, ſeſt with Moſes Mendelsſohn a new era for Judaism begun, long ago abandoned in principle? The reviewer in the Leipzig Theological Literature Journal (1881 No. 8) remarks: “We doubt the correctness of this statement claim and express the wish that the author may the references he had in mind, again carefully examine their implications and, in particular, the extent of their official recognition by the Ju—dentums, ſpeiell des orthodoxes, reſearſchen.“ And Rohling ſays in his reply: “He asks me to use the newer
To look at Jewish literature — now that is what I have to Excessive and would be able to write a booklet newest hell-shots, which Jewish hand prepared and
But this reply fits like the
That the denigration of us Christians Saints by the newer Jewish press absolutely unbearable⸗ ly become, I feel no less deeply than Rohling; :
the utmost in hair-raising blasphemous meanness in this direction the work of Rabbi Wise in Cincinnati edited Jewish-American family newspaper Deborah. But the frivolous blasphemous language of this free spirit, whose Judaism is nothing but hatred of Christ and hollow National pride exists, is supported by all better-thinking Israelis—liten sentenced, and for us here it is about the Question whether our German Jewish fellow citizens can help us Christians ſts with the idolaters of the Talmud on the same line and their social duties towards us lower than against their own people. That they really ſuch reprehensible principles, there would have to be evidence from recognized Jewish writings. But Roh≠

ling does not bring a single one and also that reviewer ver—suspects my claim, without the right of his—
I still declare the Presupposition of Rohling's Talmud Jew that the Talmu concerning the relationship of the Jew to the Gentile—dic statutes still serve as norms of conduct are considered to be a falſum. The matter is of decisive importance, and woe is me if I knowingly ignore the true Covered up the matter, and bad enough even if I it would do it unwittingly! Here is keen observation and ſcho—Unconditional frankness is the holiest duty. But as far as I modern Jewish literature of the Germanic, ſlavic and Romansh countries, I have encountered many testimonies, which the guilt of unequal assessment of social

10 duties to defend themselves differently, but none which is two—ſpliant way of acting. “What our Moral teaching concerns — says Prof. Lazarus in fine writing “Our point of view” — we only need to look at the to point out what we really teach. I call such Books like the religious book by Aub, according to which here in Berlin is taught; I call many Ein wiſſen≠ ſcient work: the moral teachings of the Jews by Grüne≠ tree in Lindau, but especially a school book, according to which the Jewish youth in Prussia on the recommendation our miniſter is informed: which is now in 28th session≠ Herx's doctrine of faith and duty, published in 1894—heimer, which teaches thousands and thousands 122 I don't know any of these three books. But why at Rohling ignored them and instead withdrew his accusation from the Talmud, which for most German Jews an antique known only by name? As 8

*
I, still a young man, with Jewish literature

Salomon Pleßner in Berlin, a representative ſtrictest Jewish orthodoxy, ſhis “religious instruction for the Israelite youth” (Berlin, Fernbach 1838). The author, of course, does not let anything come down on the Talmud, but he adheres to what is said in the Talmud to be “the purest and most tolerant love of humanity” breathes, demands charity without distinction of ethnicity and speaks against the Usury is as rigorous as possible. In an Anremark he appropriates the following confession of an older moral teacher, which he based on Deut. 23, 8 (abbreviated Do not fear the Edomite or the Egyptian) “If we give those two peoples who ſhowever, we should be grateful, how much more should we only grateful to the current states and reigning kings and pray for their well-being, those who have so lovingly treat us and not only intellectual freedom in the exercise our law, but also physical freedom laſſen! This is also our duty under the law. Every fool who believes the opposite, that our Geſegesetz tells us to deceive the people, to take advantage of them and, Heaven forbid! whoever seeks their misfortune lives in a deep error and never knows the way of the Lord, who is all-just and has given Israel only just precepts given, yes, who out of love for us certainly never would have commanded things which would have made us discredit and expose us to their greatest abuses and persecution! Yes, if ever a Jewenemy peoples believe the opposite about us should do, we trust in the grace of God and on the authorities of those nations themselves, that they will recognize how only unbelief and ignorance of the Jewish law such enemies of the Jews with their unfoundedcan bring to life the accusations made against them.” This is a Confession, which is not calculated to bring before the eyes Christian readers. Pleßner takes it from the Hebrew book Ele hamizwoth by Moſe Chagis, which 1713 in Amſterdam. Are blank and my reviewer in the Theologiſical Literature Journal in Able to bring to light newer testimonies which say the opposite? One should not refer to such old Corpus juris like Maimonides' Jad and such old Legal compendiums, such as the Shulchan Aruch, which are still always the rabbis' Vademecum in religious lawual questions are — it is in the nature of this legalbooks that they faithfully reproduce the Talmudic Halacha, including the offensive legal inequality clauses, But I claim, according to my experience—

experience and knowledge of literature that Judaism of the con—wart, especially the German, these legal inequality propositions denies the continued normative validity, also the orthodox at least insofar as it applies to their—ability to contact with Christians is fundamentally denied and rejects with indignation.

This denial of applicability to Christians is the minimum of what is conceded. We have but pages 56 and 57 show that even on the Orthodox side something further. “We admit,” says an essay: Reform efforts and emancipation in the Journal for the Interests of Judaism 1844 p. 329ff.—
that in the Talmud, besides the most excellent moral teachings, some Statement regarding non—Jews is included, which there is more than excused by the circumstances, the but we will by no means sign it.” The reform, however, does not leave it at this timid beginning of criticism turn, she draws the bold conclusion that the moral princip of the Talmud, although relatively excellent, but exclusiv, particulariſtic, narrow—minded and also for the against—current religious—moral consciousness unsatisfactory and ſtobæssing ſe. But the representatives of the reform also con—ſtate that the religious—moral consciousness of the Jews has long since gone beyond the Talmud — just Based on this fact, they demand from the actually criticism that they are not halfway

The author's point of view is different again of Zerubbabel (Warsaw 1875), which contains the letter the Torah as particularist, but general people≠ love according to the saying of Hillel, R. Akiba and Ben≠ Azzai's as the spirit of the letter and the Christ≠ tum as one of such rabbinic sayings from≠ gone religious figure.! It is the glory of the Christianity — says Em. Deutſch — those golden Germs that are found in schools and the quiet community of Whites hid themselves, brought to the market of humanity
It has that kingdom of heaven which the Talmud from the first to the last page is full, to the common good even the lowliest, the shepherds, even the lepers.)

---

1) JB Levinſohn (this is the author of that Apology of the Jew≠ tums) lists there II p. 76 a whole series of large Talmudans≠ leger and deciſors who express the same convictionſpeak, which we noted on page 26 from Toſafoth.

2) Literary Remains of the late Emanuel Deutsch (London 1874) p. 27. l

End. 117

In so many different ways, Judaism sets Present the contested legal inequality clauses except Validity. It fundamentally condemns the subsequent—What more can the state demand? Its
The point is to prosecute usurers and swindlers legally and to fight in court, and a matter of public opinion, to ostracize them morally and to stigmatize them socially.

Register.

Abraham's Sorcery 3738.

Agriculture 34—35.

Anthropomorphisms 37. 61.

Antisemites 6.

Award, Haggadish, Great Rabbi's 36th

Babylon, Budapeſt, Vienna 33.
Taxation, behavior in this regard 69.
Do not repay evil with evil 60.

Chiliaſtic Images 54. 82.

Christians allegedly accused of carnal crimes 27 — whether idolsservant 11. 26. 98 — killing allegedly permitted 25 cf. 87.

Christianity, documented 59. 60 — practically distorted 11. 14. 59. 73 — scientifically distorted 12.

Christ doubly veiled for the Jew 13.

David's adultery fantasized away 93.
Theft, esp. homicide 96—97.
Differences between schools are not treated equally 43 —44.

Gemstone on Abraham's neck 38.

Oath in court and in private life 50--51.
Oaths (Kol nidre) 51–53.
Elazar b. Durdaja, the voluptuary 29-30.
Elias, Rabbi, the fictitious monster 18–21.
Desecration of the Name of God 44.
Excommunication formulas 65 66.

Exile, a fate wrested from God 37.

Cursing, sinful 60. 87.
Pious, non-Israelites 23–24. 55. 90–91.

Law, biblical and traditional 22. 8485. 103106.
Goy, whether swear word 58.

Heretics (heretics) 22. 30 Note.

Trade, the Talmud’s position on it 33–34.
Secret Sinning 45.

Hypocrisy, flattery, servility 46 –48.
Principle of humanity 9. 17. 56.

Dogs and Heathens 38 40.

Infallibility, foreign to the Talmud 23. 43 –44. 107110.
Inquisition 75 – Arbues 88 – Torquemada 63.
Jannai the King 51. 64 – in court 47– 48.
Jeſus in the Talmud 63. 83 – in the Arabic legend 70.

Chastity requirements of the Talmud 31. 45. 94. 95.
Female prisoner of war 92–93.
Christian cult 26–27. 58–59.

Blasphemies, Jewish 64 (Fabius) 112 (Wiſe) and Christian 85, 97.
Leviathan Meal 82.
Lies and sin, supposedly attributed to God 61–62. 36–37.

Maimonides, the “Eagle” 18 note – not authoritative everywhere 90.
Market price, whose standardization 34.

Mary in Talmud 64.

Man and Israelite 41 – M. and Cattle 54–56.

Meſſianic Religion 56.

Monogamy of the Talmud Teachers 24.

Murder is a crime against the sovereign 87.

Murder charge 7. 74. 101–102.

Murderous people, alleged, among the Talmud teachers 88.

Nationality principle 9. 56.

New Testament sayings: Matt. 5:27 f. p. 45 – Matt. 15:26

P. 40 – Matt. 23, 2 f. p. 103 – Acts. 23, 6. 26, 5. p. 104 –
Roman 11, 17 f. p. 58 – Eph. 2, 14 p. 49.

Non-Jewish woman, carnal offense against her 32.

Pope Pius IX. 4.
Pharisaism 103–104.

Preexistence of souls 65.

Pawnbroker, requirement to them 71.

Rabbi, the Calf and the Weasels IN. he Legal inequality, Talmudic and 1000 inapplicability to the Werra with Christians 9–10. 56. 57. 74. 84. 97. 140 11 0

Doctrine of transmigration of souls, not Talmudic 63. Ye 0
Sinai, Interpretation of the Name 40. e

Moral textbook, read 67.3
Moral teachings from the Middle Ages 68 – 73.5
State and State Regiment 72. Na Rau,
State Law 57.3
Criminal laws, unexecuted 89. er 1 4
Synedrium, not infallible 23. 108. Mar ® FUN

Deception, of any kind, forbidden 46. 68. 70 unt. – 71. 97–98.
Animals, duties towards them 89 –90.
Turtles and doves 60.

Translation error 16, 21, 41 (pounds for grains). 80, 81.
Wrongdoing and fraud, allegedly permitted 17. 97.
Sexual assault with a minor 42.

Lost property of non-Jews 56–57. 97.
Day of Atonement, condition of atonement 51– 52.

*
*

*

Usury, explanation against it 50. 69.

Magic, its limits 83.

Carpenter's son 83–84.

Interest⸗Maximum 49. 50. a
Taking interest according to the Bible and Talmud 41– 42, 48, 1 4
Intermediary trade prohibited 34. . 1 =

*

Printed by Ackermann and Glaſer in Leipzig.

I

1 *
. 0 N

' 9 5
Bin EN N 8
} aa er,
Nee e N

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY

BM Delitzsch, Franz Julius
585 Rohling's Talmudjude
R642D4 illuminated

1881

German → English

= Dr. J. Fromer =

The essence of Judaism

Digitized for Unglaublichkeiten.com /.info in Hornung 120 (February 2009)

Notes:

- The original scan is available in the NSL archive.

- Page numbers and page breaks were exactly retained.

- Formatting within the text (e.g. blocked) were not adopted, the interested reader can read it in the original if required check.

CULTURAL PROBLEMS
THE PRESENT

Published

from

Leo Berg

Second Series: Volume I

The essence of Judaism

from

Dr. J. Fromer (Elias Jakob)

Hüpeden & Merzyn Publishing
Berlin • • Leipzig • • Paris
1905

THE ESSENCE OF JUDAISM

from

Dr. J. Fromer

(Elias Jacob)

Hüpeden & Merzyn Publishing
Berlin • • Leipzig • • Paris
1905